Baseball Schedule For the Drillers

Our readers may not realize it, but the end of the baseball season is gradually drawing to a close. If the baseball fans want to see the Drillers in action, they had better get busy.

Following is the schedule: Aug. 17 and 18, Drillers vs Odessa; Aug. 19 and 20, Drillers vs San Angelo; Aug. 23 and 24, Drillers vs Roswell; Aug. 31, Drillers vs Vernon; Sept. 1, Drillers vs Vernon; Sept. 2 and 3, Drillers vs Sweetwater; Sept. 4 and 5, Drillers vs Midland; Sept. 6 and 7, Drillers vs Big Spring.

The 7th of September comes on Friday, this is the last game of the season in Artesia, why not pack the stands full of loyal fans to give the Drillers something to think about during the winter months.

Donate to the S. A. War Fund

Make your donation to the Salvation Army war fund. Your contribution will be voluntary. No soliciting by personal contact. Today, following is the list who have made their donations:

L. P. Glascock, Ralph Lea, W. E. Rood, Claude Campbell, C. B. Altman, a stranger, George Casabonne, a stranger. Each one has given generously according to their financial standing and ability. Would you like to add your name to this list?

Two donations were made by strangers, one a boy about 18 years old, who asked for a drink of water. When told there was no charge he laid down some change and said, "For the Salvation Army."

What the People Think

WE THE PEOPLE of the Hope community extend our friendship, goodwill and hospitality to all who wish to live here or visit us. We have some reasonably priced modern places for people to live in. Our mercantile stores carry all staple groceries, a small selection of dry goods, fresh meats and household necessities. Our gas stations have good mechanics, the same gas and oil, the same prices you find in other towns. If you make your living in our trade territory, be loyal. If you receive money allotted to our district from the county or state, you are receiving money we Hope people pay out in taxes. If you are a teacher in our school, this money will go to you. If you accept this money, is it fair for you to take it and spend it elsewhere? Isn't it convenient to be able to buy gas for your car, a loaf of bread for supper, or a package of needles to sew with? Support your home town and enjoy this convenience. Take your business elsewhere and you will be denied this convenience and you will stop your own salary. Think it over pal. "Don't bite the hand that is feeding you" and don't bite the hand that is extended to you in friendship. —A subscriber.

Ice cream and sandwiches were served. The store opened for business Friday morning at which time orchids were given women shoppers. The store building is 50x100 feet. Construction of this modern building was started June 1. The store is self-service throughout except the meat department.

Local Boy Serves In Korea Area

Lionel S. Harris, airman, USN, of Hope, is serving with Patrol Sqdn 28, which has been awarded an "excellent" rating for its operational readiness in the Korean area. Based in Japan, the squadron flies the Navy's patrol bomber "Privateer", a single-tailed version of the famed Liberator bomber of World War II. One of the things making the squadron outstanding is the fact that each man in the individual flight crews has attained a working knowledge of every job on the huge plane. During the present crisis, the squadron is deployed on patrols along the China coast and on both sides of the Korean peninsula.

News and Views From Washington

By John J. Dempsey
Congressman from New Mexico
Washington, Aug. 16—Congress finally is reacting to the ever-growing demand for a closer scrutiny of government expenditures. That was brought out forcibly in debate in the House of Representatives over the 56-billion-dollar Defense Appropriation bill, as Congressmen from both political parties declared the time has come when a "watchdog committee" is necessary to eliminate waste and unnecessary expenditures by government agencies.

Although the huge appropriation measure was passed by an almost unanimous vote of the House, because there was no time for further study of the bill unless the nation's defense program was to be hampered, it became apparent that most members of the House had come to the conclusion that the Congress can no longer sign blank checks for government spenders.

Congressman John Taber of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations subcommittee which handled the biggest defense appropriations bill of all time, declared that neither the members of the committee nor the membership of the House had a clear picture of the defense department's program or a proper explanation and analysis of the money-spending plans of the Defense Department.

"I think," said Congressman Taber, "we should have a staff which would go into the question of what the armed services are doing with the money they are spending."

Mr. Taber commented that few of the staff of the armed services who appeared before the committee were able to give an intelligent explanation of how the billions asked for were to be spent.

Congressman Clarence Brown of Ohio had this comment:

"It is my fixed conviction—and I have been forced to come to this conclusion—that we have the responsibility to see to it that there is created some sort of a 'watchdog committee' which will ride herd on these appropriations we are making here today, which we have to accept on faith unless we can get absolute evidence they are not needed and are unnecessary."

Members of the Appropriations subcommittee which worked on the bill, including the chairman, Congressman George H. Mahon of Texas, were frank to admit during the debate that the committee did not have—and could not get in the short time it had—all the information necessary to a proper analysis of the bill, or to determine where cuts could have been made to eliminate waste.

