AGGIE BRIEFS

By Finley R. White

Well it looks like we're in for something different this year. Here we are with school all closed up. Diplomas delivered and still the rain storm to mess things up. If you don't believe that's a record just look back over the pages of history for the past 50 years and you'll be convinced.

The rains just couldn't hold off the school closed this year. We've had about three inches of rain thus far in May. Farmers report an excellent planting season and ranchers report range conditions improving rapidly. The farmers are planting and the ranchers are grazing since the rains started.

What to do for 1938 Compliance

There are plenty of questions coming in these days as to how to comply in 1938 so as to be in full compliance with the farm program this year.

The following high points will serve as a guide for every one who really wants to comply. (1) Do not over plant the cotton acreage allotment for your farm. (2) Do not overplant the feed acreage allotment for your farm. (3) Be sure you have as many acres in cotton, peas, cane or summer fallow as are called for on your farm. By following the above 3 suggestions you will be 100% in line for your big (class 1) payment.

In order to qualify for your small payment (class 2) you should earn all soil building units set up in your Soil Building goal. And here's the way to figure out how many soil building units in your goal. (1) If your Soil Conservation acreage is 30 you can earn 30 per acre or $15. If you have 30 acres in grass you can earn 20 per acre or $1.60 and $1 for each animal unit for that 80 acres of grass (figure 10 acres to each animal unit) or $8.00. Now $15. plus $1.60 plus $8. gives you $24.60 class payment. Now to find out how many soil building units you need to qualify for your $24.60 you get two-thirds of $24.60 (to the nearest whole number) which is 16.

In order to earn your $24.60 it will be necessary for you to earn this money by reaching this goal of 16 units. Each of the following practices will qualify for 1 unit: 1/2 acres of trees taken care of. Eight acres of intertilled row crops on the contour. Ten acres of wheat on the contour. Each fifteen acre yard of dirt moved in constructing tank dams. Each 200 ft. of properly constructed terraces. Each 1 acre of sudan, peas or cane planted on the land.

Study the above line up and see you "C". Study the above line up and see you can't be 100% in compliance this fall.

Stomach Pains

Quite a few farmers are sorely displeased with the amounts of their checks. These individuals have been quite forceful in the language they have used in expressing their disgust and the boys are in the office have taken the "belly aching and cursing", because they couldn't do much else, but with all the cursings they have given they haven't learned to like it. Now if you have any aching and cursing to do, I'm the one to cure. If any one swindled you out of any money it wasn't the office fault—it must have been the county. Of course it goes without saying that the reason you didn't get as much money in 1937 as you did in 1936, it just couldn't have been your fault—so—It's just bound to be my fault so cuss me. You can't be breaking in any new territory when you cuss me for I've had quite a few of them already in my young life.

The thing that looks the funniest is here is how some folks got as mad as they are and haven't yet learned that a fellow can't have a cake and eat it too.

Grasshoppers Galore

Reports coming from the forks of the creek would indicate that the grasshoppers are getting ready to give us what Patty gave the gum. And we're getting ready to give them the same thing. We have a heavy load of bran and poison coming in some time within the next few days and we will be ready for "battle" about the middle of next week. (June First).

Mrs. Alvin Redin with her mother, Mrs. C. F. Joiner, left Thursday of this week for Stephenville to visit Harley Redin, who is in jail there. Mrs. Joiner will visit daughter who lives near there.

Vacation Bible School

Monday morning at 8:30 o'clock the City's summer school will open in the Methodist Church. A good staff of teachers will be present; and very interesting subjects will be presented for our study. We are making extensive plans to make this school the best we have ever had. Rev. A. A. Peacock will be superintendent. New songs, new stories, and a most fascinating system of craft-work will be offered. We urge all parents to see that their children attend right from the beginning. The most profit will come to those who take the entire course. Children of all the Sunday Schools, and those who attend none are cordially invited. It will be well worth-while.

HISTORY OF THE SENIOR CLASS OF 1938

By Buster Allard

The Senior Class of Silverton started in High School in 1934 with 18 girls and 32 boys. Out of this number 10 girls and 21 boys have come to the Senior year. Others of the 1934 class have either moved away or dropped out of school permanently.

As freshmen we sponsored and took part in many activities. During the year we had several class parties at different homes of the members of the class.

When we first entered High School we felt very little and insignificant. We felt that the Juniors and Seniors were above us and that they should be looked up to.

We entered our Sophomore year in the fall of 1935 with 11 girls and 21 boys. Miss Murphy was our sponsor. Though we lost several of the members of the class the year before we enjoyed a number of social events. Among those, three stand out—the party at the Home Economics Cottage and the one in the High School Gym, that turned out to be chiefly one of boys and gave us a good excuse for inviting a guest each for the last party of the year at Miss Murphy's home.

Then came the Juniors of '36. The class came into school with more vim and pep with 14 girls and 24 boys in the class, enlarging our class a little from our Sophomore year.

The first party of the year we had a lively party at the High School Gym. Then came the football banquet. Most of the team was made up of Junior boys and naturally they enjoyed being special guests at the banquet.

Then came the Junior play. This was the very best play that could have been presented. In fact it was the best of the season. Then came the Junior-Senior Banquet. This too, was put on successfully by the wonderful group of Juniors.

This ended our Junior year of wonderful events and school day pleasures. It was the brightest spot in our path for the past three years in High School. We left to return in the fall of '37 with the best Senior Class of Silverton High School.

Having completed the required amount of work for the three years that we were in school, we entered for the last time in dear Old Silverton High where we have labored, toiled and spent many hours of pleasure. We began this year with 31 energetic Seniors. This year had some good social times during the year, standing foremost in our memories will be the Hal-lowe'en party for the Juniors and Seniors, a party and dance at the home of one of the members of the Senior class and a Christmas Party at the Home Economics Cottage.

This brings us to the Junior and Senior Banquet. Thanks to the Juniors for a very lovely evening. We still have Senior Day and best of all, Graduation Day, to look forward to.

We leave our thanks and appreciation to the Silverton High School, the place where we have spent most of our time, and where we have had many good times together.

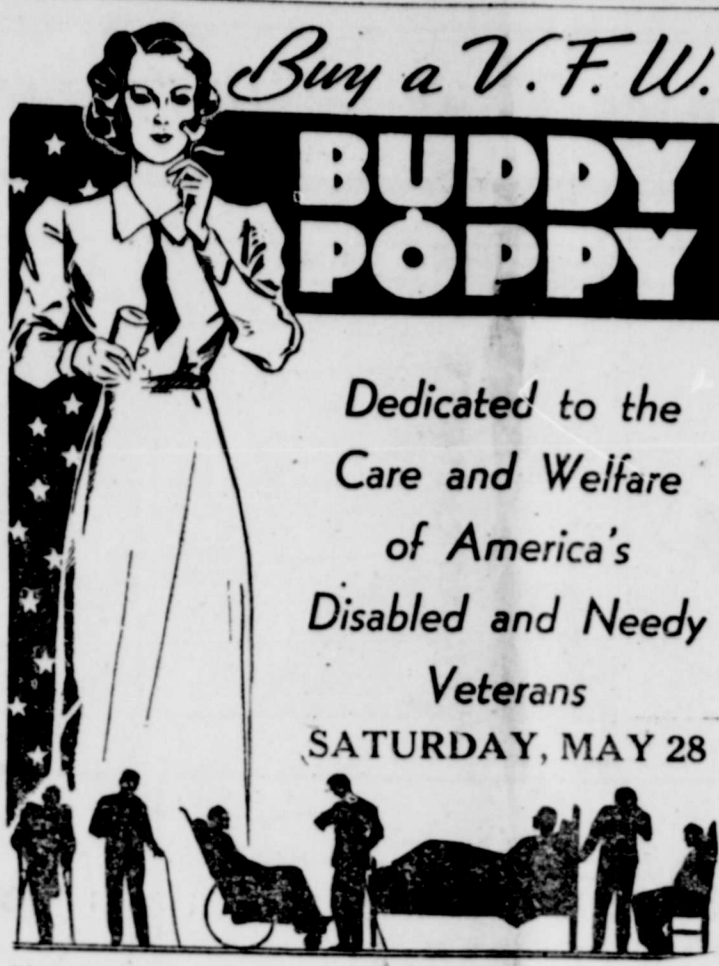

So—good-bye to the Silverton High School, the place we love so well.

Jane White left Wednesday for Dallas to visit friends and relatives a few days.

FIFTH SUNDAY SINGING CONVENTION HERE 29TH

The four county Singing Convention which meets every fifth Sunday, will hold its next meeting at Silverton on May 29. The four counties are Hale, Floyd, Motley and Briscoe. The convention will be an all day affair with basket dinner at noon. The place of meeting will be the High School Auditorium. Lovers of good music are urged to come and spend the day. Bring a well-filled basket. W. N. Dunn, Red Diviney, and J. H. Williamson are in charge of the arrangements.

BOY SCOUT "WENEY" ROAST TUESDAY NITE

Boy Scouts of Silverton will have a weiner roast next Tuesday night at the Roadside Park below the cap rock. All Scouts and their friends are invited. It's a Scotch treat, so bring your own "weenies".

STUDENTS

31 Seventh Graders received diplomas last week and will be full fledged freshmen next fall. Vance Burson was the honor student for the year with an average of 95; Freda Wimberly, second with 93; and Evelyn Coffee third with 91. Aulton Durham was the seventh grade teacher.

CLASS PROPHECY OF SENIOR CLASS

By Georgia Kirk

About two weeks after school was out for the summer I was walking, with no definite place in mind. As I passed the McReynold's home, Georgia called to me, to come and see the invention she had just finished. The invention was an idea she had been working on in school and she had just completed it. She told me about the many possibilities of this invention which she called the "stargazer". By a simple twist of the dial it was possible to see into the future and group at any specified time. We decided it would be quite interesting to see the members of our senior class fifteen years hence.

As we first gazed into the instrument, there was a twinkling of the stars, a comet shot across the sky and lighted the way for the vision which followed.

A man dressed in an aviator's suit climbed into the cockpit of a monoplane that he had just bought. When the man turned, we recognized him as Jim Cline, one of our former class mates. As we watched, he started the plane to rolling and took off into the sky.

