A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Oh baby!

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - An inmate watched a woman give birth on a sidewalk beneath his jail window without knowing that was his wife. "He heard I'd had a baby, called me here and asked me if I knew someone had a baby on the street," Raylett Carr said from her hospital bed.

"I told him: 'That was your baby.'" Carr was on her way to a fireworks show when she went into labor with her seventh child. She asked a parking attendant to call for help. Paramedics arrived within minutes, but it was too late. Mother and child are doing well.

Acquitted man jailed

FORT WORTH, Texas - Although a jury found Robert Washington innocent of murder, he's still going to jail. So is his mother.

A district judge cited both with contempt of court after they reacted to the jury's verdict with shouts of joy and victory celebrations.

"It was as if he had caught the winning touchdown and spiked the ball in front of the defensive back," Judge George Gallagher said.

"I didn't hear a word. All I saw was the physical response, and it was totally inappropriate." Washington, 23, was charged with the death of Roland Groom, 17, who was killed during a melee outside an Arlington social club in 1996.

Robber has second thoughts

DAVENPORT, Iowa - An armed robber who targeted a gas station and convenience store gave up and left after a clerk uttered just two words. It wasn't even a complete sentence.

The clerk at Kelly's Gas told police that a man in a black ski mask had come in just before midnight and pulled a handgun from his coat pocket, police said. The clerk said the man demanded money and the clerk said "Don't even."

The would-be robber put the gun back in his pocket and left. No arrest has been made.

Henry Ford's farming creation an environmental savior

Opinion
By DENNIS T. AVERY
Hudson Institute

CHURCHVILLE, Va. - Time magazine is publishing a special Earth Day issue, with Ford Motor Co. the exclusive sponsor, emphasizing the pledge of Ford president William Clay Ford Jr. that his company will lead the world in the development of environmentally "clean" vehicles.

I want to know whether Time and Henry Ford's great-grandson will finally give the old gentleman credit for saving millions of acres of wildlands with the gasoline tractor. When Henry began tinkering with gasoline engines around 1900, America's farms were literally horse powered. American farms had more than 20 million horses. They not only covered the streets of New York City with hundreds of tons of manure a day but ate billions of tons of grass a year. With an average of four acres of land to grow grass, hay and oats for each horse, America used the equivalent of four Iowas or 25 Yellowstone National Parks to grow fodder for its draft horses.

Vaclav Smil of the University of Manitoba in Canada says if American farming were horse-powered today it would take 250 million horses to match our tractor and harvester engines. We'd need 740 million acres of land to feed the horses twice as much arable land as the United States has. Instead of exporting food to densely populated Asian countries, the United States would be hard put to feed itself.

Every acre of cropland that can produce food instead of being used to produce animal fodder means at least one acre of wildlands is saved. Some of the high-quality cropland is worth four or even 10 acres of wildlands. Tractors also get the fields prepared faster, so the growing season is longer and yields are higher. Every bit of extra yield per cropland acre means more wildlife habitat on a planet that cultivates 37 percent of its land area. People before Henry Ford tried to invent the modern tractor with steam engines.

But steam engines were terribly heavy. Imagine trying to drive a 10-ton railroad locomotive across a wet field, without rails. Tractors could power stationary threshing machines, but rarely could they be used for fieldwork. Their smokestacks were also a terrible fire hazard for something like wheat harvesting.

Also, 2000-pound draft horses are terribly dangerous. One of my neighbors kept draft horses as a hobby, but died after being kicked in the stomach by one of his huge geldings. I was in a draft horse runaway when I was 10 years old, but survived.

Henry Ford helped change horse power to horsepower. He was working with the new, lightweight gasoline engine. Shortly after he developed the famous Model T auto, he put his engines to work in revolutionary farm tractors. They were light enough to stay on top of the soil, and powerful enough to plow the land much faster than any

Satellite access to local TV passes House

WASHINGTON — By a vote of 375-37, the U.S. House of Representatives last week passed the Rural Local Broadcast Signal Act (H.R. 3615), a bill that would extend loan guarantees to companies willing to provide rural communities with access to local television via satellite.

