From the beginning to the end, it has that mystical character which befits such lofty pretensions, its life is the most wide and complete, and its death the most sudden and mysterious that can be imagined. It is torrential, and it leaves the flanks of Hermon and the many fountains of its tributaries with an eager precipitation, as if it bere a mission. From its greetest height, some handred feet above the scalevel, it leaves downward till it disappears in the Dead Sea, some 1300 feet below it. It hides itself among cleander, tamarisk and willow, and many an unfamiliar oriental tree, as if wishing to keep from profane eyes the secret of its errand. It does not stop long to overflow its banks and fertilize the valley; for it

He returned thanks to the angust body with a comical assumption of diguly, and observance of parliamentary speech begged to express his high appreciation of the compilment bestowed upon him by the diguified and sublime body, an assemblag of the greatest minds of the country, and to assure the senators he felt as high, indeed higher, regard and respect for the gentlemen who did not vote for him as for those who did, he was fully conscious of the responsibilities entailed upon him by the position, and assured them he would be earnest in his endeavors to administer affairs impartially.

In the gallaries were collected five or sit hundred people who were unable to get near the house on account of the crowd. They were attentive and enthusiastic listeners to the novel scene in the mimic senate. Various pagus brought motions, introduced bills, voilerated opposition, with such excellent simulation of the peculiarities characterizing every senator as to call forth he arty applause from their audience. "HIS MEART IS BAD."

tirtel of an Indian Brave Over the

An Indian agent just from Rosebud told an Omaha reporter the following:

It appears that an Indian lost his sister by death, and he wrapped the corpse in a blank-et and took it up on a hill. The sorrowing brother then stationed himself within one hundred yards af the body and with his ride he determined to shoot the first white man he could see, so that a white spirit could accompany his water to the happy hunting ground. Fortunately the day was extremely cold and there were but few white men who cared about going out. The Indian, however, remained at his post from 10 o'clock in the afternoon, during which time he fired seven shots, one the morning till 4 o'clock in the afternoon, during which time he fired seven shots, one of which hit a white man near the heart, but fortunately the ball struck a rib and glanced and came out near the back bone and did not hill him. He was a man who had lived among the Indians for many years and had made himself solid with them by marrying a squaw. During the period of grief an Indian says that "his heart is bad," and it is not unfo for may one to approach him when he is thus feeting a little off. Old Spotted Tail, however, offered to go and arrest the Indian, but the agent would not allow him to risk his life in the attempt, and therefore the grief-stricken redskin was permitted to blase away until he became tired of the business. After he had shot the man above mentioned, he became milisted and ended his performance. The affair was fixed up, ac-cording to Indian custom, by him and his friends presenting to the wounded man, next morning, thirteen horses, forty blankets and other articles, and the apology was accep-

"And you'd better sit down in the corridor until he comes."

Mr. Dwight consented with poor grace, but at once made out an order on a restuarant for champage, tosst and quall. It was sent around the conser by a boy, and he returned with a cham-shelf on which was written; "D. B."

WHICH?

The hermit willingly complied, offered her house with wine, and hade her ait down at his firefide.

After she had refreshed herself and dried her clothing, the hermit began a conversation by asking her whence she came and what had driven her out on such a stormy night.

"A vow," replied the maid. "Percecuted and expelled, I was obliged to Ly from a ph asant and cudeared cell which I inhabited—but I will riturn and dig my tomb in

J. Danforth Jones rubbed the sleep out of his eyes as he walked out, and when asked to plead to the charge of disorderly conduct he started off:

"Well, I am on my way to Boston. I inid off for a day to see your beautiful city."

"I don't own a beautiful city," replied the court. "Please confine yourself to the facts in the case."

"Well, I hid off to see this miserable old town!" continued the prisones, with a raw edge to his voice. "I entered a place up here to make some inquirios, and "What inquirios did you want to make?" interrupted the court.

The "Nigger-Shooter" Nulsance.

