is drawing rapidly to a close for making application for insurance on that crop of wheat, and you had better come in before that job before this month. August 31st is closing date for this insurance deal.

Hutsell has a way of explaining this insurance program makes everyone—even the wheat grower—want to take in on his crop. If you have not listened to Hutsell's speech, you are missing something. Come and see him sometime!

Compliance
The boys in the fields are about checking the farms with the insurance. In the ordeal they might miss in some one whose farm should have been checked. If they have not checked your farm by the time you do a little checking on your own. They might have over-looked you.

rapidly as the planimeter figures out your acreage. You will be mailed a card letting you know how you're doing. Cards will be mailed to every one whether or not you show any over-planting.

Subsidy Sign Up
You have been trying to get our subsidy papers signed up for the last two weeks. About 500 have been signed up but there are still some who haven't signed. We mail cards to every one, but the response hasn't been good. If you have not signed the last year and you have not signed up for payment in the last 10 days you had better get up there or there won't be any payment for you.

Trench Silos
A bit of interest is being shown in trench silos this summer. You have a feed crop in sight should be giving serious consideration to this silo business too. The best way to store feed for a definite time.

keeps better and makes a feed in a trench silo. Its green pasture when you feed silage. Talk to the boys who know. They'll tell you that you can't go wrong with a good trench silo. The dairyman a trench silo is like a spring in the desert.

LUCKY FOLKS
Quality Cleaners gave a $10 in cleaning work Saturday on their opening day. They were won by T. D. Wallace, Joe Ed Burleson, second; Thomas Olive, third.

at year Jo Ed won a free at Whitesides, and Thomas won a ten dollar cash prize in the Briscoe County Luck. The people have all the luck. We have hundred and twenty-six registered for the drawing before closing time, well over people visited the new place.

Overturned—None Hurt
Chevrolet car driven by John was overturned in Silverton Tuesday night on a wild joy on Highway 86 within the limits. No one was injured.

according to reports, the car whipped directly around in highway, while traveling at speed of better than 60 miles an hour. Young Frey, a newcomer in town, should be commended for his driving ability, which saved him to whom over the car. No more serious results than that fender, notwithstanding the fact that several other young people were in the car with him, ending their lives to his judgment, which was automatically to be a minus quantity.

BOYS ARE WORKING OUT FOR FOOTBALL EVERY DAY

Twenty suits were issued Wednesday night to Silverton football players, and the boys are hard at it every day. The practice schedule is from 9:00 A. M. to 11:00 A. M.; and from 4:00 P. M. until 6:00 P. M.

Beginning Monday, the boys should come prepared to stay all week. If possible bring a cot or a bed roll, according to Coach Durham. Meals will be provided at the Home Economics building. The first game will be a non-conference game if possible, and will be staged on the 16th of September.

THE RENTRO RE-UNION

On August 12, 13, 14 the Rentro family were entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Malone, who held the Rentro reunion for the third time. Those members of the Rentro family present were: Mr. Ross Rentro of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Vernal Rentro and family of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Smith and family of Brownfield; Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Carver and family of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Will Rentro of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rue and family of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Rentro of Clayton, New Mexico; Mr. Dennis Rentro of Crossroads, New Mexico; Mrs. Jenny Rentro of Tullia and her sister, Mrs. Lillian Johnson, of Weatherford. Master Ted Greenfield of Brownfield came up with Mr. Dennis Rentro for the re-union.

Other guests who came in for dinner or for visits with the Rentros were: Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Gill and family; Mr. and H. C. Gill; Mr. and Mrs. Chick Northcutt and family of Silverton; Mrs. Fannie May; and Mr. Bernice May.

The members of the family and other guests enjoyed a number of meals of an abundance of ham, fried chicken, watermelons, etc. They spent part of the time playing bridge and other games. The young people enjoyed trips and swims on the Tule Canyon.

The members of the Rentro family left for their respective homes Sunday afternoon, August 14.

BEATING FATE

In the Salon of the famous Art Gallery in Paris, is to be seen the painting "William the Conqueror." If you have never seen it the immediately suggests some of the things which would naturally go with the "Conqueror." But is this victory? The boast of Heraldry, the pomp of power; regal robes and the golden cords of military eminence, with other Kings made vassals and the spoils of far-flung battlefields spread out before you? The world may call it such, but is it true? But this is not the painting we are looking at just now. King William is not sitting on a throne. He is dead upon a bed. His servants, who but a moment before trembled at his words, are now running to obey his commands, are rifling his wardrobe and spoiling his treasure chests. Conqueror indeed: What boots it all. What though a man conquer the whole world if that is all he has conquered. Death comes and snatches every such victory away. There is one kind of victory of which this grim visitor cannot rob you. It is the victory over self. This will be the thought in the Presbyterian Church next Sunday morning. Come and worship with us.

Crop Insurance

August 31 is Deadline To Apply For 1939 Insurance

Midnight, August 31, is the deadline. At that hour will close, for this season, the opportunity to obtain the new, all-risk insurance on wheat to be harvested in 1939.

Because seeding (especially in localities which use wheat partly for winter pasture) will be starting soon and the policies of this new insurance become effective as soon as the seed is in the ground, this limit seemed necessary to give the service office at Kansas City in time to send out the premium notices, get back the payments and put out the policies before seeding begins. Accordingly, August 31 was fixed as the last day on which County Crop Insurance Supervisors may receive these applications. The announcement was made August 9, by the Federal Crop Insurance Service.

Clyde Hutsell, the Crop Insurance Supervisor for our county, in giving the foregoing information to this paper, tells us that he will keep open until midnight, on Wednesday, August 31, if necessary, his office in the County Agent's office. His telephone number is 54. Mr. Hutsell tells us that up to August 11, "about 75,000 applications had reached the County Supervisors in the Winter Wheat states. How fast applications have come in since then, I do not know," he says, "but the gain in rate has been quite rapid."

The first policy was issued July 15. For the two weeks following July 15, the rate at which applications reached the Kansas City branch, that serves this territory, was over two and one half times as fast as for the week ending July 15. For the third week, it was almost four times as fast, and for the fourth week, ending August 12, it was 7.8 times as fast. At that time Ohio was far in the lead in number of applications, with Nebraska, Michigan and Kansas following, in that order. For number of acres of the 1939 wheat crop actually insured, the Texas wheat region (which obtained the first FCIC policy issued and farms in a big way) was close to the top.

"While this new, all-risk insurance is, in a way, a part of the general program in which the farmers of this country are co-operating, through the services of our ACP Committee of farmers. This is not, in any sense, mutual insurance. The full cost of a policy is definitely figured beforehand and there can be no additional charges or assessments. When an applicant gets his premium notice, it tells the exact amount of Ordinary No. 2 Hard Winter Wheat necessary to pay for his policy. It also gives the equivalent in two other grades and in cash, so that he has four options—can pay in cash, or his choice of three grades of wheat. He can even pay now, in wheat, his premium for insurance on the 1940 crop.

"This is the only crop insurance," our Supervisor explains, "the cost of which is based on actual production and loss information compiled by counties and by farms. Thus, through a period of better seasons, better farming and use of better seed, it is possible for a community to lower its risk rate. By a nation-wide system of handling the wheat, which represents premiums paid, and constitutes its reserve, from which

IMMUNIZATION NOW POSSIBLE FOR DIPHTHERIA

"Few conquests of science have been so spectacular and complete as those relating to diphtheria. Science has firmly established the value of serum treatment in both its preventative and curative phases. However, toxin-antitoxin or its successor toxoid for immunization and antitoxin for cure, are serums of which the general public is even yet not fully aware," said Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"As indicated, toxoid is the immunizing or preventive agent now usually employed. However, three or four months are required for the body to develop immunity. At that time the test can be applied to determine the results of the preventive treatment.

"Children should receive diphtheria immunization as early as possible, preferably as soon as they are six months old. The necessity for this immunization is recognized when it is known that two-thirds of all deaths from diphtheria occur in the age group under six years.

"It cannot be too strongly emphasized that to deprive children of this protection science has made possible is to subject them to unwarranted and unnecessary hazards that can easily turn into a tragedy. Parental interest in immunization must be more widespread, if the Texas death rate from this disease is to be decreased from the 1937 total of 257.

