CEDAR HILL UNION RENDERS PROGRAM

The Cedar Hill Union came over and gave a program at the Baptist Church Sunday evening before one of the largest audiences that has been there for many months, and their effort were appreciated by one and all, and every member on the program did fine work and every thing went off like clock work.

It goes to show that the size of the community has nothing to do with the degree of success that may be attained. We are certainly glad to have had the opportunity of hearing these young people and feel that they have given us an incentive to work harder to make our Union a success.

We are going to want to go to Plainview, Tulia and other towns and realize that we must prepare for such occasions, but there is no doubt in our mind that we can put a program over that will do the Union credit.

We are sending out an urgent invitation to one and all to come and join the B. Y. P. U., to come and work in the greatest work ever given to man—that of promoting Christianity, the great cause that holds our Christianity.

I am out four head of cattle, branded VY on left shoulder. Please report any information you may have or may get that will aid in finding these cattle to

TEACHERS TRAINING CLASS

Last Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bomar the officers, teachers and assistants of the Baptist S. S. met and organized a Teachers' Training Class.

Mrs. Bomar was elected president and Mrs. A. P. Dickenson, secretary. They will take the regular Teachers' Training Course. The course is open to any one who would like to take it whether they are teachers or not.

The next meeting will be held Friday night (tonight) at the A. P. Dickenson home.

Last Tuesday evening the Angels came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Brookshier and called the soul of their little five year old son to its prepared place in that City of many Mansions.

The little son took sick Friday morning and from then until Tuesday evening continued to weaken until death came at 8:30 o'clock.

SILVERTON GIN BURNS

On Thursday night, November 3rd., the Silverton Gin went up in smoke. We thought we would get a scoop on this big piece of news, but the next morning so many rumors were afloat that we decided to do a little detective work and do the county a great favor by running down these rumors and learning the facts.

It was rumored that Messrs J. A. Bain and C. L. Dickerson, two leading stockholders, could tell a lot more than they were going to tell. When we went to interview these gentlemen, they weeping over the fact that the insurance had been out for several weeks, and that day by day after day they had expected to renew, and they had waited one day too long. We realized we were on a cold trail, and after fully extending our sympathy to these broken-hearted gentlemen, we gathered the few clues we had left together and again took up the trail to find out the facts.

We got a hint from Mr. Arnold that Uncle Sam could tell a lot if enough pressure was brought to bear and so we began to follow him around over town, and finally engaged him in conversation in the course of which he did not want to get mixed up in anything, but for me to keep my eye on that man Arnold.

And now here we are still not able to give the readers of the Star the entire facts.

But there is a certain man who says he will give us some information soon that will clear up the mystery, so the guilty parties had better be preparing for we are going to expose the whole affair.

"BREAD" OF STARVING RUSSIA DO YOUR TOES SPREAD OUT?

Called "Lebeda," the Stuff is Made of Leaves and Grass, Boiled and Dried.

A peasant in the government of Samara (soviet Russia) told me of how they make lebeda bread. Here is the story:

"In our village they take some linden leaves and grass, chop them up to the size of a flea, and then boil the mixture. After the water has boiled, they squeeze it out and put the stuff again into boiling water. Then they let the water run off through a sieve, and keep the mass until it is dry. After that they grind it fine and add one-third flour.

"The bread you get is green in color and indigestible. And when there is no flour, they just bake the ground mixture as it is. It does not taste very badly; but after a man eats it for a while he swells up and gets worms in his stomach, and soon after that he dies."—Moscow Pravda.

Are you stepping on the brake or the accelerator?

The food you eat does make a difference.

Heavy, starchy foods often do slow down body and mind—often steal the energy that belongs to the day's work. Grape-Nuts is a go-ahead food. It contains the perfected nourishment of Nature's best grains. It includes all those elements needed to nourish body and brain. It is easy to digest. It gives energy without taking energy.

How about your breakfast or lunch—does it give, or take?

Grape-Nuts is sweet, crisp, delightful to the taste, and is an ideal source of power for a busy and difficult day.

