Artesia Is Getting More Conscious About Annual V-J Celebration

It's summertime and Artesia is getting more conscious of its annual celebration each day than a high school girl marking off days on the calendar in anticipation of her first date.

The traditional Western garb is coming into the spotlight like a scene-stealer from summer stock.

All this—and a rodeo too—is a part of the fourth annual United Veterans Club Victory over Japan Rodeo and Celebration which opens Thursday, Aug. 10, ends Saturday, Aug. 12.

Place of the rodeo will be Artesia Municipal Park, where on last Sunday a crew of volunteers put up a hog wire fence. A lot more remains to be done though and Don Bush, publicity chairman of the celebration, announced a need for work details beginning Monday night, Aug. 7.

Staging the annual state American Legion junior baseball tourney at the park, Aug. 3-6, will hold up the work temporarily. Still to be built is a rodeo arena fence, a pair of concession stands, chutes, and catch pens, and stands will have to be moved in on the south side.

New Rodeo Events

Howard Brown, the Dublin, Texas, rodeo maestro, has informed Bush he will have two added attractions, a wild mule and a cutting horse contest.

Brown will bring six mules, never before roped, to Artesia. The cutting horse contest will add $150 to the purse. Entry fee in that event is $15.

Brown will close an exhibition in Fort Worth on Aug. 5, and is expected to make a trip here on Aug. 7, preliminary to final arrangements.

Rodeo tickets, at $2, $1.50, and 75 cents, are slated to go on sale today at Mid-Valley Investment, Artesia Pharmacy, and Keys Men's Wear.

Boy Balloonists Needed

To guide the 35 giant balloons that will be a feature of the parade, at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Aug. 10, 135 boys are needed.

As an inducement to obtain these volunteers, Bush said a deal had been worked out whereby boys under 16 performing this chore would be issued receipts, after the work is done, and these receipts could be exchanged for a general admission rodeo ticket.

The parade is under the Artesia Junior Chamber of Commerce, which has worked hard to get floats for the event. There is still time for floats to be entered, and Bush said, despite the spectacular attraction of the balloons, more floats are eagerly sought.

Route of the parade will be from Main and 12th to east on Main to Second, south to Richardson, west to 13th. Earl D. Westfall, police chief, is parade marshal.

Central Office

Complete and latest guide to data on the celebration is available at a central information office set up in Veterans Memorial Building, telephone 559-J.

This place can supply the information in connection with boys volunteering to "ground chauffeur" the balloons, to naming all the committee chairmen.

Arm of the Law

Judge Roy Bean's court is due to begin its three-day session on Aug. 7, according to Bush, with Jack Fautleroy in the role of the magistrate.

There likely will be fines assessed for more "offenses" than there are ways of exceeding the national debt with Fautleroy as hard-boiled a dictator as the royal economists of post-War Between the States days.

Meanwhile the judge is stroking his celebration whiskers, studying the "law," and figuring out ways and means of getting all the revenue possible into his court.

The Penasco Valley has been fortunate in escaping the horde of mosquitoes that have infested other localities. We understand that Artesia was dusted Sunday morning and 99 per cent of the mosquitoes killed for which the people of Artesia are truly thankful.

Boosters Spread Celebration News On Trip Saturday

A comedy skit, a square dance team, and a group of enthusiastic boosters on Saturday carried the message of the coming fourth annual V-J celebration and rodeo to five Southeast New Mexico communities.

On the first of two such trips, a caravan of automobiles from Artesia visited Carlsbad, Hobbs, Lovington, Tatum, and Roswell.

Another booster trip will be made next Saturday, when the motorcade from Artesia goes to Cloudcroft, Alamogordo, Las Cruces, and El Paso.

Much fun was provided on the trip Saturday, when members of the party from Artesia staged a "shotgun wedding" on the main street of the various towns. And at two towns they had the help of home talent.

In the skit, the "bride," played by Floyd Howard, pointed out to her "father," Homer Gary, the man she was to marry. A chase always ensued, with the "father" firing his shotgun, capturing the "bridegroom," and taking him before Judge Roy Bean, the Law West of the Pecos, who is being played again this year by Jack Fautleroy and who will be much in evidence at the local "clink" in the next few days.

At most of the stops, "Curley" Lipton was the "bridegroom," but at Lovington Lea County Sheriff Horace Owens was corraled for the wedding, and at Tatum a local businessman was pressed into service. The "son-in-law" and "daughter-in-law" of the "father" were "Dutch" Akard and Frances Maxwell. The square dancers performed at each stop.

The caravan was piloted on the entire trip by State Police Patrolman Bud South.

Junior Rodeo In Santa Rosa

A gigantic parade, with floats, wagons, picturesque vehicles of bygone days, contestants, the flashily dressed Guadalupe County sheriff's posse, sheriff's posses possibly from Tucumcari and La Vegas and probably the mounted patrol of De Baca County, miscellaneous cars, etc., will open the big three-day gala event, in Santa Rosa—the second annual national championship high school rodeo.

The town will be decorated Monday Aug. 7, with rodeo banners, bunting, welcome signs and other evidences of the western sports playtime.

Prizes are to be offered for the most beautiful floats and much interest is developing with hopes that various organizations and groups will have entries, the best dressed cowboy and cowgirl, are to receive recognition, adding to incentive for a highly decorated assemblage of girls and boys in the parade.

Sgt. C. E. Wimberly, brother of Iva Lee Wimberly of Hope, is flying to Washington, D. C., from Germany. His sister, Mrs. Myrtle Westfall, will meet him in Washington. From there they will go to Grand Junction, Colo. to visit Mrs. Myrtle Wimberly, Iva Lee's and C. E.'s mother. Later they will fly to Los Angeles, Calif., to visit Henry Wimberly.