As this picture faded another comes into view. This picture was of a pumpkin patch, in which there was a farmer working. When he raised his head we saw it was Odell Gregg and he had become very successful in his work. He had been able to make two pumpkins grow on the same vine, and in the future we look for him to produce peas that won't need shelling and cherries with out pits.

A school room now takes form on the screen. We see a room full of mathematic students. At the teacher's desk sat Cephus Fortenberry explaining why the equator is a great circle of the globe.

As the class was dismissed we followed them into another room where Loree Fanning was fitting dresses on her Home Economic students. There was a sudden knock at the door and when Loree opened it, who should stand there but Charles Dunn, who had come to deliver some groceries.

Suddenly there was a flash and the scene shifted to a busy street in a down town section, we discovered this was none other than what had been the main street in Silverton, Texas. Former buildings were replaced by modern up-to-date structures. A sign over one of the largest stores read "Fisch & Simon's Department Store". Above the next building, a picture show operated by Bill Norrid, a neon sign in large letters read "Ernil Chitty and Taylor Williamson, Comedy and Dance team." The picture of the week was "Ride 'em Cowboy" featuring Jack Haynes and his singing quiter.

Adjoining this was a modern drug store owned by the Smith Brothers, they were treating a group of men among whom were Billie Joe Womack, owner of the town's best machine shop; Arthur McJimsey, a prosperous farmer and Arlis White, a famous lawyer. These were razzing another of the group, Albert White, because he had grown so fat. They suddenly stopped their laughing as they noticed two stylish young ladies enter the drugstore, on looking closely we noticed that they were no other than the former Margaret and Ruth Francis who were now Mrs. Arlis White and Mrs. J. B. Smith. The special for the week was an advertisement of a sleeping potion that might be administered by telepathy to put the wife to sleep and prevent her from waking when her husband returned at 2 o'clock in the morning. The doctor who made this discovery was Buster Allard.

On the book shelf to the right of this advertisement where several copies of the best book of fiction of the year, "Romance in the Dark" by Riddell Hutsell.

Again a comet suddenly darted across the sky and we found ourselves looking at one of the largest ranches in Nevada, owned by Wilson (better known as Bud) Foley. As he rode into view we noticed his wife, the former Mary Sue McWilliams, was with him.

As a comet shot across the sky again we found ourselves looking into a barber shop. The barbers were Odell Gregg and Ailton Strickland. They were shaving two men we did not know; but as the manicurists glanced up, we recognized them as being Othell Bomar and Maxine Watters.

There the scene changed again. This scene was a hospital room where a nurse, Miss Gladys Johnson, was using her best bedside manner on a very goodlooking young man whom we did not know, but we hope she will introduce us to him 15 years hence.

As we found ourselves staring into blank space, we suddenly realized our picture had come to an end. We felt as though we had been transplanted into another world. Wondering how much of this would really be true; we non-chalantly, reached over and turned off the machine.

CLASS WILL OF THE SENIOR CLASS OF 1938

By Albert White

We, the Senior Class of 1938, of Silverton High School, of the city of Silverton, County of Briscoe, State of Texas, do leave the following as our last will and testament:

Article 1: We, the Seniors, bequeath to the Freshmen our dignity and manners so that they may conduct themselves better in classes and in the study hall in years to come.

Article 2: We, the Seniors, bequeath to the Sophomores all chewing gum found attached to desk, chairs, and walls, and the contents of our neat and orderly lockers.

Article 3: We, the Seniors, do bequeath to the Juniors our coveted places in study hall and assembly, and our love for books.

Article 4: We, the Seniors, bequeath to the faculty a long and happy vacation.

Article 5: We, the Senior Class, bequeath our studious brain to the students of Silverton High School. May it not over work them.

Section 1: I, Charles Dunn, give my ability to be a regular "Romeo", to sleep in class, and my industrious disposition to William Gatewood.

Section 2: I, Taylor Williamson, will my courtly manners and ability to raid a girl's kitchen to Thomas Olive. Don't be afraid of them Thomas; they won't bite.

Section 3: I, Jim Cline, will my ability for cutting class to Glen Smith. Don't let Mr. Bud scare you Glen, he is not as tough as he looks.

Section 4: We, the Francis twins, will our ability to giggle to Wilene Bomar. Another one won't make much difference Wilene.

Section 5: I, Arlis White, bequeath my capacity to eat hamburgers and to visit bakeries to Jack O'Neal. How's that for a pal, Jack?

Section 6: I, Alton Strickland, give to J. D. McGavock, to cherish and use without restraint, my ability for getting out of the study hall, and of skipping Senior plays.

Section 7: We, Ernil Chitty and Othell Bomar will to Thelma Jackson and Alice Vaughan our bold and aggressive nature.

Section 8: I, Georgia McReynold, leave my scientific ability and interest to Alfred Allen.

Section 9: I, Odell Gregg, pass to A. J. Rowell my pleasant manner and winning smile.

Section 10: I, Vinson Smith, leave my ability to play football to Hank Brown, better known as "Race Horse".

Section 11: I, Wilson Foley, bequeath my ability of making book reports with the least effort to Geraldine Montague.

Section 12: I, Cephus Fortenberry, bequeath my mathematical ability to Roy Thomas.

Section 13: I, J. B. Smith, leave to Conrad-Henderson my talent for asking foolish questions and making good grades in English.

Section 14: I, Loree Fanning, leave my blishes and red hair to Louise Middleton.

Section 15: I, Georgia Kirk, will my suitors, come one and all, to Jozelle Hodges.

Section 16: We, Jack Haynes and Bill Norrid, will our intelligence to the student body in general. They say there is enough for every body.

Section 17: I, Berle Fisch, do leave to Lewis Johnson, my slim and "willowly" figure.

Section 18: We, Odell Gregg and Len Lee, will to Johnny Quillen our place as heroes on the football field.

Section 19: We, Riddell Hutsell, and Arthur McJimsey do leave to C. L. McWilliams our stand-in with the lower class girls.

Section 20: We, Mary Sue McWilliams and Maxine Watters, do bequeath to Wilma Welch our inclination to study rather than have a good time.

Section 21: We, W. A. Simmons and Gladys Johnson, bequeath to Ardis Joiner our strict adherence to rules.

Section 22: We, Billie Joe Womack and Buster Allard, bequeath the privilege to any who are sly enough to go to the "little store" whenever they desire to smoke or loaf.

Wheat Is Looking Better Than Was Expected

Barring further West Texas "accidents" Briscoe County will go into the wheat harvest about the twentieth of June, with prospects now pointing for a much better crop than was thought possible three weeks ago. Which doesn't mean a bumper crop by any means—but practically all of it will be worth cutting, and a lot of it looks good for ten to fifteen bushels per acre.

Local elevators are already well under way with their preparations for handling the 1938 crop. Ferguson Grain has checked their scales and machinery, and all necessary repairs are being made.

The Plains Mill and Elevator is building a new office building, and installing the scales south of the elevator, in order to give a more convenient place to weigh, and to make more room in the elevator proper.

The Farmers Elevator at Silverton and Whitley are almost ready. Carl Crow will be in charge at the Whitley elevator. Cline's Elevator is under the management of Buel Hill this season.

Stay away grasshoppers, stay away hail, stay away blasting winds—and give us a half-crop anyway.

FOLLY OF LIVING

Years ago, in old Russia, they used to tell a fable of a man in Hell, who prayed earnestly to be released from torment. At last a voice said, "Rescue will Come", and a carrot held by a slender thread was let down and he was told to grasp it. He did so, and seemingly thin though the thread was, it began to draw him up. But others, seeing his ascent, seized upon his garments that they also may be rescued, and the man kicked them off, crying, "the thread will break". And break it did, alas! And again the voice spoke: "The thread was strong enough to save both you and your brothers, but it was not strong enough to save you alone. It is foolish to live only to yourself. Life can neither be lived alone nor saved alone. This will be the thought at the Presbyterian Church next Sunday morning. Join with us in this interesting thought. At the Vesper hour the thought will be "The Resurrection and The Life to Come".

REVIVAL MEETING TO START FRIDAY NIGHT, JUNE 3RD

June 3rd to 12th inclusive, are the dates that have been set for the annual revival for the local Church of Christ, C. B. Shropshire, evangelist from Farmersville, Texas, will do the preaching for the meeting.

Local boosters of the revival say that every effort is being made to insure an interesting meeting as well as one that really does good in our community. Rev. Shropshire has spoken here before, and is well known as a forceful speaker. He was in charge of a meeting here last fall.

If possible, later announcements will give the sermon subjects of the meeting and other plans. You are cordially invited to attend the meetings, and asked to tell your friends of it.

CLEMMER OPENS REPAIR SHOP AT CONOCO STATION

Jim Clemmer is announcing in this week's paper, the opening of a general auto and tractor repair shop at the Conoco Service Station. Mr. Clemmer has been employed at the Fowler Motor Company for several years and left there a few weeks ago to open his own shop. He has a good reputation as a mechanic and invites all his old customers to continue with him in the new location.

News Bits

From Neighboring Towns

1938 Graduates

From neighboring newspapers come the reports of their graduating classes. Nearby towns report the following number of eligible seniors: Quitaque, 24; Hale Center, 28; Estelline, 26; Panhandle, 28; Turkey, 23; Clarendon, 58; Canyon 38; Tulsa, 53; Hereford, 49; Memphis, 66; Kress, 16; Amarillo, 390. Near 5,000 will graduate over the Panhandle area.

Warehouse Destroyed

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the ware house of the Roberts Seed Company at Farwell last Tuesday. The damage was estimated to have been about $15,000 including the grain stored. The Clovis Fire Department assisted in fighting the fire and made the run to Farwell in ten minutes flat, according to the State Line Tribune. Farwell's water supply was exhausted after three hours of fighting.

Dies of Lockjaw

Elva Stiles, 4 years old, died in the Adair Hospital last Wednesday afternoon. The Donley County Leader said that the lockjaw infection was caused from a splinter in her foot Tuesday.

New Building at W. T.

PWA work may give W. T. S. T. C. a new dormitory and a new library in the near future, says the Canyon News. Application for the work was made some two years ago.

SEVENTH GRADERS GRADUATE

Promotion exercises for the 7th grade were held at the High School Auditorium at 11 o'clock on Monday of this week. Rev. Peacock gave the principal address and Aulton Durham, who is principle of the grade school, delivered the diplomas and expressed his appreciation for the loyalty and efficient work of the class. There were 31 members who received promotion.

