Grocery prices record biggest drop in 24 years

WASHINGTON (AP) - A near-record drop in grocery prices held inflation to its smallest monthly increase in more than four years during February as consumer prices rose only one-tenth of a per cent, the government said today.

Falling prices for beef led the decline at grocery counters where prices tumbled 1.5 per cent, the biggest monthly drop in 24 years, the Labor Department said.

Gasoline prices also declined, but the department said the food was the big factor in the slowdown of prices

February's increase in overall consumer prices compared with an in-crease of four-tenths of a per cent in January and was the smallest since September 1971, when prices also rose one-tenth of a per cent. All figures are adjusted to account for seasonal influences.

Nonfood prices also continued to increase at a moderate rate last month, while the cost of services such as medical fees and auto in-surance went up sharply but at a somewhat slower rate than in

The department said the consumer price index in February stood at 167.1, meaning the consumers had to pay $167.10 for goods and services that cost $100 in the 1967 base period. The index is not seasonally adjusted. Despite the small February increase in prices, consumer prices still were 6.3 per cent higher than a year ago. However, that is the lowest 12-month increase since July 1973, when prices had risen 5.7 per Wholesale prices, which foreshadow trends at the retail level, have fallen at an adjusted annual rate of 3.8 per cent since November.

The latest price report follows a spate of economic reports this week showing steady improvement in almost all sectors of the economy.

Industrial production in February increased for the 10th consecutive month, housing starts jumped 27 per cent to the highest level in nearly two years and businesses began ex-panding inventories by the biggest margin in over a year, the govern-

Ford administration officials con-

first of the year a vindication of their policies and a boost for the President's election chances.

Unemployment also has dropped dramatically over the past four months, and wholesale prices have declined at an adjusted annual rate of 3.8 per cent since November.

Treasury Secretary William E.
Simon predicted earlier this week, in the administration's most optimistic forecast to date, that joblessness may drop below 7 per cent this year and that inflation will decline to about 2 per cent within three years.

But the Congressional Budget Office warned that while the recovery is progressing the improvement

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jurors in Patricia Hearst's trial enter deliberations with two conflicting portraits of the newspaper heliress—one by the prosecutor who insists she is a couniving liar, the other by the defender who argues she robbed a bank to save her life. In final arguments Thursday, U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. repeatedly urged the sevenwoman. five-man jury to base their verdict on the evidence. Defense attorney F.

Lee Bailey stopped just short of suggesting they ignore it and rely instead on her own testimony.

U.S. Dist. Judge Oliver J. Carter planned to issue final instructions and send the bank robbery case to the jury today. The trial is in its the jury today. The trial is in its eighth week.

Browning, his voice occasionally rising in an impassioned two-hour address, implored the jury to watch again the film of Miss Hearst robbing the bank, read her underground writings, listen to her strident voice on taped messages and her profanity-laced jailhouse conversa-tion with a friend.

Bailey, in a 45-minute oratory that barely mentioned the evidence, said the trial dealt with "dying or surviving. That is all that Patricia Campbell Hearst thought about."

Miss Hearst, 22, testified that she was a terrified hostage of her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers and participated in an April 15, 1974, bank robbery under fear of death. Bailey argued that a guilty verdict would encourage similar kidnapings in the future, in the future.

The government contended she was a willing convert to terrorism and Browning dismissed her defense as "too incredible to be believed."

He recited the major points in her defense, summed it up as if she were saying, "I didn't mean it," and then, leaning forward over a lectern, he said slowly and emphatically, "It's too big a pill to swallow, it just doesn't wash."

The tall, lanky prosecutor, glancing at a prepared text, made only one direct reference to Miss Hearst's Feb. 4, 1974, kidnaping at the hands of the SLA.

"I'm sorry that Patricia Hearst was kidnaped," he said. "I'm sorry anyone was kidnaped ... but can you assume that she was a kidnap victim for the next 19 months?

"Don't be misled by the smokescreen the defense has raised," he urged the jury. "Judge this case on the merits. Judge this case on the evidence."

Bailey, discarding notes and a microphone, hammered away at the kidnaping and Miss Hearst's professed fear of the SLA as coloring all the evidence against her.

'You have to resort to something besides the evidence in this case," he said. "It's riddled with doubt and always will be."

Balley, peppering his speech with dramatic pauses and sometimes almost whispering, said there was no question that she robbed a bank.

"The question you are here to answer is why?" he told the jurors. 'And would you have done the same thing to survive? Or was it her duty to die to avoid committing a felony." Miss Hearst, clad in the same conservative navy blue pants suit she wore the first day of her trial, sat impassively through all the arguments, flanked by dark-suited

Rhodesian talks fail

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) -Talks on the political future of white-ruled Rhodesia collapsed today. Black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo charged Prime Minister Ian Smith had "chosen war" and Smith called on Britain to "actively assist in resolving the constitutional issue."

Nkomo told a news conference negotiations broke down over the timing of majority rule for Rhodesia's blacks. He said Smith would only concede the transfer of power to the black majority over 10 or 15 years, rather than the one year sought by Nkomo's faction

Smith, speaking at a separate news conference, said he believed Britain should no longer avoid the respon-sibility over Rhodesia which London

Accident victim 'critical'

Mrs. Quinnie Cordell Myrick, 1205 Douglas St., was in critical condition today with injuries suffered in a two-car collision Thursday after noon that left three people dead and Mrs. Myrick and her husband, William Clinton Myrick, 75, were in the hospital's intensive care unit, a hospital spokesman said. Mrs. Myrick suffered a fractured pelvis and other injuries. Myrick suffered multiple internal injuries and a fractured hip.

Albert Clement, 69, 506 W. Louisiana St., was in satisfactory condition at the hospital with multiple cuts and bruises and fractured ribs, a hospital spokesman said.

The two-car collision occurred at 12:51 p.m. Thursday, police said.

Two of the people who were killed were former Midland residents who had moved to Stephenville, Tex.

Police said they were Roy Franklin Stockard, 76, and his wife, Florence Ona Stockard, 74.

Stockard was riding in the front seat next to the right front door and died as a result of head injuries, while his wife was sitting next to him in the front seat and was thrown into the windshield, breaking her neck, police

MIAMI - A Canadian banker who has not been accused of any crime was given an uncomfortable choice Thursday in the Internal Revenue Service's huge Caribbean tax haven

He was told he may choose bet-ween going to jail in the United States or the British West Indies.

The dilemma arose for Anthony R. Field, 32, resident director of Castle Bank and Trust Co.'s branch in the Cayman Islands, because Field had been subpoenaed to testify before a federal grand jury here when he passed through Miami International Justice Department attorney Bernard S. Bailor, who is directing the grand jury investigation into offshore tax evasion schemes, told a federal judge that Field had refused to answer questions before the jury about the bank's activities.

Field had cited the U.S. constitutional guarantee against selfincrimination and the strict Caymanian bank secrecy law as grounds for his refusal, according to a grand jury transcript made public in court. The grand jury has been probing the alleged misuse of foreign trust accounts at Castle Bank by wealthy

In a classic confrontation between the laws of two countries, U.S. Dist. Judge Peter Fay ruled in favor of the Justice Department, ordering Field to testify under a grant of immunity. Attorneys, said othere had been no similar case on record. When Field, a baby-faced man in a baggy blue sport coat, still refused to testify, Fay found him in contempt of court. Admitting the case is unusual, Fay freed him on $25,000 bond pending his appeal.

Fay's order protected Field from prosecution by U.S. authorities for what he might say.

But if Field decides to cooperate by testifying, his attorney said, he faces certain imprisonment in the Cayman Islands, which informed him by letter that penalties would be

Gordon Aiton, Inspector of Banks in the Caymans, a British Crown Colony, wrote Field that "any contravention (of the Bank Secrecy Act) would be pursued to the fullest extent of the law."

The Caymans law, similar to that in the Bahamas and Switzerland, punishes a breach of banking confidentiality with a maximum $1,200 fine and six months imprisonment. On the other hand, if Field continues to refuse to testify, he could be imprisoned for contempt of court by U.S. authorities for the life of the grand jury - in this case 18 months.

"If a man engages in business in more than one country, be subjects himself to the laws of each and every country," Fay explained.

The judge, however, said that he was not unsympathetic with Field's problem after Field's attorney, Jose

Martinez, said of his client:
"He's damned if he does and damned if he doesn't."

BALBOA, Panama Canal Zone (AP) - Panamanian union officials say the governor of the Panama Canal Zone has cleared the way for negotiations to end the five-day-old strike disrupting traffic through the Striking canal pilots appeared un-convinced, and their spokesmen said the ship jam is expected to increase over the weekend.

Gov. Harold R. Parfitt threatened earlier to get an injunction against the strikers and to use troops and workers from the United States if necessary to get the canal back into full operation.

U.S. Army officials in Washington said Parfitt met with union representatives Thursday and promised to recommend certain changes to a policy board. But there was no indication from the strikers that they were abandoning their protest against proposed payscale changes and other economy moves to reduce a $14-million deficit which the canal company expects this year.

About 700 of the 3,500 American employes of the canal company have been reporting sick since Monday. Company officials said their strike reflects the fear that the new canal treaty being negotiated by the U.S. and Panamanian governments will mean the replacement of the Americans by Panamanians.

Pilots were available to take only six ships through the canal Thursday instead of the usual 30 or 40. More than 100 ships were waiting at both ends of the waterway, and another 70 were expected over the weekend. The average operating cost of the waiting ships was estimated at $8,000

Panamanian employes of the canal company protested the strike at a ballpark rally Thursday night. Speakers asserted the American employes were trying to disrupt the negotiations for a new canal treaty.

Most of the Panamanian employes are members of AFLCIO unions. Parfitt and the Panamanian government praised them for working while the Americans stayed out.

