February 15 has been designated as "Sorghum day" in Kansas. All of the 499 farmers' institutes are asked to discuss sorghum in every phase on this date.

Secretary Wilson, of the agricultural department, says the government cannot make enough cholera serum for all the hogs of the United States, hence it will be necessary for each state to manufacture its own serum.

The new senator of Kansas, William H. Thompson, is a resident of Garden City, a lawyer raised up from the farm, "a clean, straight-forward, hard working man," a judge with a good record, and 49 years of age. He is a Democrat who managed to stay in Kansas most of his life.

TEXAS HAS OBJECTIONS. The Fort Worth Record does not indorse the idea of having live stock and meats placed on the free list, and says:

"The United States is rapidly going out of the meat export business, and South American countries, with their virgin ranges and cheap lands, are supplying the foreign markets. Perhaps for a time they can produce meats cheaper, but sooner or later producing cost will be approximately equalized. Hence the situation in this respect may be regarded as temporary. Meanwhile much injury might result to the industry of the United States, for the time being, by free imports, without permanently benefiting consumers."

SITUATION NOT PESSIMISTIC.

C. C. Clark & Co., authorities on investment securities, do not take a pessimistic view of the industrial situation. They say: "There is no denying that the present can hardly be likened to the dark days of 1893. The terrible depression of that period was due to causes not immediately germane to the tariff. Europe had received a staggering blow from the Baring failure, which precipitated a London panic, while the United States was suffering from a complication of political and financial disorders brought on by the Venezuela misunderstanding and the Sherman silver purchase act and a succession of poor crops. The situation now is quite different. The entire woolen and worsted manufacturing business of the world was never in better condition. The mills of the continent and of the United States were never busier. Wool is now being consumed at a faster pace than at any previous time in the history of manufacturing, which means, boiled down, that woolen and worsted mills everywhere are sold months ahead at a good profit. Mills everywhere are carrying but scanty stocks of goods, and still scantier supplies of raw material. They have foreseen the inevitable tariff reductions and have been operating from a purchasing standpoint,

The Lion Thanked the Mouse.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

The Generous Lion and the Grateful Mouse

JACK and Evelyn begged for a nice story about a lion, and after thinking for a little daddy said: "I believe I will tell you the story of the lion and the mouse. It is the nicest lion story I know, for it shows that the king of beasts can be kind and that kindness is not always through a way. "Once upon a time in a huge dark jungle there lived a splendid big lion. All the other animals were afraid of him, and when his roar sounded through the forest most of them would tremble and crawl back to their lairs or dens and wait until he had passed. "Well, one day as the lion was hunting in the forest he came upon a tiny field mouse, a little timid thing that had a nest among a cluster of reeds. "The lion had no idea of hurting the mouse, but the little creature was right in his way, and he would probably have trodden upon it, as it was too frightened to run away. "Its squeak of alarm brought him to a stop, and as he looked down the little mouse cried: "'Oh, king of the jungle, please do not kill me! I am such a little thing. I would hardly make a mouthful for your majesty.' "The lion stared. He had never tasted a mouse. Indeed, he would not have touched a rabbit. He would rather kill a buffalo or sometimes even bring down an elephant for food. The idea of the king of the jungle dining on a mouse! It was amusing, and his laugh roared through the jungle. "'Run along, little creature,' he said in a kind tone as a lion can use. You may be sure the little mouse did run along as fast as he was able. "Now it happened not long after this that the king of the jungle while hunting in the forest was caught in a huge net. He knew that in the morning the men who had set the net there would come and kill him. He was bound so tightly that he could not even make a fight for his life. He roared in anger as well as distress. "As he roared, out of the shrubbery stole a tiny gray figure, and a small voice squeaked: 'King of the jungle, you were once my friend; now I shall be yours. Lie still, and I will gnaw away the cords that hold the net down. I am the little mouse whom you spared.' "Soon the lion was free. He was so touched by the gratitude of the mouse that he scarcely knew what to say. "'I shall never forget it,' the jungle king said. 'One often does favors for others to have them soon forgotten. You have shown that, though you may be small in size, you are large in mind and heart. The lion and the mouse henceforth are friends.' "On a hand-to-mouth basis. They will, therefore, not be obliged to carry down, under a tariff change, any heavy load of high-priced wool or merchandise. It is also extremely probable that a new tariff law will not become operative until a half year after its enactment, giving further time for readjustment on the part of manufacturers. In brief, the woeen mills this time will not be caught unawares by a radical move."