HAPSBURGS ARE EXILED TO MADEIRA ISLAND

Lisbon—Portugal has granted permission for the deportation of Emperor Charles of Austria, the former Empress and their children to Funchal, Madeira Island, where they will take up their residence. Their home hereafter will probably be in the wing of an enormous building at Funchal, which was intended as a sanitarium when it was constructed some years ago by a group of German financiers. The building never was finished, because of a disagreement between the Portuguese Government and the Germans, and the place has been without occupants.

Madiera is 35 miles long and 12 miles broad, and lies in the Atlantic Ocean 440 miles west of Morocco and is under the control of Portugal. Its population is 150,754 and its largest city, Funchal, has 20,000 inhabitants.

DOZEN BANDITS ROB NEW ORLEANS LIMITED

Paxton, Ill.—A dozen bandits armed with pistols, shotguns and bombs, which they used freely, wounding several trainmen and mail clerks, Monday night held up the New Orleans Limited train on the Illinois Central Railroad and with true wild West tactics looted the mail car of all the registered mail and the valuables in the safe and then escaped in waiting automobiles, which were stationed two miles south of Paxton.

The train was first stopped on a bridge over a small stream by three bandits on the train, who crept to the engine cab, over the tender, and held up the engineer and fireman, made the fireman disconnect the mail and baggage car and drive further south, where the rest of the desperadoes helped in the bombing, dynamiting and firing of the mail car before it could be entered and looted.

YOU CAN'T TRUST CALOMEL AT ALL

It's Quicksilver, Salivates, Causes Rheumatism and Bone Decay.

The next dose of calomel you take may salivate you. It may shock your liver or start bone necrosis. Calomel is dangerous. It is mercury, quicksilver. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tonic which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Advertisement.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

Homily on Golf.

Men take up golf for the exercise—as a game it makes walking most interesting.

An inexperienced player going over an 18-hole course will perhaps cover five miles. The more proficient he becomes at the game the less he walks, ergo, the less exercise he gets.

So, if you are taking up golf for the exercise, what is the sense of becoming expert and thus reducing the amount of exercise? The answer is that an American doesn't want to be a "dub" at anything.—St. Louis Star.

THIS WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE

Brings a Ray of Hope to Childless Women

Lowell, Mass.—“I had anemia from the time I was sixteen years old and was very irregular. If I did any house-cleaning or washing I would faint and have to be put to bed, my husband thinking every minute was my last. After reading your text-book for women I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash, and have never felt better than I have the last two years. I can work, eat, sleep, and feel as strong as can be. Doctors told me I could never have children—I was too weak—but after taking Vegetable Compound it strengthened me so I gave birth to an eight pound boy. I was well all the time, did all my work up to the last day, and had a natural birth. Everybody who knew me was surprised, and when they ask me what made me strong I tell them with great pleasure, 'I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never felt better in my life.' Use this testimonial at any time.”—Mrs. ELIZABETH SMART, 142 W. Sixth St., Lowell, Mass. This experience of Mrs. Smart is surely a strong recommendation for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. UNKNOWN DEAD HERO FEELINGLY HONORED

BODY LIES IN STATE UNDER CAPITOL DOME—FLOWERS FROM ALL PARTS OF GLOBE.

TRIBUTE PAID U. S. WARRIOR

Wreaths From Both Great and Small, With Words of Homage, Are Left By Visitors.

Washington.—A plain soldier, unknown, but weighted with honors as perhaps no American before him because he died for the flag in France, lay in a place where only martyred Presidents Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley have slept in death.

A river of humanity, American men, women and children, Americans by heritage, Americans by election, flowed all day part the bier of the dead soldier under the great dome of the Capitol. It flowed as the life blood of the Nation itself—a slow but overwhelming torrent of human documents gathered to attest the valor of America's dead in France.

From early day until long after darkness had shrouded the city, the great stream surged up the eastern front of the rotunda, four abreast, up the granite stairway, in through the huge doorway, to pass solemnly, reverently by the casket and its five guards, motionless as the statues of Lincoln and Grant at the far doorway, which looked down on the moving spectacle.

