BY LILLIAN ROZELL MESSENGER.

October, October, the golden! You are but a memory folden In gray still meadows apart In dim purpling shades of the heart, The summer was dreamfully dying. The humming-bird went away sighing,

The bee went forgetting its honey, And gold flowers scattered their money o winds in despair that pursued them In low wild murmurs that wooed them, The day that you came, and he came not!

That day, when a song-bird came singing As out of a past spring, and flinging
Its notes in silvery showers
And soothing the faint hearts of flowers
And yet though he lingers I blame not Your spirit, O loveliest season!
With fair glories fairer than reason.
By the hush of your voice—the awaying

Of flower bells secretly playing

Mystic airs, and too soft, for the breathing Of mellow winds tunefully wreathing

By the pink and the white morning glory That tremble with morn's early story,

And gold dews and sufficient that linger
As hid song within a sweet singer Who dreams at the setting of sun,

By these, and the mystery stealing O'er fathomless blue deeps of feeling As your rose-veil with all colors in it Steals over pearl waves and their valleys I thought he would come every minute!

Thro' your iv'ry gates warm bars of asure Where pale summer passed at her pleasure Or leaned her white breast full of roses Just born of the eve's crimson closes There swept the soft shade of a pinion Bright fledged from your gleaming do-

With the breath of a melody flowing Where purple tides softest were going That I deemed him then nearer than I'was hope flying past me! O golden October! with memories folden
As thick as the stars that are beaming

Through night on your tenderest dream For he cometh never, ah! never.

The Poet Jonquin Miller.

LECTURE.

Mrs. Joaquin Miller has at length delivered her long-promised lecture his book of poems, "Joaquin et al.," on the "Poet of the Sierras," and was elated by its success, and prethe San Francisco papers are all pared to go to London, but, to his HAVE now in warehouse, and have to full of interesting extracts from it.

The history of the poet's career is back to her mother's at Cape Blan-fully as strange and even as roman. fully as strange and even as romantic as could have been anticipated, and the fair lecturer will no doubt

She then touches upon his early boyhood, of his childish admiration for a Mexican bandit named Joach change of scene. While she was quin Murietta, which caused him to sick Joaquin obtained a diverce call himself Joaquin, and tells of from her. The lecturer said ironiher own girlhood days, of Cape cally: "This divorce was obtained Blanco, the gloomy place where she in Lani county. It was a part of the 1-7 73444m HER FIRST ACQUAINTANCE WITH programme. He had already pre-MILLER.

"Living, then, in this doleful place, and isolated from the com panionship of young women-there was not another young girl within thirty miles of Cape Blanco-I became gushingly sensational, To brighten the romance of the ideal world which I had formed, I chanced 2-10x6-10. 11 inch thick, $7 00 to find a copy of Lord Byron's poetry in one of the miners' cabins, and through the wintry weather I pored over the book. I read all the beautiful and naughty things ever written by the great bard. About this time I wrote the fatal lines which drew Joaquin Miller to my side. A schooner was wrecked off Cape Arago, and I deemed that a fit subject for my pathetic verse. Oregon editors were not then the critical literary men that they are new, and the lines were printed. Joaquin, or Cincinnatus Miller was then running an express at Salmon river, in opposition to Wells, Fargo & Co. Looking over the columns of the village paper, his dreamy, poetic eye settled upon these lines. He sat down and wrote me a letter. His handwriting was not as good then as it is now, and I have never been able to wholly decipher it. I answered to the best of my ability, not being able to make out exactly what it was." DETERMINED TO BE A SECOND BYRON.

For four fine days after Miller arrived, the pair lived in an atmos phere of poetry and then they were married. Minnie Myrtle's people were opposed to her match, but This was the first that mattered little. He took his wife where they lived for six months, and then went to San Francisco, re-turning to Cape Blanco when his money was exhausted. The whole dream of Miller's life, according to she had assisted him in manufachis wite's story, has been to resem-ble Byron. For this reason he had early sought a Mary Chaworth, and selected a fine-looking, buxom Williamette girl for that place, but, of course, never married her. After the Vienna Fair business in hand, his return with his wife to Cape
Blanco he left her there and pushed out for the mines of Eastern Oregon. In accordance with his deter

"Now, ladies and gentlemen, with your permission, I will introduce you into the poetic workshop. We go up an outside stairway, enter a hall, and from thence a small, dingy room, which is estensibly the office of the county judge of Grant county, but really the poetic workshop of the 'Poet of the Sierras,' And here we behold the artist at work. There is a long table covered with black oil cloth and furnished with drawers. Scattered over the table are books, papers, stationery, and manuscripts. At this table sits the prived of its benefits. And then artist, poring over a large open book. His pen rests in a spacious inkstand, ready for use. A page of foolscap is spread before him, on which is written, with irregular dashes between them, the words, 'ever, elever, over, elover, fire, desire,' and so on. We glance at the book spread before him. What is this book? It is a copy of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. The poet is searching for euphonious words. We look at the books on the table. Here is a rhyming dictionary, late numbers of British and American reviews. Harper's, Leslies,' Brick Pomeroy's Democrat, etc. Upon the shelves are the British poets, in bound volumes, arranged in rows; then the American poets and authors, Victor Hugo's works, the A Modern Byron-Interesting Waverly novels, some Latin authors, TALE OF HIS CAREER - Mrs. ancient and modern history and MILLER EXPLAINS IT ALL IN A biography. THE FAME OF JOAQUEN.

The circumstances under which the fame of Joaquin Miller drifted her where such that she did not feel that she might otherwise have felt. She was without money or experience, partially ill, wit the care of a young baby upon her. In this condition, in December, 1870, she found herself living in a miserable garret over a Chinese wash house, on Front street, Portland. Her brother's wages just kept the welf from the door. Se had attempted to earn a pittance by her needle, but not being a professional dressmaker did not command large enough wages to assist her much One day, as she sat in her garret thinking of Hood's "Song of the Shirt"-
