FORTY-FIFTH YEAR.

SNYDER, TEXAS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1932.

NUMBER 29.

Merchants Believe New Year To Start Slow But Sure Recovery From Slump

BUSINESS MEN CAUTIOUS, BUT SAY UPWARD TREND CERTAIN

Fine Feed Crop, Bumper Cotton Crop, Living at Home Cited As Optimistic Notes.

Cautious optimism is the philosophy with which 90 per cent of Snyder merchants are facing the New Year.

A survey made by The Times early this week indicates that local business men believe 1933 will witness the beginning of a slow but sure recovery from the world-wide slump that has been sapping vitality and hope for many months.

The heavy feed crop, the bumper cotton yield and the fact that more families than ever before are making most of their living at home, are cited as the chief local reasons for the note of decided cheer.

Back of the pleasing West Texas outlook is the belief that the change in national administrations, with its numerous re-adjustments and aiftings, will start a gradual recovery that may reach around the world before the heat of summer gives way to the icy breath of fall.

By slow-but-sure recovery Snyder merchants mean that prosperity as we knew it a few years ago is not returning, but, that citizens as a whole will find realities and hopes much sweeter before the New Year has become hoary with changes.

CHALLENGE FOR 1933 AN EDITORIAL

The Times expects several of its readers to glance at the leading article on this page with a meaningful leer, and say: "Just another cock-and-bull story manufactured by newspapermen."

This editorial is not written to that small group of men and women. Rather, it is directed to the larger galaxy that has too much horse sense to think 1933 will be a whirlwind of prosperity and too much vision to believe that the year to be born Saturday night will be as rocky as the waning twelve-month.

The Extremists of no generation have won. They offtime take the field for a season, and apparently stamp indelible changes into the lives of their fellows; and occasionally they divert the courses of age-long customs and concepts. The Conservatives of no generation have won. Sometimes they win crushing conflicts; and once in a blue moon they zig-zag the streams of customs and concepts back to the old beds.

Out of the conflict between Extremists and Conservatives always emerges the battle-child we have called Progress.

While the Extremists were having their heyday during the dizzy era of 40-cent cotton and $12 wages, we all thought the battle-child Progress was being born. But in 1930 the Extremists took a landslide, as their habit is, and the Conservatives—the Ultra-Conservatives—have been holding forth since that time.

Who can say that Progress has not been born during the battle?

The outstanding literature of several generations has come to light since the misonnerked down-grade began. Music and art have made giant strides despite their financial hindrances. Politics is undergoing some of the most drastic—and most helpful—operations it has known since the republic was founded. Men are seeking the fundamentals of culture and human growth; they are grasping for the rudiments of the lost art of living.

What steps of Progress have been taken in Scurry County during the three-year period that shall end with Saturday night's swan song?

We know, all of us know, if we but force ourselves into the corner of inquiry.

We have come face to face with the stern reality that debts, however well bolstered, do not breed either Progress or continuous Prosperity. We have learned again and again that the entire plan of home canning, chicken raising, hog raising, cow raising, garden raising is as fundamental as the smell of new-turned soil. We have become convinced that many of the things we once called necessities are nothing more than baubles of desire. We have prayed that God would send abundant harvests for the first time in four seasons and abundant harvests have come.

It is easy, even in the face of these self-scourging admissions, to scatter the blame for all our worries at the feet of Congress, the President, the Governor, the Legislature, war debts, prohibition, over-production, under-consumption, graft, millionaires, gangsters, utilities trusts, Kaiser Bill, Wild Bill Murray and Huey P. Long.

But The Times, addressing again that larger galaxy of readers that has both horse sense and vision, throws out a 1933 challenge that calls for consecration to these axioms that guard the battle-child we have called Progress:

1. Conserve the waste and right the wrongs in your own neck of the woods before you become a pain-in-the-neck to those you elect to hold the whip-hand.
2. Pay as you go, and pay out as you go; but keep on going.
3. Trust God and your fellowman and yourself.
4. Keep your sunny side—not your bottom side—up.
5. Work like the very devil.

This challenge envelops The Times wish for your New Year health, wealth and Progress!

As a Society Editor Saw It.

During a fire in a village in Ohio, the editor of the local paper, being unable to locate his regular reporter, sent out the young woman who "did" the society gossip. Here is her report, as it appeared:

"A brilliant fire was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George Sopp on Crown Hill Avenue. A large number of people attended the function.

