

Official Journal of the United States... Official Journal of Bexar County and City of San Antonio.

TUESDAY, MAY 25, 1869.

FOR CONGRESS, FOURTH DISTRICT. THOMAS H. STRIBLING, OF BEXAR.

The Telegraph, bearing date May 20th, informs us that the election in Texas will be postponed till November. No particulars are given, and we doubt its reliability.

If the President will submit the suffrage clause and the special legislation, to a separate vote, we will accept the new Constitution for lack of a better. -San Antonio Express.

We hope the President will do both, but if he does not, will you support the Constitution? -Flake's Bulletin.

Yes, we will support the Constitution, even with the suffrage clause, for we regard the removal of all disfranchisement as a step, certain, and near. -San Antonio Express.

Mr. EXPRESS, considering the purport of the above correspondence, had between yourself and the Bulletin, one naturally wonders why either of you should labor so diligently to bring together all shades of the Republican party, for the purpose of defeating its threatened surrender to the enemy, by a portion of its leaders. What is to be gained by a re-organization of the party, and its possible triumph in the first election; provided the Constitution as it now reads, shall be adopted? Does the EXPRESS suppose that a rebel Legislature will give effect to the school clause or any other section of the Constitution, objection to the party creed? Or if it should, that the Executive or Judicial branches of the Government, would execute the law? May, the suffrage clause practically change the whole Constitution? If it is adopted, the surrender is already made. Let no one deceive himself as to what is sure to follow.

RADICAL.

The above is, we presume, from our esteemed friend M. C. Hamilton, a true and sterling man, from whom we are always pleased to hear, even if we are not always able to agree. Much, very much, is to be gained by the triumph of the loyal party in the next election. A Republican victory at the polls, includes, of course, a Republican Legislature, as well as an Executive. Loyalty will then become dominant and fashionable; it will be "the only wear." In unison with the President, the Congress, and the Army, the Republican party in Texas will control the sentiment of the State, frame its institutions, and shape its policy, for the next four years. These four years will determine its future. If we are true to our task and comprehend our position, the old, swaggering, reckless, barbaric, fire-eating, emigrant-bating, slavery-loving Texas, will in that time, be transformed into a great, growing, Republican State. Railroads will correct our almost savage isolation, by close connection with the busy and opulent commonwealths of the West and North; the same fertilizing wave of immigration and capital that has doubled the population, and quadrupled the wealth of Iowa in three years, will cover our prairies with farms and towns; free common schools will dot the State from end to end, serving everywhere as living fountains of loyalty and patriotism, and lifting the whole people up into light and knowledge.

In a word; success at the next election will give us four years of unmitigated Republican rule; and that will place Texas in line with Kansas, Missouri, and Iowa, and quicken our apathy with the glowing meridian life of the nineteenth century.

But one thing can defeat this result, and that is the baneful, fatal decision in the loyal ranks, on questions now grown obsolete. Unity will give us success, and success insures the future. Division will bring us defeat, and with defeat, the loss of that higher and better civilization, which the revolution has made possible for us.

The EXPRESS has steadily kept in view, as the supreme duty of the hour, the Union of all loyal men on the National Platform. It may fail

In this, for rancor runs high, and faction is as voracious as a blind; but if defeat ensues, and rebel measures succeed, and a place in Texas, the special ability seen with those who are their eyes upon their comrades, while the common enemy was in view. In their course, these wise and weighty old Hebrew words receive a new fulfillment: "It is not possible but that offences should come, but woe to him by whom the offence cometh."

Danger with Spain.

The orders issued by the Captain General of Cuba, in contravention of the instincts of humanity, and in hostility to international law, mainly explain the disturbed state of the money market. While the revolting proclamation given below, remains unrepented, any Spanish officer may attempt to enforce it on neutral American vessels, and blood thus shed would almost inevitably kindle a war. Our Government has urged its repeal, but as yet, without success. It is signed by Captain General Domingo Dulce, and dated Havana, March 24th, 1869, and is as follows:

"Ships which may be captured in Spanish waters or on the high seas near this island, having on board persons, arms, ammunition, or war material which in any manner contribute to the fomentation of the insurrection in this province, no matter whence its point of departure, or the ship's papers, shall be considered hostile to the territorial integrity, and be treated as pirates according to the rules and ordinances of the Navy, laid down in such cases. The persons who may be apprehended in such vessels shall, irrespective of the number found, be shot immediately."

PANORAMAS.

