Gunman commits suicide

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -A gunman, fleeing a botched robbery attempt and vowing never to be taken alive, shot and killed himself early today after holding a man and woman hostage for 14 hours, police said. Police Chief Jim Datzman said he had been notified by a local hospital that Michael Guile, 31, died at 4:0/9 a.m. PST, slightly more than an hear after he shot himself in the chest. His two hostages were freed unharmed. Sheriff John McDonald had , aid the gunman agreed to surrer der but asked for a few minutes alo ae. A short time later, he said, a sing te shot rang out and the woman hos tage, Pauline Gomez, told officers Coule was on the

The National Front for Congo Liberation, an exile guerrilla organization which claims the invaders are its forces, said in Brussels that they took the town of Tshikapa, in Kasai province northeast of Kapanga, on Wednesday.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance told a congressional committee in Washington on Wednesday that the invaders are headed toward the copper mines, 350 miles east of the Angolan border, which he said were crucial to the survival of the Zaire government.

In answer to appeals from President Mobutu Sese Seko, Washington's chief ally in black Africa, the U.S. government was flying $2 million worth of supplies but no arms — to Zaire.

Belgium was supplying infantry weapons, ammunition and other military equipment, and U.S. government sources said the shipments may amount to 30 planeloads. The same sources said France may also provide supplies for Mobutu's voted 19-9 today for a bill that would prohibit telephone companies from charging for directory assistance or "information" calls

The bill was tentatively approved, with a final vote still needed to send it to the House.

In final arguments, opponents claimed it would give telephone solicitors "a free ride" and cost other telephone users a total of $41 million a

The sponsor, Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said the phone company charges for "everything except not having a phone — and they'd do that if they could find a way."

"Is this the bill to regulate the regulators that we set up last year to regulate?" asked an opponent, Sen.

20 cents a call for each call in excess of 10 a month to directory assistance, Doggett needed every vote he got in the Senate's 20-9 decision Wednesday to debate his phone bill. The Senate

Meier said vice president Paul Gray of the Communications Workers of America supported the bill in committee. Meier quoted him as saying that its purpose was not to save jobs but that would undoubtedly be a "side effect."

In other action Wednesday, the Senate passed to the House bills that -Prohibit cities from requiring their employes to live within city limits - except for council members, candidates, or those who serve on commissions or boards without pay.

-Require the welfare department to report to the 1979 Legislature on methods of caring for the elderly

ODESSA - One Odessa man was killed and another injured in a cartrain accident in Odessa Wednesday

Jesus Chavez Hernandez, a former Midland resident, died when the car which he was a passenger was struck by a southbound train, police said. He was declared dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpy.

The vehicle was driven by Ernesto

F. Alaniz, 20, of Odessa, police said. He was in satisfactory condition this morning at Medical Center Hospital with multiple cuts and bruises.

The accident took place in the 2000 block of Murphy Street, police said. The rear portion of the vehicle was struck by the front of the train engine. The Alaniz car traveled 40 feet south from the point of impact and the train engine traveled 240 feet south

Congress' tax men facing fight

WASHINGTON (AP) - The two members of Congress with the greatest say about the nation's tax laws seem headed toward a showdown over how best to help American businesses fight unemployment during the current recession

Neither Sen. Russell B. Long. chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, nor Rep. Al Ullman, who heads the House Ways and Means Committee, has embraced the White House proposal. That means President Carter apparently has little

However, Long's committee has approved a compromise that lies about halfway between the approaches favored by Ullman and Carter. If Long's stand is upheld by the full Senate, a House-Senate conference committee would work out the differences. And the conferees would be unable to consider half of Carter's business plan.

The House, following the lead of Ullman's committee, passed the tax cut bill with a "jobs credit" that would reward businesses for hiring up to 24 new workers.

But Long favors a hiring incentive workers. Like Carter, Long also wants to increase the investment tax credit, which the House refused to do. But neither chairman backs Carter's proposal to give businesses the option of reducing their taxes by taking a credit on the Social Security payroll taxes they pay. The finance committee, writing its version of a tax cut for individuals and business, tentatively agreed to vote today on Carter's plan to give most Americans a $50-per-person tax rebate this spring. That plan, approved in modified form by the House, also includes a permanent tax cut for 45 million couples or individuals who do not itemize deductions.

The panel voted Wednesday to delay for one year the effective date of two 1976 tax law changes that otherwise would mean higher taxes retroactively for sick pay recipients and Americans who work abroad.

Although the 1976 law was enacted only in October, the two changes were made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1976. The committee's action, which is widely supported in the House and Senate, would delay the effective date until Jan. 1, 1977.

Without that change, persons who received previously tax-exempt sick pay or who claimed an exemption for portion of foreign earnings would face higher taxes when they file their 1976 returns, which are due by April 15 of this year. Under the old law, workers could pay no taxes on up to $5,200 a year paid while they were sick or injured. Congress last year abolished that tax break except for persons who are permanently and totally disabled, meaning higher taxes for 1.5 million persons.

Congress also reduced from $20,000 to $15,000 the amount of wages earned abroad that could escape U.S. taxation.

If Congress concurs with the committee's unanimous action, the two benefits would be restored for all "The reason is, these people don't want any property tax relief. They want that money spent on salaries and other programs. But I tell you, property tax relief is in the wind this year," Massey said,

"I submit to you that when you are lobbied by these interests, they are not the taxpayers, they are the tax spenders," he said.

Massey later said he referred to a few members of the Texas Association of School Administrators, notably Dallas Supt. Nolan Estes.

The bill would reduce local districts' share of the Foundation School Program costs from 25 to 15 per cent, or $414 million over the next two school years.

Districts would be required to use half that amount to cut property taxes that are dedicated to the foundation program. The state would assume the full cost of the foundation program in the 1981-82 school year. Included in the bill is a boost in equalization aid for districts that are poor in taxable property. It would jump from $100 million to $175 million.

Misplaced leprechauns abound in WestTexas

Perchance, did a likeable fellow decked out in green and wistfully singing "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" happen upon you today? A figment, perhaps?

Maybe. Or maybe it was a giant leprechaun. Or, more likely, it was Frank Thompson. He's been known to carry on some delightful nonsense on past St.

Patrick's Days. And Midland could consider itself as lucky as a monk carrying/ a shamrock were Thompson up to form and up to the Irish spirit today.

"He was just feeling good that day," Jean Jones recalled of a St. Patrick's Day when the green-clad Thompson passed out green (dyed thataway) carnations to all the women folks at City Hall.

Thompson was doing that when he was mayor (1958-62) of this scantly Irish city and for years to follow. He dropped the carnation act a year or so ago, but continued carrying on with his elfish ways every March 17.

"Well, I can't get carnations anymore," he explained. Carnations of the blue-green color of the threeleaf clover are not always easy to

Thompson handed out a gob, five to six dozen, carnations back then when March 17 rolled around

"I used to enjoy doing that," he said. Mrs. Jones, who now is chief clerk of the efty's municipal court, would testify to that — assuming she could believe her eyes and ears. Here would come Thompson...

Briscoe aide says 'get tough'

By JUDY JOHNSTON

It's time to get tough in this country, said Gov. Dolph Briscoe's special assistant this morning before a large delegation of West Texas County judges and commissioners. Reagan Brown, the governor's assistant, emphasized the need for an independent free America with less government control in his keynote speech for the West Texas County Judges' and Commissioners' Association conference at the Midland Hilton.

'You may call me foolish when I say you have the ability and brains to work out your own destiny," he said. Brown cited a recent television program which labeled Texas' welfare system the worst in the nation because persons on the rolls receive so little in comparison to those in other states.

We want to abolish welfare. We want to find jobs for people," Brown countered.

Brown is in charge of the governor's Texas First program job campaign. As an alternative to government public works-type jobs, Brown has gone to employers and asked them to hire more people. The program has found 45,000 jobs within private enterprise for unemployed persons within the last six months, Brown

In addition to getting tough on growing government control, Brown said it is time to get tough on crime.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A reputed underworld chief's refusal to say whether he knew in advance that President John F. Kennedy would be assassinated may launch a new congressional investigation into the long-debated Cuban-Mafia connection with the murder.

But the House Assassinations Committee's grilling of Santo Trafficante on Wednesday shed no light on how much evidence the panel has to support that connection. In a session reminiscent of the late Sen. Estes Kefauver's racketeer hearings in the 1950s, Trafficante refused to answer any questions, even after he was threatened with contempt of Congress.

The 62-year-old former Cuban gambling czar pleaded his rights under the Fifth and other amendments more than a dozen times.

The two key questions put to Trafficante — whether he knew in killed and whether he knew Jack Ruby, the man who killed Lee Harvey Oswald — were raised by journalist-author George Crile III in a Washington Post article last year.

Crile, a Harper's Magazine editor, reported that a Cuban exile named Jose Aleman said Trafficante told him in September 1962 that Kennedy would be killed.

Trafficante, of Miami, was one of three underworld figures involved with the CIA in an abortive attempt to slay Cuba Premier Fidel Castro in according to the old Senate Intelligence Committee.

That committee investigated the Cuban-Mafia angle two years ago as part of its probe of CIA abuses. The committee concluded Castro was unlikely to have had a hand in Kennedy's slaying despite Castro's knowledge of underworld plots against him.

In Crile's article, Aleman, an FBI informer at the time, was quoted as saving that Trafficante charged John general, took graft and did not keep a bargain.

"Have you seen how his brother is hitting (Teamster President Jimmy) Hoffa, a man who is a worker, who is not a millionare, a friend of the blue collars?" Aleman quoted Trafficante. "He doesn't know that this kind of encounter is very delicate. Mark my words, this man Kennedy is in trouble and he will get what is coming to Crile reported that when Aleman argued Kennedy would be re-elected in 1964, Trafficante replied, "No, Jose, he is going to be hit.

Crile also quoted a British journalist, John Wilson, as saying that he was in a Havana prison with Trafficante in 1959 and that Jack Ruby visited Trafficante there.

Crile quoted Aleman as saying he reported the conversation to the FBI but agents took no notice of it until after Kennedy was assassinated on Nov. 22, 1963. Two FBI agents then questioned Aleman at length.

Grandmother doesn't like the view, gives up

HOUSTON (AP) — An ailing 70-year-old grandmother said today she will obey a court order and get rid of a carport at her home after a night in jail caused her to be "upset and nervous."

Diddie Smith was held in contempt of court by State District Court Judge John Snell, ordered to serve a five-day jail sentence and pay a $200 fine because she failed to remove the $1,100 carport she had built in front of her northwest Houston

She spent Tuesday night in cell at the county jail with seven or eight other female prisoners but attorney Dan Rhodes arranged for her release Wednsday by posting a $500 bond set by State District Court Judge Max Boyer.

The Lazybrook Civic Club, of which Mrs. Smith is a member, won a court order in late 1975 to have the carport removed claiming it violated subdivision deed restrictions.

Mrs. Smith said he would sell the carport or take it to another lot she owns in another section of

"I don't say I was right, but I was niave," she said. "I didn't look at the deed restrictions after I lost my husband.

She said she paid to have the carport built after she knocked a hole in her garage with her car. "The carport is beautiful," she said. "I want to sell it. I want to get something out of it."

Tom Tyson, president of the civil club, said "We've talked to her and talked to her. She just refused to take it down.' The civic club filed ssit and

U.S. contacting Cuba about limits

By OSWALD JOHNSTON The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration has been "in direct communication" with Cuban officials in an effort to set up talks with the Castro regime on the new 200-mile fishing limits now in force in both countries, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance disclosed Wednesday.

State Department officials had been under strict orders to keep contacts with Cuban authorities confidential But Vance, who revealed this latest move toward normal relations with Havana during a congressional hearing, later told reporters it had taken place within the past two caution in expecting any rapid movement toward talks on other issues, such as the massive $1.8 billion in accumulated private claims against the Castro government that have accumulated over the years.

Also unlikely, said sources familiar with the tenuous Washington-Havana contacts, is any quick agreement by Premier Fidel Castro to renegotiate the U.S.-Cuba air hijacking and anti-piracy treaty that he renounced last October. That treaty is due to expire April 15. Castro has sent back the message that the United States first would pave to relax the trade embargo against his regime, as a precondition for negotiating a new hijack treaty.

He has also taken offense at President Carter's publicly stated demand that Cuba's human rights violations be part of the agenda of issues to be discussed between Washington and Havana.

Pancake Jamboree '77

The Midland Downtown Lions Club, nearing its 50th birthday anniversary, perhaps does as much or more in the areas of sight and hearing conservation, youth welfare and community service in general as any other service club in the Lone Star State and beyond.

The club spends between $13,000 and $15,000 each year on its many and far-reaching service projects, which touch the lives of hundreds upon hundreds of persons.

And the funds to finance these projects come from the club's annual Pancake Jamborees, the 21st version of which will be held Saturday in the Dellwood Plaza

The more than 300 members of the club, all of whom assist in some way in staging the dining festival, hope to serve a minimum of 10,000 men, women and children at this year's event.

It is amazing the multiple services provided and the mileage gained from each dollar received at the Pancake Jamboree. And each person eating and enjoying the delicious pancakes aids in providing these marvelous services. This makes the the Pancake Jamboree a community affair, and the more persons eating pancakes this Saturday, the more community services which can and will be provided.

You may recall reading

recently about the handicapped lad in one of the Midland schools who was presented a motorized wheelchair aa a means of getting from class to class and in participating in other school activities. Well, persons who last year patronized the Lions Pancake Jamboree aided in purchasing the wheelchair.

They also had a hand in establishing and operating the Lions District 2-A1 Eye Bank here and in installing Teletype machines in the homes of deaf persons, so that they might communicate with each other by College scholarships also are provided annually. Other recipients of Lions Club support include Texas Lions Camp for Crippled Children, Golden Agers, Boy Scout troop, West Texas Boys Ranch, West Texas Swim Meet, Midland Junior Baseball, Junior Achievement, Council for Retarded Children, Casa de Amigos, Big Spring State Hospital, Christmas in October, Girls State, Junior Achievement, Miss Midland Softball, Senior Citizens, and others.

It's great, isn't it, what pancakes can do?

And you're invited to help the Lions help others by eating pancakes at Saturday's Jamboree.

The convention Season is in full swing in the Tall City, and a most distinguished group of county officials presently is in session

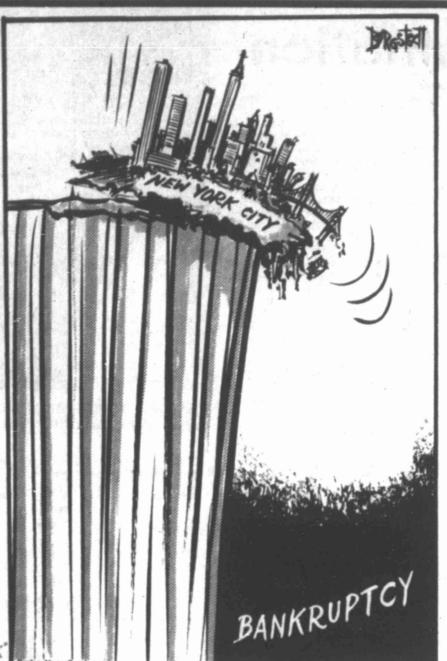

The occasion is the annual convention of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association, which will continue through Friday

Midland and Midlanders are delighted to be hosts to the conference, and a great big, sincere, typically West Texas welcome is directed to the convention visitors. It's great to have this group of judges and commissioners as guests on this occasion. Midland County's judge and commissioners have gone all out in arranging and staging the County judges and commissioners through the years have had much to do with the growth and development of this great and highly productive region, and today's judges and commissioners are no exception. Their's isn't always an easy task, but they do their jobs as elected officials with the best interests of their counties and their fellow citizens at heart. Their attendance and participation in the Midland meeting is an indication of their desires to do even better jobs in the future.

We are glad that they came our way on this occasion, and it is hoped that all of the visitors will come back to see us at every

INSIDE REPORT:

President Carter and Sen. Jackson on SALT

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - Publicly obscured by their clash over the Warnke confirmation, a private dialog on disarmament questions has been developing between President Carter and Sen. Henry M. Jackson that could avoid tragic confrontation in the Senate on SALT II.

The fragile Carter-Jackson bridge was by no means burned when, shortly before the Senate vote, the President lashed out against Senators opposing Paul Warnke as chief disarmament negotiator. Whether or not Mr. Carter was aiming that lash at Jackson, the fact is that Jackson's advice - in both written and oral form — for a tough bargaining line with the Soviets is getting into the Oval Office.

What remains to be seen is whether the President is merely stroking Jackson or will, at least in part, follow his counsel. If the latter is so, the nation and the world may be spared the trauma of a strategic arms limitation (SALT) agreement that cannot be ratified by the Senate.

The Carter-Jackson dialog is based on Jackson's assumption that the new President has no inflexible views on disarmament. The left-of-center tilt in Mr. Carter's national security appointments is seen by Jackson not as an ideological affirmation but as a political culmination: having wooed the left to win the Democratic presidential nomination, Mr. Carter naturally drew appointments from the left. Before the election, Jackson cautioned Mr. Carter against packing his national security team exclusively with ardent arms control advocates (duplicating similar advice from Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia). Following the inauguration, Jackson expressed his misgivings to the President about naming Warnke as chief SALT negotiator and disarmanent agency

But Jackson did not press the President on appointments, for the simple reason it would do no good. With Mr. Carter and his closest aides, Hamilton Jordan and Jody Powell, unfamiliar with the personalities, why should they accept advice on appointments from Scoop Jackson, a virtual stranger and a former rival?

Jackson chose to believe that the President picked Warnke not out of affinity for Warnke's public views pooh-poohing Soviet missile prowess and urging unilateral initiatives in disarmament but out of Mr. Carter's vulnerability as an outsider. Unfamiliar with the nuances, the President was prey to pro-Warnke endorsements from Washington establishmentarians Clark Clifford and Averell Harriman as well as Warnke's own personal dynamism, according to this theory.

Jackson adopted the still debatable view that he could argue his case for SALT caution directly with the former career naval officer from south Georgia. The first small vindication of this belief came when the President proposed a quick SALT II agreement by deferring consideration of two new weapons systems causing the present deadlock - the Soviet Backfire bomber and the U.S. cruise missile.

What is not well known is that Jackson strongly urged the President to pursue his inclination toward this course despite opposition within the national security bureaucracy. Those opponents, arguing that the Kremlin will never agree to Mr. Carter's proposal, feel the U.S. must make concessions on both Backfire and the cruise missile.

Since then, Jackson has pressed detailed, sophisticated disarmament arguments on the President, who has expressed keen interest. Moreover. Jackson's positions have now entered the bureaucratic flow. That means option papers prepared for Mr. Carter cannot merely knock down a ludicrously hard-line "Option No. 1" as a straw man but must deal with a cogent Jackson alternative.

In the midst of this private dialog came Mr. Carter's public characterization of Warnke's Senate critics as enemies of "substantial reductions in atomic weapons - even though they are agreed to mutually by us and the Soviet Union, and even if they are designed to reduce the threat of nuclear destruction of the world." Apart from its intemperate quality, the charge is simply not true; Jackson has long pushed for substantial mutual reductions in strategic rocket launchers.

The President's outburst probably resulted more from his inherent combativeness just before the Senate vote than from any intention to break with Jackson. At any rate, that is Jackson's interpretation.

The 40 Senators against Warnke immediately following Mr. Carter's hard words suggests enough Senate votes to reject any SALT treaty objected to by Jackson. Accordingly, the fate of Jackson's dialog with the President could well shape the future of arms control.

G. Liddy: 'Fired up' in prison

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON - G. Gordon Liddy, the machoi Watergate conspirator who once tried to impress friends by holding his hand over a burning candle, has been coming under some fire in prison as well.

ed silent to this day about his role in the ill-fated Watergate break-in. But he was quick to complain loudly about his accomodations at the Allenwood Prison Camp in Pennsylvania. Liddy moved to the minimum security prison three months ago from another penitentiary in Danbury, Conn. The tenacious tough guy was assigned to sleep on a cot in a hallway near the television room because the better rooms were all booked up. Liddy soon squawked that he couldn't sleep because of the noise from the all-night TV room.

Almost immediately, prison officials banned TV watching after 11:30 p.m., and even started making spot checks to make sure the inmates weren't sneaking a peek at the late show. The other inmates were infuriated at what seemed to be the special treatment for their famous colleague. Many other sleepless inmates had complained about the latenight TV noise, to no avail.

The outraged prisoners retaliated by setting Liddy's mattress on fire. When he got a new one, they soaked it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

We learned of the brouhaha when an angry inmate bellyached to us that the prison surrenders to every demand Liddy makes. Allenwood warden Eldon Jensen confirmed that Liddy had some trouble fellow prisoners. He told us, however, he closed the TV room early due to numerous complaints, not because of Liddy's protest.

HEARTBROKEN. HOOVER -Behind the bulldog visage of J. Edgar Hoover, who intimidated lawmakers and lawbreakers for decades, was a man acutely sensitive to any criticism of his beloved FBI.

No one defended the bureau more staunchly than Hoover when the Warren Commission complained about the FBI's handling of the investigation into President Kennedy's assassination. But long-secret documents show that Hoover was nearly heartbroken over his bureau's failings in the JFK probe and felt the commission had "debunked" the FBI wind of secret FBI files and reported that Hoover would tell President Johnson that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone, the FBI chief was surprisingly calm. Had the breach of security appeared in a more liberal paper, Hoover probably would have unleased his own plumbers to track down the leaker.

Instead, he sent a mild memo to his sidekick Clyde Tolson, commenting wryly: "I assume none of this is coming from the FBI." His aides assured him it wasn't.

Hoover did withold some information about the killing that could have damaged the FBI's reputation, however. When the Warren Commission report criticized the FBI, Hoover sadly found that even the loyal Journal-American was giving him bad reviews. Solemnly, he underlined the harshest phrases.

In a handwritten note to closest bureau friends, Hoover conceded that the commission report was "a real debunking of the FBI which we will never live down.

Now, after 13 years, the late director's words seem prophetic. For as charges of a coverup have been leveled at the FBI, its actions in the Kennedy investigation are once again being probed by Congress.

DRUG COURSE - The drug industry's message is now being peddled to congressmen, doctors and officials across the country under the guise of academic respectability.

They recently received an impressive-looking report from the Center for the Study of Drug Development at the Unviersity of Rochester. The study, warning that federal regulations are preventing important new drugs from being marketed, is written by G. Frederick Roll.