Congressman Mahon said, "Our committee does not have and probably no committee in Congress has, an adequate staff. We need a properly qualified and adequate staff if we are to do the kind of job we want to do in conserving public funds intelligently and effectively."

There were many others who made comments of the same tenor and clearly indicated the patience of the Congress is worn thin by waste in government and resultant ever-increasing tax demands on the public purse.

It is my firm conviction we have reached the end of the line in levying more taxes on the people of this nation. I said just that on the floor of the House in January. Here, in part, is what I said at that time:

"The spot for some real spade work in inflation control is in cutting down on unnecessary government expenditures. The time has come when the taxpayers' dollar, expended by the government, must get its full value in purchases."

"I believe that this responsibility extends to a watchdog role on where these funds go and whether or not they are wisely spent."

I point out at that time the spending practices of the government would ruin any private corporation—and I meant, too, they would ruin this nation eventually.

It is gratifying to find now that I was not a "voice crying out in the wilderness," and that others—many of them—in the Congress are demanding an end to this shameful waste.

Legislation passed by the Senate which would authorize payment by the War Claims Commission—of which Mrs. Georgia Lusk of New Mexico is a member—of claims of certain former enemy aliens from funds of the commission will have trouble in the House until a law has been passed and approved by the President to properly reimburse our own boys for the hardships and suffering they endured as prisoners of war in German and Japanese camps.

have in committee a bill which provides for additional payment of 150 to each of our men who were prisoners of war, which includes, of course, the many from New Mexico who went through the hellish torture in Japanese camps after the Bataan campaign.

shall insist that our own men be taken care of before any repayment is made to the former enemy aliens, no matter how just their claims may be. It is well to recall that we paid 146 million dollars to the enemy prisoners in our camps—and part of that to the prisoners, themselves, for their work. Our boys were paid nothing by the enemy nations and were tortured and ill-treated in most cases.

Arizona Ranchers Visit Hope

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Getswiler of Tucson, Ariz., were here this week visiting old friends. With them were two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Baxter of El Paso and Mrs. Alice Mohr of Tucson. Mrs. Baxter is the former Ida Blanche Getswiler, who was born in Hope and attended school here. Mrs. Mohr is not so well known here, as she was born after her parents left Hope. The Getswilers also have a son, Thomas, who resides in Deming and served as mayor in that town for several years.

While living in Hope, Mr. Getswiler, better known as Pierre, was the law west of Eagle Draw. During week days he punched a few cows for which he received 30 a month and chuck. On Saturday nights he came to Hope and made the celebrating cowboys realize that law had reached the Penasco Valley. In 1916 Pierre and family left for Arizona and settled on a cattle ranch 15 miles west of Benson, Ariz., at the foot of the Rincon Mountains. They survived depressions and droughts, sent their children to school in Tucson and have now reached the time when they can go around and visit old friends and take life easy. From Iowa marshal in Hope, to a cattle baron in Arizona, is a long step, but Pierre made it and all his old friends are happy to see him prosperous and enjoying good health.

Lloyd G. Henegen, a student of Southern California University got a thrill of setting fires. He was captured by the California police last week after he had set over 80 fires. The South Korean government has announced that 24,329 persons have been convicted since the outbreak of the war for crimes ranging from rape to sabotage. It was not made public how many of those convicted were executed. The crimes involved in-

Registration of New Voters

Registration of new voters closes this Saturday, Aug. 18, for the special election to be held Sept. 18 on eight proposed amendments to the state constitution.

The registration deadline was noted today by Secretary of State Beatrice B. Roach as she released a schedule of the official action to precede and follow the vote, as required by state law.

County clerks must notify chairmen of both political parties in their respective counties by Friday, Aug. 24, to submit names of persons to serve as election officials, she said. The county commissioners will formally appoint the election officials as of Sept. 4.

A proclamation of the election must be issued and published by the commissioners of each county by or before Sept. 4, as prescribed by law. The date for these actions ordinarily would be Sept. 3, but Labor Day falls on that date this year, Mrs. Roach pointed out. Labor Day being a legal holiday, the following day is the official date for the appointments and deadline for the proclamation by the county commissioners, she said following a conference with the attorney general.

Ballots and other election supplies are to be delivered to all county clerks by or before Sept. 6. These will be shipped directly from Albuquerque by the Valliant Printing Company which holds a contract for that service, Mrs. Roach said.

Lists of all registered voters are to be furnished by county clerks to the secretary of state and, on request, to the party chairmen by Sept. 8. And the second and final notice of election must be published by the board of county commissioners between Sept. 11 and 17.

Preparation of registration books for delivery to election officials will be completed by Sept. 15, with the election itself scheduled Sept. 18, by action of the 20th Legislature in regular session earlier this year.

