NOTED GERMAN LEADER KILLED BY ASSASSINS

New Republic's Foreign Minister Shot to Death by Two or More Unknown Enemies.

Berlin, June 24.—Dr. Walter Rathenau, German foreign minister and more closely identified than any other German with the efforts at rehabilitation of his country since the war, was shot and killed by two or more unknown assassins while on his way from his residence Saturday morning to the foreign office.

The minister was subjected to a veritable hail of bullets, one of them striking him in the throat and passing upward to the brain, while others struck him in various parts of the body. Hand grenades also were thrown, almost wrecking the car in which Dr. Rathenau was riding, and inflicting further injuries on the minister.

Chancellor Wirth's government Saturday night is marshalling the nation's liberal elements to the defense of the young German republic and organized labor, representing both socialist parties, is again first to buckle on the armor, just as it did during the Kapp revolt. Announcement is made that the government will establish extraordinary courts for the trial of nationalist plotters and that a state of emergency for Prussia will be proclaimed.

All regimental reunions and militaristic demonstrations are to be prohibited. Yet, despite vociferous cries of "long live the republic," which resounded through the reichstag chamber at the close of a memorial session to Rathenau Saturday, thoughtful men of all ranks and parties were silently and gravely apprehensive for the nation.

While the heat of the resentment and partisan feeling has not yet sufficiently cooled to warrant a sure appraisal of the direction in which the political effect of Rathenau's assassination will spread, yet this much is certain—the government is facing a far more precarious situation than it did when nationalist bullets struck down Erzberger in the Black forest ten months ago.

The emotion which marked the brief address of Chancellor Wirth and President Leobe before the reichstag reflected sentiments which were shared by many others, while the rioting of the radicals, throughout what was to have been a decorous memorial to the dead foreign minister, reflected the feeling of unrelenting vengeance vowed in behalf of the German proletariat.

Never did the reichstag witness such scenes of turbulence and excretions. Dr. Karl Hefferich, the nationalist leader, who had attacked Dr. Rathenau in a savage speech in the reichstag Friday, sat curled up in his seat far to the right of the house. He appeared to be in a very depressed and somewhat fearful state.

President Leobe had difficulty in getting the session under way as the radicals swarmed over to the right, threatening Hefferich and other nationalists who volunteered to come to his rescue.

Chancellor Wirth, who stepped down from the government bench in an attempt to pacify the bellicose deputies, had to give up the task and the president's insistent bell also failed to restore order.

The uproar was primarily aimed at Hefferich whom the socialists wanted to force out of the chamber through cries of "murder," "assassin."

Friday, June 23, 1922, the first meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary was held in the American Legion hall. This meeting was called by the post adjutant for the purpose of organizing eligible members into the American Legion Auxiliary. Rev. A. S. After a brief history of the origin and purpose of this organization was given by Mrs. Nichols a motion was made and seconded that the American Legion Auxiliary be organized in Crockett.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. George Brailsford, president; Mrs. J. P. Hall, first vice president; Mrs. A. S. Lee, second vice president; Mrs. Lawson Keene, secretary; Mrs. C. C. Warfield, treasurer; Mrs. Billie Allee, hospital chairman; Mrs. N. H. Phillips, historian; Mrs. R. E. Keller, chaplain.

The charter will be open for members for the next following sixty days. Those who became charter members were: Mrs. G. Brailsford, Mrs. Robert Allen, Mrs. R. E. Keller, Mrs. J. L. Jordan, Mrs. C. C. Warfield, Mrs. J. McConnell, Mrs. J. P. Hall, Mrs. B. Allee, Mrs. N. H. Phillips, Mrs. G. L. Keene, Mrs. A. S. Lee.

The meeting was a very enthusiastic one and the ladies extend an invitation to all eligible relatives of our ex-soldiers to co-operate in this worthy cause.

Friday, June 30, 1922, at four-thirty in the American Legion hall will be the date of next meeting. Come and show your appreciation for our soldiers.

BOY VAINLY CRIES FOR RESCUE FROM ELECTRA OIL WELL

FATHER DIRECTS CROWD'S EFFORTS; DEATH ENDS LAD'S PLEADINGS.

Wichita Falls, June 26.—The body of little four-year-old Randall Gandy who fell in an oil well at Electra late Sunday was recovered early Monday, grappling hooks being used to pull the boy from the 12 inch hole.

The mother, confined to her bed at Burkburnett with an infant but a few days old, was not told of the accident until Monday.

Fort Worth, June 26.—Randall Gandy, four, met death 180 feet below the surface of the earth in the McKenzie oil well, two miles east of Electra Sunday night, while 5,000 frantic people vainly tried to rescue him.

The little boy, who lived in the neighborhood, was playing in the vicinity of the well. A friend had a fleeting glimpse of him as he fell feet first into the hole. A moment later his voice could be heard from the bottom pleading with "Daddy and Mother" to come and get him.

The mother lies in a Burkburnett hospital with an infant a few days old. She does not know of the lad's tragic death. The father, Lee Gandy, for hours directed the citizenship in his effort to devise some method by which a rescue could be effected.