"When a child has been taken ill with diphtheria, antitoxin is the only treatment that will save its life. Also, to be effective, it must be given early in the illness and in large doses. Delay is usually caused by parents failing to realize that any sore throat may actually be diphtheria.

4-H Club Trip

By Arlon Merrill

While we were taking a little rest from our farm work and our club demonstrations we club boys decided to see what made the rest of the world go round.

Starting off with a 3 day chab encampment at Silver Falls Lake in Crosby County we turned west for a spell. At Silver Falls Lake there were about 200 club boys and sponsors. Three days and two nights were spent swimming, skating, boxing, ball playing, eating and a little sleep.

During the three days stay in Crosby County we enjoyed talks and picture shows on wild life conservation. We also had the pleasure of studying specimen of many species of wild animals and birds of Texas.

The district club meeting broke up Wednesday after the noonday meal. Then was when the Briscoe County aggregation "headed west". Led by the Antelope Flat 4-H club and sponsor, the Briscoe County bunch took to the road.

Carlsbad Cavern was our first objective—We had to spend the night in Hobbs, New Mexico on account of it's further from Crosbyton to Carlsbad than our "hoopie" could make before dark. We pitched our camp just west of Hobbs that first night. On trips like this we boys know that mama isn't along to cook, wash dishes and make the beds so we all pitch in and do our parts. This cooking, and sleeping out is the great life—it makes you appreciate home when you get back.

Bright and early the second day out we broke camp and headed for the caverns— Gee what a hole! Our trip thru the Cavern was packed with excitement. unbelievable beauties that nature has built makes one realize just how great God is. That long trek thru those gapping caverns; lunch 700 feet under ground; the pause for "Rock of Ages" all made us appreciate the greatness of the God of this universe. My attempt here to describe the beauty of Carlsbad Caverns would be a flop. All I can say is that you have to see it for yourself before you can appreciate it.

When we came up out of the Caverns we were itchy to travel again. We took off for El Paso and Jaurez, Mexico. We traveled about 100 miles after leaving the cavern before camping time. This 100 miles lead us thru rolling country, high mountains and salt flats.

It didn't take us close to any drinking water nor anything good to eat either. We found that folks out in that country wouldn't sell but one loaf of bread to a party of travelers. Guess they were afraid to sell too much to a customer because they'd soon sell out.

We pitched our tents somewhere on the wide open spaces between El Paso and Carlsbad for our second night's rest. An early start the third day put us into El Paso kinda early. We enjoyed the irrigated valleys in the El Paso country—seeing crops that had never suffered for water was a sight good for any Briscoe County boy.

We found out where the expression "for two cents" originated. For 2 cents they let us walk across the bridge from El Paso to Jaurez. Say! Boys! this city of Jaurez, may be OK for the Mexicans, but I'll take mine in the U. S. A. any day. We visited the easy to stop

It's mighty
AND it's mighty easy to cook electrically, too—because there is no other method of cooking that has controlled heat. Controlled temperature and time makes cooking a joy.

No pot watching... no oven peeping... no burning or scorching of foods. Instead, foods are cooked automatically—and that saves you time, money and effort and gives you complete freedom to do the things you want.

For the balance of August a special offer is being made on all electric ranges. We cordially invite you to visit our office and see how easy it is to "step up to electric cookery."

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"The Furred Terror"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Orville E. Gibbs of Jackson Heights, N. Y., is today's Distinguished Adventurer, and the tale he tells is one that will make the hair creep up the back of your neck. It's a yarn that reminds me of the gladiatorial arenas of Rome where they used to throw Christians to the wolves and pit men in deadly combat against Numidian lions and bears from the German forests.

But it was neither a lion nor a wolf, nor a bear that brought this package of thrills to Orville Gibbs, and instead of a Roman arena, he fought it out in the living room of his own house.

I don't know how it was in Roman times, but nowadays adventures, like Charity, almost always begin at home.

All his life, Orville Gibbs has been thrown into intimate contact with wild animals. He ran away as a boy to join a circus, started as a water carrier for the elephants and worked his way up until he was a full-fledged trainer handling all sorts and species of wild beasts. From the circus he drifted to Hollywood and helped direct animal films. While he was there he was given several monkeys which he kept in cages in back of his house. He trained these monkeys, and they're still there, taken care of by his father. None of them ever gave any trouble.

Jack Was a Bright Monkey.

But there's always an exception. Orville moved East, then went to South America, bought another bunch of monkeys and shipped them to his home in New Rochelle, N. Y. He and his wife started to train the whole bunch, but one of them—Jack—was brighter than the others. Orville concentrated on him. He would bring him into the house and have all sorts of fun with him. But Orville's wife kept away from that monk. He had bitten at her arm several times.

One evening Orville brought Jack into the house. He had him on his lap, playing with him in the usual manner when suddenly, without warning, Jack emitted a ferocious screech and leaped for Orville's throat. And that was the beginning of as horrible a battle as any Roman arena ever saw.

"As he came for me," says Orville, "I threw my right arm to ward him off. Jack's teeth snapped shut, and he broke practically every bone in my hand. The hand started bleeding as if an artery had been severed. I was so stunned that I could do little but shove him away, and at that he made another screech and leaped again.

It Looked Bad for Orville.

"I threw up my left arm. He crunched it at the wrist, piercing the skin and breaking several bones. Then I leaped to my feet, just as he jumped at me again. I was dressed in riding clothes, and the heavy boots stood me in good stead. I kicked at him savagely and it stopped him for a moment, but he bit clear through the boots several times."

That was just the start of a terrible fracas—and a mighty bad start for Orville. "There I was," he says, "cornered by a wild monkey, weighing thirty-two pounds—screeching horribly—and leaping from chair to chair to table trying to get at me. Whenever he thought he had me he leaped at my throat, and here I was, my hands useless, bleeding like a stuck pig, and growing weaker every minute."

Orville's wife had run from the room. He shouted to her to pass him his rifle and cautiously she broke a pane from one of the french doors and pushed the weapon through. "To my horror," says Orville, "I could not even pull the trigger. I passed the gun back through the broken pane to my wife telling her to cock it—all this time dodging several savage rushes and leaps. Finally the gun came through, cocked. I don't know to this day how I ever succeeded in aiming it and pulling the trigger, but if I had placed the gun to his head and fired I couldn't have made a more perfect shot—right between his eyes!"

He Shot the Maddened Beast.

Blood began to pour from the gaping hole in the monkey's head. But still, to Orville's horror, THE BEAST CAME ON AGAIN AND AGAIN! Frozen with terror he passed the gun out again for his wife to cock. And again Orville doesn't know how he ever managed to fire it. This time the bullet caught the animal right through the eye and down he went.

"And," says Orville, "down I went, too!"

"Orville's wife called the hospital. The ambulance came, and the orderlies found him lying on the floor covered with blood. Orville's own doctor rushed to the hospital. "And," says Orville, "he didn't have his glasses with him. While I lay groaning and bleeding, they sent back for the glasses. They gave me morphine and more morphine. By the time the glasses did come the doc told me that I was so well doped up that I might as well go on the operating table without an anesthetic."

Orville told him to go ahead. It took them exactly one hour and a half and forty-eight stitches to sew up the holes that animal had made. After that came Pasteur injections. His hands were reopened and the bones reset. "And now," he says, "I'm back to work with a stiff right thumb and a pair of hands and wrists that will be weak for some time to come."

And nowadays, Orville has a motto. No more monkeys! Copyright.—WNU Service.

Venetian Glass Is Delicate

Venetian glass has always been famous for its exquisite delicacy and ornamentation. It was not made for cutting though it was sometimes engraved. Form rather than decoration interested the Venetian craftsmen. They delighted in fantastic forms, thin and light as air almost. The glass is never as clear as the modern. Pale tints of color were often used in such pieces as goblets and vases with deeper colored spirals. One of the most exquisite pieces made in the Fifteenth century was the tazze. The tazze had a lovely elaborate stem, rather tall and ornamented with spun glass wings, lacework, and a bowl that was rather like a flat saucer.

