"The Inner Chamber"

Adapted from CHARLES CALDWELL DOBIE'S famous novel "BLOOD RED DAWN"

Saturday Night

A mammoth production produced on a large scale with many spectacular scenes, notable among which are the famous charity bazaar, the mammoth Greek restaurant and cabaret, the musicale and the storm scenes. The latter was filmed on the Jersey coast during one of the worse storms of the season.

Alice Joyce was never seen to better advantage. The role calls for all her latent energy and emotional skill. It presents her both as society girl and the woman of poverty. The story has an unusual twist. It is different from the average motion picture and one that is sure to appeal.

WOMEN WHO CANNOT WORK

Read Mrs. Corley's Letter and Benefit by Her Experience

Edmund, S.C.—"I was run down with nervousness and female trouble and suffered every month. I was not able to do any work and tried a lot of medicine, but got no relief. I saw your medicine advertised in a little book that was thrown in my door, and I had not taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I could see it was helping me. I am keeping house now and am able to do all of my work. I cannot say enough for your medicine. It has done more for me than any doctor. I have not paper enough to tell you how much it has done for me and for my friends. You may print this letter if you wish."—ELIZABETH C. CORLEY, care of A. P. Corley, Edmund, S. C.

Ability to stand the strain of work is the privilege of the strong and healthy, but how our hearts ache for the weak and sickly women struggling with their daily rounds of household duties, with backaches, headaches, nervousness and almost every movement brings a new pain. Why will not the mass of letters from women all over this country, which we have been publishing, convince such women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help them just as surely as it did Mrs. Corley?

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHTS

Have Been Scenes of Notable Events

WASHINGTON.—Like the Rome of old, Washington has its road of fame, its Appian way. On Pennsylvania avenue, familiarly known to Washingtonians as "The Avenue," some of the most notable events of our national history have occurred. Here passed the conquering hosts of the country's brave, as in 1865, 1898 and 1918. Here, too, march with the halting step that tells of age and feebleness, the veterans of internecine strife.

Another celebrated avenue is Connecticut avenue. In the spring the display there of dress and wealth rivals that of the famous Fifth avenue in New York city. On this street are legations, both splendid and imposing of great sister nations and stately homes of famous men and women. It is the most cosmopolitan street in Washington. Even the African race has a representative there. As neighbor to a marble mansion is the modest home of a darkey pater familias, whose little ebony children tumble and play, all undisturbed by the vicinity of their fashionable neighbors.

The stranger in Washington would conclude, strolling along F street, that it resembled a country street more than the main artery of the capital of a vast nation. Here and there are passers-by leisurely sauntering and chatting, but nowhere is there congestion of the ordinary large city. No crowds. Ah, wait a minute! It is 4:30 and the clocks around toll out the half hour. The doors of the government buildings open. Out pours a throng of men and women, and all in a mad rush for home. In this crowd the man from Connecticut may find an old neighbor or boyhood chum. One from Texas, too, could find old friends here.

The streets of Washington present an interesting study in nomenclature. It is rather amusing to discover a street with a long name sometimes, but an alleyway named after some hero of American history, who would disown the passageway if he but knew it.

Must Not Use "Inside Information"

ATTORNEY General Daugherty, in an opinion now being drafted for the guidance of all members of the cabinet, holds that the old law of 1873 forbidding former officials from appearing before government departments in cases which are pending during their terms is sufficiently drastic when placed parallel with other statutes to insure penalties for practitioners who would abuse their former connections.

As a result of this opinion, therefore, department heads immediately will direct the chiefs of divisions in all branches of government activity that hereafter the appearance of former officials of the government in cases which may have arisen when they were in office can be made the basis for drastic action in the way of penalties that may be applied in the discretion of the head of a particular department.

Officials of the Department of Justice estimated that at least 300 lawyers, now stationed in Washington and elsewhere, will be affected by the new ruling. Most of the attorneys whose practice deals with department claims, or other matters of that character, are based in cities who are not quartered in local office buildings are members of firms which have been established for some time.

