CROCKETT COURIER:-In view of the fact that Small Pox is now pre valent in various localities of our state and when we consider the tact that this is one of the most revolting destructive and contagious diseases that affects the human family. I thought it would not be amiss for you to speak, through your paper of the advisablity o every person taking advantage of the great previnitive vaccination knowing that a great many people are ignorantly and superstitiously prejudice against vaccination which if properly enforced would practically stamp out this fearful malady. I suggest that you publish the enclosed clipping from an article in the Houston Post from Dr. Love of St. Louis, which will go far towards removing this unnatural prejudice against this very essential prophylaxis.

> Yours Truly, L. MERIWETHER, M. D.,

The century which will soon have closed since Jeenner's discovery has demonstrated as the years have passed more and more definitely the truths of his theory, the benefits of his work. A disease which for centuries had demoralized and devastated the world, more revolting in its nature than any other disease known, has been robbed of its terrors. There are some things in the medical profession which are wrapped in the mystery me space I will write short notes of doubt, but the utility of vaccination is not one of them.
