Cows, Heifers and Yearling Stuff ers' Generally Steady, With Strong Spots on Latter-Stock Steers Hold Steady.

Beef steer trade was generally a steady affair compared with Monday's lower schedule of values with just a trifle freer action noticeable on early rounds. Receipts were moderate. Estimates called for 1,800 cattle at this point and 21,100 head at the five leading markets. The five point aggregate indicated a slight gain over last Tuesday and a gain of 2,000 head was noted in comparison with a year

Steers again formed a liberal persteers again formed a liberal per-centage of the local supply. Strictly good beeves, though, were in light quota, the supply running largely to the medium to fairly good grades. Buyers were stirring around at the usual hour and their attitude was somewhat less bearish than on the previous day. Bids were forthcoming with less were grades. with less urging on the part of sales-men and there was a material in-crease over yesterday in the amount of business transacted before 10:30 o'clock. Efforts of salesmen to ino'clock. Efforts of salesmen to inject a little strength into the deal were generally unsuccessful, however, most sales indicating a steady range con pared with yesterday when values were put at the low level of the season. The big percentage of the crop was moved out of first hands before noon and with very few exceptions prices were quoted steady on a basis of yesterday's fresh decline. A right decent class of steers sold at $7.75 @ 7.85 and a grade of steers bordering on the choice order went at $8.05. Yearlings and fat handy weight steers were according the usual preference

There were no new developments tions strong, particularly on the good yearlings and better class of cows. There was, at any rate, a brisker movement in these styles than on Monday. The whole trade, however, possessed fairly good action but the general opinion of the selling talent was that prices were unchanged compared with the previous session. Quality was of fairly decent average, but choice offerings were scarce.

ings was well out of first hands before mid-day. Salesmen found little trouble in cashing suitable stock at prices well up to yesterday's standard. With a little support from country buyers during the previous session, yard dealers were able to make room for today's fresh stock, and more competition marked the trading than was the case on the initial session of was the case on the initial session of the week. With today's steady affair, little change is to be noted in rates compared with last wek's final Session.

Only a meager showing of feeding cows and helfers were put up for buyers' inspection. Buyers, although rather indifferent towards taking over the supply on account of the lack of country demand, absorbed the bulk of the offerings at prices regarded about steady with yesterday.

BANKERS IN SESSION.

Missouri Bankers' Association in Annual Convention Here.

Several hundred bankers, members of the Missouri Bankers' Association, are in St. Joseph for the annual meeting of the assocation, which convened at 10 o'clock this morning for a two-day session.

The convention was called to order There were no new developments of importance in conditions governing the outlet for butchers' stock today. Supply and demand were pretty evenly balanced and the trading basis struck was at prices generally steady with yesterday. Buyers called exceptions strong, particularly on the good particularly on the good particularly and better class of cows.

Quality was of fairly decent average, but choice offerings were scarce.

Bulls and stags met a steady clearance today. Competition on the more attractive grades was a little more active than yesterday. There was no change of consequence in the market for veal calves. Tops remained stationary at $9.25.

was decidedly interesting.

Following this the reports of the group chairmen were rendered. A group c John T. Mitchell, of Jefferson City, state bank commissioner, was heard in an address entitled "Relative Banking Conditions." He was followed as a speaker by William M. Martin, of St. Louis, in a legal discussion of banking problems. The afternoon and election of a vice-president.

Tomorrow morning addresses will be made as follows:

"The Missouri Chapters of the American Institute of Banking." F. C.

erican Institute of Banking," F. C.

erican institute of Banking," F. C. Ball, St. Louis.

"Progress and the Banker," J. A. S. Pollard, Fort Madlson, Iowa,

"American Ideals," Dr. Jay William Hudson, Columbia.

"Why Bankers Associations Are Interested in Agriculture," Chapman of Minneapolis, Tomorrow afternoon the association auditor will make his report and there will be an address by T. J. Davis of Cincinnati. The election of officers will follow, after which the convention will finally adjourn.

The time of the visiting bankers and their families will not be wholly taken up with the transaction of business, for an elaborate program has been outlined for their entertainment.

SHELLENBERGER TO SPEAK

Ex-Governor of Nebraska to Deliver Address at National Exchange Meet.

A. C. Shellenberger, former gov-ernor of Nebraska and one of the foremost stockmen of the state, has wired his acceptance of an invitation sent him to deliver an address before the annual meeting of the National Live Stock Exchange at St. Joseph next month. Gov. Shellenberger will speak on "The Relation of the Ship-per to the Commission Man" June 27, instead of June 21, as announced, in a local morning newspaper.

have adopted an original plan to bring the farmer to town. The Gallatin Commercial Club has made arrangements to provide free entertainment for the farmers and their families. The best moving picture theatre in town is wide open every afternoon to the farmer, his wife and children. What is more, there's no red tape connected with the offer of free entertainment for the agriculturist. He doesn't have to buy a certain amount of goods of Gallatin merchants in order to take in the "movies" without cost, thought the idea, of course, is intended to draw additional trade from the surrounding country. All he has to do is to walk up to the box office, inform, the ticket seller he is from the country and presto, the doors are thrown open and he gets to see the whole show free.

