Silverton Celebration September 4 & 5

Inley White's Agricultural Briefs

While we're sitting around with eyes cocked both ways looking for rain we have time to do a little thinking as well as whining. Things are never as bad as they have been. Its down right bad when we don't get a rain, but all the time we're not scheduled for a complete failure even if it doesn't rain. It is those of us who signed work contracts are not scheduled for a complete failure.

This new soil conservation program carries with it that same crop insurance feature that we had under the old AAA program. Every cooperating farmer under this new plan will receive a grant from the Government for his part in the program. The amount of this grant will be dependent upon the number of acres protected from soil depletion by soil conserving crops and to the amount of soil building practices followed each co-operator.

Things to do now

As much as we did not begin our compliance check up in August we have a little time to get our house in order before the compliance supervisor pays us a visit.

It will be remembered that 20% is at least and 35% is the most we can divert for diverting cotton acreage. When percent is our diversion requirements on our general soil depleting base—which takes in very little else except cotton.

Grain sorghums may be planted on the lease out land but it is to be planted under green or all left on the land of Sudan may be planted on the lease out land and harvested in the manner desired. Legumes (peas, etc.) may also be planted on the lease out land.

Soil Building Practices

Properly constructed terraces when between Jan. 1st and Oct. 31, count as soil building practice. Payment for this job runs 40 cents per 100 feet of complete terrace, not exceed $2.00 per acre. Legumes planted on leave out acres also count as soil building practice.

Those farmers who have planted trees will remember to call attention to this fact when the supervisor is around.

MANY SILVERTON FOLKS ARE SWAPPING RESIDENCES

Marvin Tull and Dick Cowart have exchanged living places, Mr. Cowart having bought the place formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Tull. The Tulls will reside in the Cowart place on Highway No. 86.

The Hahns have moved into the house owned by Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Tibbets, who are moving to the east part of town to the home formerly occupied by Bill Dunn and family. The Dunns will live south of the school house in the Q. E. Brown property.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Blair will move in the near future to Lubbock where Mr. Blair has employment with the State Highway Department.

Considerable more moving may be expected about the time of the opening of school, when several families will move to town, so that the children may attend school.

Talking It Over With The Home Demo

Reports from Short Course

Many points of interest to the Home Demonstration Club women were brought to them in a county-wide rally which was held at the Briscoe County court house on Saturday, July 8, by the women who attended the annual short course at College Station in July as delegates from their respective clubs. They gave such enthusiastic and worthwhile reports that those who attended the rally felt, too, as though they might have had a trip to Short Course, and were very proud to have had even a small part in sending a delegate from their club. It took no small amount of patience and perseverance to rush madly from one lecture to another, out of one steaming inferno into another and at the same time take legible notes so that they might give to their club women a good report on their activities while acting as club delegates.

The following program was very ably rendered by the women under the direction of Miss Meadows, the Home Demonstration agent.

Singing, led by Mrs. W. W. Martin. "Living the 4-H Pantry Way" — Mrs. R. M. Hill. Mrs. Hill also told of a rally of 4-H boys and girls that she attended. "I wish you could have seen those eager-faced youngsters, having a grand time, but not letting a single opportunity to learn something new, slip by".

"Cheese Making" by Mrs. J. Lee Francis. Mrs. Francis brought some of the cheese she learned to make at Short Course with her and used it to illustrate her report.

Recipe for Neufchatel Cheese (New-she-tel)

Set 3½ gallons of clean whole milk at a temperature of 78 degrees F. A five gallon shot can is excellent for this purpose. Add one-half pint of starter or one-half pint of clabber, free from holes or of flavors. Stir into milk well. Add 6 to 8 drops of rennet or one-third to one-half junket tablet. Either must be mixed with a half cup cold water before being added to the milk. Hold at a temperature of 78 degrees for 15 to 18 hours. At this time one-half inch of whey should show on the top of the milk. Carefully dip the curd from the can with a dipper and place in a cloth to drain. Allow to drain three or four hours without disturbing. At this point the curd should be worked to the center of the cloth with a paddle. Add a little salt to make the whey go off or set in ice. When all the free whey has drained off, fold the cloth over the cheese and press for several hours. This can be accomplished by placing cheese between two boards and putting a 3-gallon bucket on the board. Pressing time may be shortened by placing the curd in ice for several hours. After the curd has been pressed you should have 4½ to 5 pounds of cheese. Work until smooth. Add one heaping teaspoon of salt and mix well. The cheese is now ready to be placed in a container. This may be served plain or with pimentos, or a mixture of olives and nuts, only enough to give a nice flavor and appearance. This cheese makes lovely sandwiches and salads. When the weather gets a little cooler, the cheese may be made very successfully at room temperature without the use of a dairy thermometer.

"Sunday night Suppers" by Mrs. Wade Steele. "Sunday night suppers should be planned for, just as the Sunday dinner, and should be well planned if you would save yourself time and worry; also well prepared and attractively served", said Mrs. Steele.

"Table Service", by Mrs. V. T. Hall. Mrs. Hall also gave a bird's eye view of the Short Course as she saw it. "We are only a few of 55,000 Home Demonstration Club women in the State of Texas and if we don't avail ourselves of the opportunities offered us, then we are the losers," she said.

Miss Meadows demonstrated the use of the Sep-ro-siv in extracting the juice from tomatoes.

Of the 142 club women in Briscoe county, 65 were present for the rally. New members have been added to the rolls and it is estimated that at the next meeting of the clubs, the membership will have increased to 175, with the membership still growing.

A Garden Hint

"I felt that I did not have a sufficient supply of water to irrigate my garden," says Mrs. John Kitchens, farm food supply demonstrator for the Lakeview Home Demonstration Club. "So this year we cut our garden to about one-third its original size. I find that not only does it save me labor but that the garden yields more vegetables of a better quality, due to the fact that the water supply has to cover less territory.

Mrs. Kitchens has grown 14 varieties of vegetables in her garden this year, including beets, carrots, beans, peas, okra, cabbage, squash, lettuce, pepper, both hot and sweet, onions, New Zealand spinach, Irish potatoes and turnip greens. She says that she also finds that to gather her vegetables regularly, especially peas and beans, gives the younger ones on the vines a better chance to grow and this increases the production as well as the quality.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Thompson and daughters, Alma Ruth and Blanche, have returned from East Texas where they visited friends and relatives. They also visited the Centennial at Dallas.

Mr. Charlie Lessly and wife from Mason, Texas, visited in the home of W. S. McReynolds this week. Mr. O'vay Garner and wife of Brady also visited in the McReynolds home.

School Offers Wide Range of Subjects

With the opening of the schools here, only two weeks away, September 7, its time to get lined up on those school books and supplies. Mr. Kelsay, Superintendent of Schools, has announced the following required and elective subjects for grades 8 to 11 inclusive with 27½ credits being offered and 16 required for graduation:

Eighth Grade — (Required) English I Algebra I History (Elective) Agriculture Home Economics General Science

Ninth Grade — (Required) English II Algebra II History (Elective) Home Economics Agriculture Spanish I Arithmetic Arithmetic ½ year. Occupations ½ year

Tenth Grade — (Required) English III Plane Geometry American History (Elective) Chemistry Agriculture Home Economics Spanish II Typing Bookkeeping Public Speaking Economics Texas History Government

Eleventh Grade — (Required) English IV Government (Elective) Physics Agriculture Home Economics Typing Bookkeeping Public Speaking Texas History Economics

Silverton High School, as shown above, offers almost as great a variety of subjects as any school in the country. Students should be grateful for this wide range and use their best judgment in choosing their electives to suit the course they wish to pursue after high school.

