COMMITTING SUICIDE

A number of smaller towns and hamlets over the nation have been slowly committing suicide. It has been a slow process, but the time involved has not removed the pain, as residents of smaller communities know, who have stood by and watched their property values shrink.

This condition is generally charged to the modern mode of travel, but since modern travel only furnishes a method of transportation there must be a deeper underlying cause. For one thing the modern merchant should not be merely a storekeeper. The old time storekeeper's attitude was "take it or leave it, but don't be so particular." Folks usually appreciate the convenience of a store close at hand, but the modern buyer knows what he wants and does not like to be told that he or she should accept a substitute article because of loyalty to the community. Let a buyer go into some small town stores and make an inquiry for a certain item, if the item is not stocked, the transaction is ended so far as the merchant is concerned and the buyer is free to go elsewhere. The storekeeper makes no effort to get the article, he employs no salesmanship in the display of his goods, it is a matter solely with the customer whether the transaction is ever made.

The business house that is successfully fighting the game makes an effort to sell the customer what he or she wants and if the article is not carried in stock to get the item with the least possible delay at a fair price. The aggressive proprietor is on his toes trying to give up-to-date service by conducting a modern mercantile establishment that is kept clean and neat. Rather than spending his time bemoaning the fact that business is bad, he is occupied with keeping his windows clean, his floors swept and his stock arranged. And here's another angle that is seen by the Eaton Rapids, Minnesota Journal:

Towns do not die, they commit suicide, said a newspaper recently. And it is true.

If everybody who makes his money in this community would spend his money in this community the home town would be double in population in a few years and everybody in and around it would be prosperous. Why are filling stations out of proportion to every other line of business in number? Because people buy almost all of their gas and oil at home.

It is really unexplainable, why people will persist in spending money out of town needlessly, when the results of this practice are so costly. We know of one individual in the city now out of a job. This particular individual rarely spent a cent in Eaton Rapids, even when he could have saved money. Some two or three years ago this person was informed that if his practice of spending money out of the city continued he would work himself out of a job entirely. And that is just what has happened. How can the business men, or any one else, hire employees if they have nothing for them to do, nor any money to pay them? When you spend a dollar outside you take it right out of the pockets of some local citizen.

And speaking of the "penny wise and pound foolish" policy, this is it. Save a few cents by spending your money in some other city, and then in the course of time find your husband out of a job because business conditions here will not warrant his remaining in some one's employ.

The fight is on in all smaller cities. This does not apply only to Eaton Rapids. It is becoming a very serious question, and one that must be reckoned with in the near future. Just as mentioned above—the small city is not dying, it is committing suicide inch by inch. Instead of casting this idea off like so many snow flakes, it is time right now when every individual should give the matter serious thought. Otherwise there'll be more vacant stores in the city than we regret to report today.

TAXING THE HOME OWNER

Out of the present unrest over high taxes may come some sort of a solution whereby the average citizen can own his own home. There has been a great deal of talk locally concerning the manner which the ordinary home owner is taxed. Under the present circumstances coupled with an unjust exemption law, there is little encouragement to offer the man who wishes to buy his home, although everybody is agreed that the home owners of any section is the backbone of the community. When we touch the home owner, we touch the vital spot of any town, city or village.

Recently we heard of a man in a nearby city, who is paying approximately $83.00 per month in taxes. This man says now that he can rent a house offering the same kind of accommodations for $35.00 to $40.00 per month.

Unless a man buys his home at twenty-five to fifty cents on the dollar, owning a house and lot and even a farm is a luxury that he can ill afford. Under present conditions there is only one redeeming feature in owning a home and that is the satisfaction of ownership.

Unless the tax burden is lightened on the home, we may become a nation of renters.

A prominent court official of Texas says the people themselves are responsible for high taxes. We knew this. The ordinary voter would never kick except in times of depression, if the government doubled its expenses.

