"THE DEESTRICT SKULE"

The play entitled "The Dees trick Skule" given by the Parent-Teachers Club on Tuesday night was indeed well attended. and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The play was good and the act ors and acting were indeed fine. We are sure that Silverton hadn't realized how much good talent she had until the "Deestrick Skule" was played.

The proceeds, which will be used for the benefit of the Silverton "Skule", were around $127.

JOHNSON-FORT

On Sunday evening, Mar. 20th. at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. W. H. Porter at Harrison, Ark. Mr. Ralph Johnson and Miss Sula Fort were united in marriage by Rev. W. M. Edwards Bellfonte.

WHAT TO SERVE FOR DINNER.

A soup which is somewhat out of the ordinary and provides a nourishing dish for the bill of fare is: Cauliflower and

Tomato Soup .-Rub a head of cooked cauliflower through a cot ander, mix with two cupfuls of sifted tounto. add two cupfuls of water in which the bones of a roast turkey have been cooked. Season with three teaspoonfuls of salt and one tablespoonful of pepper. Cook one tublespoonful of minced onion in three tablespoonfuls of fat until brown, Stir in four tablespoonfuls of flour and add the vegetable pulp and stock. Stir until boiling. Serve with rings of sweet green pepper as a garnish.

Mock Venison.-Hang a leg of mutton in a cool place as long as possible, while it keeps sweet. Then take off the skin and put the mutton into a dripping pan or kettle and pour over the following pickle: Take three heads of garlic or three sliced onions, one-half ounce of peppercorns, onefourth ounce of allspice berries crushed, six bay leaves, a dozen sprigs of thyme and a dozen sprigs of parsley, all brought to a boil in three cupfuls of vinegar. This pickle should be rubbed into the meat, rubbing and turning for at least thirty minutes. Allow the meat to remain in the pan. covering the top with thinly sliced enions until the next day, then repeat the rubbing and lay in the pan the other side up, covering with onions again. Continue this for four days, then wipe the meat dry and rub for half an hour in a pint of hot molasses. Let the meat hang in a cool place until the next day, then wipe dry and roast the same as a leg of mutton. Serve with melted currant jelly. This sounds like a good deal of work but it is worth it.

Date Bran Muffins .- Sift one cupful of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of sugar. Add one beater at to two cupfuls of bran and one and one-last cupfuls of milk. Beat thoroughly, add one-half cupful of dates cut in small bits, combine with the flour mixture and bake in muttin pans twenty-five minutes.

Rhubarb Soup.-Take six stalks of rhubarb, cut in small pieces. Add the rhubarb to one quart of veal stock. one small onion, two thin slices of bread and salt and pepper to taste. Let the mixture boil, removing the scum as it rises. Simmer gently until the rhubarb is tender. Strain and serve with toasted bread.

Even in ordinary life the unselfish people are the happiest-those who work to make others happy and who forget themselves. The dissatisfied people are those who are seeking happiness for themselves .- Mrs. Besant.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

The leather cushions of chairs and couches may be treated with ordinary tan or black shoe dressing, the cleanser and polishing wax. Rub it in with great care and scratches and stains will be removed, the leather preserved and made new looking.

The leftover pancakes broken in bits and added to scrambled eggs make a palatable dish and a saving on eggs.

Before roasting the deg of lamb place it in a kettle with one-fourth of a cupful of rice, sait, pepper and one onion, celery and parsley; add two quarts of water and simmer one hour. Remove and roast as usual. The broth will make a delicious soup.

Use any bits of leftover paint to paint the inside and outside of the gurbage can. It will keep it from rusting.

A chemical works at Bruenn-Koehigsfield has been carrying on experiments with a view to finding a substitute for cork, says a Prague correspondent in the Times Trade Supplement, and these have now led to tangible results. Turf treated by a special patented process furnishes a material for insulation and building purposes that is said to be, in most respects, not inferior, and in some superior, to cork. The product is reported to be equally light, firm, and soundproof, to possess great insulating properues, and to be damp-proof.

Paying in Dresden China.

