A greater mistake never was made. A drouth never occurs here oftener than in the older States, and even this could easily be obviated by properly preparing the soil and careful cultivation. The nature of our soil is such as to retain mois-ture for a long while, if that atten-tion is paid to it which the farmers in other States give their lands. We depend too much on natural advantages, and let everything take its own course without putting in an effort of our own. The farmers from the old States will soon

It is said that one means of decoy has been for an officer to dress himself as an Episcopal priest and go on shore as a religious teacher; and after gaining the confidence of the natives, persuade them to go on board the ship. Once there, they are borne away. It is said that Bishop Patteson was massacred by them under the impression that he was a party to this hefarious business.

Dust i dust! dust!
Fine, there edged and "cussed,"
in putts and in tories,
In clouds and in crowds,
It comes whirling
And curling
Right into one's face,
All over one's dothes,
From the head to the tore.

Dust! dust! dust! Dust! dust! dust! Mixed, misry and mussed;
It tries one's poor eyes,
And fills up one's gills;
The wind howling
And growling,
Wings boaded with dirt.
Oh, seal my clean shirs.
Is all over soiled,
And horribly apoiled!

Dust' dust' dust:
But "stand is" we must,
Begrimmed and beslimed,
Smoked up and choked up,
We go blinking
On direugh alley and street,
Blind to friends that we meet—
Now giving a whese. Now giving a wheeze, And then a big sneeze!

Dust! dust! dust! Now a whiff, then a gust, Now a whiff, then a gnet,
Now a mass of ground glass,
Then the parts of sharp darts,
Come erashing
And dashing—
And there's no way to 'scape 'em;
You must go on and take' om.
Till you're blied as a bad,
Till you're foul as a rat,
