MARKET MANIFEST.—We have to-day entered upon a new plan of advertising, in our Market Manifest—two or three line advertisements (changeable daily) one month for one dollar in specie—the cheapest advertising yet done in a daily paper. If merchants and business men with their cards to appear in our two-line advertisements, we will attend to their cases promptly, and call upon them daily to make any change in their notices in the daily Manifest.

TURNER'S HOOK AND LADDER CO.—This company is now fully organized, with an efficient corps of officers and members ready to pull and tear away buildings that are adjacent to a burning house, and to climb up a house that is in flames to rescue what ever may be therein. The following is a list of the officers of this new organization: E. Penteleider, 1st Foreman; Lewis Hatch Jr. 2d Foreman; G. N. Duerer 1st Police Captain; H. Degener 2nd Police Captain; Aug. Biesenbach, Treasurer; Paul Huberick, Treasurer.

NEW BARBER SHOE.—Jasper Thompson has opened a new and tasty Barber Shop in the Plaza House building; and, in addition to getting shaved, your hair cut, and shampooed, you can take your choice of a hot or cold bath. Thompson has two nice rooms partitioned off, with large zinc tubs, filled with water, to roll and splash about in. If Jasper and his assistant can't give his customers a nice, clean shave and a good rub of the head, we don't know who can. Try these knights of the scissors and razor, and you will know who can.

CONCEPTION DITCH.—The old Conception, running along Paganside street, is now entirely abandoned, and the dam in the river above Liffering's mill has been ordered, by the Supreme Court, to be torn down.

The ditch is left open beside a public thoroughfare—the earth thrown out and the ditch together occupying two-thirds of the street. Of course this condition of the street decreases the value of the property fronting thereon, and its continuance lays the city or county liable to the owners of the property in damages. Besides this, the ditch is twenty feet deep in places—during the rains often containing fifteen feet of water—makes it exceedingly dangerous. Only a short time since a cart, mule and man were hauled into this trap from the crossing leading from Guenther's mill, the man miraculously escaping death.

The citizens should circulate a petition.

A Literary Curiosity.

The following poem was handed to us by a friend, with a request to publish the same, which we gladly do. We regard this poem as the greatest literary treat of the present age. Life, ah! what is it? Dr. Johnson expresses it in the second line of this grand poem. The reader will notice that each line is a quotation from some one of the standard authors of England and America. This is the result of a years laborious search among the voluminous writings of thirty-eight leading poets of the past and present. The poem is from the pen of Mrs. H. A. Denning. The number of each line refers to its author below:

LIFE.

1. Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour?
2. Life's a short summer, man a flower.
3. By turns we catch the vital breath and die.
4. The cradle and the tomb, alas! so nigh.
5. To be, is better far than not to be.
6. Though all man's life may seem a tragedy;
7. But light cares speak when mighty griefs abounding.
8. The bottom is but shallow whence they come.
9. Your fate is but the common fate of all;
10. Unmingled joys here to no man befall.
11. Nature to each allotted its proper sphere.
12. Fortune makes folly her peculiar care.
13. Custom does not often reason overrule.
14. And throw a cruel sunshine on a fool.
15. Life well! how long or short, permit to Heaven;
16. They who forgive most shall be most forgiven.
17. Sin may be clasped so close we cannot see its face—
18. Vile intercourse, where virtue has no place.
19. Then keep each passion down, however dear,
20. Then pendulum between a smile and a tear.
21. Her sensual shares let faultless pleasure lay.
22. With craft and skill, to ruin and betray.
23. Not too high to fall, but stoop to rise;
24. We masters grow of all that we despise.
25. Oh, then I renounce that impious self-esteem!
26. Riches have wings and grandeur is a dream.
27. Think not ambition wise because 'tis brave;
28. The paths of glory lead but to the grave.
29. What is ambition? 'Tis a glorious cheat.
30. Only destructive to the brave and great.
31. What call the gaudy glitter of a crown?
32. The way to bliss lies not on beds of down.
33. How long we live, not years, but actions tell;
34. That man lives twice who lives the first life well.
35. Make them, then, while yet ye may, your God your friend.
36. Whom Christians worship, yet not comprehend.
37. The trust that's given guard, and to yourself be just.
38. For live we how we can, die we must.

