Reese Defeats Chaves in Primary

LOVINGTON—The county commissioners Saturday at Lovington rejected a petition for an election to determine whether the Lea county seat should be removed from Lovington to Hobbs. Four reasons for the commissioners' actions were set forth. These were:

1. Insufficient number of qualified voters names on the petition.
2. The fact that the two towns are less than twenty miles apart.
3. That the title to the ground offered for the public building is not good.
4. That the grounds so offered are not in the town of Hobbs.

Lake McMillan Is Not Drained

Erroneous reports circulated here Tuesday morning, saying Lake McMillan had been drained, caused some uneasiness among local fishermen. An investigation by an Advocate representative proved the rumors without foundation. While the lake is low, an adequate supply of water will be maintained in the channel to keep the fish alive. According to information from the caretaker's office, the gauge Tuesday morning read sixteen feet. Plans have been made to pull the water level down to fourteen feet, but no more water will be taken from the lake for irrigation, at least for the present when the latter level is reached. A statement from the reclamation office Thursday said 7,000 acre feet of water was impounded in the lake at that time.

F. W. Sewell, aged 46, resident of Midland, Texas, for the past four or five years and former resident of Artesia, died suddenly at Midland Sunday afternoon at 6:00 o'clock after suffering from a cerebral hemorrhage, it was here Monday. While Mrs. Sewell had been in ill health for years, her untimely death shocked her friends here. Mr. Sewell made their home for four or five years, moving here in about 1930, where they lived for three years before going to Midland, Texas, to make a home. Mr. and Mrs. Sewell were a wide acquaintance among the fraternity of southeastern Texas. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon and interment was in a Midland cemetery. Mrs. Sewell went down Monday to the funeral services.

Local Football Schedule Has 7 Games This Fall

The following football schedule is not complete. In the past, it has been the practice for Artesia and Carlsbad to play two games, one here and one at Carlsbad. These games were played on Armistice and Thanksgiving days. There is a possibility that this practice will be discontinued this year in order to allow each school to play more schools in this area. Consequently, no date or place has been decided upon for the Artesia-Carlsbad games.

Thirty-Six Wells Completed During Past Thirty Days

Thirty-six new wells were completed in the southeastern New Mexico field in the period from July 15th to August 15th, according to figures released Monday by the proration office in Hobbs. At the same time it was announced that on August 15th there were 110 wells in active drilling or new locations. Of these, two that have attracted the attention of oil men are located near Lovington. These are wildcat locations of Magnolia Petroleum and Oil Well Drilling company. The latter well is reported drilling at below 4,000 feet. Drillers expect to bottom on this test at 4,800 to 5,000 feet. The allowable for this field was ninety-six barrels per well for the first fifteen days of August and has been set at ninety-four barrels per well for the last half. The state allowable for the period remains unchanged at 78,000 barrels.—Hobbs News.

50,000,000 Feet of Gas Developed In Leonard Well

A huge gasser has been developed in the Lanehart No. 1 of Harry Leonard, sec. 21-25-37, in the Jal district, southeastern Lea county, it was learned this morning. The Lanehart No. 1, was deepened 100 feet from 3000 to 3100 feet and registered an increase in both the oil and gas output. Estimates say the well from the latter depth is making 50,000,000 cubic feet and is flowing at the rate of six barrels of oil per hour. The original output of the well was given as thirty barrels daily. The No. 1 well is a quarter of a mile east of the No. 2 Lanehart, completed recently for one of Lea county's biggest producers, which gauged 285 barrels of oil per hour. Drillers are preparing to kill the gas in the No. 1 well.

Bertha Savoie Is Painfully Burned Friday Morning

Bertha Savoie, aged 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Savoie of the Dayton community, was painfully burned about her arms and hands Friday morning in an oil explosion. Miss Savoie, it was said, attempted to kindle a fire in a wood stove with coal oil and suffered painful burns in the explosion that followed. She had the presence of mind to roll up in a blanket and extinguish the flames. In the meantime, her small brothers, ages four and six, helped save the Savoie residence by putting out fires started in two different places. Fire which threatened to destroy the house started near the stove and had also started in the basement or cellar.

Earp Writes About A Malaria Project

The following letter from Dr. J. R. Earp, state health director, relative to the malaria control project is self-explanatory:

August 18, 1936

Mr. W. C. Martin,
Artesia Advocate,
Artesia, New Mexico.
Dear Mr. Martin:

I find your letter of August 7th waiting for me on my return from vacation. Our original plans for a drainage project in your district were abandoned because of lack of evidence that there is an actual malaria hazard in Artesia. Personally I should like to undertake the elimination of anopheline mosquitoes even though malaria is not present since the breeding of this species of mosquito is always a potential hazard to the population. I myself urged this point of view in Washington but was not able to secure the alteration of their firm edict that only where malaria is present may malaria control projects be established.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION

The ordinary pattern of a revolution is simple and well established: Comparatively radical or liberal elements within a country rise against a conservative or monarchist government. The French and American revolutions are examples of this.

The current Spanish revolution violates the accepted rules. The party in power in Spain—"The Government"—consists of so-called liberals and radicals, whose beliefs range all the way from a mild semi-socialism to communism. The rebels are the reactionaries—the Spanish equivalents of Tories and monarchists.

At this writing, the revolution is still in full swing, and both sides are claiming great victories, both say they are certain of success. Normally, such a civil war would not be of any great interest to America and Europe. But the chaotic European and Asiatic situations being what they are, the Spanish revolt is of tremendous international as well as national, significance.