RECIPES FOR SALADS

Lobster Salad—Take a good-sized fresh boiled lobster, cut into small pieces with a sharp knife. Take one large or two small shells of lettuce, wash, cut the tender inside leaves in small pieces and mix with the lobster and some of the dressing. Take a flat dish and arrange the larger leaves (not the outside ones) in shells, and put a large spoonful in each, with a spoonful of dressing on top. Dressing—One tablespoonful mustard, 1 tablespoonful sugar, 2 tablespoonfuls melted butter or olive oil, 4 tablespoonfuls of sweet or sour milk, 1 cupful of vinegar, 2 eggs. Mix the mustard in part of the vinegar, add the rest of the vinegar and sugar. Beat the eggs and butter and stir in the milk; then stir the whole into the vinegar and mustard, add a pinch of salt and set on the stove to boil. Stir briskly or it will burn. This dressing is very cold before using. This dressing is also good on chicken salad, substituting cold and boiled chicken for lobster. It is better not to get the lobster and lettuce until just before serving. Set on ice until wanted.

Lobster Salad, II—The meat from 2 boiled lobsters picked fine. Mix with a little oil, salt, pepper and sugar, cabbage or celery, cut fine. Or, instead of mixing, put lobster and lettuce or cabbage in the dish in alternate layers. Make the following dressing and pour over the whole when ready to serve. Dressing—Yolk of 3 hard-boiled eggs rubbed fine, 2 tablespoonfuls melted butter, 1 teaspoonful of each of mustard, pepper and salt, 2 tablespoonfuls of sugar, 1 cupful of vinegar. Beat together thoroughly. Garnish the salad bowl with the whites of the eggs cut in rings. Lay each white ring on a small, curly lettuce leaf. The small claws of the lobster are also used by some with this green garnish.

Chicken Salad—One large, epid, boiled chicken, 3 heads of celery, white part, cut in small dice; equal amount of white cabbage, chopped. Remove skin and fat from the chicken, cut the light and dark meat in small dice and drop the whites of the eggs, all together. Mix all together.

Turkey Salad—Take equal parts of blanched celery, chop together until fine. Boil 3 eggs hard, remove the yolks and add the whites cut in bits to the salad. Mash the yolks of the eggs to a flour, add sweet cream gradually until you have a cup of egg cream; flavor this with onion juice, salt and pepper. Now add 2 tablespoonfuls of oil and 6 of vinegar and pour over the salad. Place on ice half an hour before it goes to table. Melted butter can be used in place of the salad-oil. A mayonnaise dressing can also be used.

Fish Salad—Nearly all kinds of cold fish can be made into a salad. Free the fish from skin and bone, flake or chop coarsely. Add to it the same quantity of chopped celery, cabbage or lettuce. Line the salad bowl with lettuce leaves. If convenient, heap in the salad lightly and pour over it mayonnaise or some preferred salad dressing; some of those used for salmon dressing will be found good. Garnish with tiny pickles and slices of hard-boiled eggs.

Lettuce and Egg Salad—A nice salad is made with hard-boiled eggs, and lettuce or water-cress alternating in a dish, and covering with French dressing or any preferred dressing.

Lettuce in Southern Style—Have the lettuce very cold and crisp, and lettuce or water-cress alternating in a dish, and covering with French dressing or any preferred dressing.

Farmers at the present time can own no better stock than healthy growing pigs.

USE FOR CANAL MACHINERY

Government to Be Asked to Bring Equipment to Kansas.