Out through that doorway the stream passed, through the stately corridor and its marble stairway, and down over the wide terraces of the western front to the homes in the city below. Each hour saw thousands make the slow journey of honor to the dead. Each hour saw new thousands pouring up the wide driveways that circled the great building to replenish the living stream.

That was the overshadowing element in the cycle of honors heaped upon this nameless soldier, this son of the people come home to claim the great reward his valiant heart had earned. And it was his own people, of every nook of the Nation, that silently gave this reward, more precious than any jeweled or carved token that Governments of the world can place above the still breast of the sleeper.

Walter Reed Hospital veterans of the world war, who placed a large wreath of chrysanthemums as a mark of their regard for their unknown buddy.

A group of Knights of Columbus in regalia clustered around the bier and recited their ritual for the dead.

The Loyal Legion, headed by Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired, with American and legion flags, held short services at the bier and was followed by representatives of the Grand Army of the Republic. As the veterans of the Civil War, many of them feeble and a few in faded uniforms, concluded a brief service, their place beside the casket was taken by wounded soldiers from Walter Reed Hospital.

Mrs. Adelaide W. Bagley, mother of Mrs. Josephus Daniels, placed a cluster of palm leaves and roses at the bier.

Russia was represented in the tributes to the dead, a delegation from the old Russian Embassy placing a gift of flowers at the bier.

Representatives of the American Federation of Labor placed a floral wreath upon the bier with the following inscription: "Live on, thou spirit of justice, freedom, democracy and humanity. A grateful tribute to our unknown soldier, form the American Federation of Labor."

A wreath from King George was among them. Lord Cavan acting for the King, it bore the legend: "As unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live."

There was a wreath from Canada, its inscription saying: "But that which put the glory of grace into all that he did was that he did of pure love to his country."

That from Premier Lloyd George said: "Nameless, yet his name liveth evermore."

And that from India said: "They never die who die to make life worth living."

There were wreaths also from Australia and New Zealand and all of these except that from India were made of flowers grown in English soil, brought over as living plants.

From the Grand Army of United Veterans of Canada came a wreath placed by Senator Richardson, oldest wearer of the Victoria Cross. There were flowers from Newfoundland, and from the Army and Navy War Veterans of Canada came a memorial woven of poppies that bloom in Flanders fields.

Worry in Store.

Harold Lloyd is telling the story of an old darkey "extra" who took two or three days to moan and groan his way through the income tax paper. "An' now Ah got more worry," he announced after he had dotted the last "I" and crossed the final "T."

He Knew.

A tenderfoot arrived in the wild lands where the real cowboys come from. He had been told to ask for a certain ranch foreman who would give him a job. He went up to a man in the first village he came to.

"Have you seen a tall fellow with a dark beard hanging around here?" he asked.

"Yes," said the man, "day before yesterday."

"You're sure?"

"Oh, yes. I had hold of the rope."

THIN, FLAT HAIR GROWS LONG, THICK AND ABUNDANT

"Dandarine" costs only 35 cents a bottle. One application ends all dandruff, stops itching and falling hair, and, in a few moments, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will appear a mass, so soft, lustrous, and easy to do up. But what will please you most will be after a few weeks use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. "Dandarine" is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. This delightful, stimulating tonic helps thin, lifeless, faded hair to grow long, thick, heavy and luxuriant.—Advertisement.

King George's Superstition.
King George, sane, healthy-minded man though he is, owns up to certain superstitions. He can't endure that a wineglass should ring, if accidentally touched, at his dinner table. The ringing will mean a death in his family, so he firmly believes. And if the slightest ring is heard, every member of his family and guest at his table rises up on the instant and stands in silence. It's his wish.—London Opinion.

Ex-Sheriff of Dallas County Strongly Endorses Ware's Black Powder

Dallas, Texas, November 29, 1919.

The Ware Chemical Company, Dallas, Texas.