Hollis Buckner went to Carlsbad last Friday returning home Saturday. Mrs. Margaret Meador was up from Artesia Sunday and visited with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Buckner.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Cox moved into the Jack Wasson house Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wasson have moved to Portales.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lea are vacationing in the Gila Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Marlar spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lea. They were accompanied home by their daughter, Sarah May who had spent the past week with her aunt and uncle.

Artesia's V-J Day Plans Final

The United Veterans Club of Artesia, has announced final plans for its 4th annual V-J Day celebration on Aug. 10, 11, 12.

The celebration will kick-off with a mammoth three-mile long parade at 4 o'clock on Aug. 10. The parade will contain many floats from Artesia and surrounding trade area, several bands and as a feature attraction, the parade will contain about 35 giant figure balloons. These balloons have been brought from Pittsburgh, Pa., by the Artesia Junior Chamber of Commerce which is sponsoring this parade.

(The cost of these balloons has been underwritten by the following Artesia firms: Artesia Alfalfa Growers Association, Artesia Auto Co., Cox Motor Co., Evans Hardware Co., Guy Chevrolet Co., Mahone-Smith Motor Co., New Mexico Asphalt & Refining Co. and Russell Auto Supply Co.)

On each night of Aug. 10, 11 and 12 at 8 o'clock, the United Veterans Club will present Howard Brown and his world championship rodeo. Brown hails from Dublin, Texas and has told the Artesia veterans his stock this year will be some of the wildest to perform in this part of the country. The rodeo carries an added purse of $2000 and some of the chief performers of the nation intend to be present.

The events include saddle-bronc riding, bareback riding, calf roping, bulldogging and steer riding. As an added feature the veterans will hold a cutting horse contest with an entry fee of $15, to which they will add $150 prize money. Also as a comedy feature, six wild mules will be turned loose at one time for contestants to ride. Brown guarantees that these mules have never had a man on their backs before this show.

Brown has been very fortunate in securing the Buzz Carson Troupe, of Hollywood, Calif., whose high school horses trick riding and roping and square dance routine are among the best of the nation. The Buzz Carson Troupe is famous throughout the northwestern part of the United States. This will be the first appearance of this troupe in this part of the southwest.

Each night, Aug. 10, 11 and 12, at 9 o'clock, the veterans will hold their annual rodeo dance at the new $100,000 Veterans Memorial Building. Excellent western music will be furnished by the Western String Star band.

A chuck wagon feed will be served at the rodeo grounds each evening by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

This event is one of the biggest in the southwestern part of the United States and is staged annually by the Artesia Veterans to remind the public of the cost of victory in World War II and to urge our nation to maintain it armed forces at a point sufficient to meet probable attacks.

Chapter One Judge Bean's Hat Is Sought . . .

In this two-chapter story are shown the activities of the JRBBI—Judge Roy Bean Bureau of Investigation—in Artesia Saturday, when the judge's strong-arm men helped him in an attempt to find his white, 10-gallon hat, which, he claims, was stolen after last year's V-J celebration and rodeo. And he wants it badly, so he can hold court prior to and during the celebration here Thursday through Friday of next week, Aug. 10-12. The picture above shows Judge Roy (Jack Fautleroy) Bean, holding parasol to keep the New Mexico sun off his unprotected head, leading in the JRBBI shake-down of Mayor Oren C. Roberts, black hat at right, Councilman Marshall Rowley, seated at left in dejected mood and Councilman W. R. Petty, on floor. The strong-arm men, all members of the JRBBI, and the Artesia 20-30 Club, which sponsors Judge Bean in his Law West of the Pecos, are Quentin Rodgers, standing at left, Jackie Don Woodside, at top behind his hat, and Riley Brown and Homer Gary over Councilman Petty, left to right . . .

Chapter Two

. . . Westfall Turned Up As Culprit

But it seems that, one thing leading to another, the investigation turned up Police Chief Earl D. Westfall as the culprit. He is shown above about to be thrown into his own clink. And four of the JRBBI members, Gary, Brown, Rodgers and Baldwin, left to right, are in process of getting the job done. The chief later escaped and it is believed a confederate—or maybe a dandy—slipped him a key. In any event, whether it is the same old 10-gallon hat or another one he is wearing Judge Bean will be holding court Saturday, so it is advised that all mature males be wearing some sort of Western garb, or they may also be thrown in the clink. —(Photos by Gable)

The Korean incident is still in progress much to the detriment of the handful of Americans that are trying to stem the hordes of communists from the north. We are hoping and praying that reinforcements will arrive soon in such quantities that will turn the tide of battle in our favor.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

American Troops Taking Beating In Korea; Mobilization of U. S. Manpower and Industry Forecast

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

KOREA:

GI's Take Beating

As the Korean battle went into the fourth week it became apparent to every American that U.S. troops were taking a beating.

They were outnumbered; tanks were inferior and too few; guns and bazookas could not pierce the 12-inch armor of the Russian made tanks. They were pinned to fox-holes by tanks, artillery and mortars; overwhelmed by massed infantry, sniped at from the sides and rear by infiltrating columns.

Taejon, provisional capital of South Korea, was abandoned after the Kum river line was broken by thousands of fanatical Communists who charged American positions without regard to casualties. They overran first aid stations, killing patients and chaplains, and for every one the Americans killed, ten took his place.

American forces began a slow withdrawal which appeared would halt some 35 miles southeast of Taejon where a range of hills offered a natural defense position. Whether or not they held this position would depend upon reinforcements and the continued flow of guns, tanks, and ammunition.

No matter how optimistic a view an observer was inclined to take, the situation appeared serious. As has often been the case in the past, Americans greatly underrated North Korea's military strength and fighting determination.

