PSAT/NMSQT Tests Scheduled

On Thursday, October 22 Muleshoe High School will be administering the PSAT/NMSQT to all interested juniors and qualifying sophomores.

The PSAT/NMSQT gives students practice for taking the SAT because these tests have the same kinds of questions and similar scores.

Taking this test helps students plan for college and it gives them an idea of how they will do on a college admission test.

Taking the PSAT is the first step in entering the scholarship programs conducted by the National Merit Scholarships Corporation. Some 6,000 Merit Scholarships, worth about $25 million, will be awarded to finalists in this competition. The only way to enter this competition is through the PSAT/MNSQT.

The fee for the 1992 PSAT is $7.00. Students will need to pay the fee when they register to take the test. Students must register early so that they will have ample time to study the review booklet provided them upon registration.

Students may begin registering immediately for the PSAT in the counseling office.

Individuals with questions concerning the PSAT should contact Linda Marr at Muleshoe High School.

seems to get 'Pumped Up' when they perform for any crowd, but especially when they perform for their home crowd in Muleshoe," says their director Acevedo. "I am very proud of the Hard Work put in so far, the improvement is apparent every performance," he adds.

"Many people do not appreciate the tremendous effort put forth by these band students. Their sense of pride keeps them at a high performance level. When it comes to great performances, the Mighty "M" Band continues their tradition of excellence year after year."

Word was received Monday that the Mighty "M" Band has been asked to march at halftime at the West Texas State University football game this coming Saturday.

"Muleshoe should be very proud of all their hard work as well as all the time Acevedo has put into

Two Commodities Added To Food Safety Program

Beginning Oct. 1, Texas Department of Agriculture inspectors will start collecting samples of carrots and broccoli, bringing to 12 the number of fruits and vegetables being tested under a sweeping food safety initiative launched last year, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry today said.

Texas Wheat Farmers Benefit From Export Program

Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said today that President George Bush's decision to offer $1 billion in agricultural assistance for wheat exports will provide a great boost to Texas farmers by strengthening domestic wheat prices.

The new assistance will cover 1.1 billion bushels of U.S. wheat sales to 28 countries under the Export Enhancement Program, administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The program allows U.S. wheat to be competitively priced around the world.

"I commend President Bush for ensuring that Texas and other U.S. farmers have an opportunity to export their commodities worldwide," Perry said.

"Our wheat farmers have been suffering from the slings of Mother Nature this year, but this assistance will give a shot in the arm to the Texas wheat market and should boost the amount of wheat exported out of our Houston and Galveston ports.

"This not only helps agriculture, but jobs at ports, transportation centers and elevators in Texas, which means they'll be spending money in your town and mine."

The value of wheat and wheat products exported through Texas was $120.7 million last year, according to the latest figures available from USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service.

Texas ranks third in the nation in winter wheat production. For 1992, the forecasted production of winter wheat in Texas is 129.2 million bushels valued at about $397 million.

The new assistance in the Export Enhancement Program will give wheat exports a market value of $3 Billion and could support nearly 100,000 new U.S. jobs, according to the Bush administration.

Program being conducted under a cooperative agreement with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The program is designed to help federal health officials refine both the amounts of pesticides that farmers may use on various crops and the residue levels that should be allowed on fresh foods.

"Through this program, we're putting our money and expertise where your mouth will be," Perry said.

"In protecting consumers' health, the government must always deal with facts, and this program provides the critical data producers, consumers and the government need for establishing a perspective on the safe levels of pesticide residues," Perry said.

In 1991, Texas ranked third in the nation in harvested acreage for broccoli and fifth in carrots. Total value of the Texas carrot crop was more than $14.3 million, while broccoli was almost $6.3 million.

According to figures released last year by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service, the amount of pesticides used on Texas commercial vegetable acreage in 1990 was below the national average.

"I know that it's popular in some circles to believe that farmers are dumping large amounts of pesticides on their crops, but the factual, scientific data don't support this view," Perry said, noting that one of the main objectives of the federal Pesticide Data Program is to establish an objective database detailing how much and what types of pesticides -- if any -- are left on the foods we eat.

Since the program began in May 1991, TDA has analyzed almost 1,000 commodity samples at the agency's laboratory in Brenham. All have been well within tolerance levels set by federal food safety officials.

TDA inspectors collect commodity samples monthly from 23 distribution sites and terminal markets across the state -- the final stop before commodities reach grocers' shelves. The samples are analyzed for trace amounts of pesticides, and the data are sent to the USDA in Washington, D.C.

The 10 commodities currently being screened under the federal Pesticide Data Program are apples, bananas, celery, grapes, grapefruit, green beans, lettuce, oranges, peaches and potatoes.