Hutchinson, Kan., Feb. 6.—The United States government is to be asked to bring part of the canal-digging equipment and forces from Panama, when the big canal is completed, to dig a ditch through western Kansas and Oklahoma. J. C. Hopper, a prominent land owner and livestockman of Ness county, and president of the Citizens' National bank of Ness City, is at the head of the movement, which is being organized throughout western Kansas and Nebraska to bring this about. Congressman George A. Neely has promised to do all he can to get an appropriation for the purpose, and already has prepared a bill providing for $50,000 appropriation to investigate.

Mr. Hopper's plan is to construct a canal or big ditch extending from the Black Hills in South Dakota southerly through the western parts of Nebraska and Kansas and terminating in the Cimarron river in northwestern Oklahoma.

A system of storage basins and laterals would send the surplus waters that now produce the annual inundations in the valleys of the Missouri, Platte, Kaw, Arkansas and other rivers down through a section of these states needing this water for irrigation.

The canal suggested by Mr. Hopper would be from 600 to 1,000 miles long. A system of damming the rivers, and storage of water would accompany the general project.

RUSSIANS BUY HORSES.

Government Plans to Encourage Breeding of Trotters.

New York, Feb. 6.—That George Bakhtmetoff, Russian ambassador to the United States, is endeavoring to encourage the breeding of trotting horses when he purchased J. Howard Ford's crack stallion, Billy Burke, 2:23 1/2, has just become known. The imperial society is under the direct patronage and control of the Russian government, and the horse was thus actually bought for the stud of the czar. Mr. Bakhtmetoff is a sportsman and a member of the society, and it was in response to a cable request from the president, Count Woronoff-Dankoff, viceroy of the Caucasus, that the purchase was made. The ambassador paid Mr. Ford $40,000, which is probably the highest price yet given for an American trotting horse for export to Europe.

An export certificate showing the pedigree and identity of the stallion was issued and policies of insurance were obtained, one to cover the sea voyage and the other the life of the horse for one year, with the sea risk expected. The amount of each policy was $40,000.

TEXAS IS COSMOPOLITAN. Many Nationalities Make Up Firm Population of State.

Austin, Tex., Feb. 6.—The fertile soil in Texas has attracted farmers from all corners of the state, according to the returns of the thirteenth census, there are 28,864 foreign-born white farmers in the Lone Star State. Of these, 1,170 are German, 1,026 in Sweden, 825 in England and 710 in Italy. Farmers from practically every other European country number 1,170, and non-European countries are represented by 7,982 farmers. There is a total of 69,918 non-white farmers in the state, and of this number 59,816 are negroes, 32 are Indians, 44 are Japanese and 6 Chinese. The native white farmers of that state number 313,988, and the total number of farmers is 417,779.

WANT CHANGE OF NAME.

Bill to Be Introduced Changing Kansas City, Kan., to Wyandotte.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 6.—Representative Charles Holbrook of Wyandotte will introduce a bill into the Kansas house to change the name of Kansas City, Kan., to Wyandotte. "The name 'Kansas City, Kan.,' should be changed to 'Wyandotte' to bring out the individuality of the biggest city in the state," declared Holbrook. "We are tired of being called 'West Side of Kansas City,' for any other side for that matter. We are tired of having people think that all the factories down that way are in Kansas City, Mo. We have more factories in Kansas City, Kan., than on the Missouri side by 100 per cent."

If the bill passes the changed name becomes effective in sixty days.

TO GO TO HIGHEST BIDDERS

Osage Council Will Approve Leases on Oil Lands.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—The new Osage Indian tribal council, elected a week ago to supersede the council which was dismissed by Secretary of the Interior Fisher, has decided according to a telegram to Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs Abbott, to approve leases on oil lands to the highest bidders in accordance with regulations prepared by the interior department.

The oil council was dismissed because of alleged undue influence over it by the Anglo-Siam Oil company, which was trying to secure a lease of Osage oil lands.

The Indians own about $60,000 worth of oil lands yet unleased, worth millions of dollars.

The purchasers intend to subdivide the ranch into small farms and sell to settlers.