Today, roughly speaking, all Europe is divided into two camps—fascists and anti-fascists. Germany is fascist. So is Italy. So is Austria. France is anti-fascist. The Spanish rebels, if they succeed, will establish a fascist government in Spain, and, following the German-Italian pattern, will rule through power of might, at the expense of all civil liberties. And if they fail, it will still be evident that a substantial minority in Spain is opposed to all liberal tendencies, favors a militaristic dictatorship. (The present Spanish government leaves much to be desired, in the light of American and British ideas of freedom, but, by comparison with Germany and Italy, it stands solidly for civil liberties.)

To continue, France is the last important mainstay of democracy in Europe. Even now, she is bordered on two sides by fascist states, which hate her and are hated by her in turn—Germany and Italy. If Spain goes fascist and, as would doubtless follow, enters into an accord with Germany and Italy, France would be almost entirely surrounded by inimical, fascist powers, all longing to tear the Tricolor from its mast. In that case, nothing but a miracle could prevent war.

It is strongly rumored that both Italy and Germany have been encouraging the Spanish rebels, have provided them with arms and other supplies.

In the Far East, Japan wishes to dominate the Pacific—but first, she wishes to dominate Asia. All that prevents the fulfillment of that ambition is Russia, which is possibly the best-armed country in the world, and which has almost limitless resources of all kinds. The experts are certain that in case of trouble, Japan and Germany would enter into an accord, and the enemies of 1914 would become allies.

The whole situation is charged with dynamite—there is no question but that the outlook is much darker even than in the dark days of 1913, before Sarajevo. One of the best of the foreign observers recently said that Europe has been drifting toward war for years—but that now it is marching. That is no exaggeration. And the "little Spanish match" could explode the whole powder keg.

From the commercial standpoint, the effects of the Spanish uprising will naturally be unfortunate, whichever side wins. When a country's resources must be given over to revolution, it has no money for cars, cotton, machinery, or the other goods Spain usually buys in some quantity from the United States. Furthermore, Business Week points out that "effects of Spanish trouble on France and Britain (our best customer, next to Canada) are more important to us than what happens to our own Spanish sales." Spain has been a very important purchaser of manufactured goods from England, loss of this business will hit Britain hard, have an unfavorable influence on her balance of trade, thus reduce her buying from other countries, including the United States.

"THEM MOSQUITOES"

Apparently a lot of local people have accepted the mosquito nuisance as a matter of course and evidently have reached the conclusion that nothing can be done about the situation. Well, if you are willing to sit and take what the mosquito gives, there is nothing we can do about it, but if you believe as we do that something can be done to rid this section of a health and comfort nuisance, give us your cooperation and effort. If no good is done, there is only a little wasted effort spent, but regardless of the outcome we can at least have the knowledge of the origin of the mosquitoes; whether or not they breed in alfalfa, grass and shrubbery, or if they originate in the still or stagnant water, as we believe they do. A survey might provide us with the means of effecting a partial control and this would help.

Rain barrels, fish and lily ponds sometimes provide breeding places in addition to the bogs and tin cans and other rubbish might even furnish a sufficient amount of water for a breeding place.

The Texas health department recommends a five-point inspection which might well be imulated here. These five points needing attention include:

1. Weeds and long grass which spring up almost overnight this time of year.
2. Cans and other rubbish which might furnish a sufficient amount of water for mosquitoes to breed. Inspection of fish ponds.
3. Garbage should be disposed of in such a manner that flies will not be attracted.
4. Outdoor toilets should be made sanitary.
5. Wells and cisterns should be inspected to see that the family water supply is free from contaminated material.

Every member of the community should do his part to remove nuisances and waste material now and keep them from becoming potential disease and death breeders."

CAMPAIGN AGAINST RECKLESSNESS

Two different motorists who have an occasion to travel quite a bit have observed there is saner driving on the highways today than ever before and they ascribe this improvement to the campaign being waged by newspapers and magazines against the unnecessary and untimely deaths from reckless and careless driving.

These motorists say the boys who used to whiz by them with the accelerator pressed to the floor board of the auto, now slow up in meeting another car and keep to the right side of the road, whereas

Chislings

The president of the Artesia Townsend club, the Honorable W. E. Ragsdale, says the recent poll conducted by the Albuquerque Tribune, in which an attempt was made to secure the opinion of those sixty years old and older relative to the Townsend plan was not fair with respect to this community. He says he could have picked a 100 per cent endorsement in the Artesia community for the $200 per month plan. On the other hand, had The Advocate known the membership roll of the local club, we could just as easily have picked ten men sixty or over who would have turned in a 100 per cent anti-Townsend ballot.

An ex-school teacher has sent in the following reasons why teachers get married:

Question: "What are glaciers?"
Answer: "Guys that fix windows when they are broken."

Question: "What is a peninsula?"
Answer: "A bird that lives on icebergs."

Question: "What is a volcano?"
Answer: "A mountain with a hole in the top. If you look down you can see the crater smoking."

Question: "Why does a dog hang out its tongue when running?"
Answer: "To balance its tail."

Question: "What is steel wool?"
Answer: "The fleece of a hydraulic ram."

Willie was being measured for his first made-to-order suit of clothes. "Do you want the shoulders padded, my little man?" inquired the tailor. "Naw," said Willie, "Pad the pants."

Women wouldn't make good prison wardens, because they won't let a man finish a sentence.

School Mistress: "I didn't have no fun at the seaside. How should I correct that, Tommy?"
Tommy: "Get a sweetheart, teacher."