Engineers Seek Uniform Boiler Law

FAILURE to regulate the steam boiler has cost the United States thousands of lives and millions of dollars, according to a statement issued by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, which, through its boiler code committee, is seeking to bring about uniform standards in this country. The statement pointed out that 20 states are joining in a nationwide movement to lessen the industrial accidents by eliminating the dangers that lie hidden in the steam boiler, called by engineers, more dangerous than dynamite.

"In the boiler code of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers the country has a standard worthy of general acceptance," said the statement. "If all boilers were made in accordance to well-known principles, boiler explosions would be of rare occurrence.

"In an effort to secure the universal adoption of this code in this country the Uniform Boiler Law society has been organized and has done a great deal more good than shows in the lists of states and municipalities that have actually adopted the code, in promulgating an understanding of it and creating a sentiment in its favor that will result in a rapid falling into line of the remaining states when the line is a little more pronouncedly established."

The statement indicated that the National Board of Boiler and Pressure Vessel Inspectors is working on several problems designed to preclude boiler explosions. These include an interstate inspection and the stamping of boilers by the manufacturers. The latter plan is intended primarily to keep a record of a boiler from the time it leaves the manufacturing plant until it is scrapped.

Ship Board Starts Ousting of Aliens

SHIPS owned and controlled by the United States shipping board are to be thoroughly Americanized, as are all the district and foreign offices of the board, it has been announced.

Changes in the personnel of the board and the men aboard ships soon will probably make the entire force employed by the shipping board 100 per cent American. Wherever it is possible to obtain services of an American, it will be done.

The board now is conducting an investigation of the clerical forces at home and the men aboard ships to see what cuts will be necessary to bring about the desired change. The change will also probably bring about a severe cut in the personnel of the shipping board and the Emergency Fleet corporation. Reduction in the number of employees will be made gradually after investigation.

The board anticipates no difficulty with the International Seamen's union over the proposed rearrangement. It was said by officials. Andrew Feunsoeth, president of the Seamen's union, has had several talks with board officials and is said to be in thorough accord with the policy of making the personnel of the board 100 per cent American.

One of the first offices to be investigated and probably one of the first in which a shake-up will take place is the London office of the board, where Americans will be installed to handle the work now done by Britishers working for the shipping board. It was said the force of the London office will be cut and that an effort will be made to have all the employees American.

"Sister" is six, and her delight is Indianapolis. Last summer Ola took her when she went to see Stuart Walker's "Peg o' My Heart." Sister squirmed and giggled and whispered that "this isn't a real show" until Ola declared "never again."

But shortly afterward she and her husband had to take "Sister" along when they went to see the premiere of "Abe Martin" at English's. First, they cautioned her:

"For goodness' sake, be still." Imagine their surprise, amusement and also embarrassment when after a lively ensemble, "Sister," who had been shrieking in glee, clapped her hands, and while the whole audience turned to see, shrieked:

"Oh, Ola, this is a real show 'cause it's got pretty girls and they sing and dance."—Indianapolis News.

An elaborate tombstone and a contested will are about all that wealth brings to some men.

The two lovers were talking over their troubles, particularly the parental objections offered to their marriage. "But," said the youth, "I can't for the life of me see why your father should place any obstacle in the way of our marriage."

"Well," explained the girl after some reflection, "I think it stands this way: Father, you know, is always boasting of his lineage. He is forever saying that his ancestors were gentlemen of leisure like himself, and that you have to work for a living."

"Well," continued the suitor, "tell him that I don't expect to after we are married."

Do you discriminate at the dining table—or are you thoughtless?

In thousands of homes, a "line" is drawn at the breakfast table. Tea or coffee is served for "grown-ups" and Postum for children. But some parents do not discriminate. Caffeine and tannin, the injurious contents of coffee and tea, seriously retard the development of the delicate nerve tissues in children.

an older person, but in many cases the nervous system and allied bodily functions will become weakened. The surest way to avoid such possibilities is to quit coffee entirely and drink Postum instead. The change permits you to get sound, restful sleep.