"Mrs. Sopp, who recently had her hair shingled, made a charming escape in an exceedingly handsome henna silk blouse, the pattern of which appeared in our woman's page last week.

"The firemen, who presented an attractive appearance, were suitably garbed in blue, the tangles being full cut.

"The weather was quite delightful for an affair of this kind, a strong wind blowing. It is rumored that the fire was on a larger scale than any affair of a similar kind for years. It is also rumored that it cost Mr. and Mrs. Sopp about $25,000."

VERY LATEST By Patricia Dow

Fashions are headed straight for a suit season this spring, according to all advanced reports from both manufacturers and retailers. While first choice will be the classic tailleur, suits will still take on stylized lines which will appeal to the younger crowd, like the model illustrated in the sketch herewith.

Fabrics, taking their cue from the tailor model, will be more manish than ever. Worsted twills in tans is the newest fabric to make its bid to designers. Navy blue twills suggesting corduroy weave or hairline effects in white will also be used quite extensively, it is reported.

The younger crowd is expected to take up the suit made in light weight worsteds of invisible plaids and checks. Tropical worsteds which will be worn in the spring suits, thus affording an extensive selection in fabrics . . . and letting the style lines fall where they will.

CHURCH HEARS YOUNG MEMBER

Rodney Glascock, high-ranking graduate of Snyder High School last year, and now a ministerial student in Randolph College, Cisco, brought his first sermon to his home church here Sunday morning.

A. Rhoades Hasn't Seen a Game, But He Is a Great Fan

When Scott McCall began making a small niche for himself in state football circles two years ago, his Snyder uncle, A. Rhoades, became a long-distance follower of the young man's conquests.

This year when Scott's team, donning class A spangles for the first time, became contenders for championship honors largely through the McCall boy's leadership, the pioneer Snyder resident turned to almost a rabid fan.

But despite his team's technical defeat at the hands of the Tigers, McCall will undoubtedly be voted the outstanding star in Interscholastic League football this season.

A. Rhoades, who has never seen a football game, sides with the experts.

Ernest Pierce Dies At Residence Here

Ernest Pierce, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Pierce, died Tuesday at the family residence in East Snyder.

Funeral services, conducted Tuesday afternoon at the Pierce home, Odom Funeral Home was in charge, and burial was in the Snyder cemetery.

Palbearers were Cloyce Drinkard, Elmer Maddox, Jim Rollins, Ernest Westbrook, Clark Sturdivant and Burleson McCowen.

Flower girls: Misses Lorene Maddox and Lorene Rollins were flower girls.

The youth is survived by his parents, one sister and one brother.

Sambo—"Rastus, Ah heard that you-all went into dat ole haunted house last night. What you-all see there?"

Rastus—"Oh, 'long 'bout supper time Ah heard a lil noise and all of a sudden a ghost come in one wall as if there was nothin' there."

Sambo—"Sho now! And then what you-all do?"

Rastus—"Oh, Ah went out the other wall as if there was nothin' there."

Hunger Marcher—"Lady, do you happen to have some pie or cake that you could contribute for the benefit of a worthy cause?"

Housewife—"I'm afraid not, but won't some butter and bread do?"

H. M.—"As a general rule, madam, it would, but this is my birthday and I would like to celebrate a little, you know."

The traveling salesman called the head waitress over and complained: "Where's my honey?"

The head waitress replied, with great dignity: "She got so fresh we had to let her go."

Rufus—"What are our army and navy good for anyway, after having so much money spent on them?"

Goofus—"Why, you poor fish, don't they have an army and navy football game every year?"

John T. Sencabaugh, Cleveland, is six months older than John D. Rockefeller, Sr., his personal friend and employer for more than 60 years.

The old grouch had a son in Yale. At the end of the first year the son came home exalted. He stood second in his class.

"Second! Why didn't you stand first? What do you think I'm sending you to Yale for?"

The young man returned the second year determined to stand first, and at the end went home triumphant, and announced his standing to his father, who looked at him a few minutes in silence, then shrugged his shoulders and said:

"At the head of the class, eh? Well, Yale can't be much of a university after all."

Wife—"Hubby, darling, could you let me have a little money for shopping? Things are so cheap now, you know."

Hubby—"Why, yes, of course. Would you rather have an old five or a new one?"

Wife—"A new one, of course."

Hubby—"That's good. Here's the new 'one'—I'm four dollars to the good."