Korean Peace Talks Develop Slowly; Control Bill Viewed With Cynicism

THE PEACE FRONT—As expected the Korean peace talks have developed slowly. The shooting war in that bloody country may not end for weeks, if then. And it will be years before a feeling of security develops among the South Korean people.

As things stand now, the Allies and Reds are at loggerheads over several questions. The main one, however, is the establishment of a cease-fire buffer zone. The Reds want it established along the 38th parallel. The Allies want it along present battle lines.

U. N. Delegate

Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy is chief U. N. delegate to the Kaesong peace talks. He receives his instructions from Gen. Matthew Ridgway, U. N. commander in the far east.

The Allies contend: (1) The present positions, based on ridges, are more defensible militarily than the 38th parallel; (2) The parallel is where the Red invasion began June 25, 1950. It is viewed in many quarters as a symbol of U. N. defeat, and a settlement along that line is bitterly opposed by the South Korean government.

It may be that some sort of compromise can be worked out on the question, but not without long and exhausting talks.

Meanwhile, the Reds have resorted to their old tricks of injecting political issues into the discussions. The Reds have complained of Allied air and naval power and to the bombing of peaceful Korean villages — a long-familiar Red propaganda twist for air strikes.

THE FIGHTING FRONT— And while the high brass talks of peace, United Nations troops continue to fight and die in Korea. Artillery rumbles, U. N. troops probe at Red lines, and the Reds made counter thrusts.

The U. S. army reported the Communists have staged a tremendous build-up of armed forces since the cease-fire talks began and pointedly expressed hope this was not a sign of bad faith.

Here again is evidence of Communist thinking and policy. Hanging on the ropes when the peace talks started, the Reds took full advantage of U. N. let-up in attack, to show good faith during the talks, to build up their own military forces and supplies.

The Communists have moved more supplies near the front lines than needed to maintain troops while the talks are underway. In addition, they have moved new units and thousands of individual replacements south into the battle lines.

THE EUROPEAN FRONT—While there were talks of peace in the far east, the free nations prepared to meet aggression in Europe.

New plans for defense were announced by George C. Marshall, secretary of defense, when he told congress the administration now plans to have 400,000 U. S. troops in Europe in 1952—nearly double the number previously estimated.

He also disclosed that U. S. allies have promised to have 2,500,000 men under arms next year and to be able to put five million men into the field within 90 days after the outbreak of any new war.

Marshall argued against any let-down in American defensive spirit resulting from the Korean armistice talks and against any congressional cuts in U. S. military aid to western Europe. He said he was deeply shocked at what he termed the "tragic" reaction of the American people now that peace appears in prospect in Korea.

PRICE CONTROLS—Confusion and cynicism seems the only way to describe the average home town's reaction to the price control bill which congress has enacted. The confusion stems from the fact that few congressmen, if any, can give a complete and adequate description of how the law will work. The cynicism stems, in great part, from the belief that the debate on the issue was put on the record more for future political effect than for the purpose of clarifying the issues.

The bill permits some rollbacks on nonfarm goods and opens the way for some increases. It extends wage, credit, rent, and other emergency controls through next June. But controls are eased in a number of ways and the President got none of the additional authority he asked.

The United Labor Policy Committee, made up of most big organized labor groups, immediately denounced the bill. The committee termed the bill "a callous betrayal of the consumers of the nation by the reactionary coalition which rules congress."

Administration leaders contend it is short of what is needed to combat inflation. Republicans say it is a good bill, if administered properly.

Communist Round-Up

Behind bars are the four ranking Los Angeles Communists who were rounded up by the FBI last week. They are shown as they confer with their attorney, Ben Margolis (second from left).

50 MILLIONTH ELGIN—Every science has its milestones. In horology, the science of watchmaking, the first milestone occurred almost 450 years ago at Nuremberg, Germany. A clockmaker there found means of compressing the parts of a timepiece into a sturdy and compact mechanism. The Nuremberg "egg," crude and clumsy by modern standards, was the world's first watch—so called because it was carried by night watchmen.

Next month the city of Elgin, Ill., which boasts it is the town "made famous by time," will help its oldest industry celebrate another horological milestone. Scheduled for completion then is the 50 millionth timepiece to be made at Elgin—more jeweled watches than any other manufacturer in the world has yet produced.

Significantly, the 50 millionth watch is claimed to incorporate every major technical achievement since horology was a pup. In stark contrast with the first bulky pocket watch made in the same city 84 years ago, it will be only one-tenth as large, yet will be a better timekeeper.

THE VICIOUS RACKET—Federal agents last week broke up the biggest narcotics ring in the nation's history. Narcotic agents reported the arrest of 10 "salesmen" for the $30,000,000 heroin-smuggling ring. The agents also got $100,000 in counterfeit money.

The ring is believed to have smuggled as much as 50 pounds of heroin into the United States each month. It has been operating since 1949.