Bill (over long-distance) "I'm stranded and need $500."
Father: "I can't hear you."
Operator: "I can hear him all right, Mr. Jones."
Father: "All right, you send him the $500."

A local man will vote for a new combination in the general election in November. He says he is going to vote for Dr. Townsend for president and Doc Brinkley for vice president. The Townsend plan will supply him money to live on and Doc Brinkley will fix him where he can live and enjoy life. There isn't but one thing wrong with this combination. Parson Smith or Parson "Share-the-Wealth" Smith should be on the ticket somewhere so as to see that the rest of us guys not eligible for the pension money could share the wealth with the pensioners.

In Spain the bulls are resting while the bullets are flying. Here the bullets are resting while the bull has started flying. Now which place would you prefer to live?

Pigs Is Pigs

Jud Perkins couldn't work in his fields because of the rain, so he sat beside the kitchen stove with his chin in his hands as cross as a bear with a jumpin' tooth. His two youngsters would have been tickled half to death if he had romped with them a bit, but he had no time or patience with "kids." That was the "old woman's" job.

The sharp squeal of a young pig in distress cut the air like a knife. Jud fairly flew out of the house on his way to the barnyard to see what might be the matter. The pig was worth considerable money, you see, and was sired by a thoroughbred—and that's more than you can say of the children.

Jud believes in the principles of prevention. His hogs have been immunized against cholera, and his dog against rabies; his oats are treated against smut and his fruit trees carefully sprayed.

But his children have not been protected against diphtheria or smallpox or typhoid. His stock, but not his kids, have been tuberculin tested; his crops, but not his kids, have been made the subject of study in a Farmers' Short Course; his cattle, but not his kids, have a carefully balanced ration. You see a balanced ration will produce better milk and cream—but kids don't give milk, more's the pity, because if they did, they would get more attention.

The number of immunizations done in Eddy county in the last few years proves that our children are more important to us than Jud's are to him. the driver used to see how fast he could drive in passing and how much of the road he could occupy. With cars being built for more speed, it is a question of the eventual extinction of the careless driver and too often the innocent motorist must suffer.

While the highways may be safer, there is plenty of room for improvement in our own vicinity, where youthful and inexperienced drivers break all traffic regulations.

Schools open soon too, which means that the vacation season is over in whizzing by the school grounds.

If you are inclined to go off at tangents and take up with the new, you should study the current European history. The people there who in many countries followed off the new isms now find they are being ruled by an iron handed dictator. Instead of having more civil liberties as were promised under the socialistic and fascist regimes, they have less than under the old time absolute monarchy.

A Missouri editor has just discovered what may have been known for a long time, that it is necessary to go to church early to get a back seat.

Goddard Seeks Lighter Rocket

The phenomenon of gravity which amazed Isaac Newton centuries ago confronts Dr. Robert H. Goddard as he nears a conclusive test in his twenty-year-effort to unveil the mysteries of the stratosphere with an instrument-laden rocket in his experimental laboratory near Roswell.

With two or three major problems solved, the Clark University professor now seeks materials that will cut by half the weight of his present eighty-pound rocket and thus increase the amount of fuel it can carry.

Success in that, he believes, would more than double the height to which a rocket could be fired with the fuel now used.

The problems of obtaining a continuous flow of firing energy and of direction stabilization—by means of a "mechanical brain"—already have been solved.

Since 1932, Dr. Goddard and his staff have worked constantly near Roswell under funds granted by the Daniel and Florence Guggenheim foundation. The grant will expire in September and it has been indicated the scientist will try for a final test before that time.

His fellow scientists hope that Dr. Goddard will achieve a flight of 100 miles or more. The flight would be an arch, more or less steep, but on the question of the possible height to be attained, Dr. Goddard himself is reticent.

Should a flight of 100 miles be reached, however, scientists feel that an automatic camera could photograph the spectrum of the sun, obtaining ultra-violet lines screened out by the atmosphere.

Direction of the rocket is scientifically controlled by a gyroscope no larger than a watch.

Each instrument to be put aboard for the final test will be automatically released to return to earth in an individual parachute.

The tremendous force following the mixture of the rocket's fuel—gasoline and liquid oxygen—has made it difficult to get accurate observations during the tests.

"It's not much use," complained Dr. Goddard. "Each observer claims it's too much like his idea of the end of the world. After each test we've always found every man down on his knees, hugging the bottom of the observation pit."

DISTRICT WATER SUPPLY IS LOW

The water supply in the Carlsbad irrigation district reservoirs last Thursday stood at 7,000 feet, not enough to last through the month. L. E. Foster, project superintendent, announced.

Foster said that much of the cotton was in the third irrigation, and that there is little fear for the crop.

The greatest need now is water for the sowing of fall crops, and a rain any time this month will take care of that need, the project superintendent believes.

There has been sufficient water thus far to meet all the needs of Eddy county farmers, Foster said, and there is enough in the reservoirs now to last ten more days.

When Instinct Fails

The essence of human wisdom, distilled from the experience of many thousands of years, is represented in our instincts. When we are thirsty we seek water and drink until our thirst is quenched. Long ago those who failed to respond to this urge or who never felt it failed also in the struggle for existence. We have no need to reason when we touch something that is very hot: our hand is drawn away before we have time to think. Should something threaten to strike us in the eye our eyelids close of themselves.