Baptist Church To Raise Fund Sunday For Orphans Home

First Baptist Church of Snyder will participate in a drive to raise funds for Buckner Orphans Home next Sunday, cooperating with the churches of the denomination of all sections of the state.

It is hoped a gift of at least $75 may be raised through the Sunday School classes next Sunday morning. Pastor Philip C. McGahey says, A goal for each department of the school has been set by the pastor, although larger gifts from each department are expected. The goals are: Cradle roll, $1; beginners, $2.50; primary, $2.50; junior, $7.50; intermediate, $10; young people, $20; adult, $30.

The local church, in cooperation with other Baptist churches of this vicinity, completed filling a car of food, feed and clothing for the home early this week.

Believe Us or Not, Boxing To Be Held

For the third time, Scurry County fistic fans are being informed that a series of good bouts will be held Friday night. This time, only a hurricane can change the plans, for the ring, the heat and other necessities have already been provided for in the old Ford sales room, just east of the square.

As announced by Promoter Ernest Townsend and the sponsoring American Legion, the card will be like this: Shade McGinty vs. Kid Whittington, feature; Kenneth Pitzer vs. Sam Horton, semi-finals; Thurman Barnett vs. Barney Mason; Clovis Payne vs. J. D. Reynolds.

Many Silos Being Built

There have been 17 trench silos and five pit silos dug in Caldwell County this year. Several dairymen have told the county agent they have found a silo is just as important as a barn.

Kentuckian Has Family of 35 Children

John D. Sloan of Sergeant, Ky., is the father of 34 children . . . and another addition to the family in August. Sloan is shown at the extreme right with his 34 children. This is Sloan's second marriage, 17 children by the first and 18 by the second marriage. The present Mrs. Sloan and the new baby are not shown in the picture.

Farmers Have Plenty of Meat

Although meat has been cured for home consumption in the Panhandle from the time of its earliest settlement, this will be the first year in Armstrong County that practically every farmer and rancher will have a plentiful supply of quality pork, obtained by following the "A. & M. way," declares the county agent.

Mistress—"Mary, when you wait the table tonight for my guests please don't wear any jewelry." Maid—"I have nothing valuable, ma'am, but I thank you for the warning."

The Times Creed.

For the cause that needs assistance;
 For the wrongs that need resistance;
 For the future in the distance,
 And the good that we can do.

THE WEEKLY DOZEN.

Tribute to Our Governor.

No matter what you think of Governor Sterling, no one can deny that he had to sit on Texas' chief seat during the most trying time in recent history. His accomplishments, considering the difficulties he has faced, have been works of wonder. The governorship has lost him a fortune, and office, and many friends, but it is said that he still has that contagious smile.

"Business Is Pleasure."

In extending the good wishes of the season to subscribers and business associates, The Times says, in the words of a card that has come to our desk: "Some folks will tell you that 'Business Is Business.' But we have found in dealing with you that 'Business Is Pleasure.' We hope the pleasure has been mutual, and extend to you our sincere wishes for a Happy New Year."

Helping the Poor and Needy.

As suggested last week, Scurry County was open-hearted on Christmas morning. The fire boys alone brought Christmas cheer to 235 persons, mostly children and old people. Numerous other individuals and groups throughout the county probably brought the total of those cheered to more than 500. Many of those helped are among our best citizens, who are temporarily without some of the necessities and all of the little conveniences of a happy life.

A New Year Calamity.

One of the calamities of the approaching New Year is that so many men plan to welcome the youngster with a bottle of home brew or a jar of bootleg stomach-ester. No matter how overwhelmingly our national representatives may favor the return of beer or the cancellation of the Eighteenth Amendment, and no matter how loud the wet propaganda may become, we believe it is a long and wearisome step the wets must take before they force legal intoxicants down the throats of the majority of Americans.

The Question of Debts.

Congress and a large part of the citizenship have become terribly perturbed in recent days about the international debts situation. The question of economics enters into the discussions, all right, but beneath the surface are the many petty jealousies and pride that usually augment wars of all natures. If the lawmakers would spend more time in considering the tax debts of our own people, and less in manipulating with the foreign creditor nations, perhaps the depression load could be lifted in a very direct fashion.

Not in Fifty Years.

