PLOTT ON CORN. Territory of New Mexico,))
County of Eddy,

B. Enfield, Assistant Cashier of the sonable price. Bank of Artesia. He says that about Sept. 1, 1906, he and C. H. Bolzle entered the cornfield in the said Enfield farm for the purpose of estimating the probable yield per acre in said field. They stepped off seventy yards and in that distance in one row found one hundred and thirty-six fully developed ears of a large white variety of corn. From this they estimated that said field would yield at least seventy-five bushels an acre. He says he is familiar with corn raising and that said method would give a fairly accurate idea of the yield per J. C. Plott.

FINDS "FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH." Man Who Discovered Old Tunnel Will Lay Out Park There.

William M. Hinsdale of Orange, N. J., who has discovered the location of the "old Spanish tunnel" in the Shawangunk mountains, is to lay out a park there, according to the sick list this week. the New York World.

This was in the sixteenth century. The tunnel was known till recently only by Indian legend.

Hinsdale, finding a stream that never varied in its flow or temperature, employed a force of men, and uncovered an accumulation of debris. Then he located the mouth of the tunnel itself. It is perfectly formed and the stream gushes from a fissure at the extreme end.

The tunnel is 500 feet long, six feet high, four feet wide and straight as an arrow, with only a rise of seven feet in its entire length.

Hinsdale purchased the entire tract of land, put in a narrow-gauge railroad, built an electric plant and lighted the tunnel with incandescent lamps.

A company is being organized to bottle the water, which, on account of its purity and historical associations, is expected to meet with ready

CROWS REAR YOUNG Picked the Young

How crows adopted a young tailed hawk, and what came of told by Bert Jennings, a young nithologist, says the New World correspondent at Mcke N. Y. From time imn crows have been the enemia

Jennings says that the con scended upon the hawk's home the parents were away, boost the youngster and worked him the ground to the foot of the containing their nest. Then boosted, hauled, pushed and pu him up, using their beaks, wings claws to get him there.

The parent hawks made a fuss when they got home and in one of their young missing, bu didn't conduct any exhaustive for the fledgling.

The ornithologist wondered the crows didn't kill the young instead of taking so much t to keep him alive, and eve found out the reason. When young bird got ready to fly the was passed around through all crow colonies, and big flocks & ered cawing and clamoring. they had all asesmbled the started to peck at the young

This was a signal for a gen onslaught, and soon all the a were fighting for a chance to pothe little fellow. He was he and worried, and then fairly to pieces. When there was left of him the crows wheeled cling overhead, until they splet parent birds. These they clear out of the neighborh gether with the youngsters they been able to rear.