Gentlemen:

In 1906 my mother was suffering with a bad case of stomach and bowel trouble and could not eat or retain any kind of food in her stomach.

Some of the best doctors in this country were called in and diagnosed her affliction as incurable, and told me that my mother would live but a short time, and that they could do nothing for her. She was then 75 years old.

About this time someone suggested that we try Ware's Black Powder. We did so, and soon she began to improve and finally got in good health for a lady of her age. She lived until she was 85 years old.

Since that time I have been strong in my commendation of Ware's Black Powder; I am convinced that there is no better remedy for stomach and bowel trouble.

Yours very truly,

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES

Still climbing at the Methodist Sunday school. Had the best crowd yet last Sunday, even if the weather was a bit bad. That is the way to do it. I saw some in town Saturday evening that were not in Sunday School. It is strange how tender some folks get on Sunday. Come on, let's make it a hundred present next Sunday. I am counting on you.

 Pastor.

A novelty at the Methodist S. S. last Sunday was the reading of some papers on How to Kill a Sunday School. Below is a sample. Next Sunday come and have one prepared. Give it to the secretary as you come in. You need not sign your name if you do not wish.

For the Superintendent and teachers to be late and indifferent.

For the parents to send their children and not go with them.

For the pastor to stay out and not encourage the work. Come a few minutes late. Fail to study the lesson. Do not give an offering. Go home and fail to come back again for a month.

Condemn what every one else does and do nothing yourself.

The officials and their wives met at the Methodist parsonage Tuesday evening to organize for the new conference year. It was a real enthusiastic meeting.

HIS HEART IN RIGHT PLACE
Circus Tentman Evidently Remembered That He Had Once Been a Small Boy.

A little boy bobbed his head around a wagon where the circus train was unloading.

"Please, sir," he said to a tentman in overalls, "please, have you got any elephants to water?"

The tentman shook his head. It seems elephants are watered by machinery or something these days. At least there's no earning one's way in by way of the water-bucket.

The little boy was slinking off forlornly when the tentman turned around.

"Here," he grunted, "hold this for awhile," and he stuck a rope into his hand without apparently seeing that the little boy's chin had stopped wagging.

As if—
He—I love a girl like you.

The Truthful Witness.
There was a little squabble down at the boot camp and the next morning three rookies were lined up in front of the commanding officer. Two of the marines were principals in the fracas, and the third was a lone witness.

The C. O. drew a reluctant admission from the two battlers that they had exchanged a few blows, and he then turned an inquiring eye on the witness.

"And were you there at the inception of the altercation?" asked the C. O.

"No, sir," said the rooky, "but I was there when the fight began."—The Leatherneck.

How It Happened.
"It seems to me that my career refutes the adage that poets are born, not made," asserted Tennyson J. Daft, the versatile versificator. This little bit of advice may help you regain your Health, Strength and Vitality

Thousands of people suffer from nervousness. They are run down and miserable without knowing the reason why.

They do not stop to think that much of their trouble may be caused by drinking tea and coffee which contain the drugs, thein and caffeine. When you over-stimulate the system for any period of time, the result may be nervousness with its many accompanying ills. You may fail to sleep properly and your sleep does not refresh you as it should.

Postum, made from scientifically roasted cereals, will help you to overcome all these conditions. For it contains only healthful substances, instead of drugs, as are found in tea and coffee.

Postum helps build sound nerve structures, by letting you get sound, restful sleep.

In flavor, Postum is much like high-grade coffee. In fact there are many people who prefer Postum for its savory flavor alone.

Order Postum from your grocer today. Serve this rich, fragrant beverage for the family. See how the children will like it, and how much better everybody will sleep at night.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

SNOWBIRD SAVES DAN.

