OVERLOOK MINOR FAULTS. Chicago Drivers Journal: One of the most noticeable and gratifying features noted in the Chicago horse trade for months back, and especially recently, is the disposition of buyers to overlook little faults.

However, the new system of inspecting horses before they are allowed to be sold in the auction ring, and the strict adherence to honesty and square dealing in the way of keeping possible buyers informed whether an animal is perfectly sound or not, has increased the confidence of these buyers immeasurably and practically eliminated all desire on their part to question the judgment of the inspectors.

MATERING THE PIG EARLY.

Farmer and Stockman: The individual who plans to bring his shoats to a weight of 250 to 300 pounds by the time they are eight or nine months old must not lose a day on them between this time and the day they are shipped to market. We do not mean by this that they must be literally stuffed with grain during the entire feeding period, but we do mean that a grain ration will have to be kept up continuously.

CHEESE AN ECONOMIC FOOD

May Be Used As Good Substitute For Higher-Priced Foods.

While so much is being said and written about the high cost of food-stuffs, it is well to remember that the housekeeper who has the most knowledge of the materials with which she works and the most skill in applying her knowledge, is the one who can make the most of her money at her disposal so far as food is concerned.

BRITON AFTER FORTUNE.

Thinks He Is Near to Mineral Wealth Worth $60,000,000. Manchester, England, June 5.—If we win this Kansas money I've sold all the neighbors they can come and live with me. That is the declaration of Mrs. Thomas Davies, wife of an Oldham (Lancashire) ambulance driver who has been told he is entitled to a share in a fortune of $60,000,000 in Kansas.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

The Story Of Gay Little Grasshopper Green

THE children cuddled down to hear the story of Grasshopper Green which daddy had promised to tell them. Jack and Evelyn knew grasshoppers well. In the summer they were among the most frequent visitors to the garden.

When Grasshopper Green had wriggled his way out of the skin and stood fanning his wings in the sunshine, he found out something odd. By rubbing the right wing over the left one he could make what seemed to him very delightful music.

So pleased was he that he now sat squee-squeeing away, forgetting to keep an eye open for enemies. In the bushes beside him a catbird had her nest. "What's that? Mrs. Catbird exclaimed as she propped her head on one side.

He tastes a good deal better than he sounds, Mrs. Catbird remarked as she hopped back into her bush.

In 1870, it seems, Henry Davies left Crow and South Chesire, and a branch of the family in the former town communicated with the relatives at Oldham. It was in consequence of this that the Oldham ambulance driver began to prosecute his claim.

In Barbara's Garden

By Molly McMaster

Janice was not in love with either of her two good-looking suitors. Neither Jimmy, big and blonde, nor Carroll, lithe and dark, had caused her butterfly heart to thrill.

But Janice realized that either one was worthy of her hand and she had decided to accept one of them.

"Which shall it be?" she asked half aloud. Even as the question formed itself she caught sight of Jimmy's motor cycle and at the same time remembered Carroll's reputation as a sprinter.

"I will marry the one of you who first brings me a bunch of one hundred pink sweet peas," she exclaimed suddenly.

She carried a tray. dling sweet peas. She caressed each blossom with loving hands and snipped with her big scissors while she hummed a tuncful air.

So busy was she with her flowers that when two men seemed literally to pounce upon her she smothered with dust and the odor of oil.

"I want one hundred pink sweet peas!" demanded the voices in perfect unison. Barbara had recovered herself and now smothered a laugh.

"Only one hundred," both men corrected. They glowered at each other with such ferocious eyes that Barbara hid retreated toward the house.

ANGELL AVOIDED THE TRAP

Tells of His Duel of Wits With a Spy of the Sultan of Turkey at Constantinople.

In the diplomatic service, a man must always keep his wits keen and ready for use. A case in point is supplied by James Burrill Angell, in his "Reminiscences."