Now is a good time to begin getting rid of the blood sucking politicians and the racketeers over the nation. With the existing sentiment against corruption and racketeering, if we can't make a start to clean house, our case is hopeless.

Up in Roosevelt county where they had a primary a candidate who admits that he also ran, sings a beautiful swan song and concludes with saying: "One who aspired to be county clerk, but who discovered the source of Salt Creek instead."

The lower house is evidently not affected much by the Literary Digest's wet poll. Ordinarily the politicians have an ear to the ground, but in this instance, the rumblings they hear are not taken seriously.

OTERO G. O. P. LEADER, DIES

LOS LUNAS—Death Friday removed from the old guard republican ranks in New Mexico another leader when Eduardo M. Otero, old guardster in Valencia and Socorro counties, died suddenly at his ranch 70 miles southwest of Magdalena following an attack of acute indigestion.

Mr. Otero, who two weeks ago, led the old guards in a losing fight at the republican state convention, was at his ranch aiding in preparations for the lambing season when death overtook him. Up to Thursday night he was apparently feeling fine. He had, however, been suffering from stomach trouble it was learned.

LOST 20 LBS. OF FAT IN JUST FOUR WEEKS

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast — it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at all druggists — the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

The Straw That Broke The Camel's Back

The fable of the straw that broke the camel's back is merely a simple lesson in the folly of overloading anything. In good banks there cannot be an overloading of any loan account for any purpose or person. There must be a proper distribution of loans among sound businesses and reliable people. Such a distribution alone guarantees the safety of a depositor's money.

Ed V. Watson

No depositor of this bank has been endangered by such a policy. At the same time we have endeavored to be of service to this trade territory in supplying finances to sound business ventures.

Pains Stopped Lady Got

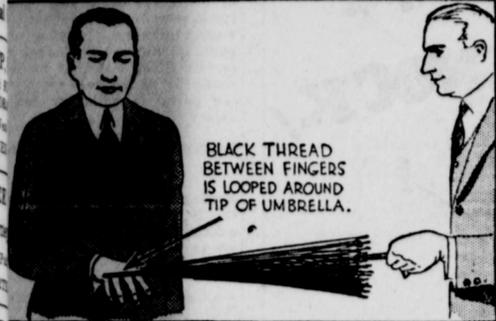

"About a year ago not good," writes Mrs. 8800 First Street, Ham, Ala. "I felt pains in my back. I knew by these symptoms I needed something to mother me up. My mother advised me to try Cardul, which I did. I found it was what I needed, for it built me up. The pains in my back stopped, and I felt better and stronger than I had in some time. I took about 7 bottles of Cardul in all."

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

HOW THREAD PREVENTS LIFTING UP AN UMBRELLA

BLACK THREAD IS LOOPED AROUND TIP OF UMBRELLA.

Prepare for this trick by drawing a black thread through your vest, fastening one end to a button of your vest, and making a loop the other and placing it between two of your fingers. Let the loop and about one-half inch above the fingers and you are ready for the trick. Ask some one to hold an umbrella extended, grasping it in the center of the handle. Extend your hand, back upward, place the tip of the umbrella upon the hand, and while doing so slip the loop of the thread over the umbrella tip. Then ask the person to try and raise the umbrella from your hand. Although it is held by only a thin thread, it will be found practically impossible to budge it. Ask the person to try with both hands, and unless he has unusual strength in his arms, it will be found equally difficult to raise the umbrella. Even if the thread should be discovered, this would be a good trick.

CANTALOUPE GROWERS ORDER 400 POUNDS SEED

A total of twenty-eight farmers attended the called meeting of cantaloupe growers at the Chamber of Commerce Thursday afternoon, and arranged for the ordering of 400 pounds of seed, sufficient to cover the plantings of April 15th.

A further order will be made for the planting in May.

The Hope community is parleying over the possibility of getting in the game, with at least 100 acres and County Agent W. A. Wunsch is studying the situation there, and the possibility of establishing a packing and grading shed at that point, which is a little too far for haulage to the Carlsbad sheds. — Carlsbad Current-Argus.

