Political 'Hot Potato' Dropped By County

No Move Made To Collect $12,000 Due For Field Work

Bailey County Commissioners this week took a long look and dropped a political hot potato before it burned their fingers.

The "hot potato" was more than $12,000 in bills due to the county for its work on privately owned farms. Some of the bills date back as far as 1956 and are considered uncollectable.

At its regular monthly meeting during the week of Dec. 5th, the commissioners agreed — although not in motion form — to include strong requests for pay-

New Infestations Of Screwworm In 107 Counties

Reports of screwworm infestations in counties that have not had cases all year have prompted eradication officials to issue a warning to livestock producers. They caution livestockmen that they cannot yet afford to let down their guard against the insect.

Failure to prevent development and spread of the livestock pest could cause serious outbreaks in areas that have been screwworm-free so far during 1963, authorities said.

Even as the number of infestations which had reached record proportions during October, appeared to be declining, cases were being discovered in Archer County in North Texas and such East Texas counties as Madison, Kaufman and Houston. This marked the deepest penetration into East Texas by the screwworm fly since early this spring.

Ideal Migration Conditions

Eradication workers feel that weather was ideal for screwworms to migrate into areas where it might have been too hot and dry for them to survive earlier this fall and summer. Cold fronts experienced thus far have been too mild to relieve the danger of further infestation except in the most northern Texas counties, they said.

To insure that screwworms do not have the opportunity to do so (See Screwworm Page 5)

Local Banks Show Increasing Strength

Total Assets Of Banks Pass $15,250,000: Loans Up Also

The combined assets of Bailey County's two banking houses took a whopping two and one-quarter million dollar jump in less than three months.

The assets of both banks totaled close to the $13-million mark at the last government call on Sept. 30th. At the close of business on Dec. 20th, assets of both banks totaled over $15 and one-quarter millions.

The figures were released in response to calls for the statements of condition by federal and state banking agencies.

According to the banks' statements total deposits on hand Dec. 30th $15,204,862.22. Of that amount $8,553,331.63 are the assets of the Muleshoe State Bank. Assets at the First National Bank of Muleshoe total $6,651,531.17. These figures also show sizeable increases over assets for both banks over a year ago.

Combined loans climbed by over a quarter-million dollars during the three month period, a survey of the statements reveals. Loans for force on hand, the current bank period total $7,881,736.05. Of that total Muleshoe State has $4,346,274.71 outstanding. The First National has $3,535,461.34.

Of the last call loans outstanding totaled $7,634,282.96. That figure showed an increase of almost one and three-quarters-million dollars, according to previous statements.

Total deposits have climbed over two and one-quarter million dollars. Deposits totaled $11,869,388 during the last call. They now stand at $14,192,069.88. Of that amount $8,099,943.25 is on deposit at the Muleshoe State Bank while $6,092,117.63 is deposited at the First National.

The Muleshoe State Bank lists a total of $43,001.01 in outstanding overdrafts. First National list a total of $23,386.15 in overdrafts, according to statements.

First Baby Born Will Hit Jack Pot

The first newborn boy or girl — or any combination thereof hitting the Muleshoe scene in 1964 will hit a gift jackpot.

A treasure trove of gifts await the first baby born in the city or county after the stroke of midnight New Year's Eve. But to be eligible to receive the goodies, the baby must be properly entered in the Journal's First Baby of 1964 Contest.

The rules are simple. Parents should have the attending physician certify the exact time and place of birth, name, sex and weight, plus the name and address of the parents. The information must be in to us no later than Jan. 15th.

The gift list is extensive and generous and ranges from free hospital care for one day to individual gifts for the first baby.

Donors and gifts are as follows:

Anihony's, an infant seat; Econo-Mart, baby topper set; Dameron Drug, a baby blanket sleeper; Alsup Cleaners, a $5 gift certificate; Main Street Beauty Salon, shampoo, set and hair cut for the mother; White's Auto, Pepperell Baby blanket; Cobb's, dogen gauze diapers; Western Drug, baby bottle sterilizer; Ben Franklin Store, 26-piece formula kit; Beavor's Flowers, a floral arrangement; Cashway Grocery, 24 cans strained baby food; Fair Store, a christening outfit; First National Bank, a $5 saving account and West Plains Hospital and Clinic, one day hospitalization.

Just What Do Children's Library Services Entail?

Editor's Note: The following article was written for the Journal by Mrs. Betty Goodrow — professionally trained and experienced librarian. The purpose of the article is three fold: 1. to point out in detail just what modern library services entail. 2. Correct the viewpoint that a librarian can be anyone who can check out books. 3. Provide possible guidelines of discussion.

This article discusses only one of the five important core activities of library services — the children's collection. Future articles will discuss young adult services, adult services, readers guidance service and reference services.