Facts of the situation indicated: North Korea had 10 to 15 divisions—100,000 to 250,000 men, with replacements handy from the armies of Communist China when needed. At least 200 tanks, with replacements also available from Russia, and almost unlimited supplies behind the lines in Siberia and in Manchuria.

United States would need eight full divisions, perhaps 250,000 men. The inadequate supply of tanks and heavy artillery in the Pacific would have to be remedied.

The one bright spot in the picture was the work of the U.S. air force which had knocked out tanks, bombed and strafed troop concentrations and supply lines, and driven the North Korean planes from the air.

But military observers pointed out that air power will greatly increase the chances of victory, but the Korean war, as has been the case in all wars, will be won by the soldier who fights through mud and rain and cold and heat. The foot soldier has not been replaced with push-button warfare, as yet.

McCARTHY:

Called a Liar

Senator Joseph McCarthy, who has had more front-page publicity in the American press than any one man in a number of years, has made the front pages again, but not to his liking.

The senator, still screaming charges of communism in the state department, was called a liar by three Democratic members of a senate investigating subcommittee.

Reporting their conclusions from a four-month inquiry, they attacked the Wisconsin Republican in terms of harshness rarely used in the senate's history. They accused him of conscious falsehood and of serving the interests of the Communists by raising baseless suspicion among the people of the country.

They cleared every person McCarthy accused of being a Communist.

The Republican members of the subcommittee, Senators Hickenlooper and Lodge, declined to sign the report.

The Democrat members termed McCarthy's charges "a fraud and a hoax perpetrated on the senate of the United States and the American people."

Their report said, in part: "They (McCarthy's charges) represent perhaps the most nefarious campaign of half truths and untruth in the history of this republic. For the first time in our history we have seen the totalitarian technique of the big lie employed on a sustained basis.

"The result has been to confuse and divide the American people, at a time when they should be strong in their unity, to a degree far beyond the hopes of the Communists themselves, whose stock in trade is confusion and division."

Korea Commander

Lt. General Walton H. Walker, a tank expert from Texas and commander of the Eighth Army, has been named to the top command post in Korea. Walker gained fame as commander of the 20th corps in Patton's Third Army.

MOBILIZATION:

Is It Near?

Many observers are wondering if complete mobilization of this country's manpower and industrial strength is in prospect for the near future? Some believe it is, unless the world situation takes a sudden and unexpected turn for the better.

Within a matter of hours after this writing, President Truman was expected to go before congress and outline for the American people steps deemed urgent to cope with the Korean war. He was also scheduled to speak over a nation-wide radio hookup and tell Americans just where we stand.

One official predicted the President would:

1. Request new military funds or contract authorizations totaling $5,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000.
2. Propose legislation authorizing 160,000 more men for the army above the present legal limit of 337,000 and 60,000 more for the Navy, which now cannot exceed 666,882. An increase may also be ordered for the 502,000-man air force.

HOME FRONT:

Controls Likely

Observers on the home front are predicting limited controls to back up an intensified military campaign in Korea.

At this writing the controls had not been asked for, but observers pointed out that anti-inflationary action was becoming more urgent with each day. They predicted President Truman would ask for them within a very short time.

A request for higher taxes, to cover an expected jump in military spending, was held to be inevitable.

Government officials were predicting privately that President Truman would ask congress:

1. Power to allocate—by voluntary means, or more drastic measures if necessary—steel and a few other basic metals.
2. Authority to put quantity ceilings on the production of automobiles, television and radio sets and other civilian products consuming large quantities of metal, so that the demands of these industries will not interfere with arms production or create a "gray market" in prices.
3. Restoration of consumer credit controls. By tightening up on easy-payment credit for automobiles and other consumer goods, it is hoped that some of boom-level buying demand may be removed from the market.

LABOR:

Mobilization Urged

At least one labor leader, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has demanded all-out preparedness for any eventuality, including mobilization of labor.

"We find ourselves facing a situation with the implication of a third world war . . . If war is localized now, we know it is only a question of time until the inevitable happens. Only adequate preparedness can safeguard us," Green said.

He added: "We cannot send our soldier to the fighting front without training equipment and regular supplies . . . We must provide quick transportation which will increase mobility . . . There will be no side lines secure from bombing . . . There must be mobilization of labor."

ECONOMY:

Profits and Prices

As the Korean war roared into its fourth week much of the news was being made on the home front in the form of profits and prices.

Government agencies announced after-tax profits of American manufacturing firms as a whole were nearly five percent higher in the first quarter of 1950 than in the fourth quarter of 1949.

At the same time the prices of foods, especially meat and coffee, took an upward swing that made many consumers catch their breaths.

At least one congressman, Representative Klein of New York, demanded an investigation of high living costs and profiteering. He went so far as to charge bakers and dairies with "soaking the consumer without conscience."

"Meat prices are threatening to turn this country into a nation of vegetarians and ruin the cattle raising states," he said.

Also on the economic front, the Federal Reserve Board said preliminary figures show that industrial production reached a new postwar peak in June.

Production was estimated at about one percent higher than the previous postwar peak of October-November, 1948, and 17 percent above the level of June, 1949.

Some highlights on the net profits report:

1. After-tax profits were $100,000,000 higher in first-quarter 1950 than the preceding quarter, but unchanged from the 1949 first-quarter mark of $2,400,000,000.
2. The rate of return on stockholders' equity was 12 percent in first-quarter 1950 against 11.6 in last year's fourth quarter and 12.8 in its first-quarter.
3. Dividend payments to stockholders totaled $1,000,000,000 against $1,700,000,000 in last year's fourth quarter and $900,000,000 in first-quarter 1949.
4. Profits per dollar of sales rose to 6.2 cents from 6 in last year's fourth quarter and 6.1 in its first quarter.
5. Set-asides for federal-income taxes amounted to $1,500,000,000 in both the 1950 and 1949 first-in-fourth-quarter 1949.