1. Young; 2. Dr. Johnson; 3. Pope; 4. Prior; 5. Sewell; 6. Spenser; 7. Daniel; 8. Sir Walter Raleigh; 9. Langfellow; 10. Southwell; 11. Congreve; 12. Cheshire; 13. Rochester; 14. Armstrong; 15. Milton; 16. Bailey; 17. Byron; 18. Somerville; 19. Thompson; 20. Byron; 21. Smelt; 22. Crabbe; 23. Massinger; 24. Cowley; 25. Beattie; 26. Cowper; 27. Sir Walter Devonant; 28. Gray; 29. Willis; 30. National Colored Men's Convocation... Government Nine Dots.

Address to the Colored Citizens of the United States.

Fellow-Citizens: We your representatives, have convened in national convention, having attended to the business which you, in fraternal spirit, confided to us, respectfully beg leave, at the conclusion of our labors, to address you briefly, yet earnestly, relative to the condition which we now occupy here in the land of our nativity, and to the duties and responsibilities which are in consequence devolved upon us, in order that we may attain to that equal status in the eye of the law with our other fellow-citizens which we of right aspire to, and which we of right ought to enjoy.

At the outset of our address we would devoutly call upon you to join with us in looking to Him in whom has is the designation of all his creatures; that through the orderings of His providence, we speak to you under different circumstances from those in which you have been addressed by your assembled representatives at other periods of our history. Once you were called upon to labor for the overthrow of a gigantic system of oppression, which held in its swaying grasp more than three millions of our kinsmen, and for the recognition of our own claims to citizenship in these United States of America. Now we can interchange communications with you, that throughout the broad domain of our beloved country, from the St. John's river up to the Rocky mountains, and from the Atlantic border to the Pacific coast, the grand emblem of liberty is intoned with a hymn unbroken by the discord which would be caused by the wailing of even the unhappy slave. Whoa do we, too, with a consciousness that we are but looked upon now, "as we were then, in the light of past glories; for the American people have spoken through their representatives in Congress, and instructed that all persons born in the United States, and not subject to any foreign power, including Indians not taxed, are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States." This, fellow-citizens, we have reason to rejoice in the fact that the past has had its triumphs for us; but our condition in the present, together with the duties and responsibilities which it enforces upon us, demands our attention, and of that condition, of those duties and responsibilities, we would now speak.

As to our condition, we need not dwell long upon that, for you understand fully the necessity which prompted you to send us to meet together in convention. You know well, that, notwithstanding, as it has been, the most strenuous protestations, we have secured for us throughout the different States of this Union those franchises and immunities which are the pride and boast of our white fellow-citizens. Much out of you, in his own individual capacity, is painfully alive to the grievances for various in their character to the localities themselves; which he is called upon to remove. But let us not be disengaged, in view of these grievances. Let us remember them.

"Haste, The cannot tarry, bear the heavy load, And the wolf died in silence. Not bestowed To vain let such strengthen us." It may, Things of quality, or of savage might, Haters and abusers, we of another day Should temper it to bear. It is but for a day,

Let us, and ourselves, so manfully, and contend for the removal of those grievances, in the firm and confident trust that the same God who has consoled blessings upon us in the past will be equally propitious to us in the future; and that, as He stood up for us, then hosts of sympathizing friends, in follow the leadership of a Harrison, a Grant, a Lincoln, and Abraham Lincoln, so shall we stand up to such friends, as singly increased in number, and bearing so many life names that to single out any two or three from that sparkling galaxy would seem ridiculous. Notice it that the mere mention of these honored names serves to thrill us now, to the very core, and that they shall be remembered underground, as we shall be buried down to the greatest commemoration of our latest posterity. God grant that each one of his progeny of these names may be accomplished to us, and that the day may be far, for distant, when we shall be called upon to lay him away, with hands bound, and with mournful eyes, by the side of his affectionate companion—the ever to be lamented Thomas Jefferson.

