A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Station violates fire code

A new $1 million fire station in Charleston, W.Va., cannot open because it is in violation of the city's own fire code.

"It's kind of ironic," said Capt. Johnny Brotherton, Charleston fire prevention chief. The 6,600-square-foot wood-frame structure's fire wall is compromised by metal studs going through it and a door that isn't adequately fireproofed, Brotherton said.

The problem must be fixed before the station, located in a newly developed business district, can open for fire and ambulance service.

Explosive sauce reported

The Hawaii Department of Health has raised a red flag about a locally popular hot sauce. Health officials said certain batches of Tuong Ot Sriracha Hot Chili Sauce can splatter upon opening, irritating the eyes and other mucous membranes that come into contact with it.

One injury has been reported. The problem is a result of excessive gas production within the 17-ounce and 28-ounce plastic bottles, the department said.

The sauce is made by Huy Fong Foods of Rosemead, Calif.

Termites critique sculpture

Termites were the final critics of a controversial wooden sculpture that had been the target of vandals.

The sculpture of a man and woman walking their dog on a bench was a gift to the city of Palo Alto, Calif., from its sister city of Linköping, Sweden.

The statue survived more than a decade of humiliations that included beheadings and paint splatterings.

The larger-than-life pastel-colored work called Foreign Friends became infested with termites and was buried in the Palo Alto dump.

The wood sculpture set off controversy soon after its 1989 debut, with some people deeming it ugly.

City council 'fed up' with cable service

By RONN SMITH
Editor

Local cable-TV viewers who may feel like they're getting "snowed" a little too often are not alone.

Members of the Muleshoe City Council expressed in strong terms — to a man (and woman) — Tuesday morning that they are dissatisfied with the local cable service. That means they're unhappy at the price they pay now, not to mention the increased price structure that Classic Cable has announced plans to implement in February.

Council members raised issues from generally poor reception on Fox (which the cable company acknowledges and is trying to fix) and the frustration of complaining for years without results, right up to the (bleep) that appeared on local screens during last week's Texas Tech basketball game.

Councilwoman Sharon Grant finally asked if it is Classic Cable's intention to raise rates whether the council approves the raise or not.

Cable representative Mark Allen said that it is.

"Then this councilwoman will probably start deducting off her bill for each day when I don't get good service," Grant said.

Resident Max King said, "I've seen better reception with rabbit ears in a cheap motel."

City to help fund worker for golf course

By RONN SMITH
Editor

The Muleshoe City Council agreed Tuesday to help fund a greenskeeper position to take care of the golf course at the country club.

The proposal, which now goes before the board of the country club, was made by City Manager Rick Hann: The city will pick half the salary ($10,000) plus insurance (which could range from more than $9,000 to nearly $11,000). The club will provide the other half of the greenskeeper's pay.

Advocates of the move pointed out that the city owns the golf course, that they were seeking help only with the golf course and not the country club itself, and that they have been unable to hire a greenskeeper because they can't afford the insurance and benefits that are necessary to get someone qualified to take the job.

Getting it perfect

Tatom Heathington of Muleshoe grooms his steer for this weekend's Bailey County Junior Livestock Show at the Coliseum. Weigh-in and classification of animals is Thursday, and competition begins with the sheep at 9 a.m. Friday. A complete schedule of the event appears on Page 3.

Lazbuddie stock show draws nearly 100 animals

FRIONA — Lazbuddie 4-H and FFA youth geared up for this weekend's Parmer County Junior Livestock Show with the annual Lazbuddie Stock Show Jan. 15 at the Friona Civic Center.

The local show gives the Lazbuddie junior livestock exhibitors a chance to get their animals some experience in the show ring and to hone their showmanship skills as well. It also provides a venue to collect some nice prizes.

Almost 100 head of livestock went through the show ring during the one-day event, including 70 swine, 10 lambs, nine goats and seven steers. This weekend, most of those same entries will be compared against the best from Farwell, Bovina and Friona in the two-day Parmer County Show.