Mrs. Goodrow is retired from library work and will remain so because she says, "It was either library or four children." She will not be available for any possible library staff position, but will devote "as much time as possible" if her help is needed in any consulting capacity without pay.

Because we live in a rapidly changing world where technological advances make specialized and continuing education a necessity, not only for children but also for adults a good public library must be vital concerning five separate areas of library services.

The children's services, young service, adult service, guidance service and reference services. In this, the third of a continuing series on "Muleshoe Needs A Public Library" the Journal examines the services in a small public library.

The purpose of this article is to correct the thinking of many people who believe that school libraries are adequate children's libraries. Although the school libraries are doing better than the public libraries, they are not complete children's libraries. That is not and cannot be their mission.

In the country children have had the value of the public library. They come — by foot, bus, bicycle and horse — for their thirst for information. The anatomy of the owl, the life of the atom, the life of the leader, or simply a good book to read. Their desire for a public library are limitless. The interests of the children in a small community like Muleshoe are just as varied as those of children in a city like Dallas, but the resources of a small library to meet those interests are not so great.

How can a librarian, also busy serving adults and young adults, give the best possible service to children, and yet maintain a well balanced library program for the whole community?

Children often begin coming to the library at the age of three or four, when their parents or nurse school teachers take them to select read-aloud picture books. Ordinarily the continue to use children's services through their 12th and 13th year. According to the 1960 Federal Census estimate, children from three to 14 constitute approximately 24 percent of the total Bailey County and Muleshoe population. This indicates the immensity of the responsibility of library services for children.

It is the special function of the library to introduce children to that finest of all pursuits — pleasure reading for the purpose of savoring language, absorbing thought and ideas, acquiring information, learning to think in depth, and relaxing. It is easy to make this introduction because children will respond readily to someone who takes a real interest in them.

A librarian who serves children must like and respect them, realize the importance of helping them develop a liking for good reading — and probably most important be young at heart.

Children are lively, enthusiastic, eager, fresh in their approach to a problem, and totally receptive to new ideas. Their imagination, sense of wonder, and simplicity have not yet been modified by what adults call "valuable experience". The world is new to them, and their far-ranging minds are impatient to explore it. It is the great privilege of the librarian working with children to open windows upon that world by enlarging their minds and spirits through the introduction of books.

How does a library help a child to grow?

By providing a collection of books and other materials; this includes selecting, making available and maintaining the collection. By interpreting the effectiveness of readers advisory service and reference work.

By stimulating children's reading by means of a varied program — in the library through story hours, summer reading clubs, and similar activities; outside the library as well as inside.

By providing pleasant surroundings in which the libraries activities for children take place — a willing and knowledgeable staff and attractive, appropriately sized furniture and shelving.

First Steps: The primary function of the librarian is to provide a well rounded collection of good books for its patrons of whatever age. This is an important time consuming activity requiring training and skill for the wise expenditure of public funds. The Library should consider preliminary steps before purchasing any children's books.

The first step is to adopt a written book selection policy approved by the library's governing board. A book selection policy should express the whole philosophy of public service, and every book should be purchased in this light. A single book selection policy sometimes affords for children's, young adult, and adult book purchases, since children's books are judged largely by the same criteria as adult books. But the fact that children's books are so judged should be a specific part of the written policy. Some libraries have developed separate children's book selection policies. Such a separate policy usually works out for the best.

The next step should be an examination of the librarian's qualifications for selecting children's books. How well is he or she equipped educationally to judge those qualities of style, character, plot, and atmosphere which combine to make a book memorable and worthwhile?

What does he or she know of the history of children's literature and its important figures?

How many children's books has he or she actually read?

How widely does he or she read among quality adult books? If the librarian can not measure up to these standards, find another for he or she is inadequate for the job.

A knowledge of the community is the next requirement for background in book selection. The librarian must know:

How many children of library-use age are there in the community?

What percent of the total community population do they constitute?

Is the community a growing one? Is the overall population generally a youthful one?

What other agencies — such as schools or churches — provide books for home use? What kind of books?

What other recreational facilities exist? Playgrounds, children's theatre, youth groups. How much of the children's time do these activities and groups absorb?

What special interests exist in the community which should be met by the book collection?

Granted a knowledge of books and of the community, next a knowledge of the adequacy of the present library's collection is necessary.

Are the most important titles — those which should be available to every child — present and in good physical condition?

Is every field of knowledge for children reasonably well covered? Is the collection well balanced? Is it out of date and inaccurate material regularly weeded out and replaced by useful, accurate titles?

Is there a regular mending and binding program?

How does the children's collection compare in size and condition with the adult and young adult collections.

