HOW TO SECURE IMMIGRANTS COMMUNICATED

Mr. J. B. Robertson writes a letter to the Galveston News, from St. Louis, in which he offers to secure immigrants for the people of Texas. He says he has represented the condition of the people of Indiana and other States correctly, and we would like to see the careful personal of our readers. Mr. Robertson says:
I have just returned from an extensive tour through Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and had at all the points visited a personal survey of the people of those States. I have seen thousands of good people anxious to emigrate to the State of Texas, and I have seen thousands of good people anxious to emigrate to the State of Texas, and I have seen thousands of good people anxious to emigrate to the State of Texas.

Three Points for Consideration.
1. The first point for consideration is the fact that the people of Texas are in need of immigrants. The second point for consideration is the fact that the people of Texas are in need of immigrants. The third point for consideration is the fact that the people of Texas are in need of immigrants.

Doctor—Only winged again! You won't get much of a bag to dry to Charlie. Charley (settled)—Impossible to kill every time. I don't load with prescriptions.

Mr. de B., flying with his troops which were pursued by the enemy, asked one of his officers how the rear guard was formed? "By the worst mounted, General," was the reply.

An Atlanta girl sat on her lover's hat and kept him three hours over time. The next time that young man goes to see his girl he should bring his hat on a nail, instead of holding it in his lap.

"Oh, mamma, that's Captain Jones' knock! I know he has come to ask me to be his wife." "Well, my dear, you must accept him." "But I thought you hated him so." "Hate him? I do—so much that I mean to be his mother-in-law!"

The white-gloved beau of last night, leaning over the balustrade and twirling his silky moustache, may next month be a fond husband leaning over an eye stove, and preparing a cup of morning coffee for a thin-lipped woman with a hawk bill nose put on bias.

"Faith," said Pat, who had managed to get possession of some United States blankets, "it's a fine thing to have larins; but for that I should never have known that these blankets have any initials on them. There is a U. and an S. Now the U. stands for Patrick; and there's the S., that stands for McCarthy."

"Come, Ned, you picked cotton for me last year, and I want you again." "I dunno, massa." "Come along and get in the wagon; I've good cotton, and I'll give you six bits a hundred." "Well, it jes depends on one thing." "What's that?" "Is you got dat same ole par secas?" "No; 's brand new pair." "Well, dat bein' de case, I'll go wid you."

A story is circulating in Otago which tells how a fair young lady went to a drug store and told the man to fix her up a dose of castor oil, and to mix it with something to take the taste away. The man told her to wait. In a few moments he asked her if she felt like taking a glass of soda water. She accepted the invitation, and took the beverage. Presently she asked the roller of pills why he did not give her the castor oil. The man smiled a gentlemanly smile, and said: "Madam, you have taken it; I mixed a fearful dose in that soda." She turned pale—she sank into a chair—she gasped, "Immortal Jove! it was my mother!"

At a station on the New Haven road, the other day, a man and woman came into the car. Every seat had one or two occupants. He put her into one seat which was in part occupied, and took another just opposite. The party next to her sat with offered to sit elsewhere, so that he and his lady might have that seat together. "Oh, it does not matter," he replied, "we are married." The explanation was considered satisfactory.

Several amusing incidents occurred during the recent visit of President Hayes to Toledo. One gentleman approached him, and shaking him warmly by the hand, said: "Governor, allow me to congratulate you, I—I—guess, on being elected President." That reminds me," said the governor, smiling, of a congratulation another gentleman tendered me the other day. "I congratulate you," said he, "on going into the White House if you are elected; and if not, allow me to tender you my congratulations on your narrow escape."

"My son, when you leave the roof under which your infancy has been nurtured and venture forth into the devious paths of a busy world, what vocation will you accept, with an eye no less to its moral elevation of pecuniary reward?" "Honored parent: mine is a high and lofty resolve, proud as the eagle's flight. I would wrest from Fate imperishable fame. Let others choose the walks of commerce, the career of arms, the bench, the forum, or the pulpit. Mine is a yet nobler aspiration. I will be a member of a Southern Retiring Board!"

