LITTLEST ON THE MAP

The Drovers Telegram, printed down at Kewville, has never been a very huge thing, considered from a point of principle. It has done numerous small jobs during the past five or six years, but the littlest thing it has done, since its editor got down on his knees to the National live stock exchange and apologized for lying about the St. Joseph exchange, is found in the attempt of that sheet to defend the post card and Nugget in their dirty work against the St. Joseph market.

WHO SHOULD VOTE YES.

These should go to the polls on August 1st and work and vote for the new Capitol proposition:

All who favor the present permanent seat of government, magnificent in its scenic beauty, splendid in its historical setting, and sacred in its traditions and reminiscences. All who oppose opening up the question of capital removal, frittering away the time and money and patience of the people in schemes that can never receive the approval of the voters.

All who favor rebuilding the capitol now and not dragging the matter over the tortuous course of controversy for a dozen years. All who believe that $2 1/2 million dollars will rebuild an adequate, fire-proof capitol.

All who favor saving $1,500,000 in principal and $1,500,000 in interest—the additional amount the five million dollar proposition will cost.

All who would have Missouri receive the benefit of the advertisement of progress and enterprise that the prompt rebuilding of the capitol would bring.

All who are patriotic enough to take pride in a splendid enough state house, built of Missouri stone and material by Missourians.

All who love the grand old state and would not see her lag behind the sister states in the matter of civic improvements.

All who think we need a capitol building at all and are big enough and generous enough to be willing to pay the pittance required to build it.

"UPON TERMS OF EQUALITY."

Those who advocate the admission of New Mexico and Arizona with their freak constitutions get much encouragement from the supreme court decision in favor of the Oklahoma state capital remaining at Oklahoma City, says the St. Joseph Gazette. While the issues are drawn about totally dissimilar affairs, yet it is fairly certain that the initial or foundation principle at the bottom of the Oklahoma decision affects the relations of the Arizona and New Mexican questions to the national constitution.

To begin with, the Oklahoma enabling act provided that the capital of Oklahoma should remain at Guthrie until 1915. Of course an enabling act is as subordinate to the federal constitution as a state constitution is. The federal constitution says that all states shall be admitted upon terms of equality with all other states, which gives the supreme court authority for saying that not to have the privilege to choose a new location for its capital prior to 1915 would be a violation of the understanding expressed in the federal constitution that its admission should be "upon terms of equality with the other states," which all had the prerogative of locating their capitals wherever they chose.

The application of the principle in the affairs of Arizona and New Mexico would consist in allowing them to enter into the Union of states with any kind of a constitution they saw fit, which all the other states have been allowed to do.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

All About the Bird Hospitals Patient Under Treatment in Accident Ward

"I'm so worried about my canary, daddy," said Evelyn one evening. "He won't sing, and he won't eat, and he just mopes around all day."

"What? A hospital for birds?" asked both children in astonishment. "Why, certainly," went on daddy. "Every big city has one now, and they are all doing a thriving business. Nearly all of them are run by women, and under their skilled and gentle fingers broken legs and wings are mended, stomachs are cured, feathers restored and comfortable rolls of fat put on fruit little birds."

"I went through a bird hospital some years ago," said daddy, "when I was looking out for a parrot named Charley, who was a great pet of my mother's. The poor chap had asthma and rheumatism, but he was never gross and never used his sharp bill on any one. We couldn't save him, but he lived for three weeks and was good natured and talkative up to the last day. Then he became partly insensible and just mumbled to himself. 'Poor little Charley! until he died. My mother used to call up the hospital on the phone every evening and say: 'Hello, Charley! How are you?' And he would always reply: 'Hello, mamma! It's time for you to go to bed!'"

Once admitted, the relation of the Arizona judiciary recall provision in her constitution and of the New Mexican immobile constitution to the federal constitution would be tried out in the courts and would eventually go to the United States supreme court to be rejected or sustained as unconstitutional, or constitutional, upon their merits.

CATERPILLARS IN KANSAS

Thousands of Acres of Timber Completely Defoliated.