SILVERTON STUDENTS ELECTED

Two Silverton students have been elected presidents of Campus Organizations at W. T. S. T. C. at Canyon for the coming year. They are Gaynelle Douglas, president of Gamma Phi; and Dorothy Dickenson, president of Pi Omega.

HOME BUILDERS MEET

The Home Builders Class of the Methodist Sunday School met at the church on last Wednesday from 4 to 5 p. m. with Mrs. Theron Crass hostess. Twelve members were present. The time was spent in working on a quilt that is to be given to the Orphans Home.

A fish pond proved a happy diversion, each member paid 10c for each catch. This class clothes a small boy in the home, and the proceeds realized from the fish pond will go to his fund. The hostess served a delicious refreshment plate at the close of the meeting.

POINTERS ON POULTRY

D. A. Evans, working with Earshell Garrison, is giving a few timely pointers on the care of poultry. He is a specialist who has had as many as 35,000 laying hens under his management. It is hoped that his observations will be of interest.

It might help to call your attention to the great need of properly caring for your flock that you may get a greater profit than you are now getting. Hens that pay are those that have been kept free of disease. There is no flock that will give to its owner a profit, if it is infested with disease. It is the cheapest to keep your flock clear of all parasites, both inside and out.

Let me give you a good reliable rule to follow: "Cull your flock of all worthless hens now. Vaccinate and treat the entire flock. They should immunize them from cold, roup and diphtheria. Clean and disinfect houses thoroughly."

I am finding nutritious roup among the pullets in some flocks. Also coccidiosis. Pullets will not grow and develop that are infested with the coccidia germ. Kill those parasites, both inside and out, and let those pullets develop into standard hens. Keep a close

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field
FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Concession by even the most optimistic Republicans that the Democrats will control the next house of representatives by a wide margin makes the menace of the La-Follette Progressive party much more bearable to Democratic prognosticators than might otherwise be the case.

For the house of representatives, to be elected this fall, will elect the next President in December, 1940—IF a third party should prevent any Presidential candidate from getting a clean majority of the electoral votes.

Since the recent consensus of political experts was taken by Newsweek, the writer has checked carefully with some of the more optimistic Republicans to discover where they expect their gains in the house. The point is that a President is elected by the house, under the Constitution, when no candidate has an electoral college majority—by states, not by individual members. The majority of each state delegation determines how their state will vote in electing a President under such circumstances.

There are 15 states about which there is no doubt whatever. Many of them will have solid Democratic delegations in the next house. Since no political landslide is seen now even by the most optimistic of the Republicans there seems to be no chance that the Democrats will not have a majority in every one of these delegations.

These states are the group from Maryland to Texas, and include: Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Maryland.

Ten more states would be needed, as the Constitution requires a majority of all the states to elect a President in this manner. Which, as the present number of states is 48, would mean a total of 25.

No Hope for G. O. P.

Examining the Republican hope chests, it is interesting to note that there are more than ten additional states to those already named, in which there is no hope of the Republicans capturing a majority of the congressional delegations.

New York, surprisingly enough, has not had a Republican majority in her house delegation since the 1920 election, despite the fact that she rolled up an enormous majority for Coolidge in 1924, and went for Hoover by a small majority in 1928. Indiana has now only one Republican member of the house. A gain of two, or at most, three seats there is all that the Republicans hope for. Illinois is also apt to continue lap-sidedly Democratic in her house delegation. So are Colorado, California, Oregon and Washington.

Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico have only one representative each, but that representative is just as important when the house is electing a President as New York or Pennsylvania. Not even the most optimistic Republican consulted by the writer since the Newsweek poll has any hope of electing a Republican congressman from any of these three little states.

And that makes the ten, which, added to the Southern states enumerated, totals twenty-five.

But there are any number of possibilities to make up for any unexpected local upset.

Arouses Curiosity

Inquiries from all over the country are reaching senators and officials asking private advice as to what is on the horizon to have caused President Roosevelt to make his sudden appeal for prompt start on the construction of two battleships.

The general impression on the part of the inquirers seems to be that there have been events in the international situation which caused this sudden move.

It may be authoritatively stated that this is not the case. No one in administration circles pretends that everything in the international situation is rosy. Quite the contrary. But the international picture had nothing to do with the President's haste to get battleship construction started. In fact it is admitted by high officials that if the foreign situation were such that the President thought the United States were likely to be forced into a war within, say, a year, the procedure would be entirely different.

The President would then, it is pointed out, be insisting on a very different type of spending for the intervening period. He would want the money spent on types of weapons which could be completed before the war was over.

It just so happens that, no matter how much the work is hurried, building a battleship is a very slow proceeding. It cannot be cut much under three years. To complete a ship in two years would really be an accomplishment. And this would mean from the time the keel was laid in the World War days the construction of battleships was so slow that the skilled labor force on them could be utilized for something which might reasonably be expected to be finished in time to make its weight felt before hostilities were concluded.

Reason for Haste

The real reason for the President's haste on battleship construction is not preparedness but economics. He wants to get men working on this job as speedily as possible—in the mines, the steel mills, the factories and the shipyards. Literally it is part of the pump-priming plan.

This does not mean that the building of battleships is a species of made work. On the contrary, the President's feeling is that the need for the additional ships is very vital indeed. But not for the immediate future.

The answer to all this is Japan. The majority opinion among naval and military experts studying the situation, and advising the President, is that Japan has no intention of provoking a war with the United States in the immediate future. But the same experts believe that Japan is counting on a war with this country eventually, maybe five years from now, maybe ten.

The theory behind these fine new battleships is that each one constructed tends to make that war less likely. The experts in question note with extraordinary interest the comment in Japan on the construction of these ships. Japanese newspapers which usually print just what the high army and navy officers of that country want the people to know are rather bitter about these battleships which congress has been authorizing and appropriating for in the last few months.

When it is considered that these ships will not be completed for from three to five years, at the earliest, this resentment is very interesting.

Curious Puzzles

Some very curious and intricate puzzles are presented by the recent Florida Democratic primary. One of them is accentuated, curiously enough, by none other than Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic national committee, in a statement rushed out even before all the returns were in to claim a sweeping victory for the New Deal. Said Chairman Farley:

"The signal victory of Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, a staunch New Deal advocate, over Rep. J. Mark Wilcox, campaigning for the senate seat on the straight-out issue of opposition to the New Deal," etc.

Now the interesting point raised by Chairman Farley, inadvertently, revolves around his own denunciation of Wilcox. For it would seem to be a logical deduction that every voter who marked his ballot for Wilcox is an anti-New Dealer.

Viewed as a contest between two party factions, or between two candidates, Pepper's victory was overwhelming. He had a lead of more than two to one over Wilcox.

But if viewed that the men and women who voted for Wilcox were anti-New Deal, then it would appear that one-third of the Democrats in Florida are against the present Democratic administration in Washington.

That is not enough to make any difference, probably, in the Florida election. No one expects any Southern state to elect a Republican to the senate.

The Pepper Problem

But in Northern and Western states such a loss would spell inevitable disaster in November. It is an axiom in politics that no party can afford to lose 10 per cent of its voters. The Florida primary would seem to indicate a loss of more than 30 per cent.

Another, and entirely different, problem is presented by the fact that Senator Pepper, in his campaign, laid a great deal of emphasis on old age pensions.

It was this campaign by Pepper which led Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, to comment that President Roosevelt and Dr. Townsend would have to roll dice to see who was really the victor in Florida.

Now the question is whether Florida is merely like California, in that a tremendous number of old people have moved there to avoid the more rigorous winters of their native states, or whether this sentiment of the old for security and of the young to be relieved of their obligations to their own old folks is merely typical of all states.

In short: Was Dr. Townsend right in his assumption that there is so much sentiment for his plan that if put in any real test it would sweep the country?

It is almost impossible, at the moment, for Washington politicians to do anything but guess at the answer. But this much is certain. The fact that Pepper was so extraordinarily successful will not pass unnoticed. Plenty of senators and representatives who have been worried about their chances for coming back are going to take a chance that the old age pension sentiment is very general indeed. What have they to lose?

What a nice word that has such a homey sound. It brings back pleasant memories of the cookies that ever replenished the grocer's boxes. I remember how that name came to be those sweet morsels. Although they may differ so in texture and in flavor have common characteristics. The process of mixing cookies is simple and easy. Care must be taken in regard to the measurement of flour, as toughness will result if too much is used. If the dough is too soft, chilling in the refrigerator will usually make it handle. This is true for the cookies are to be rolled in a pan to be sliced after they are baked.

But what she's really worried about is the paint to choose for the floor, woodwork and furniture and the material for the dressing table skirt.

We suggested that she paint the floor a soft gray, then have the dresser and bed painted the yellow of the ceiling. The woodwork we'd prefer in the ground white of the wall paper. The dressing table skirt would be nicest in yellow organdy or yellow dotted swiss, but must you take off the heart shaped frame at the top? It sounds quaint and delightful. Maybe you could use it as a frame for a mirror.

Another reader with a paint problem has a wood bed and an old dresser to be used in an attic room. The room is to be repapered, and woodwork and floor will be repainted. What colors? What paper? What should be done about the furniture?

Why not gray paper with a small all-over pattern of pink flowers and ribbons, something that can go over ceiling as well as side wall. Then for woodwork the gray of the paper and for the furniture the lightest pink in the floral. The floor we'd paint black, the bedspread and curtains we'd like in plain pink voile or dimity made with six-inch ruffles.

"It took as much courage as when I cut my hair," drawled Prissy Kent when we had exclaimed properly over her living room.

We could imagine that it had taken plenty of nerve. Because she'd used two marvelous paisley shawls for draperies at her windows. They were perfect in the room but imagine cutting them up!

"Well, I've kept them in moth balls for years, thinking they were too good to use," Prissy explained. "Then I decided that I might as well get some pleasure out of them. So there they are!"

Why not, indeed? We'd probably have felt the same way. She's just had their house done over, with knotty pine walls in the living room. Their maple furniture was pleasantly livable here, with its mellow tones and unassuming heartiness.

Wide built-in book shelves with book bindings that made a medley of deep glowing colors patterned one wall. Opposite the two windows seem to need just the tones of a paisley shawl.