Synopsis.—Warned by his physician that he has not more than six months to live, Dan Falling sits despondently on a park bench, wondering where he should spend those six months. Memories of his grandfather and a deep love for all things of the wild help him in reaching a decision. In a large southern Oregon city he meets people who had known and loved his grandfather, a famous frontiersman. He makes his home with Miss Lennox, a typical westerner. The only other members of the household are Lennox's son, "Bill," and daughter, "Snowbird." Their abode is in the Umpqua divide, and there Falling plans to live out the short span of life which he has been told is his. From the first Falling's health shows a marked improvement, and in the companionship of Lennox and his son and daughter he fits into the woods life as if he had been born to it. By quick thinking and a remarkable display of "nerve" he saves Lennox's life and his own when they are attacked by a mad coyote. Lennox declares he is a reincarnation of his grandfather, Dan Falling, whose fame as a woodsman is a household word. Dan learns that an organized band of outlaws, of which Bert Cranston is the leader, is setting forest fires. Laundry Hildreth, a former member of the gang, has been induced to turn state's evidence. Cranston shoots Hildreth and leaves him for dead. Whisperfoot, the mountain lion, springs on Hildreth and finishes Hildreth and devours him, thus acquiring the taste for human flesh. Dan discovers Cranston in the act of setting a forest fire.

Dan felt himself straighten; and the color mounted somewhat higher in his brown cheeks. But he did not try to avenge the insult—yet. Cranston was still fifteen feet distant, and that was too far. A man may swing a rifle within fifteen feet. The fact that they were in no way physical equals did not even occur to him. When the insult is great enough, such considerations cannot possibly matter. Cranston was hard as steel, one hundred and seventy pounds in weight. Dan did not touch one hundred and fifty, and a deadly disease had not yet entirely relinquished its hold upon him.

"I do very well, Cranston," Dan answered in the same tone. "Wouldn't you like another match? I believe your pipe has gone out."

Very little can be said for the wisdom of this remark. It was simply human—that age-old creed to answer blow for blow and insult for insult. Of course the inference was obvious—that Dan was accusing him, by innuendo, of his late attempt at arson. Cranston glanced up quickly, and it might be true that his fingers itched and tingled about the barrel of his rifle. He knew what Dan meant. He understood perfectly that Dan had guessed his purpose on the mountain side. And the curl at his lips became more pronounced.

"What a smart little boy," he scorned. "Going to be a Sherlock Holmes when he grows up." Then he half turned and the light in his eyes blazed up. He was not leering now. The mountain men are too intense to play at insult very long. Their inherent savagery comes to the surface, and they want the warmth of blood upon their fingers. His voice became guttural. "Maybe you're a spy?" he asked. "Maybe you're one of those city rats—to come and watch us, and then run and tell the forest service. There's two things, Falling, that I want you to know."

Dan puffed at his pipe, and his eyes looked curiously bright through the film of smoke. "I'm not interested in hearing them," he said.

"It might pay you," Cranston went on. "One of 'em is that one man's word is good as another's in a court—and it wouldn't do you any good to run down and tell tales. A man can't light his pipe on the mountain side without the courts being interested. The second thing is—just that I don't think you'd find it a healthy thing to do."

"I suppose, then, that is a threat?" "It ain't just a threat." Cranston laughed harshly—a single, grim syllable that was the most terrible sound he had yet uttered. "It's a fact. Just try it. Falling. Just make one little step in that direction. You couldn't hide behind a girl's skirts, then, why you sissy, I'd break you to pieces in my hands!"

Few men can make a threat without a muscular accompaniment. Its very utterance releases pent-up emotions, part of which can only pour forth in muscular expression. And anger is a primitive thing, going down to the most mysterious depths of a man's nature. As Cranston spoke, his lip curled, his dark fingers clenched on his thick palm, and he half leaned forward.

Dan knocked out his pipe on the log. It was the only sound in that whole mountain realm; all the lesser sounds were stilled. The two men stood face to face, Dan tranquil, Cranston shaken by passion.

"I give you," said Dan with entire coldness, "an opportunity to take that back. Just about four seconds."

He stood very straight as he spoke, and his eyes did not waver in the least. It would not be the truth to say that his heart was not leaping like a wild thing in his breast. A dark mist was spreading like madness over his brain; but yet he was striving to keep his thoughts clear. Stealthily, without seeming to do so, he was setting his muscles for a spring.