The boy fell into the hole at 8:30 o'clock. The last faint cries from him were heard at 11 o'clock Sunday night. Water had encroached, and already faint from his long lodgment, the lad was forced to watch the slowly creeping waters engulf him and exterminate his life. Grappling hooks could not be used in the rescue because of the fear they would mangle the body. Several young men volunteered to be lowered head first into the hole but none were small enough to reach the boy. The hole at the top was ten inches.

At midnight, when it became definitely known that the boy was dead, efforts to reclaim the body were abandoned until Monday morning when the work was resumed.

Head-on Collision Staged For The Movies.

Some people say that the movies are purely mechanical and that they get few thrills out of big scenes shown in pictures. Those folks have something coming when they see the terrific head-on smash between two giant locomotives that takes place in the jail delivery scene in "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight" which comes to the Crockett theatre on Wednesday and Thursday. The scene calls for a huge locomotive running wild and on which a prison warden is fighting with several escaped convicts. The director, knowing that such a scene would not make anything extraordinary, resolved to stage a real smash-up.

The track was about a half mile long. The engines were placed at either end, and, with a full head of steam, were set loose with throttles wide open. With the roar of the escaping steam and the exhausts puffing like mad, these two leviathans dashed headlong at each other like a couple of mad bulldogs. They met in about the center of the span of tracks and crashed together with a deafening roar and an explosion that rent them into a thousand pieces.

SOME NEWS OF THE CROCKETT OIL FIELD

The Porter No. 1 well at Crockett has been capped and the machinery moved to the Porter No. 2, a short distance west and in the same field of P. D. Austin. Following exhaustive efforts to control or diminish the water, the well is being temporarily abandoned. George L. Porter, the operator, does not know how to quit, and when Porter No. 2 is brought in, he will return to No. 1 and make another effort to bring it in as an oil well. He expects to have better success in his No. 2 for the reason that he knows the depths of the different stratas, the character of the different formations to be gone through and the kind of exploration to be done. He will know where to look for water and where to set casing in time to shut it off.

Knowing all these things, he has estimated that he can drill well No. 2 by early fall. Active preparations are now under way to "spud in" No. 2. It was not decided until Monday of this week to move the drill to the derrick of No. 2. This derrick has been ready for some time. Failure to shut off the water in No. 1 was the cause of the decision. No. 1 is not permanently abandoned, but will be returned to when No. 2 is completed. The well was capped with cement Monday.

The Courier has no information from the wells at Weldon, Porter Springs, Driskill or Grapeland, which are mentioned in the order of their depth.

Worth Advertising.

If you have anything that is worth selling it is also worth advertising. If you depend upon telling your acquaintances they may not want it. But if you tell all of the families of this community through an adv. in this paper there is always some one who does want. A quick sale at a cost of 50 cents is better than no sale at no cost.

KU KLUX KLAN ORDERS I. W. W.-S OUT OF CHEROKEE

OPEN CHALLENGE LAID DOWN BY OVER 200 IN PARADE.

Cherokee, Okla., June 26.—An open challenge to the Industrial Workers of the World was laid down here Monday night when over 200 paraders, wearing the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan, marched through the streets of the city, carrying signs defying the I. W. W. and warning them to stay away from Cherokee.

A large crowd assembled in Cherokee witnessed the parade. The marchers paraded up and down the principal streets for nearly an hour. It is thought they came here chiefly from nearby towns. Four leaders, carrying a flaming cross, were on horse back while the remainder preceded the marchers.

Signs carried were "I. W. W., nobody is afraid; the sheriff has 500 deputies in Alfalfa county!" "The sheriff may not know, but we do and he will"; "we know all and report all"; "don't get scared, get right"; "the man next to you is a klansman"; "husbands, joy ride with your own wife"; "we do other things besides parade."

The parade of the klan comes as an aftermath of the riot here last week between harvest hands which was incited, it is believed, by I. W. W.'s. One man was killed in the riot and several others seriously wounded.

Must Know Who Sends It.

The Courier is in receipt of an interesting communication from Lovelady which we would be glad to publish if we knew who sent it in. COTTON MILLS FOR TEXAS ADVOCATED

Austin, June 14.—Speaking of the cotton situation in Texas, T. S. Miller, cotton expert of the markets and warehouse department, said, today:

"The south is essentially an agricultural country and will be so long as climatic conditions foster plant life. Its principal product grown for national and international trade is cotton, a product suited to the southern soils of the United States exclusively, and confined there by reason of the semi-tropical nature of the cotton plant.

"This fact created in the mind of the cotton planter more than a century ago that factories for manufacturing the fibre into finished articles should be located in the south; located where the raw material was grown, but strange to say, not until recent years has such a consummation been effected.

"In 1860 the north consumed 786,521 bales of cotton, while for the same year the south used 178,107 bales in her mills. As the years passed by the sentiment for manufacturing cotton in the south grew, until 1910, a comparative statement shows the north consumed 1,993,904 bales and the south at the same time used 2,341,203 bales, while for the year 1921 the north passed through her mills 1,991,000 bales at the same time the south made 2,292,000 bales into finished fabrics.