"At first, I thought I'd get a paisley print," said Prissy, "but the two real paisleys kept tempting me and making the prints look like nothing by comparison. So finally I just up and slashed right into them. Each shawl made a pair of draperies. I backed them with a strong rep made to extend enough at the top to fasten the rings to, so there wouldn't be strain on the shawls. Then I lined and weighted them and there you are."

Certainly they were perfect there. An old blue sofa and a pair of chairs in figured linen on a dull red ground were set off by the pine color of the rug. Blue pottery supplied accessory accents.

WHAT a lady and a can of paint, between them, can't accomplish is nobody's business. Right now we're interested in Helen W's plans for her bedroom. Because her own ingenuity with paint is going to be the main expenditure on the room, but we're betting that it's going to have plenty of charm when it's finished.

It's a small farm-house room, just repapered in a yellow-flowered paper on a white ground. The ceiling has yellow paper with tiny white dots. The bed is old fashioned, a Jenny Lind type, painted ivory and the dresser is old oak. The old washstand she's planning to use as a dressing table, taking off the heart-shaped piece across the top. The bedspread is a lovely quilt in pastel colors and the curtains are cream, draped and tied back.

Contest winners always get their pictures in the paper, as does young Charley Baker (above) who won a balloon-busting contest. He's a shoe shine boy. Below are first and second place winners of a barrel rolling contest. It's foolish, but it's fun!

IRON and COPPER

Shows How You Can Help to Avoid Anemia by Including These Blood-Building Minerals in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City

OF ALL the nutrition problems that challenge the homemaker, none is more important than supplying her family's need for iron. This mineral is sometimes described as the supreme element in nutrition because it is an essential constituent of the blood.

How Blood is Constructed

If you should examine a drop of blood under the microscope, you would observe that it is composed of red cells and white cells. In normal blood there are about 25 million times a million red blood corpuscles, owing their color to the iron-bearing protein hemoglobin. They carry oxygen to all the body tissues, and remove the carbon dioxide formed during the combustion of body fuel.

A reduction in the amount of hemoglobin in the blood may cause shortness of breath, quickened respiration and an accelerated heart action. Lack of appetite, weakness, and a slowing of all vital functions may also result from the diminished supply of oxygen to the tissues.

Lack of Iron May Lead to Anemia

In many young people the blood does not function normally, though frequently parents are unaware that anything is wrong. You may scold them for being lazy, for lacking interest in their work, or never heeding the things you tell them, when the real trouble is due to iron starvation which, if long continued, may lead to anemia.

The person who has a tendency toward anemia usually tires easily and lacks pep; complains of cold hands and feet; worries over trifles, and may have a complexion that is anything but rosy.

The great danger of an iron-deficient diet is that it deprives the body of its chief defense against disease. For when the quality of the blood is poor, one becomes an easy prey to infection. Moreover, if a serious illness occurs, lowered resistance makes it difficult to fight it off.

Two Forms of Anemia

Anemia may be due to loss of blood, deficient blood formation, or to increased blood destruction in the body. The different forms of the disease are sometimes classified as primary and secondary anemia.

Primary anemia is usually known as pernicious anemia. It is a grave condition in which the marrow of the bones has lost its power to make red blood cells.

Secondary or nutritional anemia may result from loss of blood in an accident, or it may follow a long, infectious illness. For any infection lowers the iron reserve in the body. But the most common cause is a diet lacking in sufficient iron over a long period of time.

How Much Iron?

It is believed that about 10 percent of the total hemoglobin in adults is destroyed daily. And for this reason iron-rich foods must be included in the diet every day.

Investigators have found it difficult to determine the exact iron requirement, but according to the latest estimates, from 12 to 15 milligrams a day will not only provide adequately for bodily requirements, but will allow a reasonable reserve.

Women Need More Than Men

Women require more iron than men, in proportion to the body weight, to make good the losses that occur during the menses. Expectant mothers need a generous amount of iron, not only to provide for their own needs and for the normal development of the fetus, but to create a reserve supply in the baby's body which will last through the period of lactation.

The percentage of iron in the baby's body is about three times that of the adult. Nature has wisely designed this reserve to make up for the low iron content of milk which constitutes the chief food during the first six months of life. Nutrition authorities believe, however, that better health re-

Readers of this newspaper are invited to write to C. Houston Goudiss, at 6 East 39th Street, New York City, for his scientific Reducing Bulletin, which shows how to reduce by the safe and sane method of counting calories.

The bulletin is complete with a chart showing the calorie value of all the commonly used foods and contains sample menus that you can use as a guide to comfortable and beautiful weight reduction.

Results when an iron-rich food, such as egg-yolk, is introduced very early into the diet. This helps to prevent the slight anemia which was formerly regarded as unimportant, but which is now recognized as making the baby more susceptible to infection and retarding growth.

Children's Requirement High

It is desirable to keep the iron intake at a high level throughout childhood, for it has been discovered that better health results when a surplus is allowed above the daily requirement. But there is a very special need for iron in girls from the beginning of adolescence through the eighteenth year.

Iron-Rich Foods

To maintain top health and prevent the possibility of nutritional anemia, the homemaker must learn to meet the daily iron requirement of her family and not leave this vital matter to chance.

Iron-rich foods include egg yolk, liver, molasses, dried beans and peas, whole grain cereals, lean meat and green leafy vegetables. While milk has only a small amount of iron, experiments show that its iron is readily absorbed and is utilized to good advantage.

Eggs are such an excellent source of iron that one egg yields about one-tenth of the standard requirement. Lean meat furnishes a considerable amount, but liver is so much richer that it should be eaten frequently. Dried beans are inexpensive and when baked with molasses become a good source of iron.

It is a pity that parsley is so often used only as a garnish, because it has a higher iron content than most green leafy vegetables. Though potatoes contain only a moderate amount of iron, they are usually consumed in sufficient quantities to make them a significant source.

Copper Also Necessary

Investigation has demonstrated that adequate iron alone is not enough to prevent nutritional anemia, for the body cannot convert iron into blood pigment unless copper is also present. Therefore, in order to obtain the full benefits of iron, the diet must contain sufficient copper. Foods that supply copper in abundance are liver, nuts, dried beans and peas. Smaller, but significant amounts are provided by whole grain cereals, dried fruits and poultry.

I shall gladly send to every homemaker a list of foods rich in both iron and copper, and also sample menus showing how to plan a balanced, blood-building diet.

I urge you to write for this material and keep the blood-building foods in mind when planning menus. Never forget for an instant that good blood is the best form of life insurance.

Not a long life by the fire.

J. E. DANIEL brought in a hatful of hail stones Monday, some of them larger than hen's eggs. He tried to tell me that he had just picked them up, and that they were really big when they fell last week. I pinned him down though and he admitted that he had had them in the ice box. You can depend on a lawyer to be always trying to make something look like what it ain't. That's what makes them good lawyers. (If there are any "good" lawyers).

THE ODD FELLOW HALL is to receive a new lease on life, according to pretty accurate reports. It will be put on a new foundation, a new porch built, and the exterior receive a stucco coat. The thing is a fire trap and an eye sore as it stands. The Odd Fellows probably think that they are doing it for themselves, but believe me, it isn't going to hurt the town a bit either.

20 Inches Of Rainfall Here This Week

THIS HEADLINE is here just to show you how misleading large heads can be, and how important a little period can be. The true amount of rainfall Saturday was 20 inches, instead of plain old 20.

CARL WIMBERLY IS wondering whether he is a market bull or market bear. He said that he never knew it to fail to rise all the way from five to twenty cents right after he sells—especially if he has been holding it for some time. I think that would make him a bear for holding it and a bull for selling it—and a bear for punishment either way.

BOOTS BRYANT AND I were out shooting rabbits the other evening. The closest we came was when Boots knocked the tail off of one. It actually did that. He picked it up and said he was going to have it made into a powder puff for his wife.—My idea of shooting is to come just close enough to scare 'em. A scared rabbit does more for ridding the country of the pests than a dead one because the scared rabbit tells all of his relatives—I think that is what they call "rabid propaganda".

"I HAVE CHOSEN the simple and practical way of bringing my message to you"—That is the opening line of Tom Hunter's address over the radio. And goes on to say how much the broadcast costs. Then (this is the part that touches me deeply) sends the speech, ten large typewritten sheets, to me to be printed in the Briscoe County News free of charge. Purely personal political advertising. They pay the radio to broadcast the speech, yet ask the weekly papers to give them the space.

ALL OF THESE STATE candidates are strong for "freedom of the press" meaning to them plenty of free space with a nice bit of blissful blarney as pay. Well, whenever they start putting something in their platform about rehashing Texas publication laws, some of which are near fifty years old, then I'll start boosting them, as will five hundred other Texas newspapers.

THIS WEEK WE'D like to point out an ad to you that is pretty interesting reading. It's Barney Wilson's ad on this page. You'll find there that Silverton is actually paying as much as three cents a pound more for fryers than are surrounding towns. And Barney has his hair up and stands ready to back-up his statements too.

OF COURSE, IF YOU can borrow the paper, it doesn't make much difference, but every time you miss an issue you're liable to miss something in the ads that means as much as the price of the paper. For instance, that poultry price, or some right smart reductions on Dry Goods that Whiteside is running during Cotton Week --- and the grocery ads --- and Willson & Son tells you this week how to save over half on your fencing costs. You know, folks, you'd only have to save 3c a week on your buying to pay for your subscription --- and you can beat that ten times over.

SILVERTON'S OLDEST graduate finished school here last Monday. After having had students in school here for over fifty years, Mrs. N. W. Haynes saw the last of her boys graduated when Jack received his diploma. Mrs. Haynes first saw her own children thru, and then her grandchildren. You would think that a grind like that would about finish off this fine old lady—but not so. She has just about as much pep right now as most women do at forty.

watch on cold roup and all the respiratory troubles.

Cholera must be looked upon as a dreaded disease. There are some cases in these parts. You better treat and give the flock a general cleaning up. Earshell Garrison has a complete line of poultry treatments, which if administered properly, gives most excellent results. The price is reasonable—and his cooperation with you all along will help much to improve the poultry interest in this country. Consult a poultryman about your troubles and steer clear of fake remedies and fly-by-night agents. Consult your county agent, and study for yourself the many bulletins which will be gladly given you at his office. Let's revive the poultry interest in Briscoe county to where every farmer will be able to sell enough poultry and eggs to meet all expenses and have a little money left. It is done in other places, why not here?