Besides the pilots, who must accompany each ship through the canal, the strikers include teachers, tugboat crewmen and other Republican challenger Ronald Reagan, campaigning for North Carolina's primary election, says one of his main problems is fending off questions from those who want to know how long he expects to remain in the presidential race.

Reagan, loser to President Ford in , the first five primary elections, waved off calls for his withdrawal and questions about the viability of his candidacy as he stumped North Carolina Thursday. Reagan said he expects a close race with Ford next Tuesday - and he feels he has a Democrats Jimmy Carter and George Wallace toured the state, too, in search of support for the next of the primary elections.

Four other Democrats are on the ballot - Washington Sen. Henry Jackson, Arizona Rep. Morris Udall, former Oklahoma Sen, Fred Harris and Texas Sen, Lloyd Bentsen, But Bentsen has quit the race and Jackson, Udall and Harris are concentrating their efforts elsewhere.

The Democratic field increased by one Thursday with entry of Sen. Frank Church of Idaho. "It's never too late, nor are the odds ever too great to try," Church declared in Idaho City, Idaho.

He became the second new candidate to enter the Democratic presidential race in a week. California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. announced his candidacy last Friday. North Carolina's Democratic primary is seen primarily as another duel between Carter and Wallace. Carter beat the Alabama governor in primaries in Florida and, last week, in Illinois; Wallace got more votes than Carter in the Massachusetts primary won by Jackson.

Jackson's interest in the North Carolina election fell off last week when New York's legislature chang ed the system for voting there April 6, making it easier for candidates with less money - like Udall - to round up support. The Washington senator quickly shifted his concentration to New York and the race for 274 national convention delegates, a race he predicts he will win.

North Carolina sends 61 delegates to the Democratic convention and 54 to the Republican meeting this summer, and Alex Brock, head of the state's election board, predicted this week that less than 38 per cent of the registered voters would help pick

"You've been with me, you've heard the crowd yell." Reagan said in reply to the many queries about his candidacy. "They don't want me to quit. That's what everyone was saying as they took my hand. 'The only thing that would bring about my departure is absolute flat proof that the President has 1,130 delegates needed before the convention," the former California governor said at another point

Ford said Thursday night he would not consider primary victories in Illinois and North Carolina "knockout punches" against Reagan. The President said victory Tuesday "would be very helpful," but not necessarily fatal to the challenger.

Reagan, meantime, was joined by actor Jimmy Stewart and drew crowds in excess of 1,000 to each of three rallies Thursday.

Carter campaigned in Charlotte,
Concord and High Point Thursday, predicting another victory, while Wallace took a swing through the rural eastern part of the state.

Carter responded to charges from Wallace that he is a "warmed over McGovern" - reference to the 1972 Democratic nominee. The former Georgia governor said many of McGovern's supporters are on his staff, but added: "I have support from backers of all the candidates in

There were these other developments on the political scene

-Oklahoma Gov. David Boren made his long-expected endorsement of Carter, then began work to swing most of the state's national convention delegates to the former Georgia

-A state judge in New York ruled Minnesota Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's name cannot be on the April 6 presidential primary ballot.

State Supreme Court Justice Ellis Staley upheld a recently enacted section of New York election law permitting Democratic party delegate-candidates to be identified on the ballot with the name of the presidential candidate they support.

Humphrey backers who filed the lawsuit objected to a provision that requires delegate-candidates to obtain official approval from a presidential contender if they want to run under his name.

Humphrey, the party's nominee in 1968, has said he is available for a convention draft but has not announced as a candidate for the -Democratic officials in Ohio said aides to Brown, the California gover-nor, are exploring the possibility of Brown making a late entry as a candidate for that state's June 8 primary. Brown said last week he would run in his home state, where the primary also is June 8.

-In Washington, the Senate admitted defeat in efforts to pass legislation restructuring the Federal Election Commission before the March 22 deadline set by the Supreme Court.

The matter will be considered again next week, party leaders said, but the delay leaves the FEC in lim bo, unable to approve further federal campaign subsidies for presidential candidates or to carry out other parts of the 1974 campaign finance

-Reports that Rogers C.B. Morton, the presidential counselor, would become Ford's campaign director continued in Washington but there was no confirmation from either Morton or the White House.

Report assails private nursing home facilities

By EDMUND PINTO

WASHINGTON (AP) A new government report says some mentally ill patients in private nursing homes are living with hunger, ween 1969 and 1974. cockroaches, leaking roofs, exposed electrical wires and doors made of cardboard and burlap.

The report, released today by the Senate subcommittee on long-term care and programs, particularly scrutinized New York and Illinois. Senate investigators said private homes were d wanting in both states. Sen. Frank E. Moss. D-Utah, chairman of the panel, said the conditions were fostered by government policy that provides a financial incentive to move patients from public institutions into private-care facilities.

"I have seen hungry people with their faces up against vending machines begging for a quarter," Moss said. "I saw three patients cooking eggs on a hotplate in their room while breakfast was being served in the dining room. I learned that they had bought the eggs with money they had received from begging."

Moss claimed mental patients "are a good investment" in New York as well as in Illinois

He offered case histories of several private operations, including one in Illinois where the operator hous-ed 180 mental patients who were transferred from public care facilities. The operator received $400,000 a year and managed to keep $185,000 as profit. Moss said the operator spent only 54 cents per patient per day for food.

"He (the operator) defended this profit, telling us it was below industry expectations," Moss said.

Moss laid part of the blame on Congress and the Social Security Act, including the Supplemen-tal Security Income pro-

In 1935, when it approved Social Security, Moss said, Congress barstitutions. But if boarded in a private home they could receive the money. "In short, Congress created the scandalridden, for-profit nursing home industry," he said. In this same way, Moss continued, Con-gress barred receipt of ent SSI funds by a third for individuals under the care of and living with

The repohospitals has dropped 44 per cent from 427,799 to 237,692 bet-

"The saddest thing is that more often than not patients have been placed in slum housing and forgotten," Moss said. "In some cases, so many discharged patients have been placed in particular areas of our major cities that they have become instant psychiatric ghet-tos."

For a dark green lawn, Duble suggests applying nitrogen every 80 days at the rate of one pound to 1,000 square feet. General may lose limited right to order use of atomics

WASHINGTON (AP) - A former U.S. nuclear strategist says the Pentagon may revoke what he said is the sole exception to civilian control over the use of American atomic

The exception cited is the power of the commander of the North American Air Defense Command to use low-powered defensive missiles against attacking bombers without the president's prior permission if the President cannot be contacted in

The former strategist, retired Vice Admiral Gerald E. Miller, told a House International Relations subcommittee Thursday that the Pen-tagon would eliminate this exception because of changing circumstances.

When Chairman Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., asked why the Pentagon would revoke this power, Miller said he did not know but "I surmise the delegation might have outlived its usefulness."

With modern technology and the succession of civilian leadership from the president to the vice president and on down through Congress, Miller said, there could be no case in which a civilian leader could not be immediately found to authorize the use of the nuclear weapons.

Chances of Ford Mideast visit this spring less likely

WASHINGTON (AP) - The chances of a visit by President Ford to the Middle East this spring are slipping, but U.S. officials say the options will be kept open until the Arabs and Israelis are fully sounded out on prospects for a new round of negotiations.

WITH HER BATON at rest, a

Some administration strategists are concerned that Ford might appear to be grandstanding in the midst of the presidential campaign if he made the trip without solid evidence that it served a useful purpose in promoting a settlement.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and his aides have just begun serious examination of Israel's offer to its Arab neighbors to return occupied territory in exchange for an Egyptian end-the-war

King Hussein of Jordan, a key figure in Mideast with Ford, Kissinger and others. Having ruled himself out of negotiations when the other Arab states crowned the Palestine Liberation Organization with the right to represent the West Bank, Hussein is now being wooed by the Rabin government to become involved again.

Even in advance of Hussein's visit, Israeli sources report the Rabin government is being pressed by the State Department to be more specific about how much land it would cede for the declaration.

Since the proposal is novel and has run into sharp criticism from Israeli opposition leaders, Israel is moving slowly in spelling out details of its proposal. Despite this, U.S. officials say it offers the current best hope of resuming the "momentum" that Ford and Kissinger seek in the Middle East.

Late last year, top U.S. officials virtually predicted visit by Ford to the region by spring. Now, while acknowledging that chances have slipped, they insist that the U.S.-led quest for a path to negotiations still holds promise of success and that Ford may be on his way by late spring.

"It's still wide open," one key official said.

negotiations. This will become clearer when U.S. Ambassador Richard Murphy returns from Damascus for consultation next week. Hermann Eilts, the envoy to Cairo, has returned to his post and remains in touch with Egyptian leaders.

Momentum shifts toward cutting federal controls

BROOKS JACKSON and EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) - Slash government control of airlines and truckers. Lighten the burden of federal paperwork. Let bad agencies die automatically. Veto the regulators' regulations.

After a-decade of expanding federal control of American life, Congress is considering these and similar proposals with various degrees of seriousness. Congress is clearly having second thoughts. Momentum has shifted toward reconsideration of the extent to which bureaucratic decisions, made largely by unelected officials, should rule the nation's life and business.

In this election year, the presidential candidates sometimes describe the government they seek to head almost as the American colonists spoke of the British crown 200 years

PRESIDENT FORD denounces the "petty tyranny" of federal regulators. The Senate's number two Democrat, Robert Byrd of West Virginia, says these regulators impose an "intolerable burden." Congressmen say they get thousands of letters complaining of excessive federal regulation.

Yet special interest groups are already fighting to preserve regulations that favor them and polls show no general public uprising against controls. No revolution seems likely soon and the prospect is for long debate, perhaps years of it, before major changes are made.