"Texas, the largest cotton growing state in the Union, a country practically producing one-third of all the cotton grown in the United States, has been very slow in accepting the progressive spirit of manufacturing her raw cotton into woven materials, but I am glad to say she is beginning to awake from her Rip Van Winkle sleep. Today she has eighteen cotton mills within her borders, and one of the largest stands idle, not having turned a wheel since March.

The markets and warehouse department has made a recent survey of all the cotton mills in the state for the purpose of ascertaining the character of cotton used by them, also the variety and kind of materials manufactured as commercial articles. This data is now known and is a part of the department's record.

"With the view of encouraging the people of Texas to patronize more extensively our home mills, this department will, from time to time, give more specific details of what each mill is doing, at the same time extent its good offices to them for securing their supplies of cotton."

IT PAYS.

The statement by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, that in business today "morality is on a par with legality, and that the observance of both is essential to worthy achievement" is not so much of a platitude as it sounds. Instead of a stilted refashioning of copybook phrases that used to greet the youthful eye in beautifully flowing steel-engraved script, the statement is in fact the recording of a changing epoch. The business world has discovered that honesty really is the best policy. It is best because it is a sort of insurance of good will. Good will is now one of the greatest assets that any large business or any small business can have. The confidence of the public, once it is gained by any business man, can best be used to advantage by being used to the advantage of the public itself.

In addition to the discovered opportunities involved in fair play to the customers is the discovery that it pays to treat a competitor fairly. Indeed, it is possible to treat the public fairly and at the same time crush out a competitor since the public benefits by competition. Furthermore, competition means more business, and the rising volume of business itself begets new business for all. And finally, Mr. Gary says it pays to treat labor fairly. Mr. Gary didn't have to say that to make it true, but it is interesting that the head of the United States Steel Corporation should say it. The recognition of the truth of the declaration is becoming more general and more intelligent every day. We have become accustomed of late months to give many current trends a sinister interpretation. We have got into a querulous "whither-are-we-drifting mood?" As an antidote for this dismal attitude it is worth while to consider Judge Gary's declaration of faith. He does not exaggerate when he says: "Business throughout the United States today is transacted on a higher plane than ever, though of course there always is need for further improvement."—Galveston News.

METHOD OF BOLL WEEVIL CONTROL

Use only pure calcium arsenate in form of dry powder, and apply only in dust form.

Calcium arsenate must contain not less than 40 per cent total arsenic pentoxid and not more than 0.75 per cent of water-soluble arsenic pentoxid.

The density of the poison must be not less than 80 per cent nor more than 100 cubic inches to the pound.

If in doubt request the nearest county agent to send sample of poison to B. R. Coad, director of Delta Laboratory, Tallulah, La., where it will be analyzed free of charge.

Use only approved machinery for applying poison. Poison only when air is calm and cotton plants are moist (usually at night.) Use five to seven pounds of poison per acre to each application and apply every four days for three consecutive periods. The Delta Laboratory will supply the names of approved dusting machines.

Start poisoning when weevils have punctured from 10 to 15 per cent of cotton squares. If it rains within twenty-four hours after dusting apply the poison again immediately.

Do not depend upon hand dust guns to take care of more than eight acres per man.

Try to raise the largest yield of cotton on the fewest acres, as it costs just as much to poison cotton yielding one-fourth bale an acre as a field yielding a bale an acre.

Always leave an unpoisoned part of the field for comparison with the poisoned part.

SHOWS NO PITY FOR UNHONORED DEAD

Herrin, Ill., June 23.—Herrin's unhonored dead lay pale and stark Friday night in the vacant store building that had been pressed into service as a morgue, since Thursday's mine battle. Past them filed an unending line of men and women, young and old, bare footed boys and little girls bright in their summer clothes.

Never a word of pity from the crowd. These were the enemy slain in a labor war. These were the men who came to take away their jobs. Outsiders, enemies. Well it served them right. That was the attitude of the town as expressed by its men and women and its children. Tears? Sympathy? Not much. These were the enemy.

They died hunted across the fields, stoned, shot at, tied and dragged down dusty county roads, because other thousands feared these men would take away their living. The trees are green in Herrin, and the birds are singing, and the crops ripening in the mid-summer sun. From the morgue the crowds drift to the bill boards in front of the picture show to see what the posters promise; to the drug store for soft drinks; then home for supper. Only the outsiders show surprise and horror. People here say:

"This is our business. Sorry, but it's done. Let us alone. We'll handle this alright. We are good people to get along with—good as anybody—if you mind your own business. We'll attend to ours."

Investigations were conducted today by several state representatives from Springfield and the coroner started his inquest by swearing in the jury. It then adjourned until Sunday. State's Attorney Duty said he probably would recommend a grand jury investigation but that this would depend primarily on what the inquest uncovered. All officials were of the opinion that no evidence could be obtainable.

The casualty list in the mine war still was indefinite Friday night. Twenty-two bodies were in morgues. Several others were reported still in the woods or in ponds. Estimates ran as high as 40 but had no confirmation. Nineteen were known to be wounded.