Tonnage of Vessel

The number of cubic feet within the skin of a vessel divided by 100 is the gross registered tonnage. From this figure certain allowances are made for nonrevenue space, such as engine rooms, crews' quarters, and areas exposed to the weather.

Germany Miscalculated

Germany made no greater mistake in its history than she did in 1914 at the outbreak of the war in reference to Britain fighting. First Germany believed that a large part of the British army would have to be in Ireland to keep order there. Berlin was also counting on the spread of serious labor trouble keeping England busy in its own land. Even the militant suffragist agitation was counted on to keep Britain out of the war, this last giving the Germans to believe that England was hopelessly decadent for, according to Prussian ideas of women, any country that allowed women so much rights, even the right to agitate, was a decadent country.

Ghost-Dance Religion Lives

Klamath, Calif., is the last stronghold of the ghost-dance religion formulated by the Indian "dream prophet" Smohalla. The Klamath Indian congregation is known as the "Shakers," but it has no connection with the well-known American sect of Shakers.

As to Knitting a Chic Fall Sweater

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S time to knit! Or do you happen to be a crocheter instead of a knitter? Either way you do it, it's time to make one of the perfectly charming sweaters here pictured.

We'll wager that at sight of these ultra chic and fascinating sweater fashions your fingers will begin to tingle, your heart action quicken as a sudden urge sweeps over you to clickety click those knitting needles of yours faster than they ever elicited before. Or, if perchance, it's a crocheted needle you yield, we've an idea it's going to go at rapid pace to complete a "darling" sweater like the crocheted model shown above to the right in the illustration, for of course you will be wanting to have it ready to wear with the new fall suit. The other two sweaters in the picture are knitted.

We agree with you, this trio of hand-made sweaters certainly have a chic and charm about them that is far beyond the ordinary. Not that there is anything complicated about the knitting and crocheting of them, for each of the models is really very simple to make.

"Sweaters this year," comes word from Paris, "will be new because of their departure from the conventional." Short, just over the hipbone is the foreword that reaches us in regard to the new fall sweaters. Many are slide fastened for most everything is being zipped among the new fashions that can be zipped. The majority of new sweaters have low necks.

The band-and-bow trim that gives such dainty feminine detail to the sweater pictured above to the right in the group is definitely new. It affords a grand opportunity to carry out a two-color scheme which is something to take note of, considering that bicolor treatments are highly important in the current stylizing program. The three bands of contrasting color are fastened with bows made of tufts of fringed of the identical mercerized

crochet cotton used to make the sweater. You'll love this band-and-bow trimming the more you wear your sweater.

The jacket-like sweater blouse above to the left has that air of sophisticated simplicity about it that every woman versed in the art of smart costuming covets. It is knit of knit-cotton in an open-work stitch interspersed with solid blocks that gives a sort of plaid effect. This sweater is the type that looks just as well when you remove your jacket as it does with the jacket on. Make it up in one of the lovely new muted colors and you will find it an indispensable and flattering accessory. The square neck line is a high-style feature. So also are the crochet buttons up the front. Most fashion reports have much to say in regard to the flair for buttons running to larger rather than small this season.

With word emanating from Paris that "it's a year for sweaters in versatile styles," cardigans get headline attention. Variety in cardigan styles is the new mandate, but it must be "variety without fussiness." A cardigan type that embodies all of Paris' sweater dictates is the short-sleeved one shown below. It is knit and crocheted of lustrous mercerized cotton. Work it up in a contrast of your two favorite colors.

SUMMER ERMINE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

College girl, here's your cue to smartness in dress this fall. Which is to the effect that the sweater and the cloth skirt in accurate color match is a fashion "must" this coming season. So there's lots of fun ahead matching a sweater knit of shetland, cashmere or angora wool to the skirt of patterned tweed, or if you prefer, a monotone wool of plain or novelty weave. Your choice runs from rich dark autumn tones to the new-so-fashionable pastel colors.

Then there are those amazing three-piece ensembles that employ the identical yarn employed in knitting the sweater, as is used for weaving the cloth for jacket and skirt. There's no-end chic in the costumes of cloth that have short fur jackets with sleeves and borders, knit of yarn in colors that tune to the scheme of colors.

Cerise is a new step on the ladder of pinks. A pleasant variation of the more purplish fuchsia shade, the cerise is used by Lelong for a flowing sash tunic, around a deep blue evening gown with a halter neck.

Moldy Colors. Moldy colors are being proudly displayed at the moment as being high style.

Adding Bright Touch. Flowers on the bodice of an evening frock matched by flowers in the hair supply all the decoration that one could want for festive occasions.

Brushed-Up Coiffures Now. Go With Doll-Sized Hats. It seems as if the idea of brushed-up hair is gaining, whether we like it or no. At any rate buyers returning from midsummer trips report that they will show the new tiny doll-sized hats launched by Schiaparelli, worn atop higher hair-dress that brings curls up off the ears. It remains to be seen how well the fashion will "take." You never can tell, fickle fashion, fickle public are apt to go to any extreme.

...it is not always true that the wickedness of a son is the result of weakness in the father, nor is it always the case that weak fathers have vile sons. Often the sons live far better lives than their fathers, and frequently a godly and faithful father suffers the heartbreak of having a wayward son. But usually "like father, like son" is true. Boys learn from their fathers—not so much by words of admonition, as by deeds. Let us tell our boys how to live by first living a consistent Christian life, and then lovingly but insistently requiring of them during their days of irresponsibility conformity to the standards of God. We need to build moral fiber into American youth of our country if it is not to fall into the decadence of the civilizations of the past.

...I. A Weak Father and Vile Sons (3:13).

...the sons of Eli were wicked men who dared even to use the service of the temple for the gratification of fleshly appetites and lusts. (See 2:12-17, 22.) Eli protested against their most flagrant sin (2:23, 24), but evidently he had lost his influence over them, for they did not hearken to him.

...II. Judgment—Personal and National (3:12, 14, 4:17).

...Sin brings a horrible harvest of sorrow, suffering, and judgment, not only to the individual but to his family, and ultimately to the nation. No man can ever divorce himself from his relationship to his family. His people will suffer for his waywardness, perhaps more than he suffers himself. The nation is made up of homes, and consequently when the family suffers the nation will suffer too.

...There is a strange theory current that social and political entities have an existence apart from the people who make them up, that our people can drink and gamble and steal and kill, and yet somehow we will still be the "land of the free and the home of the brave." America is what the families in your community and mine are, and our families are what we are. May God help us to be better fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters.

...III. Responsibility and Opportunity

...This division of our lesson is drawn from no special portion of the Scripture lesson, but is presented to place squarely before us the fact that we (and we are speaking specifically to fathers) have a plain and inescapable responsibility for our family life, as well as to emphasize the fact that this is not a responsibility of which we should be afraid. It is God's gift of a glorious opportunity.

...Eli was a personal success as a priest. He had many commendable qualities, not the least of which was his gracious recognition of the ministry of Samuel, who had grown up in his presence and yet who was recognized by Eli as the messenger of God. (Compare Mark 6:4 and I Tim. 4:12.) But he missed life's greatest opportunity by losing his own boys. Sad to say, many a father has followed him, yes, even we are sorely tempted to make our business (and it may be the "business" of the Lord) the thing of primary concern, and let our children fit in where they may, or not at all.

...Let us look on the brighter side in closing our study and recall the inspiring contribution that has been made to our national life, to our spiritual life and our social advancement by those who have come out of the most humble of homes, with the most meager worldly advantages—physically, morally, and spiritually stalwart—which have been nurtured in a true Christian home. It pays, not only for the person and for the family, but also for the nation, to have Christian fathers.

Lesson for August 28
ELI: RESPONSIBILITY FOR OTHERS

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 3:11-14; 4:12-18. GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go. Proverbs 22:6a.

The responsibilities and privileges of fatherhood need special emphasis, and the lesson of today gives excellent opportunity for such consideration. Too often the rearing of children, which is almost inevitably largely in the hands of the mother, is entirely delegated to her, and the father becomes the man who pays the bills, occasionally carries out a severe act of discipline, but otherwise is almost a stranger to his children.