Little pieces of red-brown china bearing the usual Dresden mark are being passed from hand to hand in Saxony. It is not that people are bartering their cups and saucers or are getting rid of the contents of their china cupboards, nor are they making each other presents of the delicate porcelain for which the mark of Dresden has been noted.

A new colnage in porcelain has been put into circulation to suprsede small paper money, and one of its valuable assets is the fact that it can be washed, so no one need complain of dirty money. The little red-brown discs have met with a hearty welcome, and the factory of Meissen has never sent out anything more popular than these little pieces of china that are too enall for a plate, too shallow to hold water and not adorned with anything but the most simple devices.

WAS DREAM OF ALCHEMISTS

Dissolves Rubber, Glues, Hydrocarbons and Many Substances Heretofore Regarded as Most Resistant to Chemical Agencies.

Lincoln, Neb .- New properties of a liquid described before the students of the department of chemistry of the University of Nebraska show that it almost realizes the dream of the alchemists of old who sought the universal solvent.

As described by Dr. Victor Lenher, professor of chemistry at the university of Wisconsin, who has come here to deliver a series of addresses on the subject, further tests have shown that selenium oxychloride as the solvent is called, is more powerful even than was indicated in his preliminary announcement made before the American Chemical society.

It dissolves rubber, glues, enamels, hydrocarbons and many other substances which hitherto have been reical agencies except fire.

The Beacon had thought as the time passed the free copy that comes to this office would lighten some, but it gets heavier with each mail. Every known scheme and every kind of space grafter is calling for free space. We have become hard-boiled on the proposition. Not a line will these grafters get from us. Not a line will publicity bureaus get. We are capable of editing our own columns. We have no space for contributed stuff in the way of clippings with request to publish. —Lockney Beacon

It is true that much free advertisement going the rounds and many editors are filling their papers with much of the dope. But we are in the same frame of mind as the Beacon. Why editors will consistently charge the home people and then throw in a lot of free advertisement for some foreign outfit is beyond our comprehension. If we get to the place where we cannot edit our paper we will step out and let some one else give it a try.

All pudlishers should realize that they are doing their paid advertisers an injury when they give foreign dope free space.

We wonder if the reason why thir stuff is published is breause the editor is incapable of doing otherwise.

A new edge to her voice and something to continue him as my companion." in her eyes that made them look as though they were passing in review she made her debut as an independent scullery-maid at Mrs. Blunkum's feedhouse. "I shall change nothing here," she concluded. "When Randy-Mr. Randolph comes back, he shan't find his place cluttered with females."

Mr. Milyuns turned on her a gaze that was complex with admiration and a realization that he was on the way to biting off more than he could chew. He decided to sidestep.

"Can you be in this afternoon?" he

"Oh, yes," said Pamela, involuntarportal night and day until death or Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph arrived; "I'll be in. Why?"

"Mrs. Milyuns and my daughter Elleen will call on you at about five," explained Mr. Milyuns. "Just one more matter and I must go." he con-"Your income amounts to a month. I shall pay it in advance right." until you get settled and have a chance to catch up."

"Please send me only half," said Pamela, as she rose to say good-by.

Mr. Milyuns took her hand, dropped it, and started toward the door; but before he got there, he stopped and turned.

"My dear," he said, losing for the moment his birdlike, chirpy pose, "1 don't want you to think of me as just your banker. I knew your father and your mother, and their fathers and mothers before them. I am fond, by old usage, of every drop of blood that runs in your veins. You won't forget that, will you?"

Pamela stared at him, swept toward him, threw her arms round his neck hugged him, dropped her face on his shoulder and wept. Mr. Borden Milyuns stood very erect, his baid head held high, his pink cheeks puffed out, and his eyelids blinking at the rate of fifteen to the dozen in a vain effort to fan back an amazing lachrymatory inundation. "There, there!" he said, patting Pamela on the back. "Who would have thought it, you adorable, lonely little Pamela threw up her head and smiled through the sudden summer shower.

"I know it was ridiculous," she said, "But I couldn't help it. You made me like you all of a sudden, and I just had to, because you've had a bath and you look so clean inside and out." She kissed him as she broke away.

"I see; I see," said the astounded Mr. Milyuns, and beat It.