Consequently, instead of rich, satisfying Postum, children are overstimulated by the drugs in tea and coffee; and so may grow up irritable and nervous. Any doctor can tell you that this is a great evil and should be corrected.

Postum is the well-known, meal-time beverage. Like thousands of others you will like it because, in flavor, it is much like a high-grade coffee.

Although some parents feel a certain justification for the personal indulgence in coffee, yet the harm to them may be equally serious. It may take a little while longer for the drugs in coffee and tea to affect

Do away with the distinction at the table. Serve delicious Postum, piping hot, to all the family. One week's trial and it is likely that you'll never return to tea and coffee.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions.

A farmer recently paid a visit to a neighbor, and as he passed along by the side of the fields he made a mental note of the fact that no scarecrows were visible.

Meeting the neighbor almost immediately he opened conversation as follows:

"Good morning, Mr. Oates. I see you have no scarecrows in your fields. How do you manage to do without them?"

"Oh, well enough," was the innocent reply. "You see, I don't need them, for I'm in the fields all day myself."

Some More Truths.

WOULD you use a steam shovel to move a pebble? Certainly not. Implements are built according to the work they have to do.

Would you use a grown-up's remedy for your baby's ills? Certainly not. Remedies are prepared according to the work THEY have to do.

All this is preliminary to reminding you that Fletcher's Castoria was sought out, found and is prepared solely as a remedy for Infants and Children. And let this be a warning against Substitutes, Counterfeits and the Just-as-good stuff that may be all right for you in all your strength, but dangerous for the little babe.

All the mother-love that lies within your heart cries out to you: Be true to Baby. And being true to Baby you will keep in the house remedies specially prepared for babies as you would a baby's food, hairbrush, toothbrush or sponge.

Children Cry For

Are You Prepared?

A doctor in the house all the time would be a good idea. Yet you can't afford to keep a doctor in the family to keep baby well or prevent sickness. But you can do almost the same thing by having at hand a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria, because it is a wonderful remedy for indigestion, colic, feverishness, fretfulness and all the other disorders that result from common ailments that babies have.

Fletcher's Castoria is perfectly safe to use. It is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. Children cry for Fletcher's Castoria, and mothers recommend it because they have found it a comfort to children and a mother's friend.

If you love your baby, you know how sweet it is to be able to help baby when trouble comes. You cannot always call upon a doctor. But doctors have nothing but good to say of Fletcher's Castoria, because they know that it can only do good—that it can't do any harm—and they wouldn't want you to use for baby a remedy that you would use for yourself.

The Extreme Avoided

The Beautiful and Appropriate Accented

—thus do Printzess garments attain the true tailored style

In connection with our presentation of our Autumn models the designers of this important tailoring establishment offer this conception of true tailored style:

"Every Printz model tailored for a type. It may portray dignity, elegance, youth. It may express the practical or the fanciful. But always it is charming and distinctive, of irreproachable taste.

"In Printz originations, no attempt is made to reflect each fleeting fashion; to strain after extreme, bizarre effects. The basis of true tailored style is dignified beauty of line, rich fabrics and zealous attention to detail."

Infinite variety as developed in the Suits and Coats now on display marks the mode this season from rich decorative motifs to severe emphasis of tailored lines.

You will note this Autumn, as in the past, the worth of Printzess tailoring.

Among our collection are models for the matron, the miss and the girls from six to fourteen.

You will be surprised to find that Printzess coats and suits are moderately priced, no higher than many garments of questionable values, and infinitely more desirable.

LEGISLATIVE WORK IS TAKEN UP IN SENATE

FOUR GRAVE SUBJECTS ARE FIRST DEMANDING ATTENTION OF SOLONS.

