Urgent, Wheat Farmers, Make Report Now

Only 40% of Briscoe County farmers have turned in urgently needed information on their wheat acreage required by PMA to make equitable allotments in event that national wheat allotments are proclaimed, the committee reported today. They urged wheat growers who have not yet done so to bring a legal description of their farm and the number of acres they had in wheat for 1951, '52 and '53, to the county PMA office at their earliest opportunity. "This information is needed right away in order that each farm growing wheat in Briscoe County might receive an allotment representing its fair share of a county allotment," the committee explained.

The information must be collected and assembled at once in order that the secretary of agriculture can carry out the law on allotment programs. This legislation directs him to ascertain and proclaim the total supply and the normal supply of wheat for the 1953-54 marketing year by July 15, and to proclaim by that date a national acreage allotment for the 1954 crop of wheat unless he finds that a national emergency exists or a material increase in exports is expected. Secretary Benson has stated that he will make no final decision on 1954 wheat controls until the latest information is available.

TRY A NEWS WANT AD.

The national acreage allotment for the 1954 crop must be that acreage, which, at the national average yield, will produce enough wheat—plus the carry-over and imports—for a normal year's domestic consumption and exports plus 30 per cent. This is apportioned among the states, then among the counties in the state according to average acreage seeded to wheat during the 10 preceding years.

TRY A NEWS WANT AD.

Briscoe County's wheat allotment is apportioned among farms on the basis of (1) tillable acres, (2) crop rotation practices, including acreage planted to wheat, (3) type of soil, and (4) topography.

TRY A NEWS WANT AD.

Under the allotment program only producers who comply with their wheat acreage allotment would be eligible for price supports at full 90 per cent of parity.

Safer automobiles for safer driving is the main objective of Continental Oil Company's summer advertising program, which begins Wednesday, May 20, in The Briscoe County News.

Conoco's advertising will contain a list of safety-driving tips compiled by the National Safety Council. Commenting on the safety-first theme of the company's summer campaign, Paul Jones, National Safety Council director of public information, recently stated:

"The need for spreading the gospel of safety is becoming more urgent year after year, considering that more people were killed in automobile accidents last year than were killed in the Korean War. We feel that Continental Oil Company is to be congratulated for undertaking a program of this sort."

W. H. (HOP) GRAHAM

'Hop' Graham Farwell Publisher Dies in Clovis

A man who watched the progress of this area through the eyes and ears of his newspaper, the State Line Tribune, for over 25 years, William Halbert (Hop) Graham, died about 1 a. m. last Wednesday night in a local hospital.

His death came on the day he would have celebrated his 62nd birthday. He had been in ill health for about two years, suffering heart trouble. Death, however, came finally as the result of cancer of the spine, which had confined him to his bed since before Christmas.

Three o'clock Thursday afternoon, Texas time, funeral services were held at the Hamlin Memorial Methodist Church in Farwell. Rev. Miller H. Stroup, officiated assisted by the Lawn Haven cemetery in Clovis with the Steed Funeral Home handling arrangements.

Active pallbearers were Paul Wurster, John Hadley, Jim Moss, Lloyd Cain, Loyde Brewer and Lenton Poole.

Born near Wichita Falls, Texas, Graham and his wife, who survives him, were married at Andrews, Texas, in February, 1916. They first settled in Melrose after coming to New Mexico where they remained for several years before moving to Clovis, when Graham acquired the State Line Tribune.

It was for his paper column, "The Hopper" that "Hop" attained his name and perhaps was best known. It has appeared on the front page of the State Line Tribune continuously since he bought the paper.

The Grahams moved to Farwell about five years after going into the newspaper business there, where they have resided since. In community life, Hop was a member of Hamlin Memorial Methodist church, including the church's official board for many years, was active in Chamber of Commerce in both towns, member of Lions club and was a past president of the Panhandle Press Association.

Survivors are his widow; one son, W. H. Graham, Jr., who actively manages the State Line Tribune now; one daughter, Mrs. Vance Crume of Hereford, Texas; three granddaughters, children of Mrs. Crume, Judy, Betsy and Priscilla; one grandson, son of W. H. Jr., Ronald Dale; a brother Luther Graham of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; A sister, Mrs. Blance Shull of Lawton, Oklahoma; two half brothers, Harmon Graham of Paul's Valley, Oklahoma and M-Sgt. H. Lee Graham of Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Tex.

Another daughter, Miss Sammie Lee Graham, who was 26 years old, preceded her father in death last August—Clovis News-Journal, Clovis, New Mexico.

Mr. Graham was the father-in-law of the former Miss Jeanne Dudley, of Silverton.