Building Up a Soil

The Fertility Depends Very Largely Upon Humus Supply

By C. B. Hutchison, Asst. Professor of Agronomy, College of Agriculture, U. of Mo.

The first thing that is worn out in soils is the vegetable matter or humus. The longer soils are tilled and the longer they are cultivated, the more rapidly will the humus be exhausted. Unfortunately, most of the methods of handling soils, as commonly practiced, deplete the humus content very fast. The continued growing of grain crops, especially those that require considerable stirring of the soil, like corn and potatoes, rapidly reduces the humus supply; for when a soil is stirred frequently the conditions are favorable for its most rapid decay. Naturally, in this decay considerable quantities of plant food are set free, and this is one of the immediate benefits from cultivating corn. When this practice is continued year after year on the same land, the supply of humus ultimately becomes so low as to reduce the productivity below a profitable basis.

It is, of course, true that the constant removal of crops from the land removes large quantities of immediately available plant food, and this has much to do with the decreasing productivity of such soils. The most important reason for this condition, however, is the reduced supply of humus, which lessens the available plant food, allows the soil to become hard and compact and increases the amount of surface washing.

How Restore Vegetable Matter?
Since humus, then, is of such importance, and since the decreased productivity of worn lands is largely due to the depletion of their humus, naturally the first step to take in building up these worn lands is to restore the vegetable matter. Likewise the man who is thinking of the future, and who is determined to make his soils better from year to year, instead of allowing them to wear out, will manage his soil in such a way as to conserve this important ingredient.

This vegetable matter must be restored either by the application of manure or the turning under of other organic matter, such as weeds, grass, cornstalks, etc., or the growing of special crops for green manuring. The use of manure is, of course, of first importance, for it will not only supply organic matter, but will at the same time add considerable quantities of soluble plant food.

Some system of live stock farming where the crops produced can be fed and the manure carefully saved and returned to the land will be found the most economical method of farming for maintaining the humus. Where the manure supply is limited, however, as is the case on most farms, the use of green manures will be the cheapest source of vegetable matter. Any kind of vegetable matter turned under will help. As a general rule, a man should never burn off any crop residue, but turn them under to add humus.

Since humus is so rapidly removed from the soil by cropping, it is necessary that some means be provided for replacing it. The first essential to the maintenance of the vegetable matter is the adoption of a systematic rotation of crops that includes a wide use of such crops as clover, cowpeas and soja beans. Even a small grain crop, alternated with corn, will maintain the humus supply much longer than where corn is grown continuously, but where legumes are used the supply of humus is much more easily maintained.

House Plans Important.
The care in the home and all other forms of household work are greatly facilitated by right planning and the use of suitable materials for the construction and furnishing of the home. An adequate and convenient water supply and other conveniences are essential, not only for comfort and for saving labor, but also from the standpoint of home hygiene.

Scotch Query.
A bluff, consequential gentleman from the South, with more beef on his bones than brain in his head, riding along the Hamilton road, near to Blantyre, asked a herd boy on the roadside, in a tone and manner evidently meant to quiz, if he were "half way to Hamilton?" "Man," replied the boy, "I had need to ken whar ye hae come frae, afore I could answer your question."—Exchange.

When a man realizes the gulf between ideas and actualities, he becomes bitter.

FIRMLY BELIEVE IN MASCOTS

People of the Stage Probably Are, as a Body, the Most Superstitious on the Earth.

It is well known that aviators are the most superstitious beings in the world, or, rather, in the air. But certainly actors and actor-managers run them very closely in this respect.

A piece now running in London attributes the whole of its success to the mysterious appearance every night of a little, sad-faced man who lounges near the theater till the house is filled. So confident is the management that this human mascot brings luck that to keep him by them, they bribe him with choice cigars to lounge there every night.

But even this, as an extraordinary example of the lengths to which superstition runs away with the most level-headed people, is beaten hollow by the marvelous array of mascots said to control the success of a new play just starting.

To begin with, the leading lady possesses a huge black cat mascot, which she sits sedately by her on the first night. A lucky feline is also the mascot of one of the adapters, while the owner of the theater in question stakes their luck on several curious amulets in their possession.