Did you know that a properly bred and developed pullet can be made to produce 240 eggs in a year? That is 20 dozen and they can be sold for near 20c per dozen which would be $4.00. Her feed bill, being 80 pounds of mash and grain, and including treating your flock, would not exceed over a dollar and a half. Which would leave you $2.50 clear profit from each hen and still have her at the end of the year.

What can give you more money for your investment? Can cotton or wheat?

Let us think more along the poultry route. I am making Silverton my home and will give all my time to helping flock owners to better success in the poultry business. Call on me at any time.

Heres Idea An

Here's the idea that we are trying to get over to the producers of Silverton Trade Territory:
In order to keep our prices ABOVE surrounding towns we must have volume business --- for after all, any product will only bring the price as set by supply and demand, and when our price gets too close to that point our operating margin is very small!

To illustrate this point Mrs. Dow Nix:— Today, all the surrounding towns are paying only 19c for cream --- We are paying 20c. Surrounding towns are paying for Hens, 9c and 11c --- and we are paying 11c for Leghorns and Lights, and 13c for Colored Hens.

But the big difference is on FRYERS. Surrounding towns are at present paying for Fryers, 12c & 14c. We are paying until Wednesday morning, June 1st the following price for full feathered fryers:
Colored SPRINGS, 2 to 3 lbs. 17c
Colored SPRINGS, under 2 lbs. 16c
Leghorn SPRINGS, 2 lbs up 15c
Leghorn SPRINGS, under 2 lbs. 14c

Don't misunderstand us --- for our competitors will meet these prices, but we defy anyone, to say that these prices were in effect until we put them out. Not to meet these prices would be very very bad business for them.

REMEMBER, you help us --- we help you --- by furnishing you a better market for your Cream, Poultry, and Eggs!

If you doubt any of the above, check up on your neighboring towns. We are strictly an Independent Concern, and sell where we find the best market.

SIDELIGHTS

By Marvin Jones
Member of Congress from Texas

The new relief bill is now pending before the Congress.

When it was under consideration in the House of Representatives a few days ago, I was fortunate in securing the passage of an amendment which will allow farmers to participate on work projects.

The language of this amendment is as follows: "Farmers in actual need of work but who are not on relief rolls shall have the same eligibility for employment on projects in rural areas as persons on such rolls."

There are many farmers whose property is heavily mortgaged and who have suffered several crop failures because of the drought. They are in need of actual work, but in the past they have not been able to qualify for employment on various projects under the regulations of the administrative officials. In many instances they have teams and equipment that can be used on the projects. There have also been instances of projects in rural areas which have been greatly needed but the population has not been large enough to draw sufficient workers who can qualify under the regulations.

I am very glad that the new provision has been accepted by the House and I hope it will be retained by the Senate.

I believe it is important to encourage those farmers who are trying to carry on. A small amount of work may enable many of them to do so. If they are permitted to sink, especially in the drought and flood areas, it will complicate the problem in the towns and cities. The agricultural program has been of great assistance. An opportunity to work on the various projects will also be of substantial aid.

Interest Rates
The Committee on Agriculture,

fr white

with which I am connected, recently reported a measure to extend for two more years the existing interest rates on Federal Land Bank and Commissioner's loans. This measure has now been passed by the House of Representatives.

The interest rate on Federal Land Bank loans is to be continued at 3½ percent, and the rate on Commissioner's loans at 4 percent.

Last year when Congress passed legislation to continue these rates, the President vetoed the measure. It was then passed over his veto. I led the fight in the House for approval over the veto, as I felt that conditions justified a continuation of the emergency rates.

I hope the President will sign the new measure so these rates may be continued, as I believe that such action is very desirable.

As the result of a measure reported by the Committee of Agriculture and passed some time ago, the Farm Credit Administration now has the authority to refinance Commissioner's loans in worthy cases over a period of the same length of time as that allowed on Land Bank loans.

These are the lowest farm interest rates that have ever prevailed in this country and are lower than those which prevail in any other country. The Farm Credit Administration is the first institution of its kind that has furnished a method of credit suitable to the needs of agriculture and separate from the commercial credit structure of the country.

I am anxious that the work be continued at the lowest rates that can possibly be obtained.

HEALTH NOTES

Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, urges everyone to be careful to prevent snake bites when in the country. In Texas the chief offender is the rattlesnake, and, contrary to common belief, it does not always rattle before it strikes.

About seventy-five percent of all bites occur on the lower extremities and could be prevented, to a large extent, by wearing high top boots or leggings. About 20 percent occur on the hands and arms. Care should be exercised in not putting the hands in invisible places when climbing rocks, and to look before picking up anything that may be obscured by vegetation, brush or rocks.

If one is bitten, prompt action is necessary and a doctor should be obtained as soon as possible. No time should be lost in removing the poison by suction; this can be done by a suction cup. First, a tourniquet should be applied above the wound, so as to increase congestion and assist in washing out the poison. A cross cut incision with a sharp, clean knife or razor blade should be made over each fang mark, or preferably to connect the two fang punctures. These cuts should be at least a quarter of an inch deep and at least that long. Suction should be applied for at least a half hour. The tourniquet should be released ten or fifteen minutes for at a time.

If bitten by a snake, do not get overheated; do not use alcoholic stimulants; do not use potassium permanganate (an antidote) to cauterize the wound; and do not depend on remedies.

URGES RESEARCH LABORATORIES TO LOCATE IN TEXAS

In an effort to discover uses for Texas cotton and promote its increased use in the country, the Texas Planning Board urged Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace to locate one of the four proposed laboratories in Texas.

In its brief to Wallace, the planning board pointed out that because of its size, population, diversity of agricultural ground, diversity of climate, transportation facilities, power development, supplies, water conservation and more especially on account of its immense production of cotton and other agricultural products, presents an unusual opportunity for agricultural research.

The board also called attention to the fact that exports nine out of every ten of cotton produced within the state and that loss of foreign markets imposes hardships upon the cotton farmer, upon the state of transportation which has the state's numerous deep-water ports and upon those of families whose livelihoods depend on the great cotton industry.

Unless new domestic uses for Texas cotton are found, the planning board believes the state will suffer a serious economic and face social problems of utmost gravity.

● Mansfield Tires are 3 Ways Safer because they are built three ways differently from other tires. Mansfield Cord-Lock construction puts more tough cord fabric into the sidewall. Their wide, flat treads are made of Duro-mix rubber that wears longer in grinding service. Their high tensile piano wire beads are seven times stronger than actually needed. Mansfield Tires equip thousands and thousands of cars and trucks in every part of the country today because wise motorists wanted Mansfields and bought Mansfields—they did not get them as equipment tires. Diplomatic Relations Ruptured . . . John W. Hanes Named Assistant Secretary of the Treasury

On the eve of National Air Mail week the first air mail and passenger service between Juneau and Fairbanks, Alaska, was established by the Pan American Airways as the first link in its route connecting southeastern Alaska with the interior. This photograph shows the scene at Juneau as the plane, a twin motored Lockheed Electra, was about to depart for Fairbanks.

Ministers Are Recalled DIPLOMATIC relations between Great Britain and Mexico were broken because of the dispute over Mexico's action in expropriating foreign oil properties. President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico took the initiative by recalling Primo Vila Michel, Mexican minister at London, and ordering the closing of the legation indefinitely. The British government promptly directed Minister Owen St. Clair O'Malley to leave Mexico together with his staff, the legation being put in charge of Consul Gen. J. Dalton Murray.

Fall of Suchow Near DISPATCHES received in Shanghai said the Japanese forces were closing in on Suchow, great Central China rail junction city, and that its capture was momentarily expected. Thousands of Chinese troops were believed to be trapped in that area with little chance to escape. Encirclement of Suchow followed the cutting by Japanese columns of the Lunghai railway at which operations of the invaders had been directed for five months. The Japanese then pushed rapidly toward Suchow, taking the cities of Pihai and Siaoheien which were desperately defended.

Japanese naval forces occupied the important port city of Amoy, South China. They also landed at the mouth of the Min river 130 miles north of Amoy, but were driven back to their ships.

Woman Ambassador? THERE is a good chance that the United States will be represented at Moscow by a woman, for Mrs. Charles C. Broy is under consideration for the post of American ambassador to Soviet Russia, which Joseph E. Davies recently relinquished to become ambassador to Belgium.

Mrs. C. C. Broy, who is a Texan by birth, is the wife of an American foreign service officer and the widow of Representative Thomas W. Sisson of Mississippi. She was recommended for the ambassadorship by the chairman of the foreign relations and foreign affairs committees of congress, and has the backing of many prominent members of congress. If appointed and confirmed, she will be the first American woman to be an ambassador.

Air Mail Week CELEBRATION of National Air Mail week, marking the twentieth year of the service, opened when Mrs. Roosevelt accepted, for her husband, a sheet of the new air mail stamps from the Washington postmaster. The anniversary was observed in many parts of the country, a notable event being the first use, in Chicago, of an autogiro to carry mail from the airport to the post office.

Hanes in Treasury Post PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT nominated John W. Hanes, who has been a member of the securities and exchange commission less than five months, to be assistant secretary of the treasury. It is likely that before the end of 1938, Mr. Hanes will succeed Roswell Magill as under-secretary of the treasury. Mr. Magill, who is on leave from Columbia university, is anxious to return to his old position, it is reported. Mr. Hanes may not assume his new duties until the reorganization of the New York Stock exchange is completed. He will be the first New Deal assistant secretary of the N.L.R.B. Wins Point THE United States Supreme court ordered the Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia to show cause why its orders against the national labor relations board in the Republic Steel company case should not be vacated. The circuit court refused to permit the labor board to withdraw its case against the steel company for the purpose of instituting further proceedings and thus averting judicial scrutiny of its conduct. The lower court also restrained the board from taking any further proceedings in the Republic case pending the certification of the transcript of the record.

Revenue Bill Enacted THE 300 million dollar revenue act of 1938, as patched up by senate and house conferees, was finally sent to the White House for the President's signature. The compromise measure retains a vestige of the undistributed profits tax, enough to save the administration's face. But the tax is limited to the calendar years 1938 and 1939 and it is expected to die then.