State Recalls Vision of Quaker Founder

WASHINGTON—The religious vision that came to a young Englishman 300 years ago brought into being one of the world's most influential faiths and contributed much toward founding the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The young Englishman was George Fox. The religion he founded was that of the Society of Friends, or Quakers. And the desire to create a sanctuary of religious freedom in a world of persecution motivated one of the greatest of the Quakers, William Penn (1644-1718), in the establishment of Pennsylvania.

Penn was the son of a wealthy and influential admiral serving England and before the Restoration. As such, the young man could have been an important courtier to Charles II and James II, and he did spend considerable time in or near the court. But he fell early under the influence of the followers of George Fox, and became a close friend of the Quaker leader.

As a youth Penn lived in England and Ireland, traveled on the continent and tasted the pleasures of the French court of Louis XIV. But when he was in Ireland at the age of 22 the Quaker influence, long within him, became dominant and he was converted.

It is ironic that while Penn was on military duty in Ireland, shortly before his conversion, his best known portrait was painted. This portrait shows a man whose Quaker principles were absolutely opposed to armed force clad in a suit of armor!

For almost 20 years after his conversion Penn worked for the Friends in England and on the Continent, suffering imprisonment and indignity. In 1681, he preached Charles II for accounting of a debt owed his father, and was granted what is now Pennsylvania in payment.

The grant was what Penn desired, and he wasted little time in setting up the colony. Penn drew up a constitution that was a model of fairness and toleration. It granted complete freedom of religion, democratic government, and freedom of opportunity.

The death penalty, applicable in England for some 200 offenses, could be invoked only in cases of wilful murder.

Maces Continue to Be Symbols Showing Authority, Power

LONDON—The coronation of Queen Elizabeth in London next June will bring the Crystal Mace, famous symbol of the rights granted to the city by the crown, into active ceremonial use twice within the space of a year.

Usually the most prominent appearance of London's ancient mace is its annual transfer from the outgoing Lord Mayor to his successor. This ceremony took place this year early in November.

Next June the mace will appear again, at the coronation, when the Lord Mayor will bear the ancient sceptre in the procession. The man to be honored in June is Sir Rupert De la Bere, who accepted it from his predecessor, Sir Leslie Boyce in the November ceremony.

The Crystal Mace—"perhaps the most prized emblem of the Mayoralty"—is of such antiquity that its exact origins are unknown. It is 18 inches long and the shaft is carved rock crystal, probably of ancient Saxon craftsmanship, adorned with gold bands. The head, believed to date from the 15th century, is also of gold, adorned with pearls.

Use of mace as a symbol of authority is an exceedingly ancient practice, possibly going back to Roman days when officials bore fasces—an axe bound in a bundle of rods, denoting power to flog with the rods or put to death with the axe.

The mace continues to represent power. Maces are exhibited to show that parliaments in most British Commonwealth nations are in session, and Colonial English maces are prized possessions of South Carolina and of Norfolk, Va.

Politics Is Factor In This Divorce Case

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Judge Quincy Austin East is trying to decide whether a principal in a divorce case in his court recently tried to exert undue political influence on him.

Before the case was heard in his chambers, he received the following letter:

"My divorce suit is due to come up and I want to see that it goes through all right. Virtually all my family are Republicans and have been more or less so since birth, while on the other hand, my husband and his family are strong Democrats.

Comma Financed Rail Road in Early U. S.

BROOKLYN—A railroad was once financed by a comma! The old Culver Line was constructed by a firm of lawyers with the proceeds from a misplaced comma in the Tariff Act of June 6, 1872. The fateful line read: "Fruit, plants, tropical and semi-tropical for the purpose of propagation and cultivation . . ."

The typist made an error, striking a comma instead of a hyphen after "Fruit." The lawyers spotted the error and sued the United States Treasury, acting for a group of fruit importers, and collected over $3,000,000 in tariff refunds! The old Culver Line, extending from Brooklyn to Coney Island, may never have been built if it had not been for the world's most expensive misplaced comma.

Girl Is Locked In Attic Room 8 Years

BAD SEGEBERG, Germany—Little Baerbel Suefke, 8, was examined by a doctor recently in the British zone of Germany and described as being "more animal than human."

The child was discovered locked in an attic room and brought to a Bad Segeberg hospital. She had been locked in the room for the most of her life because her mother, Rose, 40, was ashamed of her. The mother has two other children, aged 12 and 15.

One doctor told newsmen that he didn't think the child's condition was entirely the fault of the mother. He said that there must have been both physical and mental ailments which today give the little girl the features of a 13-month-old baby. Baerbel weighs only 18 pounds, is 28 inches tall, and can neither speak nor walk.

Battle of Kilt Won By Queen's Husband

LONDON—New pictures of the royal family show that the Duke of Edinburgh has won "the battle of the kilt."