But, notwithstanding, let us not forget, in our grateful recognition of those glorious services for our benefit and behalf, that the achieved further attention to us, will go to the elevation that we labor earnestly and unceasingly in our behalf. He may, indeed, need the moment, as "the day, the month, and the life"; but every day He requires us "to work out our salvation with fear and trembling." Still, His promise, that remnant, stirs; and assured beyond a doubt, is that nation of success which awaits us, if we only, but faithfully, serve Him. Then let us not be found wanting in this cross of our fate; but let us firmly and undauntingly address ourselves to the duties of the hour.

In our present condition we are an evidently disgruntled people, for we are stripped, more or less, in every State in this Union, of privileges and franchises which are fully enjoyed by every class of our white fellow-citizens. This wantonness of us, without any great spur, but only, ardently demands redress. And for this reason, and in order to secure our undivided support, any future or communication upon the subject, the current of all political experience points to but one conclusion, and that is, to restore the right of suffrage and of eligibility to office at universal suffrage itself. We all understand fully the importance of this right of suffrage; we know that it is the greatest treasure in the possession of any government—the strongest weapon in the possession of the subject, repelling the approaches of despotism and maintaining the possessed of all other strongest weapon that is in the expressive language of Warther:

"Strengthens a freeman's will,

As lightning divides the will of God."

Now, to deny such a right to one class of citizens while it is guaranteed to another, without a good reason for such a discrimination, is manifestly unjust and anti-republican.—Let us then, in the premise, appeal to the great, remanding it that the Federal Constitution, in article first, section four, provides that "no United States shall guarantee to any State in this Union a republican form of government." Let us urge upon that body and upon the great mass of the American people what it represents, that in settling the definition of the word "republican," we are not required, either by ancient or modern example, of it for the purpose of denigrating national freedom, from interpreting it in the sense intended from the Declaration of Independence—that Magna Charta of our liberties—that setting aside Great Britain, and the colonies, as well as those of continental Europe and of the nations of our own government, limited, in the latter, to a state of dependence, or hampered by civil strife they reluctantly believed to be ephemeral, we should determine and implant upon it that a "republican form of government" is one deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed—ones in which taxation is the corrective of the right to be represented therein; Let us appeal to them to consider that most of our State governments are mere aristocracies, the most iniquitous, because by them the insignia of (so-called) republicanism, nobility are conferred upon the many, while they are withheld from the few. And, in making this appeal, let us insist, as we rightfully can do, upon our citizenship and upon the proofs of determined manhood and manly资格 by which men at different periods of our national history, and especially during the late unhappy rebellion, in the black soldiers' prowess at Red Bank, of revolutionary fame, and at New Orleans during the war of 1812, is forgotten, surely, his gallant bearing at Fort Pillow and before Petersburg still dwells in the memory of the country, for which he gave the highest manifestations of his love, and which he hopes will prove grateful for his devotion and self-sacrifice.

We had pursued, fellow-citizens, to have invited your attention to the importance of education, and of establishing and supporting schools and colleges among us, and also to have pressed upon your consideration the necessity of cultivating habits of industry, and frugality of sparing in agricultural, manufacturing, and mechanical pursuits, and economizing and saving our resources, and becoming proprietors of the land. But these topics have been so frequently treated by the Rev. Bishop DABNEY A. Payne, in his letter to this convention, that we cheerfully refrain from saying anything further thereon, and content ourselves by referring you to that this production, as published in the minutes of this convention.

And we shall now conclude by returning with a Cain-like persistence to the all-important subject of universal suffrage, and reiterating our entreaty that each and every one of you, fellow-citizens, make that matured of personal moment, and never cease in his endeavors, by petitions and memorials to Congress, to secure its triumph until that which is an accomplished fact. Then, indeed, shall we confidently trust in the prospects of a bright and glorious future for our country. Then will she, proud of the fealty and devotion alike of her white and of her black children, sit honored among the nations. Then will her renown, acquired by impartial, unequal, prosperous industrial enterprises, by the brilliant achievements of her armies and navies, by her successful and fearless competition in every department of literature, science, and art, be eclipsed by her grandeur, vaunting that through all the widely extended dominion the right of suffrage, and the pursuit of happiness are secured to each and all of her citizens of whatever condition or hue.