DIPHTHERIA TOXIDE SAVES CHILD LIFE

Education of the public to the value of diphtheria immunization has resulted in lowering the fatality of this dread disease, but Texas still loses over 400 of its future citizens each year from this preventable disease, according to records in the Texas State Department of Health.

"It is a generally accepted fact among public health authorities," Dr. John W. Brown, State Health officer, said, "that any community may control its death rate from diphtheria. Immunization has been proved a safe and effective preventive measure. Wherever immunization treatment has been extensively used, diphtheria has steadily decreased.

"The most forceful weapon in the control of diphtheria is prevention through immunization rather than cure of the disease after it has developed. Children can be protected against diphtheria by the use of what is known as toxoid. Young children are particularly susceptible to the disease. Accordingly, as soon as a baby is six months old, the parents are advised to take it to the family physician and have it immunized—protected by the use of toxide. Older children in the family who have not had the protective treatment should be immunized also, and this should be attended to now before the school season begins. The immunizing agent is absolutely safe to administer; there is only a slight local reaction, and practically no constitutional or troublesome after effects. It confers a life time immunity in the majority of cases. To be certain that immunization is complete, however, the doctor should be taken back to the child six months after the toxoid was administered and given the Schick test.

"It is within the power of the parents of this state, cooperating with their physicians and public health departments, to eliminate diphtheria from Texas".

—FOR MORE THAN a quarter of a century, no candidate for County Judge of Briscoe County has been denied a second term. Will you be as fair to me as you have been to the former Judges of this county? W. W. MARTIN

Rodeo, Horse-racing, Picnic Dinner, Carnival, and General Get-Together

Two Big Days Planned For Texas Centennial Celebration

Plans are well under way for Silverton's Annual Rodeo and Centennial Celebration, September 4th and 5th. Two big days of horse racing, rodeo, and picnic will be staged by Silverton in keeping with the Texas Centennial Celebrations being held all over the state this summer.

Prizes will be given for Rodeo contests and every winner will receive a liberal prize. Good purses are being offered in the various horse races. The outdoor events will begin each day at 1:00 P. M.

Either a free picture show, or an old time Fiddlers Contest, will be given in the morning—and at noon an old fashioned basket dinner will be held with free drinks being served by the Silverton business men. It is thought that this arrangement will meet with public approval better than the usual barbecue. Everyone bring their dinner, enjoy it with the neighbors, and be ready for the big afternoon.

The evenings will provide entertainment for all—a big carnival—picture shows—and dancing each evening. Old timers are asked to register during the two days and a prize will be given to the oldest resident of Briscoe County in attendance. A prize will also given for the most interesting and outstanding relic that is brought to town and displayed to the public.

Letters are already being received from other places asking about prizes, concession rights, etc., and with any kind of luck at all, this will be the biggest annual celebration Silverton has ever held.

For details as to entrance fees in the rodeo and horse racing, write to Tom Bomar, rodeo manager, and watch the News for other details concerning the affair. Talk it up and plan right now to attend.

It's September 4th and 5th, the Friday and Saturday before the opening of school.

BRISBANE

THIS WEEK

Spenders of Yesteryear Gone With Their Billions Paris Hotels Empty England Learns Also

Europe learns that political experiments cost money. England decided to prevent Mussolini taking Ethiopia...

Arthur Brisbane

Washington that Mussolini could not possibly conquer Ethiopia in less than three years, probably not at all.

When the dust had settled and England, with her chicken-feed assortment of 51 league nations, had apologized to Mussolini...

For a little while she will copy Job: "I will lay mine hand upon my mouth. Once I have spoken...

Paris, which is France, decided to sing and dance a new carmine with Russian dressing; clenched fists raised in air...

You can hardly imagine what fire, fury and enthusiasm thousands of young and old French gentlemen put into that hymn...

There were, and are, manifestations everywhere. Now in the chamber of deputies, Monsieur Gaston Gerard, practical French statesman, asks, "What has become of our foreign tourists and their spending money?"

M. Gerard tells the deputies something must be done. In 1927, 2,125,000 foreigners from all over the world visited France, spending much money...

Foreign visitors, says M. Gerard, used to give highly paid employment to half a million French men and women; spent 500,000,000 francs for French railroad and steamship tickets...

Fifteen billions, even in francs, are "real money" here. M. Gerard tells the chamber French prices are too high. There is something in that, with the four-cent franc costing six to seven cents in the United States—a comic-opera situation...

M. Gerard thinks there should be some cabinet official to look after foreigners, with better propaganda and fewer vexatious taxes on foreigners; there is nothing in that.

Foreigners do not voluntarily travel and spend money where they feel they are not wanted. The cosmopolitan, educated Frenchman is as polite and hospitable as ever, but ask him what sort of reception the crowd gives to the foreigner, British especially. It offends the British ear to hear a Bas les Anglais—"Down with the British!"

An innocent American, in an innocent average American automobile, sallied forth on July 14 to help France celebrate the destruction of the Bastille, and perhaps give a few feeble cheers for Lafayette, or Woodrow Wilson, or somebody.

Great crowd in the Champs Elysees, especially around the innocent American car, with new paint, shiny chromium and several cylinders. A polite policeman says monsieur should know better than to appear in a car of "grand luxury" on such a day. Such luxury cars you may see by the thousands and millions on American roads.

Nothing happens to the car of grand luxury; it crosses the Avenue of the Champs Elysees, about 300 feet, in less than twenty minutes. The French, newly self-identified as "prisoners of starvation," are interested in the auto American, which is careful not to bump anybody.

The bourgeois, the "rich," an extinct species, although it does not yet know it, are nervous. In a vague way they feel that they are held responsible for all those "prisoners of starvation," with their strong voices, deep chests, powerful fists and pink complexions.

Jeffersonian Democrats

Band Together FORTY-THREE Democrats, most of them prominent nationally or locally and representing twenty states, gathered in Detroit to tell one another and the world how much and why they disliked the New Deal. After two days of conferring, they organized themselves as the National Jeffersonian Democrats and named Former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri as their national chairman. They decided to establish headquarters at once in St. Louis and to set up an organization in every state. Then they gave out a 1,500 word declaration or platform in which they declared they "will not support for re-election the candidates of the Philadelphia convention for President and vice president, and we call upon all loyal and sincere Democrats to consider the question of their duty to their country in the approaching election with the same earnestness that has guided our deliberations—joining with us if they feel that our conclusions are sound and our anxiety for the future of our party and our country is justified."

The name of Governor Landon was not mentioned in the declaration, but a number of its signers are openly supporting the Republican candidate. Among these are Joseph B. Ely, Col. Henry Breckinridge, John Henry Kirby of Texas and Robert S. Bright of Maryland. However, the avowed prime objective of the Jeffersonians is the defeat of President Roosevelt and the restoration of the Democratic party to its status before the New Dealers captured it. Their declaration is unsparring in its denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt's course and the policies of his administration.