A man who was being examined for a school teacher in Maine, after stumbling through some simple arithmetical problems, was asked where Boston is. He answered: "I know all about it, probably just as well as you do; I have heard of the place several times, but can't come, how or other, seem to locate it." With a view to helping him out, the committee man said, "It is the capital of some State, is it not?" "Yes, I know, probably as well as you do, what State Boston is the capital of, but you see I haven't got the flow of language to express it. The examiner 'passed,' but the applicant didn't."

A curious will case is before the New York courts, which grows out of the loss of several lives in one family by the wreck of the steamer Schiller upon the English coast last year. Mrs. Elizabeth Walker, who inherited a large property from her father, died in October, 1870, leaving a will containing bequests to each of her three children during their lives, with the remainder over to their heirs. She also left $30,000 for the benefit of her husband during his life, with version, first to her children and the reversion over to her father's relatives. When the year was lost, her mother, husband and two of the children were lost with her, and the question upon which the settlement of the estate hinges is as to which died first or last. If the children died last, they became entitled absolutely to the property, and their heirs go into possession. If the husband died last, he was heir of his children; and his heirs are entitled to the property. If the mother died last, and the husband first, she became heir of her grandchildren, and her heirs take it, and—lastly, if all died together, the reversioners secure it.

A funny case has arisen in England. The Supervisor of Excise summoned a gentleman named Henry Malcolm Ramsay, residing at Twickenham, for keeping a carriage without a license. Mr. Ramsay wrote an explanation to the supervisor, and used a seal to fasten it; thereupon the supervisor brought a second action against him for illegally using armorial bearings, putting in the envelope as evidence. Mr. Ramsay explained that the seal was an old one belonging to his father, and that he did not know that he was doing any harm by using it, but was fined $25.

A TEXAS BISHOP ON TEMPERANCE

[New York Tribune.] The discussions of the Church Congress, which closed its session at Boston on Friday, have been as practical and manly as they have been broad and wise. The prevention and cure of drunkenness was one of the closing topics, and the discussion was a very animated one. Bishop Garrett, of Northern Texas, who is certainly a well preserved specimen of a water drinker, advocated the formation of a church temperance organization, and steps were taken in that direction. He said that if any one threw down to him the direction of St. Paul to Timothy, "Take a little wine for thy stomach's sake and for thine infirmity," he would reply that his stomach was all right. The Protestant Episcopal Church has never formally identified itself with temperance work, and the discussion was consequently very significant. Among the wise things said on the previous day was this remark by Bishop Huntington: "The fact that the Bible ceases with the discrimination of their spheres. To interpret the Scriptures we begin not at Genesis, but with the incarnation, and the unity is proved, as the light flows both ways from the person of the Savior, to the Pentateuch, to the Apocalypse with its new heavens and new earth. Nature is just as much God's as the Gospel is, for otherwise we surrender it to the materialist or manichee, and play into the unbeliever's hands. It is the joy of our Christian position that we can greet with fearless gratitude every fact that human knowledge can introduce to our acquaintance."

A PRIEST PREFERRING TO BE A HUSBAND

[From the Denver (Col.) News.] Among the newly-married couples now sojourning in Denver, and who occupy rooms at a leading hotel, there is one surrounded with an air of mystery and sensation—and this through no fault of their own, as we are permitted to assure our readers that it is a case of true love. The groom was educated for a Catholic priest, and served in that sacred office until a very recent period, while the bride is the blooming daughter of a wealthy Chicago merchant. The acquaintance between this couple became intimate when the groom was acting in a clerical capacity. The girl first met him at a fair which was being held for the benefit of a new stone church now in process of erection. By all accounts their love was mutual. At first sight his attentions were of the most persistent character, and it was not long before the young priest was the talk of all the gossips in the congregation. At this time, as at the present, the girl's family was among the best known and most highly respected in the parish. His calls from being late and far between, grew more frequent, and it was not long before he commenced to take advantage of the hold which his winning ways had already gotten upon the affections of the young lady. He became her constant attendant. The matter was brought to the notice of the bishop, and resulted in removal to another parish. At this time the young lady was at boarding school at Kaukauee, whither she had been sent by her parents, who hoped to wear her of her unfortunate affection. As shown by the equal their efforts failed. Last week she left her home and departed with the husband of her choice for this city, where the latter is presently studying law. The girl is but eighteen years of age, well educated, handsome and accomplished. Her parents will not follow her.
