A 10@15c UPTURN FOR BULK OF KILLING STEERS THIS WEEK.

BEST BEEVES TOUCH $8.70

Cows and Heifers Show Substantial Advance—Bulls and Calves Up—Stocker and Feeder Rates Are Higher.

Cattle trade amounted to a mere dribble in odds and ends today and to all interests and purposes prices ruling in the various departments were the same as Friday.

For the week there has been a slight falling off in receipts of cattle at this point and in the aggregate marketing at the five leading centers as compared with the previous week.

The week's business has furnished a sensation in which sales have been general average has been very good. Purchases by packers and eastern buyers showing a higher cost than for some time, their inability to purchase many of the lower grade steers owing to feeder competition resulting in a high average cost level.

Local receipts for the week total approximately 5,400 head as compared with 10,294 last week and 8,650 a year ago.

Trade in butcher classes during the week had the same snap and vim that characterized the week before.

Manufacturers of butter in Illinois, Ohio, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska may be prosecuted for the alleged violations, it is stated. The penalty is a fine of $5,000 and a tax of 10 cents for each pound adulterated.

PACKERS WIELD "BIG STICK" AND PRICES SHOW AN IRREGULAR DECLINE.

EARLY SALES 5 TO 10 LOWER

Prices on Later Rounds 10@15c Under Yesterday's Average—Top, $8.25; Bulk, $8.20@8.35.

The good, buoyant undertone that characterized the Friday trade in live pork was missing today, the market showing a decided drift toward a lower level, despite small receipts all around the circuit.

Prices for hogs averaging 140 lbs. and up ranged from $5.15@8.35, with the bulk selling at $8.20@8.35, a week ago at $8.20@8.25, a month ago at $7.50@7.45, a year ago at $6.30@6.42 1/2, two years ago at $6.35@7.00, three years ago at $6.65@6.85, and four years ago at $5.25@6.45.

DAIRY EXPERT TO TALK

T. A. BORMAN, SPEAKER AT FARM CONGRESS, HAS MADE HIS MARK.

STARTED AS POOR FARM LAD

Now Head of One of the Largest Commercial Enterprises in Kansas—Always Loved the Cow.

From poor farm boy to the head of the largest commercial enterprise in Kansas is the record of T. A. Borman, editor of the Kansas Farmer and president of the Continental Creamery Company of Topeka, Kan., one of the men who is to speak at the Interstate Agricultural and Industrial Congress in St. Joseph, next week.

Borman always had a cow. His first love for them was when he went out of frosty mornings to drive them to the dairy barn. The best thing about a dairy cow at that stage of his life was the warm spot they left on the earth where she had lain over night.

The said warm spot warmed Borman's hoarse feet. Then he began to take a fancy to the money that dairying brought in and his affection for the cow that gave the white fluid from which came the golden butter which brought in the golden coin grew apace.

Borman's father was thought to be a fanatic when he paid $100 per head for some good dairy cattle and began to improve the strain.

After Borman had made good in the producing end of the dairy business he got into the commercial end. Topeka has seen fit to honor Borman, the former poor country boy, with the presidency of its Commercial club, wealth came with application to business, conducted on honest and modern principles. There is nothing too good for Borman, so Topeka business men say. As an editor of a big farm paper, he reaches thousands with his practical writings, and these, too, award by T. A. Borman.

Trenton, Mo., and "The Trenton Idea," which by the way is a plan to bring urban and rural dwellers into closer touch by having agriculturists in particular, take part in the affairs of the Commercial clubs of the cities, has been made famous by the Union over by Rev. Father Henry R. Tierney, pastor of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic parish at Trenton. "The Trenton Idea" was initiated by M. V. Watson, of Kansas City, but Father Tierney saw it the name and fame by aiding the leader. "The Trenton Idea is Not Lazy—It Works."

Father Tierney is going to be one of the speakers at the Interstate Agricultural and Industrial Congress next week and his address, delivered far and wide, is sure to attract attention here, just as it has everywhere he has spoken.

Father Tierney is destined to be the successor of Father Ryan, "The Post Priest." In fact, he is already the acknowledged successor of Father Ryan. Father Tierney is a newspaper reporter in St. Joseph, and a good one, too, before he took holy orders. He was given the most difficult parish in the city, St. Patrick's, under the supervision of Bishop P. Burke, bishop of St. Joseph, could see for him, and he has made good as a physician of the soul just as he has in poetry, lecturing, promoting and in giving publicity to Trenton and "The Trenton Idea."

LIVES LOST IN HOTEL FIRE

Possibly a Score Dead as Result of Omaha Blaze.