THE HORROR AT HERRIN.

Whatever investigation may show as to the quarrel between the striking miners at Herrin, Ill., and the operators, there will be no respectable dissent from the statement that seldom in any civilized country has there been a more atrocious and treacherous act of brutality and savagery than the wanton butchery of the strike-breakers after they had surrendered their arms and agreed to retire from the mines.

The tales of men being shot down in cold blood, their bodies being mutilated both before and after they died; of women and children jerring dying men who were begging for water; of men threatening with death newspaper men who sought to relieve them, and other instances of atrocity, are so revolting that it is difficult to believe them.

Some of the victims of the butchery were overseas' veterans, whose bodies were identified by the contents of their pocket-ets.

There can be no defense of this unspeakable orgy of assassination, and the savagery that attended it.

Whatever may be said of the cupidity of the operators in bringing in strike-breakers to the mines, they at least had a legal right to operate their properties, and the law guaranteed them protection in that right.

The men who came there to work, whatever may have been the ethical standards they exemplified, had the right to accept employment, with the same protection of their persons as the law was obligated to afford if they had been a thousand miles away.

The infuriated men who attacked the strike-breakers, and then murdered and mutilated them after they had surrendered, struck a deadly blow to civilized government in the United States. They tramped under foot all law, statutory, moral and divine, and became veritable beasts of the jungle.

Incidentally, they struck a blow at the miners' union under whose direction the strike in which they were engaged was promulgated and fostered. Unionism does not include such methods in its written code, but there are the ghastly facts in Illinois, and they can not be erased. Without question there will be leaders to defend these guilty members, thereby assuming at least partial responsibility for the affair.

It is true the action of the operators bringing strike-breakers in the territory was provocative, but the men on strike had no right to be provoked into such bloody fury. They cannot excuse their crime upon the ground of provocation.

And where was the government of Illinois? Why was not its armed authority on the ground to prevent trouble when it was reasonably certain that it would occur? Was the governor of the commonwealth still too much engrossed with his trial upon an indictment, charging a scandalous felony, to give heed to the peace and order of the strike region?

When the state authority was so indifferent in the matter of taking steps to avert such a tragedy, what may the public expect of the local authorities in their duty to ferret out the murderers and give them the limit of the law?—Houston Post.

What the Former A. & M. President Writes in the Rusk County News.

A DANGEROUS DECISION.

Judge Street, who tried the sheriff of Jefferson county, is liable to be called somewhat of a tyrant himself. It seems that the sheriff, being a member of the Ku Klux Klan, was charged with having taken an oath which contravened the oath which he had taken as an officer of the state. Judge Street took the bits in his mouth, wrote the verdict and caused the jury to sign it without any decision whatever on their part, addressing the sheriff out of office. And when counsel for the defendant asked for a poll of the jury the judge declared there could be, but, that any member of the jury who would vote against the verdict would be fined and sent to jail. In other words, the jury would be imprisoned if it did not agree with the bench. It would appear to the unbiased and unprejudiced layman that Judge Street had contravened his own oath as an officer of the state in his ardent desire to punish the sheriff for the same offense, thus establishing a tribunal of despotism to fight what is termed by their enemies another despotic power. If that decision should become the law of the land, the trial by jury destroyed and courts clothed with the power and authority to punish men in obedience to passion, prejudice, or any whim peculiar to the uncurbed partisan mind, then it would become necessary to organize another "klan," a clan such as met down in a little valley near London on a celebrated occasion, a few hundred years ago, and forced old King John to get down on the ground and sign with a goose quill and ink the mightiest charter of liberty and human rights which the world has ever known. But that will not be necessary. The enlightened courts of this country will not permit a thing like Judge Street's decision to stand.

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. "The only medicine I have needed has been something to aid digestion and clean the liver," writes Mr. Fred Ashby, a McKinney, Texas, farmer. "My medicine is for indigestion and stomach trouble of any kind. I have never found anything that touches the spot, like Black-Draught. I take it in broken doses after meals. For a long time I tried pills, which griped and didn't give the good results. Black-Draught liver medicine is easy to take, easy to keep, inexpensive.

Doubtless the judge was moved by a passion which seems to be raging on the stump, in the columns of newspapers, and on the streets of the cities. A spirit, a bad spirit, has been unloosed in the land, and it behooves all sober-minded people to send out signals of caution and to warn all men in authority to use their authority as becometh wise and patriotic men.

One of the soundest reasons why the senate has deteriorated in the last few decades is because a seat in that place costs more than an able, honest, respectable man wants to pay for it.

There would be a political revolution at the polls next fall, and every boodler who is attempting to buy a high office should be abolished so emphatically that the whole country would feel it.

There is no royal road to learning, neither is there any honorable road to the accumulation of wealth except by industry and frugality. The person who seeks wealth in any other way is riding to a fall.

As we drift along from one political issue to another there are just a few things to remember as guides in the road that leadeth to a righteous end: An enlightened conscience, obedience to the constitution, and a will to perform every duty, remembering at all times that the surest way to reform is through the home.