EDUCATION:

No One Flunks

A new trend in education—100 percent promotion of pupils in the lower grades—is reported by educators.

Educators won't come right out and say no one flunks any more in the lower grades on the ground that some elementary pupils still need the threat of failing to spur them on, but it's true that fewer are flunking.

The new trend seems to be based on four points:

1. Little is learned by repeating.
2. Failure merely discourages and does not aid pupils.
3. There is no reliable way of determining failures.
4. Real failures cannot do the work, no matter how often they repeat.

This is a long jump from the days of reading, writing and arithmetic and the rule of the hickory stick. The educators sum up their report:

"Nonpromotion is an admission of an inadequate school program and has no place in a school where children are motivated properly and work to the level of their capacities.

"What is looked on as a pupil failure may be a teacher, supervisor, or administrator failure."

Into Battle

The realities of the Korean war were impressed on Americans in every walk of life as this country's soldier went into action in Korea. Scenes like the one above were grim reminders to Americans that the foot soldier is still the workhorse of war. A group of U.S. soldiers above are nearing the front.

'Once Over' Seedbed Operation Cuts Cost New Method Eliminates Extra Tillage Steps

Giving the soil a "once-over" seedbed preparation can help cut down crop production costs by eliminating extra tillage steps while still maintaining high yields, according to Michigan State College agronomists.

The agronomists found that plowing, packing and planting in one operation produced as high yields of small grains, sugar beets and corn on soil of good tilth, as did conventional seedbed preparation that included double disking and spike-tooth harrowing.

The "once-over" method permitted quicker planting, because less time was needed to get seed into the ground. It means a saving in time, labor and tractor fuel. Two disking and two harrowing operations were eliminated. Another advantage was that the soil had greater water storage capacity, for the tilth was not broken down by excessive tillage.

Illustrated above is the "once over" method of plowing, packing and planting that can save many farmers high production costs.

Maintaining tilth is vital in crop production, these agronomists say, because loose, grainy soils give a good contact between the soil and the seed. That makes it easier for roots to reach plant nutrients, air and water.

X-Disease Appears Among Illinois Cattle

A comparatively new disease, hyperkeratosis, or x-disease, has been recognized in 37 or more states, the journal of American Veterinary Medical Association reports.

Reports indicate that, in some sections, herds have been decimated and dispersed because of the effects of the disease. This has happened in few instances in Illinois, but in the southern states the disease apparently has assumed a more malignant form and constitutes a more serious problem than elsewhere.

The morbidity, while unpredictable, may be high. Young cattle appear to be more susceptible than older ones and the death rate among them is higher. While in the U. S. bureau of animal industry report, beef cattle were more frequently involved than dairy animals, the disease has been seen almost equally among the two types in Illinois.

The cause, as indicated by the name "x-disease", is unknown.

The U. S. department of agriculture reports a decrease in farm population from 1910 to 1950 of over four million. From 1916 to 1930, the number of persons living on farms decreased each year except during the recession years of the early 1920's and during 1925.

In the depression of the early 30's farm population rose rapidly, totaling 32.0 million in 1933. The principal reason for this increase was a cutting down of migration away from farms. After 1933, the number of persons on farms decreased yearly through 1945.

During World War II the rate of decrease grew as large numbers of people left farms for the cities or went into the armed forces. By 1945 only 25.2 million persons lived on farms.

After the war, farm population increased substantially for two years, but since then, the changes have been slight. Farm population appears to have leveled off about half-way between its prewar size and the wartime low.

■ ■ ■ 'How Are You?'
Is Just Polite
By Lawrence Gould

Should you take "How are you?" literally?

Answer: As a rule. No. When the average person asks about your health, he's merely being "polite" and you'll surprise and annoy him if you go into details about how you are feeling. Of course, if you've been ill and it is a friend who asks you, that's another matter. But even so, telling someone that you feel bad when there's nothing he can do about it does you no good and makes him needlessly uncomfortable. Keep your aches and pains to yourself even with your family, unless it is necessary to explain why you are not your usual self.

Is it easier to be childish than to be adult?

Answer: Yes. And one proof is that as our mental powers decline in old age, we tend to revert to childish ways of thinking. Psychologists Wayne Dennis and Betty Mallinger report that seventy-five per cent of inmates of homes for the aged gave answers to test questions which showed a less realistic view of life than would be normal for children of twelve to fourteen. To face and accept life as it is, while worth the effort, requires the full use of all our mental powers, and when these decline, we become children again.

Are there different ways of reading?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Emmett Albert Betts, Director of Temple University Reading Clinic, Philadelphia. In a well-balanced reading program, a child should be taught to "skim" material at high speed to locate ideas; to "read rapidly" to get a general impression of an author's meaning, and to do "study-type reading" to think problems through and organize ideas. The old-fashioned notion that you should read every word of every type of reading matter both makes you waste time and may discourage you from reading at all.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Adding to the Working Life Span

By Dr. James W. Barton

BECAUSE THE AVERAGE LIFE expectancy has increased almost 20 years—from 47 to 66—since the beginning of the century, there are more elderly men and women than any other single age group. This great increase in the number of elderly persons has brought problems of health and security to every community.

While security is very important to everybody, there are other points to be considered, such as the working span; that is, how long the elderly man and woman is able to work or allowed to work.

Because of the great number of the aged and the problems they present to the community and themselves, medical journals, magazines and even newspapers are now published for the elderly.

In "The Journal of Gerontology," Dr. E. C. Clague shows that while life expectancy has been steadily increasing in recent decades, there have been no corresponding gains in the working life span. Modern industrial and occupational trends have had the effect of not lengthening the working life span; in fact if anything, they tend to shorten it, because there has been no increase in the kind of work elderly men and women are able to do.