Omaha, Neb., March 1.—A score of bodies—perhaps more—are believed to lie beneath the debris of the fire which early yesterday morning destroyed the Dewey hotel. A search of firemen failed to reveal any bodies. The register of the hotel was destroyed and the names of the dead probably never will be known.

Last night only four bodies had been recovered. These were those of persons who either jumped from open windows or who died from injuries. They were Charles Cummings, a local bartender; unidentified man, nude body recovered before interior of building collapsed; Mrs. Grace Bonnell, sister of Mrs. E. Williams, wife of the proprietor of the hotel; Charles Beverly, employed by a local commission firm.

Firemen jumped from a third floor window where he clung until the flames scorched him.

The fire occurred at an hour when few persons were in the vicinity and the interior of the building, which was an old one, was a mass of flames when firemen arrived. Not less than fifty persons were sleeping in the building. At least thirty are known to have made their escape, many in night dress. They ran to nearby restaurants and drug stores, where they were cared for until taken to either the emergency hospitals or to other hotels.

About a third of the guests were Nebraskaans, who were here to attend the automobile show. Most of these had rooms near the two exits, and so far as known all escaped, although several received injuries that were not serious.

The heat was so intense that firemen did not get the flames under control for several hours. When they entered the structure, it had been gutted and the entire interior had fallen into the basement. Beneath hundreds of tons of debris lie the bodies, and it may require two days to remove them.

Until the last of the mass of twisted iron and charred and water-soaked wreckage is cleared away, the exact number of dead and injured is unknown. A partial identification of an unidentified man was made as that of Renfee Richard, former winning state inspector of brands, manager of the Union Stock Yards company of South Omaha.

The loss is closely estimated at $140,000, practically covered by insurance.

NURSES OF 150 YEARS AGO

Old Time Article Tells the Difficult Duties and Requirements of Their Profession.

In their "History of Nursing," the authors, Miss Nutting and Miss Dock, quote from an article written in 1764, which gives an insight into what was required of the trained nurse in the eighteenth century. The article says: "This occupation is as important for humanity as its functions are low and repugnant. All persons are not adapted to it, and the heads of hospitals ought to be difficult to please, for the lives of patients may depend upon their choice of applicants."

BEAT ALL RECORDS BADLY

Irish Athlete Ran in No Time, for the Stop Watch Had Actually Stopped.

An Irish athlete, who was training for a mile race, which he had very high hopes of winning, went one day, accompanied by his man, Pat, to have a trial in a field convenient to his own house.

"Now, Pat," said his master, as he handed him his watch, "mind that you note the correct time in which I start and finish."

Pat, who, by the way, was very proud of his young master's prowess in the athletic arena, assured him that he would make no mistake.

Now, it happened that by some unlucky chance the watch stopped at the precise moment in which he started to run.

"The time, Pat?" he shouted, breathlessly.

Pat immediately pulled out the watch, and on looking at it for the first time since the start, an expression of surprise, mingled with pride, overspread his features.

"Begob, sir," he answered, "you have beaten all records, for you have done it in no time."

HIS WINNING BATTLE

Being a Story of the Struggles of a "Down and Out."

By HAROLD CARTER.

Bonner sat at the long table in the room of the Griffiths Mailing company, addressing envelopes. On each side of him and across at the head of his table, their fingers dexterously cooperating with that subconscious portion of their brain which habit had trained to its task.

Just now grumbles were running round the table, for a series of four-line addresses instead of three had come into being, and that would mean less money for the day's work.

But the girl with the fair hair seemed of a different mold. She was quiet and refined; she worked—how hard she worked! Bonner had walked home with her the evening before.

"I'm Sick," said Bonner, humbly. She lived alone in a mean room in a mean tenement, for which she paid a dollar a week to a hard-faced landlady, and she coughed incessantly.

Bonner had forty-nine dollars. His room cost him a dollar and forty cents weekly, and he lived on food snatched at cheap lunch counters. Once he had been a civil engineer; then he gave way to the drink passion, a hereditary disease. He had addressed envelopes for two years; he found the labor one which permitted his thoughts to roam unchallenged and he had become the automaton that all addressers grow to be.

He had felt the premonitory symptoms that day. He knew that he could as well escape the sequence as a lamb can escape from a coyote. He put his pipe together and took it up to the desk.

"Well," said the boss curtly. "I'm sick," said Bonner humbly. "I've got to go home. Can I have my money?"

"Nope. Get out!" said the man at the desk. Bonner was a larger man, but the servility of his trade was stronger than his manhood. He turned away, fingering his hat. The man called after him:

"Hi! Come around Saturday and you'll get what's coming to you. How much have you done?"