Barratry in Shipping Barratry in shipping and navigation includes every wrongful act committed by the master or crew to the prejudice of the shipowner. The master must have deliberately violated his duty to his employer and acted against his better judgment, says Tit-Bits Magazine. Deviating from the ship's course to engage in smuggling is barratry. No act of negligence, inadvertence, or mistake amounts to barratry.

Cheerfulness Has Dual Value Cheerfulness has a dual value in life. Oldest Lighthouse in America The oldest lighthouse in America is Boston light station. Built in 1716, it was knocked down during the Revolution, rebuilt in 1783. It was then 69 feet high, lit by four whale oil lamps. The tower, 90 feet high, contains the original stones, in use more than 222 years, plus additions.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK By LEMUEL F. PARTON NEW YORK—Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy has been an effective social and political ally of both her father, former mayor of Boston, and her husband, ambassador to the Court of St. James. But the news that, in accordance with her husband's decision, she presented only seven American women at court is one of her rare appearances in the headlines.

The 11 engaging Kennedys have been viewed more or less en bloc in the news and Mrs. Kennedy has never been in a very sharp lens focus. She was one of the prettiest of Boston debutantes, 39 years ago, a rollicking girl with black hair and eyes of Irish blue. Back home from her convent training, she taught her father "Sweet Adeline."

He was John F. (Honey Fitz) Fitzgerald, and in his campaigns he sang his way to memorable political fame—riding like a surfboard the long, lingering "swipes" of the song taught him by his daughter—"the flower of his heart."

Fortune and Family Grew Up Together Mrs. Kennedy, her childhood playmate, was twenty-five years old when they were married in 1914. He borrowed $2,000 for a down payment on a $6,500 house. Their fortunes grew as their family, with Mr. Kennedy president of a bank, in a year or two after their marriage.

Mrs. Kennedy once told a Boston drygoods clerk that she bought 200 suits and dresses a year. It takes a heap of shopping to make a home, like the Kennedys', and she became known among her friends as a paragon of household efficiency comparable to the one in Solomon's off-hand apostrophe to such skills and virtues.

Now she is mistress of the "castle" which was once J. Pierpont Morgan's home; also of a beautiful mansion in Bronxville, N. Y., a huge summer estate at Hyannisport, Cape Cod, and a villa at Palm Beach, built by one of the Wanamakers.

She is slender and girlish, comely and vivacious, weighs 115 pounds and takes size 14 dresses. Violet makes her gowns and she is envied by other women for her magnificent jewelry—noteable among them being a ruby and diamond bracelet which, it is said, is matched only by the one the Aga Khan gave his princess.

But she never lets the children run to unseemly display, holding them to restraint in regime and dress. Even without all these adventitious fixings, say her friends, she would be an admirable ambassador's wife, with her own quite adequate equipment of tact, charm and intelligence.

MAN and boy, this journeyman has helped process a lot of explorers' and adventurers' copy through the news mill. If it was ghost-written, it had only slick and synthetic excitement, like Ersatz pastry, and if it wasn't it was usually dull. Happily in contrast are the doubtlessly authentic and personally written yarns of W. H. Tilman, leader of the British Mount Everest expedition, now getting under way.

These stories from the Tibetan base camp have a professional ease and fluency, along with a ring of integrity which gives assurance that Mr. Tilman is really writing them. There is no ghost on the job here.

Mr. Tilman is thirty-nine years old, a keen-faced, hard-muscled Britisher of medium stature, who has been exploring ever since he left college. He has climbed mountains in the Alps and in Africa, including Mount Kenya, Kilimanjaro and Ruwenzori. This is his fifth expedition to the Himalayas. The entrants in this high hurdle event are not youngsters. N. E. Odell is forty-seven, F. S. Smythe is thirty-seven and the others are all over thirty.

Three Billion Bill Passed BY A vote of 328 to 70 the house of representatives passed the President's three billion dollar spending bill and sent it on to the senate. This action came during a turbulent session.

A motion to send the bill back to committee so that state administration of relief might be substituted for federal supervision was defeated. In addition to direct appropriations calling for the expenditure of 2 billion 519 million dollars, the measure carried authorizations to spend an additional 635 millions of dollars, making a total of 3 billion 154 million dollars which may be spent by the administration in an endeavor to fight the depression.

The biggest fight came on a move to strike from the bill a section allowing states and municipalities to exceed their constitutional debt limitations. This motion was defeated, 90 to 36. The farm bloc put over two amendments. One makes farmers eligible for relief whether or not they are found to be in need if they can prove they are out of work. The other provides that farmers need not be in needy circumstances to benefit from free fertilizer provided by the WPA.

Slattery Has West's Job RESIGNATION of Charles West as undersecretary of the interior was accepted by President Roosevelt, and Harry Slattery of North Carolina was immediately named in his place.

The retirement of West marks a complete victory for Secretary Ickes in their long feud. Only recently Ickes dismissed all but one of West's office assistants and then turned the office over to Assistant Secretary Ebert K. Burlew. Their feud began when the President named West to the post without consulting Ickes. White House Secretary Steve Early announced the President was looking about for another post for West.

Hungary's New Premier BELA IMREDI was made premier of Hungary following the resignation of Daranyi, and it was believed he would quell the rapidly growing Nazi movement there. He promptly introduced in parliament two measures designed to stop all extremist agitation. One would provide more drastic penalties for disturbing public peace; the other would tighten restrictions on the right of public assembly.

The new premier also announced a five-point program for social and economic reconstruction which he said his government would push through without delay. He said Hungary's foreign policy would remain unchanged.

Just before it stepped out the Duranyi government put through the house of deputies an anti-Jewish bill, and it was thought Imredi would enforce its provisions if the upper house approves it.

Slender, clean shaven, quick witted, and a polished debater as well as an astute financier, Imredi speaks several languages and has a winning personality. He has a wide range of interests, including art and music. He looks forty, but is nearer fifty.

League Censures Japan DR. V. K. WELLINGTON KOO, Chinese delegate to the League of Nations, had better luck in the Geneva sessions than did Haile Selassie, once emperor of Ethiopia, or Del Mayo of Spain. The council finished its business by adopting a resolution condemning Japan for its course in China and urging member nations to give direct aid to China.

Georges Bonnet, French foreign minister, advocated aid for China, declaring that she "had shown herself worthy" of moral support and the world's admiration. Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, supported Bonnet. Speaking for Russia, Jacob Souritz said he was sorry the resolution did not go farther.

Chile announced that she was quitting the league in order to avoid entanglement in European wars, and Venezuela and other Latin American states let it be known that they were preparing to follow this example. Switzerland freed herself from Article XVI of the league covenant, which provides for application of economic pressure against members that resort to war.

Floyd Gibbons' ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Monster From the Swamps" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY: Well, sir, if I seem to be continually harping on the fact that adventures are things you meet up with most frequently at home, you can put it down to the fact that I am continually being reminded of it. Just the other day, while looking through a sheaf of letters I came to a story by a woman who had an adventure on a farm. Well—of course, there's nothing unusual in that. The funny part of it was that the farm was in this country, and the adventure was of a sort you'd only expect to run into in the jungles of Africa or South America, or to read about in some account of the grim battles between men and animals that the ancient Romans used to stage in their gladiatorial arenas.

The woman is Lottie Hawco—Mrs. John Hawco, of New York city. And the animal she fought with was a wild boar. I'll bet a lot of people—including me—didn't know there were wild boars in this country. But there are, as any South Carolina farmer can tell you. How they got here is an interesting story.

You see, the ordinary barnyard breed of pig is nothing in the world but a descendant of the wild boars you read about in tales of old-time Merrie England. Those boars were tamed and fattened and domesticated until, over the space of six or eight hundred years they became the fat, lazy, gluttonous animals you see in hog pens the country over.

How Pigs Get Wild and Dangerous. But a pig will stay fat, and tame, and lazy only so long as he's kept in captivity and stuffed with chop suey from that well known galvanized iron can out on the back porch. Once he gets loose and goes back to the woods again and has to rustle for his own food—well—then he gets thin and tough and rangy. His tusks grow out, and in a generation or two he becomes a boar again—just as wild and as dangerous an animal as ever he was when he roamed the marshes and forests of old England in the days of Robin Hood.

The Boar Viciously Attacked Lottie's Mother.

And that brings us to Lottie Howco who, on February 16, 1931, was visiting with her mother and her sister, Inez, on a farm near Osborn, S. C., where a wild boar hunt was in progress. A bunch of men from the neighborhood had been out all day, combing the marshes with packs of dogs, roping boars and herding them—alive—into a big high-sided farm wagon. They had just returned home with six or seven boars—big, vicious fellows, waisthigh to a man and weighing three or four hundred pounds—animals that could break a man's leg with their huge, crunching jaws and which frequently did disembowel the fleeing dogs that hunted them with one sweeping blow of their long, protruding tusks.

The men backed the wagon up to a strong enclosure and were untying the boars one by one and cautiously prodding them into the pen. Lottie, her mother and sister were standing near by, watching the proceedings—and then—suddenly—a terrible thing happened.

Attack by a Savage Boar. The men had unloosed the largest boar and were prodding it toward the pen when it turned, squeezed between the wagon and the enclosure, and rushed into the open, gnashing its great teeth and foaming at the mouth. It headed straight for Lottie's mother, who was standing nearest the pen, and before she could turn to run, it was on her, throwing her in a heap to the ground, biting at her savagely.

It was the most terrible sight Lottie ever beheld in her life. Charlie, the foreman, stood with his mouth agape, too surprised for a moment to even move. Sister Inez, paralyzed with fright, clapped her hands over her ears and began to scream. Lottie herself was numb with terror, and for precious seconds—seconds that seemed like a lifetime—she stood rooted to the spot. All the rest of the men were on the other side of the pen, or on the wagon, too far away to reach the spot in time to do any good.

Then, all of a sudden, Lottie came to life. She can't explain what happened, but it seemed as if a spring inside her had suddenly been released. She sprang forward, threw herself on the snarling, screaming, rolling jumble of woman and beast, singled out the boar and began beating and mauling and scratching it with insane frenzy.

Surprised Him, So He Fled. The boar could have killed Lottie with one thrust of its sharp, pointed tusk. Lottie's mother had been saved from death thus far only by her long skirts and thick clothing. But taken by surprise, the boar couldn't quite figure out this wild new menace that came beating and kicking at his flanks—tearing and scratching at his eyes. It was a thing of fury. It didn't seem one whit afraid of the boar. And an animal will often reason that if you are not afraid of him, then he must have good cause to be afraid of you.