Not in fifty years have Texas farmers lived so well with so little cash as during 1932. Director O. B. Martin of the Extension Service, points out in a review of the agricultural situation in the state during the year just closing. Scurry County could certainly be included in such a broad statement. Despite the fact that her county agents were cancelled during the year, her thousands of cans of edibles and her thousands of bushels of feed assured a year of self-provision that is probably without equal since the county was in its swaddling clothes.

Sir Harry Is Coming.

Sir Harry Lauder, probably the best known Scotchman in the world, and one of the best loved singers and comedians in the world, will visit West Texas tonight (Thursday) at the Sweetwater municipal auditorium. You can get a seat for as little as 50 cents, but it ought to be worth at least a dollar to let the gallant invader drive your blues away for two hours or more. Sweetwater has her manufactures, her Mustangs, her heavy rainfalls and her braggadocio. Now she is one of six places in Texas to play host to Sir Harry. Thumbs up for the Nolan County capital!

The Death Angel.

A number of families have been brought face to face with the death angel in recent days. It is always so when the weather becomes flippant during the winter season. Unless the flu epidemic goes suddenly to more serious stages, the fatalities from this scourge probably will not be greater than in an average year. But vitality will be weakened, making many people susceptible to every disease onslaught that trickles through the county. The simple little precautions that all of us know and few of us observe may not only save time, money and suffering but a too-quick visit of the angel of death.

Our Amusements.

More than a year ago The Times published a little article concerning the various amusements offered in Snyder. One editor in another town raked us across the coals for bragging about some of the amusements, while the truth was that we were trying to be sarcastic. Now, in order to avoid conflict, we just mention these time-killers—some good, some bad, some

Some Do and Some Don't.

January 1 presents Scurry County with a rather embarrassing question.

Will 1933 be a replica of 1932, with its bumper crops, low prices and swift world changes? Or will the New Year see a gradual upgrade to the half-prosperity we have missed for several years? Or, wandering farther into the field of inquiry, will 1933 see another drop in economic and social standards?

The answer to the questions lies largely in the hands of those who now read. The year 1932 has proven that life in Scurry County should be bound up in what a man is willing to do for himself, that prosperity lies as much in the mind and in the heart as it does in the pocketbook.

Some will be willing to plunge into the New Year with grins of conquering import, and these will be the doers who will help restore prosperity to her throne. Others will be the don'ters. They will survey the doubtful scene, and say "Things can't get better—they are bound to get worse."

Those who do and those who don't have always had a battle. They will be fighting as long as the world stands. The worthy against the unworthy, the brave against the craven, the strong-hearted against the faint-hearted.

The doers will win in Scurry County during 1933, just as they have won in 1932, and when another New Year comes around, the rose's perfume will heal the thistle's gash.

EDITORIAL OF THE WEEK.

HALTING FARM FORECLOSURES.

One of the most practical efforts to stop foreclosures of farm mortgages occurred recently in the state of Nebraska, one of the solid states that cannot be accused of having communistic tendencies. Most of the farmers in that state belong to the class of "kulaks," the one class hated the most by the soviet authorities. Kulaks are the most progressive of all Russian farmers and their prosperity incites the attacks of the reds.

It is the American "kulaks" who are suffering most nowadays from the crushing load of debts and mortgages. And it is the Nebraska judges who are trying to meet this condition by blocking the flood of foreclosures. Judges in the ninth district in that state recently declared a moratorium on all farm debts for an indefinite period. When it is known that one Iowa county recently reported something like 650 farm foreclosures during one term of court, one readily can see that unless something is done to stop this trend, it will not be long before the ownership of all land in the United States will revert to the hands of the favored few.

In opening the November term of the ninth district court Judge Clinton Case of Nebraska announced that in mortgage cases where no defense had been made he would neither issue decrees of foreclosure nor confirm foreclosure sales. Another judge, Charles H. Steward, sitting in another county, has announced that he will follow suit.

The net result will give Nebraska farmers a chance to turn themselves. Nobody questions that they will pay their obligations eventually, given time and the chance to get enough for their farm products to be able to pay. The example of the Nebraska judges is worth study by those in every other state in the union.—Times Record (Aledo, Illinois).

"Do you know," said the little man, "that your great big hulking brute of a bulldog killed my wife's dear little unoffending pet poodle?"

"And what about it?" asked the big man defiantly.

"Well," said the little man, looking around carefully to see that nobody was spying, "would you be offended if I presented your dog with a new collar?"

Father—"What you paid $3 for an old laying hen?"
 Boy—"Yes, father, I wanted one that was experienced."