Bar Association Split on New Deal Legislation

WHEN the American Bar association convenes in Boston soon it will receive two widely differing reports from a special committee named to study the effects of New Deal legislation on the rights and liberties of citizens. They were made public in Washington. The majority report, signed by John D. Clark, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Fred H. Davis, Tallahassee, Fla.; George L. Buist, Charleston, S. C., and Charles P. Taft II., Cincinnati, Ohio, "deplored" the action of President Roosevelt in reducing congress to a "rubber stamp" body to carry through his program. "Novel legislative and governmental trends of the New Deal are just as uncertain today as they were two years ago," the report said. "Laws specifically proposed as emergency measures with limited life have been declared by important members of the administration to be the beginning of permanent changes in national policy. There has been a continuing conflict between such officials as to whether a new social and economic order is in the making or the old institutions are being perfected so that they may be preserved." These findings were challenged by Kenneth Wynne, New Haven, Conn.; Fred L. Williams, St. Louis, Mo., and James G. McGowan of Jackson, Miss. In their minority report they said: "If the purpose of the resolution creating the special committee was to get the opinion of the American Bar association regarding legislative trends designed to meet changing economic conditions, the report is superficial. It does not deal with the problem but concerns itself with a short range attack on surface trivialities."

Congressman Zioncheck Commits Suicide MARION A. ZIONCHECK brought to an end in characteristic manner his checkered career and his life. He leaped to his death from a window of his office in Seattle shortly after he had filed for re-nomination to the congressional seat he had held for two terms. His friends attributed the suicide to worry over a psychiatrist's advice that he take a long rest from politics. His trouble had been diagnosed as dementia praecox.

American Track Team Victor in Olympics EIGHT days of track competition that brought out many record-breaking performances showed that the American team was unbeatable in the matter of total points. These Yankee athletes piled up a total of 203 points. Finland was second with 80 1-4, Germany third with 39 3-4 and Japan fourth with 31 13-22. Jesse Owens, the marvelous colored lad from Ohio State university, captured four gold medals for in the 100 meter and 200 meter runs and the broad jump and for pacing the winning American quartet in the 400 meter relay. The decathlon was won by Glenn Morris of Denver. Japan captured the most highly prized Olympic championship when Kitei Son, young Korean student, won the marathon race over a very tough course and in the record time of 2 hours 29 minutes 19.2 seconds. The distance was 26 miles and 385 yards. Among the women contestants Helen Stephens of Missouri distinguished herself by breaking the world record in two heats of the 100-meter dash.

Commerce Department on Recovery and Public Debt SECRETARY OF COMMERCE ROOPER'S department has just put out a "world economic review" for 1935 which contains many interesting statements. It says, for instance, that future business prospects are conditioned in part upon the possibility of narrowing the gap between government expenditures and receipts. It asserted that "the government deficit springs from the root of unemployment, which is still the major problem confronting the country. As to "the part played in the recovery to date by the heavy government expenditures," the report said: "This question is not easily answered, but it is certain that such outlays have had an influence in many directions—for example, on retail sales, on farm income, on the growth of bank deposits and on the prevailing level of interest rates."

The latter statements may well be compared with the report of Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, to the stockholders. Business recovery throughout the world—in which the United States has participated—is being generated by a combination of various factors, Mr. Sloan explains. In this country the automobile industry has been helped, he says, by principal influences. Only one of these, he points out, has its roots in the New Deal financial schemes and he finds that particular influence a bad one because it creates a temporary fool's paradise in which sales and earnings are ballooned by extraordinary government expenditures. Asserting that political extravagance has created a highly undesirable and artificial stimulus, Mr. Sloan urges that such spending be halted before it is too late to stave off disaster.

Oil Men and Companies Accused of Conspiracy CHARGED by the government with conspiracy to violate the anti-trust law by combining to dominate the purchasing of oil in the Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma fields and to fix prices of gasoline in the Middle West, 58 persons, 23 petroleum concerns and three publishing companies were indicted by a federal grand jury in Madison, Wis. Among the prominent defendants are Edward G. Seubert of Chicago, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana; Henry M. Dawes of Evanston, Ill., president of the Pure Oil company, and many officials of Standard Oil, Pure Oil, Deep Rock, Socony-Vacuum and various other oil concerns and their subsidiaries. Also in the list are Warren C. Platt of Cleveland, publisher of the National Petroleum News and Platt's Oilgram; his two publications and the Chicago Journal of Commerce. The indictment charged that the defendant oil companies formed pools in the east Texas and mid-continent fields for the purpose of purchasing gasoline at artificially high prices from independent producers, and in furtherance of such a scheme were members of associations which included the independent refiners to aid the plan, had curtailed their production of gasoline. This, said Mr. Platt, is exactly what the oil companies did with the approval of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, administrator of the NRA petroleum code, when efforts were being made to limit the production of gasoline, prevent the flow of excess quota oil into market channels, and raise prices in that turbulent industry. "The government's charge turns out whether a practice legally started and carried on under the recent NRA petroleum code was continued in illegal manner after the NRA was killed by the United States Supreme court," Mr. Platt said.

G. O. P. Farm Plan Is Still Obscure

No Light on What Is Offered for Farmers; Million Homes Are Saved for Owners

By EARL GODWIN WASHINGTON—A great deal depends on what Gov. Alfred M. Landon says he is going to do for the farmers of America. So far political observers here at the nation's capital have not yet been able to discern what it is that the G. O. P. platform offers to agriculture different from the program of the preceding three years. It is known, too, that the Republican propaganda machine, which is one of the largest and most effective ever organized, is not going to clarify the G. O. P. formula for perfect life, on the farm until it has to.

The Republicans, I learn, are depending on the campaign of personal hatred which some of their most expert poisoners have been foisting. If they can "Hate Roosevelt Out of Office," they will not have to specify what it is they offer to rural and agricultural America. Meantime, at this writing, no less a disgruntled farm leader than George Peek who went off the New Deal reservation and was believed to be headed for the Landon camp, sulks in his tent at Moline, Illinois, and says that the farmers of America are not going to be stirred to revolt by any platform generalities from anybody—either Landon or Roosevelt.

There is a terrific hullabaloo going on, though, to influence rural America away from Roosevelt and for Landon; great sums of money are being spent on this process which seems to me like making a great noise on the edge of, say—a herd of sheep. When people begin to think this thing through they will realize that for years farmers came to Washington and have gone away with promises and nothing else. But when they came to the Roosevelt front door they got their program enacted. A definite specific program which they themselves helped formulate; as a result farm income has tremendously increased; farm finances have been aided. These are specific things which are not to be hidden by smoke-screen propaganda. Then, too, farm leaders and many farmers have a distinct consciousness of the fact that Governor Landon's political chances are favored by the same old crowd which has been fighting farmers for years.

G. O. P. FARM POLICY Despite all that the Liberty league says, its membership favors Landon, prepared some of the hate Roosevelt poison and if you will pick out a Liberty leaguer, I'll show you a man who will spend a lot of time hating Roosevelt and financing the opposition. Unless Landon changes it by one of those right-about-face maneuvers of his, the Republican agricultural policy is designed to accomplish two things: first, line up farmers behind a high protective tariff which will extend to industry and eventually ruin the farmer as it has always done; second, to put the government into the business of saying just what and how much of a crop shall be exported, at what price and to what country. That is the ultimate result of the idea of "disposing of surpluses by bargaining for foreign markets selectively by countries both as to exports and imports." This Republican proposal is copying the worst phases of European nationalism which has led to the present mess in the old world. The experience is that this policy reduces trade and makes ill will; second, it needs a government bureau for every crop; a bureau which selects the exports, dictates the imports, and practically puts the farm under the heavy hand of government dictation to an unbelievable extent. It will not work in America. What will work and is working is the freer trade arrangements by which we and our neighbors are doing more business and growing friendlier. Warnings against importing too much livestock, etc. are loaded with this hate Roosevelt poison. . . watch out for it.