SEEK 'GAS' TAX INJUNCTION

CLOVIS—Gasoline retailers Friday filed an injunction suit against the city of Clovis in an effort to restrain the city from collecting its one cent tax on gasoline under an ordinance passed by the city council March 2.

The retailers allege that business inside the city limits is damaged because stations outside of the corporate limits may sell their gasoline cheaper without the tax. The imposition of the tax, they contend, is double taxation and denies equal protection from the law.

The suit also alleges that the state law, passed by the 1931 legislature authorizing the levying of a municipal gasoline tax, is unconstitutional, being "so indefinite and uncertain as to its meaning as to be void." It is further alleged that the law reads "towns and villages" not cities.

CREAM TO BE SOLD ON QUALITY BASIS

Farmers in New Mexico are losing close to $200,000 a year thru poor quality cream says E. E. Anderson of the New Mexico State College. Up to the present time there has been little or no incentive for the average cream producer to turn out a first quality product. The creameries have been largely responsible for this condition since they have paid the same price per pound for all butterfat, whether the quality has been good or poor. The highest quality cream has brought no higher price than has cream totally unfit for human consumption. The larger creameries have recently taken a step that will help materially in improving the quality of the cream. They have agreed to buy cream on grade. There will be two grades, first and second, and all cream will be paid accordingly. Since the cream station operator will be paid for the quality of cream he sends in to the creamery, it will be up to him either to lose his commission on all second grade cream or else grade the cream and pass this loss on to the producer. This system should be a wonderful help in improving the quality of the cream since the higher the quality, the better the price.

Butter made from cream from this whole southwest area is discriminated against on northern markets. There is no question but that the southern states in general do produce a lower quality commodity than that of the northern states, caused to a large extent by climatic conditions. However, with a little care, our New Mexico farmers can place on the market a product that is equal, or nearly so, to that produced in the north. Normally there is a difference of around 8c per pound between the lowest and the highest price of butter on the principal markets. Unfortunately, the greater part of the butter made from New Mexico cream falls into the lower price classes. Therefore, if the farmers of New Mexico hope to get as much for their butterfat as it is possible to do, it is up to them to increase materially the quality of the cream they put on the market.

YOU'LL ENJOY WEARING GLASSES

Strange though it may seem, most people who wear glasses enjoy them. It is a most pleasant sensation to see clearly, distinctly, and without effort. Properly fitted glasses are never annoying. They are promptly forgotten by the wearer, who, after the first few hours, does not even feel them on the face. Modern glasses are good looking. Most people look better with glasses than without them.

BENIGN AND MALIGNANT TUMORS

All tumors, or new growths, of the body are divided into two large groups, the "benign" and the "malignant." Those called "benign" are, as the term applies, comparatively harmless; the others are called "malignant" because of their disastrous effects upon the body. The malignant tumors are commonly called "cancers." Benign and malignant tumors are alike in their disorderly growth and their failure to serve any useful purpose in the body. In other very important respects they differ widely.

DEER PLENTIFUL IN THE BLACK CANYON

Deer in the Black Canyon area this year are as plentiful as a year ago, M. E. Musgrave, game specialist for the United States Forest Service reports at Albu- querque.

Mr. Musgrave recently completed a survey of the area with Elliot Barker, New Mexico State Game Warden. Their investigation took them over the Lower Squaw Creek, Apache Creek, Gila Flats and the brushy mountain area.

He reports that they saw 101 deer during three days' ride over the "two-deer area." The deer, he said, appeared to have wintered well and the range does not show evidence of excessive use during the past winter.

napers were ready to conclude negotiations, but warning that precautions would be taken to defeat any attempt to trap them. Within two hours Col. Lindbergh and Col. Breckenridge arrived at the Condon home and Lindbergh arrived late in the afternoon with the $50,000 in a box of the exact specifications ordered by the kidnapers.