"A program for extension of working life is needed as an alternative to a steady increase in the period of old age dependency and in the corresponding economic burden," Dr. Clague writes.

During the depression period we are told that the British workers preferred to work for 30 shillings rather than remain idle and collect 25 shillings a week from the government. The same applies to the elderly, who greatly dislike the thought that employers consider them unfit for work when they reach a certain age.

To keep elderly people happy, employment for which they are fit should be provided by the community. Dr. Clague states that "this will require concerted community action.

YOUR NATIONAL FORESTS

180 Million Acres of U. S. Forests Offer Ideal Vacation Opportunity

Perhaps you haven't thought much about it, but some 180 million acres of national forest land are yours for the using this summer. That's a little more than an acre apiece and with few exceptions they are yours to use for free. Owned by Uncle Sam and administered by the Forest Service, these acres offer recreation and vacation opportunities unlimited.

You don't have to know an oak from a pine tree to enjoy one of the 4,500 camping and picnicking areas scattered from Maine to California. For most American families one of these sites, complete with fireplace and picnic table and benches, is within a day's driving distance of home. The areas will accommodate 280,000 people at one time, insuring plenty of elbow room unless you choose a very popular area near a large city during a long weekend.

The forests provide boundless activities. The 750 rangers managing the areas don't organize trips for you; they don't serve as guides. However, they are friendly men, ready to answer questions, direct you to points of interest, and make your visit a pleasant one.

Miles of Trails

If it's sittin' and eatin' you want, the ranger can tell you where to get the best scenery with your meals. But if it's rockin' you want with your sittin', you'll have to bring your own chair, or patronize one of the 50 privately owned and operated resorts on national forest land.

What you do in the forest is pretty much up to your individual taste. There are 136,000 miles of trails, forming in places a maze of foot and horse paths. In the west the Pacific Coast Trail system traverses the cascades of the Pacific northwest and the Sierras of California, north and south across the United States from Canada to Mexico. In the east the Appalachian Trail stretches more than 2,000 miles from Mt. Katahdin in Maine to Mt. Oglethorpe in Georgia.

Short trails leading to scenic points offer half-hour to half-day jaunts for the tired business man and his family. The more experienced woodsman can plan a backpack trip of several days' duration, camping nights at three-sided shelters usually spaced 10 to 15 miles apart in the East.

For those who want to hike unencumbered except for personal items, the Appalachian Mountain Club of Boston operates a chain of huts in the White Mountains of New Hampshire where one can bunk for the nights, get dinner and breakfast, and have a trail lunch put up at a reasonable rate.

The less adventuresome can join hiking clubs—the Sierra Club, the Obsidians, the American Alpine Club, the Appalachian Mountain Club or some of the smaller trail and mountain climbing clubs throughout the country. Many of these clubs run organized trips for members into the national forests.

Fine Fishing Offered

For rugged individuals the Forest Service has set aside 14 million acres of real wilderness. Untouched land preserved in its original state for future generations, these areas present a real challenge to those with a pioneer spirit.

No roads lead into these wilderness areas. You walk, ride horseback, or paddle your own canoe and carry grub and equipment to last you the length of your stay. You can be your own guide and your own cook.

On the national forests there are many swimming areas, 70,000 miles of streams for fishing, and 100 million acres of good hunting country. There are 120,000 miles of forest highways and roads for the motorist or bicyclist.

Hundreds of trails like the one above wind through our national forests. The picture above is of Pilchuck Trail in Mt. Baker National Forest in the state of Washington.

American designers are exerting a greater influence every day on the mode of living in this country. Their activities include everything from fishbait to huge industrial plants.

Designers Have Big Influence On Mode Of Modern Living

From the time you shut off the alarm clock in the morning until you flick off the reading light at night, literally everything man-made you use, touch and see is the result of the creative genius of a designer.

Think about what you use in the course of a day—your toothbrush, toaster, hat, car, pen, radio, typewriter—every implement, building, article of clothing was first a designer's dream.

Among the many types of designers . . . fashion, architectural, interior decorator, etc . . . the one which perhaps most influences our mode of living is the industrial designer. This man is artist, architect and engineer rolled into one. From his practical imagination, drawing board and models emerge the shape of things to come . . . our tools of living, from toys to heavy machinery. He, more than anyone, is concerned with your future comfort and joy of living.

Design for Comfort

One of the nation's foremost industrial designers is Dave Chapman of Chicago, vice-president of the national Society of Industrial Designers, who has fashioned some of the articles you use. Your own refrigerator, juicer, stove, washer, flashlight, clock, razor, coffee pot, hammer, fishing lure or sewing machine may be his design.

You probably aren't aware of it, but the myriad of things you take for granted are pleasant and satisfying because they are the right color, texture, weight and size. Why? Because before whatever the object may be was finally produced in the form you know it, a designer handled it, played with it, broke it, fixed it, tore it down, re-built it, tested it on countless others and lived with it until he was sure what you would like best. The designer eliminates all guesswork where your pleasure is involved. He knows what you will like.

Because his creations must be pleasing to millions, the industrial designer must be gifted with a super sixth sense. He has to know intuitively what will strike people, then work with engineers and production men in perfecting the product. Requisites for its success: look better; be more durable and efficient; be easier to keep and keep up; cost less than its competitors.

Important Field

Like most of his contemporaries, Chapman finds relaxation and inspiration in other arts. Some designers write, paint, do sculpture or compose music, in addition to their design. Chapman is an architect, recognized oil and water color painter, master black and white and color photographer, and collector of rare books and ethnic recordings.

As our culture progresses, our tastes grow finer, more exacting. We expect better and better things. So the industrial designer is growing in importance to our happiness. Your "crystal ball," revealing what you will use in the future, is the industrial designer's drawing board today. Right now, he's busy creating what you will use in 1955 and 1960.