Manhattan, Kan., June 6.—The forest tent caterpillar appeared and did much damage this year in Southeastern Kansas. Dr. J. T. Headlee, state entomologist, in charge of that department in the state agricultural college, has received some interesting reports from J. W. McCulloch and others of the work of this pest. In parts of Northern Oklahoma and Southern Kansas, Dr. Headlee says, the forest tent caterpillar has appeared in enormous numbers. So serious has this outbreak become that thousands of acres of timber have been completely defoliated, and the caterpillars are now at work on fruit and shade trees in their movements," said Dr. Headlee, "these caterpillars resemble the army worms in many respects. They travel in large bodies and congregated on anything in their path. Tree trunks, telephone poles, fences and even houses, in some parts of Chattanooga county, are black with them. Many farmers complain that the caterpillars get into the wells and water troughs. The caterpillars are now from two-thirds to full grown, and are beginning to pupate. Inside of a week or two they will all have disappeared. The moths will emerge about a month later and lay their eggs on the twigs and branches of the trees. These eggs will remain until next spring when the young caterpillars will hatch.

The forest tent caterpillar is blue headed with a line of silvery, diamond shaped spots down the middle of its back. These insects frequently defoliate oak, apple and other trees in late spring and early summer, and when not feeding assemble in clusters on the sides of large limbs and trunks. It is not a new pest. For a century or more it has been known as a destructive insect. It has ravaged orchards and woodlands at intervals from Canada to the Gulf.

Cover Wide Territory. According to Riley, once state entomologist of Kansas, later a national authority, the forest tent caterpillar was so abundant in 1852 at Memphis that occasionally trains were stalled. Extensive damage from this insect has been reported from Virginia, Arkansas, Missouri, Maine, North Carolina, Ontario, Illinois, New York, Vermont and New Hampshire. In fact, it may be found in almost any part of the United States.

As its name indicates, the forest tent caterpillar feeds most on the foliage of trees and shrubs, including the following species: Linden, maple, locust, peach, plum, cherry, rose, apple, white birch, gray birch, sweet gum, dogwood, black gum, sour gum, ash, elm, black walnut, hickory, black oak, post oak, willow and poplar. In the present outbreak it has shown its inability to consume the foliage of the tree of heaven, called by some persons in Kansas the tree of paradise. Apparently the foliage of this tree is poisonous to these worms, for the ground beneath is strewn with their bodies and they are constantly dropping from the tree.

Fortunately, thus far these pests have overrun only a small part of Southern Kansas borders. With the possible exception of protecting some shade or fruit trees thus far unharmful, but likely to be ascended by crawling caterpillars, nothing can now be done to lessen their work this year. Trees of this kind should be given a band from 6 to 8 inches wide, at a convenient height from the ground with "tree tanglefoot" upon it. Perhaps the best way to prepare tanglefoot is to put a tight-fitting paper band about the tree and cover the paper with a heavy coat of tanglefoot. The band can then be easily renewed by replacing the paper and mixture.

Naturally the questions in the minds of those who have suffered loss this year are: Will these worms come next year? If they do, what can be done to protect our orchards, shade trees and forests? The first question can not be answered with certainty. Predacious and parasitic enemies may destroy the caterpillars, or freezing weather next spring may kill them. Orchards regularly sprayed for the destruction of insects and fungous enemies will not be troubled, for these worms will be destroyed incidentally unless the caterpillars assume the army habit and travel in great numbers from adjoining orchards and forests which they have defoliated. In this case they should be destroyed in a ditch barrier. As quickly as any of the shade trees show the feeding signs these caterpillars, the foliage should be thoroughly sprayed with arsenate of lead, at the rate of about five pounds of the arsenate to fifty gallons of water. In forests such measurements of the comparative small value of the individual trees, are impracticable, and the individual owner must wait the action of natural enemies and unfavorable conditions.

During the summer of 1899 authorities in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., offered a bounty of 10 cents a quart for the white cocoons which the forest tent caterpillars spin and occupy between the time they leave the trees and the time they emerge as moths. When towns or cities become badly infested this method would prove worth while, for every female destroyed would mean the prevention of the work of about 150 hungry caterpillars. When individual, unharmed trees are to be protected the tanglefoot band should be employed.

MISSISSIPPIAN HAS ENERGY

No Hookworm in Evidence When at Washington Was in Sight.