TAKE it in any aspect, does not this Chinese question merit more attention than it has received? A little cloud now on the far Western horizon, does it not bid fair to overshadow the whole future of the Republic? The 60,000 or 100,000 Mongolians on our Western coast are the thin end of the wedge which has for its base the 500,000,000 of Eastern Asia. The Pacific is 6,000 miles wide, but steam is practically reducing it to the limits of the ancient Mediterranean, and it rolls, between countries, where the reward of labor is at its maximum on the one hand, and at its minimum on the other. Give natural laws free play, and over the sea, from west to east, will sweep greater hordes, than ever followed the sun across the plains of Asia. The day has gone by, when the sword determined, whether a given soil should breed Celts or Saxons, Huns or Gauls, Gooks or Hottentots; but the weapons of peace are no less effective than those of war. The wild mustard can crowd wheat from the field; sheep may drive from the pasture the stronger beasts, or the locust may put the buffalo to flight. Like these the Chinaman can live, where stronger than he would starve. Give him fair play, and this quality enables him to drive out stronger races. One hundred thousand Mongolians on the Pacific coast means so many less of our own race now, and hereafter to be. Five or six millions would mean that all but the crown of the body politic should be Mongolian; would mean a British India, instead of a New England upon our Western shores.

THERE is a well of perpetual ice in Brandon, Vermont. It was dug twelve years ago, in the autumn, and at the depth of 15 or 20 feet they came to frozen ground. The well is 40 feet deep, and in the winter the water is so frozen, that the ice has often to be broken, and through the summer the sides of the well, near the water, are encased with ice, and the water and air, that comes up from the well are intensely cold. As the whole region shows evidence of stupendous upheavings in the past ages, some think an iceberg may have been buried there.

A WESTERN exchange feelingly asserts, that an "overworked woman is always a sad sight, sadder a great deal than an overworked man, because she is so much more fertile in capacities of suffering than a man. She has so many varieties of headache, sometimes as if Joel were driving the nail which killed Sisera, in her temples, sometimes a tightening around the brow, as if her capband were Luke's iron crown, and then her neuralgias and backaches, and her fits of depression; and many more trials linked to her fine and noble structure entitle her to pity, when she is placed in conditions, which develop her nervous tendencies."

We are quite ashamed to make any endeavor to prove that the blacks will work, and work with a will. The fact is, they have always worked. Work is nothing new to them. Whatever else they did not know, they knew how to work. They have served a long apprenticeship in the school of labor, while millions of whites were idling away their time. The practical acquaintance with labor, which they will never lose, they have gained by their own care of themselves. Of course, there are drones in every hive, but there are plenty of good working-bees in this one.

ALLUDING to this State, the New York Herald describes it as "the great imperial State of Texas, which alone is equal to eight such States as New York, in size, and almost equal to the same number in productiveness." All of which is true. Nature has done more for Texas than any in the Union save California. A magnificent destiny awaits her; but it requires intelligence, energy, and industry, to accomplish it. Those who strive for the prize can hardly fail. -Telegraph.

MIXING THE CHILDREN.—The Albany (N. Y.) Board of Education resolved, by a vote of 13 to 7, to mix up colored with white children in the high school there. The board say, that they have done this because they feel that the time has come, when they should "rise superior to the prejudices of caste." The New York Express says: "While the result will not be for the moral or material benefit of the negro, the effect of dragging down the white man's children to the negro level, can readily be understood. People, who are anxious to do away with what they call the 'prejudices of caste,' have perfect liberty to indulge in the luxury of negro equality to their heart's content—if their tastes run in that direction—but to make it compulsory upon others, is an outrage upon the feelings and wishes, we are sure, of the great body of the people."

We want in the South a loyal population. We can get it only to a very small extent, through proselytism from rebeldom. We must rely mainly upon the present loyal population of the Southern States, and that which is infused from the North. To get the latter, we must insure its protection, and this we can only do by preserving the ascendancy of the loyal people already there. The success of the rebel party would shut it out suddenly, and as completely, as the falling of the gate shuts off the waters from the mill wheel. This would be ruinous. It would result in the perpetuation of Union-hating communities for generations. Acrimonious feeling would be not only perpetuated, but constantly renewed, and to preserve peace, we should be compelled to establish a Poland in America. On the other hand, if the Republican State governments in the South are adequately sustained, Northern emigration will be protected, the industrial development of the South will bound forward with unprecedented rapidity, growing wealth and prosperity will give rise to contentment, and we shall soon forget almost, that there ever has been a war.

THAT golden spike, and that silver tipped tie, which are to mark the junction of the two Pacific railroads, it seems to be supposed by many, will be in danger of abstraction by thievish hands. Strange, as it may appear, we incline to think, that they will be safer out in the wilderness, than they would be in the midst of the older civilization. Murder, robbery, all manner of vice and ruffianism, superabundant on the frontiers. Life and property have to be looked after by lynch law; and yet there is a rude, rough sense of honor among the most depraved, that will very likely respect and protect the costly symbols of the completion of the great enterprise. At any rate we should not care to be in the boots of the man or Indian, who ventured to steal them. His destiny, beyond preadventure, would be to dangle speedily from a telegraph pole, or a limb in the forest. The roughs are proud of the mighty achievement that unites two oceans.

THE India rubber tree is said to grow luxuriantly at Monterey, California, where vine cuttings, stuck in the ground, bear grapes within twelve months. Fruits, and trees, and crops of California are not less wonderful and extraordinary than the matchless climate, earthquakes and gold fields.