COMMIES ARRESTED . . . Frisco Reds rounded up.

JETS FOR ALLIES . . . Jet fighters are loaded aboard the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Corregidor at Fort Newark, N.J. The planes are for delivery under the mutual defense assistance program to Norway, Denmark, Netherlands, Belgium and France. The Corregidor, a baby flattop, was recently de-mothballed by the Atlantic reserve fleet. The planes are F-84E jets.

DULLES BURNED IN EFFIGY . . . John Foster Dulles was hanged and burned in effigy in Manila, while over 5,000 indignant demonstrators denounced the U.S. ambassador as "betrayor of Filipino-American relations." Organized by the Liberal Youth League, the burning of Dulles reached the climax of the Philippines' protestation against the "unfairness" of the proposed Japanese peace treaty when it side-stepped reparations to the Philippines for Jap war damages.

WAR POSTSCRIPT . . . In Berlin, a "monster" is pushed into a truck as the relieved neighborhood, cautiously keeping a distance, peers at the police and detonation experts. The "monsters" are undetonated bombs, dropped by allied planes during the last war. Although dormant for several years, the fuses are still intact and sensitive to the slightest jar.

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE

Question: In shopping for some outside white paint for my house, some salesmen claim that their paint "cleans itself" when it rains. Would that type of paint be good to use in the climate of Texas? Would it last as long as other types? I'm interested in a good paint and your advice will be appreciated.

Answer: A top quality paint should be good in any climate. I believe that the salesman referred to what is called "chalking." This is the disappearance of the gloss and surface, through the weathering of the oil under the effect of sunlight. It is the normal manner of aging, the paint becoming powdery and rubbing off like chalk. During a rain this chalk would be washed off somewhat, and doing so, would carry off surface dirt with it. I believe that this is what the salesmen meant. Until chalking has gone too far, the paint film will remain securely attached and forms an excellent base for new paint. Mild chalking is all right, but heavy chalking is not.

THE WEEK In Religion

INSPIRATION Do It For God

IT IS an excellent Christian practice to spiritualize every good deed by doing it in the name of God. Men can lay up great treasures in heaven simply by remembering to make the love of God rather than the love of self the motivation for everything good we do.

The simplest acts of kindness or devotion—even the routine chores of daily life—can be ennobled and beautified if they are dedicated to the Creator.

Yet there are some who, through carelessness or indifference, pass up such opportunities and thus sacrifice the rich rewards with which God repays whatever is done in His honor. Too many individuals are naturally good but not supernaturally good.

For illustration, take the case of Jones and Smith. Both are "do-gooders." They never miss a chance to help a neighbor in trouble or support some worthy cause. But one is wiser and a great deal better than the other because his motives are always spiritual.

Vatican Recommends Socialized Medicine

ROME—Vatican approval of any system of socialized medicine that does not conflict with "the moral principles of respect for man and family" was expressed in a statement by Msgr. Giovanni Battista Montini, Substitute Secretary of State.

According to Msgr. Montini, the Catholic church is strongly in favor of systems of socialized medicine that would improve the physical health of nations, at the same time guarding against the application of "materialistic and atheistic theories."

"Just laws for hygiene, prophylaxis or healthy housing, the concern for placing within everybody's reach medical care of high standards and for stamping out social scourges such as tuberculosis and cancer, a legitimate preoccupation for the health of young generations and many other initiatives that favor the health of the body and spirit within the framework of healthy social relations — all this contributes happily to the prosperity of a people and to its internal peace," Monsignor Montini said.

Minister Says Police Aided Cicero Rioting

CHICAGO—Aroused pastors here condemned the prejudice which caused rioting in suburban Cicero over an attempt by a Negro family to move into an apartment building.

The Rev. Joseph L. Hughes of the Millard Avenue Baptist church, a resident of Cicero, told his congregation that he went to the Cicero police station at the height of the riots and, without disclosing his identity, demanded to know why something was not done to curb the violence. He said he was told, with some profanity, that Negroes were not wanted in Cicero.

Christians and Law

Lesson for August 19, 1951

Americans are not noted for their respect for law. Sometimes big business is the reason. In a certain southern state there are two counties through which run some main highways. But tourists are well advised to stay away from there, because the roads have been pounded into a mass of potholes by overloaded coal trucks operating at high speeds and often on the wrong side of the road. Now the state has laws against overloading trucks; it has laws against speeding; here is an honest state police department. But although various arrests have been made, the head of the police department reports that in those two counties they never yet have been able to secure a single conviction in the courts. Why?

Dr. Foreman

There is another county where a policeman shot a law-breaker resisting arrest and attempting to shoot the officer. The county judge tried to make three successive grand juries indict the policeman, but after looking into the facts they all refused. Here was the interesting spectacle of a judge on the bench (elected there) trying to make the law work against itself, trying to force a grand jury to indict an innocent man.

