POPULARITY OF THE SILO.

Some of the silo manufacturers report that they have put up more structures this year than in any five years in the history of the business.

WHY MEAT IS DEAR.

Producers of food animals take occasion to complain of the actions of the large packing establishments in controlling market prices of such stock to the prejudice of the interests of producers.

THE HOG SHORTAGE.

A few days ago the question was asked: "How does St. Joseph stand in the percentage column in the receipts of live stock as compared with other markets?"

Daddy's Bedtime Story

The Robins' Visit To Winnie

"THE robins didn't really come," began daddy one evening after he had told Evelyn and Jack the name of the story he was about to tell them before they went to dreamland.

Joseph market has been holding its own in the volume of live stock business as compared with other markets and has nothing to complain of, or upon which to base any criticism.

The figures do not show that St. Joseph is losing ground. On the contrary in the percentage column they will show that this market has been fully holding its own as compared with the losses at other points.

SAYS THE GROUCH.

"Huh. So you are guessing that the high cost of feeds will take a parachute drop as soon as the courts get the highbrows of the packing business in the penitentiary?"

GIRLS MAKE FINE FARMERS

Employer Says They Are Worth More Than Men. Hamilton Square, N. J., Oct. 5.—Jacob Heller, a prosperous farmer of this place employs six girls as farm hands and declares that if all farmers employed members of the fairer sex in their farms they would be much richer.

EMILY

By STEPHEN INNES

It was seven years ago that Emily came to our house in Philadelphia. Emily was an orphan whose father, a distant friend of our family, had been unfortunate enough to die in South Africa without leaving anything behind him except a few debts and a daughter of seventeen.

She was a pretty and vivacious girl, yet quiet enough in her way, too. And we knew we would like her from the first. A few days after her arrival a cousin of ours, Jack Holleran—a young fellow, big and broad and strong, but according to our way of thinking, of far too sporty a disposition, came over from Germantown to call.

Up to the present time he had not honored our family with frequent calls; we were too quiet for him. But now he began to come regularly at least three times every week. And it was evident that Emily was the drawing card.

We didn't care much for Jack. Yet we treated him civilly, of course, when he came to see us, because he was our cousin. And on all occasions we tried to make his welcome as warm as the relationship would naturally demand.

"All Right," He Said, "I'll Marry Annabel, Lee."

scandalous to say, Jack was making an inroad on her inexperienced susceptibilities, and we thought we ought to tell her of his engagement to Annabel.

One afternoon in particular, after talking it over together, we couldn't help seeing the waves of crimson that Jack's speeches and looks and acts were frequently bringing to Emily's face.

"Untrue?" we repeated in astonishment. "It's untrue," he cried ignoring the rest of us and seemingly only hungry and thirsty for the love-light that he evidently imagined he discovered in Emily's half-shamed eyes.

There was silence for half a minute in the room. "Jack Holleran, go!" commanded my mother hotly, breaking the silence. "Leave this house and go! You're a disgraceful scoundrel. Go!"

"I'll go," growled Jack striding toward the door. Then he turned. He quickly came to Emily's chair. He grasped her hand which she didn't draw away. He snatched her to him.

"Go—go—please go!" she urged rocked on the waves of tumultuous feeling. "I must speak first," he declared almost roughly. "It's true in a way. I've given my promise to marry Annabel."

Emily's heart seemed to suddenly turn to ice. The light went out of her eyes. She drew away from him. But Jack caught her fiercely to himself, and holding her trembling in his giant arms, while she struggled to be free, he turned to the rest of us.

"Annabel, Lee and I have never loved each other, we declared. You know how it's been. I took her to theaters and dances and games, and at last we— We never loved each other! Don't you understand? We didn't know what love was. We never loved each other, I say!"

FOE OF INDIGESTION FOUND Physician Asserts That Pineapple is the Long-looked For Friend of Human Race. The late lobster supper has been robbed of its terrors at last. Even hot mince pie over which a wretched rabbit has been poured can be safely eaten at midnight and no wild nightmare will follow.

For this information late diners, and all others who are subject to acute indigestion, are indebted to Dr. B. G. R. Williams of Paris, Ill., who has prepared for a recent number of the Medical Record an exceedingly interesting article on the therapeutic possibilities of the juice of the fresh pineapple.

"It seems to me," says Doctor Williams, "that the stomach can use pineapple juice under certain conditions. And this I would point out to be a prevention rather than a relief of symptoms. Pineapple juice cannot quickly neutralize an acute indigestion, but it may prevent one."

"I recall at least one patient who, though sound physically in every respect, knows that when he sits down to a heavy dinner a most poignant sick stomach is certain to follow. There could be no better addition to the meal than a piece of pineapple eaten now and then. To be brief, I convinced myself long ago that pineapple is a godsend to the one who dissipates. The midnight chop-suey and lobster lose their terrors, and he retires confident of dreamless sleep, even after mince pie or fruit cake, where once he would not have dared."

"Possibly no encouragement of this kind should be given to such habit; nevertheless, such knowledge is of value to the medical man in his consultation with the one with whom the ordinary meal is as much a disappate as the midnight banquet."

What Can City Boys Do? City boys get no chance at all in the trades. The argument of the unions is that they are being constantly subjected to the pressure from the country, where the boys learn the trades and then come to the city. But what are our city boys to do? Shall they all grow up to be cigarette-smoking clerks and loafers? I would like to see some practical use made of the manual training facilities in the schools for which the city has put out so much money. Teach the boys in the schools the useful trades. We can't all be clerks or bookkeepers or lecturers. Some must work—Leslie's