FARM POLICY

Roosevelt's farm policy reaches out a long way from home, because it is of the same piece with his "good neighbor" policy which has won him and the United States the respect of the world and which has not drawn a single shot from the frantic sharpshooters of the Landon-Liberty league old guard. I suppose there never was an equal to the situation; here we have a President who is being daily hated to a point where you would think someone would choke to death—and yet none has yet assailed him for his foreign policy. Reason: it is in line with the best American traditions and exactly in harmony with the state of mind of the American people today. It is a measure of statesmanship. Roosevelt has done away with President Coolidge's favorite policy of sending the United States marines to collect money for the bankers in some little country where our bucrcaneers have been at work; and by this Roosevelt has won the respect of the southern republics and has helped make the western continent one cohesive barrier against world-destruction by mad-dog dictators of Europe. Roosevelt ended President Hoover's policy of getting into European affairs. We are attending to our own business; and when we have something to sell or buy from any of our neighbors in the world we don't have to carry a gun, or charge them a ridiculous toll when they come in. The effect is better feeling, less strain, and more trade instead of less. Other parties and candidates do not seem to realize we have any foreign interests or contacts. I would certainly not want this country to be presided over by Governor Landon in the event of a world-crisis. He reversed himself on foreign matters suddenly within three months. He announced that he favored a world court (back door to European embroilments) because the last three Republican presidents favored it; what a small reason for something so vital! Then, later the Republican convention declared against our adherence to a world court and Brother Landon promptly acquiesced. What does he really know about it?

WHAT GLASS FORGOT I listened with amazement the other day when Senator Carter Glass, beloved and venerable Democratic leader in Virginia, orated at a Patrick Henry celebration and went so far as to twist poor old Patrick into a stubborn reactionary who would have disappointed the New Deal's beneficent program of saving farms and homes by putting the nation's credit to the useful function of refinancing millions of mortgages. Of course Patrick Henry died many years ago; and we have a habit of massing into one cohesive party all former patriots of whatever political stripe; and Carter Glass has forgotten that the American patriots who wrote the Constitution were rather conservative and were writing the Constitution with an eye on private property at a day when the red flames of revolution were lighting up the European skies. (Just as at present.) Why, Patrick Henry was too much a radical even to attend the Constitutional convention! It was too reactionary to suit him; and he must be revolting in his grave today in anger at dear old Carter Glass using his "Liberty or Death" reputation to blast at the New Deal's greatest maneuver which saved millions of families from losing their homes. Carter Glass, now seventy-six, running for re-election to the senate from Virginia, will have no opposition of any importance. He is Virginia's pride and joy; but it's high time he stop trying to pose as progressive in anything. He was at one time the money trust's greatest foe, because he slammed head on into that financial oligarchy headed by the elder Morgan and beat it to a frazzle, the sign of his victory being the original Federal Reserve Act. That is as far as Carter has gone. Today he ranks with the late Uncle Joe Cannon for complete standpatism and worship of the status quo. It is important to realize that Senator Glass and his younger colleague, Senator Harry Byrd, former governor of Virginia and brother of the famous Antarctic explorer, Dick Byrd, are leading eastern Democrats of high order and great prestige and both of them are of the opinion that the New Deal can be reformed from within. I'll give 'em credit for that. They are not the sorehead, Al Smith take-a-walk variety; but they represent a fast disappearing element in Democracy, which is proved right now by the defeat of a Harry Byrd henchman in the Virginia primaries for the house. Representative Darden, a Byrd Democrat, is defeated by a publisher named Hamilton, a strong progressive New Deal Democrat, and beaten decisively.

MILLION HOMES SAVED A million urban homes were saved for their owners through the operation of the Home Owners' Loan corporation, which is a function of government utilizing public credit for personal needs. Senator Glass thinks that this is coddling the financially unwise; but there is more than one side to the story. The homes were saved; and by so doing the owners were in better condition to meet their taxes; and actually a quarter of a billion dollars in municipal taxes began to pour into the flat treasuries of busted cities. We forgot that in these days of improved business, but in the latter days of the previous administration a man had to pass on the other side of the street if he saw the tax collector. The result was that most cities were broke and poverty-stricken with such poor credit that they couldn't buy even the necessary supplies. Cities which had no credit could not borrow; their bonds slumped. As you know, city bonds are bought largely by trust companies and insurance companies; and because of the rugged individualism of the former era and the inability of the average householder to meet his mortgage obligations and taxes, the existence of our safest financial institutions was threatened. We were close to crumbling when Roosevelt took office and began to utilize the tremendous natural, financial and credit resources of the country for the benefit of the average man—and thus built up credit and laid from the very bottom.

Little things! Life and death, prosperity and ruin, happiness and misery, hang upon little things; they are like the linch-pin to the wheel, on which depends the safety of the vehicle; they are like the rudder to the vast mass which it guides; like the slender nerves to the hollow muscles.

A SPEECH OF NOMINATION

MOST of the reason for the title of these little stories—The Man Who—is supplied by the orators at political conventions who place the name of candidates in nomination.

Today from the loudspeakers come to most of us convincing talks, startlingly free of modesty, which extol the virtues of this favorite son or that one as his name is placed before convention delegates.

But the most successful of these nominating speeches occurred long before static was a household word. It was made in Chicago at the Republican convention of 1896 by James A. Garfield, and made honestly, in behalf of the nomination of John Sherman.

Its net result was that Sherman failed to win the nomination but Garfield succeeded. So that Garfield, later a martyred President, actually is the man who nominated himself.

Here is how it happened. President Hayes had pledged himself not to be a candidate. When the convention opened it was plain that great efforts would be made to nominate General Grant for a third term. James G. Blaine was a formidable candidate but Grant had been presented in a glowing burst of oratory from Roscoe Conkling, a bitter enemy of Blaine.

Garfield's speech in behalf of Sherman followed Conkling's effort. Instead of qualifying merely as an anti-climax it is described by those who were there as an outstanding oratorical triumph.

Grant, Blaine, Sherman, George F. Edmunds, Elihu B. Washburne and William Windom divided the votes until the thirty-fourth ballot. Then Garfield, whose speech still resounded in the minds of the delegates, received 17 votes.

He immediately took the floor and protested that he was there only in the interests of Sherman, whose candidacy he managed. He was ruled out of order. On the next ballot his strength had increased to 50 votes. On the thirty-sixth ballot, with 399 votes, he received the nomination which his epochal speech had asked for another man.

ORIGINAL STEAM-ROLLER

THE steam-roller may not cover ground with the speed of an antelope, but it gets there just the same.

First of the steam-roller tacticians to appear on the American political scene was the illustrious Marcus A. Hanna of Ohio, whose effective maneuverings behind the scenes still serve as an outstanding lesson in the political primer.

Steam-roller methods of attaining the objective, which in this case was the nomination of William McKinley for President, were first utilized by Mark Hanna in the Republican convention of 1896. And they succeeded.

Hanna had observed the amazing switch of delegates to James A. Garfield in 1880 when the latter was earnestly and honestly pleading the cause of John Sherman of Ohio. Sherman tried again in 1888, this time employing McKinley as his convention manager.

At one stage of the proceedings, the report spread that if McKinley would say the word the strength of the delegates would be thrown to him. He promptly put an end to the movement, his vigorous interruption of the roll-call, for he already had received a vote, ending with a demand that: "No delegate who would not cast a reflection upon me shall cast a ballot for me."

Hanna was impressed, as were many others. From that day he moved his support from Sherman, who had been defeated three times, and began to groom McKinley for the presidency.

The opportunity came in 1896. When the convention met, only "regular" delegates were seated. The national committee o.k'd them, one by one, by the vote of 35 to 15. And it just happened they all were McKinley men.