At 7:45 p. m. a taxi driver delivered a note to Dr. Condon directing him to station himself in front of a Bronx nursery within 30 minutes. Lindbergh and Dr. Condon grabbed their hats and rushed out of the house. Lindbergh jumped behind the wheel on Reich's car and drove the doctor to the appointed place.

There under a stone, Dr. Condon found a note directing him to a spot a block away on the edge of St. Raymond's cemetery.

Lindbergh helped Dr. Condon decipher the note, then the doctor left the aviator in the car holding the box of money, while he went off to keep his appointment.

In the dark spot surrounded by shrubbery a figure popped up from behind a bush and said: "Here I am doctor. Have you the money?"

Dr. Condon said he had, but requested a receipt.

The dark figure darted off across tombstones of the cemetery and reappeared in a moment with an envelope. Dr. Condon returned to the automobile and found Lindbergh nervously clutching the box of money.

Inserting in the box a note which urged the kidnapers to carry out their part of the bargain to the letter, Dr. Condon took the package to the man waiting in the shadowy cemetery. As he handed it over he reminded the kidnapers' agent that Lindbergh had played fair and wanted nothing in return but the child.

When he turned over the box he received the envelope in return. Back in the car he and Lindbergh opened it. It directed them to wait at least two hours and then go to Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts.

There, the note said, on a 28-foot boat anchored off Gay Head the baby would be found in charge of two women, who, the message added, were innocent of any connection with the kidnaping and were not to be harmed.

Lindbergh and Dr. Condon returned and conferred with Col. Breckenridge. At 3:00 a. m. Sunday Lindbergh, Breckenridge, Dr. Condon, Reich and a fifth man, taken along because he knew the geography of the coast, went to Bridgeport, Connecticut, waited for the arrival of an amphibian plane from Hartford and then set out for Martha's Vineyard, leaving Reich behind to drive Lindbergh's car back.

They searched for the boat from the air until noon, then returned. The next day another vain hunt was made. For some unexplained reason the kidnapers had not lived up to their part of the bargain.

The following year he was elected county clerk and recorder, and in 1892 became sheriff of Lincoln county. ### ROBINSON ADDRESSES DAHLIA GROWERS HERE

Will Robinson of Carlsbad, well known dahlia judge, addressed a local group of dahlia growers Friday evening at the Artesia hotel. Mr. Robinson came to Artesia at the request of Fred Brainard, manager of the Artesia Chamber of Commerce and it was the purpose of the meeting to create more interest in the culture of flowers and dahlias. Owing to the fact that the address of Mr. Robinson was not well advertised, the turn out was rather disappointing, but the interest was good nevertheless. Mr. Robinson, who last year served as judge in the local dahlias show and has also served in this capacity in a number of national shows, was high in his praise of Artesia's first showing. He distributed a number of dahlia manuals, giving the essentials of proper dahlia culture which covered the principal points of his talk. After the talk on dahlia culture, growers present engaged in a round table discussion and discussed problems encountered during the growing season.

ALAMOGORDO—Officers have continued their search for Lupa Gonzales, 35 year old Mexican, who shot and wounded Pat Carillo, of Alamogordo, Saturday night when Carillo started to follow him after he had threatened to kill the superintendent of the Mesquero Apache reservation and four Indians.

The shooting came as an aftermath of Gonzales' ejection from the reservation by Superintendent Danielson on a complaint that he had been mistreating his family.

Local Men Head Co. Organization
Two local men will head the county democratic organization. Jess Truett was elected by the convention to serve as county chairman for the next two years and J. R. Attebery was elected secretary. At the close of the convention, George L. Reese, Jr., of Lovington made a brief speech, thanking the convention for its endorsement for the office of district attorney. Dr. J. J. Clarke of Artesia read a letter from Dr. R. K. Hoover of Artesia, withdrawing his candidacy for the office of state senator in favor of J. H. Jackson, also of Artesia. Dr. Hoover, whose act was characterized as one of the most praiseworthy political moves of the convention, said that he believed that it would be for the best interest of his party and community that his candidacy be withdrawn.