Texas Farm Bureau News

The Texas Water Commission's decision to finalize its rules seizing regulatory control of the Edwards Aquifer is in "total disregard" of the private property rights of Texas landowners, the president of the Texas Farm Bureau said Thursday.

The commission voted 3-0 on Wednesday, September 9, to limit pumping from the Edwards Aquifer to 450,000 acre feet, reducing that amount to 400,000 acre feet by the year 2008.

Texas Farm Bureau President S.M. True says the commission's action, set to take effect in June of 1993, is illegal.

"The Texas Water Commission does not have the authority to regulate underground water in Texas, period," True said.

On April 15 of this year, TWC issued a ruling declaring the Edwards Aquifer an underground river, therefore subject to state regulation. Texas Farm Bureau is a party in a lawsuit to decide the legality of the TWC action. The suit was scheduled to begin Friday, September 11, in Austin.

Under the TWC ruling, farmers would be required to provide sworn statements to the Water Commission confirming water usage by November 1.

Joe Maley, TFB Director of Public Affairs, said that farming communities dependent on the aquifer could feel the pinch.

"Farmers have purchased irrigated land," he said. "If irrigation water is substantially reduced, or cut off, the land will not hold its value."

Marley said that will have far reaching impact on rural farm communities.

True said the Farm Bureau does not mean we can ignore the law," he said. "This is not an emergency situation, and the law allows for solutions to the problem"

The Texas Farm Bureau has proposed that locally controlled underground water conservation districts be set up under Chapter 52 of the State Water Code to protect and manage the Edwards Aquifer.

Oklahoma Favored Over Texas Longhorns

Kansas and Kansas State aren't ready to change things from the Big Three in the Big Eight, Colorado, Nebraska and Oklahoma, to the Big Five. However, their days of being conference doormats may be in the past tense. The Jayhawks, 6-5 last fall, blew out both Oregon State (49-20) and Tulsa (40-7), but then ran into difficulty with California, losing 27-23. The Wildcats, 7-4 in '91, beat both Montana and Temple in their first two games. This week the two meet in Lawrence and it could be as close as Kansas' 16-12 win over K-State last fall. We're picking Kansas.

Miami, still recovering from the effects of its battle with Florida State last week, goes on the road this week to face Penn State. The Hurricanes beat the Lions last fall, but only by 6 points, 26-20, and Miami was playing at home. Penn State has had things very much its own way so far this season and other than just edging Cincinnati 24-20 in its opener, it has scored impressive wins. The Nittanians were 10-2 last fall, their only other loss being to Southern California. Good upset possibility .. Penn State.

Forecasting percentage through games of Saturday, September 26: 562 right and 202 wrong for a .736 average.

No team came closer to upsetting Washington last fall than California. During the regular 1991 season, the undefeated Huskies rolled over their opposition by an average of 33 points. They beat the Bears by seven, 24-17. California was 9-2 last season, but was surprisingly chased out of the stadium on opening day this year by Purdue, 41-14. The Bears came back to upset Kansas two weeks ago. Against Washington, California will be the underdog.

Texas upset Oklahoma 10-7 in their traditional match-up last fall in Dallas. The Longhorns, losers to Mississippi State and Syracuse in their first two 1992 outings, will have trouble against the Sooners this week. Oklahoma favored.

Enlightening Tips

Folks, have you sat down today and just gave thanks for the forgotten blessings you have in your life? It is such a hectic life out there these days, that, day by day, we fail to think about the oh-so-many good things in our lives.

I'm constantly in a hurry; seems like I'm always running late. My little one was sick all week-end, and I thought to myself, how lucky I was to be able to spend some good quality time with her. Because of the circumstances, I was forced to take the time.

I can remember, after being born and raised a country girl, when I moved to California at the age of fifteen. The most outstanding things I can remember about the city we moved to were the smells, the noise, and the people. Of course, at the age of fifteen, it was all very exciting, but after looking back on it now, I failed to smell the good, clean, fresh country air again until we returned to Texas some eight years later!

I am thankful to be living in a small rural community, where the air is clean and fresh (aside of the pollen that gets us!). It is a place to teach your children to grow, with experiences and opportunities that a lot of children will never know; a place where the people are friendly, and you know what the meaning of true friendships is all about; a place where one can relate to nature, find a quiet place, and peace of mind.

Take time to smell the roses, and yes, give thanks-we're country-that's our style!

In Fashion

Western-style clothes aren't limited to day wear only. With smart tailoring they're popular for after sundown also. A soft suede vest can be worn with jeans during the day and with a shiny sequin skirt and dressy blouse at night.

Ask The Vet

Dear Dr. Paul, We show horses and have a mare that is impossible when she is in heat. Regu-mate does a super job of keeping her out of heat but a friend recommended a cattle implant which is a lot cheaper and, supposedly, just as good. What do you think?