PERHAPS THE BEST prospect for quick passage is a proposal to allow either house of Congress to block new regulation simply by a majority vote. Presently it takes a law passed by both houses to overturn a regulation.

House sponsor Elliot Levitas, D-Ga., thinks the regulators would be more careful if their regulations -7,496 in 1974 — could be rejected more easily by Congress. In that year, Congress itself passed only 404 laws.

"We are saying we want to take a look at these regulations. And when they come up with a damn fool regulation, say 'No, you've gone too far,''' says Rep. Edward W. Pattison, D-

BUT CRITICS SAY Congress is not equipped to handle the flood of regulations and that the congressional review period would simply mean more delay and another chance for pressure groups to push their views.

An idea with demonstrated support would put limits on the life of any new government agency and perhaps on some old ones too. The idea, dubbed 'the sunset amendment," would kill the agencies after a certain period unless Congress and the President thinks they are doing a good enough job to deserve a continuation.

"GOOD INTENTIONS can sometimes become rigidly codified into law and then calcified into entrenched, expensive and frequently unresponsive bureaucracies," says freshman R. Max Baucus, D-Mont.

During House debate on a propopsed consumer agency, Baucus said he wanted to protect consumers, but was leery of setting up a new bureacracy.

"With a 'self-destruct' provision attached ... the risks of setting up a new agency are worth taking," he said. The sunset rider passed the House without significant opposition and is now headed for a House-Senate conference committee.

Plans also have been offered in the Senate and House to insert selfdestruct clauses in the charters of the nine federal agencies, a move to force congressional review of their per-

ANOTHER PLAN, sponsored by Byrd and Republican Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, would require the President to offer a new plan each year for five years to eliminate wasteful and unneeded regulations in specified areas, including banking, safety, pollution and others. The President's plans would be adopted automatically unless Congress blocked them or substituted its own. under this proposal, the built-in inertia of Congress would work in favor of change and not against it.

Congress now is seriously studying removing government controls that restrict free competition between businesses, especially in the transportation industry.

Some agree with UCLA professor George Hilton:

"THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE Commission should be abolished, its building torn down and the ground sown with salt.'

A more modest plan by the Ford administration advocates loosening, but not abolishing, economic regulation of railroads, airlines and trucks. It suggests greater flexibility in setting rates and more freedom to offer new services or cut unprofitable one.

A modified version of Ford's railroad proposal was recently enacted, tied to federal takeover of seven financially ailing railroads.

FOR AIRLINES, Ford suggests allowing companies to raise or lower fares by a certain percentage on indivioual routes, rather than for all their flights, without intervention by the Civil Aeronautics Board. The airlines could increase the number of cities they serve or drop unprofitable flights more easily.

A Democratic-dominated Senate subcommittee reported in late February that giving airlines increased freedom to raise and lower fares could mean fare cuts on major routes of 30 to 40 per cent.

The Air Transport Association, representing the major airlines, op-poses deregulation, saying it would mean increased fares and reduced service to small cities and towns.

FORD'S TRUCKING proposals are opposed by the American Trucking Association and the Teamsters Union. They say loosened government control would hurt service and raise shipping rates for less populated areas.

Currently under study by Ford aides are federal regulations that keep the fledgling cable television in-dustry from bidding on major movies and from importing an unlimited-number of signals from distant cities. STATION OWNERS, facing increased competition from less regulated cable systems, have already moved to drum up opposition. The National Association of Broadcasters reportedly budgeted $500,000 to fight cable deregulation, and CBS has just hired a Washington lobbyist to fight pay television.

One novel idea would eliminate volumes of government regulations and lay off platoons of inspectors and clerks almost at a single stroke: tax rather than regulate such things as auto emissions, gasoline consumption and industrial accidents.

"We've got to find a way to let people's greed work for us, and not against," says Charles Schultze of the Brookings Institution, budget director in Lyndon B. Johnson's administra-

THUS, WASHINGTON wouldn't bar sales of cars that spew more than specified levels of pollutants. Instead, a tax would be levied so that the more a car pollutes the more it costs. Robert Stewart Smith of Cornell University, a Labor Department analyst during the Nixon administration, would junk the voluminous safe-ty rulebook of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and substitute a tax on injuries and Thus, employers would have a financial incentive to make their workplaces safer and would be free to do so any way they feel most suitable. Federal regulations now dictate the proper height for stairways, the prop-er height for safety rails and even the proper design of toilets. BUT THE IDEA has limits. Smith concedes federal rules are necessary to curb workers' exposure to in dustrial poisons and health hazards. This is because job-caused illnesses sometimes take years to show up and are difficult to pin on a specific employer.

And there are political obstacles.

Labor leaders don't embrace the idea of placing a price on a worker's life or Neither the President nor Congress has attacked wasteful and anticompetitive aspects of federal agricultural marketing orders, which regulate sales of milk, fruits, nuts and some vegetables

However, a staff report by the Federal Trade Commission has described these regulatory systems as damaging to consumers. For example, food has been destroyed to keep prices up. The report says there are legal grounds for civil court suits in certain cases

A CONSUMER GROUP is suing the ecretary of agriculture for failure to take legal action against dairy cooperatives that charge premiums above federal minimum prices.

These moves have stirred stiff reaction from farm groups. The National Association of Farmer Cooperatives has bought full page newspaper ads to oppose any move against co-ops.

A poll of 2,900 people — conducted by a New York firm for the National Advertising Council - found 43 per cent saying there is too little regulation. Only 22 per cent said there is too much, with the rest having mixed feelings or no opinion.

ANOTHER SURVEY, by the Institute of Social Research at the University of Michigan, whose con-sumer confidence surveys are widely used by business, found two-thirds of the 1,431 people questioned were satisfied with their last contact with government.

Yet many politicians say their constituents don't trust government, especially since Watergate. And they say joblessness and rising prices are making voters ask whether they can afford the high cost of cleaner air, safer autos or regulated air and truck

THE ADMINISTRATION'S pressure for deregulation has brought some changes already.

The Federal Communications Commission is moving to cut the recordkeeping requirements for small broadcasters. And the ICC has allowed forhire truckers to save fuel, wages and wear on equipment by taking short-cuts that were once prohibited.

But the present regulatory scheme was built up over many years, strarting with creation of the ICC in 1887. It has powerful friends and won't be dismantled easily or quickly.

Error of omission earns black mark

We tend to give people a black mark when they do something wrong, but we don't notice it when they just sit still and do nothing. At the bridge table, however, it's just as bad to sit still when you should be active as it is to do the wrong kind of acting.

Bond changes proposed

By HENRY GILGOFF Newsday

Consumers who buy U.S. savings bonds can earn 6 per cent interest if they wait at least five years before cashing them in. But many don't wait

In fact, about a third of the Series E savings bonds issued in 1974 were cashed within six months without earning any interest. About 22 per cent more bonds that year were redeemed before 12 months had passed and so earned just 3.7 per cent in interest.

As those statistics indicate, the interest rates on bonds vary. The longer the bond is held, the higher the interest, up to a point. The Series E bonds can't be redeemed until they've been held for two months. No interest is earned until six months have passed. If the bonds are held at least that long, the interest rate is 3.7 per cent. The interest rate then climbs gradually until the 6 per cent figure is reached after five years and remains at that level if the bonds are held beyond the five-year term.

The high percentage of bonds cashed before maturity was reported by Rep. Fortney Stark (D-Calif.), long a critic of the bond program. As the president of an Oakland, Calif., bank before going to Congress, Stark at-tacked the bonds as a poor investment and urged consumers to put their money elsewhere. The Treasury Department ultimately revoked the bank's authority to buy and sell the savings bonds.

Stark's report on the rate of savings-bond redemption was made recently in conjunction with his efforts to modify the bond program.
Under one change that he has proposed, there would be a minimum 4 per cent interest rate if the bonds are held at least two months. Another change suggested is aimed at the fact that currently interest is credited only every six months; a bondholder who cashes the bond after 17 months would get exactly the same interest earnings as the consumer who had redeemed a bond in only 12 months. What Stark is proposing is that interest be credited monthly. Stark's proposals have passed the House and are pending in the Senate, tagged to a bill that would raise the federal debt

The statistics cited by Stark didn't come as a surprise to the Treasury Department, which spends about $12 million a year promoting the bonds.

Pilot constructing rental blimp

East BOYS CO

LOS ANGELES - The day may not be far off when a boy will look up at the sky, point and say: "Look, Daddy, the Engelhardt blimp!"

Engelhardt? Do they make steel-belted radials? No. And the they is a he — Dean S. Engelhardt, Hollywood stunt flier, who is now taking the biggest gamble of his life.

Engelhardt has spent much of his savings and the better part of the past two years betting that firms other than Goodyear are interested in sponsoring a

The former Alaska bush pilot and experimental plane test pilot says he got into movie flying "because studios were hiring me to teach stunt pilots special stunts. I finally decided to do them myself."
HIS RECENT FILM credits include "Breakout" and "Night Moves." He also flew in the television movie "Birds of Prey" and stunted in TV episodes of Cannon, Switch, the FBI and Adam 12. "As a stunt flier, I found the one thing I couldn't rent to the studios was a blimp," Engelhardt says. "At first I tried to build a Goodyear-size blimp (192 feet long) but I soon discovered why people don't build them — expense." Goodyear spends an estimated $2 million to build blimps such as the Columbia, which is based in Los Angeles, and another $1 million a year to operate and maintain them. Stunt flying is lucrative but not that lucrative.

Then, in early 1972, Engelhardt heard that Goodyear had a 110-foot long experimental blimp for sale. "It was stored in Phoenix in a very big box," he says. "After I bought it I rented the biggest truck I could find and brought it back to Los Angeles. The box was so heavy the truck's front wheels were practically off the ground."