Who Is to Blame?

SOMETIMES politics is to blame. That is to say, a man wants to get, or to hold, office, so eagerly that he will ignore or defy the law in order to keep his little place in the sun.

There is another county where a policeman shot a law-breaker resisting arrest and attempting to shoot the officer. The county judge tried to make three successive grand juries indict the policeman, but after looking into the facts they all refused.

Here was the interesting spectacle of a judge on the bench (elected there) trying to make the law work against itself, trying to force a grand jury to indict an innocent man.

We Get What We Deserve

BUT we can't blame big business, or mean politics, for the lawlessness of America. If individuals respected the law, if every man respected the law just as he wants others to respect it, we could handle business and we could get rid of dishonest politicians.

An official high in federal circles, who had had plenty of opportunity to observe, remarked last spring, speaking of controls, that every one wants the other man controlled, everybody wants to control somebody else, but nobody wants to be controlled.

That's just the trouble. We can make all the laws we please, but so long as we are the kind of people who will not respect a law if it cramps our own style, then we need not be surprised at the sort of thing a crime committee digs up.

No Government Is Perfect

MANY of us try to excuse ourselves by saying that the government is inefficient or even crooked, and that the laws are unfair. Christians, certainly, can see very easily the failings of both government and law. But Christians ought to be the very persons to set the example of respect for law.

Consider the New Testament. Hardly a single Christian mentioned in that book had the least thing to do with making the laws of those times. The government was from the top down, the exact opposite of democratic.

The government, whether in Palestine or in Rome, was in non-Christian hands. The laws lacked a good deal of being wholly just and fair. Nevertheless, Jesus and Paul and Peter, all of whom suffered from the laws of their times, urged men to pay tribute (taxes) to Caesar, to support the magistrates, to obey the laws.

If we had no government we should miss it and want it. St. Peter, writing to Christians who were actually being persecuted by the government, urged them nevertheless to be loyal to the authorities. There may come times—indeed, human nature being what it is, such times are bound to come—when a government proves so corrupt and unjust that it deserves to fall; but even then the way out is not the way of lawlessness.

Cry-Babies And Self-Pity

By Lawrence Gould

Do crying spells express self-pity?

Answer: Self-pity is generally involved, but there may be another more or less unconscious factor, namely, pent-up rage—the feeling, mixed with fear, which primarily provokes a baby's crying. Anyone who is addicted to periodic crying spells is probably nursing a deep-rooted grudge against someone toward whom he or she does not dare act, or perhaps even feel resentful, and expresses his or her rage in the reproach which the crying implies. The first step in dealing with a woman who has crying spells might well be to search for the grievances which she is cherishing against her husband.

encountered. But developing immunity to measles does not leave a child in better health than if he never had had the disease. Nor does learning to endure harsh treatment from his parents make a child more "secure" than he would have been if they had been kind to him.

Are you sure that your child hears that?

Answer: If you are, you are in the superior minority of parents. According to Drs. William G. Hardy and Miriam D. Pauls of Johns Hopkins University, five per cent of children in the United States have more or less impaired hearing, which in many cases could be cured or improved by early treatment. Yet only eleven per cent of school children have their hearing tested regularly. It is all too easy to assume that a child who is slightly deaf is stupid or "not paying attention," especially since there is nothing visibly wrong with him. If your child's school does not provide hearing tests, see that he gets them elsewhere.

Does suffering make you "strong"?

Answer: Not always, by any means; its effect upon the average person is more often to frighten or embitter him. A child who grew up without experience of pain or frustration would probably be incapable of dealing with the hard knocks of adult life just as one who had never been exposed to "germs" might die of the first infection he

Allergy May Cause Head, Neck Aches

By Dr. James W. Barton

AS YOUNGSTERS, a test of strength was to hold one arm up sideways, in line with the shoulders, elbow straight, and see how long we could hold it there. When the large muscle on top of the shoulder got too painful and tired to hold the arm out any longer, we dropped the arm. The boy who could hold out the longest was the winner.

I think of this boyhood test when I see so many men and women suffering with pain in the back of the neck, because this pain is often caused by holding the head in one position for long periods of time at work, or simply sitting carelessly in a chair. Sometimes this careless attitude allows pressure from neck bones of the spine to press on nerves coming out from the spinal cord and cause pain in neck, shoulder and sometimes down the arm.

That our old enemy, allergy, may be a cause of pain in the back of the neck, and also headache, is pointed out in Archives of Otolaryngology (ear and throat) by Dr. Theron G. Randolph (Northwestern University). Dr. Randolph states that headache and neckache are repeatedly seen after the eating of certain foods or inhaling house dust. The headache and neckache disappear when these foods and house dust are avoided.