Girls as well as boys appreciate and respond to the loving and understanding fellowship of a father who really improves the opportunity to build himself into the lives of his children.

Eli is a striking illustration of a man who had attained an honorable position in life and who had discharged his public duties with success, but who failed his own boys, because of weak indulgence. Not a few Christian workers have followed in Eli's path. May God give us grace to avoid it!

I. A Weak Father and Vile Sons (3:13).

The sons of Eli were wicked men who dared even to use the service of the temple for the gratification of fleshly appetites and lusts. (See 2:12-17, 22.) Eli protested against their most flagrant sin (2:23, 24), but evidently he had lost his influence over them, for they did not hearken to him.

It is not always true that the wickedness of a son is the result of weakness in the father, nor is it always the case that weak fathers have vile sons. Often the sons live far better lives than their fathers, and frequently a godly and faithful father suffers the heartbreak of having a wayward son. But usually "like father, like son" is true. Boys learn from their fathers—not so much by words of admonition, as by deeds. C. Houston Goudiss Explains the Causes of Food Allergy

Well-Known Food Authority Names the Foods That Cause Trouble

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City.

A new phrase has crept into daily usage in recent years, and has in fact become so common that comedians use it in jest and draw laughs from their audiences when they mimic, "I'm allergic!" But the words have deep significance for perhaps 30 to 60 per cent of the population who have caused to agree with the old saying that "one man's meat is another man's poison."

They are victims of the curious phenomenon known as food allergy and have an abnormal reaction to the proteins in certain foods and other substances. As a result, foods which are beneficial in themselves and which usually have an important place in a normal balanced diet, cause a variety of unpleasant effects.

These may range from hives or a skin rash to a gastric disturbance with spells of nausea. The individual may suffer from migraine headache or an attack of hay fever or asthma; or he may have a tendency to what appears to be bronchial or head colds.

It has been determined that these symptoms in an individual who is allergic are due to intolerance of certain proteins. Even when the offending foods are fruits and vegetables, it is the protein that is responsible. It has been suggested that the sensitization results because at some previous time, an unsplit or undigested protein in some way passed through the membranes lining the digestive tract and entered the blood stream. This acted very much like a foreign substance and sensitized body cells in some way so that whenever the same food is eaten, the disturbing symptoms occur as a sort of defense mechanism.

Other Offending Substances. Foods are not always responsible for allergy, and the symptoms may be produced by contact with wool, feathers, dust, pollen, dander from horses or other animals; or even the sting of a bee.

Discovering the Offenders. The ideal procedure for the allergy victim is to find out the offending foods or substances and avoid them. For early recognition of a tendency to allergy may prevent discomfort and trouble.

There are two ways to discover the trouble makers. One is to learn by experience, either by keeping a record of the foods eaten and noting the appearance of symptoms, or by eliminating from the diet, first one and then another of the foods that are suspected of causing difficulty. The other is to let your doctor conduct simple skin tests. Small scratches are made on the arms and legs, and each scratch touched with a solution made of the protein of a food or substance known to cause trouble. If a person is allergic to that substance, the skin around the scratch swells and becomes inflamed. The inflammation disappears after a few hours and causes no pain or inconvenience.

Other Foods Must Be Used. Once the offending food or foods are determined, they should be eliminated either for all time or until the individual becomes desensitized. If the trouble maker is an uncommon food, such as lobster or clams, the allergy presents no great problem, but when children react to necessary foods such as milk, eggs and wheat, the homemaker faces a difficult task.

When milk is the offending food, it must be avoided, not only as a beverage, but in bread, cakes and puddings. Sometimes dried or evaporated milk, goat's milk or soy bean milk may be used instead. When wheat is the trouble maker, the alternatives include cornstarch, rice flour, potato or rye flour; rice and corn cereals; tapioca or barley. When hen's eggs are injurious, duck's eggs can sometimes be used with success, or meat or fish may be substituted.

Sometimes after a period of exclusion, an immunity is built up

C. Houston Goudiss will gladly send you, FREE, a chart showing which foods have been found most frequently to cause allergic reactions, and also those which are the least likely to cause trouble. So that later the foods may be reintroduced gradually into the diet. Don't Jump to Conclusions. It must be borne in mind that many of the symptoms produced by food sensitivity may also result from other causes. For this reason, it is unwise to decide that one is allergic without due investigation. Nor must the imagination or the current widespread discussion of the subject be allowed to cause adults or children to mask their unwillingness to eat certain foods with the false notion that they are unduly sensitive.

On the other hand, homemakers should be sympathetic with both children and adults who eat with good cause, "I can't eat that!" And it would appear that there may even be some compensation in this unpleasant situation. For a group of scientists who have studied the subject announced a few years ago that those who belong to the allergy group appear to have a definite capacity for becoming intellectually superior.

Thus, the child who suffers from a skin rash or stuffy nose today, due to food sensitivity, is apt to be full of energy when he reaches manhood and exhibit unusual ability for cultural leadership.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. F. J.—The caloric value of fresh or canned mushrooms is very slight, as their carbohydrate is in a form that cannot be readily assimilated. They are useful, however, for adding flavor and appetite appeal to many dishes.

Mrs. A. M. T.—The notion that onions or lettuce contain opium or some other narcotic drug is wholly without foundation. They are two of our finest vegetables.

R. F. B.—Vitamins A, C and D are required for healthy teeth. Calcium, in adequate amounts, is also essential.

Entered as second-class mail matter at the post office at Silvertown, Texas in accordance with an act of Congress on March 3, 1879.

Yesterday is yours no longer: To-morrow may never be yours: To-day is yours: And in the living present you may stretch forth to the things that are before.

I HEREBY RESOLVE—that this line shall remain in the Briscoe County News until our city managers start a little constructive work toward surfacing our streets, or at least until the death of Yours True'y. Dated this 9th day of June, 1938. (I've been wanting to know for a long time, how long a linotype slug will last.)

YOURS TRULY WAS one of 23,314 Texas drivers who was warned by Texas Highway patrolmen during July that he was doing some illegal driving. The cause of complaint was "no tail light". The warning was appreciated and needless to say has been remedied.

TEXAS HIGHWAY accidents are on the decrease. And a large reason for it is just such little incidents as the one that happened to me. The highway patrolmen are very courteous. They merely want to know if you knew that that you are violating highway rules, ask you to have the trouble remedied, and gently hint that they hope that it will not occur again. Highway fatalities in Texas decreased the first seven months of the year by 14.5 percent, according to state report. More power to highway patrolmen—we need them.

SAM BISHOP, IS NOT only a miller but an inventor. He has a machine down at the mill now for cleaning and treating seed wheat. It looks like a combination between a threshing machine and a periscope. Little belts run around over the machine like a married man loose in a night club. BUT, she does the work, says Sam, and it's ready to work right now.

TALK ABOUT DOCTOR Jekyl and Mr. Hyde - - - I saw the dark side of H. Roy Brown's life the other day. He said that he had been out trying to collect and instead had paid out more than he collected. And was he ill. The more he told about it the siller he got. Finally he jumped up, pulled his glasses out of his pocket and jumped on them and cried, "And here goes another $22.00." (Now a lot of you folks wouldn't think that he had a temper like that would you? Well, if you don't believe it just ask him if he didn't break 'em. Of course the details of the affair might be just a little wrong.)

THE SILVERTON FIRE boys have offered to build a lighted football field, to be operated on a percentage basis with the high school. They are offering a very good deal to the school I think. Whether it goes through depends upon the school board and city officials. We'll have the story of it in next week's paper.

UNLESS THE FIELD can be built here, we might as well kiss football goodbye. Afternoon football loses money. And the school itself is in no financial shape to make up the losses.

FROM A REPORT received here this week from thirty schools that lighted fields last year, we find that gate receipts increased from 100 per cent to as high as 750 percent, over daytime football. Let's have football—but let's make it pay for itself.

a lake about ten miles west of Oklahoma City and took some pictures. We went out to the Capitol Building and took some more pictures. There are oil wells all around the capitol building. We spent our first night in Okenah, Oklahoma. We pitched our camp on a baseball diamond near second base.