Actually, all Engelhardt bought was the envelop or gas bag. The fins, gondola and engine had to be built or acquired elsewhere. He stored the blimp at Corona, Calif., and began the long process of cquipping it.

"NOBODY THOUGHT I could put it together," Engelhardt says. But he found a rigger, two pilots, a mechanic and a designer who had formerly worked

"At first I thought we could get it together in a few ths, but I've found you have to multiply time estimates by 10 and cost estimates by 20," he says.

Hazardous situation

The dark continent of Africa daily becomes a more hazardous place.

It requires the earnest attention of America's policy makers, which means, actually, all of us.

Mozambique has declared a state of war, with Rhodesia as the obvious target.

The departure of the Portuguese colonists has tolled the end of European imperialism in Africa. Only the white-dominated minority governments in Rhodesia and the Republic of South Africa remain, islands of white rule surrounded by black people.

The immediate danger, it is said, is the outbreak of a racial war in the southern half of the continent.

The government of Rhodesia has refused to recognize its own peril. A peaceful solution apparently becomes more remote every day which goes by without meaningful negotiation toward the establishment of majority rule in Rhodesia

It is inevitable that similar pressures eventually will require the Republic of South Africa to grant more freedom and equality of opportunity to its black majority.

Experts on the subject describe the alternative as ghastly to contemplate. Guerrilla war, terrorism, repression, genocidal programs, even nuclear war, all are said to be possible if not probable. It would be difficult for the superpowers to avoid in-

With all this in mind, it is easy to visualize the hazards involved ... hazards with worldwide implications.

The dangers actually do not need to be stressed or exaggerated. They call clearly for early and continuous attention by the American public to the African situation. Americans must be informed in order to be of assistance to the people there, in order to make a determined effort to keep the peace.

This isn't something that most of us like to contemplate, but regardless of our feelings as to the rightness or wrongness of the situation, we need to do all that we can to avoid conflict. It is to the best interest of all to be reasonable and to seek compromise. The antagonists should consider all the angles before pushing too far toward the edge of destruction.

An election was held a year ago. Democratic parties got 64 per cent of the vote. But the Communists and their supporters in the military refused to recognize the results. They nationalized a number of industries and on Nov. 25 they staged an abortive military coup. When it failed, they lost their influence in the military.

Alaska pipeline cost soars

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON - The cost of building the Alaskan pipeline has soared so far beyond estimates that it may add millions to the price Americans must pay for petroleum products.

Back in 1969, when the pipeline was proposed, the oil companies informed the public that it would cost only $900 million. These companies formed a giant consortium, called the Alyeska Pipeline Co., to lay the 800-mile oil Alyeska now estimates it will cost billion to complete the project That's a whopping six times the original estimate.

But sources close to the project now tell us the final construction cost may top $10 billion. Staggering waste, thefts and union featherbedding, according to our sources, have sent the costs into orbit.

The scandalous cost overruns simply will be added to the price that the oil companies will charge for Alaskan oil. Some experts already estimate that the price will hit $14 a Congress will set the final figure, but it will be guided by President Ford's recommendation. He will depend heavily on the Federal Energy Administration, which will conduct a study to determine a fair price for Alaskan crude. In the past, both the President and Congress have listened sympathetically to the oil industry's hard luck stories.

Footnote: An Alyeska spokesman told us the company expects to hold the cost to the $5.7 billion estimate. He claimed increasing efficiency will bring price stabilization. He blamed environmental safeguards and skyrocketing inflation for the cost found that the dirty tricks usually originated somewhere on the political right. Invariably, we would trace the deliberate distortions and dirty tactics to some right-wing cultist.

The extremists of the right are still practicing Watergate-style politics. We were alerted to this by the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG), which has conducted a two-month investigation of the scare campaign against the Equal Rights Amendment in New York State.

This amendment merely strengthens the constitutional guarantee of equal rights for women. So far. 34 states have ratified it, but four more states must vote their approval by 1979 for the amendment to become part of the Constitution.

New York voters beat down the Equal Rights Amendment to a surprising defeat last November. NYPIRG tried to find out why. We have confirmed their findings, which will be published soon.

The right-wing John Birch Society, for example, intentionally trumpeted false arguments to scare people into voting against the amendment. The society's literature claims the amendment would make homosexual marriages legal, would outlaw separate public restroom facilities and would eliminate the separate state's authority over marriage, divorce and child care. The Senate Judiciary Committee has refuted these claims.

To dramatize the false charges, the right-wing claque played key roles in Operation Wake-Up, which raised the phony specter of a unisex bathroom. One agitator, Mary Ann Sanscrainte, dressed herself up as a "common toilet." On her outhouse costume, she crossed out the words "his" and "hers" and substituted the single word "theirs."

discover why New York City has failed, thus far, to implement specific financial reforms.

"New York City has not been making an effort," a Senate Banking Committee source said, "to keep in line its expenditures as it previously pledged it would do.

"What our investigation wants to find out is precisely what has New York done to keep its commitment to the federal government."

A public hearing on the issue is expected to be launched by the committee beginning April 1-2. However, the failure to implement the promised fiscal reforms is not the only cause for the committee investigation. What initially may have aroused members of Congress was this series of developments in mid-February:

New York City officials acknowledged that over the Christmas holiday they had "uncovered" an additional $87 million in debt not previously acknowledged when the city was campaigning for the Ford administration to bail it out.

The city's Department of Social Services (welfare) was accused Feb. 11 by New York state of "alarming" shortcomings in its accounting procedures. The state charged that a single month's claim by the city led to $89.5 million in overpayments from state and federal funds.

The city has conceded publicly that its estimated deficit, instead of amounting to $724 million, will be closer to $1 billion and even may reach $1.2 billion. This means half of the Ford administration's $2.3 billion in short-term seasonal federal loans may be used to pay off such a deficit or be diverted to the other uses, making it increasingly difficult to prevent default of m micipal bonds

Such disclosures have distressed and alarmed lawmakers, many who reluctantly favored Mr. Ford's bailout loan proposal.

However, it is now clear that New York is dragging its feet in slashing municipal services. For example, it still maintains a system of free student tuition in its city college system. It refuses to close many of its municipally operated hospitals, which could save $100 million a year, according to one knowledgeable source at the U.S. Treasury Depart-

At the same time, the city is trying to force private New York hospitals out of business as a means to benefit the municipal medical centers. Further, the city continues to operate its two radio stations and a TV station instead of selling them or shutting them down to cut costs.

All of these facts suggest that not only has The Big Apple broken its promises to the federal government, but that President Ford, Secretary of Treasury William Simon and members of Congress have become partners to the most cynical con game since the first New York sharp operator sold the Brooklyn Bridge.

California wine industry seems to be maturing

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — King of the Mountain in the U.S. wine trade is California. Almost 85 per cent of the wine consumed in this country is domestic and 85 per cent of that wine comes from California. Wine is the largest state's largest agricultural

As in the children's game of the same name, someone is always trying to topple the king from his mountain perch, or at least he thinks someone is Therefore is. Therefore, a conversation with Robert M. Ivie, chairman of the board of the California Wine Institute and thereby — as much as any one person the voice of the king, ranges far from the vineyard. To listen to Ivie tell it, and he tells it with restrained conviction, the California wine industry has matured. Childish attempts to make rules on bottle sizes that would have effectively banned importation of aged foreign wine, undue concern about possible competition from infant industries in other states, these are in the past.

"We're not going to end up as a desolate industry," he said; "We're going to survive and make strides."

AT THE MOMENT this means capitalizing on a nearly 10 per cent jump in California wine sales last rear after two slow, worrisome years. It means actively participating in the U.S. Advisory Committee for Trade Negotiations to push wine exports. It means fighting a Food and Drug Administration decree that wines must list ingredients on their labels. It means formulating a position on a U.S. government proposal to define "appellation of origin" for wines.

"We've gotta get involved," said tyie, speaking of the trade program. Exports more than doubled from 1974 to 1975, but the volume, about 1.1 million gallons, is far below potential, he said. "We have two aims," he said. "We have to protect ourselves so what happened in textiles and electronics doesn't happen to us. We have to open up opportunities for export" (by gaining equal access to markets and con-vincing the U.S. government to help dismantle tariff barriers). "We can produce the volume and a quality product. We haven't sought this during boom years of (domestic) demand. We want to now for economic reasons, for the pride of having our wines available around the world. We can never compete in price with the vins ordinaires of France or Italy there. Conversely they can't compete here. It's a question of logistics. Technically, our wines are as sound as or more sound than any in the world. Our (export) forte, even-tually, should be regional and varietal

IVIE LISTED Japan as "probably the most significant target" and wondered aloud about the potential of mainland China as a market.

On labeling: "We believe we made a good showing (at hearings held by the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms) that ingredient labeling is not essential, that the added cost to the consumer is not justified, that the proposed deadline of Jan 1, 1977, is totally impossible to meet and the question of how imports would be controlled or governed isn't answered."

He provided some insight into how the California industry will respond to the government-inspired challenges of labeling and appellation of origin.

Last November, after BATF announced it would not require ingredient labeling, the Food and Drug Administration invoked its right to do so.

Despite a legal provision cited by consumer activists who brought suit that wine, beer and spirits, like all other foods without standards of identity, must list ingredients, Ivie indicated the Institute intended to pursue its claim that the FDA hadn't played fair in taking back authority over these beverages from BATE over these beverages from BATF.

As a companion tactic, he indicated legislation to exempt spirits, beer and wine from the labeling provision would be introduced in Congress "within 30 days." He acknowledged contacts with the spirits industry on the matter. The beer industry supported labeling

On defining appellations: Ivie strongly opposed recognition of any geographic areas smaller than counties (thus, there would be no "Rutherford" appellation with the wider "Napa" area). He argued that loosely defined areas such as Napa Valley or Livermore Valley, terms recognized not be tampered with.