Our instincts fail only when we have to deal with dangers that are new to the human race. Thus appetite is a safe guide in eating so long as we eat the food which our ancestors have eaten for thousands of years. But when modern cookery rejects bones and entrails and dishes up only muscle meat our instinct fails to warn us that we are missing essential elements in our food. We must listen to the dietitian who can tell us how to get a complete diet from our modern foodstuff. Instinct cannot tell us when to stop eating sugar because refined sugar is a modern product in the use of which racial experience is lacking. The law of the survival of the fittest is at work here as is seen by the increasing amount of diabetes. Nature will in time kill off those among us who cannot control our craving for too much sugar.

Modern medicine, too, has introduced new perils to health even with the very remedies that save life. The arsenamines that will cure syphilis if given early in the disease and over a long enough time, are actually harmful to the syphilitic if he takes only a few doses and stops taking treatment as soon as his symptoms disappear. In New Mexico the doctors tell me that patients with syphilis usually seek treatment in the secondary stage with sore throat and skin rashes. This is the stage at which nature is building up resistance to the disease. A few doses of arsenphenamine will cure the sore throat but will also stop the natural processes of immunity leaving the patient who discontinues treatment worse off than if he had no treatment at all. A few years later he will relapse with disease of the heart or blood vessels which cannot be cured. Nature is still distilling her wisdom and only the wise survive.

STARS OF YESTERDAY AND TODAY

—FROM NICKOLODEON TO TALKIE—

Twenty-five years ago, Florence Lawrence was known as the "Biograph Girl." She was as well known as Claudette Colbert and Marlene Dietrich are today.

Pictures of these forgotten favorites have been dug from the files of Photoplay on the silver anniversary of that publication.

MARIE ELINE, the first of a long line of child screen stars. Known as the "Thanouser Kid", she led the way for the more modern Jackie Coogan's and Freddie Bartholomews that were to follow Shirley Temple, the greatest box office draw in the history of motion pictures, has captivated the present-day fans as Marie Eline did twenty-five years ago.

MARY PICKFORD, America's sweetheart, then and now. In 1911 Mary was playing little-girl parts with ability that made her the favorite of those early movie houses. Today she does not act but still carries on in the motion picture industry, is a producer in her own rights.

Conserving Range Duck Season Is Again 30 Days May Increase Feed

Reduction in numbers of low producing livestock will not reduce the total pounds of livestock produced on western ranges, according to P. E. Neale, animal husbandman, who presented, at the stockmen's meeting held at State College August 12th, results obtained on the State College experimental range.

The most economical use of feed naturally depends upon its efficiency in producing pounds of salable livestock. Before any salable production, there is a big carrying charge in the form of maintenance that must be met. The breeding stock uses this maintenance to keep it alive and in working order. It is only the amount of feed left over after this carrying charge for maintenance is supplied that can be used for production.

With a thirty per cent calf crop, there has to be three cows for one calf. With a ninety per cent calf crop there is a little over one cow per calf. With the thirty per cent calf crop, ninety per cent of the range feed is used for maintenance, while with the ninety per cent calf crop, only seventy-three per cent of the range feed is used for maintenance. If the cow herd having a thirty per cent calf crop that is grazing on an area would be reduced so that the maintenance requirements were not so high, there would be more feed left for production; so that with a reduction of numbers, the production will not decrease but will even increase because there will be more feed left for production. It has been demonstrated on the 100 section college ranch that reducing the number of cows on the range increases the size of cows and increases the number and size of calf so that there is approximately sixty-five per cent more pounds of calf produced.

"Nutrition studies have shown that the sheep that have good feed produce as much as three times the wool as those on poor feed. A relative increase of lamb crop is also produced.

While a good breed of cattle is important in efficient production, ample allowance of feed per animal is essential for best production.

Tri-State Fair To Open Sept. 21

AMARILLO, Texas—With increased cash premiums, more exhibit space, better amusement features and added departments, the Tri-State Fair will open its fourteenth annual exposition here, September 21st.

"Interest in the 1936 exposition has started earlier than ever in the history of the association and there is every indication of a banner year for the Tri-State Fair," declared O. L. "Ted" Taylor, secretary-manager.

Gene Howe—"Old Tack"—this year is president of the Tri-State Fair.

More than 4,000 catalogs, carrying a list of premiums amounting to approximately $20,000 and all guaranteed for payment in full, have been mailed.

"The Tri-State Fair has the money in the bank right now to pay all the premiums offered," said Taylor.

Since the first catalogs were issued there has been a heavy demand for premium lists. Copies may be obtained by writing to the Tri-State Fair.

For the first time since 1932 the Tri-State Fair this year will have a full poultry department, arranged to meet the insistent demand of fanciers throughout the southwest.

Earl Curry of Amarillo will be superintendent of the department.

"The accommodate the ever-increasing crowds that attend the Tri-State Fair the association since last year's exposition has spent approximately $35,000 in improvements," explained Mr Taylor.

The Advocate's Tested Recipe

By Frances Lee Barton

TRAVEL the whole world over and you will not find a more entrancing fragrance—according to my lights—than the smell of a fresh-baked cherry cobbler, or a more enticing sight than a good-sized square of it with hard sauce, flavored with a hint of clove, or with thick, sweet cream to pour over it. I always make a lot—because my sons bring all the younger neighbors in to sample it.