If girls are becoming slack in maintaining a high standard of propriety, and if boys are taking liberties unbecoming of gentlemen, it can be put down as a fact that neglect is going on in the homes of our country. The saddest tragedy that can take place in a home is for a member of the family to do something that will bring disgrace to that home. Disgrace! It is an awful word, and sometimes it has been brought about by some family favorite yielding to the temper because, and only because, of some neglect of the home. Early discipline in the home is just as essential to the moral life of the child as wholesome food is to its health. Too much license leads to destruction, broad is the road that leads to destruction, and the road that leads to a glorious and happy womanhood and manhood is a narrow one.

We have never subscribed to the doctrine that every man has a price, because it is not the truth. But in some instances, it does seem, that the man who spends the most money in a campaign for office is elected. We cannot believe that the American people can be corrupted. Of course some of them are misled and others, far too many, are not alive to the urgent necessity of vigilance.

The Dallas News is having some trouble in lining up the democratic candidates for office to refrain from saying anything contrary to the doctrines of Mr. Wilson. It has shown Cullen Thomas very plainly that something that gentleman said in one of his speeches, if true, would involve Mr. Wilson in a bad light. All its life the Dallas News has been saying uncomplimentary things about great democrats.

THE SCHEDULE OF SPEAKING DATES FOR CANDIDATES

The following dates have been selected by the candidates at their meeting at Crockett on June 19, 1922:

A committee of three, viz: W. D. Collins, Earle P. EXAMINATION
FOR POSTMASTER

At the request of the postmaster general, the United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination from which it is expected to fill a vacancy in the position of postmaster at Crockett unless filled by the transfer or promotion of some one in the competitive classified service. This is not an examination under the civil service act and rules, but is held under an executive order issued May 10, 1921, revised July 27, 1921, which provides as follows:

"When a vacancy exists or hereafter occurs in the position of postmaster at an office of the first, second, or third class, if such vacancy is not filled by nomination of some person within the competitive classified Civil Service who has the required qualifications, then the Postmaster General shall certify the fact to the Civil Service Commission, which shall forthwith hold an open competitive examination to test the fitness of applicants to fill such vacancy, and when such examination has been held and the papers in connection therewith have been rated, the said commission shall certify the results thereof to the Postmaster General, who shall submit to the President the name of the highest three qualified eligibles for appointment to fill such vacancy unless it is established that the character of residence of any such applicant disqualifies him for appointment; provided, that at the expiration of the term of any person appointed to such position through examination before the Civil Service Commission, the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, submit the name of such person to the President for renomination without further examination.

"No person who has passed his sixty-fifth birthday, or who has not actually resided within the delivery of such office for two years next preceding the date of examination, shall be given the examination herein provided for.

"If, under this order, it is desired to make nomination for any office of a person in the competitive classified service, such person must first be found by the Civil Service Commission to meet the minimum requirements for the office."

Candidates will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated:

- 1. Education and training, 20 per cent.
- 2. Business experience and fitness, 20 per cent.
- Total, 100 per cent.

The date of the vacancy at Crockett will be September 5, 1922.

WOMEN PLAN FOR OBSERVANCE OF JULY 4 BY NATION

Chautauqua, N. Y., June 24.—Plans for a nation wide observance of July 4 were made at the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's clubs here Saturday. Thousands of communities, it is expected, will follow the program for civic celebrations outlined by Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Austin, Tex., chairman of the federation committee on American citizenship, and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson of Atlanta, Ga., chairman of citizenship training.

Speeches on Americanization and citizenship featured Saturday's sessions of the convention. Mrs. Josephine Corless Preston, superintendent of education in the state of Washington, announced that the women of 42 states have organized programs of community service, and Mrs. C. Pearson of Warshall, Okla., represented that the course of study outlined by the federation is in use in naturalization work in nearly all states.

Other speakers included Hanford MacNider, commander of the American Legion; Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart of Frankfort, Ky., originator of the moonlight schools, and Hamilton E. McArthur of Glenridge, N. J., who talked on the junior city plan.

Saturday night Mrs. Thomas C. Winter, president of the federation, who was a member of the president's advisory committee for the conference on limitation of armaments, will speak on the arms conference and afterward.

MEXIA MILLIONS ROLL ON WHILE FIELD HOLDS UP

Mexia, Texas, June 24.—During the past 12 months the Mexia oil field has produced more than 27,000,000 barrels of oil. This means that between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 have been received by companies and individuals interested in this vast output. There are now over 475 producers in the field and possibly double that many derricks in the area where thorough tests have been made.

In the past 12 months it possibly is true that more than $40,000,000 have been spent in developments here. This has been expended in drilling wells, sending down tests; for steel storage reservoirs; for oil field equipment; for water lines; for surveys and maps; for geological work; for pipe lines; for homes for employes; for office and house rentals; for automobiles and trucks; for tank cars; for advertising and printing and for loading stations; for additional trackage and for the one hundred and other items of expense that occur in the regular routine of pioneer oil field development and organization. It is now doubtless true that the monthly pay rolls of the oil companies and individuals here total $500,000 monthly.

The Humphreys Oil company itself has a $200,000 monthly payroll.