Winning grand champion buckles at the Lazbuddie show were:

- Landon Parham in the junior market steer show with an outstanding Maine calf. Shonnah Black exhibited the reserve grand champion and collected the buckle as the steer show's top showman.

The steers led by Parham and Black went 1-2 in the Exotic Class; Jason Jesko had the top two steers in the British breeds.

- Kolby Wilkerson in the junior meat goat show. Mandy Haney, who had the second-place goat in the heavyweight class behind Wilkerson's grand champion, had the reserve grand.

Wilkerson had two class winners in the grand drive. The third was exhibited by Melanie Winders. Wilkerson was also judged the top goat showman.

- Wayne Terry in the junior market lamb show with his champion mediumwool. The reserve mediumwool, shown by Suzanne Mason, earned reserve grand champion honors.

Also in the grand drive were the champion Finewool and Finewool cross, both shown by Garrett Scisson.

Terry was the top senior lamb showman, while Scisson was the top junior.

- Mason, who swept both top prizes in the junior market swine

What more could a convenience-store customer ask for than a quick ceremony for two?

That's exactly what Cathy King of Muleshoe got Friday when she made a quick stop at the Town and Country No. 134, 107 E. American Blvd.

The United Supermarket employee decided that after having to reschedule her wedding for the third time, it was time to take matters into her own hands.

King made arrangements with Justice of the Peace Jack Bates to marry the couple where the prospective groom, James Gowan, is employed.

The surprised groom — unaware of the impending proceedings — innocently greeted friends as they escorted King into the store.

"I heard my district manager telling my assistant manager that they had never heard of anything like this ever happening anywhere," a newly married Gowan said.

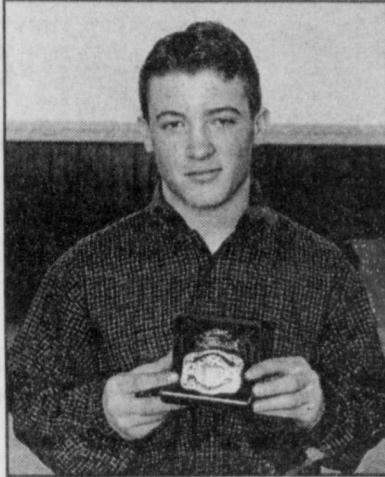

King said it didn't take a Ph.D to figure out what she had to do. "Since he is married to his

These six young exhibitors were singled out during Saturday's Lazbuddie Junior Livestock Show as being the best at bringing out the best in their animals. In addition to being tops at showmanship, Wilkerson exhibited the grand champion meat goat; Terry the grand champion junior market lamb; Scisson the champion finewool and champion finewool cross lambs; Black the reserve champion junior market steer; Seaton the first-place lightweight Duroc; and Mason had both grand champion and reserve champion junior market swine.

Other breed champions included Terry, who had the champion Berkshire; Casey Divin, who had the champion other pure breeds; Kayla Parham, who had the champion Duroc and the champion Spot; and Winders, who had the champion Cross.

Other reserve breed champions were Chelsea Nichols, with reserve Berkshire; Shannon Redwine with reserve other pure breeds; Ryan Mason, who had the reserve Duroc; Trey Nickels, who had the reserve Hampshire; Suzanne Mason, who had the reserve Spot; and Cole St. Clair, who had the reserve champion Yorkshire and Cross.

Showmanship awards in the swine went to Suzanne Mason in the junior division and Jeffery Seaton in the senior division.

Hanna explained that the city has been served under a "gentlemen's agreement" with Classic, since the contract between the two expired late in 1998, and that company officials had agreed to abide by the terms of the old agreement until a new one is signed. (That move is awaiting new cable regulations.)

The old contract did stipulate that the company could not raise rates, but Allen said that provision has been superseded by federal regulations that do not require local approval.

Hanna said that at the last city council meeting, a Classic representative said, essentially that "rates are going up here because they can."

He said the electric and other utility rates are not going up. "I really think the cable company is trying to take advantage of us," he added.

He also said he thought the city should look into the possibility of an anti-trust lawsuit against the cable company.

"The quality has been deplorable lately," Hanna said. "During the Dallas game, the only thing worse than Classic Cable was the cowboys.