Budgeting is the next step necessary before actual selection starts. The Library which has taken the steps just outlined knows the general character of the child public, and what is needed to meet qualitative standards. Most studies of children's collections suggest beginning with a quantitative standard of two to two and one-half books per child in the area served. Such figures are generally modified by local conditions and by the fact that small libraries will need a larger per capita figure to secure reasonable coverage of each field of knowledge.

With all the before mentioned facts the librarian can construct a book budget effectively; He or she will also be able to allocate the book funds wisely among adult, young adult and children's collections. Money for children's books may be divided into the following areas:

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Philosopher on his grass farm has caught up with the times, his letter this week indicates.

Dear editor: I knew it was Christmas, television doesn't play Jingle Bells in July, but I thought it was Christmas 1962. I never got around to changing calendars.

In this connection, I was talking with a man who had something of the same feeling, that the years are sailing by so fast he can't keep track of them, and he was arguing we ought to hold Christmas only every other year, to give a man time to catch his breath between seasons, but he won't get anywhere with the idea.

At any rate, I tore off my calendar, brought the year up to 1963, and while I was at it flipped a page and got into 1964. You're not going to catch me napping, and besides, why waste energy tearing off a year at a time when you can get two with the same effort?

I have no idea what the new year holds for me, but that isn't surprising as I haven't found out yet for sure what happened in 1963. I know we have better communications but it doesn't help much, about all television does is multiply the number of crises you're aware of.

The number of trouble spots on earth probably hasn't increased, what television does is baffle you with four a week instead of the old system of one a month. Seeing maybe believing but it's a long way from understanding.

However this doesn't bother me. A man who had to wait for television to find out how much there is around him he can't figure out, just wasn't looking in the first place. I don't know why I should be expected to understand what's going on in the rest of the world when I'm not sure what's taking place on this grass farm.

At any rate, what's coming up in 1964 is bound to be interesting, and I intend to be on hand to misunderstand it.

Yours faithfully,

Dear editor: Now that I've got a new calendar and can plainly see we're into 1964, I was sitting by the fire last night wondering if I shouldn't be making some plans for the new year, but I called off.

I don't need any more new plans, I've got plenty left over from the last 12 or 15 years I haven't used yet.

Most people plan from the wrong end of the year, they plan ahead while you can be a lot more accurate if you plan back. I can see now a lot clearer what I should have done last January than I can what I ought to be doing next December.

Oh I could make some detailed plans for this grass farm for the next twelve months all right, but how do I know what the unfolding international situation will do to them? A man can feel awkward trying to plug up holes in his own fence when the leaders of world thought are arguing there ought to be more holes opened in the Berlin wall. ## Drivers Wishing To Reduce Annual Slaughter Can Citizens with a sincere desire to reduce deaths and injuries from traffic accidents during the holiday period can do so if they will follow the advice of Major Harry Hutchison, Commander of Region 5 of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"There are two things every citizen can do," the Major said. "First, obey the law, drive defensively, refrain from drinking and observe the other behavior patterns which may be called self-control. Second, multiply the efforts of your Highway Patrol and Police by reporting violations quickly in order to control others who are apparently headed for an accident."

State-wide approximately seven hundred patrolmen plus one hundred fifty patrolmen from the other uniformed services of the Department of Public Safety will be on the job during the nine days from December 24 to January 1 and in addition local law enforcement bodies will intensify their efforts. However, Texas safety thousands miles of highway requires that each patrolman will have an average of seventy miles of highway to supervise traffic for on a twenty-four hour basis.

The enforcement effort could be greatly multiplied if citizens will report the description and license numbers to the nearest enforcement agency every time a hazardous act is observed, particularly where drinking is suspected. "Studies made each year show that speed and drinking are involved in almost all of the fatal accidents that occur in this Public Safety during the holiday season," the Major said.

No one in his right mind would intentionally be involved in a traffic accident, however, the Major pointed out that lack of attention and lack of keeping the proper lookout is the underlying cause of the majority of all traffic accidents. He also called attention to the significant fact that during the last holiday season, 62 per cent of the fatal accidents on rural highways involved only one vehicle, indicating that over one half of the accidents could not be blamed on "the other guy".

"The surest way to avoid traffic accidents in addition to keeping the proper lookout is to leave yourself an out regardless of what mistakes the other driver may do and voluntarily comply with all traffic rules at all times," Major Hutchison concluded.

The Year 1964

We greet the New Year with high hopes for a prosperous year. From the business standpoint, economic experts are optimistic.

For resolutions, we would suggest that readers consider moderation in all things, especially on the highway. With the new high-powered automobiles now being offered, even more emphasis on safe driving will be required in 1964 than in past years.