He pulled out his money and counted it. Something came out of his pocket with the bills. It was an address list which he had taken with him from the mailing room. His eye wandered down it. Suddenly he started; into his half-numbed brain memory came stealing; the name was that of Mrs. Charles Sayles, residing in a fashionable quarter of the town.

She had been his first sweetheart seven years before. They had been engaged; everything seemed rosy when the fatal obsession gripped him. He had fought a desperate, losing fight. He had gone to her and confessed. Edith Harrington was a good woman, but she could not marry a dipsomaniac. She released him and later married Charlie Sayles, his school chum, now one of the rising men in their profession.

He flung the paper from him with a curse and turned back toward the saloon. Then he found his way barred and looked up into the face of the fair-haired girl. She had stopped impulsively and now stood before him, her hands outstretched.

"What is the matter?" she asked. "You are ill!"

An agony of remorse swept over him. He turned away into the empty yard of a factory and she followed him. "Listen!" he said fiercely. "I am not ill—only fighting with my personal devil—the drink devil. You don't know what a devil that is. It gets you by the throat and gnaws at you and fills your brain with evil and your mind with misery—until you have yielded. Take all my money."

"O!" she cried impulsively, "we are both fighting losing battles. You, too! I knew! I knew you were suffering when I saw you in that room." "Losing" battles. What if he should fight again, fight to win, as he might have fought if Edith had stood by him! A sudden resolution came into his soul and nerved his will to steel. He took her by the hands.

"Would you stand by me to the end, girl, if I fought to win?" he asked, and she nodded bravely.

"Then," he said triumphantly, "let us fight our battles together. Not here, but in the west, where one has a chance to live, or one can die under the broad sky—as men and women should die or live. Will you?"

Suddenly the dirty factory yard had become an ante-chamber of heaven. (Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

DREAMS TRACED TO MEMORY

Scientific Explanation for What is Referred to as Phenomena Now Accepted.

Almost all scientific observers agree that the materials of which dreams are made are memories of past experiences of the individual. Curiously enough, the memories that occur most frequently are those of the previous day and those of early childhood. The former class are to be found in every dream, and are probably an essential condition to its formation; the latter (recollections of childhood) seem to be of even greater importance, since they contribute much to the hidden meaning of the dream.

In many cases where the incidents of a dream seem to be entirely unfamiliar it has been shown by careful investigation that they correspond to actually experienced events that have escaped the memory of the waking self. Delboeuf records an interesting example of this. In 1862 he dreamed that he found two lizards in the snow. He took them up, warmed them, and placed them in a hole in a wall, together with a small fern, which he knew they liked to eat.

Later on in his dream he saw two other lizards come and eat the remains of the fern, and then a whole host of lizards coming to the wall in a long procession which covered the entire street. On waking he could not remember ever to have heard the name of the fern in his dream, although he discovered that a fern called Asplenium ruta muraria really existed. Sixteen years later, however, he happened to be turning over the pages of a friend's album of dried flowers, and to his surprise came across the very fern, with the Latin name written underneath in his own handwriting. He then remembered that in 1860, two years before the dream, he had met the sister of this friend, and to please her had written the Latin names under the various plants in her album at the dictation of a botanist.

Fifteen years after the dream he also discovered the source of the lizard procession in an old illustrated paper, dated 1861, which as a regular subscriber he must have seen. Innumerable cases of a similar nature are on record, and go to show how remarkably heightened the memory may be in dreams. They also warn us not too rashly to believe that incidents in a dream which seem entirely new are really so.

Showing Earth's Formation. Boring for oil affords an opportunity to gather a rather intimate knowledge of the interior of the earth, as just developed in Pennsylvania, where a bore has reached a depth of 4,900 feet, and will be driven fully 900 feet farther. At 1,140 feet a fine grade of lubricating oil was found, in 20 feet of sand. The oil was good, but not in great quantities. It is of a grade worth about $6 a barrel. From 4,460 to 4,490 the men drilled through hard salt, and just below that they found more oil, but in small quantities. Now they are again in the limestone.

WIFE AND 24 CHILDREN SHOP

Pittsburghers No Less Amazed at Visitors Than Latter Are at Sights of City.

Pittsburgh—Accompanied by his wife and twenty-four children, Alexander Friss, a backwoodsman living five miles from Wind Gap, twenty miles from here, drove into town to do some shopping. It was the first visit of the children to the city and they were awe-struck by the high buildings and the crowds.