"I have other things to do, and I don't want to listen to people gripe about the television. Still I know they don't have any choice but to talk to us (at city hall) because they don't seem to get anything out of the cable company," Hanna said.

Grant said part of the problem is Muleshoe's location. "We're disadvantaged because we can't get Lubbock or Amarillo news without cable," she said.

She pointed out that Classic has lower rates in some area towns. "I am definitely not happy about a rate increase. I think there needs to be a reduction, not an increase, or I myself will be looking for an alternative.

"If you're not making any money in Bovina or Friona at $19.95, why are you still there?" she asked.

Allen said the low rates in those two towns resulted from cut-throat competition with other media, and may have been a mistake.

Allen said the cable problem with Fox resulted from a broadcaster having trouble getting its signal into this area and erecting a tower near Clovis in 1998 that broadcasts on the same frequency as Fox.

But, he said, Classic is trying to solve that problem. "We're not just sitting back taking the money. "We're diligently working on it."

Councilman Jerry Hicks pointed out that Fox is "one of our favorite channels, and we can't even get it — and we're looking at a rate increase."

And Mayor Robert Montgomery said the problems are really across the spectrum. "It's not just Fox that's the problem. At any given time on some channel, there's a problem. In my experience, there's no pattern to it.

"I'm tired of complaining about the system and then somebody comes here and tells us about millions spent on technology, and the system doesn't get any better," he said.

Allen asked for a tape of the meeting to give his company.

She also said their streak of rescheduling is due to him averaging an 80-hour work week because of personnel shortages and his dedication to the job.

Peach tree blooms may depend on delaying tactics

By RONN SMITH
Editor

Here in the southern parts of USDA Zone 6, we often lose crops of peaches, apricots and similar members of the rose family because warm weather causes the trees to bloom, then a hard freeze comes.

That's almost certain to be a problem this year, with the buds on peach trees already swelling.

The soil temperature in one spot in Bailey County, Texas, rose to 35 on Tuesday a week after it had been 29. The official soil temperature probably won't reach 35 for a while; the reading was taken during the heat of the day, and the sun is only warming the top few inches. At night, the cold underneath will creep up into the top layer of soil and cool it down.

But the plants are definitely feeling the pull of spring already, and a short cold spell isn't going to stop that process once it's set in motion.

You can "fool" fruit trees a little bit, though. While the soil is still cool, simply give the trees a good soaking and put 5 or 6 inches of mulch (such as hay) under them.

The mulch should extend out to the drip line (the tips of the branches) or more, but be careful not to pile it against the trunk. A ring of plastic or wire helps ensure that mulch doesn't get pushed up against the trunk later.

If the trunk isn't unusually large, a gallon plastic jug with top and bottom removed can be cut lengthwise and "clamped" around the trunk to hold the mulch back.

This precaution is mainly to prevent voles — tiny mouse-like rodents — from burrowing through the mulch and gnawing the trunks. In some parts of the country, disease also may gain a foothold from damp mulch against the trunk, but I think rodent damage is much more likely on the High Plains.

And I am talking about established trees here. Other rodents — cottontails and jackrabbits and others — need to be fended off from young trees, since those varmints will chew the tender bark right into the wood and can kill young trees before they get established.

Any time we're expecting a cold snap, it's a good idea to water fruit trees (and other plants) if the topsoil has dried out. Water itself is a good insulator, so the more water your plants contain, the better they're going to stand up to the cold.

Yes, it's nice to see spring coming — the first crocus bloom opened Jan. 16 and the early daffodils have shot up 2 inches of growth. But with that, when it's as warm as it's been this year, comes the peaches budding and other things that just shouldn't be happening this early. Bad!

Continuing on the "tour" of early vegetables, I would make the observation that not many people seem to grow carrots anymore. Granted, they are so cheap at the supermarket that you can't justify growing them to save money, but the difference in flavor between just-pulled and store-bought is enough to justify growing a few. That's especially true of the little "baby" varieties, I think.

Carrot plants are attractive enough to grace a flower bed, so you don't even have to dig up a separate space for them.

