Bentsen Says Propane Pricing Will Fail To Provide Relief

Senator Lloyd Bentsen this week said new propane pricing regulations will fail to provide relief to millions of rural Americans who pay some 43¢ a gallon for Liquid Propane Gas that cost 14¢ a year ago.

In a letter to federal energy chief William Simon, Bentsen said that, though the new regulations recognize that skyrocketing propane prices are a problem for rural Americans, they fail to solve it. The revised regulations were issued after Bentsen urged Simon to resolve the problem earlier this month.

"In the last 13 months, the wholesale price of LP-Gas has increased by as much as 520%," the Senator pointed out.

"Freezing the price at the highest level in history solves nothing for the millions of farmers and rural residents affected," he wrote in his letter.

Noting that LP-Gas represents only 2-4% of a barrel of crude, Bentsen said consumers of LP-G are being forced to bear a disproportionate share of recent increased crude oil prices.

"This is an unbearable expense for our rural citizens—particularly those on low incomes and fixed incomes," wrote Bentsen.

Bentsen offered a proposal aimed at distributing price increases equitably among all crude products.

The Senator proposed that

Services Held Tuesday For Jose Fabella

Jose G. Fabella, 29, was dead on arrival at West Plains Memorial Hospital about 9:30 Saturday night after suffering a gunshot wound in the head about four miles north and one mile west of Muleshoe.

He was born March 6, 1944 in Eden, Texas. He was a farm laborer and had been a resident of the Muleshoe area since 1950 moving here from Eden.

Funeral services were held at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church with the Rev. Timothy Schwertner officiating. Burial was in the Muleshoe Cemetery under the direction of Singleton-Ellis Funeral Home.

Survivors include the wife, Margaret; four children, Joe Don, Jose Juan, Mary Ann and JoAnn, all of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sollo Fabella, Sr. of Muleshoe; his grandfather, Santiago Fabella of Eden; six brothers, Sollo Fabella, Jr. of West Camp, Ray, Manuel, Ricardo, Gilberto all of Muleshoe, and Mike of Farwell.

addition to unlimited access to export markets, are vital to our well-being, and we will present testimony before the upcoming Tariff Commission hearings to that effect."

Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., according to PCG President Ray Joe Riley of Hart, "Nor will it reduce our efforts to retain rigid import restrictions," he adds.

The Council's Producer Steering Committee, made up of NCC producer delegates, took a strong stand against relaxation of import quotas at its meeting in Dallas January 8. But that position was reversed at a subsequent meeting in St. Louis, Mo. January 28, reportedly as a means to secure a commitment from textile mill interests to stop exerting pressure on USDA for cotton export controls. The NCC Board is composed of representatives from all seven segments of the cotton industry, including mills, merchants, warehousemen, ginners, cooperatives, seed crushers, and producers.

"As an organization dedicated to looking out for producer interests on the High Plains and no other interests," Riley stated, "PCG continues to feel that restrictions on cotton imports, in addition to unlimited access to export markets, are vital to our well-being, and we will present testimony before the upcoming Tariff Commission hearings to that effect."

The Tariff Commission will hold hearings on the import quota issue February 7 and make its recommendations to the President soon thereafter.

PCG's statement will point out the advantages that have accrued to the cotton industry and the nation from import quotas since their imposition in 1939, Riley said "and we will emphasize that lifting quotas, while serving no useful purpose under present world supply-demand conditions, could wreck any government price support program for cotton that might be in effect at such time as world supplies exceed short term demand and cotton prices come crashing down."

The resolution adopted by the NCC in St. Louis authorizes the organization "to work for unrestricted sales of raw U.S. cotton in the world markets" and to "work with the USDA and the U.S. Tariff Commission in developing temporary suspension of import quotas, for a period not to exceed 12 months, which would provide the domestic mills access to grades and staples that are found in short supply."

Richard Nixon, President: "The energy shortages are genuine. They may become more severe . . ."

Lack Of Soil Moisture Is Hampering Land Preparations

LUBBOCK -- Lack of soil moisture is hampering land preparations for spring herbicide treatments, says a Lubbock based agronomist.

Land that now is being deep-broken or chiseled is causing considerable cloddy conditions, making nearly impossible the proper incorporation of preplant herbicides such as trifluralin and planavin. In fact, according to Dr. Robert B. Metzger, area specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, farmers actually may be losing money by applying these herbicides on extremely cloddy land with high amounts of plant residue.