The resolution committee composed of J. J. Clarke, C. W. Beaman, Abe Burnett, J. W. Stagner, Mrs. Ethel Highsmith and H. J. Stagner, submitted resolutions reflecting the sentiments of the assembly. The resolutions called for the re-affirmation of the principles of democracy and deplored the state of affairs of the national government. The resolutions called for more common sense and less theories; the restoration of the tariff as a means of protection only; that there is no debate necessary on an oil tariff and a reasonable tariff on wool, meats and hides. The committee charged that under President Hoover, tariff had been used to protect certain interests.

The resolutions called for the application of good business principles in the affairs of the national government, re-affirmed confidence in Senator Sam Bratton and Dennis Chaves and endorsed Governor Arthur Seligman as national committeeman. The administration of Ernest K. Neumann as attorney general was also endorsed and the committee pledged him continued support of his home county for re-nomination. The resolutions also expressed strong favor for Governor Seligman and his economy program.

MRS. PRICE TELLS THE STORY OF CAPTURE OF CYNTHIA PARKER

Mrs. Estella Price of Artesia, submits a story of how Cynthia Parker was captured by the Indians, a character that is more or less familiar to the residents of the southwest, especially of Texas.

One bright Sunday morning in the early sixties, the father of Mrs. Price, her grandfather, a family by the name of Johnson and the Parker family decided to meet to cut a bee tree down, which was a popular pastime in the pioneer days. The Johnsons and the Parkers had assembled near the bee tree. The father and grandfather of Mrs. Price neared where the other families were assembled when they sighted a band of Indians banishing their tomahawks, after the savages had killed and scalped practically every member of the two families. The Indians spared the life of Cynthia Parker and her brother and left the scene of the slaughter as fast as they could ride. Cynthia was taken to an Indian village, where a big dance was given with the scalps of the whites, the savages had brutally murdered hanging about as ornaments. In the meantime a number of whites had gathered and gave pursuit. Rushing the Indians they had recovered the Parker boy, but failed to find Cynthia. The white girl was kept among the Indians for several years and finally recaptured.

According to Mrs. Price, the Parker girl was never satisfied. She insisted on living the life of an Indian and would frequently slash her arms with a knife. She finally grieved herself to death. The town of Quannah, Texas was named from the Quannah Parker family. Cynthia Parker has an uncle now living in Atoka, Oklahoma, but so old that he is almost blind. Mrs. Price states that she has visited the former scenes of Indian raid in several West Texas counties and is familiar with much of the pioneer history of the panhandle. Much of the early history occurred when the mob law was enforced over the southwest and the mob law had many trying years during the settlement of the southwest which was much worse than the present depression, Mrs. Price says.

Examination in Psychology 79

By JANE OSBORN

WHEN Lois woke up that bright day in May the sun was streaming into her little blue and pink bedroom, and even in the moments of half slumber before she opened her eyes she felt that something was wrong. Then she remembered.

She had gone to a dance with Robert Granger the night before. She had gone—though for some reason she had felt that she ought not to go—because then she felt that she really liked Robert very much, liked him well enough to marry him. Robert had said he wanted to ask her an important question that night. She remembered now that she felt a real loathing for the Robert who had made that stammering declaration as they drove home, narrowly missing a telegraph pole and a passing car as he tried to drive and propose at once. Somehow Robert had managed—when he wasn't dancing with her—to get himself drunk—foolishly drunk. The drunk Robert she loathed.

So that was the trouble, thought Lois, settling herself indolently against the pillows. Perhaps it wasn't a trouble at all—it was just fortunate that she had realized before it was too late the real nature of this Robert she had once liked.

But there were other disturbing thought waves passing through her mind—something else was wrong. It had suddenly dawned on Lois—though she had forgotten the fact in her hazy moments of waking—that this was the morning set for the final examination in psychology 79.

