

Annual Meeting and Open House at Swisher Electric

Saturday, March 24, Swisher Electric Cooperative, Inc., will hold an annual meeting and open house in their new quarters at Tulia. Combined with the open house will be the annual meeting of the cooperative's membership. At 11:30 a.m. a barbecue will be served to members and guests. At 1:00 p.m. the annual meeting will be held.

More than one billion dollars of the principal has been repaid already, in addition to about half a billion dollars in interest.

Most people know that rural electric systems, like Swisher Electric Cooperative, are furnishing light and power to people who could get this necessity of life in no other way. But a surprisingly large proportion of people do not realize that these rural electric cooperatives are owned by the people they serve, and are controlled by a board of directors elected by these consumers. The board of directors sets policy, hires the manager and oversees the complete operation of the electric distribution systems. Control is thus kept close to home. Neighbor serves neighbor.

You don't have to be a real old-timer to recall how difficult country living was in rural America without electricity. Rural electrification, made possible through consumer-owned non-profit systems, has revolutionized farm and country living. It has provided hot and cold running water. It has relieved drudgery through a host of home and farm electric appliances. Life is brighter for seventeen million Americans who are the families of three quarters of a million consumer-owners of rural electric systems. Swisher County Electric Cooperative, Inc., is proud to have played a part in this enviable record of free enterprise coupled with sound business management. Our rural cooperative, owned by 2,655 member-consumers, has already repaid $695,234.89 in principal and interest on their REA loans.

Prepared by the National 4-H Service Committee

Experts Back Versatile Youths

When 400,000 men and women volunteer their time and know-how to help 2.3 million 4-H Club members "learn, live and serve," the results are no less than spectacular.

For instance, the Head, Heart, Hands and Health youths finished nearly 4 million projects in more than 40 different categories just this past year.

In almost every instance, the completed project benefited the entire family and in many cases, the community as well.

The information comes from the Cooperative Extension Service which directs 4-H Club work.

Further proof of the far-reaching effect of 4-H was found in 1,900 record books maintained by state award winning club members. The records were reviewed in the headquarters of the National 4-H Service Committee last November, said Norman C. Mindrum, director, for the purpose of selecting boys and girls for scholarships and trip awards to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

Miss Sheila Nixon, 20, of Pomona, California, winner of a $400 Ford scholarship, commented: "The awards we win in 4-H work aren't totally ours. Many people have helped us win them."

Another national champion, who won a Sears-Roebuck Foundation scholarship for leadership, is 20-year-old Hoosier farmer Wayne Buck. He has a 4-H record so long "it would fill a book." Now a student at Purdue University, Buck credits 4-H training with teaching him how to accept responsibility, and to better understand the world and the people in it.

President Kennedy expressed a similar feeling when he said in a recent message to 4-H members: "I would commend you especially for your constructive and worthwhile efforts in learning to live and work cooperatively with others."

In the beginning, 4-H Clubs were intended for farm youngsters, and offered only projects in crops, livestock, home canning and cooking. The present program embraces a wide range of agricultural, home economics and scientific programs. With the exception of a few such as livestock, tractor and field crops, the projects can be carried on in town as well as on the farm.

4-H Moves to Town
Today, membership in 4-H Clubs is about equally divided between farm and non-farm boys and girls. The main reason for this shift is the disappearance of the small farm from the American agricultural scene.

Meanwhile, more and more business people are participating in 4-H as it moves into suburban and urban areas, Mindrum points out. National 4-H Club Week, National 4-H Club Congress, Farm-City Week, achievement days, county and state fairs, Farm-Safety Week and the like are but a few examples, he said.

Director Mindrum, who is a former 4-H member and state extension official, has this to say: "To sum up 4-H achievement one should call special attention to the concurrent efforts of many which, over the years, have made the 'learn by doing' program the success it is.

Business Gives Cash
"Besides the paid and volunteer workers who carry out the teaching-training aspect, there are business people who contribute know-how and money," he added.

Approximately 60 different business concerns provide funds for 4-H through the National 4-H Service Committee, he said.

Donors of awards for the last 25 years or more include: International Harvester, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse Educational Foundation, Kerr Glass Mfg. Corp., Cudahy Packing Co., Armour and Co., Livestock Conservation, Inc., Wilson & Co., Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen, Also, Santa Fe, Chicago and North Western, Illinois Central and Burlington railroads.

Newer 4-H backers are the Sperry and Hutchinson Co., Ralston Purina, Moorman Mfg. Co., General Foods, E. I. du Pont de Nemours and John Deere. Also, Pyrofax Gas and International Minerals & Chemical corporations. These firms have supported the program for five years or less, according to the 4-H Service Committee.

Study Club Plans For District Meeting

The March of Time Study Club met in the home of Mrs. Fred Mercer for the Music Time theme. A substitute program on Press Book Do's and Don'ts was given by Mrs. Mercer, the Press Book Chairman.

Mrs. J. W. Lyon, jr., presented the origin and history of Mary Stewart's Collect and led the members in repeating it in unison for the invocation.