The spies of the sultan were everywhere. A Turk told me that the spy business was the most prosperous of all. I was assured that spies were sitting at the dinner tables of the principal hotels, to overhear the conversation of the guests.

He regretted—so he informed me—to find that the government was so corrupt that he had no hope of securing the concessions except by bribing a whole row of officials.

"Sure to do so," two masculine voices exclaimed, and with an air of certainty not to be questioned.

"Oh, dear!" sighed the girl in the pink bonnet and turned to her sister in the blue.

"Since the gentlemen are so generous toward one another," put in Sylvia demurely while suppressed laughter played havoc with her voice.

"I am afraid my cycle is out of commission," Jimmy lied.

"Your cycle must be a very cheap make," Carroll remarked by way of return.

The two men unable longer to restrain themselves, burst into laughter. Silvery, roughish feminine laughter followed.

STRANGE COUNTRY IS OMAN

Something About the Sultante at the Southeast End of the Arabian Peninsula.

One of the least known countries of the Arabian peninsula is the sultanate of Oman, which occupies the southeastern extremity. The country is largely mountainous. The area has not been exactly determined, as the western, or desert, border has never been fixed.

"I couldn't run another foot if I had a million at stake," Carroll lamented the fact with an exaggerated sigh of weariness.

"You are a fine specimen!" Jimmy put in.

ONION RAISING GAMBLE

PERHAPS BERMUDA FARMER
MAKES MONEY AND THEN
MAYBE HE DOESN'T.

AMERICANS GRAB THE TRADE

Product Raised in United States and Egypt Much Larger Than
That of the Bermuda Islands.

New Orleans, La., June 5.—One of the greatest charms of the onion industry in Bermuda is its element of gamble. The profits from the industry in those islands depends largely upon the crop in the states, and the amount of the vegetable consumed. For instance, season before last, one of peculiar onion fecundity, evidently marked a world-wide onion success, for when the Bermuda farmer carried his onion crates by the thousands to the wharf in Hamilton, news had come from the commission agents in New York, telling of a flooded market. After the refused Bermuda onions were piled as high as the Tower of Babel, blocking the Hamilton docks so that tourists could scarcely land, the poor farmers were forced to drive their soft-eyed, sore-legged, raw-boned mares to town and haul their scorned onions back to the farms and there dig graves large enough to bury the fruit of months of hard labor. The consequences of this tragedy was that few onions were raised last season and these only planted by optimists, incurable gamblers and poets. Then, perversely enough, the failure of the crop in the southern states, and the absolute onion famine in the states of the northwest, caused the onion price to soar, and only the foolhardiest Bermudian farmers reaped a harvest of gold. Such a condition may not happen again in years, so it is only a gamble, with the poor Bermudians.

The Bermudian method of planting onions differs radically from the American method, according to an article in The Craftsman. The writer says: "The American method is very laborious; the general custom on the average farm is to sow the seeds in the fields where the plants are to mature; then follow a knee service that would exhaust even a Mohammedan in the seeding and thinning out of the field. In Bermuda the farmer sows his seed in carefully prepared small beds in the lowlands of peculiar richness adjacent to brackish marshes or ponds, and the onions begin life in the stately company of palms, palmettos and bananas—there is nothing like early association for molding character. There is only one weeding necessary for the seedlings. If the Bermuda farmer is a Portuguese, as he frequently is, when the weeding takes place all the family, from the cradle to the grave, assist in the ceremonial.

"When the onion plants are almost fainting from the action of growing they are snatched from their series by the thousands and placed, humbly on litters, and carried thus to a field bordered by cedars, or a windbreak of oaks and planted there for maturity, often within sight of the jade and turquoise sea, which must inspire the plants to further develop the noble qualities inculcated in them by their early tutors, the palms.

"A primitive, home-made, long-handled wooden instrument with nine blocks, eight to mark six-inch rows and one for the 12-inch path, is dragged over the field. In these 12-inch paths the men place their feet, and with hands, with the right hand alone they plant three or four onions a second, with the rapidity of rapid-fire machine guns. An experienced hand can plant twelve rods a day, and the slowest ten rods."