Not content with this, the principal actor, who is also the manager, was lent for the special occasion of the first night, a magnificent watch of eastern workmanship.

HAS ITS ROOTS IN CONFIDENCE

So True Friendship Elevates Two Hearts Above Sordid Struggles of Their Time.

As the love of Romeo and Juliet elevated their souls above the strife of their houses, so can friendship elevate two hearts above the struggles of their time, though the individuals be ever engaged in it; while those friends who happily walk the same path cheer and strengthen each other by their mutual example; and since essential confidence can exist between good men only, they propel each other in the path of virtue, for it is a primary law of all intercourse, that if two or more of the same inclination, pursuit or character—good, frivolous or wicked—are brought in close contact with one another, in the same direction they will propel one another still more rapidly. Friendship must rest on mutuality, it is one of its essential qualities; for one of its requisites and blessings is the enjoyment of confidence—a luxury to good men; and Aeschylus is right when he says that kings suffer one evil, they do not know how to confide in friends; while the reason that was given of Trajan's having friends is that he was a friend of himself.—Francis Lieber.

Keep Your Individuality.
The idea that there is a kind of inequality for a woman in minding her own business and letting man do the same, comes from our confused and rather stupid notion of the meaning of equality.

The uneasy woman has always taken it for granted that man is happier than woman. It is an assumption which is at least discussible.

The man who prides the works of the Creator as all wise not infrequently treats his arrangement for carrying on the race as if it were unfit to be spoken of in polite society.

A woman is very prone to look on marriage as a merger of personalities, but there can be no great union where an individuality permits itself to be ruled. The notion that a woman's happiness depends upon the man—that he must "make her happy"—is a basic untruth.—Houston Post.

Supreme Sorrow.
All the bodily pangs and labors which motherhood and mother-care have cost age after age is the least of their giving. All the patient toiling which millions of mothers have imposed upon themselves when they alone have reared and fed their children, all the watchful nights, the tired steps—all that mothers have denied themselves for the sake of their children, is not the greatest of their sufferings. That is their greatest sorrow which a man has expressed in the poem wherein the mother throws her heart at her son's feet, who, as he angrily stumbles over it, hears the heart whisper, "Did you hurt yourself, my child?"—Ellen Key, in the Atlantic.

For the Parent's Eye.
Sympathy is a gift. We are born with it or without it as the case may be, but it can be cultivated from a very small beginning, and no parent, however cold and dispassionate toward the people in this busy world, should allow the possibility of sympathy between himself and the child to be cut off without making a hard fight. For quality, culture, dignity, understanding and quiet, peaceful sympathy—these are needed more than rooms "vermilled" and these, when exhibited in a home, give it the magnet-quality, from which children once under its influence can never escape.—Mother's Magazine.

Character in Streets.
Uncon—I see there is no street in London named after any of Dickens' characters.

Egbert—Perhaps not; but if there were I would not want to be so named.

CALLED TO THANK DOCTOR FOR CURE
Fred Klanecky Says the United Doctors Have Made His Wife Well.

He Calls to Thank Them and Also to Place His Own Case in Their Hands.

One of the reasons for the constantly growing practice of the United Doctors, who have their St. Joseph Institute located on the second floor of 729 Felix street, is that nearly every cured patient makes it his or her business to tell others.

Mrs. Fred Klanecky was cured by the United Doctors and recently Mr. Klanecky called at the Institute and consulted these specialists about his own case. He also has written the following letter for publication, in the hope it may guide other sick people to this new system of treatment:

Doctors: I called today to tell you that my wife was entirely cured of her trouble and to thank you for your good work in her behalf.

She had been suffering from a very severe pain in the right side of her chest and shoulder for over four years. We had gone to several of the best doctors we could hear of but her condition stayed exactly the same, and we thought she would never be able to get a doctor who could even help her to say nothing of a cure. When she consulted your examining physician he told her he could cure her in a reasonable length of time. The statement seemed too good to be true, but as a last resort, we took your treatment.