Jackson, Miss., June 6.—Mississippians have long had the reputation of being keen for political preferment, and never overlooking their hand when a job of any kind is "hanging on the wall." Burns, who lives about eighteen miles from the railroad, and is a tiller of the soil, had applied to Congressman Witherspoon to "place" him, and on receipt of a message that he had secured a job for him as elevator boy in the national capitol, the congressman was surprised at having the applicant walk into his presence in less than forty hours. In response to the inquisitorial batteries of the congressman, which were opened upon him, Burns replied that as soon as he got his message he left old Beck hitched to the plow and standing in the field, and immediately hiked for the railroad station, where he caught the first train and made a bee line for Washington City. As an excuse for his seeming haste, he explained that he "wanted to study law in Washington, and he didn't propose to have any other fellow beat him to that job."

This action of the Smith county man refutes the charge that the people of the south are lacking in energy or fail to appreciate a good thing when one comes their way, and it's a two to one bet that Burns will make his mark as a follower of Blackstone.

CAR FLIP-FLOPS INTO CREEK

Somersaults in 30-Foot Drop and Fractures Occupant's Skull.

Jefferson City, June 5.—Frank Rost, a young grocer of this city, is at St. Mary's hospital as the result of an automobile accident. He probably is fatally injured, with a fractured skull and other hurts.

With his brother, Louis Rost, he was riding in a machine on Madison street in the southern part of the city. Approaching the bridge over Goose creek at a high rate of speed, control was lost and the machine plunged through the side railings to the creek, thirty feet below. It turned turtle in the descent, and Frank was caught under it. Only speedy rescue work prevented both men being drowned. Witnesses say that the automobile made a complete somersault as it sped through the air after crashing through the railing before it landed in the bed of the creek.

Louis Rost was found to be practically uninjured. This is the first

THE BOER WAR FIASCO.

In the June McClure's, Sidney Brooks, in his article on "Some English Statesmen," in giving an account of Lord Lansdowne's career says: "From Canada he proceeded to the Viceroyalty of India. He proved an eminently safe, competent, and unexciting ruler of the great dependency. Returning home, he became Secretary for War, and as such had to bear the odium for the catastrophes and bunglings of the Boer War. A dozen years ago all England was clamoring for his Lordship's official head. It was proved by a deadly accumulation of evidence that, though he entered the War Office four years before Mr. Kruger's ultimatum, and had thus ample time to foresee and prepare, he did, if possible, less than nothing, that he was as blind as a mole to the signs of the coming crisis; that warnings the most earnest and emphatic filtered through him as though a sieve; that he disregarded the advice of his professional colleagues; that his policy, in short, was to let the morrow take care of itself, to slide as comfortably through the day's routine as might be, and leave everything to chance. "Such a failure in any other country would have been decisive. But in strict accordance with the workings of the British system, Lord Lansdowne, having lamentably failed in one office, was immediately given another and better one. He became in 1900 Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and in that office he more than redeemed himself. He made, it is true, not a few mistakes. His handling of the Boer difficulty was far inferior in humanity, foresight, and practicality to Mr. John Hay's, and he steered Great Britain straight into the Venezuelan mess of 1903 under circumstances that made every Englishman's ears tingle. On the other hand he contributed effectually to the many influences that were making for an Anglo-French entente, and when confronted in 1905 with the alternative of a Russo-Japanese or an Anglo-Japanese alliance, he boldly elected to cut loose from tradition and to execute the most momentous curve in British policy of the past half century."

NEW MILL NEAR JOPLIN.

Joplin, Mo.—The Central States Mining Company, operating the old calamine mine at Dietzweg, has a new mine on the Hall land, near the McGee and a concentrating plant of 150 tons capacity is being built. The new development is northeast of the McGee plant. The company is said to have a good run of ore blocked out. At the McGee mine the calamine run is being worked, and the company is making turn-ins almost every week.

WHEN SWIFT BEAT STICKNEY

Fear of Appearing Unwilling to Do Right Gives Swift Control of Stock Yards Plant.

"I was forty-six years old when I took hold of the stock yards and plant at South St. Paul," said A. B. Stickney, former president of the Chicago Great Western railroad, "and it required a great deal of scheming and hard work to get the business moving. It was 12 years later when 'Old Man' Swift put in an appearance. I call him 'Old Man' Swift because he was six weeks my senior. He was truly a great merchant.

"While I was in charge Fowler Bros. made an investment of $40,000, and we ran the plant together. The first year the loss was $25,000, the second year it was $10,000 and the third year $10,000, and then we went into the hands of a receiver, and he ran the plant with our help until we had 'busted' the court.