"For rural communities around the country, local television is about more than entertainment," said House Agriculture Committee Chairman Larry Combest (R-TX). "In addition to network programming and sports, they are often dependent on local news for emergency information regarding weather and natural disasters. For farmers and ranchers, this information is even more vital to their livelihoods. This legislation will help ensure that these communities have equal access to local television."

Muleshoe baseball team playoff hopes still kickin'

KEVIN WILSON
Staff Sports Writer

The Muleshoe Mules baseball team turned their playoff chances from slim to quite possible with a split of games over the weekend.

On Saturday, the Mules took on the Roosevelt Eagles and went home with a 9-8 loss in extra innings. The Mules scored seven runs in the first two innings, but could only manage one more run the rest of the way.

In the eight innings, Muleshoe had runners at second and third with nobody out. But the Mules lined into a double play and struck out to end the threat.

With a loss in hand, the Mules faced a tough challenge in the Shallowater Mustangs. Muleshoe answered the challenge with a 2-1 victory over the district's number two team.

James Barrett batted in both runs for the Mules with a bases loaded single in the first.

With the victory, the Mules avenged an 8-1 loss to the Mustangs earlier this month. Shallowater's record now stands at 5-3. Cooper and Muleshoe are the only teams that have beat Shallowater this season.

Kyle Hahn picked up the win for Muleshoe. Hahn pitched 5 1/3 innings and allowed only four hits. Cameron Nix pitched the sixth and seventh for the save.

Another reason for the win was strong defense. The Mules committed only Danny Ramirez won both the long jump (20'4") and the high jump (6'1") while Kyle Atwood won the 800 meter dash with a time of 1:59.57.

Atwood won the mile relay with a time of 4:44.43 and helped the mile relay win with a time of 3:31.67. Also on the relay team are Chris Barrerra, Jose Alarcon and Jesus Tobar.

Alarcon and Ramirez also had second place finishes. Alarcon finished second in the 400 with a time of 52.91 while Ramirez finished the 300 hurdles with a time of 41.99. A.J. Flores took team of horses.

If and when Ford Motor Co. or someone else comes up with a replacement for diesel oil and diesel engines, the farmers will cheerfully use it. At the moment, however, oil is still readily available and cheap, except when OPEC periodically refuses to pump it.

Ford deserves to be proud of its record in producing safe, efficient cars and trucks that are better for the environment than any vehicles in history. The company should be commended for their new research in high-mileage diesel-electric vehicles and potentially still-cleaner fuel cell vehicles.

But Ford should also help tell the world about the environmental achievements of Henry Ford's tractors. We're all still enjoying the benefits of his inventive genius.

H.R. 3615 would authorize the U.S. Department of Agriculture to guarantee up to $1.25 billion in loans for providing local broadcast signals to rural areas. In addition, providers may offer other services, such as internet access, if they have excess capacity.

Over six million satellite dish owners who live in rural areas as well as medium and small cities and towns across the United States will no longer be denied access to their local news, sports coverage, weather, and emergency information," stated Rep. Bob Goodlatte (R-VA) who sponsored H.R. 3615. "Americans living in all areas, including Southwest Virginia, must have access to the same telecommunications services, including network television, as urban areas." The Rural Local Broadcast Signal Act helps folks obtain local broadcast signals by satellite and ensures that satellite becomes a competitive alternative for consumers."

Local TV via satellite is already available to satellite subscribers in America's twenty largest television markets. In these markets, the existing satellite "platform providers" have begun retransmission of local network affiliates. They have also announced their intention to begin retransmission of local TV stations in an additional twenty or thirty television markets over the next two years.

Nevertheless, there will still be at least 160 unserved markets in the United States, depriving more than fifty percent of existing satellite subscribers (over six million households) of their local TV stations. More than sixty percent of existing commercial television stations will not be available; and more than thirty million households will remain beyond the reach of local television via satellite.

Ainsworth cashes in at Lazbuddie Senior Class roping

Trey Ainsworth of Rogers, NM stayed late and made it pay.

After winning the average in the No. 8 of Sunday's Lazbuddie Senior Class Team Roping at Dusty Rhodes Arena, Ainsworth entered up in the No. 6, which started about 11:30 p.m. But 1 a.m., he had won a share of first and second place in the average in the No. 6 and brought his earnings for the day to $1,324.

