ed for club activities through federation with TWFC.

"We get ideas from association with other clubwomen and we get to have a closer relationship with women in our town when we're working together in a club," she further says of the advantages of club participation and TWFC affiliation.

CONTRACTING COTTON

by Charles K. Baker
 Extension Economist

Texas Agricultural Extension Ser.
 Texas A&M University

To contract or not to contract? This is the question with Texas cotton producers at this time. Short supply and higher than usual prices have led to the popularity of forward contracting in 1971 and 1972.

Cotton producers traditionally have sold in the spot market. The options of forward selling and selling in the futures market have been less popular.

Some evidence of importance of forward contracts is the increase from 11% of the U. S. Department of Agriculture early contracting of the 1972 crop was 31% of the anticipated crop. The percentage is expected to increase sharply as planting season arrives. Contracting has been wide spread in the Texas Rio Grande Valley, during the first quarter of 1972.

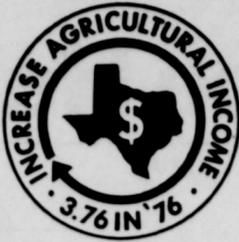

The advantages of forward contracting are simply stated, assured supply of quality needed by the buyer at time of harvest and a "locked in" price to the grower against which he can make farm management decisions.

Since buyers and growers are relatively inexperienced in this marketing option they should give careful consideration to certain questions in order to avoid possible pitfalls.

The first question facing both buyer and seller is the domestic and foreign supply and demand situation for the foreseeable future. Adequate supply of acceptable quality will influence the buyer's action in covering fiber needs. Anticipated price movement as a result of supply and demand coupled with the growers ability to accept risk will influence his consideration of forward contracts.

The cotton producer should ask himself the following questions before he contracts his crop:

What does it cost me to produce, harvest, and gin cotton? What quality can I reasonably expect to harvest this year? What are the terms of the contract regarding quality factors such as carley,

The effects of the poor cotton crop in 1971 will be felt in 1972 by a lack of high quality planting seed available this spring.

Producers will have to be satisfied with lower quality seed and depend on improved management and cultural practices to overcome this built-in handicap, says Dr. Robert Metzger, Extension area cotton specialist at Lubbock.

He offers several suggestions for getting the best performance from the seed available in 1972.

"Use your highest quality seed for early planting when conditions are not as favorable for emergence, save the lower quality seed for later when the soil temperature is high and other conditions are better," he emphasized.

He explains that a low quality seed lot may produce only 20% seedling emergence if planted in late April, but can produce an acceptable stand of 70% if planted after the middle of May.

"Bed planting is another practice that goes a long way in getting maximum stands from any quality seed, but is especially helpful grade, staple, "mike," and "below grades"? What about other contract terms such as date of harvest, cut-off date and mutual performance bonds or escrow accounts?

Contracts are only as good as the people who make them, and no contract could be written which would give complete protection from an unscrupulous party. If the grower or buyer lacks personal knowledge of the reputation and financial standing of the other party, banks or persons with whom he has dealt can often provide information.

ful when a farmer must use low quality seed," the agronomist says. The seedbed is not the warmest area of the field, but it will warm up earlier than the furrow and also provides the best possible environment for germination. He also warns against planting seed too deep.

"Although seed needs to be planted in moist soil, poor quality stock cannot tolerate deep planting and soil crusting as well as seed of high quality," he adds.

Producers can also improve stands by simply increasing planting rates, although they should be careful not to overdo it. In some cases, using high planting rates to compensate for poor seed can increase seedling disease enough to actually decrease stands to less than they would be with normal rates. Metzger says that a moderate increase in planting rates will usually improve stands.

In addition, producers should be sure that the poor quality seed has been carefully delinted and treated with a recommended fungicide.

"Seed treatments do not compensate for reduced quality seed, but the treatments can improve the performance obtained from the lower quality stock," Metzger says.

This year, he suggests using both protectant and systemic fungicides on seed. Until recently, seed treatment was a relatively low-cost item because of the effectiveness of alkyl mercury fungicides. But these compounds are no longer permitted for use on cottonseed. However, Metzger says, the research for acceptable alternatives has been at least partially successful. He cites research by Dr. Earl Minton of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock. Minton has compared non-mercurial fungicides with the standard alkyl mercury treatment, and found the non-mercurial materials just as effective. Some of the non-mercurial compounds that were successful include Busan 72, captan, chloroneb, PCNB Terracoat L21 and thiram. The tests showed that addition of chloroneb or PCNB usually improved the performance of the other non-mercurial compounds and the mercurial PMA. The researcher also found that systemic fungicides provided better protection against pre-emergence and post-emergence diseases than just the seed protectant fungicides by themselves.