GERMANY is champion of free thought, education, real liberty, and progress. France, with her allies, stand for conservatism, absolutism, Caesarism, personal government in church and State. The battle must come sooner or later. Either the Saxon or the Latin must be master of Europe. The fight began when the first Roman shortsword was thrust through the body of a fair-haired barbarian. Since that early day, civilization and science have moved northward, and the Saxon races have joined to their native love of liberty, a culture and organization, not inferior to that of the Latins. Prussian infantry match French Zouaves. The true progress toward the highest civilization and manhood, for which Rome once fought, and afterward France, now finds in Northern Germany its powerful champion.

SOME, step by step, tame the subject's name. It fathoms the sea and makes a map of its visible bottom. But the stars are near, that we can put them into our scales, and learn their exact weight. It enslaves the lightning, annihilates time, and makes the whisper of London heard in San Francisco, before it is uttered. But the latest and grandest of its triumphs is the completion of this world's highway, by which the very globe itself is contracted, and the American continent pinched up to the narrow compass of a five days' journey. The old dreamer thought he was imagining an impossibility, when he told Aladdin and his lamp, and of the house, which was moved from one country to another. But in these days a man may enter his house or palace car at New York, may eat, drink, and sleep at his leisure, and within a week wake up with the monotone of the Pacific in his ears. All old miracles are dwarfed and eclipsed by modern science, old rules and ways are pushed into the grave of the generations that used them, and each new day brings with it a new world.

"Civilization sometimes does get forrad on a powder cart," quoth Hozea Bigelow. But he understates the case. All war civilizes. Peace is rest, sleep, recruiting of forces for another struggle and another progress. War is work. Peace is the sowing and quiet growth of the grain. War is the harvest. Peace gives the supremacy to money. War gives the ideas to mastery. Of course, this is heresy. Forty centuries shout indignant protest, and declare that wars demoralize, and that peace alone brings progress and true reform. But, then, what do the forty centuries know about it? What sort of progress or reform have they to show? Have we not, by four years of war, literally thrown the whole world forward a century? The greatest men and the grandest ideas the world has ever seen—have they not found birth amid the labor-pains of combat? Peace makes the money-bag a monarch, war brings out the true heroes. Peace educates the few. War educates a whole nation at once. There are several nations greatly in need of education just now.

SAXE says in his new lecture: "Laws, like sausages, cease to inspire respect, in proportion as we know how they are made."

Walk don't our farmers turn their attention to the cultivation of broom corn? It is quite as easily cultivated as the common corn, our climate and soil are admirably adapted to it; it is a sure crop, and is probably more remunerative than any other production of this section of country.

THE RACES.

FIRST DAY.

MONDAY, 23RD, 1883.

This day which began with a drizzling shower, threatening a heavy track, and an inglorious opening to our festive week, became more propitious as the hours flew by, though still somewhat cloudy and pre-ensaging moisture.

The air is perfumed with the aroma of hundreds of delicate flowers, whose white or purple petals challenge the homage of the breeze, and make the great plains of Western Texas one garden of lavish bloom.

The course was in perfect condition, the attendance large and orderly, and after some delay the first race was announced. Two mile heats, $500 entrance, $200 added.

The famous hardy racer Edinboro, of the renowned strain of Lexington, was pitted against the Texas racer Drone, by Lunatic. Both horses looked fit to do their best, and both heats were fairly won by the Texas steed, who took the start and kept it, though the contest was close and severe.

The second race was a beautiful mile dash for a purse of $75. The fine Bay Colt Gen'l Hood, another son of Lunatic, less fortunate than his brother, had to strike his colors after a gallant struggle.

The time was most excellent, being 1:47. The races closed with a run of a quarter mile, for a purse of $25, contested for by the ponies.

Blue Dick, Pullet, Ball Mayerick, Bay Mare.

Blue Dick was the winner, the others passing the Judges' stand in the order named.

Over a thousand persons must have been present, mostly on horseback or in carriages, the day proved propitious, and the opinion was freely expressed on every hand that the opening of the San Antonio races was a great success.

We would suggest that greater facilities for reaching the course might easily be arranged. An omnibus to carry a score might run at a reduced rate, and thus accommodate many who do not feel able to pay carriage fare, in addition to the price of admission.

THE WIRES.—Since Wednesday evening, we have been deprived of telegraphic communication. First came a break between New Braunfels and Austin; that being repaired, break No. 2, occurred between San Antonio and New Braunfels. Mr. ... started out to repair and investigate. On his return, our Operator found that another interruption had taken place between Austin and New Braunfels again.

Anywhere but in Texas this singular series of mishaps would be regarded as supernatural, and the cat would be out of the wool bag.

We clip from our exchange the following as the most reliable news concerning Texas:

"The Cabinet will ... the consideration of Mississippi. At the next meeting, will take up Texas."

We have received Special Orders No. 113, from military headquarters, making appointments to civil office, from which we extract the following:
