Thin Seafarers Less Susceptible To Seasickness

CHICAGO—Chances of seasickness are lowest among passengers who are under 25, slightly thin, traveling midship on a second or third voyage—and are supplied with one of 11 drugs recently proved to be helpful.

A five-month study of 26 anti-motion sickness drugs among 17,000 servicemen, shows that 11 of them were helpful and three of these were more effective than the rest.

The tests were run from Nov. 14, 1954 to April 10, 1955, on military transports crossing the Atlantic. Ten eastward and five westward crossings were used. Passengers were given unmarked pills which were either drugs or placebos. Placebos are inactive substances used as a yardstick against which the action of real medicines can be measured.

The study showed that susceptibility to seasickness decreased with age; that individuals quartered fore and aft were more susceptible than those in midship; that heavier individuals were slightly more susceptible than their lighter colleagues. The activities of the men while on board had no relation to their susceptibility to illness.

Motion sickness was twice as frequent in persons who had had it before as in those with no history of sickness. However, seasickness was less frequent on westward trips—probably because all the passengers had had at least one previous crossing.

The most effective drugs, by trade name, were Bonamine, Phenergan, and Mareline, when given three times daily.

Scientists Study Uncharted Gulf

WASHINGTON — A study by Australian scientists of the unpredictable tides in the Gulf of Carpentaria will shed new light on one of the world's least-known major bodies of water.

The gulf cuts deeply into the northern coast of Australia. It is 420 miles wide from Cape York to Cape Arnhem and 400 miles in length, almost one third the size of the Gulf of Mexico.

Besides unstable tides, generally shallow water and many shoals make navigation dangerous in the Carpentaria gulf. Its shoreline ranges from flat, miles-wide marshes to rock granite cliffs. Mariners are warned by shipping authorities that some of the island-dotted coasts are still uncharted.

Plankton—tiny plant and animal life—swarms in gulf waters, giving off a vivid phosphorescent glow. At night, waves and ripples are marked with rainbow colors, pink, blue and yellow.

Electron Microscope Probing New World

WASHINGTON — A hitherto invisible and almost unprobed world of the infinitesimally little, as extensive as that revealed by the optical microscope over the past two centuries, now is being seen and explored. Objects and possible organisms within it may be as much as a millionfold smaller than ever seen before. This is the rapidly opening field of the electron microscope.

About the smallest object that can be seen with visible light, regardless of how great the magnification of the microscope used, is approximately 100,000th of an inch in length. In two centuries the microscope has improved enormously. But it still is incapable of making visible even the largest of molecules or any of those strange things between the worlds of the living and the non-living—the filterable viruses. Now this barrier has been crossed by the electron microscope. By means of it one may see objects 100th the length of the smallest made visible by the optical microscope.

U. S. Savings Bonds Are Indestructible!

Everything, they say, comes out in the wash. And this photograph shows how a U. S. Savings Bond left in a man's shirt pocket came out after a session with the wringer. But its value hadn't shrunk a bit. The U. S. Treasury replaced it—as it has nearly a million other Bonds which were mutilated, stolen, lost or destroyed.

Savings Bonds have been wrung through wringers, destroyed in fires, chewed up by dogs, goats, cows and probably children. But their owners never lost one penny. The Treasury keeps a record of all Bonds purchased and replaces them without charge in case of mishaps. What's more, the Treasury issues the Bond with its original date so you don't lose a penny of interest either.

U. S. Savings Bonds are not only safer than cash but one of the best investments you can make. Your government guarantees the principal—up to any amount—and the rate of interest you receive.

You'll be surprised at how your savings accumulate when you invest regularly in U. S. Savings Bonds.

So start buying Bonds today—either on the Payroll Savings Plan where you work or at your bank. And make your Bond buying a regular habit. It's one that will bring your family greater security.

U. S. Savings Bonds strengthen the security of your family, your community, your country.

The U. S. Government does not pay for this advertisement. The Treasury Department thanks, for their patriotic donation, the Advertising Council and

"My ELECTRIC clothes dryer saves money because we need fewer clothes for my growing children!"

SAYS
Mrs. W. J. MESSICK
119 TEXAS
HEREFORD, TEXAS

Mrs. Messick says, "The dryer saves ironing and even those things which do need ironing can be dried to correct dampness for proper ironing." No need for extra sprinkling.

Mrs. Messick stresses the savings with her electric appliances saying, "Savings in time and money are the foremost benefits we receive from our electric appliances." She finds that by the fast drying time an electric clothes dryer gives, she needs fewer clothes for the children. "Since children 'grow out' of clothes so quickly these savings become important," she adds.

Why don't you start "sitting pretty" with your own electric clothes dryer. You, too, will find the same advantages which Mrs. Messick likes.