We would suggest also that Americans make 1964 a year of non-partisan progress in Washington and the field of national affairs. As a nation and as a people, we should present a solid front to the world, and should do everything we can to improve our country, our government and the lot of the unfortunate, meanwhile safeguarding the freedoms and independence of every American.

Finally, every one of us should give thanks that we are citizens of the most fortunate and the most blessed country in the world. Properly thankful for this blessing from above, we can go forward with confidence that we will safeguard our country, and make it a unified force for the good things in this world.

Yours faithfully,

Folklore Calls For Black Eye Peas On Menu

COLLEGE STATION, Dec. — There's good luck in store for you in 1964, if luck can be measured by the ample supplies of black-eye peas.

According to tradition and folklore, black-eye peas have to be eaten on the first day of the New Year, if you want to have good luck throughout the year. There are ample supplies available of dried, canned and frozen peas, says the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

It may be wise to dine on good luck this New Year's since, 1964 is Leap Year, and an extra day of good fortune may be needed. For every pea you eat on New Year's Day, you can expect to earn a dollar to match it during the coming year, according to folklorists.

Some folklore authorities claim the South prior to the Civil War, and the tradition most likely started there, according to another theory. After the war, many Southern families had only hog jowl, black-eye peas and cornbread for holiday feasting — and any luck they had in the new year was jokingly attributed to the humble fare.

The added pork flavor of hog jowl makes the black-eye peas especially tasty.

Another good reason for eating black-eye peas on New Year's Day — or any other day — is that they're nutritious. Extension Service foods and nutrition special-

Little Boys Going For Long Hair

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
AP Fashion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Since Mrs. John F. Kennedy has made a dandy score as a trendsetter with each personal style choice, she is entitled to one dud, according to hair-snippers.
That dud is son John Jr.'s bowl-shaped, English haircut.
"We just couldn't buy that one," says Joe Carlow, voicing the viewpoint of thousands of barbers here for a national barber show recently. "It looks like neglect."

Apparently young mothers have not been able to adjust to it either, although they readily take up Mrs. Kennedy's own hairdos as their own. "We seldom got a request for it," adds Carlow, who had operated a tonsorial parlor in Miami, Fla., for 20 years.

Nevertheless, the First Lady is on the right style track. Little boys are going long hair, although not quite that long, and preferably straight hair.
"The trend is toward what is called the surf look," he says. "The part is low and the hair kind of falls a little bit to one side."

There are variations that range from a straightened version of the hair style sweeping forward a little on the forehead preferred by the President to a back sweep a-la Elvis Presley, without sideburns.

Model Son
Inspiration for this shear genius come from the senior generation. Sons like to imitate their fathers to a hair, explains Car-

HOLIDAY SEASON ENDS — The gaiety of the holiday season has ended with the year of 1963. The season afforded many happy hours, joyous reunions and the warmth of hospitality as it passed. One of these was open house at the David Anderson home with 113 guests signing the register. While the weather created a "Winter Wonderland" guests arrived, coats covered with slow falling snow, and were greeted at the door by Mr. Anderson while the family, Mrs. Anderson, Davy Jean and Hal and a friend, Lt. Jim Davison, (not pictured) formed the receiving line. The welcome mat was out bearing "Seasons Greetings" on the porch beyond the sidewalk lined with candelis. The door, covered with red, was centered with a Poinsettia spray and outlined with a holly runner.

Babe In Woods Snagged Her Man

By JOY MILLER
NEW YORK (AP) — "A logging camp is still a fertile area for women to get husbands," Irma Lee Emmerson says judiciously.

But if I were doing it now I might as well consider eastern Oregon, where there are so many big ranches — with big ranchers." Actually Irma Lee, 5-foot-2, blonde and fragile-looking, was searching more a job than a husband when she became second cook in a logging camp a dozen years ago.

She was past 30 and a notable non-success at making a living. She failed typing tests, flunked out at nursing, produced seven long novels nobody wanted to publish.

Tired of sponging off a fond sister and brother-in-law, Irma Lee asked for the cooking job after she overheard a couple of loggers talking about it on a park bench one day.

She never regretted her decision, she says. Out of it came a husband, a happy marriage and a recently published book, "The Woods Were Full of Men."

At the camp, she recalls, she'd get up every morning at 4:30 or earlier, and start fixing breakfast for the 60 loggers.

After making five gallons of batter for hotcakes, she's work on the rest of the meal, which included coffee, potatoes, eggs, toast, bacon, ham or sausage, dry cereal and fruit.

The loggers took along a hearty lunch when they left for the woods at 6:30.

"When they came back at low, a toupe-wearer and proud of it.

On the other hand, his son, Joe Jr., being only 10, has a healthy thatch. Therefore he is a regular and willing guinea pig in his Dad's barber chair.

