JAPANESE YOUTH VISITING MULESHOE--Mr. and Mrs. Ron Montgomery have a special guest in their home at this time. this year. The visitor explained, partially in his own words, and partially with Mrs. Montgomery acting as interpreter, that Fukuoka is a mountainous island, known for its industry. It is now a poor island, he said, and there are very few poor people on the island as everyone' works. There is no welfare, it isn't necessary.

Pictures of the island show it to be green, lush, with many, many flowers and trees, including peach trees and tropical fruit trees. There are also very modern apartment buildings, a monorail, high rise office buildings, an international airport, skyscrapers, and huge shipping Yuji is a rural resident, as his father owns a farm. He said his father is also a businessman, and Yuji's mother helps with the business. He has one older brother, who is an employee of a supermarket.

Some of the pictures of the island showed temples, shrines and castles. Yuji explained that he is a Bhuddist and attends Bhuddist rites in the shrines and temples.

Yuji has very little leisure time, as he helps on the farm, and "farmers can't take vacations. They may get two or three days each month, and when I get a little time, I go said Yuji.

Also, leisure time for Yuji maybe will find him practicing a favorite sport. Kendo is an ancient Japanese art and tradition, and is similar to fencing, except it involves a stick and gloves, similar to boxing gloves. In Kendo, he goes one-on-one with an opponent.

He also says he enjoys swimming, but smiled and said his slight body does not fit with Sumo wrestling, where the Sumo wrestlers are generally rather immense men.

When he returns to Japan, he will be entering college, studying to be an economist.

He was accompanied to the South Plains of Texas by three other Japanese youth, all sponsored to the U.S. by the Lions large population, of more than a Club. In fact, Yuji is sponsored

GLAUCOMA

I know glaucoma has something to do with pressure in the eye, but what kind of pressure is it and what causes it? How common is glaucoma, and is it curable?

Glaucoma is an elevation of the pressure of fluids within the eye. No one knows the causative factor or factors that eventually results in the increased pressure. However, we do know there is a normal circulation of fluid in the eye: the eye makes fluid, and a certain amount of the fluid leaves the eye. In a healthy eye, those two phenomena balance each other to maintain a stable pressure. Stability is essential in order to maintain a constant shape--otherwise vision would slip in and out of focus.

Abnormal drainage of the fluid, or aqueous humor, causes pressure within the eye to increase, a result of resistance to the outflow of fluid from one part of the eye to another. Generally, there are no symptoms that suggest a problem until substancial amounts of vision have been irreversibly lost. In possibly one out of a hundred cases, however, the interruption of fluid circulation can be sudden and dangerous. In these emergency situations, irreversible loss of vision can result in a matter of hours, and total loss within 24 hours.

Pressure build-up occurs behind the cornea where the fluid is made. "Chronie", or openangle, glaucoma--the most common type--results from the fluid being trapped from circulating through tiny openings between the cornea and lens of the eye. Loss of vision, as mentioned carlier, goes unnoticed because damage to the optic nerve from the building pressure is very slow and begins from the population over 40 years of age is effected: glaucoma is rare in younger people. Those over 40 should have eye exams performed by an ophthalmologist every one to two years. An ophthalmologist can perform tests that sensitively detect abnormal pressure increases within the eye.

Open-angle glaucoma can be successfully treated in nearly all cases. Most people diagnosed require eyedrops only to control the disease and prevent visual loss. For people in whom medical therapy is not entirely successful, ophthalmologists are now using a quick procedure employing a laser that immediately relieves the problem.

Early detection, however, is the best therapy. Be sure to visit your eye doctor regularly for proper eye care that includes a test for glaucoma. Even the most subtle changes in ocular pressure, indetected by the patient suffering early signs of glaucoma, can be watched closely by your doctor and treated.

For years Americans have thought of themselves as big meat eaters, but new ways of measuring meat consumption show that isn't the case.

Until last year, annual per person meat consumption was figured by the U.S. Department of Agriculture on the basis on carcasses sold, says meat scientist Dr. Dan Hale.

According to the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist, that's like reporting the yearly sweet corn consumption by including the weight of the corn stock, husk, corn silk and cob in the New figures take into account that meat packers and store butchers remove fat, bone and gristle before meat is placed in the grocery store meat case.

Hale says these figures show that the average daily consumption of red meat is 2.1 ounces per day, which is less than the recommended daily allowance of two 3-ounce servings of cooked lean meats or meat alternates.