For the benefit of those who may be suffering with rheumatism, I wish to say that my wife commenced to improve at once, and after the first month's treatment she has never had a return of the old pain. Now, after four months' medicine, we feel that she is cured to stay cured, and the object of my visit to you today was to tell you so and to consult you about myself. Yours very truly, FRED KLANECKY.

AUTOISTS FROM CANADA.
Reliability Run From Winnipeg to Galveston Coming Summer.

Lindsborg, Kan., Feb. 6.—This section of the country will be visited in the summer by a party of Canadian tourists, who plan to give the first endurance motor run over the new Meridian road, which has been logged and routed recently.

Fifty cars driven by Canadian owners will take part in the reliability run from Winnipeg to Galveston, on the Gulf of Mexico. Motor car owners living in states traversed by the road will join this party, which by the time it reaches Lindsborg, will be one of the largest touring parties that ever visited the city.

John Nicholson, secretary of the Meridian Road association, says the road is ready for travel. One thousand miles of it between Winnipeg and Wichita make a first class dirt road. The road south from Wichita to Galveston is not as good. Canadian motorists spent $100,000 on their share of the road during 1912. The road surveyed now almost follows the right of the road during 1912. The road is sign posted. White bands on the posts will mean go straight ahead and danger. A red arrow every five miles will designate the way.

GREAT AUK'S EGG?

Maybe, but Nevertheless, It Arrived at the Breakfast Table in a Scramble.

By MARGARET MANNING.

Professor Ferdinand Brinckhofen wandered into the kitchen of his summer bungalow, on the Maine shore. His wife was washing the dinner dishes. "Ellen, my dear," he said, "Doctor Cavendish, of the Natural History museum, will be here this afternoon. Can you get up a meal for him? He has to start back tomorrow morning." "I suppose so, Ferdinand," answered his wife, a little tartly. "You know, of course, that we haven't much in the house to offer a guest. However, I'll do my best, and if he will be satisfied with it he's welcome. Why is he coming all this distance just to spend the night with us?" Professor Brinckhofen put his arm round his wife's waist and kissed her. "I know you're busy, Ellen," he said. "Next summer we'll get a maid." And he wandered out, while his wife went on washing. She dried the last plate and set it aside. "I wonder just why Doctor Cavendish is coming here for one night," she said to herself. Professor Brinckhofen engaged a rowboat and pulled round to the railroad terminal, where he arrived just in time to greet Doctor Cavendish as his visitor stepped out of his car. "Well, what did you think of my letter?" he asked, after the customary greetings had been interchanged. Doctor Cavendish took his friend by the arm. "My dear old enthusiast," he answered, "to be frank with you,

"Good Heaven, Brinckhofen, it is it!"

I am sceptical—wholly sceptical. It sounds too good to be true. If you had told me that you had discovered a buried Indian village or a dozen asteroids I would have accepted your word without question. But a great auk's egg—no, my friend. You have probably mistaken the egg of a crested grebe or tufted puffin for that of the auk." "But the great auk did range as far south as Maine in the last century!" cried the professor. "And the last specimen was shot in 1844." "No, Cavendish, in 1912. I tell you it was an auk. I shot the brooding bird, but it fell into the water and drifted out to sea before I could get a boat. But the egg—it was an auk's egg, and it was warm. I took it home and I'm incubating it." "What does Mrs. Brinckhofen think of it?" "She doesn't know anything about it, of course. I don't believe in telling my wife a professional secret. And the joke of it is"—he nudged Cavendish in the ribs—"it's incubating with a clutch of eggs that she set out last week under one of our hens. It couldn't be safer anywhere." "Show me!" said Cavendish sceptically, and they entered the rowboat and, a few minutes later, rounded the point of land behind which the Brinckhofens had their bungalow. "There was where I shot her," said the professor, pointing to the high, towering cliff. "I didn't mean to, either, but I was so excited that I couldn't bear to think of her getting away. Now, before we do anything else we'll go straight to the clutch." They climbed the hill and entered the little garden of the bungalow. In one corner was the hen house, and, in the center, seated upon a clutch of eggs surrounded with straw, was a gray hen, which looked at them with malignant eyes and half opened her beak as though to protect her treasure. "Shoo!" said Professor Brinckhofen, and the hen slowly rose and retired a few paces, where it crouched with flapping wings and an irate expression. Professor Brinckhofen plunged his hand into the clutch and drew out the precious egg. It was a little larger than that of a goose. "Good heavens, Brinckhofen, it is! It is!" yelled Doctor Cavendish, and, carefully replacing it, he seized his friend round the waist, and the two graybeards executed a dance. Mrs. Brinckhofen watched them out of the kitchen window. "I suppose that is Doctor Cavendish," she said piquantly. "I wonder why they are dancing in the hen-house." She sat down and meditated upon