THE FRENCH Appellation Controller system defines areas where grapes for specified wines may be grown and decrees the types of grapes that may be grown, thereby making (of more than 200 in the state) now judgments. It is, to Ivie, "an acreage control program that might even be unconstitutional in the United

A vintner in California with knowledge of Europe supported Ivie's view in a separate interview.

"The first step," he said, "is to define as accurately as possible, what exists today. Then we must create a procedure for making new appellations. But drawing geographical areas is the first step in a very long process. It is a long way from controlling what goes on inside them."

In opposition to those who see the BATF proposals as an opportunity to set quality wine apart from less distinguished products, the vintuer and Ivie both feel growing practices over time and consumer demand will establish the scale of quality.

THE INSTITUTE, seems likely to push BATF to establish "the ground rules," apply them nationwide and enforce them. "Number one, we don't want each individual area making its own decisions on estate bottling," Ivie said. The bureau has indicated it favors state determination of appellations of origin.

Within California, Ivie indicated, there is a good deal more stability than existed in the early years of this decade. The boom in demand last year eased fears growers may have overplanted.

"There is concern, but not as much as there was six years ago," Ivie said. An excess of wine "dumped" since the 1974 harvest has caused retailers to worry over permanently depressed prices that would not allow for profit. "Hopefully that's gone," Ivie said. "Now we lack white grapes and wines."

THIS IMBALANCE toward red wine grapes he credited to an unanticipated shift in demand caused in large part by the greatly increased role of women (supposed to prefer white wines) as wine buyers.

white wines) as wine buyers.

The structure of the industry is more stable, too, he said. In 1975, giant United Vintners withdrew from the trade association, severely cutting its revenues. Under pressures of political activists, who objected to its quasi-official status and use of funds collected under state authority, the 37-year-old Wine Advisory Board (of 37-year-old Wine Advisory Board (of publicity arm) collapsed. An audit of the Board's use of funds was ordered. Ivie said all but "20 or 30" wineries (of more than 200 in the state) now belong voluntarily to the institue, that the audit inquiry, when announced, will reveal "a clear record" and the large firms, particularly E. & J. Gallo, the world's largest winery, do not "push around" the smaller members. "It's just the reverse," he contended. "The industry is very cognizant of the necessity of having small vintners included. On the board the little gaves have set the votes." the little guys have got the votes."

St. Paul United Methodist Church OTHERS

There are other lessons to be learned . . . that involve reverence, respect and the footsteps of life . . . lessons that help us express in our simplest actions the things we believe in. Learning those vital lessons every Sunday at church is even more fruitful than a trip to the train yards with Dad. Sunday Psalms 119:46-72 Monday 16:16-24 Tuesday Hebrews 13:1-8 Wednesday John 1:43-51 Thursday Matthew 9:35, 10:8 Friday Luke 5:1-11 Saturday Mark 4:1-20 break ~one

Dad was a railroader, a dedicated one. The rails were his love as well as his life. To him the "Twentieth Century" wasn't a span of history — It was "his train" roaring through the night.

Dad often took me to the train yards. He taught me that a railroader never steps on the rails. A "trackwalker always walks the ties! This was no superstition — just respect for the "road."

Religious book hits top of selling list

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes religious books far outsell the widely touted, so-called "best sellers," but gever show up on the lists because of practices in the trade. But a current religious number has hit such a peak that it has broken into nearly all the front-runner listings.

It's "Angels: God's Secret Agents," by evangelist Billy Graham, with 1,210,000 copies distributed since it

came out last fall.

"It's the fastest selling book we've ever had, and to the best of our knowledge, that anybody's ever had," says Alex Liepa, an editor of Doubleday company.

Nevertheless, it's one of the few religious books to push into the major "best-selling" lists, even though such books often beat those listed in national sales and popularity among American readers, and though sales of religious books lately have climbed faster than other categories.

Jennifer Byron, of Nashville, Tenn., a Baptist Book Stores com-munications specialist who has made an extensive study of the situation,

"The fact that books designed for a specific market may not get on a bestseller list even though they sell as many copies as those that do gives the public a wrong picture of what books are really selling."

One reason mentioned for the disparity is that compilers of the lists generally don't check with religious books stores, of which there are more than 3,500 in the country. Other fac-tors also apparently figure in the problem, including a tendency not to consider religious books in the general nonfiction category.

Permian Restaurant & Lounge SUNDAY

By JANIS JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — The sunlight streams each morning into John de Rosen's studio, a large room in a dilapidated late Victorian building in dilapidated late Victorian building in downtown Washington. It is the kind of place in which one expects to find an artist: out-of-the-way, quiet and cluttered. A copper bucket of brushes stands on one table; trapezes for murals and mosaic sketches are suspended from the 12-foot ceiling. The focal point of the room is a short, slightly stooped man, brush in hand, standing before a seven-foot tempera painting in progress on an easel.

John de Rosen, who will turn 85 years old on Feb. 25, looks more like a years old on Feb. 25, looks more like a wizened professor than a painter. His thick wavy white hair, his tweed pants, V-neck sweater, shirt and bolo tie, his words often calling on Plato and his disciples, de Rosen's hundreds of books, from a dusty 1851 volume on the Iroquois Indians to art history and hemingway, all compound the literary image he portrays.

Through his fertile mind pass quickly the wisdom of ancient Greek and Latin literature. "I read a lot of classics. They have a great gift of making you think straight when you are confused," he said, his blue eyes crinkling at the corners as he smiled.

John Henry de Rosen should be everyone's grandfather. He is a warm and amiable soul, confident yet humble, courtly, a genteel man influenced by the Victorian manners under which he was brought up. He prefers the company of children while he paints to anyone else. "They have good sense," he says. But what is most magnetic about the man is his perception of life, secured by his devout religious beliefs and acquired by experiencing many generations, many wars and many societies.

Actually, de Rosen is no one's grandfather. He is a bachelor, born in Poland, reared in France. And for the past 50 years he has painted religious art in churches, cathedrals and convents from Russia westward to California. The late Pope Pius XI commissioned him to paint a mural for the private chapel of popes in Castelgandolfo near Rome.

In Europe, they're in places as the Cathedral of Lemberg (once Polish, now Russian) Lemberg (once Polish, now Russian) and the chapel of the Kahlenberg

Church in Vienna.

"The total of my paintings, I suppose, is like the pebbles on the shore of the sea. I've been constantly painting, rushing up and down scaf-foldings. I don't climb scaffoldings anymore, not because I can't but because I've not had the opportuni-

De Rosen says his health is good. He then knocks on wood superstitiously. His astigmatic eyes require fairly thick glasses for close work, and he walks the street with a cane. Each weekday morning, Monday through Friday, he travels by bus from his suburban Arlington, Va. home, where he resides with his sister, to his studio. He paints from 9 a.m. to noon.

Then he goes home.

DeRosen's intimate companion for 45 years has been Wilfred, an 18-inch jointed human figure made in wood. He found Wilfred in Paris, but he can't remember why he named him

THE REV. Vic Jackopson, a British ninister, tonight will conclude a series of special Bible studies which he has been leading this week at Northside Baptist Church, 303 E. Shandon St. He is pastor of Godstone Baptist Church near London.

De Rosen grew up in Paris, where his family moved when he was three months old. His father, Jan de Rosen, was a distinguished court painter for Czar Alexander III and Czar Nicholas II of Russia. As a child, he played with Christian A. Herter, U.S. under-secretary of state in the Eisenhower Administration, whose parents also

De Rosen first wrote poetry, served in the French, British and Polish armies in World War I and later in the Polish diplomatic corps before painting for 15 years in Europe.

He was invited to the U.S. in 1937 by the Polish ambassador, and he decorated the Polish pavilion for the 1939 New York World's fair. World War II broke out, Poland was invaded, his family fled, and he never returned to Europe.

In 1939 he was commissioned to paint the "Entombment of Christ" mural in the hauntingly beautiful St. Joseph's chapel at the (Episcopal) Washington Cathedral. In Washington, his works also are in the headquarters of the U.S. Catholic Conference and the National Shrine of the Improculate Conception the Immaculate Conception.

His mosaic, "Christ in Majesty," towering over the north apse of the Roman Catholic shrine, took seven months to complete. For mosaics, he paints an original work which is converted onto tiles by a mosaic com-

His largest mosaic iySVdral, measuring 13,000 square feet and it is believed to be the largest mosaic in the world, he said.

De Rosen, a Catholic was recently honored for his 50 years in art by a local committee sponsored by Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle, former Archbishop of Washington, and the Polish com-munity. Nancy Hanks, chairperson of the National Endowment for the Arts, wired De Rosen with greetings obehalf of President and Mrs. Ford.

"I am a very religious man. At the same time, I get great help from the classics. Religious art requires a lot of knowledge. The trouble today with religious art is that people do not have the slightest understanding of the tradition and meaning behind what they are painting. The artist should know very well the history and the symbols," he said. An artist should know, for example, why crosses come in different shapes. "It's not a sort of accident, but each cross means something different." His studio contains hundreds of reference books.

"Religious art in this country is not a favored art form, first of all because there is no tradition. The first religious paintings were by poor Catholics whose work was second and third rate. For the official American art critic, religious art still is second rate. But not in Europe, where the first paintings were done in churches

"I've been poohed and poohed by the critics. They say, 'Well, you know, these Catholic artists ...' It doesn't bother me. I don't depend on the critics. I depend on the people who like my paintings. They ask for them and respond beautifully. Thomas Hart Benton wasn't favored by the critics either, but he always said, his works would outlive his critics."