I have heard that some show-horse owners are using cattle growth implants for their progestational effect to keep mares out of heat. The most commonly used implant is one that contains 200 mg progesterone and 20 mg estradiol benzoate. Most authoritative sources agree that 150 to 200 mg progesterone in oil must be injected daily to suppress estrus in the mare. The progesterone pay out from this implant is between 100 and 150 days. It can be concluded that you should not use a non-sterile cattle implant. It cannot be counted on the keep a mare out of heat. Regu-mate is administered orally to mares at the rate of 1 ml per 100 and 10 lbs. of bodyweight daily and has been shown to be safe and effective to suppress estrus in mares.

Forum To Weigh Regulations' Impact On Communities

Federal and state regulations that mandate changes for businesses and community services, but fail to provide funding, are straining the budgets of many local governments as well as agricultural producers, will be examined here Oct. 5 at the fall conference of the Texas Agricultural Forum.

The forum at the Sheraton Mockingbird Hotel, 1890 West Mockingbird Lane, is one of a series held each year for leaders from government, business and all facets of agricultural enterprise. It begins at 7:15 a.m. The sessions, open to anyone, provide an opportunity to exchange views on current issues relating to agricultural and rural communities, said Dr. Ed Smith, forum coordinator. He is an agricultural economist and specialist in marketing and policy with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, College Station.

"Agricultural and community leaders are beginning to recognize that the futures of rural communities and rural businesses, including agriculture, are inextricably intertwined," Smith said. "One can't be rescued without rescuing the other; conversely, one can't be lost without irreparable damage to the other." County judges and commissioner, mayors and community leaders from across Texas are especially invited to attend the program, said Dan Pustejovsky of Hillsboro.

"There's Fungus Among Us"

Many teenagers this school year could be chanting "there's fungus among us" if they are not careful, says a pediatric dermatologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

"Athlete's foot is a common fungal disease in young people," said Dr. Andrea Dominey, an assistant professor of dermatology at Baylor. "Teens who wear a favorite pair of sneakers repeatedly or who use school showers are targets for the disease."

Athlete's foot can take on different forms, including a "moccasin" type that forms a dry, white scale on the edge of the soles, or blistering beneath the skin of the soles. The discomfort can be annoying.

Other symptoms of athlete's foot include an irritating itch, a burning sensation, an unpleasant odor and scaling between the toes.

Dominey says teenagers should wear shoes that allow the feet to "breathe," such as athletic footwear with ventilation and open-toe sandals.

"Even though summer is over, some areas are extremely humid and your feet can perspire," she said. "A damp, closed environment is the perfect place for fungus to grow."

Over-the-counter antifungal medications work well, Dominey says, but are ineffective in some cases. A physician may prescribe more powerful medications to combat the problem.

"Foot powders and odor-absorbing shoe inserts may help, but they are not cure-alls," Dominey said. "If the condition does not improve after two to three weeks, see a dermatologist. You could avoid the spread of infection at school and save yourself the discomfort."

To prevent athlete's foot from recurring, Dominey recommends the following:

- * Follow a daily regimen of applying antifungal cream, powder or spray if you are prone to athlete's foot.
- * Wear clean hose and cotton socks to reduce perspiration and avoid wearing the same pair of shoes daily.
- * If you are on your feet all day, use foot powder or shoe fresheners.
- * Completely dry between the toes after swimming or bathing.
- * If using a public shower or swimming pool, wear rubber thongs to avoid human-to-human transmission of the disease.

African Bees
An Agriculture Department scientist says that a sprayed mixture of liquid dish detergent and water will stop African honey bees from stinging people and pets, and kill them within 60 seconds.

Texas Agricultural Forum chairman, TAF doesn't try to force a consensus, but brings together special interests to discuss all sides of common problems, he said.

"The Agricultural Forum isn't a closed club," said Pustejovsky, a cotton producer and seedsman. "Anyone interested in the health of agriculture and our rural communities is urged to attend this important meeting."

Regulations such as the new Environmental Protection Agency standards for landfills, requirements for animal waste control at dairies and feedlots, educational funding requirements, and rural health care challenges raise some critical questions for many communities and governmental bodies, Smith noted. These include:

- * Are the effects of federal mandates inevitable?
- * Who will decide what happens in and to rural Texas?
- * Are present government policies a help or hindrance to the rebirth of rural Texas?
- * What are the common interests of agriculture, rural businesses and rural communities?
- * Can the policy environment be changed? If so, how?

The status of rural Texas and scope of rural policy will be reviewed by Dr. Dennis Fisher, professor and agricultural economist with the Extension Service, College Station. A federal legislative overview of the impact of regulations and policy will be presented by U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford, State Rep. Tim Von Dohlen of Goliad will present a state legislative overview. The perspective of businesses also will be presented.