Notwithstanding the fact that an ordnance exists strictly prohibiting the use of "nigger-shooters" within the city limits, boys can be daily seen about the streets, and even in the heart of the city, firing stones at pigeons, telegraph wires and often at pedestrians. Last Monday, a gentleman riding along Accquia street, passed several youngsters who were amusing themselves by shooting at people's horses, and his stased was also made a target of, and with difficulty was prevented from throwing him off. Now comes the intelligence that a lady, a seamstress, while passing along in the same vicinity, was knocked senseless by a stone hurled from a "nigger-shooter." Let this be the end of the nuisance. The attention of the police authorities is called to their duty in the matter. —We hear nothing more of the terrible small-pox. Police Referens.

Capt. Shardein will at once inaugurate many necessary reforms in our police system. First, he will establish an office in the lower story of the old courthouse, Military plans, which will be kept open night and day, and where a clerk will always be found to record whatever reports the police will make. These reports are to cover all matters occurring of intorest to the city. The police will also shortly receive new uniforms, when they will be marched in a body and drepped at the different beats. The relie's will be morning and evening, 6 o'clock. Policemen will not be allowed to drink at salcons while on duty or with their uniforms on.

Combative Mexicans.

Yesterday afternoon a difficulty occurred in the yard of a Mexican resturant called the Globo-Potosino between a Mexican wood-chopper by the name of Juan Rimeres, and another Mexican whose name could not be obtained. Rimeres got the best of the battle, dealing his adversary a very severe blow upon the nose with a heavy stick of wood. The blow felled the assaulted man to the ground, and his maniforgan sustained a disastrous fracture. Rimeres was arrested.

Peter Joseph Charles Biesenbach, just departed this life at his home in this city, was born in Duessoldorf, Germany, on the 21st of August, 1836. He came to this state in 1844 and settled on the Cibole, but afterwards removed to the mountains above New Braunfels, where he remained until 1855 and came to San Antonio. After reaching here, for a long while he occupied a responsible position in the business of Vance & Brother, and afterwards established business for himself. He was captain in the third Texas infantry. After the war he returned to San Antonio, and pursued various business callings up to the time of the illness which ended in his death. The cause of his death was inflammation of the lungs, resultmound I recommend—but please to fook around you and see how this three-headed monster, gambling, prostitution and the diagle-dangles, has reized its thousands. How many mothers and sisters mourn over their morally lost sons and brothers? If some remedy is not brought to bear to check its baneful influences, then, indeed, our future looks dark and gloomy. To abolish it entirely, is impossible. Home of it is a necessary evil; but in the name of humanity and morality keep them in bounds, and make it unprofitable. A great deal could be said in regard to these evils and their remedies, and I hope that there writers, more able than I am, will think this matter over and make such suggestions to the legislature as will bring about a more healthful state of affairs in this and other communities. X. Y. Z. death was inhammation of the lungs, ring from a cold contracted on the 5th of January. He leaves a wife and eight oren to mourn his death.

A Commendable Move.

There is no one but will commend the efforts now being put forth in this city, with Mrs. J. H. McLeary in the lead, to obtain funds to complete the Lee mausoleum. This movement was inaugurated under the Washington-Lee university, Lexington, Virginia, and has met with encouragement on every hand, both north and south. So far, there have been realized for the work about $22,000, of which $14,500 have been paid to artists and $3,000 have been expended on the building. There are still needed between five and six thousand dollars, which must be raised very soon. Mrs. McLeary, whose better-half is one of the most distinguished graduates of the university, has taken upon herself an effort to do something toward the fund needed in San Antonio. To this end, she has arranged for an entainment of a mu-The sale of fine Lyons black silks and Marseilles goods will positively take place this morning at 10 o'clock in the Vance block, Alamo plaza, together with other fine and desirable foreign and domestic goods. The silks will be open for inspection at any time before the sale commences, in order to give those who wish to purchase a chance to make a thorough examination. It is also announced that this large sale that has now been in progress for the past two weeks will be brought to a close in a very few days. All those in search of bargains will do well to bear this fact in mind, as such a chance to buy fine and desirable goods may not soon occur again.