We resumed our travels about eight o'clock Saturday morning and crossed the Arkansas River into Arkansas at Fort Smith about 11:00 o'clock in the morning.

We proceeded leisurely(?) on to Van Buren, the home of Bob Burns—and oh, boy, they really let you know that it was his home. I think they have made him everything there from Honorary Mayor (I said honorary, not onery) to street cleaner.

From there we went on to Little Rock. It is really a pretty town—they have about the prettiest scenery there we have seen so far on our trip. We visited the capitol there and took several pictures.

We saw some of the tallest cotton east of Little Rock that any of us have ever seen. We saw an airplane spraying cotton with some kind of spray or chemicals to kill bugs. It looked like they were laying a smoke screen. We crossed the Illinois River somewhere near Little Rock (I think) and ate supper Saturday night on the banks of White River near De Valls Bluff, Arkansas about seventy miles from the Tennessee line.

About all there is to see between Little Rock and Memphis is negroes, river, swamp, marshes and cotton patches, but there is really plenty of them. I never saw so many negroes before or since. In Little Rock we visited the largest filling station in the world and believe you me, it is plenty big. It is about six or seven stories in height and covers an entire block. It has gasoline pump all around it.

We spent Saturday night in Arkansas about thirty miles from Memphis.

We crossed the Mississippi into Tennessee Sunday morning. Boy, I tell you it is really big and so is Memphis.

We are spending tonight (Sunday) at the Natural Bridge near Waynesboro, Tenn., about 150 miles west of Chattanooga. It is, I believe, the prettiest and most picturesque spot we have seen.

Sincerely, James Allred, Jack Burleson, and Arnold Brown.

THIS TAVERN OBSERVES THE LAWS

When you drink Beer in a tavern . . . choose your tavern

WHEN YOU restrict your patronage to legal, respectable retail outlets, you not only encourage those better outlets but you've made a start toward driving out the bad spots in your community.

And that is exactly the aim of the great body of honest retailers of beer who, along with the brewers, recognize that Beer's only problem is to remove the anti-social conditions that sometimes surround its sale. Existing laws can curb these evils. Help us by demanding their strict enforcement! Sales to minors, or after legal hours...or use of a beer license as a screen, for selling illicit liquor or for operating an illicit resort...all these are violations of the law and should be stopped. Public opinion, once aroused, can see that such practices are stopped!

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Many years ago, this writer, quite unintentionally, aided in making Dr. Ben Reitman of Chicago the first king of the hobo...

Bindle Pete Seeks Hobo King's Head

For some reason or other, my name got on the hobo mailing list as a "jungle judge" or "shack" or something, and, from time to time, there comes fraternal greetings, campaign literature or news of the order. The latest, from one "Bindle Pete," is quite violently prejudiced against Jeff Davis, the present king, and says he is to be deposed because he rode to Europe on the Queen Mary and because he has been working at Hollywood, helping coach the directors in studies of hobo still-life.

This department has been quite indifferent to the hard luck of kings in recent decades, but it would seem too bad if King Jeff Davis were de-throned. He has been a likeable monarch, bald and genial and diligent (perhaps that's the trouble) in the interests of his kingdom, and not making any trouble for anybody.

His father, James Davis, was a journeyman of newspaper mechanical trades in Cincinnati, and young Jeff took to the road at the age of 13, covering more than 1,000,000 miles in his subsequent 40 years of rambling. He assails radicalism in the hobo brotherhood and says he will keep it 100 per cent American. He made more than 2,000 speeches on Americanism during the World war.

How could a hobo ride these slick new chromium trains with the catfish faces? King Jeff probably is working on that.

WHEN she was bad, she was very, very good, and when she was good she was horrid. Not exactly, but in a rough general way, that was the story of Bette Davis.

Bette in Scarlett Marathon

Scarlett O'Hara, as not their type, Bette Davis may take her on. Early in her career, Miss Davis played charming hellions with great effectiveness and didn't seem to mind.

She was Ruth Elizabeth Davis, a Massachusetts school girl, changing her name to "Bette" at the age of 12 in preparation for her stage career. She later changed her hair—it is brown—and her general make-up. Entrance to the theater came easily, after a course in a dramatic school. She went to Hollywood in 1932. Her first play, "Broken Dishes," brought few cheers, but, with coaching by George Arliss and better casting, she hit the up-grade.

Trying a break-away from Warners in London in 1936, a ruthless British court condemned her to continued servitude at a top salary. She is one of the few actresses who like unsympathetic roles and she plays them well.

UNTIL recently Franz Lehár was living in Vienna. The news that he is rewriting "The Merry Widow" makes one wonder whether he finds Vienna still merry—whether young writers still write their plays in the cafes along the Kurfurststrasse, as he did in 1905.

Lehar Now Rewriting Merry Widow

The world has waited along quite a way in the interval between the original and rewritten versions. Herr Lehár got $300,000 from his overwhelming New York success in 1907. He waltzed it all right into the stock market and bade it good-by. He returned to his native Budapest, lost another lump sum of $75,000 and then became a good business man. His thirty or more operettas, five of which have been produced here, have made him rich.

He is, or was a member of the Vienna Rotary club, attending luncheons faithfully, singing club adaptations of old tunes, wearing a two-inch button with his name on it and engaging in friendly back-slapping—big and gregarious, 68 years old, with his lush mustache touched with gray. He was a "knapsack child," as he put it, the son of a wandering musician. He was a child violinist. Dvorak persuaded him to hang up his fiddle and take to composing.

Rats Conquer at Airfield

Officials were astonished when at an airfield near Karachi they saw even stationary planes sink into the earth. Investigation disclosed that thousands of rats had tunneled under the ground. Poison was spread to kill the rodents, but with little effect. Gassing, firing, trapping and all other modern devices were employed against them, but without success. At last, says the London Daily Express, the authorities, exasperated, gave in. Now the rats are in full charge of the airfield.

Weekly News Review House Un-Americanism Body Probes Hollywood Communism

By Joseph W. LaBine

A. F. OF L'S JOHN FREY, INVESTIGATOR DIES They were obliged to discuss John Lewis.

Domestic

Last year Chicago Times Reporter John Metcalfe joined Fritz Kuhn's German-American Bund, traveled 20,000 miles attending Bund meetings, then resigned to write a startling expose for his paper. Direct result was a $25,000 house committee on un-American activities, which met last week under Texas' Martin Dies. After three days of probing, un-Americanism reared its colorful head everywhere from C. I. O. headquarters to glamorous Hollywood.

Ex-Bundsman Metcalfe told how Fritz Kuhn organized 500,000 German-Americans under instructions from Adolf Hitler, how in return Kuhn was given a whip hand over Germany's ambassador to the U. S. He told of Chicago's "Silver Shirts," organized to smash Communism.

Ex-Bundsman Peter Gissibl told how Nazi spies consorted with German-Americans, how the Red Star line "fixed it" so spies could slip back home when they got in trouble. But it was American Federation of Labor's John P. Frey who tossed in the biggest bombshell and caused C. I. O.'s John L. Lewis to snort with rage.

Nazism is one thing, but Metal Tradesman Frey promised to identify "several national C. I. O. officers" as Communists. Would he mention John Lewis? "How could I avoid it!" replied Mr. Frey.

The Frey disclosures had barely started before Committee Investigator Edward Sullivan hurried into Washington from California, anxious to reveal how C. I. O.'s Harry Bridges, America's most famous alien, "attended 'top fraction' meetings of the Communist party and received aid from officials of the U. S. labor department while patriotic citizens were trying to have him deported for his Communist activities."

Continued Investigator Sullivan: "Witnesses can be produced who can name the day when an official of the immigration service contacted Harry Bridges and called him to his office, where he read... a confidential letter of instructions on his future behavior, written by an outstanding official of the labor department."

That Communist Bridges is financed by Hollywood cinema stars was Mr. Sullivan's next charge. Armed with this evidence, supported by Unionist Frey whose accusations John Lewis seemed unwilling to answer, the Dies committee prepared to remain in Washington two more weeks. In New York they will pick up more tasty rumors, then move west across the nation to smell out Communism in a Hollywood.