The Bermuda farmer complains bitterly of the sharp American; he claims that his crates are saved and onions from Texas or Florida are placed therein and sold as Bermuda product. The Bermudians also bring the charge against the Texans of the hoax of naming a town "Bermuda" and by shipping vast crops from this point, deceiving the customers into believing the onions to be from the summer islands. It is plain to be seen, therefore, that the American who buys Bermuda onions this spring cannot be too sure that he is getting the onion which is said to have a distinctive sweetness of disposition, due to the coral soil which produces mildness and succulence.

RODE OUTLAW PONY; HURT

Chicagoan, on Vacation, Says He Was Forced to Mount Animal.

Arkansas City, Kan., June 4.—Suffering from the effects of a half dozen fractured ribs and an injured spine, Henry Klee, a Chicago traveling salesman, was sent to this city from Blackland, Osage county, Okla., for surgical treatment, and he is in the Arkansas City hospital, said by attendants to be in a dangerous condition. The cause of his present condition, Mr. Klee told the surgeons of the hospital, is that he was forced to ride an "outlaw" pony on a ranch near that place, the result being that he was thrown from the animal, which no one has ever been able to conquer, and was injured. Klee says he had hired out to the ranchman to work as a "line rider" to have an outing.

THE CHOCOLATE PLANT.

Native of America, at First Looked on as Luxury in Europe.

The seeds of the chocolate plant are in pods. In preparing the seeds for market there has been but little change since early times. First the seeds are allowed to ferment and thus they lose the slight bitterness which they possess when fresh. Then they are carefully dried and in this condition they stand transportation. In manufacturing the seeds or beans are roasted, by which process the shell of the seed becomes detached from the kernel, which is the part used. Next the roasted kernels are ground. In early times the Mexicans used the seeds as a vegetable in which their maize was ground for the grinding of the roasted seeds of chocolate. Chocolate consists of the roasted, shelled, and ground seeds. Sweet chocolate is the same with the addition of sugar and flavoring extracts. Cocoa consists of the roasted and ground seeds from which the oil has been removed. Experiments have shown that if the seeds are richly treated from the first to the last stage of manufacture no objection can be urged against the beverages produced from them. It is of some importance that these seeds should be grown and selected with the greatest care and should, after reaching the factory, receive the most careful and skillful treatment.

SUES FOR CROW BOUNTY.

Horton, Kan., Man Wants $6 For Killing Pests.

Horton, Kan., June 4.—It is now up to Squire Ayers of Horton to make a record for himself in the way of decisions in important and tangled cases. R. G. Hubbs brought a load of crow to the courthouse last year, and made a bill for the same under bounty law for $6. The commissioner turned it down, and now he has brought suit for the money in Squire Ayers' court. The case will probably go to the district court for final adjustment. In this crow bounty act, the legislators did not act as usual in such cases and give the commissioner discretionary powers, but made it clear that these bounties must be paid.

COWS BITTEN BY MAD WOLF

Three Animals Near Elmo, Mo., Put to Death.

Elmo, Mo., June 4.—Believed to have been bitten by a mad wolf, three cows belonging to A. J. Van Sickle, which were displaying undoubted signs of hydrophobia, have been killed. When a veterinarian was called to investigate he entered the pen where the cows were corralled. All three charged him and he had a narrow escape from death. Attendants clubbed one of the animals to death. It was necessary to shoot the other two while in the corral, as no one would venture to try to drive them to another place for execution.

HOME EVIDENCE FOR DOUBTERS

United Doctors Stand on This Firm Foundation.

Hundreds in the Vicinity of St. Joseph Highly Praise Their Work.