The study doesn't mention that until last year, Roll was vice president of Smith, Kline and French, a major drug company. Nor does it point out that the center gets half its money from the drug industry, including a $10,000 grant from Smith, Kline and French

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff's 'Department of Education'

WASHINGTON — For 12 years, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) has been trying to get the Department of Health, Education and Welfare which he once headed - to divest itself of "Education" and have a new department established in that name. His project has amounted to a weighty boulder, and now Ribicoff thinks he might just have enough push to get it to the top of this seemingly unsurmountable hill and rolling. "President Carter is the key." Ribicoff said this week, as he introduced his bill for the sixth time. 'In the campaign he favored the creation of a Department of Education, and I think he'll go with it as President." The problem is that the education division of HEW is often lost in the swirl of dust created in this superdepartment, one far larger now than the Pentagon. HEW's 1978 budget could total $178 billion, and of that amount perhaps $10 billion will go for

That $10 billion, as Ribicoff points out, is greater than the budget of the departments of Interior, Commerce or State. But who has a handle on what goes on in education at HEW "The HEW secretary is forever utting out fires on welfare, Social Security or maybe saccharine, Ribicoff says. "How often can he deal with education or speak for it? We need a Secretary of Education for Right now, 136 federal programs are run by HEW's education division. and there are scores of other educational programs scattered scross the bureaucracy. It's the familiar Washington story of ongressional committees and ureaucrats hatching little programs, icking them away to be nurtured and developed and then one day, suddenly seeing another tangled undergrowth, only deploring them. Once upon a time, back in the Eisenhower days, there was a separate, identified Office of Education. But federal involvement with education in the mid-Fifties was small. An Eisenhower appointee named Nelson A. Rockefeller came along and helped consolidate this modest component of bureaucracy with federal health and welfare activities, and lo, we had HEW.

Despite the billions in federal aid. the American educational system has had a poor record in recent years. As Ribicoff points out, the Office, of Education itself released a study one year ago showing a 10-year decline in reading skills among American students. The College Entrance Examination Board then reported that 1975 scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test showed the biggest drop in 20 years.

"College educators are more and more concerned about the low reading and writing ability of high school graduates," Ribicoff points out. "In one of our major universities, nearly half of the freshman class was required to take remedial courses in Ribicoff argues that a separate Department of Education could give national direction to the great American endeavor in learning. 'There would be a place to focus on education; there would be more value for the education dollar, and there would be more accountability," he says. Schoolmen and labor unions like the National Education Assn. have been yelping for more federal bucks for years, but hide in the closet when someone mentions that frightening word, "accountability." Perhaps with a Department of Education standing there alone and having to account for itself, American education would Ribicoff has 20 co-sponsors for his bill. The list includes Democrats and Republicans, conservatives and liberals from every region. There is this feeling across the republic that something is wrong in Washington and something has gone amiss in education, hence, the support he is

Moreover, he also has the backing of professional educators who probably see their calling getting more prestige from Cabinet status, without realizing that their performance might be subjected to greater scrutiny as well.

No senator can move to reorganize a component of government, as Ribicoff wants to, without help from the executive branch. When he first proposed a Department of Education in 1965, the Johnson Administration was against it, and in the years following the Nixon Administration was also opposed. But now Ribicoff believes he has enough votes to move the bill out of the Governmental Affairs Committee, which he heads, and get White House backing as well. There is one snag. HEW Secretary Joseph Califano is somewhat at odds with Ribicoff on the bill. In his confirmation testimony, Califano said he did not think it was "appropriate" for another department to be added to the government "directly reporting to the President" because reorganization should reduce the number of departments.

But Califano also said, "The American people did not elect Califano, they elected Carter ... (and) ...my mind is certainly open on an organizational issue, especially when people like Sen. Ribicoff who have served at HEW think it is an important thing to do."

Given the public displeasure with the way education is going in the school these days, and with the billions being spent on education, this might well be Sen. Ribicoff's year to get that boulder to the top of the hill.

The grinning President, sporting a green-tinted carnation in his lapel, stepped before about 800 townfolk and answered questions for 90 minutes. He seemed to wow his St. Patrick's Day eve audience in a town where Irish Catholics make up the largest ethnic group.

Carter even was applauded when he promised, in a state that long cherished strict antibirth control laws, that a welfare revision program to be unveiled Sept. 30 will "provide a permanent nationwide system of family planning" with birth control

"opportunities for those who believe in them."

He answered questions on local problems, economics and world affairs. His only major pronouncement appeared to be his statement that an "ultimate requirement for a Middle East peace" is to resolve what he termed "the Palestinian problem."

He said: "There has to be a homeland provided for wpalestinian refugees who have suffered for many, many years.'

There was no immediate elaboration on what may have been an offhand remark suggesting that he believes Palestinians should have territory of their own.

However, Carter declared that "up 4,000 others stand to this moment" the Palestinians watery first words: deny Israel's right to exist and are publicly committed to destroying the Jewish state.

As during the 1976 vote quest, Carter spent the night in a private home, in the three-story Victorian frame house of Irish, Catholic, Democratic beer distributor Edward Thompson and his wife, who gathered their eight children and five grand-

Mondale to hear drought gripes

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - Disgruntled California congressmen said they will meet with Vice President Mondale next Wednesday to complain about federal inaction on the drought.

Democratic Rep. B.F. Sisk said a March 12 telegram from Jack Watson, the White House drought coordinator, to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. was "kind of a slap in the face" and revealed that the Carter Administration "has no concept of the seriousness" of the drought.

In Sacramento, Brown's chief aide disagreed.

The disputed telegram was "the first of what I understand to be many progress reports," said Gray Davis, Brown's chief of staff. "Many of the things we had asked for were not alluded to in the telegram, but we do not view it as the last statement by the Carter Administration. Quite the contrary.

In the telegram, Watson said the White House was evaluating drought information gathered by 13 federal agencies. It indicated that the government was ready to assist if the water shortage endangered health and the public safety.

"It was the kind of thing you'd send out if you didn't have any answer to the problem or didn't understand the problem," Sisk said, indicating he had heard negative reaction to the Watson telegram from "people at various levels in the state.

'What we're desperately seeking is a little seed money now, so that we can avoid a disaster later." Sisk said.

The telegram seemed to indicate that the federal government would not step up relief efforts to help ranchers and farmers save their livestock and crops, Sisk said.

"It didn't indicate that they were going to do anything in particular, except in the possibility of significant health and public safety problems, he said. "I think in some way we have not gotten their attention yet. You have to use a club sometimes to get people's attention.

Rep. John Moss, the dean of California's 29-member Democratic delegation in Congress, said he also will try to arrange a meeting with Watson and President Carter on the drought issue

Watson's meeting with the California delegation's drought committee last week was "less than satisfactory," Moss said.

Gray Davis said the Brown Administration is sending proposed drought legislation to both the state and federal legislatures within the next two weeks.

Brown will ask Congress to pass a law providing the federal government with "clear authority to provide the same kind of assistance to our farmers and ranchers that businessmen and vendors are entitled to when they experience other forms of natural disasters," Davis said.

The proposed state legislation would provide state matching funds for farmers and ranchers to use for electricity or other power needed to drill wells, he said.

Teamsters fund short $7 million

WASHINGTON - The Teamsters Union health and welfare fund is trying to get back more than $7 million in insurance premiums that seem to have

The welfare fund is a sister organization of the larger pension fund that is now being investigated by the Labor Department and the Internal Revenue Service for alleged mismanagement and ties to organiz-

As part of the investigation, Teamster President Frank Fitzsimmons and three other men have agreed to resign as pension fund trustees.

The same four men are also trustees of the $130 million welfare fund, whose official title is the Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Welfare Fund of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. The $7 million in premiums were part of a contract to supply 185,000 Teamster members with accident and health insurance. The man who got the contract last year was Joseph Hauser, a promoter well known by federal authorities for previous questionable operations in the insurance business. Currently, Hauser is on trial in Los Angeles federal court on charges of extortion involving alleged kickbacks to union officials in return for their membership's insurance. The story of how Hauser got the Teamsters' business and what he did with the money is being probed by a federal organized crime strike force in

The current investigation, according to reliable sources, has touched on Hauser's relationship to Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, several Washington attorneys, a nationally syndicated columnist, a variety of shell insurance com-panies, Diplomat National Bank of Washington and a Swiss company. But none has been identified as a target of the investigation.

Last spring, Hauser was up against some stiff competition, including Prudential Insurance Co., Travelers, and Aetna, for the Teamsters business. The premiums were a handsome $23 million annual-

Actually, Hauser himself was not bidding, but rather he was being represented by a Kansas City, Mo., company named Old Security Life Insurance Co. Later an attorney for Old Security, a respected company, would say that his clients did not know about Hauser because they dealt with an insurance executive fronting for Hauser.

. The Teamsters hired Tolley International Corp., an Indianapolis consulting firm, to evaluate the bids. But a final decision on who got the business was left with the trustees.

According to court documents filed in a Securities and Exchange Commission suit against Hauser and, later, in a suit by the Teamsters themselves seeking return of their $7 million, the promoter felt he needed a friend among the trustees.

He called on Thomas D. Webb Jr., a former FBI official, and on local public relations man I. Irving Davidson. Webb and Davidson have a reputation of knowing their way around town.

Webb got in touch with his occasional golfing com-panion at Burning Tree Country Club, Kleindienst, the former Attorney General who had pleaded guilty in 1973 to criminal charges of being untruthful in testimony before a Senate committee in a Watergate related crime.

Kleindienst, in turn, told another Burning Tree golfer and friend, Fitzsimmons, about Hauser's bid. In a deposition Kleindienst quoted Fitzsimmons as "Old friend, I'll look into it and call back."

As it turned out, Fitzsimmons and his fellow trustees voted for Old Security over eight others bidding for the Teamsters business. Teamsters President Fitzsimmons apparently knew Old Security was unwittingly fronting for Hauser.

For getting the contract for Hauser, Kleindienst collected $125,000 from Hauser after "five to seven hours work," he said. Another $125,000 was split by Webb and Davidson.

No sooner did Old Security get the first premium payment of $7 million, than it reinsured 80 per cent of that amount with a Hauser company called Family Provider Insurance Co. in Phoenix.

It is common for companies to reinsure big policies in order to avoid bearing the brunt of a catastrophic loss alone. This way a company can spread the risk but, in the case of the Teamsters insurance, it was "reinsured" in several Hauser-controlled com-

In June, Kleindienst's law partner at the time, Edward Morgan, told Hauser about a Baton Rouge, La., company that was up for sale. National American Life Insurance Co. (NALICO) was controlled by Roger LeBlanc, who used NALICO's assets to finance real estate deals.

He sold the shell of NALICO to Hauser, transferring most of the company's assets to a new company. NALICO is licensed to do business in 26 states, which meant Hauser could sell insurance to unions in those states without the advance approval most of these states' insurance departments require of new companies.

The Teamsters premiums did not stay in NALICO for long, according to the SEC suit. In September, the commission charged Hauser with "looting" the company, transferring funds to various accounts at Diplomat National Bank in Washington. NALICO is currently being run by the SEC and the Louisiana Insurance Dept.

The reasons Hauser put the money into the then newly formed and relatively obscure bank have not been ascertained.

According to Davidson, it was because he encouraged Hauser to do so in order to help Davidson's friend, columnist Jack Anderson. At the time Anderson, who had helped found Diplomat National, was chairman of the bank's executive committee. Anderson has since resigned from the bank.

Anderson says he does not know why Hauser came to Diplomat National and if it was to do him a favor he was not aware of it.

He said he met twice with Hauser, who tried to sell him some libel insurance. According to a source, Anderson called the bank and advised it to close out Hauser's accounts.

As it turned out, Hauser in just a few months put some $2 million into the bank, whose total deposits for all of 1976 were only $7.2 million.

Indeed, Hauser's accounts at Diplomat National were among the most active, and $1.2 million from one of them was sent to Switzerland to form a new company, SEC records show. In all, during a four-month period, premium funds from the Teamsters health and insurance plan had traveled through assorted shell insurance companies and bank accounts. The movement of money came to a halt with the filing of the SEC suit last Sept. 27. Whether the money will ever turn up again in the Teamsters fund is an open question.

White resigns job to go to Washington

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Texas' agriculture commissioner for the last 26 years, John C. White, resigned today to take the job as deputy U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

White's resignation from the state post was timed to coincide with ceremonies where he was sworn into federal office. The effective time was 8:07 a.m. CST.

White's resignation announcement said that White was uncertain concerning the formal procedure dor surrendering his state office so he first scrawled a note on a Texas Department of Agriculture memo pad to Gov. Dolph Briscoe that read:

"I hereby resign as Texas Commissioner of Agriculure effective on delivery. I do so with gratitude to the people of Texas for many years of permitting me to serve. I loved every minute."

White's office said the note was written in the U.bs.
Senate employees' coffee shop Tuesday where White, his wife and a few close friends met after the Senate Agricultural Committee approved his nomination. Shortly afterwards, White was confirmed by the entire Senate.

Later White wrote Briscoe a formal letter of resignation.

In Washington, White was at his new desk within an hour after his swearing in. During the brief ceremonies at the Agriculture Department, where Secretary Bob S. Bergland administered the oath, White said that his personal credo was that "government can serve the people without extravagance. It can change people's lives for the better. White, a cattle rancher and son of sharecroppers, was nominated for his new job last week by President Carter and quickly confirmed by the Senate Tuesday.

During a reception that followed the ceremony, Bergland said that he and White had been friends for years and their new official relationship "is not one of convenience. It's an honest thing.

As deputy secretary, White is the No. 2 official at USDA with major responsibility for running its day to day operations. All other offcials there report to Bergland through him.

Most of the Texas congressional delegation at-tended the affair, along with former Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss and House Agriculture Committee Chairman Thomas S. Foley, Briscoe said today he would hold a 2 p.m. news conference Monday at which time he would name a successor to White.

Coffee shoots over $4 level

NEW YORK (AP) - Wholesale coffee prices have shot over the $4 barrier, but consumers will have to wait several weeks to find out how much more per pound they'll have to pay in the supermarkets.

General Foods Corp., the natitn's largest coffee roaster, increased the wholesale price of ground coffee by 50 cents to $4.21 a pound Wednesday. The action followed Monday's 50cent increase to $4.18 a pound by second-largest Folger Coffee Co.

General Foods also raised its prices for Sanka and Brim ground decaffeinated coffee by 40 cents a pound. It left instant prices at $5.45 for a 10-ounce jar. the same price charged by Folger for instant.

General Foods and Folger sell more than half the coffee consumed in the United States, and their actions strongly influence the prices of other brands. How these increases will affect the supermarket price isn't yet known, since it takes several weeks for them to reach the retail level.

Many grocers traditionally have sold coffee at or below cost to attract customers into their stores, and therefore may not pass all of the new price along to the shopper.

Coffee roasters blame the wholesale increases on the price of green coffee beans, up steadily since July 1975, when a frost destroyed many coffee trees in Brazil, the world's largest grower.

It will take three to five years for the new coffee trees planted after the frost to reach maturity, so the international market is still dealing with a lowsupply situation.

Texas projects fail first test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has advised Texas congressmen that Sixth Army Corps of Engineer water projects in the stateincluding the Trinity River projectr-have failed to pass an initial screening.

The failure means these projects, including the massive Trinity River project between Dallas and Houston, might be abandoned by the administration because they fail to meet environmental or economic standards.

Earlier this month the administration put two Texas projects under the supervision of the Department of the Interior on another endangered list. They were the Nueces River Project and the Palmetto Bend Project.

Added to the endangered list now are the Vince and Little Vince Bayous project; the Highland Bayou project; the Cooper Lake and channels project; the Millican Lake project; the Carl L. Estes dam and lake project, as well as the Trinity River project.

The Trinity project and the Vince and Little Vince Bayous project were questioned for economic reasons, meaning the administration is uncertain that the benefits they bring will justify their cause.

The Trinity project was also questioned for environmental reasons, making it the only one of the Texas projects to fail the initial screening in both the environmental and economic categories.

The remaining four projects on the endangered list were questioned for environmental reasons only.

The news was given to the congressmen Wednesday by Frank Moore, President Career's congressional liaison. But he also said that 19 Corp of Engineers projects in Texas have passed the screening and will be funded as money becomes by Herbert F. Smith S.J.

QUESTION: WHAT CAN WE DO TO SAVE THE BABIES? ANSWER: Get concerned! Get angry! Get outraged! Get involved! We lost 2250 men at Pearl Harbor and declared war. We have lost millions of babies to the abortionists.

When will we declare war against abortion? BE MOTIVATED BY CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES. Aborted babies are not only killed. They are killed unbaptized. Save a baby and you not only save his mortal life --- you give him a chance for baptism and immortal life.

INCLUDE THE MOTIVATION OF SELF-INTEREST. You will be punished for inaction. "You will shall not stand by idly when your neighbor's life is at stake" (Leviticus 19:16). You will be rewarded for action: "As you did it to one of my least brethren you did it to Me" (Mt. 25:40).

ACT TODAY. Don't await the "Great Solution" before moving or you may never more. Begin with the simple things you can do at once.

BEGIN WITH PRAYER. Stop, and start now. Say a prayer for a particular baby in danger somewhere right now while his mother struggles with her terrible temptation. Resolve to offer a daily prayer for the babies.

Begin your prayer with the meditation: Who will speak for the babies if not !? Many are all mouths for their own rights today. Who will lend his mouth to a baby who cannot yet speak in his own behalf?

READ TO BECOME INFORMED. Start with the newspape articles you see on right to life and collect clippings for

PROPAGATE THE FACTS AND THE CONCERN BY WORD OF MOUTH. Start at home. Don't belittle this action. The legislator who broke the tie that loosed a flood of abortions in New York did it to please his wife and daughter. JOIN A RIGHT TO LIFE ORGANIZATION. It will help you and you can help it. We need to stand together or our children will be slaughtered singly. Give time and money. Little can be done without both. SUPPORT A HUMAN LIFE AMENDMENT. Without working for that we are somewhat like sailors tidying up a sinking ship. Vote only for prolifers. Write your congressmen, newspapers, radio and TV stations. USE YOUR OWN STATIONS IN LIFE AN AND YOUR WORK AS A BASE OF OPERATIONS. Live more simply, less demundingly. What kills babies is self-contored and materialistic living that shuts the heart and the hearth and the earth to new life. Do not break the sixth commandment: do not attend filthy movies on any pretext; do not put up with pornography. Set an example for youth. They want to be good but will lose faith in goodness without you.

IN PARTICULAR: Fathers and mothers: Devote your selves to your family. It is the only pro-life fortress in the end. Doctors: teach the new and really effective natural family planning methods. Don't be culpably ignorant of them yourself. Ministers: Study for and preach pre-life sermons but always add suggestions for action. Aspire to make pre-life activities your primary apostolate. Teachers; Assign essays and talks and run contests on pro-life topics. Business men and workers: Cooperate to create a pro-life economy and culture. For instance, build larger, more economical homes. Shun exorbitant prices and wages. You will save many lives. ADVERTISEMENT: Paid for by the Diocese of San Angelo Kerrville hospital. He was the brother of Mrs. Felix Hush of Lamesa.

Burial will be in Glen Rest Cemetery, directed by Kerrville Funeral Home.

House decides to debate malpractice bill in week

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The decision has been for the House to debate a compromise medical malpractice insurance bill next Tuesday.

The House State Affairs Committee rushed the bill through Monday, planning on debate this week, but the calendars committee set it for 'next Thursday.

Efforts to obtain 100 votes to set it for special order this Thursday failed, but Speaker Bill Clayton obtained agreement to reset it.

Sponsors said they feared a week's delay would enable the Texas Medical Association - which opposes the bill - to muster enough votes to kill it. There also was concern that the Senate might beat the House to the draw and pass a bill more favorable to the doctors. In announcing the decision to set the bill for Tuesday, Clayton said, "Many members have requested an opportunity to visit with their doctors over the weekend.

The compromise was worked out with the state associations of trial lawyers, hospitals, osteopaths, pharmacists and other medically related occupations.

It puts a $500,000 ceiling on malpractice judgments, with more allowed if actual medical and custodial expenses run higher. It also requires all malpractice suits to be screened by panels of three doctors as a means of weeding out those without

The TMA feels the bill should go farther, such as reducing malpractice judgments by the amount received by a victim from his own hospitalization and disability insurance.

Levi employes make donations

Donations of $250 were presented to both the Midland Junior Baseball Association and the Ector County Senior Citizens Center recently by a community relations service team of Levi Straus and Company, 2029 S. Holiday Hill Road.

The money was raised by workers at the Levi Straus plant through sales of food and various auctions, Mrs. Bea Curtis, a member of the community relations team, said.

Hefty contingent fills council to discuss women's advocate

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston City Council plans to discuss later this month a proposal to abolish the position of women's advocate after a five hour session in which more than 100 speakers sounded off on the subject.

The speakers, believed to be the largest contingent ever to appear before the council on any one day on a single subject, were just about equally divided Wednesday.

Sales taxes sent to cities

State Comptroller Bob Bullock's office made a payment of $466,489 to Midland for sales taxes collected in February.

Other nearby cities to receive payments were Andrews, $40,056; Big Lake, $16,511; Big Spring, $155,613; Coahoma, $5,536; Crane, $150; Lamesa, $53,542; Odessa, $691,224; Rankin, $2,447, and Stanton, $5,195. Fifty-five speakers supported Dr. Nikki Van Hightower as the city's official women's advocate and 51 criticized her or the position.

The council, by a 6-1 vote, last week took the first step toward reducing Dr. Van Hightower'salary from $18,000 a year to $1. Council took the action after hearing protests that she had abused her office by advocating abortion and the Equal Rights amendment during a March 4 Women's Day

Dr. Van Hightower said the vote was an insult and she will resign if her salary is cut.

Some of the mostly women speakers who jammed council chambers waved dollar bills in the air. Others displayed placards reading "Nix Nikki" and "More Power to Van Hightower."

The tone of the long day probably was summed up best by Astronaut Vance Brand, who appeared on another matter.

another matter.

"I think you have more action here than we usually do in the space program," he told newsmen. He conducted his business quickly and fled

Dr. the chamber

As was the case last week, Dr. Van Hightower did not attend the Wednesday council session. However, outside city hall she told a group of cheering women the real issue involved in the controversy is the right of freedom of spaneth.

She said some councilmen think she has an "abrasive personality."

"You do have an abrasive personality sometimes when you are fighting the status quo," she told the group.