Currently, de Rosen is painting a mural in tempera and gold leaf of St. Francis of Assissi for a church in Buffalo. "Some works are very exciting, others have many obstacles. Painting is about the same process as writing. It requires great concentration and discipline. I have a general idea, and as I work, the ideas come, and it grows slowly. I don't know what idea will come to me next.

"The most illuminating explanation is the theory of the neo-Platonists, that every image painted already exists somewhere in the abstract. As you work, you uncover something, sometimes not so well.

"The perfect idea in the abstract is God. I feel that I get closer and closer. "I'll never attain perfection, but the great artists, like Michelangelo and Shakespeare, got even closer to perfection. The perfect idea, the absolute is God." colute, is God.

Hendrichs, 36, is not too keen on giving details but he has had many ap-plicants since he first opened his antikidnap school last August. Predictably, Italians make up most of his clients, he says. But he also trains drivers from Germany, France and Switzerland.

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. - A Marine lieutenant has been court martialed here for leading his men on a marijuana picking expedition and smoking the pot with them.

A group of military policemen dealing in "dangerous drugs and marijuana" at the Marine Corps' big Cherry Point Air Base 40 miles east of here has been uncovered and broken those that have persuaded civilian authorities, if not Marine leaders, that the Corps has a growing drug problem. The problem did not end with the Vietnam war.

Police Sergeant Charles R. King — a former Marine gunnery sergeant who spent 17 years in the Corps - said he is swimming against a tide that gets stronger by the month as hard drugs follow marijuana into the little town of Havelock, home of the Marines' Cherry Point Air Base.

"That $8 million-a-month payroll out at the base is too big to pass up," said King in explaining why Cherry Point and other military bases in North Carolina have become prime targets for drug dealers.

ANOTHER REASON, King said in an interview in Havelock, is that the state's 3,800-mile coastline is easy for drug dealers to penetrate by boat. The drugs are then trucked to distribution cities inland, the sergeant in charge of Havelock's drug control effort said. Compounding these problems, the sergeant added, is the wide acceptance by both young officers and enlisted men of marijuana as a way to pass the time in the peacetime Marine Corps.

"It's getting worse here," said King
"because the hard stuff is coming in. We're starting to get increasing amounts of cocaine and heroin' on top of the old standbys marijuana, amphetimines, LSD and tranquilizers. The way the Marine lieutenant justified his marijuana picking mission buttressed arguments by King and others that marijuana knows no rank and is seen as a softener to military life.

"I feel sorry for enlisted people," Lt. Kem W. Vickery, 28, of Newcastle, Ind., told the military judge at his general court martial at Camp Lejeune last month. "I spent three years as an enlisted man," continued Vickery who joined the Corps in 1971. "I can relate to their experiences and So, last summer the lieutenant "conspired" — to quote the Marine charge later made against him — with five corporals from the 8th motor transport battalion at Lejeune to drive to Pulaski County, Ind., where marijuana grows wild marijuana grows wild.

With the help of two combat radios checked out of the base for the secret operation, Vickery deployed his men for the harvest. They smoked the marijuana after drying it.

MARINE AUTHORITIES, aided by evidence supplied by enlisted men who had participated in that harvest, convicted Vickery of conduct unbecoming an officer and trying to intimidate Marines from testifying against him. Despite Vickery's pleas to the military judge, Col. Paul F. Henderson, to let him serve a prison sentence in the Corps rather than be kicked out of it as a felon, Vickery was sentenced to dismissal and had a penalty of three years at hard labor suspended. Brig. Gen. John H. Miller, Vickery's senior commander, is reviewing that sentence. Miller stressed in an interview that the Vickery case as a "gross exception," asserting that he and other com-

At Cherry Point, Marine Lt. Col. Stanley Wawrzyniak — the provost marshal and thus the cop for the air base — agreed in an interview that drug problems are getting worse but said this is not peculiar to Cherry Point, but reflects a general increase of drug abuse on all military bases and among civilians.

and among civilians. The discovery at Cherry Point last spring that 15 military policemen were using the drugs they were supposed to help control is one measure of the problem.

Marine Maj. Charles H. Mitchell

Staff Judge Advocate at Cherry Point, said in an interview that the 15 MP's were not an organized ring of pushers but used and sold drugs among themselves. Base authorities compiled enough evidence against 11 of the 15 MP's to kick them out of the corps last fall. The case of Marine Pvt. Ray Leon Petrovskey, 19, is cited by civilian authorities here as an example of how drugs in the military can lead to crime against the civilian communi-

Petrovskey pleaded guilty to robbing the Kwik Pick market in Havelock of $173 on Jan. 18. He said the pusher he was indebted to for drugs supplied him with a pistol for the robbery and then disappeared after promising to stay to help him escape.

"This guy deals in big drugs and that's why I owed him money," the 19-year-old Marine wrote authorities after his arrest for armed robbery.

Hunger, malnutrition persist as red tape stalls aid programs

By AUSTIN SCOTT The Washington Post

OXFORD, N.C. — The weather-ravaged, four-room shack could have materialized from a 40-year-old photo of the Great Depression. Nine members of the Jones family live within its ragged wooden walls, sharing the dark confines with a makeshift collection of junk furniture jammed into nearly every available open space on the sagging, bareboard floor.

Ed Jones, one of the two family members who has regular work, said the family has only $20 a week to spend on food for everyone, including a year-old infant and five other young children. His mother Lessie, 65, who does the shopping and cooking, said they eat "a lot of beans ... We eat meat on Saturday."

SEVERAL MONTHS AGO Lessie Jones, who has a ready smile and a quick laugh despite the problems, traveled 45 miles to the Duke University Clinic in Durham because her legs kept swelling badly.

"The doctor gave me three prescriptions," she said. "He said I got to take the medicine if I want to live, but I ain't had 'em filled 'cause I ain't had no money."

The circumstances in which the Joneses live — with no indoor toilet and only a front room wood stove for heat and a wood cook stove — are similar to the living circumstances of Robbie Elliott, who is 14, pregnant, and suffering from malnutrition.

County nutritionist Linda Stout is worried that malnutrition will stunt the mental and physical growth not only of the Jones children, and Robbie Elliott's unborn child, but also of some 1,500 other low income children and pregnant mothers in surrounding Granville and Vance Counties in North Carolina.

STOUT BELIEVES all 1,500 are eligible for a special federal program called WIC (Women, Infants, Children), which combines $25 worth of especially nutritious food a month with regular medical screenings for pregnant women and children up to age 5.

Congress authorized the program in late 1972 in an attempt to stop the severe brain and growth damage malnutrition is known to cause in infants and young children.

But Stout's application to begin the program in Granville and Vance counties has been on file since last June, with no word from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which administers the program, as to when — or if — a program will be authorized.

Twenty-nine North Carolina counties have applied for WIC — and received no answer.

A 1971 state nutrition study found 23 per cent of North Carolina households were in need of food, and more than half the state's pre-school children had inadequate diets.

A PUBLIC INTEREST law firm, the Food Research and Action Center in New York City (FRAC), filed a class action suit last week against the

in New York City (FRAC), filed a class action suit last week against the Department of Agriculture and the Office of Management and Budget on behalf of an estimated 500,000 pregnant women and young children across the country, all of them represented in applications for WIC that, like those in North Carolina, have not been acted on by USDA.

The suit, compiled with the help of

The suit, compiled with the help of The Childrens Foundation, a non-profit, anti-hunger organization in Washington, D.C., claims the Agriculture Department's failure to authorize any new WIC programs since last July amounts to an illegal impoundment of $94 million to $104 million in WIC funds that Congress had ordered be spent in the fiscal year ending June 30.

According to papers filed in Federal District Court in Washington, Congress intended that up to $300 million be spent on WIC in fiscal 1976, but USDA may spend as little as $160 million.

THE SUIT NAMES plaintiffs in 10 states, including "an 18-month-old North Carolina child who was diagnosed as suffering from a borderline case of kwashiorkor, a protein deficiency disease normally found only in bordering countries," and "children whose height and weight are so stunted by malnutrition that they are below the first percentile of growth development."

It accuses USDA of violating the 1975 Child Nutrition Act, which was passed in October over President Ford's veto. One section of that act says any eligible agency that applies to operate a WIC program "... immediately shall be provided with the necessary funds to carry out the program."

FRAC first sued USDA over delays in the WIC program in 1973, and has won each time it went to court, obtaining four separate court orders for the department to stop delaying the program.

AGRICULTURE SECRETARY
Earl Butz, named as a defendant in the suits, has said he does not think programs such as WIC and Food Stamps should be administered by his department. They belong in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, he said.

Harold McLean, director of WIC for USDA, said the program currently has an authorized caseload of 750,000. The latest figures from the department, however, show it is serving 550,000.

McLean said the Department plans to begin making decisions on pending WIC applications "very shortly after March 31."

Barbara Ann Hughes, state WIC director for North Carolina, said she and other state directors were told late in January by a USDA regional official that new programs might not be authorized.

"He said something like you may not get any new programs this year. We thought he was kidding us," she said, "until the next day when we met with Stefan Harvey of the Childrens Foundation and she showed us copies of the memos that had been written to the regional offices."

THOSE MEMOS said USDA had decided to suspend authorizations of any new WIC programs until March 31 to give time for counties operating the Supplemental Food Program (SFP), which is similar to WIC, time to decide whether they wished to switch over to WIC.

Asked why USDA is giving priority to areas that already have a food program when the Child Nutrition Act specifically says priority should be given to areas of greatest need, McLean said that people on SFP "should get the additional benefits WIC offers." Those benefits, he said, are more thorough medical examinations and a larger share of the administrative costs paid by the federal government.

Dr. George Cunningham, chief of maternal and child health in the California welfare department, said USDA's actions are "clearly an attempt ... to manipulate one program to influence another program ... They're using all kinds of influence and pressures, direct and indirect, to get SFP's to convert to WIC."