A soldier in the World War was court-martialed for killing an officer and later was given a medal of honor for doing so. (The officer he killed was a spy.)

The inhabitants of the lonely island of Tristan de Cunha, in the midst of the Atlantic ocean, have perfect teeth though they do not use toothbrushes.

At Edenton, North Carolina, are two auto mechanics who work for different firms. One is Yates Jordan while the other's name is Jordan Yates.

An English girl of 14 has been found to possess three kidneys.

On the Gasconde river, about 120 miles southwest of St. Louis, voices will carry up the river but will not carry down, no matter how loud the shout.

fair: Picture show (one of the best in the West), dance hall, basket ball games (not in Snyder this year), domino parlors (two well-occupied ones, they say), a quiet pool hall, a number of these new-fangled "shooting galleries," roque (in warmer weather), and plenty of streets for plain and fancy driving.

Pete's New Year Wish.

Pessimism Pete's New Year wish to his 4,001 readers is this: May all your chickens turn out to be pullets, may all your kinsfolk turn out to be self-supporting, and may all your children turn out to be as handsome and undepressed as their parents.

Government on Credit.

From an Exchange: The state auditor announces a deficit in the treasury. A mere trifle of two and one-half million dollars and a few odd. We have been asked to feed about fifteen million mouths made up of four or five million unemployed and their dependents. Add to this the dependents of about ten million state, federal and municipal employes, which probably amounts to twenty-five million more. We now have a grand total of something like forty million to be fed by the other seventy-two million. It cannot be done and it will not be done. The depression will never be lifted until some of the load is lifted.

Colorado's Optimism.

The Colorado Record has been buoyantly optimistic concerning the chances of having pavement on Highway No. 101, between Colorado and Snder, before 1933 passes. We admire their faith and their work in this respect, but a portion of their optimism must have been missing when they learned that Scurry County's right-of-way had not been secured, and that the Commissioners' Court has not even been asked to secure the right-of-way. In fact, it is foolish to think of getting a place to put the road before the Scurry County officials have been assured by the Highway Commission that the road is even a near-future probability. Snyder and Scurry County have not been sleeping on the job concerning this important highway, as some of the Mitchell County folks seem to think. We have had a man's size job on our hands to secure new pavement on Highway No. 7, and to secure fairly definite promise of work on Highway No. 9.

CURRENT... COMMENT

BY LEON GUINN

A chilly companion is Mr. Winter when he takes a notion to show a few chilly examples. . . . Our recent touch of winter actually made Californians shiver, and California should now be called sunny, snowy California. . . . Taking a wide swing over the Southland, rapid mercury decreases caused a lot of poor citizens (unemployed) to take stubborn colds. . . . The Texas Panhandle had a blanket of sleet over its wheat fields. . . . All of which suggests the advisability of keeping well, as the flu menace has reached its climax.

Suggestions: Eat plenty of citrus fruits, go light on greasy foods, keep treatments handy when a cold first starts. . . . Our bodily organs are burdened, as a rule, with toxic poisons in the fall; therefore, our body is weakened when flu does its most virulent work. . . . Grapefruit and oranges are the two best alkaline content fruits to eat, science says.

Mount Aetna might well have been rumbling, so volcanic have been political string pullings under cover in Germany. . . . General von Schleicher emerges as the new chancellor of that nation. . . . Well does President Hindenburg know that herr Schleicher has been the secret molder of affairs for some time, and indeed it is better to acknowledge the leader openly. . . . When England paid the United States $95,500,000 December 15 potbelled Frenchmen gurgled an extra pint of wine and said: "We do not wish to pay."

Needless to add, the French were universally censored in the press. . . . It is known the French are the world's most egotistical set of polyglots. . . . "Since 1803 the Banque de France has been an issuer of French currency. Today, as the sole issuer, it keeps in its back yard the huge supply of gold which backs the paper money of France. . . . The eternal spring of French finance is the parsimonious peasant. Hard-earned sous drop one by one from the horny fingers into the woolen socks hidden in the bed."—Fortune. . . . As a utility leader Samuel Insull was one of the best, but financially he was poor, hence the gigantic explosion of Middle West Utilities and other associated concerns. . . . Insull land extended into Texas under a subsidiary firm. Its lines ran from Elk City, Oklahoma, to Abilene, thence to McCamey and Brownsville. . . . Another Insull power line came across Kansas to Amarillo.