The roping saw 440 teams compete for about $12,000 in cash and prizes. Produced by CLT Roping Productions of Muleshoe, the event was held to raise funds for the Lazbuddie Senior Class trip. The roping was quite a success, drawing 440 teams and perfect weather conditions. With 165 teams in the No. 10 and 225 in the No. 8, the event kept the organizers out until the early hours Monday.

Ainsworth had won the No. 8 with Ty Wheeler in a speedy 34.71, each collecting $750. He won the No. 6 with Jared Frazee and was second with Kelsey Richardson.

While he won more money, Ainsworth's performance didn't overshadow that of Casey Chamberlain, who put on a clinic in the No. 10. Chamberlain placed first and third in the first round and second and third in the average — all with different partners. He was the day's second-high money winner with $1,086.

Othertop money winners included Frazee, who collected $796; Wheeler with $750; Mark Ramy, who won $687 and Tanner Blount and Kyle Pierce who teamed to placed second in the round and first in the average in the No. 10 for $668 each.

Fourth-grader checking out life as deputy

Due to an error the following article was not entirely published. We regret the error.

By BEATRICE MORIN
Writer

Nine-year-old Justin Kube, son of J'Don and Jannette Kube of Muleshoe, recently got a private tour of the Bailey County Sheriff's Office.

The tour was strictly business for Justin: He says he wants to be a law-enforcement officer when he grows up. Given that decision, arrangements were made by Sheriff Coy Plott to show the youngster around the department.

What inspired this DeShazo Elementary School fourth-grader from Chantell White's class? "You can arrest bad guys and stop crimes," Justin said. "I think it's cool!"

He's also learned that it doesn't pay to do drugs and drink alcohol. "You don't want to be in the jail cells," he commented. "Drunk people have to sleep on concrete beds."

Justin, accompanied on the tour by his father, got a general idea of an officer's duties that an officer has.

He was told that it takes about 528 hours of law-enforcement training to become a certified deputy.

Of course, he still has a ways to go before he can start training to make his dream a reality. For now, all Justin knows is that he wants to become a law-enforcement officer.

Seeing is understanding for children with siblings in ICU

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
HOUSTON — The intensive care unit looms as a mysterious, frightening place to children whose siblings are critically ill. But a program at Texas Children's Hospital helps kids understand the "why" and "how" of the tubes and wires, then takes them into the unit for one-on-one visits.

Although the ICU is usually off-limits to children under 14, siblings are allowed to enter the area with child-life specialists.

Teresa Edmunds, a child-life specialist at Texas Children's, said visits help siblings cope with the hospitalization. "Often, feelings like jealousy and guilt build up if a child doesn't get to see a brother or sister in ICU," she said. "Also, children might hear things they don't understand and develop irrational fears but not ask questions. If they can see their sibling, it helps them feel much better."

Before they enter the unit, Edmunds meets with the visiting child, bringing along her teaching kit, which includes photographs of ventilators, monitors and medicine machines, as well as actual blood-pressure cuffs and other props. In age-appropriate language, she explains what the child will see. "I let them feel the blood pressure cuff and heart monitor wires and play with them if they want," she said. "When I'm telling them about the equipment, I try to use words they understand. For older children I can say 'oxygen,' where younger children might understand 'air' better."

Edmunds often makes dolls to help younger children understand their sibling's medical treatment. When the child is ready, Edmunds takes him or her into the ICU — usually with at least one parent accompanying them.

"I take cues from the children's facial expressions," she said. "Usually, younger kids just want to see their brother or sister and don't care about the machines. School-age kids often want to touch the equipment, and older kids ask more questions."

If the patient is alert, a visiting sibling doesn't need to be prompted about what to say, Edmunds said. But if a child has been sedated, the sibling sometimes needs encouragement to talk. "I tell them to relax, sit beside the bed and tell their brother or sister they love and miss them," she said. "Then I give them their own time in the room."

Edmunds then steps outside and watches the visit through a window. When the visiting child leaves the unit, Edmunds is available to answer questions.

"Siblings are curious about why mom and dad spend so much time at the hospital," she said. "It's good for them to see the equipment and their brother or sister. Also, it really does seem to make the patient feel better."