Withal, this field has not been thoroughly drilled. Only the fringe has been touched, and before the din of activities dies away, additional millions more will be paid out in the work ahead. This also means that the companies which have been developing the field are just now as a general rule beginning to derive profit from their activity and investment here.

IS IT THIS WAY IN YOUR TOWN?

All the boys and girls of this town would rather stay at home at night and read Emerson's essays or standard fiction than to attend a moonlight picnic, go auto riding or attend a swimming party.

Every housewife finds her greatest delight during the hot weather season when her husband brings three friends home for dinner.

All the men who are out of town on the first day of the month have out-of-town business on that day that can't be attended to any other time.

Every person in this precinct who goes to the polls on the twenty-second of July will vote for the candidate he or she believes is best qualified and will render the best service. Not one will be influenced in giving support at the polls by the fact that a candidate does or does not belong to any organization or because of his attitude toward some issue that was settled years ago.

"FINANCED BY THE PUBLIC"

Nobody likes to have his wages cut. It is not surprising, therefore, that the railroad men affected by the recent decisions of the railroad labor board should be displeased. It is perfectly natural also that they should make diverse announcements of what they propose to do about it and of what they think the country ought to do about it. The sort of man who can go out on the housetops and inaugurate a campaign to cut his own income is still too rare to be reckoned with in the mass. But it is worthy of consideration that the man who doesn't want to have his wages cut can not make out his case merely on the claim that he is inconvenienced or displeased with what is offered.

The railroad unions involved in the recent readjustments have sent a joint letter to the board responsible for those adjustments, in the course of which communication three objections to the cuts in play are offered. One of those is that the pay is too low for the comfort of some workers. Another is that the board treated wages as if labor were subject to the law of supply and demand, just like an ordinary commodity of commerce. The third objection is that under a proper management of the railroads no cut in wages would be necessary.

The first of these objections ignores the fact that the maximum standard of wages of which an industry is capable is a standard which leaves money enough in the industry to keep it in a going condition. Once wages go above the maximum, the industry begins to die and jobs diminish. If the maximum wage which an industry can pay is below the so-called "living wage," then the wage-earner must either take up a notch in his belt or seek livelihood in another industry, or, as a final resort, do more work for the day wage upon which he can subsist.

The second objection is that labor is not a commodity and does not cheapen in value when the supply becomes great. And as an evidence of the faith of the proponents of this idea they declare that they anticipate that the laborers will go on a strike to force higher wages—will artificially limit the supply of labor, that is, in the expectation that a decreased supply of labor will enhance its contract price.

The third objection, which is really the fundamental and inclusive one in the attitude of the unions toward the railroad pay cuts, is worded thus: "If the capital needs of the railroads were financed by the public and they were operated in the public interest, freight rates could be greatly reduced and wages to employees increased." In other words, under government ownership—or the Plumb plan—wages could go up and rates could go down. And doubtless they would, if "financed by the public," which is to say that the deficits of the road would come out of the taxes paid by everybody.—Galveston News.

TWO SERVANTS OF DISORDER.

Remembering the caustic criticism leveled against the Ku Klux for presuming to supplant the courts in the interpretation and enforcement of the law, and the dire prophecies indulged if such practices were to continue unabated, one is moved to wonder what will be the opinion of these same critics in connection with the autocratic and peremptory removal of the sheriff of Jefferson county because of his membership in the klan.

Not since carpet-bagger days, when judges were but the reflection of a master mind steeped in prejudice and with a desire to administer punishment indiscriminately, has Texas witnessed a proceeding more drastic than that which attended the trial and impeachment of Sheriff Garner.

The statutes set the precedent to office-holding in Texas and also set out the foundation for impeachment of office-holders and the manner of proceedings. From press reports, the gravamen of the charge was that in subscribing to the oath of the klan it set at naught the oath previously taken as an office-holder, and therefore, the incumbent was disqualified for the office he held by warrant of the vote of the people. In arriving at this conclusion, a conclusion radical if not hasty and precipitate, a new danger arises that is fraught with many possibilities. If the oath of the klan is held by the court to be subversive of the oath required by the state, might not another court hold the same attitude toward the Knights of Columbus and their requirements for membership, and still another against the Methodist church and another against any member of the Masonic fraternity? The possibilities of such holding are well-nigh inexhaustible. But granting the integrity of Judge Street's conclusion, that the oath of the klan controverts the oath of an officer of the state, there remains the denial of the right of trial by jury, the refusal of permission for the defendant to testify and offer testimony in rebuttal and a violation of all rules of procedure in that an instructed verdict was ordered by the court adverse to the defendant, who, by the nature of the charge, was involved in quasi-criminal proceedings, and finally intimidation of the jury.

With respect for the law and order, their creators and interpreters, and without prejudice or partiality for the klan, the Democrat stands for a vigorous and just application of the principles that make for good citizenship and deprecates any usurpation of authority by legal or extra-legal bodies. If there is any deviation from the prescribed course of procedure it reacts more powerfully upon the constituted authorities, because of the dignity and majesty with which we are wont to endow them. There is little to choose between a disregard of the law and a zealous and ill-tempered and ill-founded interpretation of it. Both lead to disrespect with a resultant weakening of its restraining force and of the moral fabric that makes government possible.—Dallas Democrat.