"If the land is reasonably free of large clods, effective control can be attained," he cautions, "but one should make sure that any plant material is worked well into the soil. Considerable crop residue such as grain sorghum stubble that is left on the surface will tie up any herbicide that hits it before it gets into the soil."

Metzger advises that the spray should contact the soil for best incorporation. In many fields, he adds, plant residue is fairly heavy, limiting the operator in working it into the soil. Under these conditions, the applicator should probably increase rates of these herbicides by 25 percent.

"In many fields, it may become necessary for producers to use a preemerge herbicide at planting time," the specialist explains. "There are many herbicides such as Carparol, Karmex, Lasso, Planavin and Sandcap that may be applied in a band behind the planter. If these type herbicides are used, the label should be followed closely concerning rates to use in different soil types.

"Usually these herbicides give better weed control if some type of light incorporation is used," he continues. "These usually can be some type of drag behind the spray applicator. A producer must keep several precautions in mind. Usually these are listed on the label. Particularly, Carparol should not be used in very sandy soils, especially if it is planted down in the hole under very dry conditions. This may injure some cotton seedlings after a rain has leached the material around the seed. The same is true for Lasso, but both of these compounds cause no injury problem if sufficient moisture is available for germination and seedling growth."

Karmex is another material that should receive shallow incorporation, Metzger advises. It should not be applied on loamy sand or very sandy soil. Planavin can be used as a band behind the planter and should also be lightly incorporated. This gives fairly good control for three to five weeks and has been shown to be safe on sandy lands at rates of one pint per acre broadcast.

Another fairly new compound is Sandcap, primarily used on sandy land. It has shown good tolerance at recommended rates. This herbicide has given good weed control, yet it is not as toxic to cotton as Carparol.

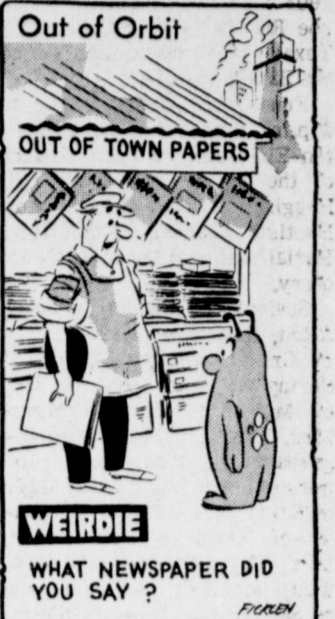

"Of course," Metzger explains, "using these herbicides and applying them at planting time simply does not do as successful a job as would broadcast preplant operations. For that reason, it will not effectively kill some of the deeper germinating seeds such as volunteer grain sorghum and devils claw. Also, full season weed control can not be expected with the preemerge herbicides. It will not last as long as trifluralin or planavin applied broadcast. One of the advantages, of course, is that it is somewhat cheaper, because less preemerge herbicide per acre is used with the band application method behind a planter, and because this one operation at planting time saves labor and fuel."

"We hope that we can get some moisture that will speed up land preparations," Metzger concludes, "and that we can start preparing our land so that we can get maximum benefit from herbicides now on the market."

I will not be revenged, and this I owe to my enemy; but I will remember, and this I owe to myself.

-C.C. Colton.

Lubbock Welcomes A Fellow Texan

Monday, February 25, 1974, at 8:15 p.m. the Lubbock Symphony will welcome to the stage a native of Texas, Ralph Kirshbaum. Only 25 years old and already a widely proclaimed artist, Kirshbaum was raised in Tyler. Musical by heritage, his mother was a harpist and his father is conductor of the East Texas Symphony. Let it not be said that he has found his way on the merits of his parents, for the list of honors and awards compiled by Ralph Kirshbaum would do justice to any veteran.

Kirshbaum was one of the first three winners of the First International Gaspar Cassado Competition in Florence, Italy, and the only cellist from a western nation to be named a prizewinner in the Fourth International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow. The Soviet newspaper Tass said of him: "Specialists view him as a mature artist with a vivid and beautiful sound and impeccable technique." By virtue of having won a prestigious National Merit Scholarship, Ralph studied at Yale and graduated with honors Phi Beta Kappa and Magna Cum Laude. He was forced to decline a Fulbright Grant to study abroad due to his draft status, but after a year of teaching, he was reclassified and received a grant from the French Government in 1969 to study in Paris. After arriving in Europe, he appeared as soloist in Italy, France, and Russia and undertook his first extensive European tour in the fall of 1970.