Foreign

Many years ago Germany's great Bismarck fooled his opponents by telling the truth, knowing they would not believe. Last week, when Adolf Hitler called 500,000 reserves to the colors for war games with a million regular soldiers, all Europe became jittery. But in Berlin there was scoffing; if Germany planned anything but peaceful moves, she would have assembled her giant war machine secretly. Remembering Bismarck, answering too that secret mobilization on such a giant scale would be impossible, Berlin's nervous diplomatic corps sped the news back home to Paris, London and Prague. There, these things happened:

(1) In Prague, England's Lord Runciman has spent a fortnight mediating differences between loyal Czechs and their disgruntled fellow-countrymen, Sudeten Germans. Sudetens want autonomy, eventual annexation by Germany. Was it possible that Germany's mobilization foreshadowed a quick annexation move? As Premier Milan Hodza rejected a Sudeten demand for autonomy, all Czechoslovakia became worried and Lord Runciman wished he were back home.

(2) In Paris, where the government has also been having trouble with Mussolini, French frontiers

Last month Annie Lindsay Clark married Son John Roosevelt, who a fortnight ago took an $18-a-week job in the Boston department store of late Democrat Edward Filene. Last week Anne Roosevelt's sister, Sally, who has sung her way to nominal fame in a night club, said she would marry George Xavier McLanahan of New York.

Wed only two weeks to his telephone operator sweetheart from Gore Bay, Ont., 21-year-old Auto Heir Daniel C. Dodge was honeymooning on Manitoulin island off Lake Huron's Georgian bay. One afternoon as he rummaged around the garage with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bryant, a stick of dynamite exploded. Completely shattered was Dodge's left arm, his face torn, his eyes blinded. Rushed off by boat to a distant hospital by his badly injured friends, Dodge suffered excruciating agony. Finally he stood up, swayed, jumped into the water drowned. Next day Bryant was not expected to live.

Crime

One morning last fall, 18-year-old Paul Dwyer of South Paris, Me., was arrested in North Arlington, N. J. Stuffed in the trunk of his automobile was the corpse of James G. Littlefield, elderly country doctor. Stuffed in the back seat was that of Dr. Littlefield's wife. Paul Dwyer went to prison under life sentence for double murder. Then he changed his story. Said Dwyer:

Francis Carroll, a former deputy sheriff, had improper relations with his daughter, Barbara, Dwyer's sweetheart. When Dr. Littlefield learned of this, Carroll killed him. Later he killed the doctor's wife. Fear of Carroll caused Dwyer to admit both murders.

Last week these horrible accusations were settled. Francis Carroll was convicted, sent to prison for life. It appeared likely that sallow-faced Paul Dwyer would be pardoned, though he might still be charged with guilty knowledge of the slayings. Meanwhile Barbara Carroll received offers to appear in a Boston night club.

Aviation

Transatlantic commercial air supremacy has long since been willed by public consent to U. S. and Great Britain, though until last year neither nation did anything to justify the public's approval. A few weeks ago Nazi Germany sent its Nordwind, Nordstern and Nordmeer catapulting from the Azores to New York and back, placing a new supremacy in the race for Atlantic air supremacy. Last week Adolf Hitler's birdmen did something still better.

Non-stop from Berlin to New York in 24 hours, 56 minutes, came the 26-passenger Brandenburg. Two days later Brandenburg was again in Berlin, making her return trip in the record time of 19 hours, 55 minutes. No longer a secret is Hitler's ambition to make not London, not Paris, but Berlin the European starting point for transatlantic flights.

Down from the clouds east of Mexico City plummeted an airliner. First a crash, then flames, and 11 were dead. Down from fog-bound skies into Germany's Black forest came a Czechoslovak liner bound from Prague to Paris. Sixteen died. Down to their deaths off England's coast went six crew members of a royal air force flying boat, bringing to 126 the total fatalities in that service this year. Thus, in 12 hours, in Mexico, England and Germany, 33 lives were snuffed out.

Sports

When Broker J. Smith Ferebee played 144 holes of golf in Chicago last fortnight, it looked like a new marathon fad would start, rivaling marathon dancing, surpassing the toughest flagpole sitter. Last week at St. John, Ind., 23-year-old Charles Grant started playing golf at dawn. By 3 p. m. he had covered 162 holes, by sundown, 225. His worst 18-hole round: the tenth, scoring 81.

Miscellany

From San Francisco's Golden Gate exposition grounds last week came orders that publicity on the 1939 fair must show more fair buildings, fewer fair maidens. Result was a new bit of publicity, something fair officials had not expected. Up and down in front of the administration building paraded "the most beautiful picket line in America." Their placards: "We're out on a limb." "We want a leg-acy."

Last fortnight Britain's proud Queen Mary made a westward Atlantic passage in 3 days, 21 hours, 48 minutes, clipping better than an hour from the record of her rival, France's Normandie. Last week Queen Mary steamed east from New York, made the crossing in 3 days, 20 hours, 42 minutes, to beat another Normandie record. Said a proud officer: "This is the lion's turn to roar."

Last June 1 a big malamute dog went hunting with his master off Alaska's frozen Bering strait. Lingered off shore to gobble seal meat, the beast was carried to sea on an ice floe. Last week, more than two months later, the master again went hunting, this time with Father Bernard R. Hubbard, Alaskan missionary. On lonely Point Hope, 250 miles away, the dog bounded up. He had cruised the entire distance on a cake of ice, had thrived on seal meat.

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WASHINGTON.—Something like a year ago, quite a furor was raised here by the revelation that the Home Owners Loan Corporation had loaned $40,000 out of its own treasury to its employees who wanted to organize a group which could hire its own doctors on an annual basis. This was public money, because the HOLC is wholly owned by the federal treasury and its function is to loan money on private homes to encourage home ownership. The Group Health association, as it was named, guaranteed medical treatment to its members for a fixed annual fee and hired doctors to do the job.

There was a roar from many quarters at the time because of the use of government money in this manner, but the loudest roar came from the doctors who are members of the District of Columbia Medical society. Few of us realized then, I think, where this controversy was going to lead. I doubt that there were very many persons expected to see the tiny spark fanned into a flame so large. Now, however, that spark has become a national flame, national issue of serious import. For what could be more serious, indeed, than a chance to live when the cold fingers of death creep closer?

The issue as it is now defined, succinctly, is whether the long and honorable history of the medical profession, and all of the scientific assets that this implies, shall be thrown to the winds; whether, in the place of that history and gain and the services of those individual doctors, there shall be created a new basic method, a procedure where the doctors are hired by a corporation subsisting on the annual fees paid by its members who will telephone the corporation offices and say: send me one of your best doctors. In short, as I see it, the issue is whether there is to be personalized, conscientious service or service as lacking in personal interest as a "fill my tank, please," at the gasoline service station.

That is the preface to the recent legal proceedings by our own government against the American Medical association and the District of Columbia Medical society, which are threatened with prosecution as a "trust." The government's action, of course, makes the controversy a national issue, one which interests all of us. The trust busting assistant attorney general, Thurman Arnold, former Yale professor, vows he will break up the "trust" which is the national organization of doctors, but there are those of us who cannot help linking the corporation method of medical practice with Professor Arnold's blast and threats against the doctors who believe in individual practice.

The whole department of justice position strikes me as rather fuzzy, rather asinine and, in some respects, reprehensible. However, if there is to be a complete analysis made and a complete understanding of the situation obtained, it is necessary to know that "President Roosevelt wants it done," and Mr. Arnold is proceeding. It does not seem to matter that there are only a few medical crooks, only a few unethical and unscrupulous medical practitioners; the whole profession must be attacked and defamed. Nor does it seem of great concern to the prosecuting officials that some of those doctors who are promoting corporation medicine throughout the United States have been denied admission to the American Medical association for reasons of character and ethics deemed sufficient to warrant non-recognition.