One bit of garden trivia: Did you know that the oldest varieties of carrots are mostly bright yellow rather than orange? The reason we get mostly orange carrots today is because at some point the French decided they preferred orange ones, so all the breeders went in that direction.

There are many "old standby" carrots, but three new ones are:

- 'Chantilly Hybrid' (72-73 days) is a fairly short (5- to 6-inch) dark orange variety, sweet-flavored. The catalogs say that there have seldom been improvements on the old chantenay-type carrot, but this is one. It's earlier-maturing but reportedly doesn't give up any flavor in order to get there. (J.W. Jung Seed Co.);

- 'Nutri-Red' (72 days) is a 9-inch red with strong flavor. (Territorial Seed Co.); and

- 'Sweet Rocket' (70 days) reportedly has higher nutritional value (beta carotene) plus good flavor in an 8-inch size. (Burpee Seeds)

Happy planting!

Drink plenty of water during cold weather activities

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

HOUSTON — Drinking a tall glass of water before heading for an outdoor winter workout might not be appealing, but it's essential.

"A person can become dehydrated even when participating in cold-weather activities because the body still heats up during exercise," said Becky Gorham, a research nutritionist with the USDA/ARS Children's Nutrition Research Center at Baylor College of Medicine.

"It's important to remember that the body performs the same functions whether it's cold or hot outside," she added.

According to Gorham, the key is to stay away from cold water while hydrating during a workout because it can cause the body to chill faster. While eight glasses of water is the recommendation for a sedentary person, active people should drink more. The rule of thumb is to drink one liter of water for every 1,000 calories expended.

Anyone who can't drink that much might consider seltzer, diluted juice, decaffeinated tea or fruits and vegetables that have a high water content, such as lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes, as alternatives.

Remember that thirst is not an accurate measure of hydration. It's best to pay attention to how the body feels and how it is performing. Sluggishness, low energy level and headaches can signal inadequate fluid intake.

There are no words to express our gratitude to everyone who shared our sorrow during the loss of our loved one. To each of you who has helped us through these days of grief with food, flowers and plants, words of sympathy, messages of kindness, and especially your prayers, we can only say "Thank You and May God Bless You." A very special thank you to everyone who had the house ready for the family.

MULE TALES

Lady Mules dominate district opener

By MITCH MASON and STACY LOCKER

With this 47-32 victory over the Lady Pirates, the Lady Mules gained an early advantage in the race to the district title.

Sophomore Britni Gartin carried the Mules by leading all scorers with 17, followed by Chyla Torres with 11. The Lady Mules controlled the boards by out-rebounding the Pirates 47-34. Lindsey Field and Bobbie Benham led the rebounding attack with 12 and 11, respectively.

With the adrenaline provided by the long-awaited district opener, the Lady Mules stormed out to a 16-4 first-quarter lead. Powered by a strong defensive effort, Muleshoe built its advantage to 26-12 by halftime.

By only allowing Lubbock Cooper to score 20 points in the second half, the Lady Mules were able to maintain this lead, resulting in an impressive win to start off the district season.

Weevil assessments being paid promptly

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation officials say producers and landlords have been prompt in settling their eradication assessments in the three active High Plains zones.

While the foundation field staff was busy running first-year diapause programs in the Western High Plains, Permian Basin and Northwest Plains eradication zones, the accounting staff in Abilene was processing certification data provided to them by USDA's Farm Service Agency and sending out invoices to more than 20,000 cotton growers.

This was a threefold increase over 1998 billings, with the lion's share of the increase coming from the High Plains zones.

As of mid-January, 92.7 percent of the $6.5 million in assessments billed for the Western zone has been paid. Less than 5.5 percent remains subject to a lien against 1999 production.

Similarly, in the Permian Basin less than 4.5 percent of the $4.61 million 1999 assessment does not yet qualify for a compliance certificate. With 95.4 percent paid, the Permian Basin has the highest collected rate for the state thus far.

In the Northwest Plains, where billing and final payment dates were later than the other two zones, less than 6 percent of the $4.515 million billed remains subject to lien under the compliance certificate program.