GREEN GRASS OF WYOMING

By Mary O'Hara

Ken visits Jeremy, the sheepherder, and they talk of Thunderhead and many other things as the sheepman seeks to dispel his loneliness. Ken announces that his brother, Howard, has passed the entrance exams for the U. S. military academy at West Point. This is no news as Jeremy has already heard it. Ken announces that he and Howard are to be godfathers when their little sister, Penny, is baptized. Jeremy recalls that Rob promised to have that done a year ago, and didn't. Rob, Ken and Howard meet Carey in Cheyenne and all the talk is of the search to find Crown Jewel. Carey is urged to join the search party.

CHAPTER XI

Carey laughed. "Well it was just luck. You see, when your father wrote to Uncle Beaver to tell him he had sent Buck Daly out to locate the horses he said at the end of the letter that your mother was writing inviting me down right away for a visit. And that same day my Grandma received the letter from your mother, inviting me. Grandma was writing to say I couldn't go until they all went. But Uncle Beaver wired your mother and said I could come, and then told Grandma what he had done. So there wasn't any use in her finishing her letter."

The boys laughed loudly. Howard seemed to have a morbid interest in the strange psychology of Mrs. Palmer. "Was she mad?" he asked hopefully.

But Carey gave him no satisfaction. "She didn't like it very well," she said in a reserved manner.

"Gee! I'm glad you came," said Ken.

"So'm I." Carey's eyes were on her plate.

"We'll have a lot of fun!" said Howard.

On the drive home, Carey sat behind, between the two boys, and asked them why the officers had called Howard "the Cadet." They explained. Carey looked at Howard almost with reverence, then gravely shook his hand and said, "Congratulations, Cadet McLaughlin."

Ken writhed inwardly. Was it going to be like this? Would Howard be the one she looked at and admired? It was tough having your girl see you always with your elder brother who was handsome and full of teasing talk and funny ideas and would soon have a West Point uniform on.

"He's got a girl," Ken blurted out.

"Hey! What are you giving us!" exclaimed Howard.

"Yes he has, her name's Barbara Bingham and he's got her picture in a case in his pocket and a big one in his room and he gets two or three airmail letters from her every week."

Ken got all the evidence out before he could be interrupted. But Howard was nonchalant. He winked at Carey and said, "So what?"

At the ranch, Nell took the girl into her arms and gave her a warm embrace. Carey had fallen in love with Nell the summer before. To be taken in her arms and hugged and then kissed on both cheeks, with Nell's tender, dark blue eyes smiling a welcome, almost made a lump come into her throat. This was the way mothers were.

Nell had turned over Redwing for Carey's use. This time Carey was equipped with her own riding clothes. They were all unpacked, and hung neatly with her other things in the pine-scented closets of her room, with her riding boots and shoes in a row underneath. In the mornings, with riding and stable work ahead of her, she wore blue-jeans and a cotton shirt. In the evenings, she would put on one of her ruffled summer dresses and win an approving smile from Rob.

The evenings were long and light. It seemed as if, in the gentle twilight hours, the fruit of the day was gathered up and eaten. Sometimes Nell and Carey played duets. Sometimes they all sat on the terrace and talked while the animals hung around turning their curious and affectionate eyes upon the different members of the family.

On one such evening Ken suggested to Carey that they walk down the meadows to Castle Rock. Carey glanced around. She was sitting on the steps of the terrace, watching the puppies playing.

Ken Proposes Carey Join Him in Walk

"How about it, Carey?" Carey had heard about Castle Rock. The boys had told her of the finding of the carcass of Rocket's foal there, half-devoured by the wildcat, and of all the other skeletons and grisley remains in the caves under the rock. She would like to see it. And an evening walk alone with Ken through the meadows—the thought slightly quickened her pulse. Still, there was a deliciousness about this family group on the terrace after supper and she was reluctant to leave it.

Howard, chinning himself on one of the poles of the pergola, said, "Why don't you take your gun? I'll come along and we'll get some cottontails."

Nell sat down in the hammock and Ken and Carey started off.

Howard stood looking down at his mother questioning. Her face was merry as she looked back at him. There was a little teasing grin. She patted the hammock beside her and he fitted himself "Why," she said, taking hold of his hands which were clasped across her chest, "do you want to cut out Ken with Carey?"

"Wha-a-at?" exclaimed Howard.

"Why, Mother!"

"Howard, you are so secretive!" she cried. "Why do you make a mystery about this girl?"

"I don't make any mystery." He rubbed his chin on her hair tenderly.

"I like Barbara's looks, judging from the pictures of her you have around, but if she is to be my daughter-in-law, I'd like to know it."

Howard made no answer to this, and Nell muttered impatiently, "Oh, you make me tired!" She struggled to free herself, Howard released her, stood up, then stooped, gave her a quick kiss and leaped off the terrace. He walked down to the cowbarn. Nell sat, touching her foot to the ground, so that the hammock swung a little.

Men Gossip Away The Long Evenings

There came a deep roar from the corral of the cowbarn. Usually, after evening milking and feeding was over, the bull was quiet. Sometimes he went out to pasture with the cows, sometimes, even when the cows had left him, he remained in the corral where he had received his feed, standing there motionless in one of his dark meditations upon the primal joys of blood and lust. He appeared to live in a chronic state of smoldering fury, viewing any person, any moving thing, any life outside himself, as something which it was his duty to put an end to. Even the calves were not safe with him. Only the cows.

"Rob," said Nell, "I wish you'd sell Cricket, or have him butchered."

Rob made no answer. He was absorbed in trying to discover what Penny had, shut up in one small fist. He tried to open the wee fingers. She resisted him and squirmed in his grasp.