The only answer to his words was a laugh—a roaring laugh of scorn from Cranston's dark lips. In his laughter, his intent, catlike vigilance relaxed. Dan saw a chance; feeble though it was, it was the only chance he had. And his long body leaped like a serpent through the air.

Physical superior though he was, Cranston would have repelled the attack with his rifle if he had had a chance. His blood was already at the murder heat—a point always quickly reached in Cranston—and the dark, hot fumes in his brain were simply nothing more nor less than the most poisonous, bitter hatred. No other word exists. If his class of de-from the clinch and lashed at him with hard fists.

It is a very common thing to hear of a silent fight. But it is really a more rare occurrence than most people believe. It is true that serpents will often fight in the strangest, most eerie silence; but human beings are not serpents. They partake more of the qualities of the meat-eaters—the wolves and felines. After the first instant, the noise of the fight aroused the whole hillside. The sound of blows was in itself notable, and besides, both of the men were howling the primordial battle cries of hatred and vengeance.

For two long minutes Dan fought with the strength of desperation, summoning at last all that mysterious reserve force with which all men are born. But he was playing a losing game. The malady with which he had suffered had taken too much of his vigor. Even as he struggled, it seemed to him that the vista about him, the dark pines, the colored leaves of the perennial shrubbery, the yellow path were all obscured in a strange, white mist. A great wind roared in his ears—and his heart was evidently about to shiver to pieces.

But still he fought on, not daring to yield. He could no longer parry Cranston's blows. The latter's arms went around him in one of those deadly holds that wrestlers know; and Dan struggled in vain to free himself. Cranston's face itself seemed hideous and unreal in the mist that was creeping over him. He did not recognize the curious thumping sound as Cranston's fists on his flesh. And now Cranston had hurled him off his feet.

Nothing mattered further. He had fought the best he could. This cruel beast could pounce on him at will and hammer away his life. But still he struggled. Except for the constant play of his muscles, his almost unconscious effort to free himself that kept one of Cranston's arms busy holding him down, that fight on the mountain path might have come to a sudden end. Human bodies can stand a terrific punishment; but Dan's was weakened from the ravages of his disease. Besides, Cranston would soon have both hands and both feet free for the work, and when these four terrible weapons are used at once, the issue—soon or late—can never be in doubt.

But even now, consciousness still lingered. Dan could hear his enemy's curses—and far up the trail, he heard another, stranger sound. It sounded like, some one running.

And then he dimly knew that Cranston was climbing from his body. Voices were speaking—quick, commanding voices just over him. Above Cranston's savage curses another voice rang clear, and to Dan's ears, glorious beyond all human utterance.

He opened his tortured eyes. The mists lifted from in front of them, and the whole drama was revealed. It had not been sudden mercy that had driven Cranston from his body. Just when his victim's falling unconsciousness would have put him completely in his power. Rather it was something black and ominous that even now was pointed squarely at Cranston's breast.

None too soon, a ranger of the hill had heard the sounds of the struggle, and had left the trying place at the spring to come to Dan's aid. It was Snowbird, very pale but wholly self-sufficient and determined and intent. Her pistol was cocked and ready.

CHAPTER III.

Dan Falling was really not badly hurt. The quick, lashing blows had not done more than severely bruise the flesh of his face; and the mists of unconsciousness that had been falling over him were more nearly the result of his own tremendous physical exertion. Now these mists were rising.

"Go—go away," the girl was commanding. "I think you've killed him." Dan opened his eyes to find her kneeling close beside him, but still covering Cranston with her pistol. Her hand was resting on his bruised cheek. He couldn't have believed that a human face could be as white, while life still remained, as hers was then. All the lovely tints that had been such a delight to him, the play of soft reds and browns, had faded as an after-glow fades on the snow.