His plans for the season include London's South Bank Festival, South Africa, Paris, Toronto and various appearances in the U.S. For his appearance with the Lubbock Symphony he will be playing the Dvorak Concerto in B Minor, Opus 104. Tickets for the concert may be purchased in the Symphony office, 1721 Broadway, 762-4707. They will be available at the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium on the Sunday before the concert and until concert time on February 25.

Fashion

Many new strings of beads are being worn by smart women. Some of these are fashioned of wood and come in varied colors.

Crocheted and knitted garments and accessories continue to be popular. Purses, mittens and belts add color and interest to costumes.

Market Report

COLLEGE STATION -- Beef prices are edging upward this week, and the trend is likely to continue in the weeks ahead, observer reports.

"Best beef values generally appear on arm and blade pot roasts and steaks, ground beef, round steaks, roasts and liver," Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, said.

"Pork prices remain at about the same level as the past several weeks--relatively high," she added.

"Best pork values include picnics, ham portions, shoulder roasts and steaks, end-cut loin roasts and chops."

At poultry counters, fryer chickens show a good supply, and some markets are featuring turkey parts--in most cases, both offer attractive prices, the specialist said.

Eggs continue to be good protein-food choices, though prices are higher than a year ago, she added.

"Grade A large-size eggs offer the best combination of quality and economy for the money."

Turning to fresh fruit and vegetable items "in good supply at the most economical prices," Mrs. Clyatt listed oranges (Navel and Valencia), grapefruit, bananas and apples.

Also bulk turnips, potatoes, head lettuce, celery, cabbage, carrots, dry yellow onions, rutabagas, mustard, collard and turnip greens.

CONSUMER WATCHWORDS: Review spending methods.

Watch store specials, and use them to substitute one vegetable, fruit or meat for another, if the family will accept the change.

Compare prices on various forms and sizes of food.

Take advantage of seasonal abundance, and try different brands in all price ranges. Also, check grades--a fancy whole pack tomato isn't needed in a soup or stew, for example.

Two other hints: Shop when you're not hungry and ask yourself if you and the family always need all those fancy snack foods.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Dear editor:

I was going through the annual chore of cleaning off my desk preparing for a new year and ran across a few paragraphs I might as well get rid of on the grounds of the old saying, "Waste not, Want not," which was true up till about six months ago when nearly everything, whether we'd wanted it or not, ran short, including even bailing wire and I have yet to hear of any farmer ever wasting bailing wire. Anyway, here are a few scraps I saved from my wastebasket: Now that daylight saving time is in effect some people are worried about kids going to school in the dark, whereas maybe they ought to be worried about kids coming out of school in the dark.

Speaking of old sayings, I have often wondered, you reckon on the one about "not putting all your eggs in one basket" was thought up by a basket maker?

Language has to be handled carefully not only to get your point over but to keep from getting it over. For example, how far would that famous hamburger chain get if instead of advertising its famous "Quarter pounder" it said the same thing by calling it a "Four ounce"?

By the way, in case you have any reader who is slow on the up-take and probably borrows a copy of The Muleshoe Journal there are 16 ounces in a pound, even of hamburger meat.

And then there was the Scrooge-type man who, on getting a picture of his out-of-state grandchildren for Christmas, said "Hmnnn... how's that saying go... One picture is worth a thousand kids." You can't always believe what you read. On the other hand, if you read just what you believe, you won't use much electricity.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Guess "When a woman says 'no,' she means 'maybe'; when she says 'maybe' she means 'yes'."

"What does she mean when she says 'phooey'?"

read the poem he composed titled,

"OUR PASTOR"
He preaches God's Word in the Big Black Book
Which proves to us he isn't a crook,
He labors every day in the field
But to sin he will not yield,
We call him friend and pastor
But his heeding we will not master.
His wife Olive could write his outline to follow
But this he can not or will not follow.