Sour Cherry Cobbler
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca; ¼ cup sugar; 2 tablespoons melted butter; 3 cups pitted and drained sour red cherries, fresh or canned; 1 cup cherry juice; 2 cups sifted flour; 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder; ¼ teaspoon salt; 6 tablespoons butter or other shortening; ¾ cup milk (about).
Combine quick-cooking tapioca, sugar, butter, cherries, and cherry juice; let stand while crust is being made. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk gradually, stirring until soft dough is formed. Turn out on slightly floured board and knead 30 seconds, or enough to shape. Roll 2/3 of dough in strip, 2 inches wide and ¼ inch thick; line sides of 8 x 8 x 2-inch pan, fitting closely into corners. Roll remaining 1/3 dough ¼ inch thick; with sharp knife make slits to permit escape of steam. Fit over cherries, pressing edges of dough together with fork dipped in flour. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 15 minutes; then reduce heat to moderate (350° F.) and bake 25 to 30 minutes longer. Sprinkle powdered sugar over top, if desired.

AIR STREAMS GONE WRONG KEEP RAIN FROM FALLING

The heavenly set-up this summer has been all wrong for adequate rainfall between the Rocky and Appalachian mountains, according to C. L. Mitchell, forecaster for the Washington, D. C., district of the Weather Bureau. From the first of June till the latter part of July the air stream that makes weather persistently followed abnormal paths. Unchecked by polar air, a great current of tropical air went round and round in a vast irregular circle—up the western part of the Great Plains and the Rocky mountain and plateau regions, across southern Canada, down the eastern part of the central valley region, and back across the continent.

There was no lack of moisture aloft, Mr. Mitchell says, but the machinery for squeezing it out was lacking. Nature produces rain by bringing together two air masses—a cold mass and a warm, moist mass. When the two opposing masses meet, the warm air is forced up over the cold, denser air. The warm air is soon cooled to a point at which it can no longer hold all its moisture.

To keep the United States cool and moist, cold air masses ("high") must either come down from Canada or they must come in from the north Pacific ocean. This year the "high" have been in the south and the "lows" in the north—a situation that makes normal summer weather impossible.

Mr. Mitchell ascribes the summer's unusually high temperatures, in large part at least, to the failure of "high" from the north Pacific to move often enough inland over Washington and Oregon and thence eastward over Montana, Wyoming, and the Dakotas. These polar air masses from the Pacific effectually interrupt the northward movement of tropical air over the western half of the United States, and, if they occur at least once every six days, prevent the development of a heat wave over northern areas west of the Mississippi river.

SCREW WORMS ATTACK WINKLER COUNTY COWBOY

Previous attempts of this paper at levity over the Andrews County News' headline to the effect that "Screw Worms Ravage Local Ranchers," followed by a facetious account of treatments given by a local ranchman to his Ford pickup, said to have had a bad case of worms, were knocked pretty flat this week by an item included in the routine report of District Supervisor Marcus Gist to the state offices. Gist's report included an account of an actual case in which a Winkler county cowpuncher was actually treated for worms, late last week.

The puncher, it was reported, was bitten by an ant on the chest and after a day or two seemed to be suffering unusually prolonged pain from the sting. He went to a hospital at Wink for treatment, and physicians were unable to diagnose the case. Finally, he decided he had worms, and when physicians applied chloroform to the wound, just as punchers do to the wormy cattle, several half-grown worms were taken out. Odessa Times.

Ranges May Be Under Soil Act

An attempt is to be made to bring stockmen under the revisions of the soil conservation and domestic allotment act, according to D. A. Shoemaker, assistant state forester, who recently returned from a meeting in Salt Lake City, a press report given out last week stated.

According to Shoemaker the representatives of the AAA are holding meeting to define the provisions of the act, its limitations and administrative considerations, with a view to having the stockmen suggest what may be required in the several states in order to set aside some of the private range land for conservation purposes.

The suggestions will then be sent to Washington where such as are applicable may be approved.

Through county and state committees the compliance of stockmen to the requirements will be certified, in the event the program can be worked out, and then the stockmen will be eligible for benefits as now are farmers.

It was pointed out that there are about 35,000,000 acres of private range lands in New Mexico.

It was said that if the program can be worked out, it would be not earlier than about September 15th before the actual setting aside of land could begin. The project possibilities expire December 31st, but it was believed that congress will allocate a sum "not more than $500,000,000" for continuation of soil conservation programs.

ETHIOPIAN LEGEND HELPS TO DISCREDIT CLIMBER

An Ethiopian legend to the effect that Menelik I, son of King Solomon and Queen Sheba, ascended Mt. Kilimanjaro when old and laid himself down to sleep forever, was a big reason why the natives did not believe that a white man had really climbed Africa's highest mountain ten years ago.

One of the very few ever to ascend the mountain, this white man told the natives about it, but he was not believed. The reason for this skepticism was that the natives did not believe that a white man had really climbed Africa's highest mountain ten years ago.

The interest of New Mexicans in working out some kind of a non-political system for selecting the judges in the state is spreading, according to Judge Bratton, chairman of the committee called for this purpose, held its first meeting on Monday of this year.

A committee of twelve, appointed at this conference and headed by Robert A. Morrow of Roswell, is now at work drawing up the text of several plans that will be submitted to a second conference to be called at some future date.

One Per Cent Less Wool Shorn In 1936

The amount of wool shorn or to be shorn in 1936 is 361,265,000 pounds, according to the preliminary estimate of the Department of Agriculture. This is 3,398,000 pounds or one per cent less than the amount shorn in 1935 and 6,023,000 pounds or one and one-half per cent less than the five-year average 1931-1935.

The decrease in wool production this year was due to a decline in the average weight per fleece, the number of sheep shorn in 1936 being but little different from the number shorn in 1935. The average weight per fleece this year was 7.94 pounds compared with 8.02 pounds in 1935. Lower fleece weights were reported in all areas except the south central states.