It's up to the other neighboring towns to hit on a better idea to get the country folks coming their way.

SHE REALLY CARED

And Earle Barton Discovered That He Had a True Life Partner.

BY FLORENCE LILLIAN HENDER-SON.

"Going-going-gone!" The hammer of the auctioneer came down with a final tap. The man of bids waved his hand towards the man. cashier's desk. Earle Barton paid four dollars, gave his name and ad- fully. He said with a sad smile: dress, received a package wrapped in tissue paper and regained his companion, Ward Tolman.

"Whatever induced you to pay that money for a toy that looked to me that.' ike a cross between a baby's rattle and a nutmeg grater?" rallied young Tolman.

"Well, in the first place it was cheap, and further, it is quite an oddity," replied Earle, but he did not disclose for whom the purchase was in-

"What is it, anyhow?" inquired Tol-"It is a called a prayer mill. I suppose that doesn't tell you much, so I'll show it to you." Earle removed the so-called toy from its wrappings. It's form was box-like, with a little ivory handle. There was a slot across it, and as the handle was turned a silk ribbon glyphics printed in gold letters. "The mill came from Thibet," said Earle. "It is made by the priests in that great city of mystery, Lhassa, a place where they visit the intrusion of a stranger with death. The devotee , when he wishes to pray, simply turns the mill and his work is done for him."

"I see," nodded Tolman carelessly; but how do you come to know so much about these curios?"

Earle flushed deeply and evaded a direct response. He went on to tell that he had a certain liking for antiques. The auctioneer had interested him by narrating the story of a native priest of Thibet traveling in the United States, who had died in debt and whose effects had been sold to bury the poor fellow. The name of the man was engraved on the mill-"Zuelphi."

The friends parted, Tolman, who had money and position, to attend some social function, Earle, who had

Then he went to his rather cheerless room where he was to try his fortune in New York. making a struggle of life trying to write for the newspapers.

Maybrook was the little country of righteousness when you get to that town from which Earle had come six rich city where money is so plentiful months previous. Velda Tresham was the one young lady in that vil- paved with gold.' lage for whom he entertained a warmer sentiment than she had ever divined. Tolman, making a visit to the city, had come across Earle. Only at the station and started down Sevcasually had Earle ventured to ask about Velda. He had heard incidentally that Tolman had been paying some attentions to the young lady, and did not seek a gratuitous heartache by exploring the intimacy. Earle knew that the erudite Professor Tresham, the father of Velda, was a great collector of unique oddities. He had sent the prayer mill to Velda hoping she might write to him. At least it would show that he had not forgotten her.

The next day Earle was sorry that he had sent the little gift. He hap-pened to meet Tolman. The latter dropped into a jewelry store and produced an exquisite little ring.

"I wish you would engrave this for me," he said to the jeweler, and care-lessly scribbled on a card: "Ward to Velda.

Earle chanced to glance at the in-scription ordered. He said nothing about it, but his heart sank like lead. To him there was only one "Velda" in the world, and he parted from Tolman with the impression that what he had just seen was an engagement ring, and Miss Velda Tresham its prospective recipient.

The conviction killed a good deal of the ambition of the young writer. He changed his room for a cheaper one. Things did not go very well with him. He did not seem able to break in with any regular publisher. His struck the erratic routine of a penny-a-liner. Then, cheerless and next day the newspapers were filled disappointed, he broke down. A fit of sickness followed. He was two months in the hospital, and came out of it to face the world, a pensioner on the bounty of a fine-souled bohemian, almost as poor as himself, but glorying in dividing the last cent with a fellow journalist.

"Down and out," was the way that Earle put it to himself. If he had only received a word from Velda! She was probably married by this time, he reflected.

"Tell you, Barton," his friend and almoner said to him, "you're too good for this market. If you could get into the magazine circle nowonce a footbold, and you're a made

A man, a lawyer, hunted him outafter a long quest, he said. Was he Earle Barton? Yes. He lived at such an address formerly? Yes, again. Was he the purchaser, on such a date, at such an auction shop, of a certain prayer mill?

If so, what of it?-it all opened up the old wounds, and Earle was weak and irritable from his long spell of illness. Was the prayer mill marked "Zuelphi?" It was. Could he produce Owed Recognition to Emperor. Bell had little success at the Philadelphia exhibition, and his invention would have passed unnoticed, even, had it not been for Dom Pedro, the emperor of Brazil. For the story we are indebted to the Revue Scientifique. Dom Pedro was inspecting the exhibition, attended by his suite, when he came across Graham Bell, whom he remembered as a teacher in a school of deaf mutes. Dom Pedro came to his stand and asked him to "set his machine going." A wire crossed the room from wall to wall. Dom Pedro stood at the receiver and Bell at the transmitter. No one understood exactly what was happening, when suddenly the emperor lifted his head dramatically and shouted, in absolute amazement: "He's talking." The scientists in Dom Pedro's suite rushed to verify this extraordinary announcement, and "the more they knew of electricity, the less they would believe their ears." The