Dan's glance moved with hers to Cranston. He was standing easily at a distance of a dozen feet; and except for the faintest tremble all over his body, a muscular reaction from the violence of his passion, he had entirely regained his self-composure. This was quite characteristic of the mountain men. They share with the beasts a passion of living that is wholly unknown on the plains; but yet they have a certain quality of imperturbability known nowhere else. Nor is it limited to the native-born mountaineers. No man who intimately knows a member of that curious, keen-eyed little army of naturalists and big-game hunters who go to the north woods every fall, as regularly and seemingly as inexorably as the waterfowl go in spring, can doubt this fact. They seem to have acquired from the silence and the snows an impregnation of that eternal calm and imperturbability that is the wilderness itself. Cranston wasn't in the least afraid. Fear is usually a matter of uncertainty, and he knew exactly where he stood.

"Oh, I wish I could shoot you, Bert."

ORANG FEARED THE CAMERA

Photographer's Presence of Mind Probably Saved Him From Death or Fearful Injury.

As a rule orangutangs, the fiercest of the apes, are caught young and tamed before they are shipped to Europe and the United States. One of these animals that arrived in London came with the best of characters. He was considered a very tame, steady-going creature, and an expert was engaged to photograph him.

The man entered the orang's cage as he had entered many others. He had not exposed many plates before he saw that the animal was intent on mischief. He was a very powerful beast, and the man would have stood no chance at all if the orang had attacked him.

The man's only chance was to use the camera as a weapon. Making a sign to the keeper to keep silent, the photographer pointed his hand camera at the orang and with slow and steady step approached him. The keeper was outside the door ready to open it; but neither of them uttered a sound. The photographer was relieved to see the orang gradually retreat and at the same time to be able to rise from the crouched and menacing position he had taken. Once the creature was on the move the man knew he had a chance. He succeeded in working the orang around to the corner furthest from the door, which the keeper had silently and slowly opened. Still pointing his camera at the beast the man very slowly backed out of the cage, the door was slammed to and he was safe.

COST HIM LITTLE TO LIVE

Roger Crab, Eccentric Englishman, Subsisted for Many Years on Roots, Weeds and Grass.

People today might with profit take a leaf from that rare pamphlet written by Roger Crab, "The English Hermit; or, Wonders of This Age."

There have been three men of this name who were more or less celebrated in literature, all, however, spelling their patronymies differently. Roger Crab, who died Sept. 11, 1680, was a hermit, and 1641 he began restricting himself to a vegetarian diet, avoiding even butter and cheese. From roots he got to a regimen of broth thickened with bran, and pudding made of bran and turnip leaves; and finally resorted to dock-leaves and grass. He drank nothing but water, and said his views came to him by illumination while digging in his garden. His publications were coarse at times, but shrewd.

Speaking of himself, he said: "Instead of strong drinks and wines, I give the old man a cup of water."

The law of the old man in my fleshy members rebelled against the law of the mind, and had a shrewd skirmish; but, the mind being well enlightened, held it so that the old man became sick and weak with the flux, like to fall to the dust, but the wonderful love of God, being well pleased with the battle, raised him full of love, peace and contentment of mind, and he is now becoming more humble for now he will eat dock-leaves, mallows or grass."—Chicago Journal.

Bull Baiting.

This was a sport once popular in England, but declared illegal in 1835. A bull was attacked by dogs, and sometimes the nostrils of the bull were blown full of pepper to increase his fury. Another form of the sport was to fasten the bull to a stake by a long rope and then set bulldogs at him, one at a time, which were trained to seize the bull by the nose. The bulldog seems to have been developed for this sport from a short-eared mastiff called "alaunt."

Every time a wise man falls he teaches him something.

Men have lost more by crowding than they have by waiting their turn.

Frederick, Okla.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines for at least 40 years. I am 59 years old at the present time, and I think Dr. Pierce's Anuria Kidney Tablets saved my life. I was very poorly four years ago this spring, the doctor said I could not live 6 months. I had a dull aching pain over my kidneys. I did not dare to eat very much of anything. Now I feel so much better and can eat without fear. I could not think of doing without Dr. Pierce's Anuria Tablets. I keep them in the house for all of us to use as needed."—Mrs. Ida Roody, 213 E.