Minton warns that seed treatment cannot be guaranteed to give a satisfactory cotton stand under all environmental conditions. Poor growing conditions after planting will reduce the potential of both superior and lower quality cottonseed.

Night The Bomed Turkey, Texas

by Rick Anderson
 following story appeared in the Seattle (Wash.) Dispatch. The story was by Mrs. U. F. Coker, sr. Mrs. Elnita Reys, niece of Coker, who lives in Seattle. We thought it would be of interest to all of our readers, many of whom probably don't know that Turkey was ever "bomed."

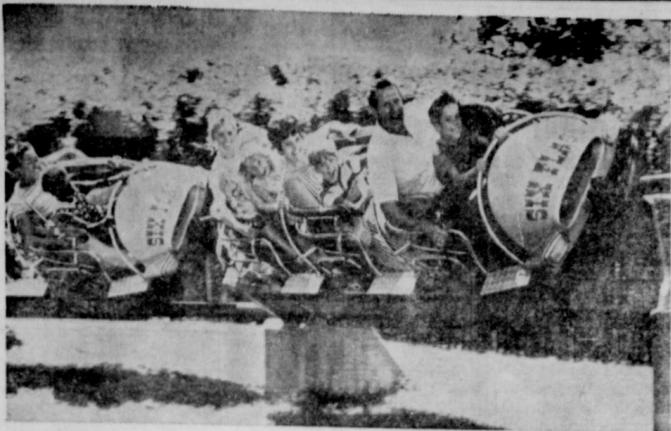

Yes, true, there have been rare, thrill-packed moments in life, but that night — a night, and they're usually slow — all other thrills drop a notch. Yes, I am putting this event above even the best introduced in a spot to an audience at a Roller contest, and even above the I ran into Eugene McIna in a men's room, and even the time Joe Namath stepped my foot getting out of an at Ocean Shores. SIX FLAGS BREATHTAKER—The Big Bend, added to the lineup of rides at SIX FLAGS Over Texas late last season, will be new to most 1972 visitors. The ride, introduced to this country by Six Flags, is the fastest entertainment ride in the nation.

A TOTAL "NEW LOOK" IN STORE FOR SIX FLAGS VISITORS IN '72

Arlington, Texas—Brilliant new color schemes, subtle design changes and exciting new attractions have given SIX FLAGS Over Texas a new "face" for the 1972 season.

The changes are evident from the moment a guest walks into the Park's entrance mall. There, in the center of a circular pool, sits a new, $25,000 fountain.

In the popular SIX FLAGS Petting Zoo, major changes have been made. A rock-lined lagoon now borders the area where visitors can pet small animals. In the waters of the lagoon are dozens of Imperial Koi carp which will actually eat from the hands of guests.

And, nearby is a new ride, the Rugged Buggy, designed specially for younger visitors who can hop into their own beach buggy or swamp buggy for a gentle ride.

In the Texas section of the big theme park visitors will find the largest, detailed historical map ever made. The huge map of Texas stands more than fourteen feet tall.

The SIX FLAGS Dolphin Show provides more fun than ever. A comical sea lion and a talented macaw have joined the two dolphins in the 1972 show.

In the Southern Palace Music Hall, a fast-moving production called, "Gotta Sing! Gotta Dance!" features a cast of sixteen entertainers from the nation's college campuses backed by a fourteen-piece pit orchestra.

And, in the Puppet Theatre, Sid and Marty Krofft are presenting "Follies," a colorful show new to the SIX FLAGS audiences.

In every corner of the family entertainment center there is a "new look" created during the winter months by Ted Friesen, an environmental artist.

Friesen, the designer of numerous settings for television productions, calls the SIX FLAGS layout "the biggest mural I've ever done."

Familiar buildings and rides have taken on a new appearance. The changes are particularly noticeable in the USA section where the ruler-straight lines of buildings have been erased by a facade of latticework and graceful arches.

The Lost Parents Caboose, where youngsters separated from their parents await a happy reunion, has been transformed from a dull, green railway car to a bright red and gold unit from a circus train.

The antique Carousel, once primarily white, has been embellished with glowing hues of red, orange and yellow.