Wages Highest In United States

GENEVA, Switzerland—The International Labor Headquarters has just made public figures showing that wages paid to American workers are by far the highest in the world.

Except for four other nations, the American standard was twice as high as that in the thirteen countries covered in the study. In making the computation, the International Labor Headquarters made allowances for differences in living costs so that the index accurately represents the worker's real income.

Chain Camp Court May Locate Here

The United States Hotel Corporation of New York, a corporation organized for building camp cottages and camp courts, is projecting a chain of 500 motor courts throughout the United States and plans have been made to locate one unit and possibly two units in the Pecos valley, it was learned here.

In making a survey of the possible locations, the corporation has requested information on securing six acres of ground for a building site, the requirements being a highway frontage of 450 feet.

According to current information, there are two classes of units—the commercial unit consisting of either 36 or 70 cottages (depending upon location) and second, the resort unit consisting of 36, 70, 106 or 140 cottages equipped for house-keeping.

It is the plan of the company, which may be a subsidiary of the Chrysler Motor corporation, to make this chain of courts the very finest in the country. The company contemplates having each cottage air-conditioned and heated, equipped with Simmons beds and Beauty Rest mattresses, rubber tile flooring, circulating ice water, radio, modernistic furniture and enclosed private garages.

Each unit will have a cafe of the better type, a spacious lounge, modern rest rooms, Western Union office, service bureau and in the resort units—a grocery store.

Each unit will have a modern service station where 24-hour service will be maintained. Facilities for washing and greasing cars will be a part of the station's equipment.

According to information, many of the largest corporations in America are taking a definite part in designing, planning and building this chain of camps.

Fascinating Tales of Lost Mines BY EDITHA L. WATSON

THE BRYFOGLE MINE

THREE men were crossing the Nevada desert in 1806. One was an old Dutchman named Bryfogle, and the others were young southerners, who had come along with him on a prospecting trip.

Out in that lonely land the three found a ledge which seemed to be very rich in gold, and they each staked a claim and took some samples to be assayed when they should reach a town.

At Austin, Nev., they had the ore tested, and it proved rich enough to excite Bryfogle immensely. The younger men, who felt that they had seen quite enough of desert life, made over their claims to the Dutchman and went on their various ways. But Bryfogle, optimistic desert rat that he was, set about organizing a company to go out and develop the mine, and he succeeded in interesting a number of men.

The party started out in high spirits, expecting to go directly to the ledge and there start to work. But the route seemed to be entirely too long and tortuous; Bryfogle led them first in one direction and then in another, and at last, after several weeks spent in wandering about the desert, the old Dutchman confessed that he had lost the way.

At first, in the sudden depression of their spirits, the party was wrought up almost to the point of lynching the old man. Still, such an action would not help matters, and second thoughts showed them that there was nothing to do but return to Austin.

Bryfogle did not agree with this decision. He wanted to stay in the desert, to hunt still longer for the ledge which he knew lay out there somewhere. If they would only leave him some provisions, he said, he would keep on searching, and then he was sure to find the place at last.

With the hope that this might happen, the party yielded to Bryfogle's pleas. They gave him provisions for a long stay, and returned home, while he set out to run down that elusive ledge. He might have found it if circumstances had been favorable. But in his wanderings he met a band of Plutes, and they attacked him, striking him on the head. He escaped with his life, but his memory was gone.

Others have wandered ever since, just as aimlessly, in search of that rich ledge of ore. But it seems to be lost for good.

Gallup Prepares For Ceremonial

GALLUP—Indians of thirty tribes have accepted the invitation of the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial Association to compete in the fifteenth annual Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial at Gallup, New Mexico, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 26, 27, 28. Indications are that 7,000 Indians will attend.

For the three Ceremonial days and nights the Indians will engage in their authentic dances, rites, chants, sports and arts and crafts. At no other time or place in the United States can such a variety of Indians be seen following tribal customs handed down for generations.

From New Mexico, Arizona and Utah thousands of Navajo will swarm into Gallup for the Ceremonial. They act as host to the other tribes attending, among which will be the Sioux of South Dakota, Kiowa and Pawnee of Oklahoma, Hopi and San Carlos Apache of Arizona, and Zuni, San Ildefonso, Taos, Santa Clara, Tesuque, Zia, Santa Ana, Jemez and other tribes from New Mexico.

Ceremonial programs occur each afternoon and evening, the sports, races, games and a few dances being scheduled for the afternoons. Each morning at 10:30 there is a parade of the Indians through downtown Gallup. Evening programs are filled with dances, chants, rites, Indian magic and Indian music. Every Ceremonial event is a competition for cash prizes for excellence.

GOP Platform

ALBUQUERQUE—Action of the republicans of New Mexico in writing "old age pension principles" in their platform adopted Tuesday night, was termed a commitment "to the underlying principles of the Townsend Plan" by a prominent member of the party.

The statement came from E. R. Wright, Santa Fe attorney and former supreme court justice, who initiated the unsuccessful convention floor battle which ended in unanimous ratification of the resolution committee's report. Wright asserted the plank was similar to the old age pension plan as sponsored by the Townsendsites, of whom there were many in Tuesday night's delegation.

Chairman Reed Holloman of the resolutions committee, answered Wright's contention with the remark that "if anyone cannot understand the contested provision they cannot... say... it is a definite commitment to any plan." Opposition to the old age security plank centered around the word "revolving" and one of the speakers against its adoption, Cyrus McCormick, national committee man, urged the delegates "not to become involved in the meshes of economic debate."