At two minutes after five the doorbell rang again. In spite of the fact that it was almost exactly the hour which Mr. Milyuns had set for the arrival of his wife and daughter, Pamela couldn't belp hoping-but in vain. It was with a slightly resigned air that she received Mrs. and Miss Milyuns Instead of Mr. Robert Randolph.

Mrs. Milyuns flew to her, set hands on her shoulders, searched her face with eager shrewd eyes, and said: "Borden Indeed told me the truth about you, my dear. May I kiss you?" Pamela extended one cheek to the salute while her eyes wandered off to size up the tall, blonde, cool young person that she surmised must answer to the name of Eileen Milyuns. Being the product of two shorts, how on earth had she managed to grow so long? Her face was regularly beautiful, as though it had been carefully made to order like her clothes. She appeared as passive as a Palmer snow-

After a little skirmishing for posttion, the three ladies seated themselves in a triangle, into the center of which the well-trained Tomlinson ran a tea-wagon.

"Now," sald Mrs. Milyuns, having emptied and put down her cup, "let's forget the sheer romance of the situation, my dear, and get down to practical problems. The first of all things, as you must realize, is the necessity of getting you a companion. Would you care to be our guest in Madison avenue un'il you can pick one out?"

"I would put clothes ahead of a housecat," murmured Elleen.

Her mother ignored the remark and comes, for anything." kept her eyes fixed on Miss Thornton's perplexed face. That young lady seemed in no lack of something to say but rather in search of words and the plunging courage secessary to the saying. She drew a long breath and delivered berself of the following:

"Really, it's most awfully kind of | first time he decided to turn up, he you, but, as I told Mr. Milyuns, Tom- might never appear again. But if he "Can't I?" said Miss Thornton, with linson is such a dear that I am going finds you after two or three unsuccess-

"'Tomlinson!" exclaimed Mrs. Milyuns, and then smiled indulgently for all the unchaperoned years since first the first time during the interview, being under the impression that at last she had run into something appropriately naive in the bearing of her new charge. "Of course you can keep him on, but you must realize that you can't live here without a woman in the house.'

> "Oh, yes, I can," said Miss Thornton, a little breathlessly. "I have a feeling-I can't explain it exactly-that this apartment is a one-woman setting. As I said to Mr. Milyuns, I don't want to clutter it with females."

A silent laugh crept into the eyes of fly glancing at the door and betraying the marblesque Eileen; something ina half-formed intention to watch that | side of her sat up and took notice. She glanced round the room and murmured:

"Mother, she's absolutely right. I'm for her."

Having taken up her suave cudgel, Elleen was in no haste to lay it down, and may it be pointed out right here that Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton had the rare faculty of enlisting the nearest bystander to assume her battles for her, thenceforth becoming a charmingly interested onlooker, ready to watch the tide of her own fortune from the vantage-point of an entirely impersonal detachment.

"That's where you slipped, mother," continued the quite unruffled Elleen. "There's nothing impossible to our

She turned to Pamela with a twinkle of anticipation in her eyes "How about it?"

Pamela smiled back her bubbling smile, and then suddenly grew grave.

"Do you think I could order by measure?" she asked, and, remarking the hurt astonishment on Elleen's face, continued in rapid but neverthe- the allotted time. less halting explanation: "You see, it's Mr. Randolph, This is really his apartment, and he may be back almost any -any day. "H'm," interjected Mrs. Milyuns, but before she could make any further that, in one hour's twinkling of the resort to various expedients, such as progress along that line, Elleen was on eye, she became such a radiant vision her feet and saying good-by among as chokes mere words down into the light of calf-love and inspires his hands with an overmastering desire to reach for it.

P. Thoruton, that spoke volumes for the former's exclusive taste in fashionable purveyors and financial ability to humor it. Possibly the two would have shopped up to the moment of the present writing had it not been for the fact that Pamela knew all about money from the short end.

For two, four, six days, a week, two weeks, Pamela lived in breathless anticipation of the moment when she could burst upon the eyesight of one Robert Hervey Randolph, and when all these days-and weeks-passed without any news of him, her lips that were made to smile, to kiss, and to bless the air with words softly spoken and carried on the fragrance of clean young breath began to droop pitifully.