A proposal to abolish Dr. Van Hightower's position entirely came from councilmen Frank Mancuso and Louis Macey. The council majority delayed action until March 29 in hopes, some said, that Mayor Fred Hofheinz would submit to council an ordinance to reduce Dr. Van Hightower's salary to $1.

The ordinance is necessary to finalize the previous action taken by the council majority.

However, Hofheinz has said he does not intend to replace Dr. Van Hightower or submit the requested ordinance.

Adley discovered strength in God during dilemma

EDITORS NOTE: Ronald Adley, a 37-year-old coal miner and father of two, had to claw his way to safety when a torrent of water wrecked the Kocher Coal Co. mine. Nine other trapped miners died. In the second of three article, Adley describes the lonely 29 hours before he was discovered by rescuers.

TOWER CITY, Pa. (AP) — After the flood hit, the first thing I did was listen for some noise, any noise. But there was only silence. I was trapped in a coal mine.

I should have been in a panic, I guess. But for some reason I had no fear. I don't know how to explain that. I guess God didn't put fear in my head. But He had given me strength I never knew I had.

The silence was broken by the thump of coal lumps falling. Otherwise it was quiet.

Then I felt some air coming in and I started out to find where it was coming from.

Holding my miner's light in my

Holding my miner's light in my hand — I lost my hardhat in the water — I went search-ing for the air, for a way out, for anyone who might have been trapped with me.

I couldn't find anyone. And I couldn't find anyway out.

I started to crawl down into the mine shaft. Nearly 80 feet down it was blocked by broken timbers and rock and coal.

I decided to head back up the shaft because it was the only place the rescue crews would know where I could be.

I crawled past the body of my buddy, Ralph Renninger, and found a safe place to sit. My light was still pretty bright. I looked around trying to think of what to do and that's when I started praying to God.

I've prayed to God before but not like I did that day. I asked God also, 'Why me being left alive?'

I was getting pretty cold. I was soaking wet. I took off my boots and dumped the water out. After that I tried to get warm by shifting around a little bit but that didn't do much good. I started doing push-ups and different leg and arm stretches, stuff I used to do when I was in my high school gym classes.

I didn't have any food but I did find a jug of water that had come up from the flooding. It didn't have much in it. I rationed that because I had no idea how long I was going to be in there. I only took a little sip at a time, to make my lips wet, and just a little to swallow. I told myself that as long as I had water I could live until someone reached me.

I didn't look at my watch, but two hours must have passed since the water gushed in. I thought of my kids and my wife — what they must be going through and how they were taking it. It was really bothering me.

As I was thinking of my family I started getting groggy and tired. I fell

I began listening again. I wanted to see if I could hear any noise at all. Any kind of tapping. But it was dead silence. It was like a tomb down there.

'Ron,' I said to myself, 'you got to get a piece of metal, something real hard, and start tapping yourself.

I found a six-foot piece of steel and I started tapping. I did it every five minutes at the start. Then sometimes every three minutes. Then every 10 minutes. But no one answered. I was

I wasn't scared. I didn't cry. I just prayed. I started to doze off again but woke

I knew the bodies of Ralph and another friend, Donald Shoffler, were not far from me. I knew if I would think about them I would start imagining crazy things.

I blanked everything out of my mind. I didn't have any fantasies. I didn't see anything funny in the darkness. I had my head in pretty good shape. I didn't hallucinate.

I kept thinking about my wife and children, my father and mother, my brothers and sisters. I kept seeing myself laying on my lounge couch in my living room with my two kids in my arms watching television. My only hope was to get back to my family.

I kept saying over and over, 'Please God, help me.' I didn't know what was in store for me. I knew I couldn't help myself. I felt like quitting. I felt like laying back and letting nature take its

Women own about 30,000 of the businesses in the United States. Compared to the total number of businesses in this country, that is not very much, according to Emly Atkinson, director of the Dallas district office of the Small Business

Speaking at a dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club, Mrs. Atkinson explained the SBA and how women can be involved in small businesses.

The women in these 30,000 businesses are in limited fields when compared to the men in business, Mrs. Atkinson added.

'No one can teach us that profits, or black ink, are not beautiful. We need to take a hard look at what is happening to us. We don't want to lose ground," the former Midland woman

The Small Business Administration is available for help in getting a business on its feet and in keeping it that way. "We are out there for the asking-just don't ask a neighbor," Mrs. Atkinson stressed.

Explaining that few people know what the SBA is, Mrs. Atkinson described it as a unique agency whose full mission is directed at small businesses.

"Every thing we do is to strengthen the free enterprise system which is dependent upon the success of small business," she said.

While most people vision the small business as a "Mom and Pop store on the corner" it, instead, includes almost 10 million businesses in the country, and 97 per cent of the businesses in the U.S. are small 'They produce better than 50 per cent of the gross national product and have better than 58 per cent of the work force," she added

The SBA works on four basic missions: financial assistance,

"No one can teach us that profits, or black ink, are not beautiful," Emly Atkinson, director of the Dallas district office of the Small Business Administration, tells a dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

management assistance, marketing assistance and advocacy.

"We are probably better known for our lending program," the tall brunette said. A variety of financial programs are included in the SBA with more people becoming eligible, according to what Congress rules. "Farmers now have been classified as small businessmen, and we keep getting more people."

It was the direct lending program that "might have given us a bad name," she said, explaining in the past money was loaned to marginal businesses even though it looked as if the business would not succeed.

"We just gave them the money and no help in how to manage the business," she added.

minorities are the ones getting the money, Mrs. Atkinson refuted the idea, saying minority lending composes less than 18 per cent of the SBA's lending program.

Today a person must go to a banker first and negotiate a loan based on an SBA guarantee the loan will be repaid.

The banks can not lend money for certain reasons, such as for working capital on a long term basis, "but this is essential in getting a small business going," Mrs. Atkinson said. With the SBA guarantee, the banker is able to lend money and still stay within the bank regulations.

Borrowing to buy or expand a business is just part of the great American dream, according to Mrs. Atkinson, and "a lot of people could realize that dream if they would just check with the SBA.

Management assistance, the one aid needed by some businesses to keep going, comes in the form of universities, trade organizations and Chambers of Commerce.

Retired people help businessmen if they are familiar with that line of work and businessmen help out other businessmen in other towns in the same field, she said. College students in a university's school of business spend a semester studying a small business and how it could be helped.

"This gives the student a chance to get out of the books and into a real life situation," the business woman said. "It also gets educators out of their ivory tower to see what the real world

Marketing assistance can come from the government. "Uncle Sam is the largest purchaser of goods the U.S. and he must purchase a certain amount from the small businesses."

This procurement program is a difficult one to administer, she admitted, but more than $45 million in goods in the Dallas region were purchased by the government the pension plans were abandoned," through the program. The SBA, in its advocate program, works as spokesman for the small businessman, especially when it comes to government legislation. Some legislators now are showing preliminary drafts of bills to the SBA in Washington to see if the proposed will help the small business. One example of poor legislation is the pension plan for small businesses, she said. "The rules were so severe for pension plans for employes that

The SBA, in trying to attract more women into small business, has sponsored seminars in different towns in the district, if enough interest is shown in the subject, according to Mrs. Atkinson.

Although she is with the Dallas office, the Lubbock office is the one over the Midland area.

Mrs. Atkinson served as vice president at Midland Savings Association before joining the SBA.

Council president feels strongly about CF Girls

By PATSY GORDON

Mrs. Robert K. Gaston of 2807 W. Shandon St., as president of the Midland Council of Camp Fire Girls, leads a group of approximately 300 girls and 60 adult leaders.

The organization is observing its 67th birthday this week and the Midland Camp Fire Girls today will celebrate Founders Day with a citywide skating party at Super Roll-Arena. Dr. and Mrs. Luther A. Gulick founded Camp Fire Girls March

Mrs. Gaston has been involved with Camp Fire Girls five and one half years since becoming the leader of her daughter, Judy's, group.

"I believe very strongly in Camp Fire principles," she said, and added that she became interested in the group when she didn't want to see her daughter drop out of the organization because of the lack of a leader. Mrs. Gaston said the main things Camp Fire stresses is individuality, as well as learning to work with other people, feminine virtues and careers for women in the older groups She said most groups in the four levels—Bluebirds, Adventure, Discovery and Horizon -are small groups so the leaders can get to know the girls and their capabilities. "Community service and learning to be good citizens also are stressed," said Mrs. Gaston.

Camp Fire's program of in-formal education provides opportunities for youth from ages 6-21. "The big breakdown comes between grades six and seven when the girls lose interest," she said.

Mrs. Gaston noted that the council is "pleased to be a member of the United Way and we are in the process of obtaining an executive director. who will help us grow." The director will run the council activities under supervision of the board and will be trained by the national council.

During the year the girls help with Meals-On-Wheels, Christmas in April, foster parents and other special programs related to older persons and the physically handicapped. They also par-ticipate in beautifying their neighborhoods and community as part of their ecology and conservation projects, said Mrs.

The leader, who recently assumed her second term as president of the Camp Fire council, is a member of the Midland Writer's Association, the Permian Basin Landmen's Auxiliary, the Symphony Guild, Junior League of Midland, Inc. and Kappa Alpha Theta alumnae. She is employed part time as an assistant secretary for Langston Realtors.

Today is St. Patrick's Day.

Secret report reveals warning ignored by Amin

By DAVID LAMB

The Los Angeles Times

NAIROBI — President Idi Amin received — and chose to ignore — a top secret report in 1974 that said Uganda would fall into moral bankruptcy unless he acted to curb the military's ruthless excesses, it has been learned.

Of particular significance, almost every gruesome tragedy that the report predicted could happen has happened — from 'large-scale disappearance' of leading Ugandans, to the massacre of Lango and Acholi tribesmen, to the flight of exiles and the rampant killings by Amin gunmen

The report, prepared at Amin's request by seven military officers, was startling in its naivete and candor. Although much of the world was aware of Amin's homicidal nature in 1974, the officers who investigated conditions in Uganda at

Unemployment in Odessa down

ODESSA — Unemployment in January stood at 3 per cent in Odessa, a slight decline from December and .9 per cent lower than January 1976, according to the Texas Employment Commission.

There were 51,210 persons employed in the civilian labor force in Odessa during January, an increase of about 400 from December.

Manufacturing employment increased 1.5 per cent, and non-manufacturing and retail employment both were down slightly. There was no change in finance, insurance and real estate employment. Government employment increased 2.5 per cent.

TEC said it expects unemployment to remain at 3 per cent and it sees a shortage in filling skilled job vacancies such as machinist, welder, auto mechanic and stenographer.

Fires, losses reported down

The first two months of this year reveal fewer fires and less insured fire losses in Midland than January and February of 1976.

For the first two months of 1977, $17,404 has been paid by insurance companies to cover fire losses. During the same period a year ago $62,387 was paid. The city fire department responded to 117 fires in the city in February, compared to 204 fires in February 1976. There have been 235 fires responded to during the first two months, a decrease of more than 100 from January and February 1976.

The city fire department extinguished 32 fires in the county in February and 57 fires for the first two months of the year. These statistics are also down from 1976.

the time expressed what appeared to be genuine surprise at learning that Nubians were being recruited as killers for the armed forces, that indiscriminate murders were being carried out throughout the country and that people who mysteriously disappeared actually had been killed.

A copy of the classified report was made available to The Los Angeles Times with the agreement that no notes be taken. It was smuggled out of Uganda by a prominent government official with access to confidential military files. The refugee said Amin had never publicly acknowledged the report nor had its contents ever been published.

The report was prepared after a nearly successful coup attempt on March 23, 1974. Amin had told the officers on the board of inquiry that he wanted an honest appraisal of conditions that led to plots and an assessment of the civilian population's mood.

On every count, the response was not optimistic. The report said that the disappearance of citizens had disheartened the civilian population, and it predicted that a massive exodus of refugees could follow if civilians continued to be harassed, instead of protected, by Amin's security forces.

It criticized the extraordinary authority of the State Research and Public Safety Units and said their continued abuses of human rights — particularly those of the Lango and Acholi tribes — could lead to renewed tribal friction and widespread fear among civilians.

Last Feb. 10, Uganda's 18 Anglican bishops voiced a similar grievance to Amin in an open letter of protest. Of the 18, one was murdered, one was deported and four fled to other countries in fear of their lives.

The 18-page report did not criticize Amin nor did it in any way suggest he was responsible for, or knew of, the rampant killings that had been under way for the better part of two years. Its tone implied that the Ugandan population as a whole was generally not aware of the extent of the lawlessness at the time.

The officers also noted that there was widespread dissatisfaction among the military ranks because promotions here based on favoritism instead of merit, and Nubians recruited from South Sudan were quickly elevated to positions of unusual authority.

Plus 5-speed economy.

Among other things, it comes with a 5-speed. Which works like overdrive. Thus, less fuel is used. And there's less wear on the engine.

Plus extra value.

Now about those other things. Steel belted radial tires, sporty stripes, fully reclining bucket seats, carpeting, tinted glass, electric rear window defogger and power-assist front disc brakes are included in the B-210 'Plus'.

So you see, while this car gets lots of miles per gallon, you get lots of car.

Plus tough.

From start to acrylic paint finish, it's tough all over. For example, its solid unibody is all steel from hood to hatch.

In short, Datsun's new B-210 'Plus' has lots of strong pluses going for it.

Non-basic spaghetti casserole simple to prepare

By KAY JARVIS Copley News Service

Consider Stanley G. Maylone, a man who really likes his spaghetti.
It seems Maylone, a 21-year-old Army cook stationed at Schofield Barracks in Honolulu, ate 100 yards of spaghetti in 45 seconds. One might well ask why. The answer is that Maylone wanted to win $500 in groceries, which be did. It may be the convenience food business has overlooked a whole new approach. Not only can you cook food faster and faster, but you can eat it faster and faster.

So much for the ultimate in conspicuous consumption.

Spaghetti casserole is not the traditional sort. It is a baked version with sauce and pasta combined in one dish for an easy casserole dinner. A rough cost calculation puts it at 70 cents per serving.

It will be ready for the table in less than an hour. How long it takes to eat

SPAGHE TTI CASSEROLE

1 lb. ground beef 1 medium chopped onion 1 clove minced garlic 1 (16-oz.) can undrained tomatoes 1 (6-oz.) can tomato paste One-half tsp. sugar

One-fourth to one-half tsp. oregano One-eighth tsp. pepper One-half cup water

One-half medium green pepper, diced

8 ozs. spaghetti One-third cup grated Parmesan cheese, or more In large skillet, brown meat, stirring frequently. Add onion and garlic and cook three minutes. Stir in tomatoes, tomato paste, sugar, oregano, pepper, one-half cup water, green pepper and one teaspoon salt. Cover and cook slowly 20 minutes.

While meat sauce is cooking, gradually add spaghetti and one tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

Combine spaghetti and meat sauce. Spoon into ungreased two-quart casserole.

Sprinkle Parmesan cheese on top. Bake, covered, in 375-degree oven for 20 minutes or until center is bubbly. Makes four servings.

For a change-of-pace salad to accompany the casserole, try slicing three avocados and sectioning three grapefruit. Arrange them on a bed of butter or bibb lettuce and garnish with watercress to give that peppery. crisp contrast. Top with a spicy French or Italian dressing.

Food handling prevents disease

COLLEGE STATION—Careful food handling can prevent foodborne staph (staphylococcus) infections, Marilyn Haggard, a foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says.

In the kitchen, these infections can spread through coughs, sneezes, cuts and boils-and they form toxins in such foods as cream pies, ham, meats and fish, sandwich fillings, dairy products and custard-filled foods. "The key is preventing the formation of toxin, because heat kills staph but not the toxin," she explained.

Copley News Service Today's chicken lives a short and not very exciting life. It is reared indoors with vitamin supplements to replace the sunshine, eats highenergy feed and never sees a barnyard in its 8 weeks of life.

The good news is that the broilerfryer is economical to produce in this high-volume, controlled environment. The bad news is that it is lacking in the old-fashioned chicken flavor that resulted from picking after seeds, bits of greenery and assorted barnyard treats. Also, eight weeks is not old enough to allow the full flavor development in the meat.

These shortcomings, in the interest of cost control, can be made up for by the cook who will use cooking methods, herbs and spices designed to enhance the very delicate flavor of the young bird.

Following are some recipes WEST INDIES CURRY 3 lbs. frying chicken, cut up 2 tbsps. cooking oil 1 tsp. salt 1 tsp. curry powder One-half tsp. ginger I clove garlic, minced

One-half cup seedless raisins 1 cup orange juice 1 tbsp. cornstarch

1 tbsp. sugar 1 cup uncooked rice One-half cup chopped cashews 2 tsps. grated orange rind Chutney (optional)

Brown chicken pieces in oil in a 10inch skillet. Drain off fat. Sprinkle chicken with salt, curry powder, ginger, garlic and raisins. Combine orange juice, cornstarch and sugar; mix until free of lumps. Pour over chicken. Cover and cook over low heat, turning several times, until chicken is tender, about 45 minutes. Meanwhile, cook rice according to package directions. Remove chicken to serving platter. Simmer sauce to thicken, if desired. Spoon over chicken.

Stir cashews and orange rind into cooked rice and serve with chicken. Serve with chutney, if desired. Serves

> FRICASSEE AND POTATO DUMPLINGS

1 (4-lb.) broiler-fryer, cut up 7 (2.5-lbs.) medium potatoes, peeled 1 medium onion, sliced 2 stalks celery, chopped

4 tsps. salt One-fourth tsp. pepper 1 (10-oz.) pkg. frozen peas and carrots One-half cup flour Potato Dumplings:

1 egg, lightly beaten

One-fourth cup flour

1 thsp. chopped parsley Salt and pepper In large kettle, combine chicken, potatoes, onion, celery, garlic, salt, pepper and six cups water. Bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 45 minutes, or until chicken is tender.

If desired, meat can be separated from skin and bones; then chunked and returned to sauce. Add frozen vegetables.

To make dumplings: remove one potato from broth. Mash with fork to measure one cup potato. Mix lightly with remaining dumpling ingredients. Thicken broth with flour, mixed to a thin paste with water. Cook three minutes. Then drop dumpling mixture, by tablespoons, into simmering

When dumplings rise to the surface, cover pan and simmer 12 to 15

BUNYON'S MIRACLE EARTH,

Dazzle guests with cool, perfect desserts

By KAY JARVIS Copley News Service

Parfait literally means perfect. And the French knew what they were talking about when they named the original classic version. Although we may think of a parfait as anything frozen with layers of ice cream and fruit and served in a slender stemmed glass, the original is made with a mousse or custard-like mixture of whipped cream, beaten egg white and sugar syrup layered with fruit sauce and topped with whipped cream. It's a bit more fuss to make, but it will certainly create a stir among your guests.

There is, of course, no reason at all not to make your own variations using ice cream, sundae sauces, liqueurs and yogurts in pleasing flavors. sic parfait and some adaptations.

> STRAWBERRY PARFAIT PERFECT

One-half cup sugar One and one-half tsps. unflavored gelatin 2 egg whites

1 tsp. almond extract One-fourth tsp. salt 1 cup whipping cream, whipped Strawberry sauce (recipe follows) Garnish: whipped cream and whole strawberries

(optional) In saucepan boil sugar and one-half cup water over medium heat to soft ball stage (238 degrees). Meanwhile, combine gelatin and two tablespoons cold water in small saucepan. Dissolve over low heat; set aside.

In bowl with electric mixer at high speed, beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Gradually beat hot syrup into egg whites. Add dissolved gelatin, extract and salt, mixing until well blended. Fold in whipped cream.

Spoon alternate layers of cream mixture and strawberry sauce into parfait glasses, beginning with cream mixture and ending with sauce. Freeze until firm.

Fifteen minutes before serving time, remove from freezer to thaw slightly. Garnish, if desired. Serve at once. Makes four parfait servings.

STRAWBERRY SAUCE 1 (10-oz.) pkg. frozen sliced

stra wberries in syrup, partially thawed 2 thsps. sugar One-half tbsp. cornstarch

2 tsps. lemon juice Pour berries and syrup into saucepan. Mix sugar and cornstarch together and add to strawberries. Bring to boil. Cook and stir two minutes, or until sauce is slightly thick. Remove from heat. Add lemon juice. Chill. Makes about one-and-onefourth-cups sauce.

In an era when the boldness and simplicity have become hallmarks of French cuisine at its best, it is appropriate that an important new book for those who would cook in the French fashion has been produced from a bold and simple concept.

The book is "La Technique" (Quadrangle, $20) by Jacques Pepin, a gifted chef who has worked and taught cooking in this country for nearly 20 years. The subtitle, "an illustrated guide to the fundamental techniques of cooking," explains the concept. Through photographs Pepin shows the reader the step-by-step methods of creating dishes across the panorama of the French menu. It's television's Julia Child in still life.

Pepin believes, along with most serious teachers of cooking, that the heights of French cuisine are scaled through arranging and rearranging a series of building blocks. These blocks are the fundamental techniques of the most structured of all national cuisines. Once learned, the cook is free of a slavish devotion to recipes. Ingredients change but the techniques don't. It becomes second nature to convert stocks into soups or sauces. Roasting, poaching, sauteeing are clearly defined, awaiting only the appropriate cuts or types of meat or fish. In short, knowing the beginning, middle and end of the recipe plot, one needn't become lost in mundane details or scared of complexity. The cook can concentrate on perfecting execution. He or she becomes free to improvise.

Traditionally, this is done by working beside a more experienced cook, learning basics by observation and trial and error, all the while absorbing "tips." Pepin cannot save the reader from the anguish of error. In cooking you have to feel what is right as well as see it. What he can do. and what recipe books unfailingly fail to do, is illustrate the steps to perfect

He begins by showing how to hold a knife and use it. As the book progresses through 170 techniques and 450 pagse, he reveals methods of making pastry, of cooking and cutting meats and fish, of making exotic garnitures such as tomato roses and mushroom medallions or something as basic as separating, peeling and chopping garlic.

There are recipes, lots of them. Make stuffed eggs or crepes Suzettes. Make melba toast. They are straightforward, though, because they are teaching tools. Follow them and the food will be good, but there's no cuisine minceur or shortcuts with convenience foods. There's no razzledazzle with herbs, spices or condiments, either. That's for you to add once you have absorbed the

The photographs are close-ups and reasonably detailed. Naturally, they lack a third dimension and are therefore imperfect. But they have been well-planned and executed. You do see what you should see. There are as well eight pages of colored plates in the heart of the book. Probably intended to relieve an inevitable textbook appearance, they reveal instead a compromise with quality on the part of the publisher.