This one did just that. Snarling and grunting, he turned to flee from this inexplicable new attack. He got about three steps, and then he found himself tangled up in the ropes of the men who, by this time, had come around from the other side of the pen to deal with him. The next thing Lottie knew, she was back on the porch of the farm house with her mother, looking over herself for injuries. She doesn't even remember helping her mother to the porch, and to this day she can't figure out how she came out of that fight without a scratch on her body.

Lesson for May MAINTAINING PERSONAL EFFICIENCY LESSON TEXT—Dan. 1:8-16 GOLDEN TEXT—Every man should strive for the mastery of all things. I Cor. 9:25. PRIMARY TOPIC—How Pleased God. JUNIOR TOPIC—Ten Times INTERMEDIATE AND TOPIC—In Training for the Life. YOUNG PEOPLE AND TOPIC—Liquor's Effect Upon Efficiency.

Personal efficiency is a which is receiving much in our day. There has been so much accurate and reliable information as we now have to diet, exercise, and medicine. The mind as well as the body come in for attention and of books are available on development and full use of the powers of personality. Some are trash, but others are Business is co-operating at school and the home in girls and the opportunity up to be useful and happy member of society. The church's important contribution, although must confess that it is far from might be by the grace and of God.

Having done all these the good of the people, largely destroy their value in admitting the use and sale of cants which destroy personal efficiency and dull moral perceptions.

I. A Sound Mind in a Sound Body (Dan. 1:8-16, 19, 20).

Daniel and his three Hebrew brethren had been brought to Babylon as captives, and were chosen to enter the royal court to serve at the king's table. Provision was made for the chosen for that school. The however, included not only which was unclean to the Jews, which Daniel knew to be undesirable. It took holy indignation to be excused from the king had prescribed, but was blessed not only with but with tact and courtesy. A day test of a simple diet and proved so successful that it was continued. At the end of three-year course the Hebrews not only physically strong mentally and spiritually wise.

The experience of Daniel's brethren is not just an eagerly grasped at by "blue collar" men to prevent their from "enjoying" intoxicating. The testimony of science of the of experience in all ages, that the use of even an small alcohol so small that the man not feel its presence may "reduces endurance, accuracy, rapidity of muscular action, kind" (Emerson). It is not the ability to think clearly react promptly to danger but absolutely taboo with such possible workers as railroad engineers. It is not a stimulant, but a which dulls the nerve centers. Edward Rosewood says, "The of alcohol as a beverage is justified. There is no such the right use of beverage should be such information as the available in publications of the ance organizations, books by own writers, and even in editions by state liquor commissions. It is published in newspapers, magazines and circulated by organizations and insurance companies. Yet, unbelievable as seem, the use of liquor is increasing, and the rising tide taking in our country is beyond our ability to understand describe. Who is there that

"Dare to be a Daniel" Dare to stand alone. Dare to have a purpose. Dare to make it known.

II. Success in Life Calls for Control (I Cor. 9:24-27).

Paul delighted in illustration taken from the athletic field. He talked of running a race, of a good fight. He knew the need of keeping his body in the one who serves his physical athletic association in physical. He gladly surrenders his personal liberty to the guidance of the coach. He eats carefully, sleeps nights, exercises consistently. Above all does not use any form. Listen to the great athletic coaches—You would not waste my time to train or develop one who is a coler." Stagg: "Coaches who are dead against the use of colic liquors, even beer."

"All the umpires together put as many players out of the game as old man booze." Paul rightly points out that these sacrifices are made for what is but a transient crown. How much more should do for the sake of our eternal inheritance instruction may be the physical and mental education that follows the use of but above all let us have souls that are sent to eternal punishment from God. We are deeply moved by the loss of efficiency, but what about about the loss of a soul?

CHAPTER VII—Continued

"Five of them, far as we know," Lee answered. "We're kind of in a hole, boys. If we jump up this bunch of wolves before the smugglers arrive, they can give us the horse-laugh and say they just rode out for a picnic. If we don't show up till after the Mexicans, the smugglers are liable to be rubbed out.
We'll have to just jog along and hope for the best."

Gray dawn was beginning to sift
into the darkness and bleach it with light. Lee held the lead, Jeff Gray
at his heels.
Day poured down into the can-
yon. In an incredibly short space of time nothing was left of the blackness of night but a swirling mist.
The men could see one another, not as shifting shadows but as individuals. All of them were conscious of a definite relief.
The leader drew up his horse.
"Gettin' close to the rock slide,"
he said evenly. "They may be there or they may not. We're fixed so we have to guess at what these fellows want." Lee's glance rested for a moment on Gray. "Maybe I'm the one who is to fall into the trap
and this talk of smugglers doesn't mean a thing. Ride as loose as you can, boys. Not too close together.
If they fire at us we'll hunt cover,
each man for himself. There will be plenty of boulders there, or anyway brush."

"Wouldn't it be better for one of us to crawl forward on foot and have a look-see?" Brand suggested.
Before the echo died away a fusilade
followed.

From round a bend in the gulch
there came the crack of a gun.
"We're too late!" Chiswick cried.
"Come on, boys."
He slid from the saddle and ran toward the bend, moving with the heaviness that comes from middle age. Gray passed him before he was halfway to the turn.
The scene Gray looked upon as he rounded the curve was one of the wildest confusion. Frightened by the firing, two saddled horses were bucking wildly in the dry bed of the stream. The men who had been riding them lay on the ground,
one of them face down and the other in a twisted heap. Two others in Mexican costume were racing down the canyon to escape, while three masked men shot at them with rifles as they ran. Another masked man was struggling with a pitching mule.

Gray flung a bullet at the nearest
of the marksmen. The man whirled, caught sight of him, and ripped out a startled oath. He gave a cry of warning, fired once wildly toward
the men pouring round the bend,
and turned to run. He caught at the bridle of one of the plunging horses and tried to mount. His foot could not find the stirrup nor could he fling himself astride the back of the animal. A bullet struck the pommel of the saddle to which he was clinging. With a yell of terror he let go and flew down the gorge,
dodging in and out of the rocks as he went. Though the face of the man was covered by a bandanna
except for the eyes, Gray recognized him as young Howard.

Taken by surprise, the other bandits thought only of flight. One ran limping to a horse, pulled himself to the saddle, and galloped off. Another plunged to the ground, as if he had stumbled, but did not rise again. The remaining two, penned in the rocks, answered the fire of the attackers.
"Get to cover, boys," Lee ordered.
"We'll drive them into the open. Don't take any chances."
A saddled horse, snorting with fear, came out from the big boulders close to the spot where the two masked men crouched. The nearest outlaw seized the bridle and mounted. His companion clambered on behind, and the animal dashed down
the canyon.
"Bring up the horses," Lee called to his son Frank. "We'll take after these fellows."
He moved forward to check the casualties. Two Mexicans were dead, as was also one of the outlaws. None of the Chiswick party had been hurt. The unexpected attack had sent their foes into panic.
Gray turned over the body of the masked man lying in the sand. He recognized the face of Sid Hunt,
the cowboy he had seen in Yell Sanger's store when he first arrived in Tail Holt.
The crook-nosed man helped himself to the dead man's rifle and cartridge-belt. He caught one of the horses left by the outlaws and started down the gulch.
"Better wait for the orders of the old man," Brand advised.
"I'll just ride ahead and keep in touch with these fellows," Gray
called back.
He passed a laden pack-mule.
Part of the load was silver, he guessed. The mule had got over its fright and was picking at the shrubbery.

After he was through the boulder
field, he put his mount to a canter,
regardless of the brush which caught
at him as he plowed into the chaparral. He was riding the gray gelding upon which he had seen Morg

Norris leave town.
Presently he saw in front of him
a man on foot. Sometimes the man was running, sometimes walking. In the space of three or four minutes
he looked back a dozen times. Fear of death was riding him hard. As Gray drew nearer, the fugitive took refuge behind a mesquite.
"Don't you come any closer," he warned, his voice quavery with terror.
The man was Lou Howard. During his flight he had dropped the rifle because it interfered with speed.
"Reach for the sky," Gray ordered. "No funny business or I'll drill you through."
A bullet whistled past his head.
He swung from the saddle and moved forward. In his hand was a forty-four, ready for action. The rifle he had left beside the horse.
"Don't you!" shrieked Howard.
"You keep back."
"Get 'em up," snapped Gray.
"Quick."
The hands of Howard went up, the weapon in one of them.
"Don't kill me," he begged.
Gray disarmed him.
"You'll be safer tied up," the captor said. "Keep you from being killed by one of the boys when they get to you. Move over this way."
The crook-nosed man took the rope from the saddle and tied up Howard swiftly and thoroughly. He thumb. In this country a man without a horse was in poor plight. The first consideration of these fugitives would be to get another mount. They would strike for the nearest place

where a pony could be picked up
with safety.
The answer struck Jeff Gray almost with the force of a blow. That

Ruth spent some anxious, restless
hours. She found herself on the front porch a dozen times, her gaze
sweeping down the road to look for
the returning posse.
With Nelly's help she laid in a
supply of cooked food for the returning warriors. Whether successful or the reverse, they would certainly be hungry.
After all, it was Nelly who first
saw the approaching rider.
"Someone coming this way," she
called to her mistress.
Swiftly Ruth went to the door. A horse was cantering heavily up the road. The distance was too far for
identification of either man or beast,
but there was something unusual
about the gait of the animal. Unless very tired it ought not to make such heavy going. Presently she made a discovery. A second rider
sat behind the first.