STORIES OF HEROISM.

Character of the Bulgarian Soldier Is Revealed.

One Man Tells of Victory Over Turks Won by Privates Disobeying an Order to Retreat—Soldiers Devoted to Their Officers.

Sofia, Bulgaria.—In order to explain the phenomenal exploits of the Bulgarian armies in their battles against the Turk in Adrianople and Macedonia one must become familiar with the character of the Bulgarian soldier says a correspondent. It is but a short time since the Balkan war began, yet many are the incidents that have come to light which enable one to judge as to the caliber of "the man behind the gun." As I was passing the postoffice one day I met some twenty men in worn-out uniforms. Several had their arms in slings, one had his head bandaged and a couple of them limped a little. I joined them the moment I had ascertained that they were wounded soldiers apparently cured and just discharged from the hospital. The men were very cheerful, but this is a striking characteristic of nearly all those who have received injuries in the recent great battles. I asked if they were all wounded. "Yes, all of us, of course," answered three of them at the same time. "We have left the battlefield otherwise." I found out upon inquiry that several had received severe bullet wounds. Two showed me the very bullets that had been taken from their bodies. "They ordered us to go home," one of them said, "but we are good enough for another trial with the Turk if the king wants us!" In one of the hospitals I have a friend who belonged to one of the first regiments that took part in the engagements south of Lozengrad (Kirk Kilischi). Here is a little story which he told me that is typical of the Bulgarian warrior: "Our regiment went too far into the enemy's intrenchments when suddenly we saw ourselves nearly surrounded. Our commander gave the order to retreat. For the first time since I have been a soldier I heard an order from a superior that was not obeyed. The order was repeated by other officers, but the men showed no inclination to obey it. Suddenly a deafening cry of 'Oorrah!' was raised and then a platoon of reserves led by a lieutenant dashed ahead and shouted: 'Forward, boys! A Bulgarian soldier knows no retreat. Na voje [charge bayonets]. Oorrah!' "In a moment the blades on the Mannlicher guns shone in the light as the men rushed at their opponents, who for an instant were stupefied at the unexpectedness of the attack. We were pretty sure we were going to be killed, for we were too few in number. But God was good to us. The Turks, though bloodthirsty and fierce with their bayonets, were exceedingly afraid of it; at any rate, they were afraid of our 'Na voje' charge. Their right flanks gave way before our attack and after leaving a third of our men dead in the field, mostly killed by the Turkish rapid fire, thus remaining intrenched themselves in an evacuated Turkish fortification. "I never believed I could be so brutal with the knife. One does not think of it when engaged in battle. A man never thinks of death under these circumstances. Our disobedience to the orders was a very grave one, indeed, but there is always an exception to the rule. Had we obeyed the command to retreat our comrades back of us would have thought we were cowards and we would have caused demoralization among our own men." The other day I met a wounded officer. Greatly interested in the war, I requested him to tell me something about his experience. "The only thing I can tell you is this: That we officers fall far below our soldiers in point of courage and bravery. The men would often stand in front of us or would pile their knapsacks in order to protect us from the bullets. Our hearts melted at this touching tenderness on the part of our subordinates."

Woman! gasped the professor, springing to his feet, "do you mean to say—you scrambled that egg?" "Yes, dear," said Mrs. Brinckhofen sweetly. (Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman.)