G.O. Smith read a scripture in Nehemiah 8; and John Bruton sang a special "Surely Goodness and Mercy will Follow Me." Greg Austin, Jarrol Layton, Robert Layton, Cary Austin, Keith Layton, Matthonia Joas and Donnie Nichols each gave one of the Beatitudes, Junior Austin, Homer Bruton, and Jerry Nichols also had a part on the program. A special by J.D. Bayless "How Great Thou Art" was presented. A scripture, Acts 6: 7, was read by Dale Nichols and Clifford Saitker read Acts 8: 26, A solo by W.B. Peterson, "God Did Wonderful Things For Me" was sung. Harold brought the message in Luke 19: 9-10, John 4: 35-36 and Matthew 28: 19-20. Everyone enjoyed the program very much. Thank you men for the good program.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Burris and family of Wellman were guests in the home of her sister, Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Layton Sunday. Carl Hall also visited with his daughters, and was a dinner guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Peetree spent Saturday night in the home of their son, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Peetree at Clovis and attended their little granddaughter, Beckie's third birthday party.

The Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. Perry Fort Tuesday with eight members and two visitors present. Mrs. Robin Taylor of Muleshoe gave a demonstration on more space in the kitchen. The next meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Quinton Nichols at 2:30 p.m. Feb. 12.

CONGRESSMAN

Bob Price

18th Congressional District

Congress reconvenes this week with energy uppermost in the minds of most Members. Four separate Congressional committees have announced they will conduct hearings on various aspects of the energy situation and a number of new bills can be expected to be added to the list of energy measures still pending when Congress recessed last month.

Among those pending are bills I have introduced which are designed to further encourage exploration for new domestic oil and natural gas, and to further conserve consumption.

We must deal with the energy shortage along three fronts: (1) conservation to insure economical use of the supplies now available; (2) vigorous development of new energy sources; and (3) vigorous development of new energy sources including new off-shore petroleum fields, oil shale, and nuclear power.

We must encourage increased production by preserving to the extent possible the free market mechanisms of supply and demand. In the past, we have been fortunate to be able to obtain adequate fuel supplies at relatively cheap prices. Those times are gone. Fuel is going to have to cost more if we are going to develop the level of supply we need. But while this necessary adjustment is being made, we must protect the consumer from unnecessary price hikes based on greed.

This past week, the Federal Energy Office put into force the comprehensive fuel allocation and price regulations it has been preparing since the FEO's inception. Those regulations attempt to strike a proper balance between production incentive and rising consumer prices. Basically, the allocations insure that agriculture production, emergency and sanitation services, energy production, passenger transportation and telecommunications operations will be able to obtain all the fuel needed for continued, but economic, operations. These priority users will be required to certify that all of the fuel they get is necessary for the priority uses listed. Also, the regulations prohibit the accumulation of inventories larger than is necessary for the conduct of normal operations and thus discourages hoarding. Fines may be imposed for violations. The allocations provide heating fuel at the full necessary level for medical and nursing facilities; at a level some 15% below last year's level for homes and schools, and a level some 25% below last year for all other space heating.

At the producer end of the regulations, price controls are in effect. Incentive for increased production is provided through exemptions for "stripper" well producing less than ten barrels a day; exemptions for new oil discovered since last Sept. 1, and a provision which allows a limited profit for refiners with excess crude who sell to other refiners. New and stripper crude have been exempted from price controls for the past few months. This action brought our domestic crude prices up to an average $7.60 a barrel on Jan. 1, compared with $10.50 being charged on that date for oil from Venezuela.

The regulations also contain a prohibition against excess profits, generally limiting profits to the same percentage margin received during any two fiscal years ending after Aug. 15, 1968.

I would have preferred to see in the regulations a little greater incentive for increased production, but I am hopeful the regulations will provide orderly economic adjustment back to a system more fully dependent upon free market supply and demand factors. I will be working for changes in these regulations as experience may prove necessary.

Finally, the regulations provide a means for distribution to fuel users suffering special "hardship" conditions where allocations do not meet vital needs. In Texas, such users may apply for emergency fuel through the State Office of Petroleum Allocation, in Austin, which can assign fuel from emergency set-aside stocks. And, as always, my office stands ready to attempt to assist anyone in the 13th Congressional District who is encountering specific problems with matters involving the federal government.

The current energy shortage attests to the fact that the more dependent this nation is upon foreign sources for necessary materials, the greater is our risk should those materials be suddenly and significantly reduced, and, that this risk of economic vulnerability is magnified when the number of countries upon which we are dependent grows smaller.

We were facing an energy shortage before the Arab oil embargo but the embargo substantially increased our petroleum shortfall, and made us even more dependent upon Venezuelan production, with a resultant hike in the cost of crude from that country.