"Rob!" said Nell. "Oh, he's all right," said Rob, "now that I've put the ring in his nose. It's Howard he's yelling at." He raised his voice. "Howard!" he shouted. "Cut that out!"

"I'm not doing anything," Howard shouted back, then wandered up from the cowbarn to the bunkhouse. The men were sitting out-of-doors on the wooden benches which flanked the front door. Here they gossiped the long evenings away, falling into silence when music came from Nell's piano. Howard joined them. Cricket ceased his bellows. And Nell's foot touched the ground, and gave her hammock a little push, and another, and another. . . . She wondered where Pilgrim was and her eyes wandered, searching. She knew he was looking at her from some hideout, from the grass behind the spring house, from the trees under the cliff, or the edge of the path leading up to the barn, but she could see no sign of him. She put Willy down. Willy picked up a leaf, lifted his head proudly and trotted down the terrace carrying it with an important air.

The long winding hay meadows of the ranch had their names, names which had never been given them, which had just come to be. The closest to the house was called the Home Meadow. The next was Crooked Meadow, because of the tortuous twists and turns of Lone Tree Creek winding through it. The farthest meadow was called Castle Rock because, overhanging the aspen grove at the far end was the great rock, jutting up seventy feet high, as big as a house, constructed in the strangest manner with parapets and turrets and balconies and and underneath it the chambers of horrors which the boys had described so vividly to Carey.

Now she stood in one of them, in pitch darkness. Ken was there beside her but she could not see him and he did not make a sound. It was frightening. She made a little murmur of fear and felt Ken's hand reaching out, asking for hers. She gave it to him.

Then they climbed the great rock, Ken helping her in the difficult places, and at last they were up on one of the high platforms at the very top, lifted into the freshness of the evening sky.

They were never tired of discussing the events of last fall. It was like having the adventures all over again. Carey told Ken what she had done at the Monument after he had ridden away with the men. How Cookie had saddled the roan for her and told her to go off and have a ride, and how she had gone, and climbed up the little cone-shaped hill, and then, at the very top, had taken out her binoculars and had seen Thunderhead ten miles away or so, standing up on the top of a peak like the statue of a horse, looking right back at her.

Ken Shows Jealousy Of Howard, Carey

"You've seen him since I have," said Ken jealously.

"But you'll see him soon now, Ken. You're going to get him back."

"Maybe," said Ken, who was in a despondent mood.

"That's what you want more than anything else in the world, isn't it?"

"I don't know."

"You said last summer the thing you wanted more than anything in the world was to get him back and ride him in one more race."

"I know I did."

"Don't you still want to?"

"Yes, but," he turned his face to look at her with a glance half wary, half bold, "but now—what I want most has something to do with you, I think. I feel as if I would want most in the world to do something for you."

Their eyes met timidly, slid away again. It seemed a huge admission Ken had made and he hastened to cover it up.

"What do you want most? Oh, I know! You want to be a singer."

"No."

"Then a concert pianist."

"No."

"Well, what then? Or don't you know, either?"

"Yes, I know perfectly well. I want to be a mother and have about eight lovely children! Oh, I think that would be the most wonderful thing in the world!"

Ken frowned. "You're too young to be thinking of things like that, Carey. Why, you're only sixteen."

"But my mother married when she was seventeen, and she must have been thinking about it before then, so why can't I? Why I'm a woman, Ken!"

KATHLEEN NORRIS A Foolish Woman

LINETTE ROY is 34. Her younger years were spent in the care of invalid parents, and in holding a responsible post-office job, which she still has. Two years ago she met one Robert Francis, a medical student two years younger than herself. Robert also had family responsibilities, and was only as far as his first year in medicine. He has now been obliged to interrupt his studies, and is driving for a doctor in a city some 300 miles away, hoping to save enough to get started in another year.

Robert gave Linette her first thrilling love affair. To her, hard-working, conscientious, lonely, it was a miracle of delight. To have a fine man's companionship, to talk over their respective trials and responsibilities, to listen to his first words of admiration, and to feel her own heart respond—well, perhaps only a woman placed as Linette was knows what that means.

They were never formally engaged. But they became lovers. Robert using the old arguments of appealing to her trust, her belief in his promises. Linette was not a girl in years then, but she was completely inexperienced, her father was dead, her invalided old mother was far past the point of advising. On the contrary, she had returned to childishness, and Linette had to make her own decisions. Carried off her feet by the passion and ecstasy that had come too late to her, she gave way to the emotions that are too strong for almost any woman so ignorant and so isolated.

Miserably Unsatisfactory

Like any other self-respecting woman she found this arrangement miserably unsatisfactory, and when Robert went off to take his job in another city, they decided upon an understanding that would lead within the year to marriage, no matter what their financial or domestic situations might be.

A part of Linette's letter follows:

"This was the way things were at New Years. Bob went away, and we wrote to each other, daily at first, then his letters fell off, as I expected they might. At Easter he was at home three days, and I saw him there three times, but I felt that things had changed. There was no love talk, and no talk of marriage. But he was working terribly hard, and looked and acted tired."

"That was all, until this week when I discovered that he has been home, was here for two nights, about 10 days ago, without a word or telephone message to me."

"Mrs. Norris," Linette's letter goes on, "I was stunned. I have been unable to eat or sleep since. Loving and trusting him as I do I know that something has happened, he is angry with me, or someone has told him something that has changed him. I telephoned him at once, but it was most unsatisfactory. He pleaded that his mother and sisters had absorbed his time, that he had tried to call me, and so on. He said to wait for his letter; there has been no letter, and inasmuch as I cannot live—I feel I actually will die—if things are left this way, I am appealing to you. Of one thing I am sure; Robert loves me. If I did not know that, I would try to put the whole thing behind me. But Robert loves me. How can I win him back?"