LIST HEADED IS BY TAX BILL

Precedence of Revenue Measure is Admitted But It May Be Side-tracked.

Washington.—The Senate finds itself in a legislative jam at the very outset of the post-vacation session.

Four major matters are before it clamoring for attention:

1. The revenue bill, called up in the Senate by Senator Penrose, chairman of the Finance Committee, with the announcement that consideration would be pressed.

2. The anti-beer bill, also called up in the Senate which Senator Sterling said he will push at every opportunity.

3. The Panama Canal tolls repeal, unfinished business in the Senate, on which there will be a vote by agreement Oct. 10.

4. Peace treaties with Germany, Austria and Hungary, immediate ratification of which has been asked by President Harding.

The tangle of business creates a situation that is taxing the ingenuity of Republican leadership. Adding to the difficulties is the small attendance. Thirty-three Republicans and twenty-one Democrats answered the roll when Senator Lodge, Republican leader, made the point of no quorum Wednesday.

The revenue bill is conceded in all quarters to be entitled to precedence, but it is feared that other matters will interfere with its uninterrupted consideration.

The determination of dyes to push the anti-beer bill means that it may bob up to provoke debate at any time.

The canal tolls repeal, it is expected, will cause discussion between now and the time for a vote.

The possibility of changes in leadership in both parties, aroused by the fact that Senators Lodge and Underwood have been named delegates to the armament conference, apparently has died out.

1,000 BODIES RECOVERED SO FAR IN BLAST RUINS

Berlin.—Casualties in the explosion disaster at Oppau will amount to more than four thousand killed and injured, it was estimated; as rescue parties penetrated the fogs of poison gas which hung over the scene of the tragedy.

Nearly 1,000 bodies already have been recovered.

More than 2,500 injured are being treated at hospitals.

French troops are guarding the area.

One report said a company of French troops stationed at the factory was wiped out by the explosion Wednesday.

Only a great gaping chasm marks the scene of the initial explosion.

The entire medical staff of the French army of occupation on the Rhine has arrived at Ludwigshafen to assist in treating the vast number of persons who were injured in the gigantic explosion which wrecked the plant of the Badische Anilin- und Soda-Fabrik Company at Oppau with a total loss of life estimated at 1,200.

About two thousand persons were injured. All hospitals in Ludwigshafen and Mannheim are crowded and scores of public buildings and private homes have been converted into hospitals.

General De Gouette, commander in chief of the French army of occupation, and a detachment of French troops have arrived on the scene to assist the Germans in relief work.

Following an investigation, officials issued a statement saying the blast had occurred in a warehouse containing 200 tons of ammonium sulphate. The exact cause is not yet known.

Postoffice Examinations in Texas.

Washington.—Examinations have been ordered by the Civil Service Commission to be held on Oct. 14 to select postmasters for the following Texas second-class offices: Alpine, Caldwell, Canyon, Coleman, College Station, DeLeon, Desdemona, Eastland, Gonzales, Graham, Henrietta, Iowa Park, Kennedy, Kerrville, Kingsville, Lubbock, Mexis, Orange, Stephenville, Strawn, Weatherford.

The Voice of the Pack

By EDISON MARSHALL

SYNOPSIS.

Warned by his physician that he has not more than six months to live, Failing sits despondently on a park bench, wondering where he should spend those six months. A friendly squirrel practically decides the matter for him. His blood is pioneer blood, and he decides to end his days in the forests of Oregon. Memories of his grandfather and a deep love for all things of the wild help him in reaching a decision. In a large southern Oregon city he meets people who had known and loved his grandfather, a famous frontiersman. He makes his home with Silas Lennox, a typical westerner. The only other members of the household are Lennox's son, "Bill," and daughter, "Snowbird." Their abode is many miles from "civilization," in the Empqua Divide, and there Failing plans to live out the short span of life which he has been told is his. His extreme weakness in the face of even a slight exertion convinces him that the doctor had made a correct diagnosis of his case.