That headache and neckache are not the only signs of allergy in these individuals is evident from the fact that such signs as attacks of sneezing, running nose, cramps in abdomen and diarrhea, nausea, dizziness and hives are usually present. Other muscle groups affected, besides those in the neck, are those of the legs, back, chest, and abdomen.

In previous articles this pain in the muscles of the neck has been holding the head in the one position tenses the muscles and nerves, but Dr. Randolph thinks it results from allergic fatigue.

OUTLAW GUNS

BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR:

Events have reached a climax in the mystery of the location of the munitions store. Dan Frazer and his companions, lovely Helen Bartell, Wenslow and Rafferty, have discovered the cache in a tunnel of The Little Bear copper mine. Candino's bandits discover them there and launch an attack to seize the guns and ammunition. The four besieged persons put up such a successful defense that the bandits call for a truce. Kranz, the big German, comes out for a parley and asks them to surrender. They refuse. The fighting continues sporadically during the night. Then, following a lull the bandits attack in full force and prepare to rush the mine entrance.

CHAPTER XIX

It was another hour before the next attack came. It was much like the earlier one except that there were two attacks now instead of one. Frazer and Wenslow concentrated on the main force while Helen and Rafferty banged away at the men who had slipped past into the upper gulch. Again there was a heavy curtain of fire thrown up by the bandits, and this time they seemed to be doing a little more accurate shooting. Frazer knew a brief flash of pain as a bullet grazed his right shoulder, and he could hear a grunt of pain from Wenslow. The little man continued to fire, however, so he asked no questions.

Then Helen's voice rang out in alarm. "Some of them got through," she called. "I saw them duck into the mine."

"Hold your fire," Rafferty shouted back. "Hand over the stuff."

Frazer heard the words and wondered what the pair were trying to do. He did not take time to look, however. The dim valley below him seemed to be full of running men, and he spent his time grimly in trying to stop as many of them as possible. Evidently word had been flashed to the bandit army that some of their advance guard had broken through the defense and were in possession of the tunnel. Now the others were dashing forward to arm themselves.

Explosion Destroys Ammunition Stores

Then Rafferty's voice came sharply. "Get down, everybody. I'm going to strike a light. Keep down."

"And get back against the cliff," Helen shouted, her voice high pitched in her tense excitement.

He had just slid into position against the cliff face when a match flared and he caught a glimpse of Rafferty setting fire to something which looked like a paper bag with a fuse in it. Bullets splattered against the rocks as the light flickered, but then Rafferty took careful aim and tossed his paper bomb over the side of the parapet. Instantly he slid back against the wall and there was a split second of silence as the firing ceased entirely. Then a blaze of light illumined the valley and they could hear a loud puff which Frazer concluded was the burning of free gunpowder.

"Stay down," Helen warned, her voice almost immediately drowned by a heavy explosion which rocked the cliff. Chunks of rock crashed down upon the ledge or bounced beyond it, their reverberations covering the shrill cries which came up from the gulch itself. For a moment Frazer wondered whether they would all be entombed or tumbled down to the valley floor, but the rock fall ceased quickly and the ledge was still in place.

The mine storehouse had caught fire and the flames licking up its dry sides lit up the scene of destruction below. Men were fighting each other blindly in an effort to escape from the disaster which had overtaken them so devastatingly, and the riflemen on the ledge took full advantage. Neither reason nor sentiment dictated a policy of mercy now. They had to hit hard and insure their victory if they could.

"What the hell happened?" he heard Wenslow ask. "Worked like a charm," Rafferty chuckled happily. "We kin thank our lucky stars there was a gal on our side what had a smart idea. 'That's what we was cookin' up down there when we almost got nabbed by that first attack."

"What was it?" Wenslow asked impatiently.

"Gunpowder. There was a lot of it in the stores, ammunition for some o' them old muskets, I reckon. We busted open all the kegs but one and spread the stuff all over the floor o' the tunnel and out into the valley. Left one keg full, but open. Then we made a paper bomb and brought it up with us. When the bandits rushed the cave I lit the bomb and tossed it over into the powder we'd spilled all over the ground. It set fire to everything and blew up the keg full. Sounded to me like we musta caught a whole pessel o' rats in our trap."

Dan awoke at the first signs of dawn, guiltily aware that he had been resting while his companions held the fort. Somewhat hazily he remembered that there had been a conference before he fell asleep and that Wenslow's wounded arm had been bandaged. Otherwise the night battle seemed like a something out of a particularly gruesome nightmare. Only the blue smoke rising from the smoldering embers of the storehouse told him that he had not dreamed any part of it.

Helen came across to Frazer's side, the drawn weariness and horror in her eyes telling their story. "Feeling all right?" she asked, trying to put up a cheery front.

"I think you'd better kiss me now," she said quietly, ignoring the old prospector's tone.