Love Is Gone

Linette, I say in reply, the one thing of which I am sure, and of which you are yourself sure, deep in your heart, is that Robert doesn't love you. Any man who loves a woman won't be in the same town with her for three hours, much less three days, without telephoning, rushing to see her, dating her for every possible instant.

Watch out! It was the morning for treer mental exercise and teacher was putting her little class through a bit of abstract training. "Now, Willie," asked she, turning to a freckled youth in the end row, "if a policeman found a watch on a tramp, what would you naturally infer about the watch?" "That it was on the bum!" came the prompt answer.

Needs of Corn

Corn needs plenty to eat and drink to produce high protein yields.

You can get extra pounds of protein and more bushels per acre, too, with a well-rounded bill of fare based on good soil management. University of Illinois research men proved that in tests on a number of experiment fields.

H. J. Snider of the agronomy staff reports that good soil management increased the corn's protein content by nearly a pound per bushel. Corn grown on well treated land averaged 5.6 pounds of protein per bushel, or about 10 per cent of the total weight. Corn on untreated soil averaged only 4.8 pounds of protein per bushel, or about 8.5 per cent.

The well managed land had the benefit of liming and rotation built around well-fed deep-rooted legumes. The organic matter added by the legumes built good soil structure and tilth, improved the drainage and increased the soil's water holding capacity. That made it easier for corn roots to get at plant nutrients, oxygen and moisture.

God Give Us Men!

Lesson for August 6, 1950

THERE ARE WAYS of saying "No" without using that short and ugly word. A writer in the Christian Century has pointed out three of these. One is to say, "This is not the time..." Another is to say, "I agree with you in principle, but..." and the third is to say, "I am with you—but don't quote me!" What we need nowadays is men who are willing to stand up and be quoted, quoted for good and against evil. All men are "against sin" in general; it takes a braver man to be against it in particular.

Dr. Foreman

In a large town in Kentucky recently the grand jury indicted the whole police force. In the course of the jury's report they said they had heard a good deal of testimony about rotten places and practices in and around town, but most of those who had come before the grand jury had said, in effect, "Don't quote me." It is hard to make any indictment stick if people who know damaging facts are not willing to come out in broad daylight and testify.

Man of Courage

WE NEED more men like the prophet Elijah. God providentially removed from him all the usual temptations to keep his mouth shut. He had no investments to protect—all he had he wore on his back, and that was not much. No family depended on him. He did not represent any institution. He could speak his mind—he could speak God's mind—without worrying about the effect it might have on investors, or his family, or some institution. Of course Elijah had Elijah to look after; but for himself he was not afraid in the least. Lone figure though he was, he stood out against lies and exploitation in varied forms. He stood out against popular opinion, and that is not easy for any normal man.

So many thousand votes or voices must be right we think. But Elijah did not think so. He knew that "one man with God is a majority." He stood out against official opposition; this was more dangerous still. The crowd's favor or dislike comes and goes, the crowd soon forgets; but a tyrant like Ahab (and still more like Jezebel) neither forgives nor forgets a man who has stood up to contradict and condemn him.

Then Elijah stood out against the most difficult enemy of all; organized religious leadership, that is, the false prophets. Even in the Christian era that organized church has sometimes taken the wrong side of some important questions and persecuted men who were on the side of right. But church tyranny is at least as bad as any other kind, and it takes a brave man to face it.

In Our Time

THANK GOD for all the Elijahs! Every generation has seen a few, and we have them in our time. They have not all had the spectacular success of the original prophet of Carmel.

In church life we need more men like that pastor down in Alabama who was recently "fired" because he would not take his stewards' advice and use more "tact" in his sermons against sin in general and drinking in particular.

Is Liquor a Sacred Cow?

THE LIQUOR traffic alone, to name but one public evil, is doing our fellow-citizens a vast amount of damage. What other business makes necessary wards in hospitals to cure its customers?

But how few men will stand up and be quoted for the facts! Newspapers will editorialize against gambling when they won't against liquor; gambling doesn't advertise but liquor does. Count the big newspapers or magazines which for the benefit of their readers are willing to go without the income which liquor advertising produces.

Farmer Finds Blower Effective Hay Dryer

Mounted on Cart, It's Easy to Move About

Wet springs and early frosts aren't the headaches they once were to a growing number of farmers. For they have discovered that immature grain can be cured just as effectively in storage buildings as in the field.

The average farmer will find that mechanized drying of hay and grain is not as expensive as it would appear. Hay & grain saved will soon pay for equipment.

Equipment for mechanical drying of grain is simple, and present farm structures can be converted easily, quickly and inexpensively to handle this newest of farm production chores. Farmers, who have hay curing equipment, will find that the same fan and motor can be used for both drying grain and finishing forage crops.

Mounted on wheels, this motor and blower takes the headaches out of curing immature grain for farmers. Here the equipment is shown being used for hay drying.

The accompanying illustration shows what can be done in the way of inter-changing hay curing and grain drying equipment. When the hay curing season is over, this farmer mounts his fan and motor on a cart and hauls them to a crib where they are put to use blowing moisture out of his immature corn. An outlet, into which he plugs his five-horsepower motor, is located in an adjacent building.

When double cribs are used, as in the case shown, the air blast enters through one end of the driveway. The opposite end is sealed up, and heavy paper placed on walls of the crib from the peak of the roof to the top of the corn layer. Openings around the fan and in the floor also are closed. In single cribs, wooden ducts or "A" frames are laid down the center of the floor and the air blown directly into them.

Drying is successful without supplementary heat when the temperature is 60 or above and the relative humidity 65 per cent or below. If heat is used, buildings should be insulated and properly ventilated. Warm air is blown into storage sheds by motor driven fans. Thermostats and other controls automatically keep the temperature and the flow of air at efficient drying levels.