Before the convention, and within a week's time, little Joe got a half dozen haircuts to enable big Joe to show his fellow scissel each hair fashion changes the appearance.

Crewcuts for men are just about gone, says Carlow, later conceding that a man's type of work or activity may still keep him true to a bristly head. "The sportsmen, and there are more of these in the summer, crop their hair near the scalp."

SPRIT OF CHRISTMAS — Colorful decorations in the David Anderson home created the spirit of Christmas for those who called during open house at their home. The round serving table was covered with a red cloth and a large stemmed vase held a holly arrangement centered with a red candle. Appointments of white ironstone and milk glass were used. A Poinsettia and red candle setting is shown behind the serving table. Guests were registered in the bedroom of the home decorated with holiday motifs. Despite snow and some icing conditions, out-of-town guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. Arch Pool, Amarillo; and Lt. Jim Denison, Jr., Pleasanton.

up 300 biscuits and 200 eggs and countless hotcakes for a hungry crew is gradually atrophy from disuse. Her tall handsome husband, now that he's away from the rigorous logging life, has developed a weight problem, and she is helping him watch his diet.

But sometimes when she gets out a frying pan — and dutifully puts it back — she feels a little wistful.

Americans spent 23 per cent of disposable income for food in 1932 and 20 per cent in 1942. In 1947, it was 27 per cent.

Library--

Basic books — These represent the most important books — the core collection — which should be available in any library. A fair percentage of the budget should be designated to replace worn copies of core books each year. If the core collection is particularly weak a special appropriation should be made — or special gift sought — to bring the collection up to minimum standards.

Current books — Every library needs a certain number of new titles to keep the collection up to date, to refresh it, and to satisfy the avid reader who has already read everything in the library on a particular subject. The proportion of the total children's book budget to be spent on new books must depend upon the need for older titles.

Replacements — Although this need not be a specific term in the budget, since replacements usually consist of core titles, the librarian must remember that books wear out and get lost. The buying program should leave room for unexpected replacement purchases.

Good current library practices call for the purchase of picture books and other often-used titles in pre-bound or publishers' reinforced bindings. This procedure pays for itself: reinforced bindings cut replacement costs by lengthening the life of books. The cost of stronger bindings must be taken into account in budgeting so that the total number of volumes purchased will be less than anticipated. Such bindings usually add 10 to 15 percent to a book's cost.

Book selection — For the librarian board which lacks a firm knowledge of the whole field of children's books, the most widely used tool to help in choosing a core collection is the "Children's Catalog" — a dictionary catalog of children's books listed with recommendations for first purchase.

Selecting current books to supplement the core collection is a demanding and often perplexing problem which can not be left to the untrained librarian.

Policies particularly applicable to the selection of children's books are: The same general qualities which make a good adult book make a good children's book. Because of their lack of experience, children are not offered books in as many fields as adults are, nor is over sophistication appropriate. Good writing, clarity, true-to-life characters, a logical and constantly absorbing plot, and a vivid atmosphere are just as essential to any book of fiction as clarity, accuracy and currency are essential to any book of informational value.

Only those children's books which can contribute significantly to a well rounded collection of good books should be added to it. A Children's collection should be chosen in great part for the influence it will have in developing in children a life-long taste for good writing. Shoddily and poorly written and produced books have no place in a Children's collection. Condensation removes the vitality and richness from any book and destroys the authors' unique style of writing for children; condensed books should never be purchased. Textbooks are primarily the province of the schools and should be added to the public library collection only to supply information not available in other books.

Wide reading of children's books is a primary qualification for selecting new titles.

No method of selecting current children's books surpasses reading them first. However, those librarians who do not have access to good book stores or a major library must base their recommendations on reliable book reviews and advise from the state library.

Each book should be considered individually. It should be compared with other books in the same field and with other books by the same author. Particular care should be taken in the selection of series books, which tempt the librarian to take the easy way out by purchasing them all. Many books are published in series, some of which are acceptable, others uneven, and many unfortunately, attempts of publishers to make money fast. Judge books on their individual merits, not by association under a series title. In case of doubt about the value of a book, the librarian should wait until there is conclusive proof in reliable reviewing guides that the book will contribute to the collection.

LARGEST — Pictured under construction at Southwest Public Service Company Plant X, in Lamb County, is a 210,000 kilowatt generator. The largest unit ever installed on the company's system, the huge turbo-generator will go into service in mid-

A qualified source from which to select current books is the "Book List and Subscription Books Bulletin," published by the American Library Association.

Others are Horn Book, Library Journal, Bulletin of the Children's Book Center, and Saturday Review.

Selecting Non-Book Materials — The small libraries budget seldom allows the purchase of materials other than books for its collection. This is a pity.