Dallas Herald: There was a terrible tragedy enacted at Denison Sunday morning, in which two men were shot and one of them killed. The parties to the affair were Joe Grant and Charles Murray, both gamblers.
They were playing a game at a card table, when Murray accused Grant of cheating in the game. High words followed, ending in a difficulty, in which Grant drew his pistol and shot Murray in the left side of his neck, the ball going through and coming out of a difficulty, in which Grant drew his pistol and shot Murray in the left side of his neck, the ball going through and coming out of his mouth, producing a dangerous and very painful wound. After the shooting Grant ran out of the saloon and attempted to gave chase. He turned and fired the remaining shots at his pursuers, and had taken position behind a tree and releaded his pistol, when one of the officers, armed with a shot-gun, loaded with buckshot, came upon him and ordered him to surrender. Grant's only reply was to level his pistol on the officer, but before he could fire both barrels of the officer's gun were emptied into his abdomen, which tore that portion of his abdomen, which tore that portion of his body literally to pieces, killing him almost instantly. Grant and Murray were both former residents of this city and were well known here, especially in gaming circles. The former was at one time an Indian scout for the United States army. While here he was in the employ of Pete Brene, a saloonist, who had him employed to ride races. He was a man rather quarrelsome in his disposition and got into a number of difficultice, having been thrown in jail frequently on that account. It is thought that Murray will recover.

Brownsville News.

Over in Mexico there are, particularly among the lower classes, some very queer customs. A funeral is almost as jolly an affair as a dance or ball. Where the surviving mourners can afford it, a breas band is engaged, but music is indispensable, and the tunes are identical with those played at the fandangoes. A gentleman, an American, who happened to be in Pesidio Del Norte for a few weeks, was an eye witness of the following: A child had died in the neighboring house, and the services of the local band, consisting of a fiddle, a drum, a harp, and one or two other instruments had had been engaged to render the ceremonies unusually impressive. It was the custom to play two tunes, a lively waitz and some other sentimental piece, at the house, and two more pieces at the grave. The corpse was laid out in the room, and the musicians began to play "Sally Come Up." or a direge that sounded very much like it, and everybody was enjoying himself hugely, and saying it was the nicest funeral of the season, when the chief

The late severe weather has as usual brought us reports of the appearance of wolves in inhabited districts in eastern France and the neighboring Aisace-Lorraine. The unusual extent and depth of the snowfall having deprived them in great measure of their usual sources of support, they were rendered by hunger more daring than usual. The neighborhood of Metz hav been specially distinguished in this way. The beasts passed through the lines of the sentrica around the new German forts and went so to the very gates of the city. A bakery in the nighborhood of Fort Mantenful, in St. Julien, was regularly besieged every night by them, and one night a band of them made a vigorous attempt to storm the stable where some horses were housed. On Christmas eve a large worf quietly entered the Metz railway station to the great terror of the porters and officials. The following Sunday some were seen crossing some fields in a broad daylight. Wolves have also been seen in the neighborhood of Belfort. Near Saarbrucken they made a nightly cordon around the houses, terrifying the inhabitants by their howlings and attempts to break in. At Carpentras they came up to the gates of the town. Even in the neighborhood of Lyons, where they are almost unknown several have been seen.

What a truly beautiful world we live in !
Nature gives us grandour of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means for enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worried out with disease, when there is no oceasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain suisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them as free from disease as when born. Dyspepsis and liver complaint is the direct cause of seventy-fire percent. of such maladies as biliousness, indigestion, sick heacache, contiveness, narrous prostration, dizziness of the head, palpitation of the heart and other disressing symptoms. Three does of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

—Drawing of La. S. L. company will take place as usual. See advertisement. Notice.

-Sam Maverick has removed to the corner of Houston street and Alamo plans, where he will keep a complete stock of lumber, doors, mah, blinds, shingles, builders' hardware, groceries, paints, oils, glam, etc.