A pulse began to beat in Ruth's throat. Something was wrong. Perhaps the man in the rear was
wounded and they were sending him
home. She ran down the steps and hurried toward those approaching
the house.
They were close upon her before
she realized they were not from her father's party. She stopped, abruptly, looking at them intently. The man in front she did not know. The other swung to the ground and came toward her. A cold wind swept through her. There was evil in the jeering cruel eyes.
"Nice to meet up with you again,
Missy," he said.
"Who are you?" she asked, dread
in her heart.
But she knew who he was. She had seen him at Tail Holt just before and after her father had been
wounded. His name was Morgan
Norris, and he was the man Jeff
Gray suspected of firing the shot.
From the talk of her brothers she
knew he was one of the most dangerous of the outlaw group.
"Never mind the name. Just call
me one of yore admirers. First off,
we want horses. While Kansas is catching and saddling I'll help you get some food together. We're in some hurry, and we'll take it with
us."
"What's happened?" the girl
asked, her eyes on the bloodstained
handkerchief tied around his left
arm below the elbow.
Norris ripped out a violent ob-
scene oath. "Keep yore trap shut,
girl, and do like I say," he ordered.
"You've been hurt—wounded,"
she cried. "There has been trouble."
Her eyes were big with fear. The color had died out of her face. She was not thinking of him but of those
with whom he had fought. They too
might be wounded—or worse.
"Ambushed by yore rotten kin,"
he snarled. "Shot down when we
weren't lookin' for it, when we didn't have a chance."
Ruth looked into his bleak eyes,
the focal points of a cruel, savage
face, and knew what it was to be afraid. She turned and walked to the house, the man beside her. He caught hold of her arm just above
the elbow, his fingers tightening
with all the pressure they could exert.

left him lying in an open place on the trail.
A quarter of a mile farther down
the canyon there ran into a steep
rocky gulch narrow as a Titan's sword-cleft. Far up this Gray could see two men and a horse. One of the men was riding, the other clambering along the trail after him.
The sun was now out and shining on them. It would be hot work for a man breathing that stiff slope,
especially if he were in a desperate hurry. The haste Gray took for granted, since there were two riders
and only one horse, with vengeance
hard on their heels.
He turned up the gulch after them. In the rainy season water poured down this rocky bed, but vegetation had small chance in such terrain. Whatever soil there might once have been had long since
washed down into the gorge below.
The horse took the narrow bed of the trough like a cat, its muscles
standing out hard as steel while it reached from one foothold to another. A bullet ricocheted from a flat rock above Gray and plowed
into the rubble close to the front hoofs of the gelding. The sound of the explosion came down in booming echoes. One of the men near the top of the gulch had fired at his pursuer.
Gray did not stop. He did not answer the fire. The fugitives were moving again. They were not looking for a fight. What they wanted was to reach the flat country just ahead of them where they could disappear into some of the hill folds

"Let me alone," Ruth told him.
"Take your hand off me."
"It's my say-so," he retorted,
with an evil laugh. "What orders
are given will come from me, sweet-

With an effort she wrenched her-

gers had bit into the flesh.
"No," she challenged, head up and eyes undaunted. "You daren't harm me. If you did you'd be trapped and wiped out like a wolf."
"Would I? We'll see about that,"
he purred softly.
He was playing with a dangerous
thought, one that had just come into his mind. Could he use her, as a protection and as a means of vengeance? If he took her with him would he increase or decrease the peril of the situation in which he stood? He was not sure whether he had been recognized; if so, he might have to get out of this part of the country. Mexicans from across the border, engaged in illicit traffic,
were at no premium in Arizona,
but Lee Chiswick could use the killing of two of them to stir up a lot of trouble.
Norris went into the house with her.

"This man wants to take some food with him, Nelly," said Ruth.
Nelly looked at him out of startled eyes. She made as if to speak and changed her mind.
"Get a move on you," he snapped.
"I'm in a hurry."
While Ruth packed the food they had just been cooking the outlaw sat

her. It would be a magnificent revenge. That was one side of the hand with it. The slender grace of her figure, its fine spirited race-

horse look, stirred a tumult in him.
Kansas came into the kitchen. "I roped and saddled two cow-ponies,"
he said.
"We'll need four," Norris an-

"Four. What for?" Kansas asked.
"We're going to take these girls
with us."
The other three in the room stared
at Norris, Kansas with incredulity,
the young women with gripping fear.
"The hell we are!" Kansas retorted. "You gone crazy from yore wound?"
"They will be a protection to us,"
Norris insisted.
"Like heek they will," his companion snorted. "What's eating you, Morg? This whole country would rise up and wipe us out. Use yore head."
The eyes of the killer glittered.
He said softly, a silken threat in his voice, "Saddle two more horses."
Kansas felt a chill run down his back. "Good God, Morg—"
"Make tracks, fellow," Norris interrupted, his stabbing gaze fixed on the other.
Kansas backed out of the room.
"All right, Morg. All right. Just as you say. I sure ain't lookin' for trouble with you."
Ruth said to Norris, keeping her
voice steady with an effort, "You
wouldn't do that to two girls."
Scowling at her, he answered
harshly, "Don't fool yoreself."
"But it's like your friend said.
The whole country would hunt you
down and stamp you out."
"I can look after myself. I reck-
on," he told her; and added, "I need
you along to keep me company."

Ruth said to Norris, keeping her
voice steady with an effort, "You
wouldn't do that to two girls."
Scowling at her, he answered
harshly, "Don't fool yoreself."
"But it's like your friend said.
The whole country would hunt you
down and stamp you out."
"I can look after myself. I reck-
on," he told her; and added, "I need
you along to keep me company."
(TO BE CONTINUED)

CHAPTER VIII

Ruth spent some anxious, restless
hours. She found herself on the
front porch a dozen times, her gaze
sweeping down the road to look for
the returning posse.
With Nelly's help she laid in a
supply of cooked food for the returning warriors. Whether successful or the reverse, they would certainly be hungry.
After all, it was Nelly who first
saw the approaching rider.
"Someone coming this way," she
called to her mistress.
Swiftly Ruth went to the door. A
horse was cantering heavily up the
road. The distance was too far for
identification of either man or beast,
but there was something unusual
about the gait of the animal. Unless very tired it ought not to make
such heavy going. Presently she
made a discovery. A second rider
sat behind the first.

A pulse began to beat in Ruth's throat. Something was wrong. Perhaps the man in the rear was
wounded and they were sending him
home. She ran down the steps and
hurried toward those approaching
the house.
They were close upon her before
she realized they were not from her father's party. She stopped, abruptly, looking at them intently. The man in front she did not know. The
other swung to the ground and came
toward her. A cold wind swept through her. There was evil in the
jeering cruel eyes.
"Nice to meet up with you again,
Missy," he said.
"Who are you?" she asked, dread
in her heart.
But she knew who he was. She had seen him at Tail Holt just before and after her father had been
wounded. His name was Morgan
Norris, and he was the man Jeff
Gray suspected of firing the shot.
From the talk of her brothers she
knew he was one of the most dangerous of the outlaw group.
"Never mind the name. Just call
me one of yore admirers. First off,
we want horses. While Kansas is
catching and saddling I'll help you
get some food together. We're in
some hurry, and we'll take it with
us."
"What's happened?" the girl
arm below the elbow.
Norris ripped out a violent ob-
scene oath. "Keep yore trap shut,
girl, and do like I say," he ordered.
"You've been hurt—wounded,"
she cried. "There has been trouble."
Her eyes were big with fear. The
color had died out of her face. She
was not thinking of him but of those
with whom he had fought. They too
might be wounded—or worse.
"Ambushed by yore rotten kin,"
he snarled. "Shot down when we
weren't lookin' for it, when we
didn't have a chance."
Ruth looked into his bleak eyes,
the focal points of a cruel, savage
face, and knew what it was to be
afraid. She turned and walked to the house, the man beside her. He
caught hold of her arm just above
the elbow, his fingers tightening
with all the pressure they could ex-
ert.

Paris Thieves Re-Enact a Crime, Then
Find the Job Recorded by the Camera
From the days of Vidocq, who founded the French national detective service under the name of La Surete Generale, in 1820—now the adjective is "Nationale"—the scientific reconstruction of crime as an aid to successful solution has been generally practiced, writes a correspondent in the New York Times.
Both assassin and robber have been forced, whenever possible, to reproduce in the original environment the maneuvers which caused their arrest. When not possible, detectives themselves have assumed the roles.
The underworld of Paris has become so accustomed to these "re-
constructions" that its most unfortunate members take pride in their acting and even censure the absence of "properties." The "surface fraternity," however, consisting chiefly of pickpockets and shoplifters, was thrown into consternation when two of its most recent recruits from Poland were not only
made to reconstruct their delinquencies but

Few Days Left to Enter Our Cake Recipe Contest

Send in Your Favorite Recipe Today
You May Win a
Cash Prize

- First Prize $25.00
- Five Second Prizes $10.00
- Ten Third Prizes $5.00

ONLY a few days are left before the close of our big Cake Recipe Contest. For all entries must be postmarked not later than May 31, 1933.
But there is still time for you to enter a recipe. Send in the directions for that cake which your family says is the best ever . . . which you bake for company . . . or always sent to the church fair.
It will only take a few moments of your time to write out the recipe and you have nothing to buy . . . no letter to write. There never was an easier contest! Just fill out the attached coupon calling for your name, address, the brand of shortening, baking powder and flour used in your cake. Clip the coupon to the recipe and mail it to C.
Houston Goudiss, author of the "WHAT TO EAT AND WHY" series in this newspaper.

16 Cash Prizes.
The winning cakes will be selected by the experienced home economists on the staff of the Experimental Kitchen Laboratory that he maintains in New York City. The recipe adjudged the best will win $25.00 for the lucky homemaker who submits it. There will be five second prizes of $10.00 each and ten third prizes of $5.00 each.
Prize winning recipes, together with those receiving honorable mention from the judges, will be printed in a booklet, to be distributed nationally.
Simple or Elaborate Recipe.
There are no restrictions as to the type of recipe that may be submitted.
Your favorite cake may be plain or frosted. It may be baked in layers or in a loaf—put together with a cream filling or topped with a meringue. It may be chocolate, maple, mocha, spiced,
Devil's Food, a jelly roll or a Lady
Baltimore. The proof will be in the eating!
That $25.00 first prize would come in handy for buying summer clothes or something special that you want for the house. You have nothing to lose, everything to gain, so why not write out your recipe—now. Attach the coupon and mail it to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Brown Griddle Cakes.—If a tea-spoon of molasses or brown sugar is added to griddle-cake batter, the cakes will brown more easily.
Luncheon for Children.—Bananas sliced over crumbled graham crackers and served with milk make a delicious luncheon for young children.
Ready Paint Brush.—To have a paint brush always ready for use, keep the bristles suspended in raw linseed oil.
Better Buttered Beets.—A tea-spoon of freshly grated horseradish added to cooked, buttered beets will give a pleasant flavor. This is especially suggested when roast beef is served.