Lines of green accent the Old-South architecture of the Southern Palace Music Hall. The color extends inside with richly-flocked wall covering and a new, green carpet.

In addition to the changes in color and design, many of the young hosts and hostesses who give SIX FLAGS its personality are sporting strikingly different costumes.

For 1972, the statement, "there's something new at SIX FLAGS," doesn't begin to tell the story.

They're real, like Turkey, which is south of Amarillo and not far from the Prairie Dog Fork of the Red River, in case you plan to drive there on your vacation.

You can also fly there, as The Man did that cool Texas evening in 1945, a year in which we were at war with Japan and the Axis but certainly not with Turkey, Texas.

The Air Force training squadron of AT11 Cessnas was over the valley practice target area near Turkey with The Man, then 19, sitting in the nose as navigator and bombardier, a dual role known as the bombigator.

His bombload was ten M38A2's — "I'll never forget the number as long as I live," he said. The M38A2 is a flash bomb, stuffed with black powder which, in daylight marks a hit with a plume of black smoke and, at night, with a brilliant flash.

The squadron passed over the bomb range. High above Turkey the big Cessnas prepared to roll and dive back towards the military target area; The Man was ready.

"The pilot never gave me enough time to set up," he said, "and you have to be ready. You can't set your switches on the dive with him, so all my toggles were up. I was primed and ready, doors open, all set except for one switch."

The wings dipped abruptly as the bomber turned over 90 degrees. The Man's knee came up. It hit the switch. Click. The bombload shifted. One bomb unhinged. It tumbled from the rack, through the bombbay and dropped silently into the Texas night. The plane was not directly over Turkey, but a centrifugal force, created by the roll of the plane, tossed the bomb in the opposite direction, in a long arc, then down, to Turkey, Texas.

Boom!

"Hey," yelled the pilot, "Somebody just bombed Turkey."

"No kiddin'," said The Man, looking back through a nose window at the other planes and then down at the still-flashing explosion, a huge drift of ebony smoke and lots of tiny people scurrying around in the startling white glare.

"Better check our load," ordered the pilot.

The Man crawled back to the bomb racks and began counting the shelves and explosives on the left: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Whew. Then the rack on the right: 6, 7, 8, 9 . . . 9? . . . uh oh.

"I couldn't believe my eyes," said The Man. "I counted them again. Still nine. One bomb gone. I had bombed Turkey, Texas!"

Fortunately, the bomb hit on the edge of the small town and only one casualty was reported: A cow. Remembering that a war once was started over the death of a pig, The Man was happy to get off with a rebuke and a few days of stacking rusted bomb shells.

And now, when we pass in the hallway, I will not be able to contain this new emotion I have for The Man.

It is much the same feeling my foot has for Joe Namath.

The Good Shepherd

He was born in a poor manger. His life was short and filled with pain and poverty . . . yet by his sacrifice He gave mankind the promise of Eternal Life. Once again we commemorate the miracle of Resurrection, and renew through Him, our faith and our joy for all the days to come.

EASTER DAY OF TRIUMPH

"He is not here: for he is risen, as he said."

Thus, on the third day our Lord rose and conquered death, fulfilling his promise. There are many other promises of wonderful things that our Lord has made to us. These are given to us in the Holy Bible. Enter his house this week, on the day set aside for celebrating his triumph, and hear the full story of this great victory. Make this a new beginning in your life too.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

The Bread of Life

During the Last Supper, Our Lord broke bread with his Disciples. He told them of the agony and shame which was to come to Him.

He left them his teachings of Love and Truth and Faith which sustained them and has sustained those who followed for nearly twenty centuries.

This Easter, as we again break the Bread of Life, let us rededicate our hearts to Him, who is our Redeemer.

CARD OF THANKS

We would like to express our appreciation to each one of you who helped the night of our accident and the days following.

Thank you so much for your prayers, the food that was brought in, the many cards, the beautiful flowers, and the many other things you did. All of these things have been a tremendous help to us during this time. There is just not words enough to express our feelings, but we pray that God will give each of you an extra blessing. God bless you. Rev. and Mrs. Nuckles and children

We wish to thank the Silvertown Fire Department and all others who helped put out the fire at our home Sunday afternoon.

Special thanks to Alton Steele for waking us from our afternoon nap and telling us we had a fire. Lucille and Snooks Baird

Our thanks to each of you who remembered Jena when she had her tonsils out. Every word of concern, phone call, card and gift was deeply appreciated. Jack, Jo Ann and Jena