Bandit Army Decamps As Cavalry Arrives

He studied her gravely. "You're red-eyed. You're dirty. You're disheveled. And you're wonderful. Shall I kiss you now or wait until we're alone?"

"Good grief!" Wenslow exclaimed in complete disgust.

"I think you'd better kiss me now," she said quietly, ignoring the old prospector's tone. "I'll really believe you mean it if I get kissed when I'm looking as badly as I do now."

In the gray light of early morning they could see the thinned ranks of the bandit army starting into motion. It was a retreat, however, the defeated outlaws firing as they rode. For some minutes the watchers on the ledge could not see any other movement in the valley, but finally the last bandit had disappeared and then the meaning of it all became clear. Other horsemen appeared out of the timber and Wenslow set up a shout of sheer joy.

"Bluecoats, by cracky! They got 'em on the run!"

United States Cavalrymen were swarming down into the gorge and taking up the chase. Evidently they had come over the ridge during the night, feeling their way people who had come down from down into the gulch for this dawn assault. Frazer counted them as they came out of the trees and disappeared on the trail of the fleeing bandits. "Three troops," he estimated coolly. "That ought to be plenty to handle a gang of scared thugs."

In a little over an hour, a tired lieutenant and six troopers cantered up the gulch to meet the four on the ledge. The officer looked wondrously about him at the scene of carnage in the valley, then he looked appreciatively at Helen Bartell. Touching his hat brim smartly he asked, "Anything we can do to help, miss?"

"I think you've done it," she replied with a smile. "Just now we're anxious to know what happened to our recent enemies."

He grinned a little at her businesslike tone. "Offhand I'd say about the same thing that happened to the rest of these scoundrels. We harried them to the border, and they ran squarely into a strong force of Rurales posted at the south end of the valley. Apparently the Rurales were not interested in taking prisoners."

The lieutenant nodded, then looked around at the three smoke-grimed men. "Which one is Frazer?" he asked abruptly.

Frazer identified himself, expecting a message from his superior. Instead the officer frowned slightly. "There's a funny sort of message for you from a Captain Gonzales of the Rurales. He says to tell you that you're a hard man. I might add that he said it with a decent enough grin. Then he added, 'Tell Frazer it will be well if he forgets about Inez and me. We would like to forget Senor Bartell.' I hope it makes some sense to you."

Grimy, Ragged Helen Accepts a 'Proposal'

Frazer smiled thoughtfully. "I think I understand, lieutenant. Do you happen to know who I am and why I'm here?"

"Yes. We knew that when our riding orders came."

"Good. Then I can ask you to do something for me. Try to forget 'about the message you just gave me."

The lieutenant looked puzzled, but he managed to return Frazer's smile. "Consider it forgotten. Now tell me just one thing. How many men did you have when you fought this battle?" His gesture indicated the scene of carnage around them.

"You're looking at us," Frazer told him. "Privates Wenslow and Frazer of the infantry. Generals Bartell and Rafferty of the artillery and strategic staff. You can trot out the medals any time now."

He sat down then, a little too tired to carry on with the pretense. The soldiers swung away to meet other blue clad riders who were pelting the valley, and Frazer had time to see that Derek Bartell, Ed Delaplaine and Carson Emery were among the approaching troopers. Then he switched his attention to the girl, who had knelt beside him.

"Thanks," Helen said briefly.

"For what?"

"Don't try to play innocent. I know what you're doing. You propose to report this thing in such a way as to save my father. Don't think that I don't appreciate it."

"Why not?" he retorted. "Our friend Gonzales made the offer and he's the only one who's likely to stir up a fuss from that side of the line. We keep quiet about him—and his girl friend—playing spy in Mesa Verde and he makes no charges against your father. That seems reasonable enough, particularly when we consider that your father was a cat's-paw in the deal anyway. I reckon everybody will be happy enough just to have that Candino crowd wiped out."

She shuddered a little and his hand went out to seize her stained fingers. "Forget it all," he advised gruffly. "There's another matter we ought to talk about. Do you think it's fair to keep Ed Delaplaine and Sally Chew in a ditch all the time?"

"What do you mean by that?"

"Don't be coy. Ed's still a little giddy about you—naturally enough. You better tell him. Let him down easy. Tell him you're marrying me so I'll have to keep quiet about my new father-in-law."

She chuckled with something like her old humor. I suppose that's the nearest thing to a proposal I'll ever get from a misguided individual like you."

"Probably. But what can you expect? You've got a dirty face and you're practically in rags from the cactus and rocks. When a girl's such a mess as you are she can't expect anything really romantic, you know." Then I'll reserve my answer," she said, with immense dignity.

"Fair enough," he agreed. "You get all prettied up and I'll come around wearing my perfume. Then we'll . . ."