With the lesson of the energy shortage in mind, I recently asked the Library of Congress to provide me with current information on the degree to which the United States might be dependent upon foreign nations for necessary materials in addition to crude oil. What would be our economic position, I wondered, if other foreign nations could deny us other necessary materials. I do not view the information I received as good news.

In 1972, the United States obtained more than half its consumption of 19 out of 43 basic raw materials from foreign sources, and in each of the 19 cases, more than half of the imports came from just one or two countries. In two cases, chrome ore and platinum, the U.S. obtained 40 per cent of its needs from the U.S.S.R. Chrome ore of course is readily available from Rhodesia but the Official U.S. policy, with which I disagree, is to support U.N. sanctions against Rhodesia.

In 1972, the U.S. imported 92% of its consumption of bauxite, a basic ingredient for aluminum production; and almost two-thirds of the bauxite was imported from Jamaica. The other one-third of these imports came from four other Caribbean and South American countries.

All of our consumption of unwrought cobalt came from foreign countries: almost 40% from Zaire, in the African Congo, about 25% from Belgium and the remaining 35% from Finland, Zambia and Norway.

More than three-quarters of our need for manganese ore was filled from foreign imports: almost one-third from Brazil, and the remainder from Zaire, South Africa, Australia and Mexico.

Our need for natural rubber was filled at about one-third from Malaysia, one-third from Indonesia and the final third divided between Singapore.

Three-quarters of U.S. consumption of tin ore and unwrought tin alloy came from overseas: all of the ore from Bolivia and two-thirds of the alloy from Malaysia.

Of course, simple import statistics do not necessarily prove a strict dependency. If foreign supplies were significantly reduced, in some cases, have adequate domestic sources, or we might be able to develop alternative foreign sources, or we might be able to utilize substitutes. But in every case, we would have to be ready to pay significantly higher prices for the alternative solution.

The 1972 import statistics for raw materials do indicate that this nation may be economically vulnerable to the possibility of sudden actions by certain foreign nations. A sudden and significant reduction in the source of supply of any one or a combination of our raw materials could mean severe economic adjustments with related hardships here at home. We must act wisely now to insure that we do not find ourselves in a future "minerals crisis."

The information I received from the Library of Congress also listed the amount of dollars we spent in 1972 to obtain the raw materials from foreign sources. For the materials, excluding petroleum, in which we imported more than half of our consumption, we spent more than a billion dollars.

1973 BUSY YEAR FOR CONGRESS

The first Session of the 93rd Congress was the busiest, and one of the most productive, congressional sessions in the history of our country.

In spite of its record, though, Congress fell short in many critical areas last year, and there is much to be done as the second Session of the 93rd Congress convenes.

Throughout 1973, Members of Congress confronted an unusually large number of problems from the time they convened one year ago until adjournment in the last half of December. Problems ranged from the energy shortage and rising prices to a diminishing confidence in the institutions of government, a transportation system strained and beset by woes, and food shortages which drove up prices even further.

In rising to this challenge, Congress worked harder in 1973 than in any previous year. A record number of votes were cast in both the Senate, where there were 594 votes, and the House of Representatives, where 541 votes were tallied. Congress worked longer than it had in several years, too, remaining in Session for 354 days.

And, although many of its accomplishments were overshadowed by continuing revelations in the Watergate case, Congress compiled a very productive record last year. 193 bills were approved and signed into law by the President.

LEGISLATION APPROVED

In the field of energy, several significant legislative items were approved, including an allocation bill, a measure to permit immediate construction of the Alaskan pipeline and a measure setting a mandatory, nationwide 55 mile-an-hour speed limit.

Both Houses also approved emergency energy bills, although it remains for the second Session to work out differences between the two bills and give final approval to this important legislation.

Congress moved to fight inflation through reform of congressional budget-making procedures. Only because we have been an incredibly rich Nation have we been able to afford a situation in which Government expenditures are not considered in light of income. Those days are gone and I am hopeful of final approval for this budget reform measure during 1974.

The Senate took action last year to help restore confidence in government, by approving the first comprehensive campaign reform bill in 48 years. It includes an amendment I offered, which limits contributions any individual can give

WASHINGTON REPORT BY

Lloyd Bentsen,

United States Senator

Yet, while there was substantial progress toward solving many of our Nation's urgent problems last year, Congress fell short of resolving the most pressing ones. We are still a long way from finding a solution to either the energy crisis or the economic instability that continues to shrink all of our paychecks. And, we must redouble our efforts to shore up the sagging confidence of the American people in their government.