Yes, Steele knew Bill. Bill weighed two hundred pounds, and he would choose the biggest of the steers he drove down to the lower levels in the winter and, twisting its horns, would make it lay over on its side. Besides, both of the men assumed that Dan must be only in the first stages of his maldy.

And even as the men talked, the train that bore Dan Failing to the home of his ancestors was entering for the first time the dark forests of pine and fir that make the eternal background of the Northwest. He was wholly unable to understand the strange feeling of familiarity that he had with them, a sensation that in his dreams he had known them always, and that he must never go out of the range of them again.

Dan didn't see his host at first. For the first instant he was entirely engrossed by a surging sense of disappointment—a feeling that he had been tricked and had only come to another city after all. He got down onto the gravel of the station yard, and out on the gray street pavement he heard the clang of a trolley car. Many automobiles were parked just beside the station, some of them foreign cars of expensive makes, such as he supposed could be wholly unknown on the frontier. A man in golf clothes brushed his shoulder.

Dan looked up to the hills, and he felt better. He couldn't see them plainly. The faint smoke of a distant forest fire half obscured them. Yet he saw fold on fold of ridges of a rather peculiar blue in color, and even his untrained eyes could see that they were clothed in forests of evergreen. Over the heads of the green hills Dan could see a few great peaks; McLaughlin, even and regular as a painted mountain; Wagner, with queer white gashes where the snow still lay in its ravines, and to the southeast the misty range of snow-covered hills that were the Slickeyons. He felt decidedly better. And when he saw old Silas Lennox waiting patiently beside the station, he felt he had come to the right place.

It would be interesting to explain why Dan at once recognized the older man for the breed he was. Silas Lennox was not dressed in a way that would distinguish him. It was true that he wore a flannel shirt, riding trousers and rather heavy, leathern boots. But sportsmen all over the face of the earth wear this costume at sundry times. Mountain men have a peculiar stride by which experienced persons can occasionally recognize them; but Silas Lennox was standing still when Dan got his first glimpse of him. The case resolves itself into a simple matter of the things that could be read in Lennox's face.

Dan disbelieved wholly in a book that told how to read characters at sight. Yet at the first glance of the lean, bronzed face his heart gave a curious little bound. A pair of gray eyes met his—two fine black points in a rather hard gray iris. They didn't look past him, or at either side of him, or at his chin or his forehead. They looked right at his own eyes. The skin around the eyes was burned brown by the sun, and the flesh was so lean that the cheekbones showed plainly. The mouth was straight; but yet it was neither savage nor cruel. It was simply determined.

Lennox came up with a light, silent tread and extended his hand. "You're Dan Failing's grandson, aren't you?" he asked. "I'm Silas Lennox, who used to know him when he lived on the Divide. You are coming to spend the summer and fall on my ranch."

The immediate result of these words, besides relief, was to set Dan wondering how the old mountaineer had recognized him. He wondered if he had any physical resemblance to his grandfather. But this hope was shot to earth at once. His telegram had explained about his malady, and of course the mountaineer had picked him out simply because he had the mark of the disease on his face. As he shook hands, he tried his best to read the mountaineer's expression. It was all too plain: an undeniable look of disappointment.

The truth was that even in spite of all the Chamber of Commerce head had told him, Lennox had still hoped to find some image of the elder Dan Failing in the face and body of his grandson. Because of the thick glasses, Lennox could not see the young man's eyes; but he didn't think it likely they were at all like the eyes with which the elder Failing saw his way through the wilderness at night. Of course he was tall, just as the famous frontiersman had been, but while the elder weighed one hundred and ninety pounds, bone and muscle, this man did not touch one hundred and thirty. Evidently the years and brought degeneracy to the Failing clan. Lennox was desolated by the thought.

He helped Dan with his bag to a little wry automobile that waited beside the station. They got into the two front seats, and a moment later were starting up the long, curved road that led to the Divide.