Newspaper reports of the times describe the proceedings as a farce. But at any rate they were successful for McKinley's principal opponent was courting the southern vote, many of whom could not prove an unbroken chain of party fealty, and therefore were not seated. The result was an outstanding majority for McKinley on the first ballot. Thomas B. Reed of Maine running a tired second, flattened under the weight of the original steam-roller, today an accepted part of our national politics.

SYNOPSIS

Job Braddon, young and fantastically successful broker of Chicago, is infatuated with Agnes Gleneth, beautiful daughter of a retired manufacturer. Rodney, a doctor, is in love with Agnes, visits his brother, Job. Rod plans work in Rochester. Job suggests that he make a try for Agnes before leaving. In Rod there is a deeper, obstinate decency than in Job. Rod visits Agnes and tells her of his great desire, but realizes it can never be fulfilled. Agnes' mother is attempting to regain her husband's love. Agnes has disturbing doubts as to what attracts her father in New York. Job tells Agnes he is going to marry her, and together they view an apartment in Chicago. Job asks Agnes to set an early date, but she tells him she cannot marry him. When the agent, Mr. Colver, offers to show them a furnished apartment, Job asks Agnes to see it alone, saying he must return to his office. Agnes consents and Job leaves. A radio is blaring terrifically from one of the apartments. Colver raps upon the door, which is opened by a scantily clad girl, who draws Agnes into the room. Colver finds her husband, Charles Lorré, fatally shot. He calls the police. Myrtle Lorré asks Agnes to phone Cathal O'Mara, a lawyer, to come at once. Agnes does. The police take charge. O'Mara arrives. The officers are antagonistic to him. Agnes goes with O'Mara. Agnes is a witness at the coming trial. Cathal's grandfather and father had lost their lives in the line of duty as city firemen, and his grandmother, Winnie, has built her all around Cathal, who, being anxious, had worked his way through law school. Thoughts of Agnes disturb Cathal. Mr. Lorré had cast off the wife who had borne him his daughter to marry Myrtle, and after two years of wedded life she had killed him. The coroner's jury holds Myrtle to the grand jury. Agnes promises O'Mara to review the case with him. When Cathal calls Mrs. Gleneth asks questions regarding marital problems, in the hope that she might get a solution to her own problem. Cathal wins them over to Myrtle's cause. Job tells Agnes that O'Mara is seeking to profit on the insurance money Myrtle will collect if acquitted. Mrs. Gleneth finds canceled checks made out to "Cash" by Bob, and realizes "Cash" is her rival in New York. Bob admits "Cash" exists. They decide to leave things as they are.

"I had a letter this morning from Mrs. Lorré."
"Oh! So it was the case, of course; no more than that. What did Mrs. Lorré say to you?"
"She asked if I would come visit her."
"In the jail, she meant."
"Yes, should I, Mr. O'Mara?"
He was slow to reply. Say yes, and he would see her. She would come to town by appointment with him, and he would see her to the jail; and then, Braddon not interfering, he'd see her to her train again. Fool—oh, fool! How his pulses were pressing him!
"You should not," he said, controlling himself. "Mrs. Lorré had neither right nor need to ask it of you."
"You do not ask it, then?"
"No." And now, having downed one temptation, another which he had refused before, got the better of him.
"Miss Gleneth?"
"Yes."
He proceeded, recklessly. "That is, of course, your brother-in-law, Mr. Davis Ayerforth, that makes the new firm with Collyitt and Remble?"
"Yes," said Agnes. "Why?"
"Has he been long a friend of this Collyitt?"
"What do you mean by that, Mr. O'Mara?"
"Has he? That's just what I mean, Miss Gleneth."
"I don't know."
"Then I'd ask him."
"I will," said Agnes; and she thanked him and hung up.
Very slowly he returned his receiver to its hook. Perspiration stood on him. Now why had he let himself do that? He knew very well.
Agnes arose, a bit breathless, and decided to go at once to her sister's.
She got out her roadster, and as she backed from the garage, Baskerville half blocked the driveway as he offered himself for company. To the great hound's lumbering delight, she leaped down, opened the rumble, and Baskerville clambered in, seating himself sedately upright. He was absurdly solemn and supercilious-looking when he was riding, holding his huge muzzle high in the air, and sniffing the rushing wind.
It was lunch-time for the children at Bee's, and Agnes knew that on such a fine, sunny day; Bee would have had a table set in the orangerie which edged the circle of the driveway before the house. From far off Agnes spied the table and the little heads in the sun, and somebody serving; so she sounded her horn, and sped dashing thrice about the loop of the drive to display Baskerville to the children before she halted, and the big hound, with the economy of motion by which he accomplished all things, slid to the gravel.
The Black Watch, meanwhile, had been doing its deafening best to tear the house down. The Black Watch was the closest and most completely cooperative of canine companions—two Scotties, Biff and Bing, who tumultuously defied Baskerville when behind the pane of glass. Once they were let out, as now they were, they ran to the hound in utmost friendship. Baskerville never paid them the slightest attention.

The children were banging their spoons on the table with eyes only for Baskerville; they scarcely noticed Agnes when she kissed them. She kissed her sister, and took the chair placed at the table for her, and they both watched Baskerville and the boys.

The dog carefully established himself between them.
He was so huge that, when he sat on the floor, his tawny head was above the board and almost as high as Davy's dark little head on his right. Davy was in his high-chair with a tray before him and fastening him in; Bobby also was in the high-chair, but he sat proudly at the table. Neither boy feared in the least the great hound. They were delighted when he came to lunch; and they—and also Baskerville—knew the rules about him. When a boy finished a dish, he could give the last lick of his spoon to Baskerville.

Each boy got an extra arrowroot cracker for Baskerville to crunch; then Bobby and Davy gave him the last of their dessert.

The Black Watch, noses in the sun lay side by side assuming slumberous indifference to this rank favoritism.
Agnes, oblivious of her errand, sat beside her sister and watched them all. She felt relaxed and grateful and very content; she had no desire to end this interlude. Bee had none. Here with her children, she was happy. Why did time have to run on? But after dessert, for little boys there must be naps.

Selma, their nurse, had taken them away. Side by side, with ears cocking at the slightest alarm, the Black Watch slept in the sun; and the great hound lay asleep, head on his forepaws. The luncheon table had been cleared away.
"Sometimes," said Bee from her wicker chaise-longue, "sometimes I think I—we—Davy and I—have done something." And she passed her hands down over her slim figure as though she could not always believe, herself, that she had borne two sons.

"I think you've done a lot!" Agnes cried. "Oh, Bee, they're what count!"
"I guess they do—a little," admitted Bee, and shook out a cigarette.
"So I'm not sure I won't have another."
"You want a girl?" asked Agnes.
"I guess so," said Bee, after she had her light. "But I really don't care. I'll love the result; and I'm one of those women, I guess, that get a kick out of the bearing, too."
"You do it beautifully, certainly."
"You don't get me, Agnes. It's occupation, and—" She stopped. Then: "And the wife's anesthetic against—"
"Against what, Bee?"
"See here," said Bee sternly, and sitting up, "don't you ever find out!"
"Bee," said Agnes suddenly, "tell me about Mr. Collyitt."
"What about him?"
"How much does Davis know concerning him?"
"Oh," comprehended Bee, relaxing, "probably nothing at all. He's gone into partnership with him; but as you know, Davis is a trusting soul as to people. I believe he trusts practically everybody—but God."
Agnes had to laugh. "How do you mean?"
"I mean it," assured Bee. "Regard the record. He's insured everybody and everything, everywhere, against fire, flood, storm, pestilence and disaster—all acts of God, but he'll take any mere mortal on faith. After he embraced the burning idea of giving up a salaried position to go in with Collyitt and Remble, he couldn't wait for Father to return from New York before he signed the preliminary agreement with them. They're going to make Davis several millions—which is certainly very nice of them, since up to now they've refrained from showing themselves with money. Of course, they've got Davis' capital now."
"Then you doubt them, Bee?"
"Not in the slightest. They'll take Davis for what he's put up; but we can stand it. I mean the family can. Father's rolling it up—isn't he? He'll give it to me, if I need it—as he would to you, Agnes. So what's the harm in letting Davis learn he's not a financier? All that can happen is—he'll lose."

