London, Jan 19-The Times to-day, referring to the result of the Conference says that this event will surprise nobody Those whom it will disappoint are fewer than they may have been, even at the than they may have been, even at the the opening of the new year. The friends of the Turks are not a little delighted at the spirit and courage displayed by the Porte, and opposed to the humility which has befailen diplomats who presumed to tresspass on the sovereign rights of the Sultan. What will be the effect of the Porte's decision on the peace of Europe, there are those who declare themselves absolutely certain that Russia will not there are those who declare themselves absolutely certain that Russia will not attack Turkey, and there are those who profess to detect consummate astuteness in General Ignaticit's mederation, and who will now say that he knew from the first how surely the favoritism of Comstantino-ple would force the Porte to open defiance on the subject. We shall be content to form a judgement on events as they occur, without speculation or prediction. There can be no doubt that Russia is in a most difficult position, but between a war There can be no dyabt that Russia is in a most difficult position, but between a war from which it can expect no permanent advantage, and a pledge which, if not redeemed, will discredit the throne in any case. FRENCH CORAL FISHING.

It is well known that France provides nearly every market in the world with coral. The Sleele gives some valuable information upon coral fishing, which furnishes employment for large numbers he process of coral fishing is of the st simple nature. Imagine two long ces of wood, forming a square cross, the centre of which a lead or castiron in the centre of which a lead or castiron wedge is solidly affixed, and which sinks the whole machine late the middle of the whole machine late the middle of the sea. To each of the four branches of this cross are attached abres of hemp and old topes. These fibres are united by a repeaf about five sthema is length, so that when the cross has sunk to the bottom and is put in motion by the movement of the vessel, it catches, loosens and retains all the fragments of coral that may come within its reach. When the captain sees fit, the boat is stopped, and it is then that hard labor begins for the row. The capstan must then be turned, and the heavy cross, laden with all its pooty, and made still heavier by the religious of the water, must be holsted on teck. This hard work is incessant; the shermen work on an average eighteen ours a day, and when the weather is inpleasant, which is often the case on a African coast, they have not one momenta rest. The ship only returns to art to unload, to replenish its store of tables and fresh water, and then timdistely goes back again. Of all fish, that of coral is the most difficult.

OURNALISTS VS. LITERARY MEN.

A writer on the subject says it is very common to confound journalists with literary men, though often they have very little, if anything, in common. Journalism requires an instinct for news, the capacity to digest events and form a correct opinion quickly. Literature demands wide culture, fertility of ideas, calm judgment, and purity of laste. The one needs a mind scrive to what is going on, and a perpetual readiness; the other a capacity to grasp and comprehend intellectnal antipects and present them in the best form. Few journalists are literary and few literatours, are journalists. As a rule, the best journ-alists are the least literary, and the best nonies with whom we have running its must be paid for in advance.

The "saddle of antelope" sells, delivered on the line, for one to two dollars, and to obtain this a steady business is carried on, re-sulting in the rapid decrease of the once numerous herds of antelopes. Just now the best antelope-hunting district is west of Dodge City, on the Atchison, Topeka and Sante Fe railroad, and east of Fueble and Trividad, Colorado. On the Kansas Pacific railroad the finest herds of antelope are found west of Kit Carson and east of Denver. The animals are killed in great numbers by ambushed hunters, who take the saddle i.e., the two hind quarters, of the animal, together with any portion use, and leave the rest of the caross to be eaten by the cayetes. The saddle, as out by them, weight eighteen or twenty pounds, and is sold in the Kansas market at eight cents a ponnd, the hide in which ias, after this defeat, asked to retire to it is wrapped being thrown into the barprivate life. HOW A MINER AC DENTALLY RAN ACROSS A NEW BONANZA.