The queen, reports say, wants her husband the duke to wear the traditional kilt when on holiday in Scotland just as her father, King George VI, always did. The Duke detests the things.

A recent picture of the royal family with King Faisal of Iraq, who was visiting Balmoral, shows Edinburgh in a Bernard Shaw-like Norfolk suit, with heavy shoes and baggy knickerbockers.

The queen wears a kilt.

Tea Drinking Taste Changed Since War

NEW YORK—The taste of the American tea drinking public has changed since World War II, according to Mrs. Barney O'Brien, co-founder of a tea company.

"At the outset of World War II," says Mrs. O'Brien, "Americans consumed a considerable amount of green teas, but were deprived of them due to wartime shortages. Now that Japanese green and Formosa oolongs are again available, there is little demand for them in the market. It seems as if America was switched permanently to black Irish style teas."

Irish style tea, Mrs. O'Brien points out, is a mixture of the finest Ceylon black and India black teas.

The main essential difference between the American and Irish tea drinker contends Mrs. O'Brien, who asserts that the world's greatest tea drinkers are the Irish, is that the American does not drink his tea at tea-time.

"Strangely enough, fifty per cent of the tea consumed in America accompanies the evening meal," Mrs. O'Brien reveals. "Thirty nine per cent the noon meal, and only nine per cent the breakfast, with only eight per cent tea drunk at tea-time or evening parties."

Shakers Believed In Functionalism

HARRODSBURG, Ky.—The functionalism of modern furniture, it now appears, is not so modern after all. A Cleveland, O., home economics specialist reports that many of the principles employed in modern functional furniture were used years ago by the Shakers, a religious sect whose members settled near here in 1805.

Skilled in handicraft, they excelled in building construction and in fashioning beautiful wood furnishings. Among the items with which they equipped their sturdy dwellings were benches that extended to serve as tables, and desks and tables which opened up to provide added working surfaces.

Evidence of their fine craftsmanship may be seen today in the Shakertown Guesthouse Inn, now privately owned and open to the public. The attractive walnut woodwork, beautiful oak floors and built-in cupboards are still in their original state. The 113-year-old structure has walls 18 inches thick, built of hand-made brick.

Duke Psychologists Are Grappling With Black Magic, Hexes

DURHAM, N.C.—Duke University psychiatrists now are grappling with "black magic," and "hexing spells" in particular.

Dr. Vernon Kinross-Wright, Duke neuropsychiatrist, recently urged the Southern Medical Association to take a closer look at black magic and hexes.

The majority of hex victims have serious mental illnesses, he declared, but some do not.

For instance, a 32-year-old man recently came to Duke Hospital suffering from gripping pains in his stomach. He couldn't eat, and his thirst was excessive.

He believed he was intended to die of starvation, imagining he had been "spelled" by a local magician for having cheated a partner in a business deal.

He came to Duke because he had heard that the psychiatrists could hypnotize people and "take things off their minds," but he reserved the right to visit a "conjure man" in a nearby city before Duke doctors actually treated him.

"I heard some three weeks later," Dr. Kinross-Wright said, "that the hex has been successfully removed and the patient was in good health."

This man was not a severe mental case and could not be called such, the Duke doctor declared, unless the same label were put on most of his friends and relatives who confirmed the alleged hexing.

"A man who thinks he has been placed under the influence of a spell is not in a normal state," the Duke neuropsychiatrist says. "He must, of course, be highly suggestible and must also have committed some act that makes him feel guilty."

Angler Fishes Catch Other Fishes to Eat

WASHINGTON—One of the most patient and skillful of fishermen is another fish, a curious creature possessed of a built-in fishing rod and aptly called the angler fish.

The angler fish is not capable of much underwater speed, and obtains its food—small fish—by dangling a "bait" at the end of the rod to attract dinner.

In the National Geographic Society's new Book of Fishes, edited by Society Vice President John Oliver La Gorce, Louis Mowbray, former Curator of the Bermuda Government Aquarium, writes of the angler in a chapter entitled "Certain Citizens of the Warm Seas."

Lesson in Patience

"The approach of an angler fish to its chosen victim," Dr. Mowbray says, "is a lesson in patience, and its use of the 'fishing rod' is a work of art."

"Literally, there is an appendage, which may be raised or lowered at will, situated on the head of the angler fish between the eyes and the mouth. In the outer extremity of the rod is a filamentous growth, resembling a small worm, which is dangled frantically in front of the small fish to attract its attention."

The angler remains completely immobile while presenting the bait, only moving, and then very slowly, if the prey is not sufficiently attracted by the "worm," which is quickly withdrawn if the smaller fish strikes. This is likely to be the victim's last movement.