The American Library Association's standards recognize the library as a center for communicating ideas, which can not be found in books alone. The following non-book materials belong in all libraries.

Periodicals — These are particularly valuable for relaxation and up-to-the-minute information. The small library need not subscribe to more than a very few magazines. Any magazine worth public funds should have a pleasing format with quality paper and print; recognized children's authors as contributors; stories and articles which are well written and clear; illustrations meeting high artistic standards; and departments which appeal to a wide range of interests within a given age range.

Pamphlets — These are a valuable adjunct to the book collection because they supply material not usually found in book form. Much of this material is free. Consulates, chambers of commerce, governmental representatives and industries are often glad to supply them cost free.

The small library should develop a three or four drawer vertical file of frequently needed, up-to-date and intelligently arranged pamphlet material.

Mounted Pictures — A picture of Chartres Cathedral, or an altomulus cloud, or a close up of the Statue of Liberty can make learning a vital, vivid process and is a most justified expense.

Phonograph records — Hearing great actors reciting Mother Goose rhymes and William Blakes poems, listening to the singers of folk songs, the music of famous symphony orchestras, and spoken foreign languages are a few of the enriching experiences phonograph records can give children. The public library is often the only local source for such auditory pleasures and stimulations in a small community.

Films — Whoever has seen "The Lion's Necktie," "The Face of Lincoln," "Begone Dull Care," or "Madeline" knows that good films can be funny, moving, beautiful and informative.

They are expensive initially, but their audience is usually so great that per capita costs are very low. A library the size of that proposed here would need a selection of approximately 20 to 30 films. These would be exchanged with other libraries throughout the state on a regular basis.

Cataloging and classification will give the well-selected material maximum accessibility. When cataloging a children's collection, the librarian must bear in mind the small number of children's reference books.

He or she will then realize the importance of the card containing references to important sections within a book in addition to overall subject of the book.

The most pleasurable of all duties for the librarian is sharing the libraries riches with the children. To help unfold the wonders of "Mr. Popper's Penguins" and "Alice in Wonderland" and the "Just So Stories" to a child is a lively experience.

To help a child grow in taste and comprehension, leading him from the picture book section to "Bears On Hemlock Mountain" or "Call It Courage" or "Little House In The Big Woods" is an excitement and reward to the librarian. To introduce the child to untouched fields — to poetry, by means of "This Way, Delight;" to music through the "Picture Book of Musical Instruments"; to a love of nature, by means of "How To Know The Birds", is a stimulating experience.

Because of the limits of space necessarily imposed on this article I will not discuss reference work with children, programs in the library, relationships with the junior community — all of which are of vast importance to the successful children's library program — but will skip to physical surroundings.

The finest book and non-book material collection is worthless if the libraries physical surroundings are not inviting.

Picture books should be housed on low shelves with dividers;

the highest shelves should not be more than 60 inches. Tables and chairs should be provided in a variety of sizes to fit children of all ages; card and catalog should be low enough for children to use. Furniture need not be new, but should be in good condition and freshly painted at all times. All books should be standing upright, supported by bookends, and tables and chairs should be in order, at least before the library becomes crowded.

Displays are an integral part of a children's room. They should be neat and changed at least once a month.

Materials should be arranged for maximum ease of use by young patrons, with the easier books leading naturally to more difficult books. A division of the children's section into easy books, fiction, and non-fiction is necessary.

A small transitional collection of books would help recent "graduates" of the picture book section find their way toward the main body of children's books.

Breaking the collection into many sub areas (dog, house, and mystery stories, etc.) makes helping children easier for the librarian, but such an arrangement defeats the purpose of work with children by categorizing books leading children into ruts.

Books should never, never, never be marked with grade levels, because this system categorizes children. The child who comes into the library should always be allowed to roam freely.

A library program which requires a professionally trained experienced children's librarian has been outlined here in order to show what the library in a small community might aim toward.

It should not be discouraging for it presents choices which can only be made by the local library board. A library as well as librarians must establish goals, set priorities, and do well that which is done.

Washington Report

WARREN GROUP ON PROBE

It has been predicted by officials that it may be a year before Chief Justice Earl Warren's commission finishes investigating the assassination of President Kennedy.

velop and produce offspring that could infest "free" areas, eradication workers urge producers to check their livestock frequently and treat cuts and scratches that could invite infestation. When infestations are detected, a dozen or more of the larvae should be collected and the discovery reported to county agents, livestock inspectors or vocational agricultural teachers. Then appropriate control measures can be initiated. The wound should then be treated with insecticide to kill the remaining larvae.

Officials said October proved to be a busy month for screwworms with farmers and ranchers from 107 Texas Counties reporting 1,725 cases, the largest number reported during any month this year. Even with the buildup, however, less than 20 percent as many cases were discovered this year as during October 1962, when 8,702 infestations were reported in 222 counties.