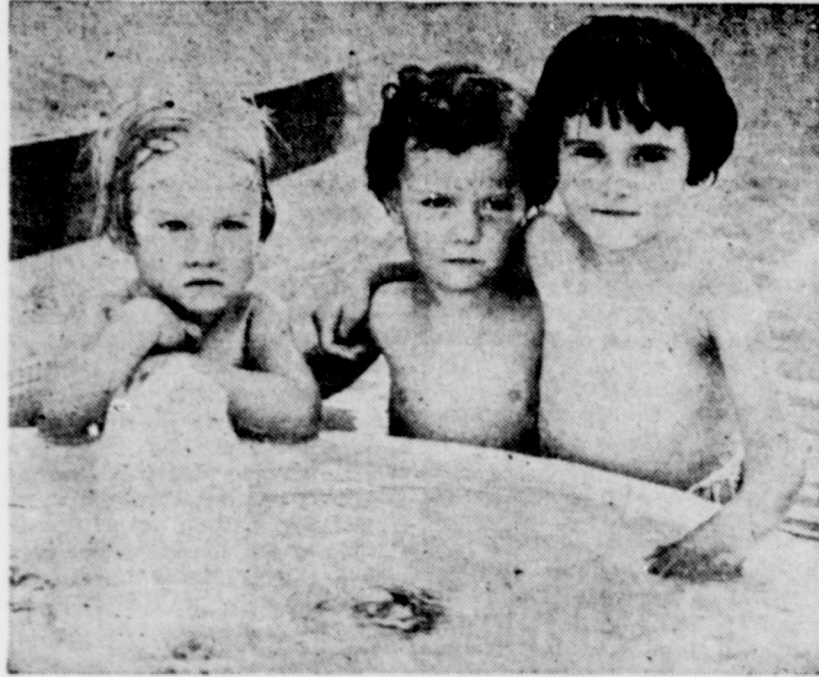

Waste and extravagance in the New Mexico relief and security authority was censured.

"The practice of requiring a paper's affidavit before an aged person can procure relief from want has no part in a civilized society," it concluded.

"Unfair and niggardly treatment" of the veterans was condemned by the party with the assertion its representatives in congress would be pledged to enactment of laws for adequate care of all disabled ex-service men, and their dependents.

Other provisions were: A denunciation of the state administration toward educational institutions.

Their Thrill at the Expo

This is a sure way to beat the heat, according to the trio of young ladies who were visiting the Ford building at the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas. The mothers were present to see that the daughters hung their clothes on a hickory limb. The picture was made as the children paddled in the reflecting basin of the band shell in the Ford court. CHAVES COUNTY MAN WINS

The high court found he had been convicted under a statute relating to any property, whereas, he should have been tried under that section of the law dealing exclusively with neat cattle.

Justice A. L. Zinn wrote the opinion which was unanimous.

Tuberculin Tests

The founders of the tuberculosis movement realized that only thru broad education of the public could any progress against tuberculosis be made. Yet this could be accomplished only with the understanding support of the people. They must know that tuberculosis is curable and preventable, that it is not a stigma, and that facilities for diagnosis and treatment must be liberally provided. Today practically every avenue of reaching the attention of the masses is sued.

Each year tuberculosis associations select a certain theme to emphasize during that year. This year the slogan is "Fight Tuberculosis with Modern Weapons." The two objectives aimed for are (a) to remind people of the early symptoms of tuberculosis and the importance of consulting the doctor on their appearance, (b) to arouse interest in the routine search for early tuberculosis before there are symptoms and physical signs.

To achieve the former, booklets, articles, and outlines for talks have been prepared calling attention to the four most common symptoms of early tuberculosis (as determined by surveys of large numbers of sanatorium patients), namely, fatigue, loss of weight, cough that hangs on, and indigestion. The second objective sought is to encourage routine search for symptoms of tuberculosis among groups of young people such as high school and college students.

Tuberculosis sanatorium statistics indicate that the ratio of "early cases" admitted has not increased appreciably during the past ten years. Many conscientious doctors constantly on the alert for tuberculosis have despaired of increasing their batting average of discovering the disease in its incipient stage. The reason for that failure cannot be blamed entirely on the apathy of patients nor on the lack of vigilance of doctors. It is to be accounted for in part by the fact that the transition from "early" or "silent" tuberculosis to the moderately advanced stage is usually a relatively swift one and only by the barest chance is the minimal case detected. So long as we are obliged to wait until symptoms betraying pulmonary damage drive the patient to the doctors, we shall probably continue to despair.

Wrestling with this deplorable state of affairs, efforts have been made to devise some way of detecting tuberculosis in its silent stage among apparently healthy people. Doctors Chadwick, Rathbun, Myers and others pioneered in introducing the scheme of examining routinely, with tuberculin and X-rays, students in colleges and high schools. The routine examination of all students brings to light early cases that might otherwise be undetected and progress to disabling disease. Last year all students of a large state university were examined by the tuberculin-X-ray method and seventeen cases of adult type pulmonary tuberculosis, all symptomless, were found. Contrast this with the usual method of "passive" case finding, i. e., waiting for persons to apply to the doctor for the relief of symptoms. During the course of the same year fifteen cases of tuberculosis had been discovered among students who came to the doctor because of one or another symptom. Twelve of the fifteen were advanced cases and were obliged to leave school.