At the 11:30 a.m. luncheon, members of the U.S. House committee on Energy and Commerce will address the issue. Among them will be Reps. Joe Barton of Ennis and Ralph Hall of Rockwall.

Afternoon session moderator will be Frank Sturzl (cq) of the Texas Municipal League, Austin. The implications of solid and hazardous waste regulations will be discussed by Oscar Cabra, chief of the municipal facilities branch of EPA; Dallam County Judge David Field; Larry Gibson, Dublin dairy farmer, and Kirk Brown, professor of soil physics, Texas A&M University.

A panel on rural health care delivery will be moderated by Leland Beatty of Texas Rural Communities. Discussing the issue will be Dr. Sheryl Boyd, assistant chairman for development, Internal Medicine Department, Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, Lubbock; Colleen Depner, legislative assistant for health and welfare to Rep. Stenholm; and Beatty.

The audience will have ample time for questions and comments, Smith said. Registration of $25 is payable at the door.

High Risk Groups Need Vaccinations Early

Both influenza A and influenza B could circulate during the 1992-93 flu season, and people in high-risk groups should get vaccinated early.

The influenza strains expected to dominate this season are A/Texas (H1N1), B/Panama and B/Qingdao, said Dr. W. Paul Glezen, epidemiologist at the Influenza Research Center at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

A/Texas and B/Panama are covered by the 1992-93 vaccine.

B/Qingdao is not included in the vaccine, Glezen said, but is closely related to B/Panama. The similarity will provide vaccine protection during what is expected to be a mild to moderate season.

Influenza variants are named according to where they were first identified. The A/Texas strain was originally isolated in October 1991 by Baylor's Flu Center.

"People in high-risk groups should get vaccinated soon," Glezen said, "in case this season's outbreak occurs early."

Flu usually appears in early or mid-December and peaks in January or February, but the 1991-92 epidemic began earlier.

In most areas, the vaccine should already be available at physicians' offices and community health centers. It takes two weeks for a flu shot to provide full protection.

The people most at risk of flu complications are the elderly as well as people with heart disease; lung disease, including asthma and chronic bronchitis; diabetes; chronic kidney disease; chronic anemia, including sickle cell disease; and immune-system disorders.

Also recommended for vaccination are care-givers likely to come into contact with those in the other high-risk groups.

Influenza produces fever, generalized muscle pain, weakness and a dry, hacking cough. Victims should rest and drink liquids.

In treating symptoms, people younger than 21 should use only aspirin-free pain relievers. Aspirin has been associated with Reye's syndrome, a flu and chicken pox complication that can cause vomiting, convulsions, brain damage and death in children.

Amantadine, an antiviral drug, will provide specific treatment for influenza A infections; however, it is not effective for influenza B. Treatment should be started within 48 hours after symptoms begin.

Energy Awareness Month

Mark your calendars: October is National Energy Awareness Month. The Texas Energy Extension Service will be coordinating the observance in Texas by sending informational packets to various organizations and sponsoring activities to promote energy awareness.

This year's theme, "Energy Technology--For a Competitive America," underscores the importance of supporting the type of research and development that will lead to ways in which Americans can use their energy supplies more efficiently. It also highlights the importance of discovering new energy technologies that will help America maintain its competitiveness in world markets.

Each year, the National Energy Awareness Month observance is supported by government, schools, businesses, utility companies, energy companies, and libraries, who educate the public on energy-related issues. The Texas Energy Extension Service will be working with these groups to promote the observance in Texas.

Texas EES representatives offer seminars on energy efficiency, energy resources and alternative energy methods to schools and organizations during Energy Awareness Month as well as the rest of the year. In addition, the service offers a large assortment of publications on various energy related topics free of charge.

If you are interested in sponsoring an energy seminar or would like some ideas to help promote Energy Awareness Month in your organization, or if you would like some ideas to help promote Energy Awareness Month in your organization, or if you would like any of our free energy-related publications, contact the Texas Energy Extension Service at 1-800-643-SAVE. Remember, it's easy to get involved, and it is well worth the effort to save the precious energy resources that affect every aspect of our lives.

Did You Know You Are Paying 20% Less For Electricity Than You Did Nine Years Ago? (94% of our customers didn't.)

Compare this to the average residential cost of electricity in the SPS service area. In 1983, you paid 7.59 cents per kilowatt-hour. Today that rate has been reduced to 6.08 cents. That is 20% less! And, when you adjust for inflation, the real cost has been reduced 42%!

Our heating rate has been significantly reduced, too. Today, you pay only 2.92 cents per kilowatt-hour to heat your home electrically. That is much less than the national average for electric home heating.

And, because industrial and commercial rates, as well as residential ones, have come down, the area as a whole benefits. SPS' low rates can help attract new industry and encourage local companies to stay in our area.

ELECTRICITY FROM SPS. A GREAT BUY THAT KEEPS GETTING BETTER.