The argument over millions of dollars misses the point, as far as The Rev. Charles Cobb of Oxford is concerned. The Jones family is in his parish, as are many of the town's poor families,

"It's sickening that you see your people need food," he said. "It would make all the difference in the world if they could get the food and the health care they need ... It's not the system that's hurting, it's the kids I see whose bellies are swollen for lack of food—that's what I'm concerned about."

Philadelphia Flyers tie NHL standard:

Kansas City fails

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Flyers tied a National Hockey League success record and the Kansas City Scouts set a club record for failure, but neither feat was easy...the Flyers had to erase a two-goal deficit and the Scouts had to blow a two-goal lead.

The Flyers ran their unbeaten streak to 23 games by nipping the Yancouver Canucks 3-2 as Reggie Leach scored his 54th goal of the season, most ever by a right wing in the NHL. Meanwhile, the Scouts' winless skein reached 17 games when they lost to the Boston Bruins 5-2. In the only other game, the Detroit Red Wings trounced the St. Louis Blues 63.

The Indianapolis Racers and San Diego Mariners tied 4-4 in the only World Hockey Association contest. Flyers 3, Canucks 2

The Flyers'unbeaten streak-17 wins and six ties- equaled the mark set by the 1940-41 Boston Bruins. After spotting the Canucks the lead on firstperiod goals by Bobby Lalonde and Dennis Ververgaert, Philadelphia rallied for second-period goals in less than 90 seconds by Jack McIlhargey, Leach and Dave Schultz.

Coach Fred Shero wasn't overly impressed by the streak since the Flyers still trail Montreal by eight in the over-all NHL point race.

"I guess it's good for the players," he said. "It gives them and the fans something to talk about. But it means nothing to me. We haven't accomplished what we set out to do and that is get the home ice advantage in the playoffs."

Bruins 5, Scouts 2 Boston's Jean Ratelle got two goals and an assist after Kansas City took a 2-0 first-period lead on goals by Dave Hudson and Gary Croteau. Boston tied the game with goals 24 seconds apart in the middle period by Ratelle and Hank Nowak and Gregg Sheppard scored the tiebreaker.

"I'll tell you, when you're down it's like a beaten dog," sighed KC Coach Eddie Bush. "They just kick the hell out of you."
Red Wings 6, Blues 3
Rookie Michel Bergeron scored four goals, three on power plays, as Detroit snapped a seven-game winless string. Bergeron's third goal at 1:28 of the final period broke a 2-2 deadlock and Dennis Polonich and Bill Lochead scored within a threeminute span. Detroit's Bryan Watson received seven minutes in penalties and became the NHL's all-time bad boy with 1,810 in 13 seasons to 1,808 by Ted Lindsay in 17 years with Detroit and Chicago.

Racers 4, Mariners 4 Indianpolis eked out the tie on Dave Keon's power play goal in the third period. The Racers came back twice from two-goal deficits. Renald Leclerc and Brian McDonald erased a 2-0 San Diego lead and, after Andre Lacroix and Wayne Rivers gave the Mariners a 4-2 edge, Kerry Bond of Indianapolis made it 4-3 with an assist He shared the top spot in a slow-starting field with Lanny Wadkins, trying to break a twoyear slump, and young Danny Edwards, in only his hats, balls, gloves and other necessary paraphernalia as spring training officially began.

But while the players unlimbered winter-idled muscles in an attempt to make up for some of the 2% weeks of training they missed in the lingering labor hassle, there were a number of recalcitrants, led by weteran pitcher Luis Tiant of the Buston Red Sox.

NEW YORK (AP) - "One thing I do suffer from is overconfidence says George Foreman. "It's

Foreman discussed his problem
Thursday at a news conference after formally announcing his rematch with Joe Frazier- a main reason Foreman became overconfident.

On the night of Jan. 22, 1973, Foreman won the heavyweight championship by knocking Frazier down six times and stopping him in the second round at Kingston, Jamaica. Foreman seemed in-vincible, an image he maintained by stopping Ken Norton in two rounds.

Then came Zaire and his title loss on an eighth-round knockout to Muhammad Ali, his fiasco exhibition against five opponents on the same a Big Spring senior, has day in Toronto and his brawling fif-thround knockout of Ron Lyle after University its 23rd being down twice himself.

Wise and Bill Lee have signed for three years, Carl Yastrzemski is believed working on a three-year contract and Fred Lynn, Carlton Fisk and Rick Burleson reportedly have been offered long-term pacts.

"Luis feels very strongly about this," said his lawyer, Bob Woolf. "He insists he will not go to Florida until this is straightened out. I've been talking with the Red Sox and I'm hopeful things can be worked out."

A former Bostonian, outfielder Juan Beniquez, was missing from the Texas Rangers' camp. Beniquez was believed to be somewhere in his native Puerto Rico.

"We may have trouble running him down, but we'll get him eventually," said general manager Danny.

It didn't take long for the California Angels to settle their third base situation. Manager Dick Williams said Dave Chalk would continue to play the position with newly acquired Bill Melton "working out a bit at third, a bit at first and a lot in the batting cage."

resume meet on labor crisis

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's Player Relations Committee hutdled in New York today on the eve of a joint meeting of the 24 major league clubs to discuss the game's continuing labor crisis.

The two management meetings delayed resumption of negotiations with the Major League Players Association in an effort to reach a new basic agreement. It was unlikely that the two sides would meet again before Sunday.

But some optimism surfaced Thursday, if only because of the opening of spring training camps ordered by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, ending a 17-day shutdown.

"It feels good to get my uniform on," said Pete Rose, captain of the world champion Cincinnati Reds.

Rose, like many major leaguers, had worked out on his own at a local Little League field, waiting for the camps to be opened. When Kuhn gave the word, most teams held at least cursory workouts Thursday with players streaming into camps in Florida, Arisona and California.

Arisona and California.

Menowhile, the negotiators retreated to New York following an week of talks in Florida that was elimaxed by the owners "best and final offer." That proposal included, for the first time, acknowledgement by the owners of recently-won free agent rights for the players.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, and expressed displeasure with many aspects of the owners' document and said he would recommend rejection by the union's executive heard.

Reportedly, the player representatives voted 17-5 to reject the offer. But instead of an outright turndown, they decided on a softer position, neither rejecting nor accepting the owners' offer but calling instead for further regotiation and opening of the "It was a good, thoughtful meeting," said Miller.

Modern day ticket scalpers don three-piece suits, are wealthy

NEW YORK (AP) - To many sports fans, the old-time ticket scalper is a thing of the past. No longer does he wear an oversized raincoat, practice his art just beyond the nearest police officer or whisper his admission rates in tones only ticket-less patrons can hear.

Today, in the eyes of many fans burdened with fewer quality teams but higher ticket prices, there is a new breed of ticket scalper, who wears three-piece suits, sits behind an overstuffed desk and stamps his own admission prices on the tickets.

And it's all legal because this type of scalper may own the team, and if he doesn't own it, he goes by the title general manager or business

All over the country, these new scalpers are raising ticket pricesand, at the same time, the dander of the nation's sports fans. One possible result of higher ticket prices is decreasing attendance in some sports-like hockey and footballespecially in the area of family outings. Families, with a fixed amount to spend on entertainment, are not going to their local stadium and arena as often as before.

An Associated Press survey revealed that ticket prices measured between 1970 and 1975 have gone up 25 per cent in the National Basketball Association and 30 per cent in the National Football League. The highest basketball ticket today is the $12 seat paid by New York Knicks fans, while football's most inflated seat is the $20 (2,300 seats) charged by the Philadelphia Eagles.

"Increased ticket prices worry me." said Pat Williams, general manager of the Philadelphia 76ers in the National Basketball Association. "It's a very tender issue. With the two basketball leagues competing for talent, coupled with the normal rise in costs, we're treading a very fine line.

"It concerns me. It concerns me very much. On the one hand, we have to charge enough so expenses can be met. But high ticket prices can mean a very expensive evening for the average family. I think it's a very dangerous situation.

Attendance in Philadelphia, where the cost of the top-level seats recently were raised one dollar, has almost doubled over last season. Last summer, the 76ers signed George McGinnis, one of the top players in the game, and now they are a power in the Atlantic Division

The New York Knicks of the NBA raised ticket prices before the 1975-76 season, and when thousands of season ticket holders did not renew their onceprized possession, a letter from Madison Square Garden went out. It said, in part, that the Garden understood about these harsh economic times, and it would give fans an extended period, in which they could renew their season ticket orders.

Season tickets for the Knicks, who have been a losing team most of the year, went from 12,300 in 1974 to 10,200 in 1975. And their overall attendance is down. For average priced tickets alone, the cost for a family of four to see a Knick game is $37.50. The head of the family could better justify that kind of expenditure, and the parking and dinner that often accompanies it, when the team was winning.

The New York Rangers, on the other hand, are also a lastplace club, they also raised their ticket prices, but their season ticket subscriptions remained at over 15,700. They announce sellouts for every game but there are many more empty seats popping up than in the past few years.

But New York City teams have a built-in advantage. New York is the home of the corporation, many of which consider it good business to have season tickets for both the Knicks and the Rangers.

"We're very fortunate in that respect," said John Halligan, business manager for the Rangers. "Most of our public relations are geared to our image rather than our grassroots ticket sales. That's because of the nature of New York City. It's so large and our ticket base is so large. We just don't have to concentrate on individual game

"It's a lot different for us," said Barry Mendelson, vice president for the NBA's New Orleans Jazz, which had about 2,000 season ticket subscriptions sold for the 1975 season. "Inmiddle America and in the South, you just don't have businesses you can fall back on. We've got to develop programs around the bedroom community and the families.