"Then 'Old Man' Swift took a hand. The first year he sold $250,000 worth of meats. Then he said he had a proposition to make to us, and I told him to make it. We were ready to listen to propositions.

"I want you to give me this plant," he said.

"It had cost us $600,000 to build, but we gave it to him.

"Now," said Mr. Swift, "I want you to give half of the stock of the stock yards company."

"We gave him that.

"I want you to give me a rebate—laws were not so strict on those points then—on every head of cattle and other stock I buy here," said Mr. Swift.

"We gave him that. We did not want it to seem as though we were unwilling to do the right thing."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

SOME DANGER IN FOIE GRAS

Geese From Which Livers Are Taken Are Now Fattened With Poison.

"Nothing is better," said Gordon Bleu, "than foie gras, or fat goose liver. A foie gras is the size of a two-pound steak. It is as white as milk, and it tastes rather like ground peanut butter. Yet so light and ethereal is a foie gras greenhouses would take it for something powdered up and whipped, like cream.

"You know how they get these livers? They shut up the goose, and they stuff him with food forced through a hose. He must eat, whether he wants to or not. He is exactly like the suffragette hunger strikers in London, whom the home office fed through stomach pumps.

"It takes years to fatten a goose to the point where his great white liver is as big as a football, but lately a genius has arisen in France who will fatten him in a few months.

"This quick, cheap fattening is accomplished by the addition of salts of sorrel, or binoxalate of potash, to the goose's food. The binoxalate of potash works like a charm. The only trouble with the superb livers it produces is that these livers, containing oxalate of potassium, occasionally kill those who eat them."

Cordon Bleu smiled ironically. "But in these days of industrialism," he said, "when property is sacred and life cheap, can a fowl reign—that doesn't matter."

His Witty Reply. An English lady of title, while visiting Washington after the Gould-Decies wedding, which she had come over to attend, was greatly surprised at the public discussion over the smoking of a cigarette by Lady Decies at the window of her private car.

"I hear," said this lady, "that for some time to come, on account of this incident, Lady Decies will be bothered with letters of criticism from strangers and anti-cigarette leagues. The American prejudice against women smokers is extraordinary.

"I suppose, however," continued the speaker, "that there are anti-tobacco faddists everywhere. I remember a clever answer to one of these faddists made by Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, the great preacher.

"A gentleman wrote to Mr. Spurgeon, saying that he had heard he smoked, and could not believe it to be true. Would Mr. Spurgeon write and tell him if it really was so? The reply was: "Dear Sir: I cultivate my flowers and burn my weeds.—Yours truly, C. H. Spurgeon."

An Official Anecdote. Waldeck-Rousseau's reminiscences are being published serially in France; and the first instalment relates how he informed M. Loubet of his intention to retire from office. It was at a dinner of intimate friends, and he explained that fatigue and failing health seemed to make his resignation inevitable. "Who will succeed you?" he was asked. "M. Combes," he replied. But the name of M. Combes was, in those days, hardly known. The guests wondered who he was, and Mme. Waldeck-Rousseau asked: "There was a pause, and then: "M. Combes," answered the prime minister. "M. Combes, my dear, is—no one in particular."

Made a Good Record. The sympathizing neighbor was con- doling with Uno' Gabe. "Your wife, uncle, was a wonderful mother."

"She was indeed, sub. See dat I'll shap play 'er outside de gate? Well, sub, he's 'er sixcent."

Fashion Note. This slim craze has its disadvantages. "As to how?"

COL. GREEN'S SPORTY OFFER

How the Good-Natured Financier Got the Best of the Confidence Man.