The true spirit of Christmas, devoid of 10-cent tinsel, is evidenced nationally, as again we pay homage to the birth of Jesus. . . . There is something sweet and pure about the spirit of Christmas that gladdens the heart and uplifts our thoughts. . . . Many a heart has been made happy because we Americans extended a helping hand to others along the pathway.

Christmas is the time when heart speaks to heart and sentiment reaches a climax when the spicy appetizers are placed around the steaming turkey. . . . Jolly Mr. Santa, you have had a big job this year, yet children everywhere insist you kept all names straight. . . . The star still points us to a home of peace just as it did nineteen hundred years ago. . . . And the best story ever written concerning Christmas is found in the first and second chapters of Matthew. . . . December 29 we again take up the history of some popular songs—songs that live eternally.

Children. Their appetite needs no coaxing. Their tongues are never coated, cheeks never pale. And their bowels move just like clockwork, because they have never been given a habit-forming laxative.

You can have children like this—and be as healthy yourself—if you follow the advice of a famous family physician. Stimulate the vital organs. The strongest of them need help at times. If they don't get it, they grow sluggish. Dr. Caldwell's syrup Pepsin is a mild, safe stimulant.

When a youngster doesn't do well at school, it may be the liver that's lazy. Often the bowels hold enough poisonous waste to dull the senses! A spoonful of delicious syrup pepsin once or twice a week will avoid all this. It contains fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin, and does a world of good to any system—young or old. You can always get this fine prescriptional preparation at any drug store. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and protect your family from those bilious days, frequent sick spells and colds. Keep a bottle in the medicine chest instead of cathartics that so often bring on chronic constipation. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin can always be employed to give clogged bowels a thorough cleansing, with none of that painful griping, or burning feeling afterward. It isn't expensive.

Supplying a week-to-week inspiration for the busy, hard-worked who will find every business trial paraded before the eyes of "The Man Behind the Scenes."

The Sociable Man.
 A wicked falsehood has come down through the ages. It reappeared in an English book as recently as 1925. The author, in describing a visit to the high spirited Lord Fisher, tells of finding him less jovial than usual. Obviously something was weighing on his mind, and he soon revealed it. "You know that Pilate was succeeded as governor of Jerusalem by Lentulus," he remarked in dull tones.

The new governor gave a minute description of Jesus, concluding with the statement, "Nobody has ever seen him laugh." With that little wretched remark Lord Fisher lapsed into meditative silence. He wanted to be reverent; he had been well grounded in the traditions of his church; he would do his duty as a Christian and an Englishman, no matter what the cost. But to worship a Lord who never laughed—it was a strain. Lord Fisher made no pretense about that.

The quotation from Lentulus is a forgery, penned by an unknown impostor in a later century; yet how persistently it has lived, and with what tragic thoroughness it has done its work. Many millions of happy-minded folks, when they have thought of Jesus at all, have had a feeling of uneasiness. "Suppose," they have said, "he were to enter the room and find us laughing and enjoying ourselves! When there is so much suffering and sin in the world, is it right to be happy? What would Jesus say?"

With such compunctious cheerful folks have had their brighter moments tintured. The friendliest man who ever lived has been shut off by a black wall of tradition from those whose friendship he would most enjoy. Theology has reared a groven image, and robbed the world of the joy and laughter of the great companion.

It is not hard to understand when you remember the character of the early theologians. They lived in sad days; they were men of introspection, to whom every simple thing was symbolic of some hidden mystery; and life, itself, a tangle of philosophic formulae.

Baffled by the death of Jesus, they rejected the splendid truth, and fashioned a creed instead. Lambs were put to death in the temple, as a sacrifice for the sins of the worshippers; ergo, Jesus was the Lamb of God. His death had been planned from the beginning of the world; the human race was hopelessly wayward; God knew that it would be and nothing would turn Him from His vindictive purpose to destroy it but the sacrifice of an innocent Son.

J. WRIGHT MOOAR REMINISCENCES STARTING IN JANUARY HOLLAND'S

Scurry County Pioneer and College Collaborate in Presenting Early Day Events.

"Buffalo Days," described as "The Chronicle of an Old Buffalo Hunter, J. Wright Moorar," is the subject of a series of articles on the widely known Scurry County pioneer to appear in Holland's magazine.

The stirring incidents of pioneer days on the South Plains were put in print by Dr. J. W. Hunt, president of McMurry College, Abilene, who took his cues direct from the lips of Mr. Moorar.