OF RUNNING.

It has been reported that former President Eisenhower, whom Lodge helped win the 1952 nomination, has been trying to convince Lodge to make himself available for the 1964 GOP nomination.

DYNO-SOAR CANCELLED

President Johnson's decision to cancel the Dyna-Soar manned space glider project deals a blow to the Air Force's military-in-space ambitions.

In its place he ordered the Air Force to go ahead with development of an orbiting research laboratory designed to keep a crew of spacemen aloft for weeks at a time.

COIN SHORTAGE

The Treasury expressed concern over the coin shortage which has become steadily worse during the Christmas shopping rush. The shortage was obvious long before the Christmas season. A Treasury spokesman believes the shortage is due to good business in retail sales and increased use of vending machines, parking meters and other such devices.

RFK TO WORK

Robert F. Kennedy has returned to work as the nations top law enforcement officer, even though he no longer holds the intimate White House role he had with his brother.

His first official public appearance was a groundbreaking for a playground in the heart of Washington. He has made no public statement of his future plans. But, the understanding is that he will remain as long as President Johnson wants him.

CABINET AND SPENDING

President Johnson, in a recent conference with his Cabinet, has asked them to give their personal attention to his campaign to hold down Federal spending.

While urging economy in defense, Johnson assured the military leaders that he does not "intend for one moment to give up the gains and strength" of the last three years.

OF BASE CLOSINGS

Congressmen were upset over the economy-induced plans to close or reduce operations at military bases in 16 states.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's action will affect 25 to 27 bases resulting in the loss of 9,000 to 12,000 civilian jobs.

Indications are that large and small bases would be phased out over perhaps three years. No Army, Navy and Air Force naval shipyards were on the list bases to be closed.

Big Breakthrough In Hybrid Cotton Here? Dreaded Midge Can Liston Stands Alone Be Controlled Here

A breakthrough in the production of hybrid cotton, sought for years by plant breeders, is believed to have been made by the DeKalb Company, and the first large field of 100 percent hybrid cotton is being watched closely. The 50-acre field is located at Pecos, in the storied trans-Pecos area of Texas.

Unusual for its distinctive red leaves, the cotton is being grown from seed produced at the DeKalb cotton research center at Athens, Georgia, an area said to be especially well suited to the purpose because of its high population of bumble bees.

Unlike pollen of most other crops, such as corn and sorghums, cotton pollen is extremely heavy, and as a result air currents cannot be depended on for cross-pollination of the plants. It is necessary, therefore, to depend a great deal on insects, preferably the large bumble bees, to carry pollen between two parent lines.

Hybrids Not Yet Available
DeKalb geneticists explained that while cotton seed from which farmers can grow pure hybrid cotton cannot yet be made available, the company plans to offer for sale next year seed from the Pecos production. It will be storm-proof in type, and designed as DeKalb 331.

It is believed that crops of the F2 from the hybrid seed offer the benefits of increased hybrid vigor, and also will serve as a test of the practical value of producing cotton seed from such hybrid production fields. The company hopes to overcome some of the problems in production of hybrid cotton, which holds the promise of increased yields, improved staple quality, and greater vigor.

The seed used for the Pecos planting came from planting alternate rows of a normal green leaf cotton and a red leaf strain. Pollen production in the green leaf strain was retarded by spraying the variety with a chemical sterilant, FW456. Bumblebees carried pollen from the normal red leaf rows to the flowers of the partially sterile green leaf rows, so that much of the seed harvested from the green leaf rows produced hybrid plants. Those hybrids, planted at Pecos, were easily identified by a red leaf color inherited from the pollen parent. All green leaf plants were chopped out, and the remaining cotton is a green-by-red hybrid.

Everyone needs some milk every day, but the milk may be the regular fresh fluid variety, evaporated milk or reconstituted nonfat dry milk solids. Evaporated milk may be diluted with an equal amount of water.

If your family enjoy pickled herring and there is some in your refrigerator, don't hesitate to let it give tang to potato salad.

Grain sorghum producers of West Texas are advised by research entomologists of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station that the dreaded sorghum midge can be effectively controlled by early planting and use of chlorinated hydrocarbons and phosphorus insecticides.

Investigations on the pest were conducted during the 1963 growing season at the South Plains Agriculture Research and Extension Center, Lubbock, by the Texas station in cooperation with the Entomology Research Division, USDA. Research entomologists Nobility, except maybe Floyd Patterson, knows how good a fighter Charles (Sonny) Liston really is. The brutish-looking Liston again made short shrift of Patterson to retain the world's heavyweight boxing title.

The end came in 2:10 of the first round in Las Vegas, Liston missing by only four seconds the time of his 1962 kayo over the then champion.