Mayfield Pleads for State Rights Control.

Denton, Texas, June 24.—"The transportation question is the biggest unsolved problem before the American people," declared Railroad Commissioner Earle B. Mayfield, speaking here this afternoon, "and now that I have succeeded in driving home to the people of Texas that one fact my opponents are beginning to find out how interested they have been all along in securing the repeal of the federal transportation act.

"The very destiny of the American republic is wrapped up in this question," he said, "because the proposition of permitting the interstate commerce commission to dominate and control commerce wholly within the state of Texas brings into the issue the whole subject of the relative function of state and nation in our scheme of government as applied to our industrial affairs, and focuses attention on the wisdom of our dual form of government. If my candidacy for the senate means anything, it means a fight for the constitutional rights of the people of Texas."

Mr. Mayfield's address here concluded a week's campaigning in North Texas.

About Mrs. McConnell.

Commenting on the many woman candidates for high offices in Texas, the New Citizen, published in Georgetown, Texas, has this to say: Mrs. J. A. McConnell is a candidate from Houston county for the legislature.

Mrs. McConnell is a woman of very forceful personality, well informed on local, state and national politics. She makes her race on three special items—adequate appropriation for public schools, prison reform and good roads, making every dollar count. Those who know Mrs. McConnell well can have no doubt that she can hold her own in any group of legislators.

Mrs. McConnell wishes to add to this, that she is in the race to the finish. If you hear that she is out of the race, phone the undertakers. They will know.

Help You Choose Tires

500 miles at 94.48 miles an hour—a relentless grind over a rough-finished, sun-baked concrete and brick pavement at record-breaking speed—that is the grueling test Oldfield Cord Tires underwent successfully at Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. They were on the winner's car for the third successive year and on eight of the ten finishing in the money, upholding the confidence successful race drivers have in the trustworthiness and ability of these tires to meet the greatest demands of speed, endurance and safety. Their records in every other important race have been equally as good.

Consider this achievement along with another test of Oldfield quality made at Wichita, Kansas, this past winter and early spring.

34,525 miles on rutted, icy Kansas roads, running day and night on a Studebaker stock car without a single tire change. This test was made by a group of Wichita automotive dealers in a tire, oil and gasoline economy run. Mayor Kemp of Wichita was official observer and made affidavit to the mileage and service given by Oldfield tires.

You may never subject your tires to the grueling experience of Indianapolis nor the steady grind of bad winter roads, but it is good to know you can get such safety and mileage economy by buying Oldfield tires. Ask your nearest dealer.

The buying public is the surest barometer of the value of any article. Their approval of Oldfield value has been demonstrated by the increase of 165% in business for the first five months of 1922 over the corresponding period of 1921.

Some of the young people of Crockett and their visitors have enjoyed two dances in Eichelberger hall during the last week. On Friday night the music was by an orchestra from A. & M. CO-OPERATIVE
MARKETING CROPS

We find a small number of cane and potato growers over the county afraid to sign the farm bureau commodity contracts on the idea that the overhead cost will be too high. I am glad they take that view for it shows good business judgment on their part.

By looking into the matter we find first that there is no real market, second that it will cost more in time and labor for 100 men to sell Houston county's crop than it would one man, therefore we find the advantage lies with the co-operation of all the counties and we might add with states under one sales organization.

The farmer is a producer and should not be required to be a marketing specialist. So the plan of co-operative marketing removes this responsibility from his shoulders and places same on the shoulders of an expert who keeps the condition of both supply and demand on his finger tips—for instance the eastern market may be loaded as it now is with tomatoes, the individual buyer cannot find a market while the exchange is moving all its products into a north western market and receiving fancy prices.

Of course it costs a lot to market any product and always will but by pooling the products the cost will be reduced to a minimum. No matter what system is used the product pays this cost, therefore we are working to have large quantities assembled at as few places as possible so no energy will be lost to incur large overhead expense.

We are working strictly in the open and invite honest criticism from those who desire to help and not hinder the move. We will of course make some mistakes, but if we thrash the questions out thoroughly errors will be lessened.

Join the cane syrup move and use your influence to make this a 100 per cent county. We are working for 125,000 gallons this year, 1,000,000 two years from now, and right here I am going to say that as soon as this organization is completed we will begin to organize watermelons and tomatoes for next year, so remember you can use all the commodity organizations on one membership fee.

Early Morning Marriage.

Miss Kathleen Hail of this city and Mr. J. W. Corn of Tucumcari, N. M., were married at the home of the bride's parents in Crockett at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. Only the bride's family and a few close relatives were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. S. F. Tenney, the venerable-pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Crockett. Preceded by her sister, Miss Lillie Hail, the bride entered the spacious parlor, where the family and other relatives were gathered, on the arm of her father, where she was joined by the bridegroom and given in marriage with a simple but impressive ceremony. The bride is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hail and was reared among our people, receiving her early education in our city schools. Finishing in one of the noted schools of the country, she has been engaged elsewhere in teaching for the last several years, but always spending her vacations at home, to the delight of both friends and relatives. Consequently there are many to extend best wishes and congratulations. The bridegroom is a prominent and prosperous young business man in his home city in New Mexico and comes with the highest recommendations. Following the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Corn left by automobile for Houston and Galveston, from which cities they will go to San Antonio to visit relatives of the groom and then on to Tucumcari to make their home. They take with them the best wishes of all our people.