Home testimonials from relatives, neighbors and friends are what inspire confidence in any doctor. It is such as these that have given the United Doctors, who have their St. Joseph institute located at 720 Felix street, second floor, their great reputation for curing the sick, even after all other doctors have failed and all hope is given up. You're not asked to read it in an almanac or some obscure corner of the paper that Bill Jones, of Posey county, Indiana, was cured of this or that disease, write him and enclose stamp, but the testimonials used by the United Doctors are from actual residents of this or near-by communities. Hundreds of letters are on file at the United Doctors' office and many ask to have their names used as reference. John A. Hancock, 23rd and Bell st., South St. Joseph, will tell how he was cured of kidney trouble in one month. Mrs. R. L. DeWitt, 1915 King Hill ave., is being rapidly cured of gallstones. J. W. Cunningham, Route 2, Agency, Mo., will gladly relate how quickly the United Doctors cured his rheumatism and kidney disease. Charles Silcott, 821 N. 2nd St., City, had a deep-seated liver disease that many doctors had failed to cure. He had been unable to work for a year, but in one month the United Doctors had him working again. Peter Frank, 402 Mitchell Ave., City, is back at work after months of idleness from rheumatism. One month of the United Doctors' treatment did it. A. F. Tyler, Agency, Mo., praises the United Doctors for his quick relief from stomach and liver trouble. Space will not permit the mention of the hundreds of other patients who have been cured and relieved by the United Doctors since they established one of their famous institutes in St. Joseph. The United Doctors have been treating sick people for many years, and it is their experience that most people are honest and reliable. You can believe what they tell you about their health, and when these citizens testify that they have been cured by this method of treatment after being treated for years in other ways without benefit, you can be sure that it is truthful. The United Doctors' offices is a busy place. It has been established for years in other ways without benefit, to see for themselves what this new treatment will do in the way of curing chronic diseases after ordinary methods have failed. The fame of the United Doctors has spread throughout the state, and patients are coming from all directions to be cured of many ailments. Consultation and examination is free to all, and only curable cases are accepted for treatment. Expense of treatment is very low, covering the cost of medicines used.

WELL WORTH THE WHIPPING

Adventurous Small Boys Determined to See Cause of Commotion, and Had Their Reward.

Ed Howe, the great Kansas editor of Atchison Globe, tells the following story in the American Magazine:

"So little that is really exciting or worth while has happened in my life that I am greatly interested in Jim and Dan Ayers, who run a restaurant in the town where I live. Something really happened to them once upon a time, and when I go to their restaurant I enjoy hearing them tell about it. "When they were boys, they lived on a farm in Virginia; I have heard them say their post office was Sudley Springs. One Sunday morning their father started them to Sunday school, and after they had loitered along the way a mile or two Jim Ayers remarked a commotion over beyond what they called the Big Woods. "What's that?" Jim asked, stopping. "It was getting late by this time, and Dan replied: "I don't know, but we'd better hurry and get to Sunday school, or we'll get a whipping."

"Then they hurried on, but the commotion over beyond the Big Woods broke out again, faintly, but it was very unusual, and Jim stopped and listened. He had never heard anything like it before, although he was a big boy twelve years old and, listening a while he said: "I'm going over there." "Better not," Dan said. "You know father whips hard." "But the strange commotion continued, so Jim said he was going, whipping or no whipping. Dan followed, but kept saying they would catch it when they returned home. They walked and walked and walked; all the time the commotion over beyond the Big Woods became more pronounced, but they couldn't tell what it was. They forded streams, and were chased by strange dogs, but kept on from ten o'clock in the morning until three o'clock in the afternoon. They had nothing to eat, and they didn't know that they could ever find their way back, because they were in a country strange to them. But they kept on, and a little after three o'clock, as a reward for their perseverance, they walked into the battle of Bull Run. I never before heard of boys going anywhere and finding anything as great as they expected."

Imprudent.
Little Emil was walking home from church with his mother and in passing the ice cream parlors wanted some. His mother's repeated "no" did not satisfy him. She finally said, "I can't buy any; I haven't any money." Emil replied, "Then why didn't you take some when they passed it around?"—National Monthly.