During the hour that they were crossing over the foothills, on the way to the big timber, Silas Lennox talked a great deal about the frontiersman that had been Dan's grandfather. A mountain man does not use profuse adjectives. He talks very simply and very straight, and often there are long silences between his sentences. Yet he conveys his ideas with entire clearness.

Dan realized at once that if he could be, in Lennox's eyes, one-fifth of the man his grandfather had been, he would never have to fear again the look of disappointment with which his host had greeted him at the station. But instead of reaching that high place, he had only—death. He knew what his destiny was in these quiet hills. And it was true that he began to have secret regrets that he had come. But it wasn't that he was disappointed in the land that was opening up before him. It fulfilled every promise. His sole reason for regrets lay in the fact that now the whole mountain world would know of the deity that had come upon his people. Perhaps it would have been better to have left them to their traditions.

He had never dreamed that the fame of his grandfather had spread so far. For the first ten miles Dan listened to stories—legends of a cold nerve that simply could not be shaken; of a powerful, tireless physique; of moral and physical strength that was seemingly without limit. Then, as the foothills began to give way to the higher ridges, and the shadow of the deeper forests fell upon the narrow, brown road, there began to be long gaps in the talk. And soon they rode in utter silence, evidently both of them absorbed in their own thoughts.

Dan did not feel oppressed at all. He merely seemed to fall into the spirit of the woods, and no words came to his lips. Every mile was an added delight to him. Not even wine could have brought a brighter sparkle to his eyes. He had begun to experience a vague sort of excitement, an emotion that was almost kin to exultation, over the constant stir and movement of the forest life. Once, as they stopped the car to refill the radiator from a mountain stream, Lennox looked at him with sudden curiosity. "You are getting a thrill out of this, aren't you?" he asked wonderingly.

It was a curious tone. Perhaps it was a hopeful tone, too. He spoke as if he hardly understood.

"A thrill!" Dan echoed. He spoke as a man speaks in the presence of some great wonder. "Good Heavens, I never saw anything like it in my life."

"In this very stream," the mountaineer told him joyously, "you may occasionally catch trout that weigh three pounds."

But as he got back into the car the look of interest died out of Lennox's eyes. Of course any man would be somewhat excited by his first glimpse of the wilderness. It was not that he had inherited any of the traits of his grandfather. It was absurd to hope that he had. And he would soon get tired of the silences and want to go back to his cities. He told his thought—that it would all soon grow old to him; and Dan turned almost in anger. "You don't know," he said. "I didn't know myself, how I would feel about it. I'm never going to leave the hills again."

"You don't mean that." "But I do." He tried to speak further, but he coughed instead. "But I couldn't if I wanted to. That cough tells you why, I guess."

"You mean to say—" Silas Lennox turned in amazement. "You mean that you're a—a goner? That you've given up hope of recovering?"

"That's the impression I meant to convey. I've got a little over four months—though I don't see that I'm any weaker than I was when the doctor said I had six months. Those four will take me all through the fall and the early winter. And I hope you won't feel that you've been imposed upon—to have a dying man on your hands."

"It isn't that." Silas Lennox threw his car into gear and started up the long grade. And he drove clear to the top of it and into another glen before he spoke again. Then he pointed to what looked to Dan like a brown streak that melted into the thick brush. "That was a deer," he said slowly. "Just a glimpse, but your grandfather could have got him between the eyes. Most like as not, though, he'd have let him go. He never killed except when he needed meat. But that—as you say—ain't the impression I'm trying to convey." He seemed to be groping for words. "What is it, Mr. Lennox?" Dan asked.

"Instead of being sorry, I'm mighty glad you've come," Lennox told him. "It's not that I expect you to be like your grandfather. You haven't had his chance. But it's always the way of true men, the world over, to come back to their own kind to die. That deer we just saw—he's your people, and so are all these ranchers that grub their lives out of the forests—they are your people, too. And you couldn't have pleased the old man's old friends any better, or done more for his memory, than to come back to his own land for your last days."