The next act in the heavyweight drama will take place in Miami on Feb. 25 and the one who would doubt Liston's right to hold the crown is Cassius Clay, the Louisville Lip who gets more mileage out of his poetry than his punches.

Clay remained in contention through a 10-round decision over Doug Jones and a five-round knockout of Henry Cooper in London.

Death struck in the ring again, less than a year Kid Paret's fatal finish against Emile Griffith in New York. This time it was featherweight champion Davey Moore of Columbus, Ohio. Sugar Ramos of Mexico City stopped Moore in 10 rounds in Los Angeles to win the crown. Three days later Moore died.

After Harold Johnson beat Gus Scholz in Berlin to retain the light heavy title, Willie Pastrano dethroned Johnson in Las Vegas. Dick Tiger drew with Gene Fullmer in Vegas but beat him in his native Nigeria. However, Tiger lost the middleweight crown in Atlantic City in a 15-round decision to veteran Joey Giardello.

Emile Griffith and Luis Rodriguez took turns holding the lightweight crown. Luis won in Los Angeles in March but in New York in June Emile regained the title on a split decision.

Carlos Ortiz went to San Juan for the only defense of his lightweight title and stopped Doug Vaillant in 13 rounds. Ortiz was accused of ducking legitimate contenders.

Ramos' only title featherweight defense was made in Mexico City where he beat Rafu King in 15 rounds in July.

Brazil's Eder Jofre made successful defenses of his bantamweight crown with victories in Tokyo and Manila.

The flyweight division had three champions during the year. They were Fighting Harada of Japan, Thailand's Pone King-Pitch and Japan's Hiroyuki Ebihara.

Pne regained the crown by beating Harada in January and in September Ebihara knocked out Kingpitch in the first round.

Arlington National Cemetery originally was part of a 6,000-acre grant made by the Virginia colonial governor to a ship captain, Robert Howsen, for bringing colonists to the New World.

News Report From Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C. — It can be seen what the campaign of 1964 will be like. President Johnson has set the pattern he intends to follow, and it is clear what the Republicans must try to do to defeat him.

The polls already show Johnson is the favorite. In fact, there is a chance that he will, by a slight move to the center, capture a greater popular vote than did John F. Kennedy in 1960. If this happens, Johnson would have slipped into the Democratic fold many moderates who voted for Eisenhower and who vote more for the man than for the party.

Johnson's margin in the polls is already greater than was Kennedy's margin prior to the 1960 race. (It is not as great as Kennedy's margins in the years after his election.) Chances are good he will be stronger in the conservative South and Midwest (especially if the Republicans nominate a leftwinger) than Kennedy would have been.

His danger area — and he knows it — is the industrial East. If the Republicans nominate a liberal eastern candidate, and reject Senator Barry Goldwater (or Goldwater withdraws), Johnson's critical area will be the traditional eastern or industrial liberal states.

Several things will enter the picture. Running mates of each candidate will count for something. Johnson will probably want a liberal and an easterner and perhaps a Catholic, though Catholics in eastern areas are not always assets, as Kennedy was.

Should the Republican nominee be Henry Cabot Lodge, or Governor Nelson Rockefeller, or even Richard Nixon, Johnson will need an eastern liberal as a running mate.

There is one nostalgic possibility, though perhaps it is too early. It is that Johnson run with Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., now of the Commerce Department. It was under his father that Johnson began his career — and the elder FDR had much to do with giving Johnson his start. So it would be a natural except for the fact that Roosevelt probably needs a few years, to be elected to office, and to build a greater image.

It's the same with the late Senator Taft's son, now ready to run for the Senate in 1964. (John Eisenhower might also have his eye on politics.) Former President Eisenhower, reportedly behind Richard Nixon, has been giving thought too, lately, to Henry Cabot Lodge. Lodge is a genuine easterner; that's his current attraction.

The Republicans are waiting for Johnson to show some sign of pro-southern sentiment on civil rights or conservative inclination. They can always bring out the prejudices against the South. If they hook them to Johnson's coat, he is gone.

In fact, this is the big Republican chance. If Johnson allows himself, by words and actions, to be branded conservative, the Republicans can steal the Kennedy thunder, the traditional Democratic thunder, the liberal thunder. Lodge might be a man who could do it — in 1960 he was proposing all sorts of things to appeal to the liberals, such as a Negro Cabinet member, etc.

The President's number-one job is to avoid getting himself in that fatal classification, and he knows it. In following his strategy he may alienate any moderate and conservative, but he will probably not lose as many as the late President Kennedy had lost. Johnson will need the votes of those he can hold, to offset left-wing votes he loses.

But no Vice President who has succeeded to office on the death of a president — as Johnson did — can afford to be a master politician.