Mary Stewart wrote the collect as a personal prayer for the day without any organization in mind. It was written while she was in college at Longmont, Colorado, just before she took her first teaching job at a local high school. The prayer:

Keep us, oh God, from pettiness; let us be large in thought, in word, in deed.

Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking. May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face, without self-pity and without prejudice.

May we never be hasty in judgment and always generous.

Let us take time for all things; Make us to grow calm, serene, ers in a family environment. Duties are shared. The girls attend public school in Whiteface. They share school hours with the Whiteface students. The churches of Whiteface welcome the girls into membership. They are accepted into the community with the loving warmth which is indicative of the small towns in this democratic nation.

Girlstown is a private institution. It receives no state or federal aid. Income is from the leased land, an International Endowment Fund and loving gifts of friends who wish to invest in America's future by helping a girl today.

"When you educate a girl, you educate a family," and "A GIRL IS THE ONLY MATERIAL GOD CAN USE FROM WHICH TO MAKE A MOTHER." Girlstown contributes better young women as tomorrow's citizens and mothers.

gentle. Teach us to put into action our better impulses, straightforward and unafraid. Grant that we may realize it is the little things that create differences, that in the big things of life we are at one. And may we strive to touch and to know the great, common human heart of us all, And, oh Lord God, let us forget not to be kind!

Mrs. Ben Whitfill presided at the informative business meeting. The Caprock District meeting schedule was reviewed with interest by all members present. This year Plainview will host the convention on April 9 and 10.

The luncheon planned for April 9, will honor all Junior Clubs of the district. The L.O.A. Study Club of Silverton will be introduced by the March of Time Study Club, and all who can attend are urged to do so.

McKenzie Campaign Against Comanches 1874 - 1875

Related to H. S. Smith by P. Brown, Citizen Scout

General McKenzie with a small military force, started from Fort Duncan near Eagle Pass, Texas 1874. His mission was to invade Comanche country, subdue the Indians and, therefore, end their wanton attacks on the settlers of the upper Colorado and Concho Rivers and vicinity.

On his way from Fort Duncan to Fort Concho, General McKenzie gathered additional forces, and on arriving at Fort Concho, his equipment was made to number 2500 men and 125 wagons, mules, horses and supplies with campaign necessities. The greater number of these soldiers were made up of colored men. There were some white soldiers, citizen scouts, and Tonkwa Indian trailers. The names of the Citizen Scouts were J. P. Brown, I. E. Brown, Wash Tanker, Chas Millin, John Davison, R. Clark, J. G. Connell, A. E. Adams, B. W. Lee, and a few others whose names are not remembered.

Leaving Fort Concho with his army, McKenzie made his way northward toward the Plains country, the Llano Estacado, the land of the Comanche, and the home of the Buffalo.

Battle No. 1

The army moved along its course without casualty until reaching Tenderbrook Springs. Here, about twenty miles south of the present site of Colorado City, a little brush between the Indians and soldiers occurred just a bit of fun for the boys and the braves. However, the Indians were routed out toward the north with Tonkwa Trailers, Citizen Scouts, and soldiers in their wake.

Battle No. 2

On Tobacco Creek, a head of the Colorado River, McKenzie succeeded in coming up with the Indians. Here a brush somewhat more fierce than before occurred, but the Comanches were routed out as before. The Indians here seemed to be banding together, gaining in number.

Battle No. 3

The army pursued, as like the sport of a victor, and at Blanco Canyon overtook the Comanches, who were retreating in apple-pie order. Here quite a fight took place, and through the indiscretion of one of McKenzie's captains a number of soldiers were trapped and killed by the Indians. The redmen had greatly increased in number. McKenzie reduced the captain to the rank of a private. The Indians were routed and the army followed them but it was getting worse all the time.

Battle No. 4

Next the Indians were overtaken at Quitaque, where they endeavored to make a stand; but, failing this, they continued northward along the breaks of the plains. Sometimes they trailed out on the caprock.

Battle No. 5

At the Tule, or Tule Canyon, the next clash of arms occurred. It was very serious for both pursuers and pursued. Here a number of McKenzie's wagons were rendered teamless and all such wagons were burned by order of the general. There were wounded and dead on both sides. The Indians had greatly increased their number and were becoming formidable. Battling was ceasing to be sport any longer, for it was getting to be the real thing. The boys and their mounts were becoming worn out, and it was a cold mid-winter too. The army was now short of food and supplies in general. Their diet was straight buffalo meat. Through the face of it all, McKenzie routed the redmen toward the Palo Duro.

Battle No. 6

Two days after the big fight at the Tule Canyon, the Indians were known to be making what proved to be their last stand in the Palo Duro Canyon. They were fortifying by falling the red cedar trees and arranging them in lines of defense and protection.