Suddenly as she was hurrying in to the neat little blue sport frock she had chosen for the day she realized that there wasn't the slightest advantage in hurrying now. Even if she went off to college without eating any breakfast, she wouldn't arrive until after eleven—too late for the examination.

Lois completed her dressing with considerable leisure—taking more than usual pains with the arrangement of her hair and the placing of the faint bit of rouge which she considered necessary to hide the traces of fatigue.

An hour later—at a little after eleven o'clock—Lois entered the office of Professor Stratton, well known psychologist, who lectured in psychology 79. He was a genial looking man of sixty, who at the moment sat at his desk with head turned to gaze lazily at the green campus trees through the open window in his office.

"I am sorry, Doctor Stratton," she said, "but I didn't wake up in time to get to the examination this morning. I would like to get credit, of course—though I hardly like to ask for a special examination."

Doctor Stratton regarded Lois without much show of personal interest. The fact was, he was always bored by the type of scatter-brained students of which apparently this young woman was typical. He told her that professors were not required to give special examinations save in cases of illness. Still he might regard her failure to wake in time for the examination in the nature of illness—mental if not physical. But he couldn't be bothered writing out a special examination for her. He would put it up to his assistant—Mr. Platt.

And so matters were arranged for a special examination the next morning at nine o'clock in Mr. Platt's small private office, and much relieved at this turn of events Lois went home—recollecting as she went a few conversations she had had with the young instructor.

"I have Doctor Stratton's permission to give an oral examination," Mr. Platt explained the next morning. "After all if I am anything of a psychologist I ought to be able to get your rating in the course rather easily." After this obviously premeditated introduction the young man looked a little confused and then laughed. Lois laughed, too. She said she liked the idea. There were things she could say about psychology that she couldn't write—because she wasn't always sure how to spell the words.

He asked a few questions—which he considered adequately answered after a few faltering remarks from Lois. A quarter of an hour of this and then it was over. He said he would give Doctor Stratton a good report.

Lois rose to go and Mr. Platt rose, too. "I'm awfully glad you did oversleep," he said, "because I've had a chance to know you a little better. Perhaps you'll give me permission to call some time."

Lois gave the young instructor an appraising glance. "I'd be charmed," she said. "Perhaps you could come this afternoon."

Late that summer Professor Stratton opened a letter from his young assistant. He read it with an expression of half-amusement, half-boredom. "So it goes," he said to his wife. "Feather-brained young woman oversleeps on morning of important examination which she possibly couldn't have passed. Clever young instructor gives her a rating of ninety-eight in fifteen minutes test—and within two months has taken her for his life mate."

LARGE TAX PAYERS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE CUT SCHOOL BUDGET

The following news item relative to the budgets of the Eddy county schools was sent us by the faculty of the Hope schools and we are reproducing it by request: Officials and gathered-at-random representatives of the association failed to accomplish, April 2, at the Carlsbad budget hearing, desired budget-trimming for schools, except Hope.

On March 28, a delegation of appointed men conferred with the Hope Board of Education about the desirability of reducing the school budget. The board on March 31 reduced the budget. On April 1, the board met again with the delegation which approved the cuts and promised that if they were left as made, the association would guarantee that others were reduced in proportion.

Members of the budget commission effected the cut as recommended by the "taxpayers," down valley school officials, and other Artesia-Carlsbad citizens, in addition to promising an additional 10% reduction.

Under the 1932-33 budgets, rural school teachers (all grades) will receive an average salary of $982; Carlsbad teachers an average of $1,170; Artesia's $1,200; Hope $1,060 (including high school) or $815 for grade teachers and $1,117 for high school—the equivalent of other school grade teachers.

Hope's budget was reduced from $23,755 to $19,041, a cut of $4,714 (equal to that sustained by one of the two larger county systems). Artesia's budget was reduced 10%, rural schools 11.5%, Carlsbad and Hope approved. As officials of Educational Association pressed it, the dominated entire four so-called "taxpayers" and other self-practically no taxpaying.
