Hitler Would Like To Stop But He Can't

Would Hitler like to back out of the war at present and, if so, do you think he possibly could?"

No, I don't think he could get out of it. Just as he isn't likely to quit unless he cashes in on his conquests or is defeated, so the Allies have sworn that they never will stop until they have pulled him

Peace talk has been going the rounds quietly in Europe recently. My information is that some Axis supporters have been predicting Hitler would make the Soviet an offer of separate peace before the winter shuts down on the Russian front. If that venture were successful, he would make suggestions to England for terminating the war.

These Axis sources believe such a proposal to Britain would follow the lines of previously rumored plans. That is to say, Germany and England would be the dominant powers of Europe-with heavy accent on Germany. Sovereignty would be reby the Reich.

Games, Grim And Gay

The crack of the bat, the thud of the punter's toe against the football-in these things, in the autumn of this year 1941, Americans are still blessedly permitted to be interested. The world series, the opening games of the football season, these hold briefly our attention, while across the world people watch and play their parts in a grimmer

Does it seem irresponsible for a great nation to rivet its attention on the hop of a sharp-hit baseball or the spiral flight of a deftly tossed forward pass, while there is being fought what may prove to have been the bloodiest battle the world has even seen?

We think not. In spite of wars, revolutions, and all the tumults of the social organization, life must go on. No one can forget Carlyle's vivid picture of how in Paris, during the most shocking horrors of the Reign of Terror, thousands went the ways of their daily life quite heedless of all these things. The pitcher must go to the well, and the clothes must go to the laundry in the face of the greatest and most world-shaking events.

Business can't be "as usual," and life can't be "as usual" in these days. The overwhelming stark fact of war throws its shadow over every activity of man throughout the world. Yet man is so constituted that in the face of the most overpowering disasters, he grasps for such pleasure as he can, and finds them good. If British people who may, before any morning's sun rises, be bombed into eternity, can spend those evenings at the movies (and they do) there is no good reason why the people of the United States should not sit cheering in the stands while yet they may. World series and football crowds this fall may well be the greatest of history.

Get out into the glorious fall weather, then, and cheer your team. Try to put out of your mind for a few hours that other game that is being played with the heart's blood of men and women for a stake no less than the freedom of

Babying Babies

Another cycle seems to be swinging around to full circle. It's the baby-care cycle.

A generation ago it was the regular thing to coddle, kiss, bounce, rock, squeeze and generally fondle all babies. Then came a sterner regime. It was found that kisses spread germs, bouncing disturbed stomachs, and over-affection generally discombobolated the infant interior. So babies were reared for a while under a Spartan don't-touch, don'tkiss, don't-baby-the-baby regime.

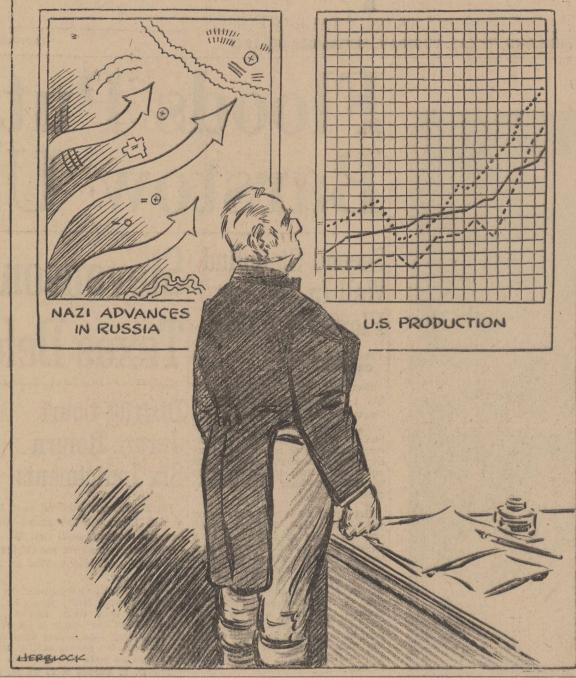

Now a New York psychiatrist has discovered that a baby insufficiently "mothered" may develop "behavior disorders" and "neurotic conflicts." Well, science was bound to catch up with grandma some time.

HAS MANY CONTACTS

Right now she has a plan which would enable newspaper women to volunteer their services by acting as liaison officers between local army camps and her central Washington bureau. They can spot regional army doings of interest to women and send them in to her to be passed along to feminine readers all over the country.

Oveta Hobby is in touch with women in many cities and has always been active in public life. She started out as a law student, and has written a text book on parliamentary law which is used in Texas and Louisiana schools. She was legal clerk in the Texas State Legislature at the age of 19, and codified the state banking law before she was 25. Then she married William Pettus Hobby and moved to Houston to live. But she just couldn't sit back and be a home-body. So she started in as research editor on her husband's paper. From there she advanced to book editor, assistant editor, and finally was elected to

Dean Proposes Law Students Deferment

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) - A proposal law students be deferred from the draft until their professional education is completed was advanced Tuesday by Dean Albert J. Harno of the University of Illinois college of law.

Speaking before the national conference of bar examiners, he said law students should not be given immunity from military service but that their legal training should be finished first.
