Question Box

This week's question: "DO YOU THINK THE U. S. SHOULD MAINTAIN A LARGE ARMY AND NAVY AFTER THIS WAR IS OVER?"

O. M. COLE: "Well, that has been my opinion, even before this war ever started. We need more power to back up our opinion in world peace and coming events."

DR. WM. J. SWANN: "I've been wanting one (large army and navy all time."

HOMER PEARCE: "Yes, I do. I don't think we'd had this war if we'd had a large army and navy."

SETH BAILEY: "Yeah, I believe we should."

RUFUS FOSTER: "I don't know."

WILL ATKINSON: "Oh I don't know--it depends--I couldn't say. My opinion is unless they get things different we will have to keep a large army and navy to keep 'em off of us".

INVASION!

PARACHUTE TROOPS SEE ACTION!

U. S. Parachutists float earthward from troop carrying planes as an effective means of landing behind enemy lines and disrupting his communications. This scene was repeated many times as the invasion got under way.

INVASION MAP

Invasion moves as depicted on the map above were planned to isolate German troops in fortified zones according to forecasts by military experts. How close those forecasts came to being right is now indicated by the actual invasion.

GAS WON'T STOP THEM

Allied troops are equipped for gas attacks. The job of making gas masks was speeded up by the use of gypsum cements, which have been used widely to make patterns and models for many vital war materials.

"GOING TO THE MAT" IN EUROPE

British sappers, above, are laying a piece of "portable highway" to permit safe passage for transports and tanks as they land on European shores. Bundles of steel landing mats are unloaded from ship to shore, to form highways to speed men, munitions and guns to the front line fighting. Landing fields are quickly completed this simple way, too. Steel mats, many of which are made by United States Gypsum Company, are one of the innovations of this war. When the war ends this USG production will be returned to metal lath, used widely with gypsum plaster to add fire-safety and beauty to walls and ceilings.

To the People of this Community

There are many urgent reasons for buying War Bonds. First, the invasion needs money. Bonds pay for planes and guns with which to beat the Axis. Our fighting men must have the best possible equipment and it is up to us to let our money provide this.

A second reason is this: There is a shortage of goods now. Later on there will be plenty for civilian desires. Money put into War Bonds now will be available then. Business opportunities will be open then, too, and the "nest egg" saved now may hatch out commercially then. Money put into War Bonds now will be deprived of its current potentiality as a part of the causes of inflation. You will be doing your part toward stabilizing the money situation by buying Bonds instead of dwindling stocks. That is a third reason.

But the best reason from a selfish viewpoint is this: Right now there is no better investment than War Bonds. There is no safer repository for your money. By buying Bonds you become a stockholder in the strongest "going" concern in the world today, the United States of America.

Sometimes the week's ironing tires me and makes me sore and stiff. Then it's ALKA-SELTZER to the rescue—a tablet or two and a little rest makes me feel more like finishing the job.

And when I eat "not wisely but too well," ALKA-SELTZER relieves the Acid indigestion that so often follows.

Yes, Alka-Seltzer brightens my day. It brings relief from so many of my discomforts, that I always keep it handy.

Why don't you get a package of ALKA-SELTZER at your drug store today?

The Strongest of Bonds—Your Dad and Your Country, Is the Slogan of Father's Day, June 18—Buy Bonds

WASHINGTON, D. C.—June 00—Father's Day which falls on June 18th, 1944, will be a different kind of celebration of this event than in days before the war. This year finds American fathers away from home and family and by hundreds of thousands in uniforms of the Armed Services of our country. Many fathers are overseas. So this year's Father's Day is America's "Salute to our Fighting Dads". The National Father's Day Committee, in conjunction with the United States Treasury, is conducting a gigantic Father Bond Drive. There is an earnest and all-abiding awareness to push on to victory in the observance of this year's Father's Day. And every move being planned for the event is keyed to that Pictured here is Ted R. Gamble, National Director of the Treasury's War Finance Division, and his son, Ted R., Jr. The youngster is pinning a Father's Day rosette in his dad's coat lapel. The rosettes are made up of War Stamps. Girl Scouts and others will sell the rosettes on Father's Day, June 18.

Buy a Bond for Father's Day." Father himself, needs no reminding and will take note of the holiday created in his honor by himself buying bonds for Father's Day. The family is being urged to remember Dad—with War Bonds. The nation is being asked to wear the Father Rosette, a floral decoration made of War Stamps—a gentle reminder to all that there is only one idea in anyone's mind for this year's Father's Day and that is the winning of the war as quickly as possible and that means War Bonds and more War Bonds.