Perhaps richer specimens, but certainly no more beautiful ones have ever been taken from any mine than are now being no more beautiful once have ever been taken from any mine than are now being obtained from the recently discovered lode in Jimtown, above Sunshine. The story runs that for months the miners in rofug to and from their daily inbors, have traveled along a certain path, wearing the earth away to a rock. A tein was thus brough to dight which presented no attractions to the prospector, and was trod upon as of no account. A laborer, two weeks ago, swung a sledge upon his shoulders, and started early in the morning for his accustomed toil upon the mountain side. Reaching the veia he carelessly allowed the heavy stone breaker to fall upon a projecting point, and thereby detached several pieces of the voic panter. The white character of the rock and ria gittering particles caused him to had up our of the pieces, when dime amazement took possession of him, as he quinkly began to realize that, so far, as is known, one of the richest mines in the world had thus luckily been discovered. Liberally full were the kalite specimens with bright particles of aimont pure gold; and, although a shaft had been sunk to the depth of nine feet, the rock increases in richness, and at the bottom very thin strips of wire gold seem to held together the fragmentary parts of the voiu matter. Untold wealth is the aure possession of the man, Virden and Griffis, who own this treasure want of the hills, who have given their visit in the more possession of the man.

HORKIBLE ACCIDENT.

Yesterday evening, by the accidental ischarge of a shot gun, in the hands of a friend, Mr. Pryor Tunstall was shot and instantly killed. It seems the gun was custy, and he had been unable to make the breech spring work, and passed it into the hands of his friend, Mr. Perry, who was trying to throw it open at the contents were lodged in the brains of Mr Tunstall, the charge entering the eye. Mr handling the gun, and Mr Tunstall on a bead, but a few feet distant. Death was instantaneous. A screener's inquest was held upon the body by Justice Huston, late yesterday evening, and a verdict found in accordance with the following TESTITIMONY OF WITNESSES . E. S. Perry being sworn testified: The deceased had been trying during the day to open his gun, a breech-leader, that would not open. He came to me to help him about it early in the afternoon. Not being able to open it, he put some kero-sene in it and let it lay, and tried it later. Re could not open it, and handed it to me. I took it to the light and sat down in the window, and tried to raise the spring that holds the barrel. While doing so, it went off, and when I looked up I saw deceased where he is now lying.

that his death was occasioned by a gun-shot wound in the head, entering the right orbit of the eye and ponetrating the Dr John Herft testified that he had examined the deceased, and agreed with the above statement of Dr Bennett.

REQUIESCAT IN PACE.

Elsewhere will be found an account of the death of PRYOR QUARLES TUNSTALL. whose life was taken by one of those unfertunate accidents which, under the unsarutable direction of Providence, are permitted to bereave us of the noblemen of the world, as well as those bearing the humbler and lower relations.

While we are aware that no words of ours can reach, much less allay, the unfathomable and holy sorrow that has fallen so suddenly, and with such crushing force, upon a family of which he was the worthy pride, we may say idol, we can not refrain from giving vent to somewhat of our own deep grief, and say a few. words of one whom "none knew but to love, nor spoke of but to praise." A nobler specimen of manhood, a more thorough and gallant gentleman, a truer and a nobler type. PRYOR TUNSTALL was one of those men whom it did not demand the you that he was a gentleman. It came to him as a birthright, it was stampbreathed in every action of his body. He was a true specimen of a Southern in the bearts of his friends that time will refuse to fill. A Kentuckian by birth, his life has been spent in New Orleans, St. Louis, and of late in this portion of Texas. During the late war, he was a Captain in the Confederate armyand no patriot ever drew sword with higher resolve, or followed the fortunes of a flag with more unswerving stradfastness. The grass will grow green above his grave, his voice will be a remembrance of the past, but with those who knew him. his memory will be green also. Our heartfelt sympathy for his family is intense, for we know what they have lost. In a moment, from them the gladness has been taken out of life. But if ever a spirit was kins, Doylies, etc., just opened at A. INTERESTING .- We saw a letter yesterday to one of our prominent citizens, inquiring as to the terms of renting the Casino building to Mr Theodore Tilton, of such universal fame and interest as will draw a crowd, perhaps, be the weather wet or dry. He will be in the State shortly, and desires to visit this city. By all means let him come.