This need not concern potential purchasers. Considering the number of unused recipe books home cooks surround themselves with, considering the going price of cooking lessons, this book represents a bargain for anyone who uses it in the spirit of its author's intention. Pepin would not argue, I think, that a chef can be a genius. But he has clearly demonstrated for those outside the profession that the chef is not a

Most senators wealthier than their constituents

By T. R. REID The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Patrick Leahy has used up half his savings. Gary Hart has had to struggle to stay even. But George McGovern has built up a comfortable blanket of financial security. And Daniel Inouye's net worth tripled over a 10-year period.

Those examples reflect the disparate results of a survey by The Washington Post of the personal financial implications of service in the U.S. Senate.

The survey, based on senators' financial disclosures and studies by various groups, shows that some senators have made considerable financial gains while in office, while some others have experienced relatively tight financial straits particularly during their first years in

For the most part, the survey shows that senators - even before receiving the new $12,900 pay raise - are a prosperous group of men who are far better off financially than most of their constituents.

The survey seems to disprove the suggestion, raised in recent months by supporters of the pay raise, that serving in Congress can be a costly drain on a member's financial

THE U.S. SENATE has been known throughout its history as a rich man's club, and the current membership supports that description. At least 18 senators are millionaires, and about 30 others have net worth greater than

In contrast, a study last year by Ralph Nader's Citizens' Action Group found only five senators who reported a net worth under $50,000. All were first-term members except Bob Packwood (R-Ore.).

Some wealthy senators inherited their money, and some earned it through business interests before entering government. But some have made significant financial progress during their service in Congress.

A few examples: -George McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat who was a history teacher at a small college before entering Congress, told his constituents in 1962 that his successful race for the Senate that year had left him $25,000 in debt.

After 15 years in the Senate, McGovern today reports a net worth of $237,000. He lives in a $135,000 house in northwest Washington, and owns a stately home near Kalorama Circle that he rents out for $3,000 per month. He recently gave his children a $65,000 house in St. Michael's on Maryland's eastern shore.

McGovern's financial growth is due to gains on his Washington real estate and fees for lectures and television appearances. Last year the senator was paid $25,000 by ABC news for a week's work as a political analyst.

- When Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) came to the Senate in 1949, his wealth totaled about $50,000. By 1965, when he left the Senate to become Vice President, he was worth $171,000. Today, after a term as Vice President, two years of teaching and lecturing and another Senate term, he and his wife report a combined net worth of $637,000.

HUMPHREY SAYS "the increase in my net worth has resulted from hard work, good investments, frugality, and increased income." He says he earned a "good" income in 1969-70, when he was out of government, and has received income from writing and lecturing since returning to the reported a net worth of $72,000 in 1964. his first year in the Senate. At the beginning of 1974 he reported his worth as $224,000. The increase came from successful investments in real estate and corporate stocks. Inouve also earned about $13,000 annually in lecture fees in addition to his Senate salary between 1969 and 1973.

-Sen Edward Brooke (R-Mass.) was elected to the Senate in 1966 after a decade of law practice and five years in state and local government. Since coming to the Senate, he has purchased a vacation retreat. 'LaBatterie," including a home and a 10-acre estate, in the French West Indies, and a cooperative apartment in the Watergate complex. His equity in real estate is estimated at about $200,000; last year he reported stock holdings worth $95,500.

Brooke says he remortgaged his family home in Massachusetts to purchase the real estate he bought while in the Senate.

At the other end of the spectrum is Sen. James Abourezk (D-S.D.), who would appear to qualify for the title of "poorest senator" on the basis of senators' voluntary financial disclosures.

Aboureezk last year listed his net worth at $23,433, down from the $24,858 he reported just after his election in 1972. Those figures do not include "a small amount of property" his wife inherited, the senator says.

Other senators who reported a net worth last year under $50,000 were Dick Clark (D-Iowa), Gary Hart (D-Colo.), John Durkin (D-N.H.) and Packwood. Generally, those who come to the Senate with limited personal assets his savings buying a home in suburban Washington and settling in here, he says, that his net worth dropped from $95,000 to $52,000 in one year.

"The first year here was really hell," Hart recalled in an interview

"I knew it was going to be expensive coming to Washington, but I had hoped we could keep our house in Denver. It turned out that we sold that house and still had to worry a lot about money that year."

Hart said he had been paying a $200 monthly mortgage bill on his Denver home. He sold that house and used the gain for the downpayment on a house in Bethesda, Md. His new mortgage payment is nearly $800 monthly; in addition, he pays $100 monthly rent on an efficiency apartment in Denver.

ALTHOUGH HART is reimbursed for transportation costs when he goes home, he does not receive a per diem allowance. Thus, a week's travel through his state can cost him $200 or more for hotel and and miscellaneous expenses. (Members of Congress do receive per diem for travel on committee business.)

Although Hart had expected to bear those costs, he was flabbergasted to discover the out-of-pocket expense he bore for social obligations to his con-

"You're always sending flowers for a funeral, or wedding presents, or bar mitzvah gifts for the kids of somebody who worked on the campaign." the senator said. "It's nickels and dimes here and there, but you end up spending a couple of thousand a year on

If he had more money, Hart said, he would like to entertain more constituents when they visit Washington.

"I see my colleagues in the (Senate) restaurant with six, 10 people they're taking to lunch. It would be nice if I could do that, but I haven't been able to afford it."

Like his senior colleagues Hart gradually found ways to soften his financial predicament. A concert featuring pop singer Linda Ronstadt raised about $5,000 for "constituents" fund" to defray office costs. University and interest groups were willing to pay $500 or more to hear a Gary Hart lecture, and the senator has added about $12,000 annually to his income through speaking engagements.

Even before the new pay raise, Hart had surmounted the serious financial worries of his freshman year.

"I'm not complaining," Hart said. "I didn't run for the Senate to get rich. But I'm a saver. I want to be saving money for college, for the future, and I can't do it."

Whether they grow rich or poor during their years on Capitol Hill, members of Congress generally sacrifice less and profit more from government service than officials in the executive and judicial branches, according to a study financed by the presidential commission of federal

THE STUDY showed that judges average a salary cut of 33 per cent when entering government, and top executive officials average a 23 per cent drop from their private sector salaries. But new members average a 2 per cent salary increase when they enter Congress.

Upon leaving government, top executive officials can expect a new salary 87 per cent higher than their government pay, the study found. Those few judges who leave federal service average an 84 per cent salary gain. Retired or defeated members of Congress can expect salaries 34 per cent higher than their Congressional ficials than for congressmen. In the new salary scales just adopted, Congress and the judiciary both received raises of about 29 per cent, while executive positions were given smaller raises.

Like other studies of senators' financial status, The Washington Post survey was hindered by a lack of complete and reliable data.

ABOUT 20 SENATORS refuse to disclose their public financial condition.

Some who do make public financial statements employ practices such as valuing their holdings at cost, or excluding property held in their wives' names - which make it difficult to draw an accurate picture.

Some senators who are most outspoken about the need for disclosure provided incomplete disclosures of their own holdings.

Sen. Howard Cannon (D-Nev.) has sponsored legislation that would require all federal employees making $25,000 per year or more "to make ful public disclosure of their personal holdings," as the senator describes it.

Cannon released a detailed statement of his own holdings and net worth in 1970. Last year he released a briefer statement, and declined to

First view gives notion war still on in Vietnam

EDITOR'S NOTE: AP Special Cor-espondent Peter Arnett visited Hanoi in 1972, during the Vietnam War. He has returned with the special U.S. mission seeking information about American military personnel still missing in Indochina. This is a report on the Communist capital in peacetime.

Brooks seeks new position following recent concession

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Just one day after Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Tex.) conceded to the President and the House leadership on government-reorganization procedures, the House Rules Committee Wednesday took up a Brooks-sponsored resolution that would make him chairman of a new commission with broad powers over House operations.

One source described the effort to create the new commission as "a power grab" that would make Brooks "a greater czar than Wayne Hays ever

The House Rules Committee postponed action on Brooks' resolution Wednesday after public complaints about the power it gave Brooks, and private complaints that it trampled on the jurisdiction of the Rules Committee and the Obey Commission on Administrative Review, and on the right of the House Administration Committee to control the new com mission's funding.

charged that the commission was a payoff to Brooks for ending his opposition to President Carter's quest for reorganization authority.

There was speculation that the current experiment in televising the House, under a procedure that Brooks has sought for a long time, was also a "reward" to Brooks for ending his opposition to Carter's reorganization authority.

Brooks is so foxy. He didn't lose a thing (fighting reorganization) and he got TV and now this," one member said.

Both House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill and Brooks denied there was any quid pro quo involved.

"Now who would think a thing like that?" O'Neill asked. "There's no truth to it at all." O'Neill conceded that he did have something to do with working out the compromise with Brooks that allowed a bill giving Carter authority to reorganize the government to come out of Brooks' Government Operations Com-

News of Jumblatt's death stirs already angry Palestine Council

CAIRO - The Palestine National Council, locked in heated debate over its policy toward Middle East peace negotiations, was thrown into turmoil Wed-nesday night by the news that Lebanese leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt had been assassinated.

Flying 'port' supplies tankers

CAPE TOWN, South Africa - The helicopter maneuvered neatly onto the deck of the moving ship, the tanker J.T. Higgins.

The Higgins is one of about 4,000 vessels that sail regularly around the Cape of Good Hope, the southern tip of Africa. They are the supertankers, container ships and other giant cargo carriers which are too big for the Suez

Like most of them, the Higgins bypasses Cape Town, which once was a great replenishing port for ships in ssage between the Atlantic and the Indian Oceans

"Perhaps the golden years are over," a Cape Town shipping executive said. "The big ships can no onger afford to stop in. Lost time is ost money. Most have too much draught to come in, anyway. And the smaller ships - they're the ones which are using the Suez Canal since it reopened. That development has lost us about 40 per cent of our

Without slowing down or altering course, the Higgins would be replenished by the helicopter.
Ray Ledlie, pilot, set the big Sikorsky down in a yellow circle painted on the tanker's deck. A doctor hopped out to tend a crewman with a broken arm. Cargo was unloaded — a bag of mail, crates of fresh vegetables, some engine room parts, cartons marked breakable.

A few minutes later, the doctor reboarded the chopper with his patient, the radio operator, and another passenger, the captain's wife, who was going home after making part of the voyage with her husband. Ledlie lifted off, hovered until the Higgins' bridge was abeam to allow the captain and his wife to wave goodbye, then turned toward land, 12 miles away. "That completes our service, bon voyage," Ledlie radioed to the ship.

Actually, it did not. Six hours later, the radio operator, his arm now in a cast, was flown out to rejoin the Higgins, still within helicopter range although almost 100 miles from Cape Town, steaming east for the Persian Gulf and a cargo of Arab oil.

This is the modern way, and it saddens old-timers in Cape Town. "I remember when Table Bay was full of ships, and chandlers carried out their grocery and hardware, replenishing by small boat, while sailors came ashore for a night's reprieve from the monotony of ship life," a wharf operator recalled.

The Court Helicopter Service, which began supplying ships at sea in 1970, does have surface competition. There are still steamship companies with long-range ships which would like to replenish at sea but require more supplies than a helicopter can

"We're slower, but we're cheaper," said Jack Wrigley, who runs a firm called Scalink. He sent one of his launches with six tons of supplies and two replacement crewmen to the British ship Nordic Conqueror. waiting six miles off Cape Town's Green Point Lighthouse.

The Nordic Conqueror is another giant, which carries iron ore from Brazil to Japan and oil from the Persian Gulf to Europe. The ship has special tanks which, after thorough cleaning by her Indian seamen, can accommodate either cargo.

With the ship almost continuously under way, her crews are changed at sea, and among the special stores that Sealink put aboard were movies, music tapes and wine.

Many ships bypass Cape Town, but it is far from being a dead port. Its inner harbor is filled with vessels bearing or taking on South African cargo. The naval base at nearby Simonstown, while no longer used by British and American warships, is still the most important repair facility west of Singapore, an ocean away. The U.S. Navy started bypassing Simonstown more than a decade ago as a political act against South Africa's official policy of apartheid, or racial segregation. The British. which had used Simonstown as an operating base, pulled out in 1975 because their political embarrassment outweighed the advantage to the Royal Navy.

In July, South Africa's steamship lines will begin using a container pier complex that is now under construction here. The new facility will increase the efficiency of cargo handling but will reduce even further the work available to longshoremen.

In September, one of the last regularly scheduled passenger services in the world - the "mail ship" run from South Africa to England -

There has been passenger service since 1857, and although company mergers have changed the flag under which the ships sailed, the "mail ship" service has continued without interruption except during wars. The era will end when the S.A. Vaal and the Windsor Castle, both fully booked, make their final voyages in September. After that, only cruise ships will bring passengers to Cape Town.

California hamlets: 'to flush or not to.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - To flush or not to flush after using a friend's toilet is one decision Amy Vanderbilt probably newer had to make. But dry wits are only half-joking when they pose such questions as water rationing sprea ds across drought-stricken Californi a.

A recent surve y showed that 43 communities had i mposed rationing or were thinking a bout it. Government forecasters pred lict that because of the worst shortage of rain and snow in a century, Californi a's reservoirs this year will be able to a upply at best only 25 per cent the norm al water for irrigation and drinking.

But as residents learn to make do with less water, they're leavrning to laugh about it too.

The comic books contain exercises to teach youngsters how to read their water meters, how to judge the amount of water garden plants need, and how to replace a leaky faucet washer.

In addition to instilling water Golffees show conservation awareness in the children, said East Bay water spokesman Paul Fletcher, the program has another benefit: Youngsters are great policemen.

"Parents come to us and say, 'What are you teaching my kid? I can't even flush the toilet any more without getting a sermon," Fletcher said.

Virginia rich get richer?

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Will all the heirs to the Mellon fortune now stay in Virginia? Will the Rockefellers, Vanderbilts, or any of America's other fabled families now move en masse to Virginia?

The Virginia General Assembly apparently hopes so. In the name of family unity, more taxes, and more millionaires, the recently concluded session of the Virginia legislature passed a littlenoticed bill designed to give the rich a tax break or moving into the state.

Virginia, it seems, has been one of a handful of states to place inheritance taxes on the recipients of certain forms of trusts long established by wealthy families.

The trouble is, the legislature was told, that this is having a divisive impact on the family life of the very rich in Virginia. Alexandria lawyer Thomas Mays told a legislative committee he knew of a family that had split up over the issue, with one of the heirs to a family fortune moving to Maryland, to avoid the Virginia tax.

That was enough reason for some legislators to vote for the bill; it passed both houses of the legislature by lop-sided margins. The bill needs only Gov. Mills E. Godwin's signature to become law. State Sen. Elmon T. Gray, who sponsored the measure, said he expects Godwin to sion the bill.

Virginia inheritance tax officials have said the loss of inheritance taxes on recipients of the socalled "special powers of appointmen." will be minimal.

Castro exits Ethiopia as quietly as he entered

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY The Washington Post

ADDIS ABAAB - Cuban President Fidel Castro left here Wednesday as secretively as he arrived two days ago with no indication of what he had discussed with Ethiopia's radical military leaders other than "bilateral issues" and "major international issues of interest to the two countries."

Diplomatic sources here reported that Castro heard a pressing appeal from the chairman of the ruling Ethiopian Military Council, Lt. Col

Mengistu Haile Mariam, for Cuban military support to help defend his regime and the country's fledgling Socialist revolution from its internal and external enemies now mounting a major offensive against them.

If so, there was no indication of what Castro may have decided. There was no joint communique published at the time of his visit, and Castro made no comment in public that might signal whether he intends to help the Ethiopian military govern-

The Cuban leader said that he had follow-ed the Ethiopian Socialist Revolution "closely" since its inception three years ago and had noted that it had won the support of progressive revolutionary forces throughout the

But Castro reportedly went no fur-ther in his toast to signal any concrete Cuban support for Mengistu or the Ethiopian military government. There have been reports circulating in African and Western diplomatic circles here that Ethiopia has asked for Cuban troops to be sent here, possibly from Angola or South Yemen, to bolster the military council under Mengistu in its current struggle with leftist and rightist opposition

Most of this speculation regarding possible Cuban intervention here stems from a visit made here in early February by the main Cuban military commander in Angola. Gen. Arnaldo

Orcha. Among the places he visited was Asmara, capital of Eritrea Province in northern Ethiopia, where a fierce secessionist struggle is under way and the Ethiopian army is being increasingly hard-pressed to hold its

Some diplomats believe that Castro may have agreed to send several hundred Cuban advisers to help train Ethiopia's "people's militia" and also to bolster his internal security forces. But so far there is no hard evidence that more than a few such advisers at the most have arrived here.

The main reason for Castro's unan-nounced and highly secretive visit here may have been an attempt to mediate between Ethiopia and neighboring Somalia, two Marxist states that are at deep odds over a territorial dispute and over which country will gain a predominant influence in the French Territory of the Afars and Issas. The strategically located territory, sandwiched between the two countries at the mouth of the Red Sea, is a French colony that is scheduled to become independent this

DR. NEIL SOLOMON More advice on hypertension

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been hearing so much about how important it is to check your blood pressure regularly and how people can do it themselves. Do you think it is a good idea to start taking one's blood presure at home? - Larry F.

Dear Larry: If you happen to have hypertension and are supposed to have your blood pressure checked from time to time, taking your blood pressure at home might be a very wise idea. And you should think of investing in a steihoscope and cuff gauge or one of those new gadgets that sell for about $20 — provided, of course, it is okay with your doctor. And provided you are not one of those poeple who get so uptight about taking their own blood pressure that it makes their hypertension worse.

If you find it difficult to take your blood pressure (BP), get a friend or another person in the family to do it

Everyone should have their BP measured at least once a year. It is taken care of automatically if you have an annual physical. And you certainly do not need to have your own equipment to do this. But a number of doctors do feel every household should have its own stethoscope and cuff gauge - and that people should get used to taking their BP just as they do their temperature.

After all, half of the 23 million

American adults with hypertension don't even know they have it, it has no symptoms in the early stages. Anything that can help to identify these people and get them to a doctor

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would like to answer E.K.'s question (which recently appeared in your column) about the permanent alleviation of corns. Corns are usually due to an enlargement of the bone directly under the corn. These enlargements are easily removed in the podiatrist's

Under local anesthesia, a very small incision is made so that a small rotary bone burr can be inserted over the bony prominence. The action of the burr removes the prominence simply and completely. Sutures are not required and the patient leaves the office with a simple dressing. The entire procedure is accomplished in about 15 minutes.

This method has been used very effectively for about 15 years and is the procedure of choice advocated by members of the Academy of Ambulatory Foot Surgery. As a practicing podiatrist for more than 25 years. I cannot condone the injection of silicone as a possible cure. This is entirely emperimental and fraught with danger. - Dr. Milton I. Kornfeld. president, Region II, Academy of Ambulatory Foot surgery.

Now I'm wanting to tell you how it was with Ed Barry playing the South cards. Himself won the ace of spades and next led a club to the ace. Divil a bit of a finesse

Barry ducked a heart, won the diamond return, led a heart to the ace and ruffed a heart. Then Barry got to dummy by ruffing a spade and led a good heart to get shut of the losing Barry's plan was better than a finesse. First, the club king might drop. Second, the hearts would probably come in no matter who had the king of clubs. Third, there was no advantage in finessing if West had the king. Altogether, the odds favored Barry by almost 3 to 1, while the finesse was just an even chance.

Privately-built dams like ticking timebombs

By GAYLORD SHAW The Los Angeles Times

NEWFOUND, N.C. - Thirteen years ago bulldozers came to a narrow valley high in the Great Smoky Mountains. They scraped up the rocky earth and heaped it across Newfound Creek, building Bear Wallow Dam

A three-acre lake soon took form and was stocked with fish by its private owners. In the years that followed, no one except an occasional fisherman paid much attention to Bear Wallow Dam — until it was too late

Wayne Mahaffey was the first to know it was too

On a chilly February night a year ago, the 30-yearold landscaper was driving home from the bowling alley when he found his way blocked by rapidly rising water in Newfound Creek

It was puzzling. Since Bear Wallow Dam had been built, the stream a mile below it normally was only three feet wide and a foot deep and, although two inches of rain had fallen since afternoon, that didn't explain all this water.

THE HEADLIGHTS of Mahaffey's pickup truck shone across the swollen creek onto the home of a neighbor, Bud Ledbetter, a 43-year-old tobacco farmer. It was past midnight, the house was dark and the water kept rising, Mahaffey recalls, "so I honked the horn, and I hollered, but no lights came

"Then it came, all of a sudden. "It was a wall of water, crashing down the valley, sounding like 15 freight trains running wide open," a surge so powerful that "rocks half as big as a car were flying through the air.'

Mahaffey watched in helpless horror as the water hit Ledbetter's house. Within seconds, the five-room frame structure splintered and was swept away. The water raced on down the gouge into Newfound, a community so proud of its postcard prettiness that it had entered the "Keep America Beautiful" contest two years before — and won first place.

Hours later, in the stillness of a mountain morning, searchers found the bodies of Bud Ledbetter, his wife, his mother and his son a mile downstream from their homestead. And a mile upstream, they found the remains of Bear Wallow Dam.

To residents of the area the dam's collapse had corne as a sudden catastrophe in the night, but inve stigators later concluded that the 45-foot-tall structure probably had been doomed from birth by poor design and construction, that it had been weakened by years of neglect and that it simply was exhausted from trying to hold back the weight of millions of g allons of water.

BEAR WALLOW DAM is a graphic example of the hazards posed by privately built and owned dams in America. And, if present trends continue and if nothing is done, what happened at Bear Wallow could happen again and again across the nation.

A months-long study by The Los Angeles Times found evidence that hundreds, perhaps thousands, of hazardous private dams are scattered across the country and, as one federal engineer said, they are "ticking like timebombs, unnoticed."

Safety problems also plague dozens of big federal dams. Federal officials have known of the problems with some of their dams for as long as a decade but have done little to correct them. But at least federal dams are professionally designed and regularly inspected — that is not the case with most private dams. Dr. Bruce Tschantz, a professor of civil engineering at the University of Tennessee and a nationally recognized expert on dam safety, rates the cumulative hazard posed by private dams as "much greater, perhaps 10 times greater" than that posed by federal dams. While most private dams are smaller than federal dams, and while many are located outside congested urban areas, Tschantz said they often are poorly designed and built. Also, many are so rarely inspected and properly maintained, that Tschantz believes an immediate national effort is needed to pirevent future disasters.