"Yes," said Agnes; and she thought that was all that could happen.

"Davis is out, you see," added Bee, "to make a few millions for me—as though I hadn't any trouble that another baby or a million dollars couldn't cure."

With this, Bee dismissed the matter; so Agnes was not obliged to disclose the source of her concern over Collyitt. But when she made inquiry of Job that evening, he extracted it from her.

"Collyitt?" said Job. "He's been in jams, I hear; but nothing that he did has ever come to court. He's a trader—one of the cleverest traders in town; and straight enough now."
"But what is against him?"
"Nothing I know, except that he hasn't always been—well—solid. But Davis is solid; he's that sort."

"Yes," said Agnes.
"So together, they ought to be all right. Then they'll be helped by the natural assumption that your father'd see Dave through—if he needed more capital. Also," continued Job after a moment, "it doesn't exactly hurt Collyitt, Ayerforth and Remble that everybody knows we're marrying, and so I'd see him through, if it came to a pinch."
"Job, we're not marrying."
"You just think so. . . . Glen! Oh, God, Glen, you drive me crazy! . . . Kiss me! . . . No! As if you meant it! And mean it! . . . Oh, damn us, Glen, what's the matter? What got you bothered about Collyitt today?"
Agnes told him it was O'Mara, and Job held her tighter.

"Was he here again?"
"No. It was over the phone."
"What was he calling you about?"
"He didn't call me, Job; I called him." And she told him about Myrtle's letter. "So I called Mr. O'Mara to find out if I should go to the jail to see her."
"What did he tell you?"
"That I shouldn't."
"That's right, but why didn't you call me? I'd have told you. . . . What else did that shyster say to you?"
"He mentioned Mr. Collyitt, and asked how well Davis had known him."
"Tell that Irishman to mind his own business. I'll watch Davis' partners for you. They're backing now; they'll be all right. . . . Glen, why do you let O'Mara play you?"
"Play me?"
"For a mark. Do you mean to be her—and his—witness at the trial? You've got to realize what you're doing. Her trial isn't going to turn on her; it's going to turn on you. He knows it. You're just God's gift to the defense attorney, if you let him make a mark of you. They're playing you for quite a stake, between them. They're not only after you to get her off, but also they're after a hundred and fifty thousand dollars in life-insurance alone which the companies will have to pay her, if she's acquitted. Half of that goes to him, you may be sure. Remember that, when he talks to you. For God's sake, Glen, come to!"

Agnes lay awake long that night, with one wonder, one bother, one doubt and perplexity following another through her thoughts and feelings. She had never felt so confused.
What did love—or desire, if you call it that—do to you in these days?
For a while, it might make you happy, as it had made Mother and Father happy together for many years, and as it had made Bee happy for a while, at least, before she found out that she was—what? Bored? Was it mere boredom that Bee would escape, for a while longer, by having another baby? Was it that which neither the baby nor a million dollars could cure?

After you married, and no matter whom you married, you went on living; you and your husband, both of you. You did not cease to be human beings; you became more human, having babies. Love, whatever that might be, could not possibly be a panacea against all ills and troubles.
Yet you wanted to believe it to be. Job did not even pretend that he thought it was. Job was utterly honest and practical, for all his impetuous and violent feelings. He offered you in marriage all the excitement and sensation that a man and a girl could give each other. With him, you'd tip up the cup and empty it to the last drop. You'd have a lot of love with him. He'd hold you against all the world, his strong arms about you. You liked his strength; you liked more. . . . But it would not endure. He did not even try to tell you it surely would endure. For he didn't believe in love everlasting—"tepid, tasteless stuff you can bear to sip and never need to gulp."
Agnes began to be sleepy. . . .

"Turn, thou, and look to me: Seven long years I've followed thee, Over the fiery mountain."

Who followed whom? And why? What was that? It was the Princess who followed over the fiery mountain; and for love of him, she followed, though he had been bewitched and never once looked back at her.
Agnes didn't believe that O'Mara was playing her just for a "mark" to make for himself money. She did not want to believe it.

Things to Prize

THESE are the things I prize
And hold of dearest worth:
Light of the sapphire skies,
Peace of the silent hills,
Shelter of forests,
Comfort of the grass,
Music of birds,
Murmur of little rills,
Shadow of clouds
That swiftly pass,
And, after showers,
The smell of flowers
And of the brown earth—
And best of all,
Along the way,
Friendship and mirth.

A Fair Hit

Rule 37 of the Official Rules of Baseball reads:—"A fair hit is a legally batted ball that settles on fair ground between home and first base, or between home and third base, or that is on or over fair ground when bounding to the outfield past first base or third base, or that first falls on fair territory on or beyond first base or third base, or that while on or over fair ground touches the person of the umpire or a player. A fair fly must be judged according to the relative position of the ball and the foul line and not as to whether the fielder is on fair or foul ground at the time he touches the ball."

"Official Paper for Briscoe County"

ROY W. HAHN
Editor and Publisher

Subscriptions in Briscoe and adjoining counties—Per year $1.50.
Out of above district, $2.00.

Entered as second-class mail matter at the post office at Silverton, Texas in accordance with an act of Congress March 3, 1879.

ELECTION DAY AGAIN Saturday. Not many involved, but plenty of interest shown in the main bout, which is Martin vs. Coffee, who are scrapping it out for the title of County Judge.

JAKE HONEA SAYS, "Lord, but I'm glad I'm not in this election. I believe another one like the last one would just about kill me." He is still looking kinda peaked all right. Seems to have kinda shrunk or something—I'll bet he isn't more than 6 ft. 3, any more.

CARL CROW SLIPPED away from the keepers (down by the railroad tracks) long enough to come to the News office Wednesday before they came and got him. He's kinda off somewhere for he doesn't even take the home paper. I told him that it was rich in brain food, and that he really should subscribe. He claims that he used to take it, and admitted that it was "rich." "So rich" sez he, "that it didn't take me long to get a bellyful of it." (And I hope that he borrows a paper and reads this and that it chokes him.)

THE PRINCESS COMES Across this week at the Palace Theater on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. I don't know what she comes across with or across what, but you can bet it's a good show for it has Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard in the leading roles. And if you missed seeing "The Trail of the Lonsome Pine", you missed seeing the best one, to my notion, that has been shown for a long time.

SOMETIMES I CAN GET right good and sarcastic when I'm talking but I've tried it on paper, and I can't sarcazz worth a darn.

THE BROWN BUMMER, namely, Mister Joseph Louis, the colored sensation that Max Schmeling took so much color out of, found another worn-out old war horse Tuesday when he met Jack Sharkey. Sharkey quit fighting five years ago, and then just before his old-age pension came, decided to take on Mr. Louis, who needed him to rebuild some of his reputation.—Sharkey lasted almost three rounds. Which I guess makes a fighter out of Louis again. Yes, and me editor of the New York Sun.