"Here is an odyssey of halfbreath escapes from death with wild Indians, wilder white men, and thundering herds of buffalo," writes Dr. Hunt in his introduction.

Following are interesting excerpts from the first chapter of "Buffalo Days."

The buffalo threw up his shaggy head and looked at the hunter who, crouching on the prairie seven hundred yards away, immediately froze into immobility.

At last the buffalo moved un- easily and in doing so turned broad- side to the hunter.

The red man waited for no more. Whirling his cayuse, he lashed into top speed and fled like a shadow over the hills, where his renegade band awaited him.

Years afterward Quannah Parker, the Indian, and Wright Moorar, the hunter, met at a peaceable reunion of early settlers and Indians, tamed on their reservations and had an interesting discussion of the incident.

"Years later still I had the story from Wright Moorar's lips, and the rugged old frontiersman, among the very last of the buffalo hunters, laughed heartily over the Indian's amazement and frantic flight.

"Where did that happen?" I asked.

"Somewhere in Garza County, Texas, not far from where Post is now."

The night came slowly, as it does in West Texas, as I sat with the old frontiersman on the veranda of his ranch home; and to my eager questions came the recital of the stirring days of the buffalo, which constitutes these chronicles to follow.

On their way up to the jewelry store, they were marked by a number of fur dealers, who followed the wagon and entered into negotiations with the boys, with the result that those fifty-seven hides were sold to the tanners, made up into leather, and the experiment proved immediately successful.

Flu Epidemic On Downgrade This Week In County

After claiming hundreds of Scurry County victims during the latter part of November and the early part of December, the flu epidemic has apparently hit a downgrade, and physicians are of the opinion that the epidemic will not have another severe stage during this winter and spring.

Although practically every family has been visited by the unwelcome guest, the siege as a whole has not brought severe illness, and few deaths have come on the heels of the disease.

There are still a number of cases, but the still, cold weather, and sunshiny days, have done their part in reducing the number of those ill.

In most cases the attacks have been accompanied by sore throats and chest, painful coughing, backache, and the usual sluggishness of flu sufferers.

The epidemic has covered a considerable territory, especially in this state. Reports indicate that the crest of the wave has passed at practically all points.

"There goes that Mr. Sharp. I wonder how he made all his money?"

"Heaven knows!"

"Ah, that's why he always looks so worried."

To Property Owners of Snyder Independent School District:

Some time ago the Legislature of the State of Texas made provision for the payment of past due taxes and waiver of the penalty and interest provided by law on such taxes.

Apparently the School Board is without authority to cancel or waive the lawful penalties and they must be collected in order to release the property from the tax lien.

Every property owner owing past due taxes should make an effort to take care of his tax liability before the expiration of the period of grace allowed for these payments, for the saving is worth while.

Final Installment

John had refreshed himself in the dressing room. He looked in the mirror appraisingly. The deep tan of the open was being leached out by the city of shadows. He brushed back his stiff hair. He smiled so like Gilbert Van Horn. He hardly cared. What did Josephine want?

After dinner they sat in the familiar library. "I leased the house, you know," Gilbert said. "The house they changed almost everything, everything but this. I love the room." A fire was crackling in the open hearth, was near the glow of flames.

Josephine drew her feet up on the lounge, and propped by cushions, blew smoke wreaths toward the fire. Tashi returned with a tray. Both took Curacao.

"John, you must tell me about your adventures in South America." For a long while they talked, aimlessly. The noises of the city were dim. Memories grew about the flames.

Then they sat in silence. Suddenly Josephine reached in a fold of her bodice and drew forth a package, handing it to John. "These belong to you, John. For I've been, you see."

His cigar had fallen, he lifted her. Her face so close to his. The years sped away. Over the mantelpiece, Gilbert Van Horn looked down on them while Josephine poured out her heart.

John was on fire, he kissed her brutally, carelessly. He held her close and looked into her eyes. "Why can't we get married, now, tonight?"

"No, John, dear. No! No! We will leave tomorrow night. I have so many things to settle. The movers and storage people will be in early tomorrow. I want to get some of my things in order. Go back to the club, like a good boy, tonight. Get your things packed. I will put my things in the small car trunk. We'll take the coach, motor to Philadelphia, get married, John, at last. And then, after a while, we can come back and settle things here, and go on away for a few years. Oh, I am so tired of New York."