Statistics on the scope of the problem are stagger-

-Of the nearly 45,000 private structures meeting the criteria for large dams (taller than 25 feet or impounding more than 50 acre-feet of water, an amount equal to more than 14 million gallons), a federal survey placed roughly 15,000 in the "high" or "significant" hazard potential category

-An estimated 36,000 private dams have never been inspected by federal or state safety engineers. Be ar Wallow Dam was one of these. In fact, neither the federal nor state government even knew the dam existed until its collapse — at 2:15 a.m. on Sunday, Feb. 22, 1976 — killed the Ledbetter family and caused $250,000 damage to the Newfound communi-

-Eight states with 6,940 private dams have no dam safety laws. Seventeen states with 17.682 private dams have safety statutes but no rules or regulations implementing them. And loopholes abound. North Carolina's dam safety law didn't cover Bear Wallow because it was built before the law took effect.

Some states have adequate dam safety laws but no money to enforce them, Tschantz discovered in conducting a national survey

One state official said, "We learned through our legislators that the only funds available with respect to dams are disaster funds," (for use only after a failure)" Tschantz reported. Another official added: "It usually requires a major failure or a disaster of catastrophic proportions before the public is willing to support new programs with their already overexpended tax dollars.

FIVE YEARS AGO, after one of those catastrophes - the collapse of a coal mining company's crude dam on West Virginia's Buffalo Creek which killed 120 persons - Congress rushed through a law stating that the Army Corps of Engineers "as soon as practicable...shall carry out a national program of inspection of dams for the purpose of protecting human life and property.

m this ndling in ac-ler In-lock to n must Kan or r sales xed or a cent al Kan 52734 T/3-7

Foods, Inc.

Last year, the corps completed an inventory of 49,329 larger dams - about 5,000 federal, the rest private. It recorded each dam's size, capacity, location, owner and hazard potential. But, corps officials told Congress, "No inspections have been made...due to limited funding and the administration's belief that inspections of nonfederal dams should be accomplished by the concerned states as part of their normal responsibilities."

MIDLAND INSULATION CO. Free Estimate 694-7673

The corps did draft a proposed set of guidelines for state dam inspections, and estimated that it would cost $73.5 million annually to implement the program. But many state officials said they didn't want the federal guidelines unless they got federal money, too. Since no money was forthcoming from Congress. a stalemate developed.

Thus, while the nation spends billions of dollars and millions of hours annually enforcing safety requirements for airplanes, automobiles, elevators, office buildings and homes, little is being done to enforce safety standards for private dams

A notable exception is the state of California. In 1929, after St. Francis Dam in Los Angeles County collapsed and resulted in 500 deaths, the Legislature enacted a comprehensive dam safety program. Reinforced by amendments following the 1963 Baldwin Hills dam collapse - five dead and $50 million in damage - it is widely regarded as the best such program in the country.

With a staff of 55 and an annual budget of $1.9 million, the state's dam safety division watches over 1,100 nonfederal dams in California — approving initial designs, checking on construction, periodically inspecting completed structures.

NO OTHER STATE does as much. In fact, the Corps of Engineers' inventory indicated that the other 49 states combined spend less than $2.5 million annually and together have fewer than 150 fulltime personnel assigned to police dam safety.

At the same time that so little is done to inspect existing private dams, new ones are being constructed in record numbers. According to Tschantz' calculations, private dams were built during the 1950s at the rate of 996 a year. Now, he said, the pace exceeds 1,715 annually. And the biggest boom is in dams for recreational lakes. often crude earthen structures built by real estate developers without engineering advice.

Tschantz summarized the situation in recent report to a conference of engineers:

'The existence of an unknown number of hazardous dams and the proliferation of new dams in most states is coupled with either under-funded or unfunded dam 'safety' inspection programs, not only creating a sense of false security among the public but also forcing any future funding to be more costly because of inflation and increased inspection dif

The U.S. Committee on Large Dams, a group sponsored by the American Society of Civil Engineers, for years has encouraged states to adopt a model law setting minimum standards for dam construction and operation. The group has had only limited suc-

TODAY IN MISSOURI for instance, "anyone may build a dam at any time, in any place, with complete disregard for safety if he has the funds, owns the land and chooses to do so," says Dr. James Williams of the state Geology and Land Survey.

Because Missouri has no dam safety law, state officials like Williams can do little more than keep track of dam failures. In 1957, Williams started his list of private dams in Missouri which failed. The list had reached a total of 26 failures when, several years ago, he no longer had the time to keep it updated. Other states without dam safety laws are Alabama, Alaska, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii and South Carolina, according to Tschantz' survey. States with statutes but no safety rules to imthe laws, reported, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, North Carolina, Louisiana, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada and Washington.

Even in states with both statutes and safety rules, funds often are scarce.

Ohio, for example, has a state law requiring that private dams be inspected every five years. But last year it had only three inspectors, and they concentrated on the 150 of the state's 1,200 dams whose safety they rated as most vital.

In Tennessee, Tschantz led a campaign that resulted in adoption of a model dam safety law in 1973. The first year, the Tennessee legislature appropriated $60,000 to implement the law. The second and third years it voted $40,000 annually. The fourth year it appropriated nothing.

Thus, no private dams now are being inspected in Tennessee - even though some are known to be hazardous. Tschantz and doctoral candidate Kenneth Spencer, for instance, unofficially inspected 19 typical dams in one east Tennessee county and found that one-third were so poorly designed they would be overtopped and probably destroyed by a moderate flood - one that could be expected to occur once every 10 years.

THE SINGLE BIGGEST federal promoter of private dams is the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service. With an annual budget of about $200 million, the SCS has helped more than 2.3 million farmers plan individual conservation programs, often including construction of dams.

In a 1976 "Summary of Progress," the SCS reported that over the years it had helped build more than 2 million ponds. Most of these are too small to fit in the national dam inventory, but the SCS was involved in bigger dams, too. These include more than 9,000 multiple-purpose dams and 40,524 irrigation

David Ralston, SCS's design branch chief, said his agency's field personnel upon request will prepare plans for farmers and other private interests who want to build dams on their own property.

"All which would cause loss of life if they fail are reviewed at the regional level" by qualified engineers, Ralston said. But SCS district conservation aides - non-engineers often with only a high school diploma - draw plans for dams up to 15 feet high, using an SCS-supplied guidebook.

This results, one non-SCS engineer said, "in a lot of half-ass designs" — a criticism Ralston rejects, although he says, "I would agree that they are not the most sophisticated.'

AS SCS-DESIGNED DAMS are being constructed by their private owners, SCS employes try to inspect them, Ralston said, but they are "not legally required" to do so and sometimes don't.

Investigators found that the ill-fated Bear Wallow Dam in North Carolina was "adopted from an SCS design for a 20-foot high dam on level ground. It was constructed to a maximum height of 45 feet on a foundation sloping downstream."

Across the Great Smokey Mountains from where Bear Wallow Dam once stood, in his office on the University of Tennessee's Knoxville campus. Tschantz sorts through responses to his national survey. He has found that, despite some opposition, about two-thirds of the states favor a system of federal matching funds to bolster their dam safety programs.

1977 WTCC fun, adventure map released

ABILENE - Robert D. Woofter, chairman of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Tourist and Travel Development Committee, has announced that the fourth edition of the WTCC "Wonderful West Texas" Fun and Adventure Map was released at the Dallas Sports and Vacation Show.

The Fun and Adventure Map is the feature travel publication for the WTCC providing travel in-formation for the 132-county WTCC service area. Distribution is carried out by direct mail, Texas Highway Tourist Information Centers, travel shows, participating auto clubs and other interested travel-related groups.

"All inquiries received by the WTCC Travel Esevelopment Department receive a copy of the Fun and Adventure Map in addition to any special in-formation requested," Woofter said. A minimum of 100,000 copies are distributed annually.

Sixty-nine points of interest are highlighted in the 1977 edition number keyed for the visitor's convenience on a colorful travel map of West Texas. Woofter noted "that by consulting the Fun and Adventure Map many fine attractions are called to one's attention that might otherwise be overlooked and that use of the map in vacation planning can save time, fuel and money."

The publication features areas of interest, museums and colleges and universities along with a list of state parks located in West Texas and other interesting travel information.

Free copies of the map may be obtained by writing the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 1581, Abilene, Texas, 79604.

Economic gains trigger sharper inflation debate

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) - The indicators of increasingly strong economic activity, including the sharp rebound in industrial production after the big freeze, is intensifying the debate over future in-

The difference in outlook has always simmered in the divergent philosophies of conservatives and liberals, but the eruption this time is hardly theoretical. It involves Washington's great stimulus

The split in viewpoint became clearly visible late in 1976, when some interpreted the so-called "pause" to be a weakness that had to be corrected, while others said it was temporary and self-correcting.

It widened in January and February, when the coldest winter in many years, accompanied by a natural gas shortage, slowed the gears of industry in a vast area of the nation. Again, some said temporary, others said permanent damage.

New it has become a gap that perhaps cannot be bridged by compromise, as increasingly favorable economic reports suggest to some bank and business economists that the stimulus program should be shrunk and maybe even abandoned.

The lines are imperfectly drawn. Some business economists remain convinced that inflation won't exceed the 5 per cent to 6 per cent level, or not much changed from last year's rate.

While not enthusiastic about the entire program, some of these economists do feel that business can benefit from fiscal goading, not so much as an immediate corrective but as part of a long-term program to revitalize industry.

Others, however, are adamant, and have been telling clients and customers, and anyone who will listen, Congress included, that tax rebates and jobcreation programs are ripples that will grow to a new wave of inflation.

As the evidence accumulates that the economy rebounded from its constraints as suddenly as the weather improved, the warnings of the antistimulists have grown more ominous.

They observe that despite the terrible weather, employment has risen, installment credit and consumer spending have grown, capital spending plans of business have accelerated.

Those who support stimulus don't accept the conclusions drawn from these observations. They counter with interpretations of their own: Unemplayment also is up, credit is rising because peeple need it, capital spending plans are higher because business articipates a tax break.

Distilling the dispute to its essence, one finds it is mainly an argument ever how near to capacity the economy is now operating.

The gap withens right there, because there is a controversy not only over the percentage of capacity new being used, but on how fast we should run to achieve peak capacity.

Muskie to lead fight against Senate ethics code

By WALTER PINCUS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D-Maine), with never a hint of personal scandal around his 30 years in elective office -- the last 18 as a senator - is about to become the leader in the fight against earned income limitations in the newly drafted Senate ethics code.

"I feel like protesting," the 62year-old Muskie said the other day in a feisty tone.

Muskie is too crafty a politician to take the matter head on, instead, he plans to offer an amendment that would expand the limitation to investment as well as earned income.

That move would focus attention on the whole income question and could very well force a uniform policy for all outside Senate income, either disclosure or limitation.

As drafted by a special committee on official conduct, chaired by Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.), the code would limit the amount of earned income a senator could make in any year to 15 per cent of his salary.

With salaries at $57,500, a senator could earn an additional $8,625 a year. However, a senator with investment income could take in an unlimited amount. The code would only require that he make a full

Under Muskie's planned amendment, once a senator was elected he would have to put all his investments in a blind trust from which he could only receive the maximum $8,625 a year. The rest would have to be re-

FOR MUSKIE it is a personal thing. Over the years he says he has avoided buying stocks and bonds, or going into land and other speculative ventures offered him on the grounds that there could be a conflict of interest. Instead he has traveled the lecture circuit, earning until recently around $30,000 a year.

Beginning in 1975, Muskie cut back his speaking because an honoraria limit of $15,000 was established for senators. Last year it was raised to $25,000, but under the proposed code it would be cut back to $8,625 if Muskie had no other source of personal in-

"I'm disturbed by the rationale of what the (Nelson) committee has done," Muskie said recently.

"If disclosure of honoraria (which has been in effect for five years) doesn't work to prevent conflicts of interest, why is (disclosure) all that is required to control conflict in investments?

The Nelson committee report on the ethics code gives Muskie an ironic answer. In discussing conflicts that could arise with members owning stock in government-regulated companies or firms controlled by commit-tees on which they serve, the report architecture, engineering and tees on which they serve, the report

"The committee discovered that it is one thing to describe cases which could pose a disturbing conflict of interest, but quite another to formulate a rule which meets the worst case without being unreasonable."

MUSKIE AND OTHER senators. both affected and unaffected by the income limitation rule, plan to argue that the honoraria limit rule is "unreasonable" for them.

"What record is there that reveals conflicts from honoraria?" Muskie asked rhetorically the other day. "There were no hearings on conflicts, no evidence ... It is a foolish, foolish mistake.'

Nelson, in an interview, argued that large honoraria gave "the public an image, a serious appearance of conflict. The size of the payments and the committee assignment of those in-

Muskie countered that a Harris survey, taken for the commission that drafted the House ethics code, showed that although the public opposed large fees for members' speeches, public opposition sharply diminished when the size and nature of the honoraria were disclosed to the voters in the member's district.

Nelson and his colleagues recognize the problems posed in dealing with income limitations.

The $8.625 earned-income rule, the committee report said, "was the most difficult and probably the most controversial" adopted.

Sensing that additional problems would develop, according to the Senate source, the committee initially distributed only one copy of its resolution and report to each senator on

No copies were made available to the press, and reportedly only 125 were printed.

Before the report was released, the Nelson committee agreed to postpone final approval of two controversial new rules in its resolution after conferring last week with the Senate leadership and key members of the new Senate Ethics Committee.

A NEW RULE to limit political activity by a member's personal staff was put down for further study. Another rule, creating a means for handling an equal employment opportunities code for the Senate, was referred to the Government Affairs Committee for study.

The remaining provisions in the proposed ethics code are expected to be called up for floor debate this week barring new complications. The basic provisions are:

-A bar on members and staffers earning $25,000 or more from also ear-medicine. This provision goes beyond income limitation and may also face amendment on the floor. One proposal being circulated would prohibit a member from practicing his profession in a firm, but would allow him, under the income limitation to act on

-Extensive income and gift disclosure provisions for both senators and top staffers. The paperwork, here, is also a possible target for criticism. The 100 members and an estimated 1,300 staffers would be required to file.

On gifts, for example, each person would have to report the donor of any gift over $35 except those from to staffers who go into lobbying. relatives. Presents from friends would be included.

TO COMPLICATE the procedure, those reporting would be barred from accepting gifts totaling over $100 in any one year from anyone registered as a lobbyist or associated with a political action campaign fund. That language would, for example, prevent lobbying groups from buying tickets to $100 or more fund-raising dinners and giving them to senators or staffers - a long-time practice.

-Former senators would be barred for one year from lobbying their former colleagues or Senate staff. A similar one-year bar would be applied

-Income disclosure provisions would be applied to individuals at the time they announce themselves as candidates for a Senate seat. Under the code they would have to make public their income for the prior

-Each senator's disclosure report would have to be audited at least once during his six-year term. However the code would forbid the audit from being done during the year he is up for re-election. -The outside income limitation of 15 per cent would also be applied to staffers earning $35,000 or more.

The exemptions in the Senate from the earned income rule are interpreted much more liberally than a similarly drafted provision in the House.

Trans-continental flights to cost less

WASHINGTON - Some discount air fare between New York and the West Coast will drop sharply next month as a result of a Civil Aeronautics Board action.

The agency said it would allow American Airlines to put into effect a new "Super-Saver" discount fare on flights between New York and Los Angeles, and New York and San Francisco that will allow consumers to purchase a round-trip ticket for $227 to $268, depending on the day of the Deer just play dead

EASTPORT, Maine (AP)-Joseph Chaliforth had been hunting throughout the deer season without any luck, including tramping eight miles on the last day of the season. He had seen only one deer the whole

When he got home, however, he saw two deer standing only a few feet away in a cemetery next to his house. They were in no hurry to leave.

Hunting wasn't permitted in the area, so there was nothing Chaliforth could do about it. Perhaps that was why the deer had been standing there

Court collects $15,000 more

Midland Municipal Court collected $48,160 in February from traffic and parking tickets and other sources.

This was about $15,000 more than was collected during February 1976.

There were 1,338 traffic tickets and 7,412 parking citations issued in February by Midiand police which is an increase of about 3,000 more parking tickets than February 1976.

From Oct. 1 through February, the court collected $206,325, an increase of mor than $50,000 compared to the same five-month period beginning in

The current New York-West Coast round-trip coach fare is $412; the CAB-approved round-trip excursion fare, with advance purchase and minimum stay requirements similar to those of the "Super-Saver," is $330.

Although they opposed American Airlines' proposal, arguing that the new fares would be uneconomic, United Air Lines and Trans World Airlines filed applications at the same time to meet American's fares if they were approved — so all three carriers will offer the "Super-Saver" cross-

The new fares require consumers to purchase the ticket at least 30 days prior to departure and stay between 7 and 45 days. The fare for travelers on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays will be $227 round-trip; travelers on Mondays and Fridays will pay $247 round-trip; and Saturday and Sunday tickets will cost $268 round-trip. The round-trip cost for children - all times - will be $206.

The fares go into effect today for travel on or after April 24. As with current excursion fares, not more than 35 per cent of any airplane's seats could be used for "Super-Saver"

The CAB didn't technically approve American's proposal. As it did recently when Texas International Airlines applied for permission to cut fares in half on certain of its flights, the board said it would allow the fares to go into effect for the year period proposed. but would institute an investigation to determine whether they are lawful and just under the Federal Aviation

The board said it had "significant reservations as to the economic soundness of this fare for scheduled service" but added, "On the other hand, we are reluctant to deny the carrier an opportunity to implement what it considers to be a fully warranted pricing experiment.

The board noted American's fare proposal was designed in part as a major competitive response to the Advance Booking Charter programs it authorized in the fall, but which are just now being developed and promoted. Charter tour operators had urged the board to reject American's new fares on grounds that they could doom the new type of air fare-only charters, which impose fewer restrictions on travelers and charter operators than previously approved charters had.

Noting that typical prices for New York-Los Angeles ABCs range from $179 to $249 round-trip, the board said,

The fact remains that those travelers seeking the lowest air-transportation cost will still find an

ABC charter the best bargain."

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK - It is ironic that the wild rivers of the American West - once regarded as places foreign to man, fearsome as they were lonesome are rapidly becoming some of the most regulated stretches of wilderness in the country, places where entry is now guarded by government sentries, where everything from camp fires to the use of soap is controlled, where use permits are scarce and solitude even

It has all changed very fast. A decade ago the few who dared set their kayaks of inflatable boats against the rage of mountain or canyon rivers were rewarded with almost total seclusion. The rivers swept their riders through regions so wild and deserted that the travelers often returned feeling they had touched something mystical.

The Colorado River within the Grand Canyon, with its obvious appeal, has been traveled for more than a decade, but there are still those who remember when a journey through the canyon was a rare event.

Martin Litton, who now runs commercial trips through the canyon, took his first journey in 1951:

"You started from Lee's Ferry with a feeling of being entirely on your own. You knew that if anything went wrong you were most likely dead. The only chance was to try and climb out and that, in most places, was a longshot.

"But we loved it that way. If we ever saw someone else's footprint we would have the same sense of shock that Robinson Crusoe had when he saw a footprint on the beach. The feeling was, 'Oh my God, what's that!"

These days there are many footprints on the beaches of the canyon. The speed of the change is a lesson in the voraciousness of America's appetite for recreation; last year 14,300 persons weaved their way through the river's mountainous rapids. Similar numbers traveled a dozen or so other wild rivers in the West.

The journey down a wild river has remained an exciting, even exhilarating experience for most, but soon after the popularity of river touring exploded in the early 1970s travelers found more signs of man than a few footprints. Small beaches became smeared with the scars of many campfires; the odor of human waste occasionally wafted along the evening breezes; firewood disappeared at some sites and living trees were attacked for wood; "raft jams" became common at the entrance of rapids, and the tourers were often joined on the river by beer cans, orange rinds and the omnipresent styrofoam.

The crowding of wilderness rivers is not an isolated phenomenon. Backpackers, anglers, motorcyclists, hunters, hang gliders, mountain climbers and others now surge by the thousands into every variety of wilderness. But it is on the rivers where the change has been the most rapid, where the government has stepped in most forcefully and where the bickering between users has been most intense

"It was in 1973 that we realized we had a real problem and that it was the same problem all over the West,' said Robert Yearout, who now heads the federal Interagency Whitewater Committee. "There was this tremendous increase in demand with almost no controls. So we started to put together some regulations.'

And now it has come to this: simply to apply for a permit within the Grand Canyon, a prospective river traveler must complete an eight-page questionnaire months prior to his trip, describing everything from the type and size of his boat to emergency communications equipment. Almost every facet of the trip must meet strict NPS standards.

The questionnaire is so long and complex that this year the National Parks Service supplied applicants with an eight-page instruction pamphlet to explain the questionnaire and then a two-page instruction sheet to explain the pamphlet.

Among other items, the river regulations now require all parties to carry chemical toilets, large garbage containers and firepans. Garbage must be carried out; all soap must be bio-degradeable; only driftwood may be used in the firepans; wood from canyon trees, whether dead or alive, may not be collected; major first aid equipment must be carried; rafts must be multi-chambered and of extremely sturdy construction.

An accompanying pamphlet, titled "Guidelines for Enjoyable Boating," contains a chilling description of the physical dangers of a river trip. One section describes hypothermia, the lowering of body temperatures through exposure to cold, that "kills in two distinct steps." If dumped into a cold river such as the Colorado for too long a period, the pamphlet says, a person may first begin to shiver un-controllably and then, if not warmed quickly, slide towards "stupor, collapse and death.

'Most outdoorsmen simply can't believe such (cold) temperatures can be dangerous. They fatally underestimate the danger of being wet at such temperatures. Fiftydegree water is unbearably cold," the pamphlet says.

"We are trying to show people just what they're up against," said Mar-vin Jensen, Grand Canyon's innercanyon unit manager. "The application form is saying to people, 'You can't leave a mess behind you; and you've got to be ready for a rugged Jensen concedes that the questionnaire alone may discourage some from attempting the journey. "We did not intend it for that, but I'm sure it happens. It used to be that people would show up here with completely inadequate equipment; that day has now passed.

The Grand Canyon is not alone in its new regulatory system. Similar standards are now enforced on all the major white water rivers of the West, including the Salmon and Snake rivers in Idaho; the Green and Yampa rivers in Utah, and the Rogue River in Oregon.