IF YOU MISS THE Aggie Briefs, one of these days it will be because Finley gives me another loaded cigaret or something. He called me clear up to his office the other day, offered me a cigaret for the trouble of coming over—and it nearly blew by hat off. Nice people, this county agent.

RAIN, I SAW IT MYSELF. I thought it was, and I asked several, and they all thought it was, so I'm reporting it—Wednesday afternoon. It just came to me, why that rain—C. L. Gregory has been cleaning up weeds and trash around the shop and I reckon when the rainmakers saw that smoke they took it for an Indian rain sign.

Norman Brown is in McClain this week on business.

TO THE VOTERS OF BRISCOE COUNTY

This will be the last time that I will have to talk to the voters of Briscoe County through the papers before the election on August 22nd, therefore, I wish to take this opportunity to thank all the voters of the county for their kindnesses and consideration during the time I have been working in this campaign.

It has been a real pleasure to visit and talk with you concerning the needs of the county.

I certainly appreciate the vote given me in the past election and promise, if elected, to devote all my time and ability to those things that are, in my opinion, for the best interest of the county, its people and schools, to the end that the affairs of the county will be carried on in the most efficient and economical manner.

By way of comparison I wish to present for your consideration the following certified statement:

STATEMENT SHOWING THE AMOUNT PAID OUT OF THE GENERAL FUND FOR THE MONTHS SHOWN

September 1st, 1933 to Dec. 31, 1934	$16,378.01
January 1st, 1935 to May 31, 1936	$23,432.96

State of Texas,
County of Briscoe:
This is to certify that the foregoing is a true and correct statement of the disbursements of the General Fund of the County of Briscoe for the months shown in the foregoing statement, according to the County Treasurer's books.

cording to the County Treasurer's books.
(signed) R. E. Douglas,
Co. Clerk, Briscoe County
By C. E. Anderson, deputy
You will note that during the SIXTEEN MONTHS that I served as your County Judge there was spent out of the General Fund a total of $16,378.01. You will note that during the next SEVENTEEN MONTHS, there has been spent out of the General Fund a total of $23,432.96. This is information for your convenience, due to the fact that it is inconvenient for you to search the records at the County Seat.

Again I wish to thank each of you for any consideration you see fit to give me.

W. COFFEE, Jr.

W. W. MARTIN
Candidate For COUNTY JUDGE
Re-election — Second Term

Silverton, Texas
August 18, 1936

Dear Voters:

The last twenty months have been a busy time for me. In fact, I have been so busy that I have not been able to see all of you, but I want your votes just the same. I have played this game of politics fair and according to the rules of the game. All I ask is that you be as fair with me as I have tried to be with you.

On April 10, 1931, the Antelope School District issued $5,000.00 in bonds. When I took office on January 1st, 1935, interest had accumulated until instead of Antelope owing $5,000 it owed $5,250.00. I have been in office not quite twenty months and today, Antelope owes only $4,625.00.

On July 10, 1924, Francis School District issued $4,000.00 in bonds. When I took this office, that district owed $2,800.00 in bonds, and was two years behind with its interest. Today, Francis owes $2,300.00 and all interest is paid up to May 10, 1936.

On October the 10th, 1925, the Haylake School District issued $7,500.00 in bonds. They have been paying 6% interest until one month ago when I borrowed the money to pay that off at 4%.

Below is a list of other things that I have done since I have been in this office: Worked with five Juries of View; carried on the correspondence for widening more than 40 miles of highway; appointed three Condemnation Juries; Sold fifteen thousand dollars worth of bonds and warrants at 100 cents on the dollar; appointed the County Planning Board and served as chairman in planning the Quitaque Paving Job, the Gasoline Road Job, the Floydada Road Job, and the Quitaque School Job; got the road job from the Cap Rock to a mile west of Silverton changed to a contract job so that others besides WPA workers could have jobs; visited every Rural School more than one time; secured grants of more than $1,900.00 for the Rural Schools of this county.

In the County Court, I have had more than one hundred cases and not one has ever gone to the Higher Courts.

On July 1st, 1936, the County Treasurer's books showed that in all of the funds together, we have a balance of $27,455.49.

My cards are on the table. You are the exclusive judges of the evidence and the creditability of each testifying witness. Give me a fair trial, and whatever your verdict is, I shall be happy.

Very truly yours,
W. W. MARTIN

Household Questions

Custard pies should first be started to bake in the hot oven to set the crust, then the heat of the oven should be quickly reduced so that the custard may cook slowly.

When blankets are washed at home do not wring them dry. Instead hang them outdoors on the clothesline to dry.

Raisin sauce served on steamed or baked cottage puddings makes a good Winter dessert and one advised for children.

Lesson for August 23

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL MEN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:5-17; Romans 1:15-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Learns a Lesson.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Makes a Great Discovery.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—First Steps in World Brotherhood.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Universal Brotherhood in Christ.

Universal Brotherhood in Christ.

Christianity early found its progress impeded by a difference of opinion.

Such a difference when met in a Christian spirit will not be a stone of offense, but when properly and tactfully settled may be a stepping stone to progress.

Jewish Christians at Jerusalem were disturbed by the report that Peter had received the gentile Cornelius as a Christian brother without requiring him to fulfill the Jewish law of circumcision.

Peter defended his action by asserting his position or appealing to his apostolic authority, but by relating what God had done. Henry Drummond once said, "The best argument for Christianity is a Christian."

The best proof that God has actually been at work is to present the unanswerable evidence of a redeemed soul. In this making his plea Peter reveals that

I. He Had a Vision of God's Purpose (vv. 5-10).

God had spoken to him. When we meet a man who is in touch with God, we should at once give heed. He may be, and perhaps should be, the minister or a Christian leader, but he may be and frequently is some humble, unknown servant of God. But if God has spoken to him we will do well to listen. Peter had learned the great lesson that what God had cleansed man should receive as clean.

II. He Had Seen God Work (vv. 11-15).

The Holy Spirit had fallen on the gentiles and they actually had been saved. Is it not singular that in the early church they could hardly believe that a gentile could be saved? Now we are astonished if a Jew is saved! Why will we in our unbelief limit the Holy One of Israel?

The all-powerful gospel of the grace of God is still saving men and women, Jews and gentiles, from their sins. Have you seen it happen? It is a great inspiration to faith and service. God is ready so to encourage us—he is the same today as he was when he sent Peter to Cornelius. Are we willing to run his errands, proclaim his message?

III. He Had Received a Fresh Insight Into God's Word (v. 16).

The best way to learn the meaning of God's Word is to use it, live it, obey it. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God" (John 7:17).

Peter had learned anew that God's Word meant just what it said. We who are his servants should believe his Word and act on it in faith.

IV. He Knew Better Than to Withstand God (v. 17).

When God has not raised any barriers of race, creed, color, class, or social position, it is not for his followers, and assuredly not for his servants, to build "fences" which he would not authorize or countenance.

One of the needs of our day is that those doing God's work should not withstand him and his will. He who is the same yesterday, today, and forever is ready to work as powerfully today as he did in the days of Finney and Moody, and in the days of Abraham, Moses, Daniel, and of Peter. Let us give him liberty to work in and through us, not as we may wish, but as he desires. Who are we that we should withstand God?

V. In Conclusion (Romans 1:15-17).

This portion presents a magnificent declaration from Peter's co-worker, Paul, the apostle to the gentiles, that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation for everyone that believes, Jew or Greek. Regardless of race or condition, we are all unrighteous, and there is but one way of salvation—through faith in Jesus Christ. It is our responsibility and privilege to make this message known to all men everywhere. Your neighbor and mine, whether in the next house or on the other side of the world, is our opportunity. Not one is unclean or unapproachable, although he may be stained with the dark pollution of sin. God is ready and willing to save. Let us tell men the good news!

FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER

FLOYD GIBBONS

ADVENTURERS CLUB

Hell Everybody

"Hornets and Bullets"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

CROWD over there, boys and girls, and make room for a new Distinguished Adventurer in this club of ours. He is Ralph Gwehr of South Orange, N. J.

I've got to admit, right at the start, that Ralph's yarn is a stinger. It happened to him in August, 1934, up in the Adirondacks, when Ralph and his pal, Billy, started out with a couple of .22 calibre rifles to hunt eagles.

Well, sir, that's a good enough start for any adventure. An eagle is a pretty tough proposition, and a .22 calibre rifle is a pretty small piece of hardware to try to handle one with. If they'd found any eagles on that little hunting trip of theirs, they'd have had plenty of adventure. And I guess if they hadn't run across anything more dangerous than a cottontail rabbit they'd have had an adventure, too.

Those lads were slated for trouble. Their numbers were up—especially Ralph's. Anything they did that day would have been wrong, and when Billy took a pot shot at the only game in sight, he started something worse than a whole flock of eagles and a couple of buzzards thrown in for good measure.

Boys Find Hornet's Nest Is Dangerous Target.

With their rifles in their arms, Ralph and Billy headed up the trail on foot. They trudged up to the top of Blue Ledge, a distance of ten miles from the summer camp of Ralph's folks at North river. The boys planned to spend the night in the mountains, like real hunters, and look for adventure. They were too tired to go after eagles by the time they arrived, but hornets were another thing.

Now a hornet is pretty far from an eagle, but a hornet's nest makes a nice target—if you don't care what you shoot at—and Billy didn't care. He let fly at that hornet's nest and hit it smack in the center and then adventure began in earnest. Ralph says those hornets came out of that nest like a cloud of buzzing smoke. He thinks all the hornets in the world must have been in it from the way they went for him. He took one look at the flying circus and then hit the trail as fast as he could go. But it wasn't fast enough. They dove at him in mass formation and kept right on his tail.

He got a glimpse of Billy tearing through the woods with a million or so of the enemy on his shoulders and the next second tripped and fell.

Bang! Went a Shot Right in Ralph's Ear.

Bang! went a shot right in his ear. He thought it was Billy's rifle for a moment because his hand had fallen out of his hand. Then he felt a stinging sensation in his side. That must have been a big hornet, he thought, from the way it felt.

Ralph Is Shot by His Own Rifle.

The hornets were stinging him everywhere, but none of them hurt as much as the one in his side. He put his hand on the spot and drew it away covered with blood! Ralph was shot! His own rifle had exploded on hitting the ground and the bullet must be in his body!

Hornets were forgotten in the face of this discovery. The situation was deadly serious. Here was a boy shot in the side and he was ten miles from civilization. Besides, both boys were already tired from their long walk. And, to make matters worse, the only doctor was eight miles more beyond Ralph's cabin. They could make that last eight miles in his mother's car, but how would Ralph ever survive the walk?

Ralph says their Boy Scout training came immediately to mind. The thing to do in case of a sudden shock, they recalled, was to apply heat, externally, internally and eternally. So Billy built a fire, heated some water and made coffee. Ralph drank the coffee, which heated him internally. Then Billy wrapped him in the blankets for the external heating. The boys washed the wound with hot water, bound it up as well as they could with their handkerchiefs, and started on the long trek back home.

Wounded Lad Makes Heroic 10-Mile Trek.

Did you ever try to walk ten miles with a bullet in your side? Ralph advises you not to. In addition to the mental torture of not knowing how badly he was wounded, Ralph suffered intensely from the heat. It was mid-August and hot enough without the blankets and the coffee, and he had to trudge along bundled up like an Indian papoose.

That walk, Ralph says, was a nightmare. He figures he must have lost at least ten pounds and laid the foundations for a headful of gray hair. But he kept on going, even if he did think that each step would be his last. Finally they got back to the camp where Ralph's dad had a car.

It was late at night when the boys finally staggered into the doctor's office after a ride that shook the daylight out of Ralph. The doctor looked at the wound and ordered him to the hospital. Then began another ride that Ralph will remember all his life. It was forty miles, but Billy drove it almost as fast as those hornets could fly.

State Troopers Ask the Boys Searching Questions.

At the hospital another surprise was in store for them. State Troopers—called by the doctor, as they always do in cases of gunshot wounds—met the boys and questioned them. Ralph says they seemed to think that he and Billy had been shooting at each other or holding somebody up. But they cleared themselves of that suspicion and Ralph went on the operating table.

An operation is an adventure in itself, but Ralph's was one with a happy ending. The bullet—which, fortunately, was not a high powered one—had entered his side, and, striking a rib, had glanced off and missed the vital organs. The doctors, after an X-ray had been taken, picked the slug out of his shoulder and when Ralph woke up there was his mother, more scared than he was. Billy had found her and told her "Ralph had been shot."

Ralph was out of the hospital in a few days and the wound healed up in a few weeks, but, he says, he hasn't been eagle hunting since.

Darwin's Early Life

Darwin's father was a physician and wished him to adopt that profession. At the age of 16 he entered the University of Edinburgh, but disliked medicine, and later entered Christ's college, Cambridge, to prepare for the ministry. There he became acquainted with Henslow, the professor of botany, who did much to shape his career. The proficiency that Darwin displayed in every department of natural science won him such distinction that he at last obtained his father's consent that he should not enter the church.

Comets Return to Sun

Most comets return to the sun after a period of years. Biela's comet, on its return in 1846, split into two parts, and on its next visit came back as twins—two comets were traveling in almost the same orbit formerly occupied by one and on the same time schedule. There are several records of such multiple comets. The converse of this phenomenon is even more common. They break up. What causes this is unknown. Disintegration probably is caused by the same forces that cause them to split.

OLD IDEAS ABOUT LIGHT AND SEEING ARE DISPROVED

Scientific research has exploded and outmoded many ideas about eyes and seeing, which are important in our everyday lives.

For example, seeing is not done with the eyes alone. Seeing is a partnership between our eyes and light. Be the light ever so bright—and we cannot see without eyes. And though our eyes may be perfect, we cannot see without light.

And, contrary to general opinion, some eyes require more light than others. Children and old people need more light than average adults to prevent eye-strain.

The light that is good enough for one task is not necessarily good enough for another. Sewing and studying require more light than reading a well-printed novel.

One bright light for your reading or work is not enough. Light must be diffused about the room so that sharp contrasts between light and shadow do not cause the eyes to adjust themselves repeatedly, resulting in eyestrain.

The eyesight of the average person is not exceptionally good. Here are the facts: One school child in every five, forty college students in a hundred, and seventy-five of every hundred persons over fifty years of age have defective vision.

Science also says, homes with electricity are not necessarily well lighted, neither are homes without electricity necessarily lighted poorly. The lighting in many homes with electricity can be improved by increasing the sizes of bulbs, diffusing the light and fitting lamps with light-colored shades. For homes without electricity, there are modern gasoline and kerosene pressure mantle lamps that supply light which is the nearest like daylight of any artificial light.

Turner's Criticism

Turner, the famous English painter, once ridiculed his own paintings as a salad party, in this wise: "Nice cool green that lettuce, isn't it? And the beetroot pretty red—yet not quite strong enough, and the mixture, delicate tint of yellow that. Add some mustard and then you have one of my paintings."