Mr. Milyuns' efforts in several directions had so far proved in vain. He had advertised in every paper in Gotham, from the New York Epoch to the pink Police Gazette; he had offered rewards; he had set traps and was now supporting a large corps of rapldly fattening individuals who called themselves "plain-clothes" men--a name that would have fitted them admirably had the last syllable been omitted. His net results were the information that Mr. Randolph, in a reprehensible state of intoxication and at seven o'clock of the morning of which he had disappeared, had exchanged his swell evening garments at a secondstole Pamela from her intention of hand emporium on Sixth avenue for a suit of thicks and eighteen dollars in cash, stating, as he left the place, that he was thinking of going South for the Writer Insists No Man May Stand In the Light of His Wife's Domestic Ambitions.

POINTS OUT HUSBAND'S DUTY

"Puzzled husband" writes us that he is sorely tried by his wife's ambition to bake the family bread, and other things. His domestic affection and spirit of chivalry will not permit him to tell his wife the truth-that the bread is almost as heavy as a paving stone and quite as indigestible. So he goes to work every morning with "Finished shopping," said Pamela. a heavy heart and an even heavier Tve been keeping account, and I've stomach, and is bedeviled with gripes and abdominal pains all day, Greene "The whole check?" exclaimed M. Tricking Fate,

Every Hindoo must have a son to perform the proper rites in his behalf so that he may be released from purtherefore, is he whose fate is to be sonless. One such, a Brahman, propitiated the god Vishnu and obtained a boon. He asked for a son, but, since a son was not in the man's fate, Vishnu refused. Twice this happened, rive in the nick of time. Tomlinson but the third time the Brahman asked that his merriments might be shared by gods and men alike. This was granted. He then went home, locked his door and, with his wife, began to sing and dance. Thereupon, all the gods and men, by the terms of the boon, were compelled to sing and dance with him, and the business of the universe was brought to a standstill. "Stop!" begged the gods. "Only when you grant me a son," answered the Brahman. And he had his way .-W. N. Brown in Asia Magazine,

A Tale of Blood

The blood is to the body what steam is to an engine. If the steam runs down, the engine slows up, and if your blood runs down, you slow up. Your food doesn't digest as it should, you don't feel rested in the morning and you are out of sorts generally. Over fifty years ago Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was put on sale in the drug stores to help people whose blood was in poor shape, and ever since then has been doing wonderful things for men and women all over this country. "Stomach Trouble of 30 Years Standing Relieved in a Week"

New Ulm woman writes that Ware's Black Powder gave prompt relief after other remedies failed.

"My mother had stomach trouble for over 30 years and used all kinds of medi-cines, but never got relief. Then I heard of Ware's Black Powder and got some. Mother took the medicine according to di-rections and in less than a week she was well."

Sp writes Paula Wotipka of New Ulm, Texas, on May 11th, 1920. And her mother's car is but one more link in the evergrowing chain of evidence which proves the power of Ware's Black Powder in the treatment of stomach and bowel troubles. Sold by druggists everywhere for 40 years. Not a purgative. Contains no harmful drugs. 60c and $1.20 the package. Send for Dr. Ware's booklet—free.

BENEFITS IN A DOZEN WAYS

A man with a bank account is benefited in a dozen different ways he knows nothing about.

When one wants to know about the integrity, the business standing, or about a person's credit, usually the first place inquiry is made is at the bank.

A bank reference is worth having and anyone can have a good one if they go about the right way to get it.

The best way we know is to open an account with

Buy International machines for the most successful operation of your farm, then keep them 100 per cent International as long as they last by using Genuine I H C Repairs. we will back you up by International Service, which is prompt, dependable and permanent.

Order Repairs Early

All these items should be listed and ordered early, far in advance of the time when they will be needed. You will save time and money by ordering all the repairs at one time. This will save you money later in the season, when you may be obliged to pay telephone calls and parcel post or express on small shipments.

When Delays are Expensive

And, what may later prove much more costly than these charges, is the time lost waiting for repairs just when the implement should be working in the field.