CROCKETT MILL
RE-ORGANIZED

A new organization, to be known as the Crockett Cotton Oil Mill, has been formed for the purpose of taking over the oil mill properties of Crockett. This company is composed of the following stockholders:

F. A. Smith, J. H. Smith, H. F. Moore, J. W. Young, Arch Baker, John LeGory, S. L. Murchison, J. C. Millar, J. G. Beasley, Jas. S. Shivers, C. L. Edmiston, B. L. Satterwhite, G. Q. King, H. J. Berry, H. J. Arledge, D. G. Moore, W. H. Denny, M. Bromberg, J. W. Bennett and C. W. LeGory.

At a meeting of the stockholders, the following board of directors were elected to complete the organization and to have full charge and management of the oil mill: G. Q. King, John LeGory, Jas. S. Shivers, J. C. Millar, J. G. Beasley, W. H. Denny, B. L. Satterwhite, H. F. Moore and F. A. Smith.

The purpose of these parties in acquiring the oil mill, as stated to the Courier, is to preserve for this community a cotton seed oil mill which would provide a market at all times for the cotton seed grown by the farmers of this county, and also provide for our town a manufacturing plant with a considerable pay roll, and further provide for the community cotton seed meal and hulls at a reasonable cost.

It is hoped the new company, the formation of which the Courier noted last week, will meet with success.

It's All Up to You.

No man is beat till he quits, no man is through till he stops; no matter how hard his failure hits—no matter how often he drops—a fellow's not down till he lies in the dust and refuses to rise.

Fate may slam him and bang him around and batter his frame till he's sore; but she never can say that he's downed while he bobs up serenely for more. A fellow's not dead till he dies, nor beaten till no longer he tries.

DALLAS YOUTH TO MARRY GIRL
BY "WIRELESS"

Dallas, Texas, June 27.—The first wireless marriage ceremony ever performed, in which neither the bride, the bridegroom nor the officiating minister will be at the same place, is to be solemnized here Thursday night when Miss Inez Mabel Brady, Dallas society girl, becomes the wife of John R. Stone, operator at WRR, the municipal broadcasting station. It is estimated that more than 25,000 radio enthusiasts will "witness" the radio marriage.

Three Dallas broadcasting stations are to be used in the ceremony. Rev. Thomas Harper, pastor of the Central Congregational church, will repeat the marriage ritual into the transmitter of the Dallas News station. The bride and her attendants will be at the station of the Automotive Electric company, roughly two and a half miles away. The bridegroom will make his response from WRR, his own station.

DALLAS BUILDING NAMED FOR KIRBY

Dallas, Texas, June 27.—The name of the Great Southern Life Insurance building, one of the finest in the southwest, will be changed July 1 to the Kirby building. It was bought three years ago by John Henry Kirby of Houston, millionaire lumberman.

Mr. Kirby confirmed the report from Dallas that the big Dallas building would bear his name beginning July 1. The Great Southern Life Building is an 18-story steel fireproof structure at Main and Akard streets. It was erected a few years before the war by the Anheuser-Busch interest of St. Louis. It has a frontage of 125 feet on Main street and 100 on Akard. The purchase price was $2,500,000.

KANSAS COMPANY HAS UNIQUE
ADVERTISING

A campaign of good will advertising that has recently been put on by the Kansas Gas and Electric Company at Wichita has aroused considerable interest in the utility situation among people who might not have read business data in such advertising. These ads were based on the common knowledge of Aesop's Fables and their popularity. The story of the utility's place in the scheme of community affairs is forcefully set forth in a series of sixty ads by carefully tying each of the fables to a vital utility fact and pointing out the moral in a few simple sentences.

One of these ads illustrates the series. This one is the fable of "The old man and the sticks."

"Of course you have heard Aesop's fable of the old man and the quarreling sons," begins the ad. Then the story is summarized, with its moral, "In union there is strength."

"What the ancients discovered remains true today," continues the advertisement.

"Blood brothers can not quarrel and fight among themselves without bringing to themselves sure and swift disaster.

"So closely interwoven into the business and home life of the community is the electric light and power company that the community and the company are nothing more nor less than blood brothers.

"How foolish, how silly, how unbusiness like for them to quarrel!

"The great and powerful enemy of these two blood brothers is Hard Times. If they would bring prosperity into the partnership and kick Hard Times out the back door these two—the light and power company and the community—must stand together as brothers should.

"No community is any bigger or better than its electric system.

"No electric system is any bigger or better than its community.

"In a word, then, the community and the company are dependent upon each other for prosperity. Like the boys in the fable they should learn the great truth that co-operation brings success."