When the three wagons passed along Fifth avenue the crowds of shoppers were as much surprised at the sight of the Friss family as were the latter at them. Contented and happy, the big family pulled up in front of one of the largest department stores and fled inside, where they soon got busy. They missed nothing from the cellar of the big store to the top floor, purchasing enough trinkets to stock a country store.

Even though the Friss family clothing was not in harmony with the latest dictates of style, they never batted an eye when the laughing crowds stared at them. The big family had come to see the sights, and they got a vast amount of pleasure out of the trip. Friss was in a joyous mood, and laughed when asked how often he came to the city to purchase presents.

Mrs. Friss is 64 years old, while her husband is four years her junior. They were married when the husband was 17. Friss naively remarked that after his marriage the "children" came thick and fast. Mrs. Friss has given birth to twenty-seven children, all told, three of whom are dead. The first time it was twins, the next occasion saw but one, but the following four events were double productions. Then came triplets twice in succession. Following the triplets came a sequence of ten single Frisses. Friss lives and believes in the simple life.

BONAPARTE HOME IS SOLD

Jersey Place Fitted With Secret Rooms to Hide Napoleon Goes to Harris Hammond.

Bordentown, N. J.—The 290-acre estate her which was once the home of Joseph Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon and former king of Spain, is to be restored to its magnificent chateau rebuilt by Harris Hammond, son of John Hays Hammond, who has just purchased the property. Among the most interesting details of the work of restoration will be the exploring and clearing of the three secret underground passages and subterranean rooms on which Joseph spent $200,000 in the expectation that the property would some day be used as a refuge for Napoleon.

It has been often reported that the countryside here that great quantities of gold and silver are concealed in treasure vaults reached through the devious tunnels, which are supposed to give secret access from the chateau to the Delaware river. Joseph Bonaparte was Napoleon's eldest brother. He accepted the throne of Naples in 1806 and was transferred in 1808 to the throne of Spain. The Spanish people obstinately resisted the domination of the Frenchman and he was expelled in 1813. Two years later he emigrated to the United States, and took up his residence at Bordentown under the name of the Count DeSurville. He went back to Europe in 1833 and died in Italy in 1844.

SALMON-FISHING IN A CITY

River Taking Short Cut Through Inland Puyallup Brings Shoals of the Finny Tribe.

Seattle, Wash.—To be able to stand on the sides of the principal business street of an inland city with a population of more than 6,000 and catch any number of large salmon of all varieties is something that can be enjoyed right in this section of Washington. Puyallup is the city, and if the run of salmon continues she will also be prominent as a fishing center as well as the hub of agriculture. As "fishy" as the story sounds, it is nevertheless a fact, and should one care to venture to Puyallup in quest of the king of fish a well-fished string would be the result. The fish come from the Puyallup river through Clark's creek and into "Big Ditch," which crosses Meridian street, the main thoroughfare of the valley metropolitan. The run is so large that at times the water in places bubbles like an eddy.

Persons in the vicinity of the stream have taken many a catch to their homes and there will undoubtedly be a slump in sales in the fish market as long as the run continues. The appearance of the salmon was discovered by Carl Hill, a city surveyor, who was making an investigation of the condition of the ditch.

Roof Parks for Firemen.

New York—The New York firemen are soon to have roof gardens for physical exercise, amusement and recreation, an attraction that will lighten their long hours of duty and confinement when not actually engaged in fighting fires. Fifteen of these gardens are now being built on the roofs of new buildings under construction. Thirty other fire houses will be similarly equipped as soon as the necessary funds are available.

GIANT PIGS GIVEN MUSEUM

Hunter Sends to New York Specimens He Captured in Africa.

New York.—Two specimens of the giant forest pig captured by Alfred J. Kiehn near the Channa river in Africa, have been presented to the Museum of Natural History. They have been mounted by F. Blaschke.

The forest pig is extinct in size only by some long extinct species whose fossil remains are found in the western states. It is comparatively unknown, partly on account of its habits, which are nocturnal. It thrives in the grass of the African jungle.

For about 15 years it was suspected that the forests of central Africa harbored some giant specimen of the pig family. In 1904 one of these curious animals was captured by a naturalist, and thus it became known to science.

Learning How to Write.

The following is taken from a page of practical household suggestions published in the Woman's Home Companion: "My little boy tired very quickly when I tried to teach him to write, so I gave him a cap, a bag and whistle and told him to play letter carrier. Since then he sits down immediately after breakfast each day and writes a short letter to one of the neighbors, then plays postman and delivers it. The neighbors enjoy the little game, and it is wonderful how quickly he is learning to write and spell with ease."