In high school the story is substantially the same except that fewer cases of adult type tuberculosis are found. However, follow-up work of adolescent children with significant childhood type lesions leads the investigators into many homes where there is an open case. This is important, for the real threat to the youngster is probably not the calcified remains of a primary complex but daily contact with a source of infection. No wonder proponents of the routine tuberculin-X-ray plan emphasize the value of locating such sources of infection.

It is hoped that ultimately parents will depend upon the family doctor to examine their children as a matter of course with tuberculin and the X-ray when indicated. In the meantime, the Tuberculosis association with the aid of other private and public agencies will strive to show the need for early diagnosis through school surveys.

THE FLYING ACE!
See the Human Comet—Zooming In Thrilling, Death-defying Stunts! TODAY at the MIDDLETOWN Fair!!

BILL RANDALL brought his low-built, snappy yellow roadster to a stop in front of the Middletown General store to read the flaming red poster in the window.

"I'll take a spin out to the big shindig and see what's up," Bill said to himself.

The big roadster shot down the highway toward the fair grounds, leaving a trail of dust and of gasping natives in its wake. As he neared the air field, Bill could hear the throb of the motor in the air.

Fascinated, he saw it come nearer and nearer to him. It lifted a little—lost altitude again—and then shot right at his car. Instinctively Bill ducked. There seemed to be the roar of a thousand railroad engines in his ear, a rending of the canvas top of his car and the plane shot upward. As the plane speeded upward and onward, Bill drew a long breath as he looked at the torn remnants of canvas hanging on the body of his car. "Human comet—my eye!" he whistled softly. "That guy must be a meteor!"

He watched the plane circle over the field and sweep down to land at the far end of the field. The pilot jumped from the cockpit and came dashing across the field toward Bill.

"I'm awfully sorry I scalped your car!" With a single gesture the Flying Ace snatched off helmet and goggles and tossed back an unruly mop of wavy, curly, chestnut colored hair. "I really only meant to give you a scare."

Bill's eyes did not cover up his amazement. This flying ace was a girl! And Aubrey Garrett at that! Wonders will never cease. Finally Bill regained some of his lost poise and grinned at the attractive girl in front of him. "What do you do with the scalps you collect? Hang 'em on the wall of your plane for souvenirs?"

"Well, that's not a bad idea. Seeing that yours is the first I've taken, I think you ought to be honored."

"Honored, but slightly shaky in the pins, but—" That was as far as Bill got. Mr. Wilson, the chairman of the fair, came running toward them. "I'm sorry, Miss Garrett, but I'll have to cancel that agreement I made with you. These people have all seen loops before. They want to see something novel."

Bill hated Mr. Wilson for causing that hurt look in Aubrey's eyes.

But it didn't last. A smile covered her face as she turned to Bill and said, "Want to go up? We can show 'em some tricks."

A few minutes later they were starting. Aubrey was flying a bit wild.

They were directly over the field when something happened. Aubrey was flying high. Perhaps they hit an unexpected air pocket. Bill didn't have time to think what had happened as they were headed for old terra firma with a sickening speed. There was Aubrey standing in her cockpit frantically waving to Bill to jump. There was Bill waving back to her and shaking his head. Then suddenly there was a jerk, a shudder of the whole plane, a rocking in the air, and the machine straightened out and slid along level with the ground, just above the hill!

As they taxied across the field, Bill could hear the thunderous applause of the spectators above the roof of the motor. And as they made a safe landing, people swarmed around the plane. Mr. Wilson came pushing his way through the crowd to Aubrey.

"That was marvelous!" he said. "Heavens, thought Bill, does the man think she did that swoop on purpose? That was wonderful. I'll give you another hundred to do it again!"

Bill got out of the plane and joined Aubrey. "She won't do it again today, Mr. Wilson," he said. "That was the grand climax."

To Aubrey he whispered, "Come on over to the car. We'll take a little spin and I'll do the piloting."

Aubrey looked very small and white to Bill as he stopped the car. "Now, if you don't mind telling me I'd like to know just what happened to us up in the heavens a little while ago." Bill's voice was gentle.

"It slipped," said Aubrey. "And I thought I had lost control. I thought that if you jumped it would be all right—at least you'd be safe. But, good heavens, when you wouldn't jump, there was nothing left for me to do but to grab that stick and hold it. I didn't want to wreck you and your car both on the same day."

"So that was it, young lady. But you're wrong. You've wrecked my life as well as the top of my car because I've taken an awful flop. Aubrey, I love you! And it's high time I realized it. But now that I have let's make up for lost time by getting married. Are you with me?"

Aubrey's smile conveyed her answer.

Depopulation of Plains Talk Is Foolish Says Tugwell At Amarillo

Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, in an address at Amarillo Monday said "all this talk about depopulation of the Great Plains is foolish. We don't want to depopulate the country; we want to fortify it to withstand drought."

Dr. Tugwell made a breakfast table talk as members of the president's drought commission assembled for a 3,000-mile inspection tour.

Members of the committee were asked at a press conference for comment on the survey published Sunday by the University of Pennsylvania from Dr. C. W. Thornwaite, a climatologist, recommending that 59,000 families be moved off drought-damaged farms.

"Federal agencies are working to prevent depopulation, and the particular agency I represent, the resettlement administration, is doing its utmost to prevent it," said Tugwell.

"If some nation told us they would lick us in war we would say 'the hell you are,'" said Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator and chairman of the commission.

"Some people might say this is not a permanent country, that the drought might drive the residents away."

"We are out to prove that: the hell this isn't a permanent country."

The commission met with the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce and representatives of agriculture in the Texas and Oklahoma parishes.