Extension nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten points out that red meat, poultry and fish are a Lucille Pierce and Flossie Walkmajor source of pretein, niacin, er. B-vitamins, iron, phosphorus

City Police Report

Once again, the Muleshoe City Police Department had a very busy week, with many complaints logged in police records.

Three accidents were checked during the week: on Friday, the first accident involved two vehicles in the 900 block of West American Blvd. with no injuries; and the second was in front of West Plains Medical Center, involving two vehicles, but again, no injuries. On Sunday, officers checked a two vehicle hit and run accident at the Crossroads, with a complaint filed against the driver of. one vehicle for 'failure to stop and render aid.

Gunshots rang out in Muleshoe early Monday morning. when a local resident fired shots at a man she said was trying to enter her home. Investigation into the incident was continuing at presstime. Two burglaries were reported during the week. DeShazo School was missing batteries and vinyl letters, valued at $63 and burglars entered McCormick Seed, removed a framed 'first dollar of profit' from the wall, took the dollar bill from the frame, and deposited the frame in a trash basket.

One woman reported a substance smeared on her car, which removed paint and caused some $1,000 in damage.

Arrests included one person for public intoxication and one person on DPS warrants from Midland.

Rules...

tor, Cotton, Grain and Rice Support Division, ASCS-USDA. Box 2415, Washington, D.C.

"With these new rules relating to erodible land and wetlands, farmers may want to take a close look at the Conservation Reserve Program that also was created in the 1985 farm legislation," says Harris. "Some 3.8 million acres nationwide have already been accepted into the program (300,000 acres in Texas), and another signup period has been set for Aug. 4-15.

"The conservation compliance provision could have been a major impact in areas of Texas where soil crosion is a problem, particularly in the South Plains," says Harris. "With the proposed rules, farmers would likely have to change their cropping systems from a low residue crop such as cotton to crops which produce more residue and thereby help keep erosion in check.

N.M. Further information can be obtained by calling 505/748-3324. This will be the first reunion in over 40 years.

Hosts will be former members of Co. 2842, Damp DG-41-N. All former CCC members are invited, regardless of the camp in which they served, along with their families and friends.

CCC camps once flourished throughout the United States. Established as a Roosevelt 'relief measure' in the 1930s. the CCC became home to some three million young American males. Most went directly from the CCC into the Armed Forces where they quickly encountered and defeated the best Hitler and Tojo had to offer.

Before the war, CCC members invested much blood, sweat and tears in constructing National Parks and scenic trails; digging stock tanks; erecting fences; cradicating destructive rodents; containing soil erosion, etc. They performed a multitude of funcions aimed at restoring, preserving, and beautifying the national resources of the nation.

The product of their handiwork and hard labors is still much in evidence: the fences still stand; eattle quench their thirst at CCC-built stock tanks; multitudes eat produce from the highly productive farms and ranches preserved or improved or reclaimed by CCC labor. Millions have visited and enjoyed the nation's parks, courtesy of the CCC.

As the CCC is considered to be a vanishing breed--you are invited to attend this reunion and renew old memories.

Summer Often Means 'Big' Lawn Problems

Along with hot temperatures, the summer season in Texas may bring special lawn problems--drought, weeds, insects and disease.

These lawn problems can cause concerns for homeowners unless accurate diagnosis and proper treatment takes place before they become severe, points out Spencer Tanksley, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University

Dry spots, thin turf and weeds can result from improper watering, fertilizing and mowing practices, notes Tanksley. Follow recommended cultural practices before applying a chemical to correct lawn problems, Tanksley suggests.

Drought stress most often occurs in mid-summer and shows up as wilted, discolored turf. Adjust watering schedules to wet the soil to a depth of four to six inches, and water only when grass shows symptoms of moisture stress.

Also, raise mowing heights one-half inch to improve drought tolerance in mid-summer, Tanksley adds.

Lack of nitrogen or iron often creates a lawn problem. Grass with a nitrogen deficiency may have a pale color and be heavily infested with weeds, explains Tanksley. A light application of nitrogen fertilizer will improve the lawn's appearance.

Grass leaves that have yellow stipes parallel to the leaf margins may be deficient in

Conservation Reserve Signup Scheduled For '87 Cropland

Texas farmers will have an opportunity to bid additional cropland into the governments's Conservation Reserve Program during the signup period of Aug. 4-15.