And while I am about it, I want to pay tribute to that greatest of all American characters, the country doctor. I have personal reasons for offering my humble praise to one of their number, but throughout America there can be found no greater asset. He is a friend and confidant and adviser, minister to the body and the mind. There are some among his numbers that will not have, even do not warrant, respect. But that obtains in every walk of life and my belief is that there are fewer country doctors lacking in honesty and good conscience than in any regular profession or avocation of life.

The country doctor is different from his brother practitioner of the city. The latter probably is better trained, more up to date on all developments of science, perhaps more expert in most fields, but I think I can say without equivocation or doubt because of personal experience that the country doctor is not excelled anywhere among humans for good, common horse sense. And the man or woman who is equipped with horse sense keeps the human race on an even keel.

But to get-back to the government proceedings: here we see an action, or threat, against a whole profession that has done as much or more for mankind as the ministers of the gospel. I take it for granted that there are skeletons in the closets of many doctors. There is, and can be, no justification, for example, of some of the high fees charged in cases where people without worldly goods are concerned. Their lives are as valuable as the lives of the richest multimillionaires. There can be no defense, as a further proposition, for laxness and disinterest which are matters of record. But I maintain and shall always believe that there are comparatively few members of the medical profession who fail to give the best that is in them. And when I mention disinterest, I cannot help wondering whether doctors hired by group health associations are going to be much concerned about hurrying to the bedside of an association member after a few years of such practice. The monthly check is going to come in whether the corporation doctor is sympathetic and skillful or apathetic.

Star Dust Pearl Was Canary Gargan Reduces "Willie" Flops

SYNOPSIS

Mr. Rex Hale calls on Casper Kneeland, friend of his father, in New York. He is proud and successful but is very preoccupied. He tells Hale of his death while insane, invites him to summer at Halcyon Camp, his home on Long Island, and promises him to be "useful" as his secretary.

This is the first American outfit had for several years," Hale said. "Been living abroad. It's a certain satisfaction in being from the ground up." The clerk agreed and led him to the socks, underwear and shoes. Hale bought a lot of them in a new dressing-gown. He gave his old one, he decided, to the chap who cleaned his boots in his modest hotel. It was certainly in hand-me-down condition. He paid the bills with undiminished cheerfulness and went to a popular restaurant at one o'clock for needed refreshment. The restaurant was one Kneeland had recommended in the final moments of the interview.

He ate his excellent luncheon with enjoyment. It was great to eat cooked food again. The waiter fell on his shoulder. "Hello, old man. Maxim ought to be here in his restaurant as a permanent exhibit. You look like that gobbled canary." "Feel like her. So would you if had been eating omelets and beef in Spain. I got back there yesterday."

"Kneeland said, 'You know Mr. Kneeland?' 'No, he sent me here to look up. Said he had advised you to look up today, and he thought you would.'

"The newcomer dropped into the chair. 'Hale indicated. 'What will you have?' Hale said.

"Nothing but a cordial, thanks—not brandy. I've had my lunch." Hale summoned his waiter and ordered the liqueur. He was not enthusiastic over the encounter, but was pleasant to see almost any familiar face. He had had to think of the minute to remember who this fellow was. Someone he had known at Chicago? No. At Cornell? Yes—he had now. Ainsworth, Frederick Ainsworth. He looked exactly as he looked then—dark, thin, sleek, cat-like, sardonic.

What on Mr. Kneeland's mind he asked conversationally. Kneeland's reply showed that he had changed as little in character as appearance.

"A good deal, I fancy," he said. "I've sipped his liqueur. Nothing to pass on to you. That he didn't send you any message. I think he told me to look you up because he wanted to get rid of me. I dropped into his office at five, and he didn't care to take me out for lunch."

"He's been very successful," Hale murmured. "Yes. An odd expression fell over Ainsworth's smooth face. It was like a dark mask settling into place. He stared into the small glass held in his hand.

"He seemed ostentatiously pleased by the subject. 'He tells me you're coming to Halcyon Camp.' 'Yes, I'm going tomorrow afternoon.' 'That's good. I'm out there myself. It will interest me very much,' Ainsworth purred, returning his liqueur. 'To see what you are up to. You're in for some surprises.'"

"That sounds rather cryptic," Hale smiled. "It's a cryptic place. On the surface, everything is sweetness and light. You'll be charmed tomorrow by our carefree manner and sunny faces. But don't scratch your head. You're apt to find some crawling things underneath."

"That's a queer way for a guest to talk," Hale said stiffly. His early dislike of Ainsworth was increasing every word the fellow uttered. He pulled himself up, remembering that for the moment he was the host.

"Mr. Kneeland told me he had some house-guests," he went on. "Who's that and the family?" "Only two more," Ainsworth had finally decided not to be offended by the other's criticism. "There's Mrs. Forbes, an ash-blond lady with a past."

"Who's the other guest?" "Doctor Craig, a friend of Bert's. Another mysterious person, if you ask me. But we're all mysterious, as I've hinted. You'll find us an interesting study, in our romantic setting of sea and sky and woods. Halcyon Camp is quite off the main highway, as I suppose Kneeland told you." He laughed. "Halcyon Camp," he quoted ironically.

"Kneeland says he wants it to be a happy place." The contrast between the Camp as it really is, as he meant it to be, is awfully funny—if he knew it. "Doesn't he?" "No. He's too absorbed in his own big problem. He's an unhappy man, and with good reason. But he wants everyone around him to be contented. He has always seen himself as a benevolent god in the machine, working his miracles to benefit others. It is to laugh!" Hale moved abruptly in his chair, and Ainsworth took the hint. He had finished his liqueur. He got up. "I'll be off now," he said. "See you at Halcyon Camp. Shall I tell Miss Hosanna you'll join our happy band in time for dinner tomorrow night?"

"Yes, thanks." "The dinner hour is half past seven, and the run down takes almost two hours. You'd better come on the half-past four train."

"I will. Thanks again." They shook hands and with a strong sensation of relief Hale watched Ainsworth's departure. He

"He wants a new car," Mrs. Nash explained when she had returned to her seat after the jerk. "He thinks if he wrecks this, he'll have one. You won't, darling," she assured the boy. "I've often reminded you that my annuity dies with me. You'd have to go right to work, probably on a truck. And, darling, please don't turn to point out the beauties of nature to us when you're driving at this speed. There's no sight more beautiful to me than a young driver who keeps his hands firmly on the wheel and his eyes on the road."

The cub turned and waved a careless paw. He was lightly clad in a low-necked khaki shirt, khaki shorts, and a pair of dirty white tennis shoes. He had a brown skin, brown hair, and brown eyes.

She returned her full attention to Hale, and gave him a few details about the neighborhood. "They're very casual at Halcyon Camp," she told him, when she willing to be approached or disturbed. It spread over a lot of ground. A large screened-in veranda ran along the entire front of the frame building. Another extended along the right side. French windows opened on these. There were a number of outbuildings. Several tents were set up on pine board foundations and entered by roughly built steps. There was an impressive out-door oven for camp cooking. Down on the beach he saw what were evidently private bath-houses, a boat-house and a pier. A good-sized float loomed up some distance from the shore. Yet with all this, Halcyon Camp did not suggest a hospitable home.

Throughout his life Hale had been subject to what, for lack of a better word, he called "hunches." His hunches were sudden and strong convictions. Without understanding them he had developed a certain respect for them. He had a hunch now, and he did not like it.

It was a long time since he had experienced a hunch so definite and disturbing.

told himself irritably that the fellow had pricked his balloon, and the next instant reproached himself for being so susceptible to the man's influence.

Hale finished his shopping and saw an amusing play that night. It diverted him even more successfully than the shopping had done. He took a calm mind to bed with him and into dreamland. But his dreams were troubled.

Kneeland had told him to leave the train at a certain station, adding that it was three miles from the Camp and that probably he would be met. Hale left the train at that station shortly after six the next evening and was not surprised to find no one in sight who seemed to be looking for a red-headed stranger.

It was a lonely little station and only one passenger had got off with him. This was a slight woman, coolly dressed in blue voile. She had bent a furrowed brow over a note-book during most of her journey. She seemed to be unsuccessfully adding columns of figures that annoyed her. A small sedan car with a youth at the wheel was waiting for her. On her way to it she heard Hale question the station agent, who stood on the platform, as to the direction of Halcyon Camp. She turned and came toward him.

