WOOL GROWERS ASSOCIATION, SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 1, 1878.)

The next meeting of the Western Texas Wool Growers Association, will be held in the city of San Antonio, on Monday, August 12th, 1878. A full attendance is carnestly desired, as the adoption of the constitution and by laws, together with other important matters will be passed upon at this meeting:
P. J. Moss.

Rev. Wastern Texas Wool Growers Asso-P. J. Moss, Sec'y Western Texas Wool Growers Asso-who number from 300 to 350, have been induced to helieve that Mr. Schleicher is the open and avowed enemy of their race. While Ireland, upon the stump, and through the medium of his sepporters before the intelligent public, has endeavored to minimize Mr. Schleicher's earnest labors for our suffering frontier, yet a new policy is adopted when the retired jacot of the ciliterate Mexican is approached. The writer was told by more than one good citisen or Wilson county that the Mexican citizens of the county were being made to believe that Mr. Schleicher was stirring up a war against the Mexicans as a people without any cause or justification, and it was asked that intelligent Mexicans from San Antonio be induced to come to this county and represent the facts to their deluded fellow-countrymen that they might go to the polls when election day relied around, not as blind led by the bilind to fall into the ditch, but as citizens exercising the right of franchine at their own discretion and upon their independent judgments.

Boone time ago my Justanid used to conplain that his linen collars did not set nicely in front. There was always a fullness, which in the cess of standing collars, was particularly trying to a man who felt a good deal of pride in the dressing of his neck, as it spoiled the effect of his cravat and often left a gap for the display of the collar brand of the shirt or a half an inch of bare skin. While talking with a practical shirt maker one day, he mentioued his annoyance, and inquired if there was any way of relieving it. "Yes," answered the man, "the fault is with your the Hatchet Mountains, and had returned the had stationed in the canyon in the vicinity of Point of Rocks, when he stated on horse-back up the eaxyon toward Supply Camp. Twice he had succeeded in crossing the fear faltorrent of water that was rushing madly along its course, carrying everything with it had sains in reach, and arriving about opposite to Supply Camp, he made a third attempt to cross the angry stream. Heaching the rapid current, his horse lost his footbold in the bed of the stream, and Henley was plunged into the water. He swam with the current for a considerable distance when his body was thrown against a tree with groat force, far out in the stream. The blow he received rendered him belyses. Liest. Rusker, who was near at hand, mounted his horse and rode rash he floated by. But alist the fate of noble Rusker! He, too, was separated from his horse in made alies the fate of noble Rusker. He stony was seen no more alive. Ruskers body was found a for oleck the same evening, about a full down the stream, and at 10 o'clock the same evening the body of Henley was found near where. Ruskers was taken out. Henley's skull was fractured, and it was thought by the surgoon that death ensued immediately after the fracture was received, which was probably at the tree or stump described above. Efforts at resuscitation were thoroughly made, but death had claimed its own. The bodies were sent to Bowie on the 17th, and buried on the 18th at that post. The found were sent to Rowie on the 17th, and buried on the 18th at that post. The found were sent to Rowie on the 17th, and buried on the 18th at that post. All the streets and arenes in and about the centre of the city were prohibited to the public cabs after six o'clock in the evening, albeit the omnibuses and a few carriages continued to circulate until late into the night. Generally speaking, however, the populace had entire possession of the streets, and looking toom above down upon this swaying multitude, filling the streets in every direction, a black mass of heads, as far as the eye could reach, the sight was amazing. Approaching the centre of the city, from no matter what quarter, the pedestrian saw street after street splendidly illuminated with Venetian lanterns, and the form of every church, eathedral and municipal building might be clearly defined at a distance by the brilliant rows of gus jets which marked their