The words were strange, yet Dan intuitively understood. It was as if a prodigal son had returned at last, and although his birthright was squandered and he came only to die, the people of his home would give him kindness and forgiveness, even though they could not give him their respect

CHAPTER III.

The Lennox home was a typical mountain ranch-house—square, solid, comforting in storm and wind. Bill was out to the gate when the car drove up. He was a son of his father, a strong man in body and personality. He too had heard of the elder Failing, and he opened his eyes when he saw the slender youth that was his grandson. And he led the way into the white-walled living room. "You must be chilly and worn out from the long ride," Lennox suggested quietly. He spoke in the tone a strong man invariably uses toward an invalid. Dan felt a curious resentment at the words.

"I'm not cold," he said. "It's hardly dark yet. I'd sooner go outdoors and look around."

The elder man regarded him curiously, perhaps with the faintest glimmer of admiration. "You'd better wait till tomorrow, Dan," he replied. "Bill will have supper soon, anyway. You don't want to overdo too much, right at first."

"But, good heavens! I'm not going to try to spare myself while I'm here. It's too late for that."

Dan Failing is introduced to "Snowbird," who proves to be a decidedly interesting member of the Lennox family, and Dan shows new interest in life in the next installment.

HUMOR SUPERIOR TO WIT

Former Quality Always Kindly, While the Latter is Inclined to Be Caustic.

Both wit and humor, like art, poetry and love, are quite indefinable. But humor is the more elusive of the two. There are national types of wit, an English wit, a French wit, a German wit, an Irish wit, and—yes—a Scottish wit.

But humor is something universal, the curious and blessed gift that man has, all the world over, of discerning the incongruous in most things, remarks a writer in the Edinburgh Scotsman. Wit is related to the superficial, but humor dwells deep down in the inmost heart of us. Wit may be caustic; humor is kindly. Wit is the accompaniment of comedy and draws forth the loud guffaw of the top gallery of the music halls. But humor is not divorced from tragedy, and its laughter may be very close to tears.

Scottish "wit" is not English wit, but a sense of humor is the same in kind all the world over. Scottish wit, of both the deliberate and the accidental kind, consists very largely in a certain dry way of saying something so simple and obvious that it is least expected.

Crowning Triumph.

Little Norman and his two playfellows were boasting about their parents and their belongings. "My father," said Norman, "is going to build a fine house with a steeple on it." "That's nothing!" exclaimed Willie scornfully. "My father has just built a house with a flagpole on it."

Conrad, who had been listening intently, was silent for a moment, then burst out triumphantly: "Oh, that's nothing! My father is going to build a house with a mortgage on it!"

Watch Expenditures.

If he who is always hard up will but keep a record of his expenditures he may find that he is more lacking in sense than in dollars.

Or a "Situation."

When a statesman runs into a brick wall and sees no way to get over or under, he emits a few sharp yelps and calls it a crisis.—Baltimore Sun.

625,000 BOTTLES SOLD IN NEW YORK

Biggest Thing of Kind Ever Seen is That State, Declares Big Wholesaler.

The fact that 625,000 bottles of Tanlac have been sold in the state of New York since its introduction there less than one year ago, is a big business item that will attract unusual attention throughout the entire East, for nothing like it has ever happened before. It breaks all records.

Mr. George B. Evans, manager of the Gibson-Snow Company, the well-known wholesale druggists, with branches in Albany, Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse, recently announced that the preparation was now selling in their trade territories alone at the phenomenal rate of approximately 500,000 bottles a year.

"If the present rate continues," said Mr. Evans, "this rate alone will probably require considerably over 750,000 bottles a year. This is a tremendous figure, but I am really conservative in making this statement."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

Perfectly Safe.

"Ma, may I go boating?" asked Doris. "Indeed, you shall not," replied her fond mother. "Who in the world asked you?" "Mr. Buffers," said the girl. "Oh, very well, you may go with him. He has a cork leg and if the boat upsets you can just hang on to that."