She was a woman in her forties, with prematurely white hair, a youngish face and a worldly smile. "You must be the young man Miss Kneeland is expecting today," she said cheerfully. "Hasn't anyone met you?"

Hale jerked off his hat and returned her smile with warmth. He liked her on the instant. "No, but it isn't far to the Camp. I'll enjoy the walk."

"You won't enjoy three miles of it with all that luggage. Put it in my car and I'll take you to the edge of the camp clearing. I don't like the road that leads to Halcyon Camp itself. I can drop you when we come to that road, within a quarter of a mile from the house."

"That's awfully good of you. My name is Hale."

"I know. You're the young engineer who has just got back from Spain. Miss Kneeland told me about you last night. I'm Mrs. Wilbur Nash, one of her neighbors. This is my son, Wilbur, better known in the neighborhood as 'the Nash cub.'"

Hale had put his luggage into the car. Now he got in himself, and took the seat Mrs. Nash indicated beside her.

The boy started the car with a jerk that lifted his passengers from their seats and sent it along the narrow rutted country road at almost 50 miles an hour.

reached that point of interest. "It never occurs to them to meet guests, or to get them to trains, for that matter. Time means nothing to them, and they're no respecters of persons. Mr. Kneeland talks about living close to the soil. He lets his guests do it, but he makes himself thoroughly comfortable. You won't catch him ploughing through the underbrush and along muddy country roads to the Camp. Miss Hosanna and Joan do it half the time. Mr. Kneeland keeps his car for his own journeys back and forth. Bert has a four-wheel wreck that he disappears in every day, when he isn't off in his motor-boat. Here we are. Sorry I can't take you to the door. Follow those excavations at the right. They represent a road."

Hale thanked her and jumped out of the sedan. He grasped the bags and his hat-box and started off along the branch road that ran at an angle to the so-called highway.

At a rather unexpected turn in the road, he saw the Camp. He stopped, put down his luggage, and looked it over. It was not a camp or a bungalow, but a big mid-Victorian house set in a wide clearing. Seen at that short distance, it had something of the effect of a brooding gray hen with outspread wings, crouched close to the earth, and un-

Hale strode up the wide steps leading to the front veranda, passed through the screen door, reached the double front doors, and pressed a compelling finger against an electric button on a side-panel. Light steps came along the inner hall and the right-hand door swung open. A young and pretty girl, in a maid's uniform, gave him a welcoming smile and stood aside to let him pass, even before he spoke. She was so pleasant to look at, so matter-of-factly reassuring, that the newcomer experienced an absurd sense of relief. He smiled at her as at a familiar friend.

Bird That Builds Nest Used by the Chinese for Food Found in Philippines

Science has finally come to one of the Philippines' most exotic industries, but not with a labor saving device.

A kind of swift, one of whose species is the swift-flying small bird that may be seen rising sharply from American chimneys, has at last been identified as the bird that makes the edible nests which Chinese consider a delicacy.

But the business of collecting edible birds' nests will not see any machinery, Canuto G. Manuel, of the Philippine Commonwealth Fish and Game administration, indicates in the Philippine Journal of Science.

For the birds build their nests in all but inaccessible caves, which collectors must reach today in precisely the same manner as their forbears—by climbing patiently over slippery rocks and deep chasms. And, once inside, the collectors use the same primitive torches to light their way as they maintain a precarious balance while they carefully remove the nests from hollows in the cavern walls.

The species is prevented from becoming extinct by the fact that many of the birds build their nests in caves that are actually inaccessible.

No estimate of the size of the business, which centers at Bacuit, Palawan, is possible, for the local Chinese merchants who ship the product to China constitute a close-mouthed monopoly. Reason for their silence is fear of larger licensing fees.

Collecting is done by Filipinos who work on their own, selling all they take to the corporation. Each nest weighs less than ten grams (about a third of an ounce) when removed from the cavern wall, and loses a considerable portion of its weight in the drying process. The nests are gelatinous in nature.

Jerusalem's Cities

The present city of Jerusalem is the eighth to be built on this site. In southwest Judah is a mound which reveals 11 distinct strata, each stratum representing the remains of a city. When a city was conquered the buildings were leveled to the ground. Since they were mostly built of clay, they formed a layer of soil on which another city rose.

Dead Animals Live Again

Picture Parade

Here's the behind-scenes work that prepares animals for permanent display in a museum, as demonstrated in Chicago's Field museum. Above: Taxidermist W. E. Eigst fits teeth in a mankin of an African dog faced baboon. The other animal is a drill from Guinea.

Charles Mueller and Frank Gino, wearing dust masks, bare the bones of an ancient American rhinoceros from a slab weighing several tons which was excavated near Agate Springs, Neb.

Putting finishing touches on a specimen of giant panda from Tibet. At right, baby fur seal skins from the Pribilof islands are being prepared.

Staff Taxidermist Leon L. Walters and his assistant, Edgar G. Laybourne, at work on a narwhal. This exhibit is of a cellulose-acetate compound, invented by Mr. Walters. In certain hairless animals, more lifelike results are obtainable by this process than by mounting the actual skin.

GAS, ONCE WEAPON, NOW KILLS WEEDS

Back during the World war, tear gas was one of the weapons of military offense. Many a crucial objective was gained while its defenders were weeping, helplessly. But next year, perhaps, tear gas will find a new use and one far removed from violence. It will help produce weed-free putting greens for the nation's golfers! J. A. DeFrance, of the Rhode Island experiment station, traces the use of tear gas to kill weeds back to the shell-battered No Man's Land of France. In the present practice the soil destined for the green is placed in a large box and several holes drilled in the earth. Down each hole are poured a few drops of liquid tear gas, a canvas cover applied and left for two days.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste
Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.
You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.
In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

CROP INSURANCE

indemnity payments will be made, the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation effects economies in the cost to the grower of this insurance, prevents much local business hardship in communities subject to crop failures and exerts a stabilizing influence on prices.

"A number of large insurance companies, to which the plan of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation was submitted, approved it as sound and an improvement over other services. These companies own many farms and are financially able to carry their own insurance, but several of them are buying Federal Crop Insurance Corporation policies on their 1939 wheat and urging their tenants to do the same." Not only are farmers interested in this program, but merchants, professional men, bankers and elevator men see in it a means of stabilizing the business of any community.

McCormick-Deering Corn Binders
Save Time Cutting Corn

WHEN your corn is ready to cut, depend on the McCormick-Deering Corn Binder to do this heavy job for you, quickly. It has a long record of successful, reliable performance throughout the corn belt. It does the work of 5 to 7 men.

The McCormick-Deering gets all the corn—even the leaning and down stalks. The throat spring pushes the corn over against the elevator fingers so that cutting and carrying to the binding mechanism is positive. The reliable McCormick knot-ter assures binding every bundle.

Short corn is bound equally as well as tall corn, because the butt pan, which provides evenly butted bundles, has a wide range of adjustment. Clear, open sides permit easy removal of undergrowth. The shielded gear drive excludes trash and undergrowth and gives long life. A bundle loader can be furnished at additional cost.

Let us show you these features that have made the McCormick-Deering the popular binder among corn growers.

WORKERS URGED TO KEEP WAGE RECORDS

The desirability of keeping an accurate and permanent record by workers of all wages received from covered employment was suggested today by Dewey Reed, manager of the Amarillo office of the Social Security Board.

It was pointed out by Mr. Reed that, while the keeping of a wage record is not mandatory on the part of workers, such a record is considered advisable. The wage record kept by the worker should include the name of each employer for whom he performs services; his own name and address as well as that of the employer for whom he worked. Reed said. It was further explained that such a record should also show the worker's occupation, total amount of wages received, including any sums deducted for taxes or other purposes, together with the data of each wage payment and the period of service covered by such payment.

Many employees, Reed said, keep a personal pocket ledger in which they record all wages received and all deductions for taxes and other purposes. The time required for keeping such a record, he said, is small compared to its possible value to the worker in the future in the event he should desire to check up on his old-age insurance credits, which are posted to his account from returns made by his employers.