Just because Col. E. H. R. Green is fat and looks good-natured, and has a sort of out-of-door air, some of the sharper in New York had him sized up as easy when he first returned from Texas to take care of the properties of his mother, Mrs. Hetty Green, writes a correspondent. It may be, too, that the colonel's breezy candor, kind of coaxed the boys along a bit. He will talk on any subject when he feels like talking, with a frankness unusual in the banking fraternity. "Here's my old friend, Mr. Hinks," said the colonel the other night, at his hotel, grabbing at a well-dressed man, who was walking by without speaking. His old friend, Mr. Hinks, shrunk into himself and was obviously embarrassed. After a moment's talk he got away, and the colonel's well-padded sides shook. "Hinks is one of 'em," said he. "I'd just landed in town when Hinks came up to me one night in the hotel. He had met me in Texas, he said. So-and-so had introduced him. I didn't remember him, but the name he mentioned was that of a good friend of mine, and I thought maybe my memory was at fault. By and by he opened the trap. He told me of the good thing he had under cover, and that I could make a million dollars if I'd just put in a few thousands. It was a gold mine, and he had the gaudiest maps and prospectuses I have ever seen. I listened to him until he got through. 'Hinks,' said I, 'just between friends, I've got a gold mine of my own that I want to sell. Now, I won't buy a mine, but I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll draw cards with you, the winner take both. That's all either is fit for.' Colonel Green got another good laugh out of it. "There's a free masonry among these fellows, I think," said he. "No one has offered me a gold mine since."

MAKES $30,000 IN A DAY "Telephone Boy" May Cause Stampede of Wall Street Pickers by His Luck.

As the result of the passage through bankruptcy of a local firm of stock brokers, James R. Keene's plunging "telephone boy" has been hailed into the limelight. An acrimonious controversy occurred in court as to whether he had made $30,000 or $50,000 by taking advantage of the so-called Hoeking pool. The "boy" insisted that he "cleaned up" only $30,000 on that deal, and stuck to this statement. The airing of his market dealings is likely to cause a stampede into the "telephone boy" business, and give new encouragement to the thousands of pickers who bury their spare money in Wall street graves, selected through tips, secret information and sophisticated rumors. It seems a pity therefore that there couldn't have come out along with Mr. Keene's telephone boy's story a few dozen stories about the other telephone boys whose market operations have accumulated nothing for them but a series of diminutive tombstones. There are 999 of them.

Cordon Bleu smiled ironically. "But in these days of industrialism," he said, "when property is sacred and life cheap, can a fowl reign—that doesn't matter."

BEST WAY TO GET GOOD REST

Wear Clothing as Loose as Possible and Lie Flat on the Back With Feet Up.

Too much is preached about exercising, and too little about resting. Few women know the value of resting or how to get the most out of a free half-hour. It can do wonders toward "pulling up" a tired body and mind, but it must be thorough. While lying flat on the back with the feet up, and most important of all—loose clothing, blood is being manufactured twice as rapidly as in any other position, and the process of "restoration" is going on in the body with the greatest possible speed. Boots should be removed, and loose slippers donned, and it is a great help if fresh stockings are put on. There is a tendency to feel chilly when a tired person first lies down, and if the body is called upon to make extra effort toward heating itself (which it very obligingly will do), the "resting" is not complete. Hence the necessity for throwing a covering over you, even if resting in a warm room. The words of a man, curiously enough, recur to me on this subject. Mr. Seymour Hicks, whose youthful appearance is one of his causes for fame, says he likes to devote the time between five and six o'clock to resting. When he can do that, no matter how tired he is, or how trying has been the day, he goes to his evening's work quite refreshed. "But," says this jolly actor, "it must be really rest. I take off my clothing, don pyjamas, pull down the blinds, get into bed, and imagine I am retiring for the night. A half-hour of rest under these conditions is worth more than half-day's less thorough siesta." Negligee garments are restful in themselves, and no woman who values her good looks will fall to form the habit of exchanging street clothes for dainty and attractive house gowns, when she is at home for the evening.

WHY THE AEROPLANE FLIES

Air Pressure Beneath it and Its Motion Keep the Flying Machine From Falling.

Ask a scientist, "What is an aeroplane?" and he will reply, "Any flat or slightly curved surface propelled horizontally through the air." That, being merely a definition of a thing; and not an explanation of flight, tells little of what is most wonderful about a flying machine. Time and time again we have all asked ourselves: Why is it that this combination of planes, propellers, motors, and rudders does not fall? Why is it that a machine many times heavier than the air stays aloft?

It is the air pressure beneath it, and its motion, that keeps up a plane. If it is to remain in the air, an aeroplane must constantly move like a skater on thin ice. The skater must move fast enough to reach a new section of ice before he falls; the aeroplane must move fast enough to reach a new section of air before it falls. Both are constantly struggling with gravitation.