Surprisingly, there has been little or no opposition to the new controls. 'Everyone seems to understand that the alternative is far worse," says Merle Stitt, the Grand Canyon superintendent. In fact, says Stitt, the beaches and side canyons of the Colorado already have begun to clear themselves of the trash and waste left from the years when no regulations were in force.

The safety standards also appear to be having their effect. The number of deaths in the Colorado since 1972 now stands at six. Such a rate is far lower than on some other rivers, such as the comparatively mild Salt River in Arizona, where no safety controls ex-

Not all aspects of federal control over white water use of Western rivers has produced such conviviality, however. Even though stiff requirements for approved use of the Colorado and other rivers has eliminated many casual users, the number of qualified applicants still exceeds available permits by a large

To choose among the qualified applicants, most federal agencies - in addition to the Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service exercise control over some rivers—have resorted to lotteries. Nonetheless, applicants have a better than even chance to receive a permit sometime during the summer on most Western rivers.

'Rent-a-bank' problem curb headed for House

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A bill designed to curb the "rent-a-bank" problem that state and federal bank examiners said led to the recent collapse of two South Texas banks is headed for the House floor.

The House Financial Institutions Committee approved, 8-0, the proposal to give the state banking commissioner the power to regulate the sale of state-chartered banks.

"It's aimed at stopping some of the so-called 'rent-a-bank' problems that the congressional committee found, said Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville, committee chairman and sponsor of the compromise measure.

The bill, one of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's legislative recommendations, was prompted by the closing last fall of the First State Bank of Rio Grande City and a congressional subcommittee investigation of last summer's collapse of the Citizens State Bank of Carrizo Springs, Donaldson said.

The "rent-a-bank" term, coined during the December congressional hearings in San Antonio, refers to persons borrowing money from one bank to buy control of another bank, then paying off the loan with money borrowed from the newly-purchased

Such "insider" loans to new owners, their families and friends led to the collapse of the Carrizo Springs and Rio Grande City banks, state and federal banking examiners con-

House holds history

MINIER, III. (AP) — The Donald Walkers have a special tie with an old one-room schoolhouse here.

Walker and his sister studied in it. So did his father, Leslie Walker, and brother. The elder Walker's mother also studied it; his father was director of the area school district; and his aunt Myrtle taught there. Now Walker and his family live in it.

The building, constructed in 1856, was bought by Walker's father in 1946, the last year it was used as a schoolhouse. The elder Walker also received the old school records dating back to 1874. They are stored at his farm, which is nearby.

The younger Walker. who now owns the schoolhouse, has built onto all sides of the original 21-by-20-foot structure.

California drought recalls Dust Bowl for Okies

The Washington Post

LOST HILLS, Calif. - To the tens of thousands of people streaming out of the Dust Bowl in the 1930s, California's San Joaquin Valley was, as one of them said recently, "the land of sunshine and plenty.

Now, in the second straight year of blistering drought, many fear they are facing something they had thought impossible: two Dust Bowls in one lifetime.

To Jim Price, a fieldhand in these parts for 40 years, the drought brings back memories of his boyhood in Oklahoma. Laid off last week in drought-caused cutbacks at the 18,000-acre Berernda Mesa ranch here, Price fears the mean times of the 1930s are returning in his old age.

"Now that bad pattern is showing up again, just like the Dust Bowl, Price, 61 said. "Here I am on my own with my home and I'm thrown out of work just like my daddy was. If I don't get my livelihood back soon I'm gonna lose my home. I'm gonna be on the move again."

Price remembers vividly the great drought that hit the nation's midsection in the late '20s and '30s. The land dried up and howling winds carried off the parched soil, ruining his father and thousands of other farmers.

More than 180,000 of these destitute people - like the families in John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" migrated to California, most of them settling in the rich but largely undeveloped San Joaquin Valley.

THEY WERE KNOWN as Okies to the native Californians but they came from Texas, Missouri and Arkansas as well as Oklahoma. These migrants laid the water pipelines that brought life to the valley's rich but dry soil and

Midland High wins trophy

Midland High School won the traveling trophy as outstanding chapter of the West Texas district of the National Forensic League.

In district competition, Midland High student Hal Coon placed second in humorous interpretation and Clay Guthrie second in original oratory. David Smith and Clay Guthrie, both of Midland High, tied for third place in dramatic interpretation.

The Okies prospered with the land and many now own their homes and Until this year's drought, California and the San Joaquin Valley seemed like a safe refuge to the Okies. "This has always been the land of sunshine and plenty," Price said. "But now with this drought, it's like a sickening situation. It brings back all those bad memories. I can't believe that at my age I find myself going through the same darn thing twice in a lifetime."

Managers at the Berrenda Mesa ranch said Price's job was elimianted because they didn't have enough water to grow much of this year's crop. Because of shrinking water supplies from the high mountains 300 miles north of here, allotments to farms in this section of Kern County have been cut to 58 per cent of last year's level.

The key is not local rainfall. In the best of times, the San Joaquin Valley is a virtual desert. The valley's prosperity is the product of a vast irrigation system that brings water from the high mountains.

Before 1960, this remote district 150 miles northeast of Los Angeles was mostly dry, open range. Today, thanks to California's Feather River Water Project, a series of dams and canals along the valley's western edge, 13 farms covering nearly 46,000 acres are in operation here.

BUT THE DROUGHT has cut the snowpack to one-third of normal. depleting hte state's huge reservoirs. 'Nothing we can do down here can help," said George Ribble, an engineer for the Kern County water agency, "It's what is going on up in the mountains that matters.

Berrenda Mesa farmers' president Herb Benham said the state-ordered water cutbacks have forced him to lay off half of his 300 full-time employes. Nearly 5,000 acres of cotton, garlic, onions and alfalfa have been abandoned so available water can be used to keep his 13,000 acres of fruit trees from dying in the scorching summerlike sun.

Benham and most other farmers here resent the cutbacks, which threaten the solvency of their farms. 'We feel like we've been totally betrayed," Benham said. "The state encourages us to develop an economy based on a firm, uninterrupted supply of water. Then we're left holding the

BROUGHT UP on a dirt farm in nearby Fresno, Benham, 51, remembers the days before irrigation. Dust storms threatened crops and travelers alike then, and now, with thousands of unplanted, unprotected acres, Benham fears the soil will blow through the valley again. Officials at the Agriculture Department's soil conservation agency in Bakersfield are worrying about possible massive dust storms in the valley this year. Gibbons Moore, resource planner at the agency, projects as much as 50 per cent increase in dust storms by this summer.

"We'll see a lot of more damage from blowing dust. It'll carry a lot of the soil away," he said. "I've never seen it this bad before. It could be as bad as the Dust Bowl if it keeps up like this."

Even without the clouds of blowing soil, the economic impact from the drought is expected to be severe. The state unemployment office in Bakersfield, the Kern County seat, already reports a 20 per cent increase in filings in the last four weeks because of hte drought. Officials at the county's water agency think that as much as $300 million could be lost to the county's economy this year.

While large, corporate operations such as Berernda Mesa are likely to survive this year's disaster, many smaller farmers are close to in half on his 1,500-acre farm and he bankruptcy. Loans to get through this summer could become virtually impossible to secure because of uncertainty over future water supplies.

"YOU'LL START SEEING a lot of bankruptcies this summer. predicted Stan Perisich, general manager of the Bakersfield branch of the Federal Land Bank. "The small farmer's operation can't even meet bis interest payments. They'll probably be selling out."

Like many of these smaller farmers, Roy Henson, 75, already lost a family farm, during the Oklahoma Dust Bowl. This year's drought has forced him to cut production at least wonders if he will be able to meet his bills this summer.

Maui onions called sweetest

The Los Angeles Times

KULA, Maui - Onions are selling for 90 cents to $1 a pound in Honolulu - three to four times what they cost in other parts of the nation.

Despite the high cost, housewives throughout the Hawaiian Islands empty supermarket shelves of onions as fast as they are re-stocked.

The $1 a pound onions are Maui onions. And Maui onions are considered by many to be the sweetest on Plush restaurants in Honolulu feature sliced raw Mauri onions as a popular side dish on luncheon and dinner menus.

"People chew on Maui onions like they would an apple or an orange," notes Masaru Uradomo, 44, known as king of the Maui onion growers. "People who normally can't stand onions eat our onions. It's

The same onion — a hybrid called Granex F — is grown in Texas and Southern California. But on the mainland it has a typical onion flavor.

Maui onion seeds come from El Centro, Calif., but grown on the slopes of 10,023-foot Haleakala Crater - one of the largest dormant volcanoes in the world - in the Kula District of Maui, the onion's flavor is uniquely sweet and delicate. What makes the onions so sweet?

Ted Hori, county agricultural extension agent, says it's the tropical climate, the elevation, the moisture content, the soil, the short growing days -'a combination of all those elements. Farmers on other islands have tried growing the onions but they taste like mainland onions and do not have the sweet quality of those grown on Maui. Someday this 50-mile long, 25-mile wide island may become America's onion island, but for now less than 150 acres are given over to the crops.

Unannounced visit meets dismal end

DALLAS (AP) - Two men from Washington were in Dallas last weekend representing the House Assassinations Committee, but their visit was unannounced

The men - one a retired police lieutenant and the other a special committee counsel - went first to police headquarters to examine files on the assassination of President Kennedy. They found the files had been subpoensed by the committee and were in Washington.

Then they went to the site of Jack Ruby's Carousel Club. They found a parking lot. Ruby's club was razed years ago.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 81, block OW, CCSD&RGNG survey, 13 miles northwest of Fort Stockton, one mile southeast of Wolfcamp production in the Gomez gas field.

Credo Oil & Gas, Inc., of Beaumont. has completed No. 1 Stark-State as a third well and location southeast extension to the Catlynn, West (lower Clearfork) oil pool of Pecos.

It had a 24-hour flowing potential of 24 barrels of 37.2-gravity oil, gas-oil ratio unreported, and producing through a 20-64-inch choke and perforations at 3,572-3,600 feet, natural. Location is 1,800 feet from southeast

Crackdown on heroin traffic due

DALLAS (AP) - Heroin crackdown efforts along the U.S.-Mexico border may get a boost soon.

The brunt of past efforts to eradicate heroin traffic has been carried by the federal governments of both countries, but Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill has announced plans for a meeting of state prosecutors from both sides of the border to attempt coordinating crackdown efforts at the Speaking at a Brookhaven Country Club coffee, Hill said: "We're going to try to have a meeting between the prosecutors in the six northern Mexican states — the key prosecutors in those areas — with our prosecutors in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California so that we can coordinate our efforts to prosecute top (heroin) traffickers." Hill said he is to meet with Mexico's attorney general next week to arrange the meeting.

Preliminary plans call for a meeting in Brownsville, Texas, but Hill said the meeting could be relocated if other officials desired. Besides heroin problems, Hill said he hoped immigration problems would also be discussed at the prosecutors' meeting along with the progress of Mexico's poppy field defoliation program.

Attorneys general from the four U.S. states that border Mexico are scheduled to meet in California later this spring to discuss law enforcement problems unique to the Mexican border.

In another speech Wednesday, Hill said he opposes the Carter Administration's request for Congress to decriminalize marijuana possession

"I choose to take a stand at this time on the side of being cautious," Hill told a criminal justice seminar being held in conjunction with the second annual Southwestern Conference in Public Justice at the University of Texas at Arlington.

"I am not ready to subscribe to the (Carter Administration) recommendations," Hill said. "While I don't claim that marijuana has a causal effect on heroin use, I do think that a heavy reliance on marijuana makes it easy to slip into heroin usage.'

Hill said he feared this link between lessened marijuana possession penalties and increased heroin use because, "Heroin is one of the biggest menaces in this state and country.

Workover pumps oil

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1 Seth Campbell, Winkler County wildcat reentry, one mile east of Kermit, pumped 38 barrels of oil and 200 barrels of water in 24 hours, from an unidentified formation.

Recovery was through perforations at 4,162-4,250 feet, after fracturing with 30,000 gallons and 76,000 pounds of sand. Testing continued.

Washington giving us to oil cartel: Miller

C. John Miller, past president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, warned oilmen in Midland Wednesday afternoon that the "Washington Scene" is turning "us over to the foreign oil cartel" in a Speaking before an invited audience at a meeting in the Midland Room of The Midland National Bank sponsored by Producers Crude, Inc.,

ENERGY

Miller encouraged the oilmen to get active in politics because "that is where we can change things.

"We need to lobby in Washington for things we believe to be right - not to try and preserve what we have, but fight for where we ought to be," Miller said.

In making his point on the foreign oil cartel, Miller reviewed the domestic petroleum situation since the oil embargo of 1973.

He pointed out that when the embargo hit, domestic producers got busy but found a shortage of rigs, a shortage of pipe and a shortage of prospect money.

"When the embargo was imposed, we were getting $2.95 for our oil, and in some cases as much as 32 cents per thousand cubic feet for our gas.

The price of oil started going up, but controls were put on. "We have also had to put up with price rollbacks in recent months," Miller said. Miller said that in January we used more oil than in any other month in our history, and that we paid more for foreign oil than any time in history. "And one economic outlook I will never understand is the view of Sen.

Jackson. He has been quoted as saying we are paying too much for foreign oil, so cut back the price of domestic oil — something that has been done," Miller said. "In 1975, we were paying an average of $12.22 for foreign oil and getting $7.67 for domestic crude. Today, we are paying $14.10 for foreign oil and getting an average of $8.76 for domestic crude. The price range is getting further and further apart. That is what is going to turn us over to the foreign oil cartell, Miller emphasised 'We as independents need to move immediately to get the price of crude decontrolled at the earliest possible

He reminded his audience that the oil industry has been hit hard in several years. "There was a move in 1975 that took away a great part of the depletion allowance. Then prices started to be rolled back in 1976, then

Gaines test yields show

But when it is publicized that someone in the oil business, an individual or a major company, makes money, then it is bad.'

"And, if you don't believe that Washington is our main problem, you do not know what is going on. The thinking in Washington is for total control of the oil industry.

"And, we can't change the picture in Congress, we must go to the constituents to get what we want. They have to be educated as to the fact that what we are doing is right and that the oil industry is an important part in the future of our nation.

"And, the strength of the oil industry lies in complete cooperation in the independent ranks," he said.

heart transplants

EDITOR'S NOTE - It's still a chancy, last-resort operation, and there are fewer heart transplants now than during their heydey in the late 1960s. But one medical center has greatly improved the survival rate, and there are signs of new interest in this surgery. Secon'd of a series.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Willem Van Buuren has had his second heart for more than seven years now and says, at the age of 47, "I expect to go on for another 20 or 25 years." At a time when most cardiac surgeons still feel the results of heart transplants don't justify the costs, No. 1 Barnhill, 660 feet Van Buuren has this message for those whose hearts are damaged beyond repair: "Take it any time you from west lines of section 17-14s-28e, 10 miles east of can; it's your last hope.'

The wave of enthusiasm for heart replacements that followed the first successful transplant in 1967 faded.

But there are signs that the operation may soon make a comeback at certain nyedical centers in this south and 1,980 feet from country, where interest reportedly is stirring anew because of the rising success rate of Stanford University surgeons. The steadily improving survival rates are largely the result of a determined campaign by Stanford doctors against the body's rejection of a Clellan Oil Corp. Nearly four out of five patients are surviving the first year after the operation at Stant'ord — the only institution in the country regularly performing Cato (San Andres) — transplants. Nine years ago, when the program Harvey E. Yates Co., Inc. began, only 22 per cent, or slightly more than one in miles northeast of northwest of Menard, No. 3 Exxon-Federal, five, of the patients survived for a year or more. 117 patients receiving new patients - including Van Buuren, a building section 6-8s-31e, 18 miles estimator from Mill Valley, Calif. - still are alive; northwest of Caprock, four have survived five years or more. Worldwide, 70 patients are living, transplants performed. 'I think the improving results are encouraging surgeons at other institutions to try transplants again," said Dr. Jack Copeland, chief resicient in general surgery at Stanford. In fact, a few days after Copeland made the statement in an interview, doctors at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York placed a donor's heart in the chest of a dying patient. It was the first heart transplant in the city since 1969. Copeland, who is moving to the University of Arizona medical school, said transplant programs may begin by 1979 at Arizona and within one to three years at Downstate Medical Center in Brookly11. section 19-17s-30e, two N.Y. Surgeons from Harvard Medical School, which has a well-funded research program in animal transplants, are very seriously considering human transplants, he said. General Crude No. 34-A

The Stanford surgeons, headed by Dr. Norman Shumway, believe that their operations are justified by the extra years they can offer patients who almost certainly would be dead within a few months. Van Buuren, who was told in 1970 that he had three months to live, says he had no trouble making the decision. He says he now lives a "more or less normal" life, while patients he knew who decided against the transplant are dead. 330 feet from north and There was a flurry of transplants for two or three years after Dr. Christiaan Barnard performed the 17s-29e, three miles west first human heart replacement in Cape Town, South Africa, in December 1967. deaths from heart transplants, but at Stanford some advances have been made on both fronts. Recently, an antiserum from the blood of rabbits has had striking success in preventing rejection. The antiserum suppresses the body's attempts to destroy the foreign heart. In more than 35 patients treated with the antiserum, called Rabbit ATG (antithymocyte globulin), survival for nearly three years has been about 70 per cent, compared with 33 per cent three-year survival for all patients during the nine years of the program.

With Rabbit ATG "there is a smaller number of rejection episodes and a greater interval between the

into the heart's pumping chamber to snip a bit of tissue. Studied under the microscope, the tissue gives early warning when rejection is beginning so that steps to suppress it can begin quickly. There have been six cases lately in which a failing transplanted heart was removed by Stanford surgeons and replaced with another - giving the patient his third heart of his life. Three of the se retransplant patients survived, two of them for more If a transplant renaissance is under way, it has not yet been felt by the prestigious American Heart Association

'Fun' diplomat shows other side in hostage deal

By MARLENE CIMONS The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - Ardeshir Zahedi, Iran's colorful ambassador to the United States, who is fond of saying, "Work is an excuse not to play, showed a tense city the other night that it was a comment he never really

It was the 48-year-old Zahedi, usually portrayed as a bon vivant bachelor, lavish party giver and escort of beautiful women, who, along with the ambassadors from Pakistan and Egypt, helped convince Khalifa Hammaas Abdul Khaalis to abandon his two-day siege and release the 134 hostages held at three different sites in the capital.

It was quite a departure in image for the society-minded Zahedi, who takes great care to encourage his reputation as both a playboy and successful Washington host. But to dismiss him only in those terms would be naive. He knows that the embassy drawing room - with its comfortable, relaxed setting — can often be an extension of the office desk.

"At my parties, it's not unusual for people to casually step into another room to do their business," he said in a 1974 interview. "You can see several people in a night whom it may take three or four days to make ap-pointments with."

And certainly he has used his parties to their greatest advantage. entertaining three or four nights a week, turning his embassy into a fashionable salon for politicians, movie stars, journalists, and business

His guest lists are often sprinkled with Hollywood names, people like Elizabeth Taylor (whom he escorted around town before she married former Secretary of the Navy John Warner), Barbra Streisand, Polly Bergen, Liza Minnelli, Cloris Leachman, Gregory Peck and Kirk for evenings that begin formally with a black tie sit-down dinner, but frequently end in the early morning hours in the "Persian Room," a glittering parlor where guests sit on pillows on the floor and watch undulating belly dancers under a domeshaped ceiling covered with cut-glass and ceramics.

Frequently, an exuberant Zahedi dragging along whatever guests are willing — joins in the gyrations, or moves around the room kissing as many women as he can, exclaiming.

"Yum, yum!" Zahedi has been here since 1973, his second Washington tour as ambassador. He served here previously from 1959-61.

At that time, however, he was married to the Shah's daughter, Princess Shahnaz. They left Washington for London in 1962. He served there as ambassador for four years. They were divorced there in 1964. They have a daughter, The divorce apparently did not affect his relationship with the Shah. "The Shah has been very good and understanding about the whole thing," Zahedi told the Washington Post shortly after he arrived here in

"He doesn't let my relationship with his daughter interfere. I resigned when we divorced, but the Shah wouldn't accept it."

There may be still another reason the Shah regards Zahedi with affection. It was Zahedi who introduced him to his current wife, and mother of his only male heirs, Farah Diba.

Zahedi's arrival created an immediate splash on Embassy Row during what was considered a lifeless social period in Washington. He cultivated a friendly rivalry between himself and the city's other wellknown bachelor diplomat, Alejandro Orfila, then the ambassador from Argentina.

He surprised people by sending them cases of caviar, magnums of champagne and huge bolts of dazzling Iranian fabrics, sometimes as Christmas presents, but often for no reason at all.

He threw parties for his friends when they left office, such as former Secretary of State Kissinger and former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.), as well as for people he hardly knew.

Maury Povich, a former local television personality, fell into the latter category. Zahedi once hosted an elaborate black tie dinner for Povich when his program, an af-ternoon talk show, celebrated its tenth anniversary. Why the party? Povich was asked that night.

He shrugged his shoulders in amazement. "I haven't got the vaguest idea," he said.

Trudeau charges bias

The Washington Post

OTTAWA - The Canadian government has taken the offensive in its campaign against in-dependence for Quebec with charges that the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., the state-owned television and radio system is riddled with separatist sympathizers. Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau and several of his senior Cabinet ministers say Quebec nationalists have quietly taken over Radio. Canada, the French,-language service of CBC, and are systematically distorting news and public affairs programs government of Quebec Premier Rene Leve sque. The allegations have caused a political uproar here because Trudeau and his minister & have so far failed to produce hard evidence to brick up the charges. CBC President A.W. Johnson has, threatened to quit if the government interferes in the network's programs. He said Tuesday finat he was surprised and dismayed by the interisity of the ruling Liberal 'party's attacks.

to favor the separatist

The Quebec govern-ment has in fact been soft pedaling the separ atist issue. Levesque's, separatist Parti Quel secois defeated the pro vincial Liberal government in No vember. But Levesque is playing down his party's commitment to make Quebec an independent r epublic.

Levesque never men-tioned the words separatism or independence in a rambling inaugural speech last week at the opening of the Quebec legislature, known as the National Assembly.

He did say that his government would introduce a bill within several months to hold a provincial referendum on separatism. That vote, to be conducted some time before Levesque's fiveyear mandate runs out, is considered to be the crucial test of whether the 7 million predominantly Frenchspeaking Quebec residents desire independence.