At the top of the agenda this year remains the energy crisis. Action must be taken to both conserve existing supplies of energy and to increase those supplies. And, above all else, a sense of leadership, of purpose, must be provided to insure the American people that this crisis can be ended.

I am sponsoring or co-sponsoring several legislative initiatives in the field of energy, which I am hopeful will be approved during 1974. They include de-regulation of natural gas to encourage exploration and end wasteful usage of natural gas by industry; a program of energy research and development; and a program of guaranteed loans to industries adversely affected by the shortage.

Public Notice

IN ADDITION, THE SECOND SESSION OF THE 93RD CONGRESS HAS ITS WORK CUT OUT IN AREAS SUCH AS THE ECONOMY, CONFIDENCE IN GOVERNMENT, AND OTHER CRITICAL MATTERS.

The stakes are, indeed, high at this time of beginning. Perhaps there has never been such a challenge to our legislative process and perhaps never such an opportunity to meet that challenge.

This is Senator Lloyd Bentsen in Washington.

WOMEN GET THE CREDIT

There has been quite a change in attitudes by the nation's retail chains and money lenders toward women. Since there are more women than men, retailers and banks are going after the female market. One Los Angeles bank counts alimony, child support payments and investments as income in determining whether a woman should get a loan and how much she can borrow.

While banks are pushing to embrace the female customer, the movement is far from unique. Over the last year a growing number of retailers and national credit card companies, as well as bankers have been courting women as ardently as any young lover. One big attraction is the growing financial clout of the female market, which is an important segment of the economy all by itself. Traditionally, retailers consider married women under the protective umbrella of their husband's credit rating or as good temporary credit risks as single women. In the past when a woman became single (because of death or divorce), her credit cards were often automatically canceled since they were in her husband's name. Many retailers have changed that policy. In addition, young single women who have good credit ratings of their own often lose them when they marry because their husbands are students or servicemen with minimal incomes.

Banks, too, have held similar standards. It has been their policy to discount all or part of the salary of a working wife in a mortgage application, since they presume that a married woman of childbearing age will soon drop out of the workforce. Women have also had difficult times getting their own mortgages if they are single, and it has been almost impossible for any woman to start her own business by getting a bank loan.

and paying 6% on savings, the group currently has $32,000 in assets and 450 members. A number of women from other states as far away as California and North Carolina have visited the Feminist Credit Union and are planning to file soon for their own charters.

Meanwhile, in New York a much more highly capitalized group of women will open the First Women's Bank & Trust Co. this spring, as soon as its federal charter comes through. The group has managed to raise $4 million in capital so far. "We will certainly not discriminate against men, either as employees or customers," says President Madeline McWhinney, formerly an economist for a federal reserve bank. The new bank, located in midtown Manhattan, will be open evenings and Saturdays. It will also house a library and offer special courses on investment and money management to customers.

Another key pressure area in the controversy over credit discrimination against women has been in the national credit card business. Over the last several years, many women with incomes of more than $10,000 have complained that their applications were rejected without explanation by some of the major credit card issuers.

Last August, a group of Detroit women received a Federal charter to start the Feminist Federal Credit Union, charging 12% interest on its loans

Tax Management Vital For Farmers, Ranchers

COLLEGE STATION. . . . Managing a modern farm or ranch business requires a large amount of capital and the handling of large sums of money annually.

As farm businesses become larger, the tax consequences of farm business decisions have a greater impact on cash flow and net income, says Dr. Wayne A. Hayenga, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"A farm or ranch manager is constantly making decisions during the year that affect the amount of income tax to be paid and the amount of cash available," explains Hayenga. "To make wise decisions in the framework of minimizing income tax while maximizing after-tax income, farmers and ranchers must understand the tax consequences of various business transactions throughout the year."

Tax management is concerned with maximizing after-tax incomes over a long period of time. Frequently, there is no conflict between a wise tax decision and a good farm business decision. However, when a choice must be made, the one resulting in the larger net income after taxes should be followed, advises the Texas A&M University System specialist.

If farmers and ranchers filed an estimate of taxes before January 15, they have until April 15 to complete their 1973 income tax returns. Otherwise, the deadline for final income tax returns is March 1.

"The next few weeks will be important from the overall management standpoint as farmers and ranchers prepare their tax returns and plan their 1974 operations," emphasizes Hayenga. "We hope to provide specific information in subsequent articles that will help producers with these particular tasks."