New Pest Management agent in Panhandle

DUMAS — Robert Bowling began his new job as the first Integrated Pest Management agent in the Texas Panhandle on April 1.

The announcement was made by Texas Agricultural Extension Service administrators Tom Fuchs, entomologist and state IPM coordinator at San Angelo, and Bob Robinson, Panhandle district director for agricultural programs at Amarillo.

"We currently have 30 IPM agents located in 63 counties around the state," said Fuchs. The new agent will work closely with Extension county agricultural agents Robert Harris of Dumas and Sam Nusz in Stratford, dividing his time between Moore and Sherman counties.

The new agent will be conducting IPM education programs focused on three top crops of the area — corn, wheat and sorghum.

"This summer, Robert will start a corn monitoring program and develop a database on pests and natural enemies of insects, weeds and diseases," Fuchs said. "He will be introducing new technologies to assist area growers, and evaluating the cost effectiveness of existing ones."

Bowling recently completed a doctoral program at Kansas State University, Manhattan, where he also earned a master of science degree in entomology. He earned the bachelor of science degree in agronomy from West Texas State University.

At KSU, he worked with IPM issues, and served as the state's insect diagnostician for eight years. His masters and doctoral research received top honors there, including the O. W. Morris Graduate Research Service Award in 1998.

"This position was made possible through the cooperative partnership of the Extension Service and West Texas A&M University, among other supporters," Robinson said.

two errors in the game. Catcher Mitch Mason also threw out three base stealers on the day.

Before the weekend, Muleshoe baseball coach Donnie Scott said that the team would need to win three of their four remaining games to have a shot at the third playoff spot in the district. The Mules currently share the third spot with Friona and Littlefield with a 3-5 district record.

"If we can beat Friona," Scott said, "the worst we can probably do is play in a tiebreaker."

What Scott would like is some help from other district teams over the week. Scott said he would like to see Cooper and Shallowater help the Mules out by beating Friona and Littlefield.

There is both good news and bad news for the Mules. The good news is they will play their final two games at home. The Mules will play Friona on Saturday at 1:00.

The bad news is that the Mules will have to finish the regular season against 8-0 Cooper, who has already clinched the best record in the district. Muleshoe will host the Pirates at 5:30 on Tuesday.

Why not eliminate Department of Agriculture?

Let me illustrate that I am not the only columnist who occasionally misses the big picture:

"Among the many agencies that have outlived their purpose is the Department of Agriculture. The USDA was created in 1862 when more than 80 percent of all American families earned their living from the land. Today only about 1 percent fit that profile (3 million people). Most of the USDA's departments could be eliminated and the relevant ones transferred to the Department of Interior." — Cal Thomas, Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Maybe he also could have pointed out that Americans now spend 11 percent of their income on food, not two or three times that much — like Europeans. Or that total gross farm income today is $196 billion, which ain't hay.

His inference is that since fewer people are involved in production and less money is spent per consumer, agriculture is less "important" in the scale of political considerations. Well, our bounty is certainly taken for granted, at least within our borders.

A quick glance at the overabundance of the basic sustaining commodities of wheat, corn and soybeans shows that their cost to the consumer has declined in real money — steadily — for years and years.

This is a direct result of agricultural subsidy programs, passed by Congress and administered by the USDA. This cheap food policy for essential foodstuffs had consolidated agricultural production into the hands of farmers with deep enough pockets to survive and get by on subsistence prices.

Were USDA management of these programs removed, i.e., less "importance" placed on their implementation, we would eventually drive all but a handful of grain producers out of business. I guess the ones that were left could be administered by the Department of the Interior, which could micro-manage them into bankruptcy within two years.

BAXTER BLACK

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

If his theory is correct — i.e., since fewer people are directly involved in agriculture, agriculture does not merit its own Cabinet member and agency — maybe we should consider abolishing the Department of Defense.

Only 1,374,746 people are presently serving in the armed forces — less than .5 percent of the population. Most of the machinery — tanks, guns and ships — could be maintained by Jiffy Lube and the troops turned over to the National Football League for defensive and offensive training.

I expect Thomas would point out that my suggestion is preposterous, and that the Department of Defense is essential to the security and survival of a nation. That any nation that cannot defend itself is doomed to a Third World existence.

Really? How much is a loaf of bread in North Korea?