Trudeau and his ministers began their attack on Radio Canada shortly after the November election, and last week Trudeau asked the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commis-sion, the federal communications agency, to conduct an inquiry by Ju-

The agency will receive $467 paillion in federal government subsidies this year and is required by law to promote and protect the national unity.

Trudeau and other Liberal leaders say they have received thousands of complaints from Quebecois about Radio Canada's pro-separatist

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Fans get track crash course

Track is returning to Midland after a six-year absence Friday at Memorial Stadium, and I'm scared to

I can just see it now. The gun goes up for the first race, but nobody notices. Midland track fans are not used to such sights.

The gun fires, and some mother in the stands dies right there on the spot That could be the penalty for a sixyear track void. Fans are not tuned in to track in Midland. Instructions must be given.

When the starter (the man with the gun) fires, he is not trying to kill anyone in the stands or in the starting blocks. He is not out to get your kid. He uses blanks and when he fires, he is just signaling the start of a race.

WHEN A runner crosses a line with a string stretched across the track, fficials are not trying to hang the kid. The string breaks easily, and that signals the end of a race.

One lap around the track is 440 yards and four is a mile, and they have races of varying distances. Using the above example, you can figure out just about what distance each race is. Who cares if you judge the 220-yard dash at 213-yards? That's close enough. You really don't have to worry about all the details because Paul Stueckler, the announcer for the meet, has been practicing at getting the details to the fans. He knows your STUECKLER WILL tell you which race is being run, and the results of that race just in case you can't figure it out yourself. And Don Humphrey, the scorekeeper, says that he will inform me of the results so you can read about it in the paper Saturday morning just in case you miss Stueckler's information. In short, just go out and enjoy the meet because we will take care of you.

The main thing I'm worried about, however, is that the fan has not seen a track meet for so long that he might miss out on some of the enjoyment

What will hurt me is if you miss the joy of watching a Robert Wilson in the mile or a David Skinner and Arthur Pertile in the 880. Don't miss an Alvin Price in the 100 and 220, or a Jamie Berry wipe out the field in the 440 from a standing start.

YOU WILL miss a lot if you don't feel the excitement of a Julie Ochsner in the 100 and 220, or a Gloria Caldwell battle Karen Cloud in the 880. You've been away from the oval too long, but those are going to be great moments. There will be upsets-there always are-and I can't chart those for you. But you'll love it when it happens. I just hope you are close enough to someone who knows about track when and Midland High coach Ed Nixon are excited about the meet, and they want their squads to give you a show-and they will. They have all year. Neither team has won a crown this year, and they probably won't win this one, but they have individuals that can flat put "HAVING A meet at home just has to help our program," Volpe said recently. "It's hard to generate interest among the kids in the lower grades when they never see our high schools run. It should be a big plus for

Nixon feels the same way, "I feel like we've been on the road for six years. How would you feel playing a 50 game schedule on the road with no home games."

Well. I've been on the road for five of the six years with the two local squads, and have grown to love both teams. They are not always long on talent, but Volpe and Nixon get the most out of what they have, and somebody should say so.

I just hope nobody dies when that first gun goes off.

Tall City Relays back after 6-year absence

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Midland's six-year track void will come to an end in Memorial Stadium Friday as the oval revival of the Tall City Relays unfolds with 19 teams in

The Tall City Relays was last held in 1971, and since that time Midland High and Midland Lee thinclads have been pedaling their wares elsewhere. Both schools have been pointing to this week since they will have the first chance in their high school careers to perform before the home crowd.

It all starts Friday at 2 p.m. with the field event finals and the running preliminaries. Friday's finals will have a 6:30 p.m. starting time.

AND IF it's glamour you want, there will be plenty of it Friday with a very attractive six-team varsity field. The San Angelo Bobcats, the favorites to win the District 5-4A meet this year, heads the list, but Amarillo High, which is fresh off a victory in the Amarillo Invitational last weekend, will add strength.

Odessa Permian, which won at Pecos two weeks ago, will join Amarillo Palo Duro, Lee and Midland in the field. San Angelo won the West Texas Relays last week in Odessa. Lee and Midland have not won a meet this year, but they sport some individuals who have given outstanding efforts this year.

The Junior Varsity Division will feature the same teams with the addition of Odessa High, but the new wrinkle this year comes with the Varsity Girls Division.

THE GIRLS feature teams from Odessa High, Permian, Big Spring, Lee, Midland and favorite Odessa Ector. Ector won the West Texas run last week and the Pecos meet two weeks ago, and is strong in just about every event.

There will be classic confrontations to watch for Friday night. You can add up all the team totals you want to, but it's the individual battles that make the difference in a good track battle.

One of those battles will come in the 100-yard dash where Midland's Alvin Price will face Permian's Lyndon Kauk. In a previous race this year Price failed to defeat Kauk. Kauk had a disputed 9.5 while Price had a 9.9, but there wasn't over a step difference. The two will also battle in the 220 where Price has defeated Kauk twice this year.

PRICE OWNS a 22.1, one of the best times in the state, in the 220. Amarillo's Kym Fletcher, a double winner last week, will add fuel to the battle with 10.0 and 22.5 marks in the

One feature race that Lee fans can look forward to is the 880 dash where three Rebels seem to have a personal battle going. David Skinner owns the best time with a 2:01.8, but Arthur Pertile owns a 2:02.4 and Charles Hamilton a 2:03.0. Pertile won at Pecos two weeks ago, but Skinner put forth his best time ever last week while finishing third and ahead of District 5-4A mile champion Robert Wilson of Midland High appears to be in a class by himself in the mile run. but after finishing third with his best career time of 4:25.3 last week, he will be out to improve on that mark. Midland's Pat Darden with a 4:35.5 and Amarillo's Richard Postma with a 4:33.2 and a win last week will make the field interesting.

LEE'S JAMIE Berry, who has back-to-back 52.4s in the 440 dash, is a favorite. Berry runs from a standing start without the use of blocks. He injured his back in Andrews last year and adopted the new style. It seems to have paid off. A big matchup in the 120 high hurdles is also on tap, featuring Amarillo's Mel Fuquay, who has a 14.4; San Angelo's Bill Woodard, 14.9 last week: Permian's Alan Swann. 15.0; San Angelo's Neville Leverette, 15.1; and Lee's Wes Watley, 15.2.

San Angelo's Harold Ledet is a twoevent favorite in the shot put and discus. The senior is over 60-feet in the shot and over 170-feet in the LEVERETTE, WHO won high point honors last week in Odessa, will also carry out a feud with teammate Wes Evans in the 330 hurdles. The Bobcats also have a fine 880 man in Ed Bruning, who ran a 2:01.5 to beat Skinner last week.

Midland track fans will also get a glimpse for the first time of some local girls that have performed well this year. Midland High's Gloria Caldwell is Midland's Alvin Price undefeated in the 880, running her best at 2:33.4 last week. However, she had to come from behind at the wire to defeat Permian's Karen Cloud last week, and Cloud will again be in the Lee's Julie Ochsner, who has run only once this year, owns an 11.6 in the 100 and a 27.1 in the 220. She is a big favorite in both races.

TERRY REYES of Lee owns a 2:37.6 in the 880 and a second place finish this year. Lee's Debra Led-better will be in the high jump along with Midland High's Leslie Sherman, who won at Pecos with a 4-9. Midland High's Celeste Washington is strong in the 100 and 440, her best race, and Wanda Caldwell owns a 28.4 in the 220 The Lee girls have run only once this year after being snowed out of their meet in Amarillo last week. The track fever will continue Saturday when 47 junior high and 9th grade boys and girls teams will compete in the Tall City Junior Prelims begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday with finals slated for a 2 p.m. start. Goddard, San Jacinto, Alamo, Austin and Edison will be the Midland en-

Lee, MHS begin quest

District 5-4A golf play opens Friday morning at Big Spring with the first of five 18-hole rounds that will decide the team and individual champion and both Lee High and Midland embark upon the competition with high hopes.

Midland Lee comes off an impressive win in the Tall City Invitational last week, a 13-team event in which Midland High took third Odessa Permian, a perennial contender, San Angelo, and Abilene Cooper figure to contend with the two Tall City schools for honors.

"I know Cooper hasn't done much so far, but they are dangerous and not to be taken lightly," says Midland High golf Coach Robert Young.

COACH TIM Peden's Rebels have a second at Plainview and another at San Angelo in their pre-district jousting and Lee finished 13th at Austin, a giant 40-team field.

After firsts at Andrews and Big Spring and a third at Abilene last fall. Midland has notched firsts at Del Rio, Andrews, seconds at San Marcos, San Antonio and thirds at Austin and Midland since the new year began.

Young plans to start four seniors (Russ Brown, Shayne Berry, Phil Littlefield, and Kelly Eng) and a junior (Mike Mahan) at Big Spring.

"I know I have some good young players and they are going to make me look foolish at times," says Young, "But I've got to go with my veteran players on the basis of conPeden probably will go with Billy Sitton, Steve Wise, Buddy Geib, Wendell Fallin and Curt Raney, the same crew who won the Tall City.

Finley loses baseball suit to Bowie Kuhn

CHICAGO (AP) - Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley has lost his multimillion-dollar lawsuit against Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, U.S. District Judge Frank McGarr confirmed this morning. McGarr, who heard the case without a jury, confirmed published reports that he had ruled against Finley. The judge said, however, that he would not release the full decision until later in the day.

Finley said he will appeal the decision "Maybe, it's 18 years of blood, sweat and sacrifice down the drain,' the embattled Oakland owner said. "That's the 18 years I've been in baseball.

"Naturally, I'm very disappointed with Judge McGarr's decision. My only hope now is with the appellate court. Other than this I have nothing more to say.'

LOS ANGELES - Here's a question that some sports fans keep ask-

Why doesn't college football have an annual national tournament? The question is sometimes phrased in these two ways? -Every other college game (from basketball and baseball to tennis, golf, soccer, volleyball and even fencing) climaxes its season with a national tournament - as do most pro sports. College football alone relies on the wire service polls to name its

the biggest day in sports each year. Although a college football tournament doubtless would attract as much attention nationally as the pro tournament does, the colleges are still allowing the pros a monopoly in this field.

Several answers to this are advanc-

-The Super Bowl is recognized as ed by critics of the idea: the season is too long now; college football is already over-emphasized; academically, a tournament would be hard on the athletes, who would lose even more time from school; the longer the season, the more injuries; and, finally, there would be strenuous objections from college football's

Underdog Titans try Michigan

"It's like Chuck Wepner fighting Muhammad Ali."

That's the way Detroit Titans' Coach Dick Vitale looks at his school's task tonight as the Titans go up againt top-ranked Michigan in the Mideast Regional of the NCAA basketball tournament

"We're the underdog fighting the large national school," Vitale explained. "They have the million-dollar sports program. And we have not had the athletic heritage—no football program and other programs like they have. They know how to win and know

EVEN THOUGH THE two schools are just 30 miles apart, they have not met since the 1973-74 season and aren't scheduled to clash again this

The game between Michigan, 25-3, and Detroit, 25-3, will be the nightcap of the Mideast Regional doubleheader at Lexington, Ky. In the opener, No. 6 Syracuse, 26-3, plays No. 17 North Carolina-Charlotte, 24-3.

The other three regional semifinals also will be played tonight. In the East Regional at College Park, Md., No. 20 VMI, 26-3, meets No. 3 Kentucky, 25-3, and No. 10 Notre Dame, 21-6, plays No. 5 North Carolina, 25- 4. In the Midwest Regional at Oklahoma City, Vitale conceded Michigan was "very capable of beating us by 20 or 30 points." He did not scout the Michigan workouts, seying, "I'd rather not watch. I'm a nervous wreck already. The Wolverines, led by 6-foot-7 Phil Hubbard and super-quick guard Ricky Green, have won their last seven games. Detroit's key players are John Long, averaging 20.5 points a game, and 6-7 Terry Tyler.

Syracuse, which has won seven straight and 18 of the last 19, has a 6-11 freshman center named Roosevelt Bouie who will be severely tested by NC-Charlotte's Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who averages 22 points and 12 rebounds per game.

Tradition-rich Kentucky will have to be on guard when it plays VMI. "It's a mistake if you don't respect a team like VMI," warned Kentucky Coach Joe Hall. "They can't be overlooked.

Kentucky's two 6-foot-10 stars are ailing, but both are expected to play. Rick Robey is recovering from a bruised heel while Mike Phillips has a sprained right wrist.

TWO FINE forwards will be on display in the Marquette-Kansas State matchup, 6-10 senior Bo Ellis of Marquette and 6-5 freshman Curtis Redding of Kansas State.

Run-and-gun Nevada-Las Vegas will be looking to avenge an earlyseason 100-96 loss to Utah in the opener of the West Regionals.

Utah Coach Jerry Pimm knows he'll have a tough time repeating the earlier verdict, as Nevada-Las Vegas looked very impressive in its 121-95 first-round win over San Francisco. 'People have been offering condolences," Pimm said. "Everyone who saw that win over San Franciso knows the fix I'm in

The UCLA Bruins, aiming for their 11th title in the past 14 years, have been warned by Coach Gene Bartow not to take Idaho State lightly. "They have big guys who can shoot the ball and play the game," Bartow said, particularly referring to 7- foot center Steve Hayes.

Idaho State Coach Jim Killingsworth looks at UCLA this way: They're no different from any team with 12 All-Americans on it."

U.S., Canadian teams ready for exhibitions

The American and Canadian national women's volleyball teams open a two night stand in the Tall City tonight at 8 p.m. in the Lee gymnasium. Both arrived early Wednesday morning by plane and got in extensive workouts at the Midland gym afternoon.

The two teams have already played a series of exhibition matches this past week in Dallas and Houston as they prepare for the NORCECA tournament in Santo Domingo, April 24 through 30. The NORCECA tourney is a qualifying event for the World Championships to be held in Moscow in 1978

Tickets for tonight's contest will be available at the gym. $3 for adults and $2 for students.

The teams conclude their exhibition engagement in Midland Friday night in the Lee year-end establishment (the promoters of the many bowl games and their friends at CBS, NBC and ABC).

THOSE WHO favor the tournament idea concede an accommodation would have to be worked out with the bowl-game people. But the other objections, they say, are invalid.

They have been rendered invalid in a four-year experiment by the National Collegiate Athletic Assn., which, doing business as the NCAA, has been authorizing a national college football tournament since 1973 for its Division II schools.

In the NCAA, Division I includes USC, UCLA, Notre Dame and 100-odd colleges of Division II, including the 1976 champion, Montana State, and runnerup, Akron.

As administered for the last four years, Division II's three-week football tournament has involved the nation's eight top teams as ranked by the wire services. Those who believe in extending the idea to Division I have come up with a couple of conclusions:

1 - The idea is workable in a Division I campus environment. It would be as successful at Cal or Nebraska as it has been at Northern Michigan or South Dakota State, where the campus academic communities haven't complained.

2 - Nationally, a Division I tournament would be extremely popular with the football public, raising millions in increased television revenue. (This winter the Super Bowl generated $5.5 million in TV and gate receipts, more than twice as much as any college bowl.) The financial pinch is acute today at most colleges and getting worse - especially in the athletic departments, which could use the shared receipts from a College Super Bowl

IT IS because there is a financial problem everywhere that the notion of a national tournament is getting a wider hearing this winter.

Commenting the other day, Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles said: "If we're going to have bowl games we might as well have a tournament. The difference is that a tournament would mean more.

Broyles said that to fear overemphasis in a season-ending football tournament is to fear a "myth.

The same note was sounded by a Division II football coach, Sonny Holland of Montana State's national champions.

"A tournament doesn't mean overemphasis in any other sport," Holland said, "and a football tournament certainly doesn't mean overemphasis at Montana State. During the weeks we were practicing and playing tournament games last fall, there was no change academically for our players. They attended the same number of classes and did as well academically as ever. And one of the professors objected. School went on as usual.

HOLLAND IS a big ex-football player who looks like a Montana cowboy and speaks carefully in measured sentences. He was interviewed in Kansas City at the NCAA's recent Football '77 Roundtable for nine college football coaches and 40 writers, where, speaking as the only

"We play a 10-game schedule at Montana State, so with the playoffs that's 13 games. Five years ago when I first looked at that possibility it seemed unbelievable. But when you get into it you enjoy it. When you're winning you could play 15, 16 or any number of football games.'

Did the players enjoy all that extra practice as much as the coaches?

"Well," said Holland, "I'll tell you about that. In the playoffs we're limited to a 45-man traveling squad, but at Montana State last season we had 79 players out for football. That's 35 potential disgruntled guys who were not going to make the big trips but every last one of them came out to practice every day. They wanted to help us win. And we won because of them.

It has been said that a Division I football tournament would take too many student athletes out of the classroom too long. Critics of the idea say the players miss too many classes already. Did Montana State have that problem?

"NOT ON the football team. I don't care how many football games you play, the guys don't have to miss any classes except maybe one or two Friday afternoons. If you're talking about that kind of overemphasis, you're talking about the basketball teams. Those are the athletes who miss a lot of school - three or four days at a time. But in football, if an Ohio team has a game on the West Coast, it can leave Ohio at noon Friday and easily get back for the first class Monday morning

Does a longer season mean more in-

"No, there have been fewer injuries, if anything. The better conditioned a team is, the fewer injuries, and a well-coached team is in better condition at the end of the season than it is at the beginning.'

At some universities, a football tournament would subject the players to a lot of extra media pressure. Do you think that's a negative to the tournament idea?

"Offhand, I'd say talking to the press would be an educational experience for the student. But at Bozeman (site of Montana State) we don't know much about all that. We have one sportswriter in Bozeman, and aside from him the nearest one is 100 miles away. We've had so little media exposure that one of our players got into hot water after our championship game last year. In the locker room, on national TV, he was asked the difference between playing eight-man football in high school and 11-man in college. He said: 'In eightman, you just get out there and run your ass-off.' We got two letters from ministers in Oklahoma and South Carolina.

At Montana State, did you see any objections to a long football tourna ment?

"Yes, the weather. It was 17 above for one game at home and 4 below the next week in North Dakota. Most Division I teams play in nice sunny bowls.

What was the weather like when you left Bozeman this week?

"It was clear and still." What do you mean?

"The snow was clear up to my rear

Foreman pits power against foe's finesse

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) - George Foreman pits his power against the finesse of Jimmy Young tonight in a scheduled 12-round heavyweight fight in which poise could prove to be the winning ingredient.

Young's style is to frustrate an opponent by slipping and moving and

"I gurantee that before the end of the third round you're going to hear some boos because George Foreman is going to lose his head. He's going to get frustrated and do something There are boxing people who feel frustration hurt Foreman as much as

Muhammad Ali's punches when Big George lost the title on an eighthround knockout in Africa in 1974. But trainer Gil Clancy feels Foreman is a better and cooler fighter

A victory would keep alive Foreman's hopes of a rich rematch with Ali.

An upset win would improve Young's stature but would not necessarily earn him a rematch with Ali, whom he frustrated while losing a disputed 15-round decision in a rather dull fight last year.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) - The phenomena that has seen young players coming from obscurity to a position of dominance on the pro golf tour will come to an end this week, Johnny Miller predicts.

"There's no way you can just go out there cruising every day," Miller said of the very difficult 7,174-yard, par-72 Sawgrass course that is being played for the first time in the $300,000 Tournament Players Championship that got underway today.

Jack Tuthill, chief of the Tour's officials, described the course as 'extremely difficult but fair. It may be the toughest course we play. It's a thinking man's course. When you're out there you'd better know what you're about."

Hubert Green agreed. "The winner this week is going to be some guy you've heard of before," he

And that man, said Miller, probably will be Jack Nicklaus, the defending champion in the ambitious event that ranks as the annual championship of the touring players.

AUSTIN—The swimming season's final curtain will fall here Friday and Saturday for Midland High and Lee at the University of Texas pool as the AAAA State Swimming and Diving Meet gathers in the state's best competitors.

Midland High will carry 10 individuals to the state run while Lee will have nine. The two Midland schools always seem to have a strong contingent for the state meet.

Houston Memorial, San Antonio Alamo Heights, Clear Lake and San Antonio Churchill, however, appear to be the top teams in the boys division while Richardson, Houston Memorial and Clear Creek will be strong in the girls division.

WENDY WILLIAMS will carry the major burden of the Lee girls. She will compete in the 200 meter freestyle and 500 freestyle as well as swimming a leg on the medley relay team. Williams best time in the 200 freestyle is 1:58.90, and she owns a 5:22.41 in the 500 free. Susan Murrah, Lori Snook and Susan Swendig will join Williams in the medley relay. They own a 2:00.95 qualifying time. Brigette Coon heads the list of Midland High girls. She will also be in three events. Coon owns a 2:20 in the 200 individual medley and a 1:14 in the 100 breaststroke. She will be in both

MISS COON will join Kelly Dowdle, Morgan Kennedy, and Joan Salman in the freestyle relay. The team owns a 3:59 time this year.

Nancy Hudson will give the Pack added depth by entering the diving The Midland High boys will also have five entrants. Sid Glenn leads the charge with two individual races and a relay. Glenn owns a 1:48 in the 200 freestyle and a 4:54 in the 500

Travis Dillon will be in the 50 freestyle with a time of 22.9, and Pat White is another strong diver. GLENN AND Dillon will team with Hal Rasmussen and Clay Spears in the free relay. The team owns a 3:23 this year. The Lee boys will be paced by Bob Franz, who is entered in two individual races and a relay.

Franz owns a 22.54 in the 50 freestyle and a 50.41 in the 100 freestyle. Curt Buthman will be in the 100 backstroke with a qualifying time of 58.04.

Franz will team with Kerry Stewart, Mike Solari and Stewart Sutton in the 400 freestyle relay. They own a 3:22.52 from the regionals.

BATTLE SCENE

Can anyone win in NCAA?

BY TED BATTLES

Arkansas needn't feel discouraged after losing to Wake Forest in the first round, if eight regional teams on view over the weekend were any indication.

The Razorbacks won't win the NCAA title, but then maybe no one else will either. More likely than a winner, a survivor will remain, the teams were that unimpressive.

Las Vegas-Nevada, which didn't risk its image on area tv, must have been impressive in dismembering San Francisco, which masqueraded for a couple of months as the nation's No. 1 team and was prematurely hailed as the team the Dons' fan have been waiting for since Bill Russell became a pro.

THE ONLY reservation about Las Vegas-and where did they ever get a nickname like the Rebels?-is what will happen when someone makes them play both ends of the court. There is no question that the Croupiers, to coin our own nickname, know where the basket is and what it is there for.