The simplest and most familiar example of an aeroplane is the kite of our boyhood days. By holding it against the wind, or by running with it, if there happens to be only a gentle breeze, this oldest of flying machines is kept aloft. Invent a substitute for the string, some device, in other words, which will enable you to hold the kite in the proper direction, and you have invented a flying machine. The pull or the thrust of an engine-driven propeller is that substitute.—Harper's Magazine.

MODERN CITIES RUIN WINES

Tester Finds That Vibration From the Streets Disturbs Bottles in the Ageing Process.

"The best wine, old or young," said a wine tester, "is that which is kept absolutely quiet.

Immobility permits whatever particles there are in new wine to settle to the bottom of the cask. The sediment thus formed being drawn off, the wine's bouquet is improved and it is less likely to spoil.

Bottled, the wine continues to deposit a sediment which, if the bottles are kept perfectly still, adheres in a thick coating to the bottom of the bottles. If the bottles are moved, or there is any vibration in the cellar where they are kept, these injurious particles refuse to gather in one solid mass, and scattered through the wine, spoil its flavor.

"It is impossible to age wine in modern cities. Trolley cars, underground railways, railroads, heavy automobiles in the streets, make vibrations that disturb and ruin it."

The wine tester smiled. "Don't be surprised," he said, "if the Pontet Canet or Chateau Yquem for which you pay an enormous price turns out a failure. It may be as old as its thick covering of cobwebs and dust proclaim it to be, it may even be as old as the wine merchant claims, but if it has been kept in a cellar where there is the slightest vibration you have wasted your money, and might much better have bought a young California wine."

Time to Take Care.

The physical decay of men over forty must be more frequently mentioned lest we forget the fact that our physique was evolved for only 25 or 30 years of strenuous use.

It was not so long ago that forty-five was extreme old age, counting time in the large way of evolution. Lengthening of life has been possible only because civilization has let up the physical strains, so that if we continue them we must expect to break as of old.

Athletes stop their efforts merely because they are beaten by younger men, but the non-athletic seem to think that it is necessary to keep up excessive exercise though the tissues simply cannot stand it.

There is then no mystery in the large number of damaged hearts now being found and they will continue to increase in number and severity until the medical profession succeeds in impressing the lesson. Let us repeat it over and over again until every man over forty or forty-five realizes that he has lived his allotted time of physical vigor and must ease up the strains to retain his health.

Made Hit With Walter.

J. Everson Powell, M. F. H. of the Dean Valley Hunt, rode with the Chagrin Valley Hunt the other day to talk horse show for the Columbus meet and made a hit with Charles Johnson, a colored water at the club in Gates Mill.

After a time Johnson approached Ivan Enger, the steward, to ask the meaning of the mysterious letters "M. F. H."

"Oh, that," said Enger, without winking an eyelash. "Why, that means 'Master of the Fish Hounds.'"

Johnson's eyes grew large as saucers. "Mah Lo'dy," he whispered. "Mahster ob de Fish Hounds! Ain't he de dandy!"—Cleveland Leader.

Guaranteed Cure—Piles, Nervous and Chronic Diseases

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 17, 1910.
To whom it may concern:
This is to certify that I have had the piles for the past ten years and have tried almost every remedy that I could get up to the first of this year, at which time I commenced to take treatments of Dr. M. L. Kullman and I am glad to state that after a few months' treatment I am as well as I ever was in my life.
W. J. Meek, 1419 Olive.
St. Joseph, Mo., March 2, 1909.

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 14, 1910.
Dr. Kullman:
I have had the piles for something like 15 years and have tried all kinds of salves and suppositories and doctors that claimed they could cure, but I gradually got worse until I was not able to do any farm work, so rented my farm and moved to town. I took a course of your treatment and today I feel as stout and well in those parts as I ever did and think I am permanently cured. You certainly understand your business when it comes to curing piles.
Barney Leava.

St. Joseph, Mo., March 30, 1907.
To whom it may concern:
After suffering for 15 years with blind and protruding piles I commenced treating with Dr. M. L. Kullman on Oct. 3, 1903, and was pronounced cured Oct. 30, 1903. I have never had an ache or pain in my rectum since. His treatment is mild and easy, as I did not lose a day's work while taking treatment, although my work requires me to be on my feet from 8 1/2 to 9 hours each day.