All of the first and second-place finishers will compete in the regional track meet.

Stacy Locker defended her titles in the 400 and the 800 with times of 61.8 and 2:23.3, respectively.

Jessica Carpenter took first place in both the long jump (16') and the triple jump (33').

Megan Tipps won the high jump with a leap of 5'2".

In addition to the many first-place finishes, several Muleshoe players will go to the regional meet with their second place finishes.

Gartin managed second place in both the high jump and the 100 (12.8).

Eva Pylant took second in both the 100 hurdles (16.5) and the 300 hurdles (49.7). Glover finished second in the triple jump, behind teammate Carpenter.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED INCREASE IN ENVIRONS GAS RATES AND SERVICE CHARGES

On March 8, 2000 Energas Company filed a statement of intent with the Railroad Commission of Texas to increase its gas rates in the unincorporated areas ("Environs") surrounding the sixty-seven West Texas Cities listed below. The proposed increase would affect all classes of environs tariff customers including Residential, Commercial, Public Authority, Small Industrial and Air Conditioning customers and would be identical in relative magnitude to those proposed by the Company for the sixty-seven West Texas cities in the Company's pending Appeal at the Railroad Commission. The proposed effective date for the increase is April 27, 2000. The Railroad Commission may delay the proposed effective date for up to 150 days. However, the environs rates will not be changed until the rates inside the sixty-seven West Texas Cities are changed. There are approximately 22,275 Environs customers in the unincorporated areas surrounding the sixty-seven West Texas Cities from which the Company has appealed to the Railroad Commission. The proposed changes in environs rates are expected to increase the Company's annual revenues by approximately $1.0 million or 8.5%, adjusted for normal weather. The change is a "major change" under state law only in the environs of Lubbock and Odessa.

Energas proposes to restructure its gas rates to moderate bill variability during the heating season, to increase its revenues from gas service by increasing the customer charges and lower pricing blocks, and to increase its charges for miscellaneous services such as reconnecting gas services following nonpayment. The Company also proposes changes to its Gas Cost Adjustment ("GCA") Clause to collect all of the gas cost and related taxes instead of just the difference between actual gas cost and a base cost of gas in the base rates. Copies of the proposal may be obtained at the Energas Office at 5110 80th, Lubbock, Texas, 79424.

Customers who are affected by the proposed environs rate changes may, within 30 days following the proposed effective date, file written comments or a protest with:

Legal Division (Re: Docket No. 9002-9068)
Railroad Commission of Texas
P.O. Box 12967

Any such protest must be received by the Commission no later than May 27, 2000. The deadline to file a petition to intervene in the case as a party is May 27, 2000.

Reports of unlicensed AC Contractors across state

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation (TDLR) has received reports of unlicensed air conditioning and heating contractors across the state offering service and equipment.

While their services may appear to be cheaper at first glance, the potential problems far outweigh the savings.

"Unlicensed air conditioning and heating contractors are a serious problem in Texas. Not only are their business practices often unethical, their frequently shoddy workmanship is a safety hazard," said Bill Kuntz, Executive Director. "TDLR is targeting these rogue contractors with investigators in the field during an enforcement program we have named 'Turning Up The Heat'. We plan to require these contractors to comply with state law or force them out of business. It is their choice."

In an effort to educate and protect the consumer, TDLR offers these tips to help identify unlicensed contractors.

State issued license numbers must be printed on all print advertisements, company vehicles, business cards, work proposals, and invoices. If no license number is evident, the contractor is most likely not licensed to work in the state. State license numbers begin with TACL.

Check the status of a license at the TDLR web site (www.license.state.tx.us) or by phone (1-800-803-9202).

Never pay the entire price in advance. If you learn that an unlicensed contractor performed air conditioning contracting services, you do not have to pay — he cannot legally collect a fee for services performed after September 1, 1999.

Under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act, you have the right to cancel a door-to-door sale contract within three days.

To report complaints against contractors or to research a contractor's complaint history, please contact the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation at 1-800-803-9202. The complaint history may also be accessed from the agency's web site.

Created in 1909 as the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation promotes a fair business environment and protects the public welfare and safety by regulating 17 diverse industries and programs, including boxing, air conditioning contractors, and architectural barriers.