Regardless of who wins, it will not ease the heartache and bitterness for Arkansas, which wasn't alone in the Southwest Conference in believing this was the year and the team to shuck the SWC's football-only reputation.

"The writers in the east are going to think we're just another SWC team. We know we're as good as those ACC (Atlantic Coast Conference) teams.' says Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. Sutton added he did not think Wake Forest was as good as Houston, a team the Razorbacks beat three

"I THINK we're a better basketball team than Wake. If we played them

more than they would beat us."
Sutton said, "I was upset with the officiating, but I want to emphasize that it wasn't officiating that beat us. We beat ourselves.'

Wake Forest went to the press after trailing by 13 at half and by as many as seven with under five minutes left to pull it out.

From Wake Forest's viewpoint, "We really felt if we could get it down to 10 points (after trailing by 13 at half) we had a chance to win," said

Coach Carl Tacy.
"We watched films and we didn't think they were really good ball handlers and that's why we thought we could press them," said Guard Jerry Schllenberg, who wound up as the Deacons' hero with four steals and 12 and of his 17 points in the second

"WE WERE just standing around on offense in the first half."

Sutton may have a point that Arkansas is as good as the teams in the ACC. And maybe Arkansas would have played as good a game as Sutton talks, if the Razorbacks had been a member of the ACC.

The difference Saturday, in other words, may have been the fact that Wake Forest played in the ACC and Arkansas played in the SWC. Except for a couple of close calls, Arkansas breezed through the SWC undefeated and really untested.

For Wake Forest, every conference game was a battle for survival. Every game was close and the Deacons were no stranger to pressure. And as for that 13-point lead, Wake Forest had been down in the second half by 17 to North Carolina State, 13 to Clemson and 15 to North Carolina-Charlotte and come back to win.

When you come right down to it, there's no substitution for good competition.

TV indicts violence in hockey

By FRANK BROWN AP Sports Writer "As far as I remember, (Boston's Dave) Forbes and (Minnesota's Henry) Boucha got into a fight on the ice and when they went to the penalty box. Forbes said he would get him. When they came out, they went at it again and Forbes hit him above the eye with the butt end of his stick. "None of us wanted him (Forbes) suspended for life. We thought it was up to the National Hockey League to discipline him. Isn't that what (NHL President) Clarence Campbell gets paid $100,000 for? It's a high class league and hockey shouldn't be dragged into the courts." — Bill Goldsworthy of the New York Rangers, who played for the Minnesota North Stars when the incident took place in January, 1974 and became the first incident in pro sports to be prosecuted in court. NEW YORK (AP) - "The Deadliest Season," television's strongest indictment of pro hockey, put the game on trial in living rooms across the United States.

The two-hour special, aired Wednesday night on CBS, examined the psychology of violence in the sport and questioned its origins. Does American society, which watches violence on TV programs and news shows, promote physical outbursts on the ice? Do team owners insist on this kind of play to maximize profits in a financially troubled endeavor? Or are teams simply trying to copy the brawling style which brought notoriety and a Stanley Cup to the National Hockey League's Philadelphia

THE JURY still is out. It may never return a verdict. With the help of technical advisor Ned Dowd, a hockey player whose services were used in the making of the movie "Slap Shot," the film's creators painted a fairly accurate picture of life in the pro sport:

-Some pro hockey players do practice boxing to improve their on-ice fighting abilities.

-Players and coaches do argue; in fact, one such argument resulted in a broken nose for the coach.

-The film's key scene was accurately portrayed. It appeared to combine the more sinister aspects of the Forbes-Boucha incident with others including ones which ended in trials for Dan Maloney of the Detroit Red Wings and Rick Jodzio of the World Hockey Association's Calgary

The technical inaccuracies which diminished the film's impact need not be discussed, since a form of poetic license must be permitted in any portrayal.

So essentially, the question that must be answered is: Is what happened in the film what really goes on? Is this what fans pay their money to

THE INDICATION from the film was "Yes," but the indication from NHL attendance figures is an overwhelming "No." Attendance is down, and league dollar losses are about $15 million.

After Boucha was hit by Forbes' stick, he suffered eye damage which forced him out of hockey. He said by telephone Wednesday night that his vision has deteriorated since and that he is about to become a travel agent in Seattle. Forbes, whose trial ended in a hung jury, still plays for the Bruins.

"There are always two sides to a claim," Boucha said Wednesday night. "They have their feelings and I have mine. Everybody has a point of

One point of view is that intimidation is not unique to pro hockey. In baseball, a pitcher brushes a batter back from the plate to keep him honest, make him think. In football, more than a few defensive linemen have admitted giving a quarterback an extra-hard shot, just to remind him they are not playing for fun. Basketball, too, has legislated its own disciplines against outbreaks of fights and violence.

BUT THOSE matters have not been prosecuted, leaving hockey alone under public and legal scrutiny. Whether that is just cannot be legislated here.

However, when a national audience sees a hockey player awarded a "Ball and Chain Award" by the fans for his high total of penalty minutes, a denigrating and unnecessary joke is made. No one will dispute that there are players in hockey who have survived in the major leagues on brute force and little talent, but that was going too far.

The film, over-all, did not go too far. It blamed everyone- the fans, the owners, the media-for the situation in which hockey has been placed. It could not pronounce guilt any more than the juries could in the incidents which took place in real life.

Yet while accusing owners of using hockey violence to sell the sport, CBS used hockey violence to sell a movie. It would seem the sport has been shamed enough.

U.S. Senate leaves newcomer bewildered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward Zorinsky is puzzled by all the fuss stirred up when he said he'd rather be in Omaha than in the United States

"It must be unique back here for anybody to say what they think," said the new senator from Nebraska.

Looking back on the flap during an interview in his office, Zorinsky said many other senators have told him they too, are frustrated by the job, but few have ever sounded off about it publicly.

What touched off Zorinsky's comment was his frustration over the time senators spend agonizing over trivia, such as whether or not they ought to start paying for the haircuts they've been getting free in the Senate barber shop.

"I know of a den mother of a Cub Scout pack that could have resolved the barber shop issue in five minutes," said Zorinsky.

A former mayor of Omaha, Zorinsky was growing more and more frustrated with life as a senator when a reporter from back home called and asked how he liked the job.

"I told him." Among other things, Zorinsky said he'd been on the verge of resigning from the Senate but his wife talked him out of it. His comments made Zorinsky an instant celebrity.

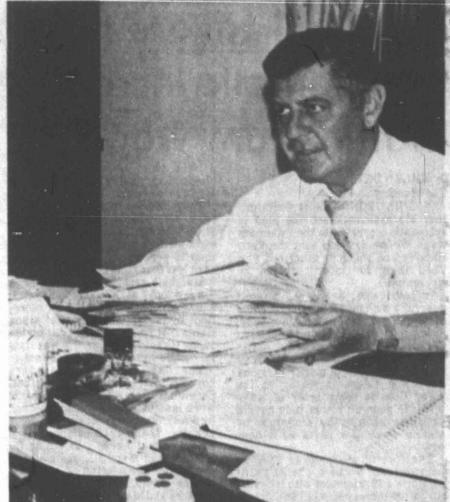

He's been interviewed by Barbara Walters and has appeared on all the television network morning news shows. He's answered more questions on radio talk shows than Jinamy Carter. Every day brings another pile

"I've yet to receive one negative piece of mail," Zorinsky said. How do other senators feel about Zorinsky's blast at how the institution works - or doesn't work?

"Numerous senators have come up and expressed the fact they have the same feelings, some of them when they first got into office, some of them to this day," he said.
When Zorinsky talked about changes he'd like to see take place in the Senate, the most drastic involve getting his colleagues to talk less and do more.

"During the energy crisis, I saw senator after senator rise to their feet and give speeches about how symipathetic they are to people who are cold, that are out of jobs because they had to shut industries and businesses down," he said.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky works in his office.

of automatic increases in minimum wage

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Labor Secretary Ray Marshall endorsed the idea of automatic increases in the minimum wage Wednesday and said the Taft-Hartley Act, which he described as a "bad thing for labor," should be streamlined.

In both cases, he aligned himself generally with major legislative goals of organized labor for this year, although he did not commit himself to the specifics of either idea.

On the minimum wage, Marshall said he sees "a lot of merit" in trying automatic future increases in the wage floor to some index of wage levels in general, rather than having Congress change the minimum by statute every few years as it does

The curernt minimum is $2.30 an hour for most workers. The AFL-CIO supports a $3 minimum with indexing for future increases. A bill now before Congress, which was attacked Tuesday by a spokesman for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce as a threat to economic recovery, would set the minimum at 55 per cent of average manufacturing wages this year and 60 per cent thereafter. This would work out to $2.85 this year and an estimated $3.04 next year.

At a breakfast question-and-answer session with reporters, Marshall said the minimum wage has been lagging increasingly behind living costs in recent years.

Indexing would help keep the minimum wage abreast of living costs, he added, and avoid "legislative conflict" every time an increase is needed.

The minimum wage was last changed in 1974 when it was raised from $1.60 to $2.30 in a series of steps. An estimated 10 million workers, more than 10 per cent of work force, now earn less than $3 an hour.

Marshall said it was time for a "major look" at the Taft-Hartley Act, which was passed in 1947 over objections by labor that it curtailed many rights that unions had won during the 1930s. He said he believed it was time for "some streamlining," of the act.

The law outlawed secondary boycotts and jurisdictional strikes, permitted states to enact right-towork laws outlawing union shops and imposed other restrictions on union activity. "I think, on balance, you'd have to say it's been a bad thing for labor," said Marshall, especially in organizing and negotiating contracts in the South, among agricultural workers and in low-paid trades.

Marshall indicated he favored efforts to curb delays in union representation elections and contract negotiations but said he wasn't sure how much could be done through administrative action rather than legislation.

While "there does seem to be some need for change," he said, "I don't know if I'd call it drastic." But then he said that he doesn't consider repeal of Section 14(b), which permits right-towork laws now in effect in 20 states, to be a "major" change - a point disputed by conservative groups that are already mounting a massive campaign to save 14(b).

Califano picks Fordham to be assistant secretary

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Dr. Christopher C. Fordham III, head of the University of North Carolina Medical School at Chapel Hill, is scheduled to become assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare for health.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. has chosen Fordham after a search in which three prominent

They were Dr. David Hamburg, head of the Institute of Medicine at the National Academy of Sciences here; Dr. Charles Sandler, director of Massachusetts General Hospital; and Dr. William Roy, former Democratic representative from Kansas.

All gave personal reasons for declining, but two said privately that they were concerned because Califano had already made so many health decisions himself that he had reduced the job's scope.

Califano has dismissed the previous health chief, Dr. Theodore Cooper, and several subordinate agency heads. He has announced that he was keeping Dr. Donald Fredrickson as head of the National Institutes of Health, asked Dr. David Sencer, head of the Center for Disease Control, to resign; and named Dr. Donald Kennedy head of the Food and Drug Administration. He has thus made many of the new decisions a new assistant secretary might ordinarily

He also announced that he is putting Medicare and Medicaid under a unified administration along with medical quality control functions now under the assistant secretary for health. He promised to give the assistant secretary a strong policy voice in all health decisions.

But some persons in the health field think one problem in American health care has been the severely divided responsibility inside HEW, with no one in charge of health as a whole except for an often overburdened

"I withdrew my name for family reasons," Roy, now head of obstetrics and gynecology at St. Francis Hospital in Topeka, Kan., said Wednesday. "But I hope all health is eventually put under one head."

Fordham, 50, is a Harvard Medical School graduate who served a 1951-52 internship at Georgetown University Hospital. He joined the University of North Carolina medical faculty in 1954, served as medical vice president of the Medical College of Georgia from 1969 to 1971, then returned to North Carolnia as medical deam,

Marshall favors idea Hanafi victim recalls experience

WASHINGTON - Robert Pierce will always remember the shotgun blast, fired in an apparent moment of panic during the Hanafi Muslim takeover of the District Building last

It left the 51-year-old retired State Department worker, who is now studying law, paralyzed from the lower back down. His right arm is shattered and useless, 3 inches shorter than the Mack Cantrell, a 45-year-old District Building guard, now is pla gued by headaches. He will always have the scar next to his left eye and behind the left ear to remind him of the shotgun pellet that traveled that route between skin and skull, leaving le ad fragments as it passed through.

Wesley Hymes, 30, may some day recover the use of his left hand, if surgeons in numerous operations can repair the damage inflicted by a machete-wielding Hanafi at the B'nai H'rith building.

Doctors expect Alton Kirkland to make a full recovery. But he will always be reminded of the hours of horror in the B'nai B'rith building by the machete scar on his left thigh and near his left shoulder blade, and by the foot-long surgical scar up the midline of his abdomen.

Hymes has been discharged from George Washington University Hospital and now is recovering from his wounds and awaiting the next operation

Cantrell is still in the hospital for rest and observation. Pierce still is hospitalized listed in fair condition Kirkland is in good condition, good enough to talk to a reporter Wednesday.

If the 21-year-old furniture mover is correct, one man was basically responsible for the injuries at the B'nai B'rith building.
"The dude was like an animal,"

Kirkland said, sitting on the edge of his hospital bed. "The dude was like an animal. Everybody that got busted up or mained in some way, he was in-

"I feel to the floor and just lay there" after being stabbed with a machete in the left thigh and back, Kirkland recalled, "and then he kick-ed me. Then he pulled a gun and stuck it to my head.

"Then the other guy with him said. 'If you shoot, I'll kill you.' So then the dude eased off ... He was a real animal. He didn't care. He just didn't seem to care. Every time I saw him. one of them was always calming him down, telling him not to hurt somebody or pulling him off."

The work day began for Alton Kirkland at 9 a.m., as it has every day he has worked at B'nai B'rith since September. Late in the morning he was cleaning out a closet on the seventh floor.

"One of the ladies got a call from downstairs that there were gunmen downstairs who had taken over the building," he said. "There were three men other than myself and nine women. We all locked ourselves in one office. But before that, me being nosey, I had to see if it was for real or somebody was playing games.

"I went down the back steps to the fifth floor, and I heard shooting and saw smoke. When I looked in, I saw a guy with a stocking cap on and he had another guy by the shoulder, and he looked around and saw me and pointed his pistol at me and said 'Hold it!' and I dashed up the steps.

"I told the rest of the people up there what I'd just seen and experienced, and that's when we secured ourselves inside the office.

About 15 to 20 minutes passed. Kirkland said, during which the workers in the office talked quietly among themselves and tried to cheer each other up. Then came the knock on the door.

"Open up in there! Open up in there!' They said, 'We've got this building. Open up!' "Kirkland said. "Then, when nobody answered, they kicked the door in.

Housewife

"I was standing by the door, and I was the first one they saw. He said, 'Ah ha! Why didn't you open the door, mother ...? Why didn't you open the door? Get out there and lay on the Kirkland said he and the other captives lay on the floor, and he was then ordered to kick in another door for the Hanafis.

"I kicked the door in and there was nobody there, and then after this was when the guy pulled out a knife and hit me in the leg right there ..." He pulled back the leg of his pajama shorts to reveal a large bandage on his thigh. 'When I went to grab my leg, he stabbed me in the back.

"I was just scared." recalled Kirkland. "I knew where I'd been hit, and I knew I was losing a lot of blood. I was scared I was going to die.

'Don't lose consciousness,' said he told himself. "I was getting faint and it was hard to breath on the concrete floor.

Kirkland credits the fact that he is still alive to a "middle-aged white lady" whose name he can't recall. The woman placed a tourniquet on his leg and tried to close the back wound She also, he said, convinced the Hanafis that Kirkland would die if not

After riding up and down in the building's elevator, Kirkland found himself on the ground floor, where, he says, the police at first thought he might be booby-trapped and carefully checked his body before removing him from the elevator.

By the time Kirkland arrived at George Washington Hospital, he had no pulse. "He required 16 pints of blood over the course of 2 operations," said Dr. Glen Geelhoed, the surgeon who operated on Kirkland. 'The body holds 10 pints."

Geelhoed and his team removed Kirkland's punctured spleen, closed a tear in his diaphragm, repaired several branches of his femoral artery in his thigh and closed cuts in his stomach and liver.

August we begin harvesting field-by-field when the corn is at the right stage of maturity, rich golden color and flavor for satisfying eating.

FROM FIELD TO CAN IN THREE HOURS

corn at a roadside stand, you try to find ears that were "picked the same day". You know they will be at their best. We're even more particular we strive to can our corn within three hours of picking!

YOU KNOW IT'S GOOD IF IT'S ARMOUR 12

the face value of this coulon, plus 56 for handling, provided that you and the consumer have complied with the terms of our coispon offer. This coupon is good only when redeemed by you from a consumer at time. Our Darling Corn, P.O. Box 1138.

America's canning industry was still young when we began learning about quality corn. We built our plants right beside the cornfields in the heartland of America-world-famous as the Corn Belt. There, for nearly 100 years, we've been doing everything we know how to bring you the best corn in the world.

Market suffers setback

stock market's week-long rally suffered a moderate setback today.
The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than 25 points in the last five sessions, was down 5.07 at 962.93 at noontime today.

Losers held a 3-2 edge on gainers among New York Slock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that traders had begun to grow cautious Wednesday about "chasing" the recent up-swing in stock prices. That wariness seemed to intensify when Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal warned this morning that the current economic recovery lacked any strong upsurge in capital investment by businesses.

Asarco was the most active NYSE issue, up 16 at 20%. A 200,000-share block traded at 20%.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .19 to 55.31 On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .06 at 112.33. Volume on the Big Board was a moderate 9.09 million shares over the first two hours, down from 9.28 million in the comparable period on Wednesday. Cummins Engine fell 2 to 49%. The company announced plans to offer about $30 million worth of new

Dallasite dreams of 'inner city'

By TOM DeCOLA

DALLAS (AP) — "Inner city" provokes images of squalor and crime, jammed-together dwellings and people circled in a seedy wagon train against the glittering nearby skyscrapers.
But Dallas homebuilder Davis Fox conjures up a different picture - one of pleasant homes in suburban ambience, and of executives strolling leisurely to work in nearby office buildings.

Dallas doesn't have — in classic terms — an "inner city," but the area about a mile and a half east of downtown comes close. It is this area — a hodgepodge of car lots, vacant lots, a few apartment houses and fewer single-family dwellings - where Fox is concentrating his new pro-The president of Fox & Jacobs began acquiring property in the area three years ago at a tedious pace. Because the 360 pieces of property in the area have 300 owners, land acquisition has netted Fox on-ly 30 of the 70 acres he feels are necessary for the pro-

"We're still optimistic," Fox said. "But if we don't have the land to start building sometime in 1978, then we'll just forget about it."

Fox is convinced there is a market for homes in the $40,000-$80,000 price range that are close to the city's work center downtown. He admits a lot of his colleagues think he's wrong.

The City of Dallas would like to see Fox succeed:
City fathers would like so much to see such a proect, they've entered into an agreement wherein the city would buy back the land from Fox should things fall through. If the project works, Fox keeps the land and pays a penalty.

"We sure would like to pay that penalty." Fox said.

The city's offer was not tailor-made for Fox, but was intended to entice a builder into a downtown restoration. One of the preconditions was that such a project be within two miles of what is considered the heart of downtown.

"Our conception is that it's where people want to Fox said. "The option just hasn't been

Because of the length of time involved and the uncertainties of the economy and other factors, the planned homes can be described only in the broadest terms.

They will number 600-1,000 and will cost from $40,000 to $80,000. Chances are they will have no more than three bedrooms. They will have small, perhaps enclosed yards and will be designed to keep maintenance at a minimum. There will be no extraordinary security measures ("We don't want to build a 'walled city'," Fox said) because of their proximity to downtown. "We want to build a compact little jewel," Fox

Fox cited a "regeneration of interest" in the downtown area, including a new hotel-plaza complex and a civic square. "The odds are still tough...but there's more happening downtown now," he said.

Despite the long and involved process and the lifted eyebrows of some others in the business, Fox said the operation has been "fun." "We're not trying to prove anything to anybody," Fox said. "I'm more convinced (of the project's success) now than when we started." He is quick to point out that while he currently serves as chairman of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, the project was begun before he was chamber official.

"There will be no condemnations or exercising of eminent domain rights," Fox said. "We'd drop

Although Fox said his concept of a compact home parallels the current switch to smaller cars, the obvious energy-saving potential of living close to the job was "not an overriding concern."

Several people are watching with interest, and Fox acknowledges inquiries about the project from other

If it works, Fox will sell from $40 to $60 million worth of houses. If it doesn't work, he'll be surprised.

Committee keeps tax breaks alive

By PETER MILIUS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Senate Finance Committee voted unanimously Wednesday to keep alive for an extra year two tax breaks Congress supposedly killed last fall, one affecting sick pay and the other covering income earned abroad. The committee also agreed on a tax cut for business that is a compromise between what

President Carter proposed in January and what the House approved last week. Under the compromise, mainly the work of Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr. (D-Tex.), businesses would have a choice between two credits or reductions in taxes owed for the next two years - an increased investment credit for buying new machinery, or a new employment credit for hiring additional workers. Carter is pressing for the higher investment credit, which many of the nation's larger, more capitalintensive corporations also want, but the House approved an employment credit instead.

The Finance Committee is voting on the tax-cut legislation Carter proposed to pep up the economy. The committee put off until Thursday decisions on the individual tax cuts the President recommended, including the $8.6 billion he wants to send out this spring in $50-per-person rebates of 1976 income taxes.

Many in Congress doubt the rebate will do the economy much good, and a Republican proposal to replace it with a "permanent" tax cut barely lost in the House last week, 219 to 194. There is a similar lack of enthusiasm for the rebate on the Finance Committee, and Republicans there will also propose a permanent tax cut as an alternative. But yesterday's betting was that the rebate will narrowly survive.

The provisions affecting sick pay and income earned abroad were part of last year's tax "reform" legislation, approved in late fall.

Previous law had allowed taxpayers to exclude or deduct from taxable income up to $100 a week or $5,200 a year in sick pay if they were absent from work a sufficient length of time because of illness or

The reform legislation narrowed this exclusion, saying it could only be taken by taxpayers who were under 65, permanently and totally disabled and in the lower and middle income brackets. To help hit the revenue-raising target Congress had set for tax reform, this change in the law was made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1976. That retroactive effective date added to the outcry that always accompanies loss of a tax break, and the congressional budget committees have since relented a little so the effective date could be moved to Jan. 1 of this year. That is what the Finance Committee voted to do.