HOT BREAKFAST MEANS MUCH

Success or Failure of the Day Depends to a Large Extent on First Meal.

When a singularly successful business man was asked the secret of getting on in the world, he modestly said his wife deserved most of the credit, as she always had a good breakfast ready for him every day in the year, served punctually and piping hot. He further said that poor food, especially in the morning, was responsible for many business failures, for the man who sets out on a cold morning with cold, indigestible food in his stomach is ill-prepared for the business battle. It takes time and planning, but it pays to serve good breakfasts. It means getting up early enough to insure against rushing about and fretting when things go wrong, but the wise woman counts it no sacrifice to send her husband off cheery and well fed. There are plenty of ways in which a woman without help may manage, and even if she keeps a maid she will find plenty to oversee and correct day after day. The women who rise early to get breakfast for their husbands unite in saying there are possibilities in the early morning hours realized later in the day. When other women are sleepily getting up, the thrifty housekeepers have their morning work done and are ready to get the children off to school. There would be fewer failures in school work if all children were sent to the school room well fed in the morning. If they were aroused in time to dress leisurely and eat a hearty breakfast there would be fewer cases of nervous prostration among teachers. A cup of hot cocoa, a poached egg, good toast and well-cooked cereal served to the entire family in the morning and eaten in a leisurely manner would rob hospitals of many patients and give doctors and surgeons extra vacations every year. Theories About Rainfall. While we in this country have been suffering for some years from a lack of rain, some parts of Europe appear, according to statistics, to be getting more rain every year. Observations at the Observatory of Paris show that from 1804 to 1824 the average yearly rainfall was 562 millimeters (an inch is about 25 millimeters). In the next twenty years the average was 507; then from 1845 to 1872 there was an increase to 525; in the next twenty years it was 553, and in the last nineteen years the average has grown to 554 millimeters—about 22 1/2 inches. The commonest theory to account for this is that the smoke and dust rising from a large city favor the condensation of moisture. But this theory runs counter to the experience of London, the smokiest city of Europe, where no such increased rainfall is recorded. And in some of the mountainous regions of France the increase has been as much as 73 per cent, as compared with thirty years ago. Worse and More of It. "Concord! Concord!" shouted the brakeman, as the train pulled into the station during a tremendous outburst of thunder and lightning. The clever woman grasped her umbrella firmly. "Not only conquered," she ejaculated, "but taken by storm!"—Youth's Companion.

SCORNS REWARD FOR SKIN

College Youth Will Be One of Trio Ready for Operation to Save Child's Life.

New York.—Prompted by humanitarian impulse, and not by reward of $25, a young college graduate begged Dr. Abraham A. Levi of 69 Third street to permit him to submit to a skin-grafting operation which might save the life of four-year-old Bertha Wrecher of 535 Fifth street. About three months ago the child was scalded by some soup. Only a portion of the blistered section of her back healed. After a consultation with Dr. Benjamin Tilton of St. Mark's hospital, Doctor Levi decided to offer a reward of $25 for a subject for the operation. Many suitable men volunteered and were rejected. Finally three men were considered. One was the college man. Another an unfortunate actor, and the other an East side mechanic. The three were instructed to appear at the hospital.

OPENED WAY TO FREEDOM Ingenuity of Prisoners in Effort to Escape Awakened the Admiration of Their Jailers. Amongst the prisoners in the French convict settlement of New Caledonia were two marine engineers who not long ago received a pardon—strange as it may seem—for making a daring and ingenious attempt to escape. Living together in the same hut, these men were engaged for years in digging a secret tunnel from their hut to the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a chamber, in which, with pieces of driftwood and little bits of steel and iron smuggled into the hut, they fashioned a boat, the metal being at first used to make tools and afterwards to form bolts and rivets. Then with infinite pains they built an engine to propel the boat, and after laboring mightily for seven years they completed their task. Everything was ready except the provisioning of the vessel, when they were betrayed by a fellow-convict to whom they had confided their plan. But so impressed was the French commandant by their marvelous energy, skill, and patience that he managed after a year to obtain a pardon for them.