The smudged face so close to his was comically ferocious as she looked him squarely in the eye. "If I ever smell that perfume on you again," she warned grimly, "I'll punch you right in the nose."

"Now you're talking like a perfect lady," he chuckled. "You'd better kiss me while the mood is upon you."

She did. THE END Copyright, 1937, Eugene B. Halleran.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

Use Fruits, Eggs, Milk To Help Make Desserts Popular and Nutritious

CAKE FOR SOMETHING NEW in desserts? Who wouldn't, especially when they're delicious to eat and add something to the nutritional status of the meal?

Desserts should not be just something sweet and calorie; they should serve some concrete purpose in the diet, such as adding eggs, milk and fruit which are not eaten as a first course or supplement.

If any housewife is having difficulties with her family taking what they should in the way of food, dessert is an easy, simple way to serve the daily requirement of health-giving elements.

Here's a good dessert for all members of the family, and pretty too.

"Spanish" Coconut Cream (Serves 6)

- 1/4 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 3 cups milk
- 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 3 eggs, separated
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup shredded coconut

Soften gelatin in 1/4 cup cold milk for 5 minutes. Heat remaining milk in top of double boiler with 2 tablespoons sugar and salt. Add softened gelatin, stirring until dissolved. Beat egg yolks, pour some over the hot milk mixture, while stirring. Return to double boiler and continue cooking, stirring constantly, over hot water for about 7 minutes, or until mixture coats the spoon. Beat egg whites until stiff; gradually add 2 tablespoons sugar, while beating. Fold into custard mixture that has been chilled until stringy. Add vanilla and coconut and blend. Turn into molds that have been rinsed with cold water; chill. Unmold and serve with Cherry-Almond sauce.

"Cherry-Almond" Sauce (Makes 2 cups)

- 1 cup cherry juice or water
- 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
- Few grains salt
- 2 drops almond extract
- 2 cups pitted red cherries (1 No. 2 can)
- 1/2 cup sliced, blanched almonds

Heat cherry juice, sugar and salt over low heat. Bring to a boil for a few minutes, until syrup is thick. Add almond extract, cherries and cool. Fold in almonds.

You'll get a generous quota of vitamin C when you serve this unusual cobbler for dessert. Grapefruit sections can be combined with any berries in season or fresh or canned peaches;

Florida Cobbler (Serves 6)

- 2 No. 2 cans grapefruit sections
- 1 pint berries or 2 cups sliced peaches
- 1 1/4 cups sugar or honey
- 1 1/2 cups sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons lard
- 1/4 cup milk (about)

Drain grapefruit sections; combine with berries or peaches in 2-quart casserole. Blend in 1 cup honey or sugar. Place in oven

Who wouldn't like a dessert like this? Spanish Coconut Cream molded in small ring forms, then filled with whole cherry, almond-flavored sauce, is as pretty as it is tasty. At the same time it makes it easy to get much needed eggs, milk and fruit into the daily diet.

You don't always have to get the citrus fruit at breakfast, especially when you can include grapefruit segments along with berries in season or peaches in a delightful, easy addition like this. Hard sauce molded in butter forms makes the pretty garnish.

Steam can be prevented from gathering on windows if, after they're perfectly clean, you rub them with a thin film of glycerine. Repeat whenever the effect seems to be wearing off.

For a quick job on the outside of windows when the weather is too cold to permit a thorough washing, soak a piece of cheesecloth in kerosene and give the glass a once-over lightly.

To prevent frost from collecting on windows, rub alcohol or milk on the outside of the glass and then polish with newspaper or a dry cloth.

It is best for window treatments to use glass no larger than 3 to 12 feet tall and 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 inches in diameter at one foot from the ground.

Millions more plantings should be protected from frost, since burning will destroy top growth and impair the winter effect for one or two years.

U.S. Wheat Crop Makes Strong Comeback, Report

The latest agriculture department report on wheat prospects indicates a crop of about 1,054,000,000 bushels this year, or nearly 72,000,000 more than forecast a month earlier.

Such a production would exceed last year's crop of 1,026,000,000 bushels and would be only about 96,000,000 short of the government's production goal—a goal which would exceed prospective needs and add some grain to reserves for future emergencies.

Unfavorable weather, particularly drought in the southwestern great plains, and insects in the same area, coupled with cool, wet spring weather, had put the crop prospects under a cloud.

The indicated production—plus reserves from past crops—would supply plenty of wheat to meet any needs seen now.

The department made no estimate on corn production, but said producers were optimistic.

Radio Telephone Tests Set for Rural Areas

Use of radio instead of poles and wires for some parts of rural telephone systems is soon to be tested on an experimental basis by the rural electrification administration, it was announced.

This test, the U.S. department of agriculture says, is being made to find out whether radio is more economic and efficient than usual installations in certain circumstances.