Farmers across the United States may volunteer highly erodible cropland for entry into the CRP which was established as part of the 1985 farm bill, points out Dr. B.L. Harris, soils specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

This will be the third signup period this year, notes Harris. Previous enrollment periods in March and again in May brought 3.8 million acres of cropland into the new program nationwide, 300,000 acres being in Texas. The CRP is aimed at protecting fragile land from erosion by taking it out of production and planting grass or trees.

In addition to protecting erodible land, the program should help improve water quality and wildlife habitats, believes the specialist. And it will lead to reduced production of agricultural commodities which are currently in surplus and this pushing market prices

The intent of the CRP is to take 40 to 45 million acres of erodible cropland out of production nationwide over a five-year period, with 10 million acres targeted for the second year, Harris points out.

Farmers with highly erodible cropland (as classified by the Soil Conservation Service) may submit a bid on the land and apply to put it into the CRP at their local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office.

If their bids are accepted, farmers must agree to take the land out of production for 10 years, to plant it to grass or trees, and to use approved conservation practices, Harris points out. The government will pay farmers an annual rent based on the approved bid price and also will pay half the cost of planting grass or trees. The Texas Forest Service will help producers with tree plantings.

In addition to the CRP, the 1985 farm legislation includes sodbuster, swampbuster and conservation compliance provisions which state that farmers no longer can get government benefits if they plow up erodible land or fill in wetlands to grow crops, Harris points out.

The legislation further spells out that by 1990, all farmers of highly erodible cropland must have conservation plans to qualify for government benefits, and the plans must be in effect by 1995 by 1995.

The conservation compliance aspect of the legislation should generate additional farmer interest in the CRP, says Harris.

iron. A foliar application of iron sulfate at six ounces per 1,000 square feet will usually solve this problem, says Tanksley.

Leaf spot diseases are generally a problem when lawns are under stress and increase with high temperatures, drought, heavy shade and close mowing, points out Tanksley. While proper mowing and watering will reduce these problems, fungicides may be required to prevent serious damage.

Chinch bugs and white grubs feed heavily on lawns during mid-summer, and their damage resembles drought injury, notes Tanksley. If turf does not respond to applications of water, suspect these insects. Both pests damage St. Augustinegrass, but only the white grub damages bermudagrass lawns.

Chinch bugs and white grubs can be controlled with insecticides. Water the lawn thoroughly prior to applying an insecticide for chinch bug control, and follow with a light watering.

Tanksley advises drenching the lawn after an insecticide is applied for grub control, since grubs feed in the soil.

Learning to speak English isn't necessary for learning to write English

COLLEGE STATION — Non English-speaking elementary students who have trouble expressing themselves verbally nonetheless are able to communicate in writing — an ability most teachers overlook or ignore, a Texas A&M University education researcher has discovered.

Dr. Viola Florez-Tighe, assistant professor of curriculum and instruction, recently found 3rd- and 4th-grade students with Hispanic backgrounds were able to write short essays and sentences in English even though their speaking ability was limited.

Florez-Tighe, who said little material is available for use in teaching writing to students with non-English backgrounds, is planning to prepare a manual on writing for those who teach bilingual elementary students.

She said the students she studied had been given little or no instruction in writing by their teachers because it was assumed the task would be too difficult for them.

"The most frequent comment I heard from teachers is "I didn't teach them to write because they can't speak English," Florez-Tighe said.

A Question...

When was the last time a New Yorker sent money to pay for your local schools?

Never, of course.

We Texans pay our own way with state and local taxes.

And yet, this year alone, Texans will send $3 billion to New York, California and New Jersey and even Hong Kong.

That money will leave Texas in the form of mail orders for all kinds of merchandise.

Not one penny of Texas sales tax will be collected. And so, not one penny of sales tax will come back to Texas to help pay for our schools, highways, parks, hospitals and colleges.

No, you and your local merchants will pay for them. Don't you think it's time you had a little help? About $100 million in help?

$100 million. That's the minimum additional Texas sales tax due on mail orders going outside our state. That will pay for a lot of schools.

The Congress is now considering requiring big national mail order firms to collect the sales tax and send it to the states, including that $100 million a year to Texas.

In other words, Congress can make these national mail order operators play--and pay--by the same rules our hometown merchants do.

Your congressman needs to hear from you. He needs to know that you think local merchants deserve fair treatment and fair competition. Please write today. Tell your congressman you support a mail order sales tax bill.