Late, very late, John Breen kissed Josephine and left. John's last day in the realms of uncertainty passed swiftly. He got up early, tubbed and took a brisk walk. Then he sent off a cable to London. "Cannot accept the China post." That, for that! He packed a small trunk, whistling the while. Several times he almost phoned Harbord and "Put it. No use. I'll wait from Philadelphia." Were they to be married before, or after? He wondered. Josephine had a very puzzling way about her.

He called her up at noon. "Come after dinner," she laughed deliciously. "There's a moon tonight, for the elopement. We'll pick up your things as we go through Thirty-Ninth Street. Good-bye, dear, till 8:00." Something sounded like a kiss, or a smack, over the phone. He had several hours on his hands. He sat and smoked. What a wash-out the old town was! What a place. Still, he would never be lonely again. He kept trying to picture the years—the years ahead.

John had an uncanny imagination. He kept saying to himself, "This is rot, this is bally rot." He kept conjuring up pictures of John Breen, perhaps even the world, the lucky husband of a very attractive woman, a wealthy woman constantly followed by admiring glances and

ADIOS: SENORITA NINETEEN HUNDRED THIRTY-TWO; ADIOS

By Leon Guinn.

Old duce, I see the three soon to replace you on the new calendar, and now the time draws near to say: Good-bye! Somehow, Thirty-two, you and I have been great pals. Though we give Hoover the blame, Garner the praise and Congress the devil, I shall never forget you.

Although I have seen some beautiful woman, you are the first sweetheart ever to stay with me 365 days in the year. Remember our rose garden of hope? We wanted to plant verbenas and hollyhocks. You suggested bluebonnets; they were planted.

This Christmas spirit has me now and makes me reminiscent. You and I have enjoyed good health because beans, sand-grains and country pantry foods didn't leave room for medicine. Hugh S. Cumming informs us the disease rate is declining. And so are my profits.

Disease is a virulent thing. I used to have spenditis. Now it is brookitis. You've taught me one thing this year. I got so stuck-up brevity was my motto. The brief case idea, you know. I graduated to shorts. Like that! Then steps came along, and next year I said I'd discard my shirt. Like William Wrigley, my watchword is: Be brief, and change often.

Never wear under-cover things a second day. And intimate items last longer if carefully laundered. Conjugation: Squandered, laundered and buttonless!

This winter I went back to "longies." An overcoat and a cold, too, didn't harmonize well. And another thing: I used to believe that the more clothes a person wore the more money he (or she) had.

At first bridge party I attended I led my mind. A personal friend of mine in another part of Texas is wearing winter apparel. Her first season. How I know? You'd be surprised!

In 1931 the control wires were loose, the revolutions were below par and a cylinder overheated. Then in 1932 our attitude fell more. We jazzed the throttle, cussed a little and said we'd buy a new plane next year. The ship High Hope took a nose dive, and when it crashed last spring we got a shake-up. Better than that, a cross-up.

We're grounded, dear, without a high plane of nonsense, but we have a new two-seater, Common Sense, so you will handle the controls. If our fortunes don't improve pretty soon, blamed if I don't go back to greasy clothes for chest colds instead of these new-dangled medicine droppers with "drops." A drop, a drip, and you "others" get worse or better.

Next thought we'd be friends, but next we're sweethearts. Well, for

I left 76 cents in my patched pocket. When I left, it was gone, and the next morning I ate breakfast with you. We had pork chops, yet you looked innocent like. Your black hair was waved exquisitely—say, you were exotic. Of course, I didn't notice the new lipstick, and I borrowed that 76 cents. I was going to loan it to our banker, inasmuch as he promised me three per cent interest—if he could get it.

While you looked sweet and lovely I made a good crop. A good crop for a farmer like me. We cussed the government, raised hedges, corn and things to eat. I said the government favored the monied—yet, I accepted the greenback when I sold my cotton. I didn't want to fire back when helping the unemployed. We did help the jobless with jobs. Thank gracious, they worked right along, just as if the election hadn't happened. They say our public officials will no more stand around with one hand behind their backs, the people I owe have been holding both hands before them for years.

The clock strikes, and, Senorita, we must say good-bye. I've had a better time this annum than ever before; and, thank God, I've learned some sense. Angel, sweetheart, we part, but forget—never. Three hundred and sixty-five days is a long time. I embrace you; I "kiss" you, el angel de mis sueños, and now—well, Senorita, Nineteen Thirty-Two . . . Adios!