General McKenzie, formed his own scouting company with the Indian trailers, and the citizen scouts knew just about what Mr. Comanche was doing and how he was doing it. He was not long, therefore, in designing his mode for continued action. It was plain that the longer the delay in resuming the attack on the Comanches the greater or the better he would be prepared to meet it. McKenzie, therefore, on the second or third night after the Tule Creek Battle, built a great number of fires of buffalo chips and other available fuel, as if they were going to spend the night in the camp. Later in the night, the army went out in the direction of the Indian encampment on the Palo Duro. At a point McKenzie detailed seven hundred of his soldiers with some citizen scouts to cautiously proceed to a hiding place about a half mile above the Indian camp. Here the squad was to remain for further orders unless it should there find opportunity to engage the Indians. The General took the remainder of his army quietly and entered the Canyon just below the Indians. At early daylight the fight was on, white and colored men charged the red cedar fortification and a hand to hand fight ensued. The Indians after a hard fight were forced to flee up the canyon. They were surprised too, by the seven hundred soldiers in hiding, and were turned back in the face of McKenzie. The fight now became a running fight and occupied the greater part of the day. The Comanche warriors were killed to a man, more than two-thousand dead Indians lay scattered over the battle field. About three thousand squaws and children together were taken from their hiding place under the nearby caprock. They were kept unharmed as captives. McKenzie lost three hundred men. Two trenches were dug side by side on the battle ground. The whites were buried in one and the colored in the other. All Indian ponies not desired to be used by McKenzie's men, as well as incapacitated horses of the army, were rounded up just above the battle ground and shot by the General's orders.

This fight forever broke the power of the Comanches. His squaws and children were taken by the way of Fort Griffin to Fort Sill. They were held as ransom for the unconditional surrender of two Comanche Chiefs, yet at large, with small bands. These chiefs surrendered at Fort Sill, and the remnant of the Comanche tribe was placed on a reservation near Fort Sill.

Notes

General McKenzie died in the Soldiers' Home in California.

Horses were shot about a half mile above the battle ground, against a bluff. A squad of 24 men did the work.

The battle ground covered a vast scope of country, during the day's fight, but of course the main part was about the Indian fortification on the Palo Duro.

General McKenzie took the lead in person and had a horse speared from under him in the fight.

The Indian dead were not buried. The squaws and children were herded like cattle, and bedded at night within a guarded circle. They made the night sound with howls and moanings.

Why We Say "Fight Cancer With A Check-Up"

The American Cancer Society urges all adult Americans to do two things to protect themselves against cancer: (1) have a medical checkup annually, no matter how well you feel; (2) learn cancer's danger signals and go to your doctor immediately if one of them lasts longer than two weeks. Here's the reason why:

Cancer typically begins as a localized disease. At the start, just one of the tiny cells of the body (or perhaps a few cells) undergoes an unfortunate change — it becomes a malignant cell, cancer. The cancer cell reproduces itself by dividing into two cells which in turn redivide and so on. All of the descendants of the original cancer cell are themselves cancer cells. Thus the cancer grows.

The great majority of cancers originate on the surface of some tissues such as the skin, the inner surface of the uterus, the lining of the mouth, stomach, intestines, bladder or a bronchial tube, or the lining of a duct in the breast, prostate gland or elsewhere. For a time, such cancers typically remain at the site of origin and are visible only under a microscope, but later growing into a mass that can be seen with the naked eye. While it remains confined to its source of origin this lesion is known as "carcinoma in situ," that is, "cancer in its original site."

After a time, some of the cancer cells penetrate beyond the surface and "invade" the underlying tissues. This is "invasive cancer." After invading, the cancer continues to grow but for a time cancer cells may remain more or less together as an intact mass, though perhaps spreading irregularly. So long as all of the living cancer cells remain where the disease is started, it is said to be "localized."

The more dangerous phases of cancer are the later ones. Some of the cancer cells eventually become detached and are carried through the lymph channels or blood vessels to other parts of the body. This process is known as "metastasis." But the body has a protective mechanism. The detached cancer cells may be trapped in a lymph node in the region of the original organ. This retards the spread for a time. This state of the disease is known as "regional involvement."

If left untreated the cancer cells eventually spread to many parts of the body. This is "advanced cancer." Death is then almost inevitable, although not necessarily quickly.

In theory, all cancers can be cured when it is possible to remove or destroy all of the cancer cells existing in the patient's body. This is easily accomplished by surgery when the cancer is found in the "carcinoma in situ" stage. It can usually be accomplished by surgery or radiation therapy when found in the "localized" stage. It can often be done by surgery or radiation therapy when in the "regional involvement" stage. It can almost never be done once cancer cells have been spread through the patient's body.

The problem is to detect cancer before it has spread so that it can be removed by surgery or destroyed by radiation.

For unknown reasons, some cancers grow and spread slowly while others grow and spread rapidly. Some types spread with such rapidity that they are incurable at the present time. Fortunately, about half of all cancers are of the type that are presently curable.

This is why we urge Americans to "Fight Cancer with a Checkup." This is why we educate them to heed the danger signals. If they do get cancer they will then have a better chance for cure.

If you were a professional used truck buyer, why would you pay more for one make than another? There may be several reasons, but among them would be: 1. A greater demand for the product

2. A more desirable product for resale So if used Chevrolet trucks consistently bring higher prices at auctions all over the country, it means that their quality features pay off for you not only as long as you own them but also when you are ready to trade them—double-wall cabs, doors and side panels, roof insulation, select wood floors, reliable and economical engines, real rugged tailgates, a suspension system that helps prolong truck life.