American Fishes Shown

All the more common fresh and saltwater fish found in North America are shown in color plates in "The Book of Fishes," and their habits, size and value as food or game are explained.

The book explodes some inaccurate beliefs about fish. It points out that huge manta rays, or devilfish, are harmless creatures despite their forbidding appearance, and explains that such ordinarily voracious fish as sharks and barracuda can be "civilized" and seldom attack when regularly fed in captivity.

Various types of sport fishing are thoroughly explained, from still fishing for catfish in midwestern streams to goggle fishing in California and the search for tarpon in Florida.

This Yarn Is Salty One With Seasoning

NEW YORK CITY—Those little salt shakers on the nation's dinner tables carry a heavy load—more than $25,000,000 pounds a year.

That's the amount of table salt Americans sprinkle on their food annually, according to estimates of American Can Company, which developed the fibre salt box with the aluminum pouring spout.

The container-making company's estimate was based on a national average consumption of six pounds of table salt per person for seasoning. This is in addition to the salt already in food or added by canners and packers.

Lynmouth Is Near Lorna Doone Valley

PLYMOUTH, Eng.—The flood-devastated little resort town of Lynmouth, on Devon's Bristol Channel, lies in a country steeped in the romance of British history, legend and fiction.

Only a hop-skip-and-jump over the Somerset county line is Doone Valley, setting for Richard Doddridge Blackmore's famous novel, "Lorna Doone."

Less than 100 miles from Lynmouth across England's southwest corner lies Plymouth, whence the Mayflower set sail for America. The way crosses the gloomy waste lands of Exmoor and Dartmoor, still believed by some Devonians to be dangerous at night because of ghosts.

Tintagel Head in Cornwall, reputed site of King Arthur's Castle, also is less than 100 miles from Lynmouth. Off the north coast between Tintagel and Lynmouth is Lundy Island, once sacked by Turkish sea raiders who carried the inhabitants into slavery.

Devonshire's 2,000 square miles make it the third largest English county. Only its coastal areas, cut by many small rivers like the Lyn that caused the trouble at Lynmouth, are subject to flooding during storm and heavy rains. The interior is high.

Mainz Bibles Grace Congress' Library

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The historic city of Mainz on the Rhine River is doubly commemorated at the Library of Congress this year.

In a large showcase stand the two volumes of the Great Bible of Mainz. It is the only Bible manuscript made in that city which has come down the centuries completely preserved.

Directly opposite is the Gutenberg Bible, the first book to be printed with movable metal type. The Gutenberg Bible is believed to have been made in Mainz and at about the same time as the Great Bible.

Both are Vulgate Bibles, the Latin version of St. Jerome. Their Gothic lettering is similar. Both are on fine vellum—the Great Bible on 459 pages made from 250 goat skins. The manuscript was carefully written with a crow-quill pen, while the Gutenberg Bible was printed with metal type painstakingly cast and set.

The Great Bible was begun on April 8, 1452, 500 years ago. The scribe carefully noted the date as he finished each of the books. It took 15 months to complete the text.

New Space Concepts Emerge in Survey

WASHINGTON—A new and revolutionary picture of the universe is slowly emerging in the series of 2,000 photographs of the sky being made from a California mountain top by the National Geographic Society-Palomar observatory sky survey.

Dr. Rudolph Minkowski, research astronomer at the California Institute of Technology, prepared for the recent international geographic congress in Washington a paper telling of the survey's progress.

An important aspect of the undertaking, Dr. Minkowski reported, is the knowledge it will provide for astronomers and physicists of the place of gas and dust in the galaxy, of which the solar system is an extremely tiny part.

"Then content of gas and dust is intimately connected with the structure and the stellar content of a stellar system," Dr. Minkowski wrote. He added that the survey will give "a complete, new, and in some aspects revolutionary picture of the structure and distribution of gas and dust in the galaxy."

"The survey shows the picture of this distribution over the whole sky to a depth of 250,000,000 light years, the most complete information obtainable with present-day techniques, and thus contributes an essential step for finding an answer to the question whether the large scale distribution in space is uniform or non-uniform."

Business Executive Builds Good Will

BOSTON—Here's how a business executive built employe good will by getting to know his employes and getting them to know him. He is Harold J. Walter, president of Bachman Uxbridge Corp., Uxbridge, Mass.

For the past seven years, he and Mrs. Walter have entertained groups of 25 workers at their home every third Monday night. The employes are served dinner and entertained with motion pictures of the particular employes at work and are also shown a short film subject. For two hours they forget that they are "boss" and worker.

The improved relationships show the project has worked well, said Mr. Walter. Over the years, many of the 1,000 employes at the Uxbridge plant have been to dinner at the Walters several times. It is Walter's policy to invite new workers to dine with the "boss" as soon as possible after going on the payroll.