"When we started out, we looked at ticket prices in the NBA and determined what we felt the New Orleans market could bear. New Orleans doesn't have a substantial middle class. We have a large upper class and a heavy, blue collar minority population.

"So we developed our $1.50 ticket concept straight out of baseball,' Mendelson said. "It's a familyoriented seat. We theorized that with the $1.50 seats, families would come to games more often. With $4 seats, they are more selective and would go to maybe six games a year. But with the low seats, they're coming 25-30 times and bringing families of seven

Of course, the Jazz play in the Superdome, which has the largest seating capacity for basketball in the country. In November, the Jazz drew 26,511 fans for a game against the Los Angeles Lakers, smashing the old mark by more than 6,000 fans.

Like New York, Los Angeles has corporations but they're not flocking to the Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League. Mike Hope, director of public relations for the Kings, says the Kings have sold 5,000 season subscriptions this season, 70 per cent of them going to individuals. The Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA, he says, sold 11,000 season tickets and 70 per cent of those sales went to corporations.

"L.A. is a front-runner town," Hope "Winning is everything. When the Lakers were winning for so many years, the corporations came in and gobbled up the best seats. And when the Lakers started losing, the corporations couldn't afford to give up the seats because of their prime

"Meanwhile, the Kings were losing for several years and only the hardcore fans bought season tickets. Now that the Kings are winning, the cor-porations want in but the best seats are already taken. For them, it's an ego trip. Location, not price, is the important thing." Tickets, Who Needs Tickets?:

But unlike New York, Los Angeles

does do promotions- giveaway nights and reduced tickets to help improve sales and generate new fans.
"Jack Kent Cooke (owner of the Lakers and Kings) is never satisfied until every seat is sold," Hope said.

"We're ready to promote," said Halligan of the Rangers. "It's just that we haven't had to promote in the last 10 years. Our ticket sales have always been high and we had the corporations. We do have a Christmas party, but that's more for newspaper

The 76ers are another team in the promotion game, spearheaded by Williams, who has organized nights for fans as tall as Tom Burleson, as short as Calvin Murphy and for those whose feet are as big as Bob Lanier's.

'You can't isolate promotional activity from the total package for the whole year," Williams said. "The key to success is how hard you sell the product. You can't just heat up the popcorn, throw open the gates and expect a miracle. Our business is no different than the movies or any other entertainment industry. You have to 'What we try to do is on the big games, the natural games, we sell the game itself and bring in the maximum revenue," Williams said.

"On the off nights against the weaker teams and draws, we try to promote through a ticket wrinkle so that the public doesn't have to pay an arm and a leg.

"It's a very dangerous thing when you get to the point where only companies and the wealthy can afford

Mendelson says that winter sports becoming activities for the idle rich is a shameful situation, and one which is causing some revolution around the "People aren't rebelling here," Mendelson said. "But I hear there are a lot of disenchanged people in other markets who are tired of paying in-One solution, Mendelson says, is for teams to do a better job at promoting to increase ticket sales and thus forestall ticket price increases. "I maintain that you just have to go out and sell more tickets," Mendelson said. "You're not a genius if your gross goes up after raising ticket prices. What makes you good is if you sell more tickets without raising Williams says another partial solution to the ticket price boom in basketball is solving the two-leagues

"Even if the American Basketball Association went out of business today, our costs wouldn't go down," Williams said, "We have long-term commitments to players, and after that they would have a high base to negotiate from. The immediate impact would be in the college draft, where we could sign a player to a more realistic salary. At least, we would be on the road to moderation.

Hamill leaves rink?

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) - Dorothy Hamill, about to leave amateur figure skating after becoming No. 1 at the age of 19, is back home today sizing up her professional possibilities.

"I want to stick with skating. That's what I'm known for," the reigning Olympics and World champion said Thursday in an interview after arriving home from Europe. But her father is urging her to consider all the options.

"There are a lot of directions in which Dorothy can go," Chalmers Hamill said of the small, attractive brunette with the animated face.

She will be weighting a number of offers from ice shows, movies, television, advertising and theatrical interests while making exhibition appearances in the next few months, he said.

"I enjoyed the Olympics much more than anything I've done," she said, but "I'm happy to have it behind me." Miss Hamill conquered

Archie Talley wins NAIA scoring crown

KANSAS CITY (AP) - When it comes down to basic basketball -putting the ball through the net -it is hard to beat Archie Talley of Salem College, W.Va., or the entire California Baptist team.

That fact as proved Thursday as Talley and California Baptist both won their respective scoring titles in the final 1976 National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics basketball statistical report.

Talley had no trouble outdistancing his competition with an average of 40.8 points in 33 games and an NAIA season scoring record of 1347 points.

California Baptist, meanwhile, decimated its opponents by firing in an average of 100.1 points over 32 games, the only team to break the century mark.

Fredonia State, N.Y., won its fourth straight defensive title by allowing 23 opponents just 53.2 points per game.
Tracy Rietzke of Kansas Wesleyan led all field goal shooters, hitting 182 of 236 attempts for a .771 per cent

Senior guard Thomas Tolbert of Alabama State took free throw honors, connecting on 63 of 69 tries for a .913 per cent record.

Sophomore Reginald Williams of Barber-Scotia, N.C., the only underclassman to win a title, was the rebounding champion with 22.3

average per game in 28 starts.

Kentucky State set an NAIA record in team field goals, putting in 1093 of 1748 shots, for a .625 per cent average. The old record was set in 1971 by Voorhees College, S.C., with a .611 per cent average.

Southwest Texas State hit .792 per cent of its free throws, making it team champion in that department.
Husson College, Maine, rolled up the biggest average winning margin, beating opponents by 29.5 points a game while recording a 26-1 record.

Circus comes to town

The American Continental Bicentennial Circus has set up shop in Midland for two performances today.

The Midland performances, sponsored by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Aerie 2982, will begin at 4:30 and 8 p.m. today at Cubs Stadium. Tickets, priced at $4 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens, and $2 for children, will be be on sale at the gates before each performance.

Offering the best in quality family entertainment, the two-hour circus spectacular presents a company of international artists. Featured are such acts as Les Blocks, Europe's wizards of the high wire who hold audiences spellbound as they attempt to walk three-man-high without benefit of a net; and the Amazing Alain, precariously balancing swordtip to sword-tip while ascending a slender slanted wire. Still other skilled performers are Ken Willer, the man who stands on his forefinger, and Myna, New Zealand's noted "Queen of the Swinging Trapeze" who hurls her body into space and catches herself only by her bare heels. The art of juggling is diversely demonstrated by Lottie Brunn, fastest female juggler in the world and, from Lebanon, Yehya Awada, a unique mouth juggler.

Animals are in abundance with Lemke's College of Chimpanzees, Sebastyan's famous dogs and the popular circus elephants, joining Ada Smieya's lions and tigers.

Special production numbers of this year's circus are "Marco Polo's Entry Into the Far East" and a "Bicentennial Flag Salute."

You may have missed some of the 18 specials offered during this campaign, but don't miss "I Regret Nothing," a lovely 78-minute film biography of French singer Edith Piaf, who died in 1963.

(The Public Broadcasting Service says it'll transmit the program to PBS stations at 8:30 p.m. EST on Saturday. But check your local listings, as the time of broadcast may differ in chap named Michael Houldey and first aired by the BBC in 1970, does a remarkable job of showing the qualities that made Miss Piaf stand out among singers of any nationality.

Houldey does this with a series of Piaf recordings, photograph and film clips of her at various stages of her life and career, and interviews of her friends, colleagues and lovers.

In less skilled hands, this could have been an awfully mawkish, boring salaam to a lady whose full, emotionally turbulent life occasionally is likened to that of the late Judy Garland.

But thanks to an excellent script and unusually good editing, the show is a sensitive, always interesting portrait of Piaf, the woman who rose from poverty to world-wide fame with an attitude expressed in what became her theme song — "Je Ne Regrette Rien," or "I Regret Nothing."

You won't regret spending time on this show, not even if you dislike French singers.

'Snuff' may get what it deserves

The Washington Post "Snuff," has earned an undeserved notoriety on the basis of a calculated tasteless and devious ad campaign. Some law enforcement officials believe that so-called "snuff movies" — films of actual, rather than fabricated, atrocities and homicides — exist and play a sicko underground circuit.

Allan Shackleton, the distributor of "Snuff," apparently decided to capitalize on the rumor of their existence and hinted that he had acquired an argentine film alleged to contain "the brutal slaying of four young actresses." four young actresses."
The movie itself is at once Shackleton's Achilles heel and legal cop-out. Far more of a hoot than a horror, "Snuff," is a tacky, amateurish fake, a re-edited patchwork of scenes from a South production meant to exploit the Manson case, to which Shackleton or someone has affixed a brief, fnotage was identified by Variety magazine as the remnants of an unreleased sex-ploitation feature called "The Slaughter." The appended images of mutifation and vivisection simply copy horrific bits from such films as "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre" and "Andy Warhol's Frankenstein."

Shackleton bombed in his first engagement by opening in Indianapolis at the absurd admission price of $7.50. His promotion, calculated to mislead morbidly curious or merely credulous segments of the press and public, has created so much advance distaste that papers in many cities, including Washington, have refused to run his ads. There's something peculiarly self-defeating about a shock exploitation campaign so effective it scares away the mass advertising the bogsyman needs. mass advertising the bogeyman needs.

Americans may not own property within 100 kilometers of any Mexican seacoast. This is part of the Mexican Constitution.

Mexico's disenchantment with any restrictions on land ownership by foreigners can be traced back as far as Benito Juarez. Mexico's constitution of 1857 barred property ownership by churches. The rights of the owner to use and enjoy property in Mexico are guaranteed on condition he achieves or promotes the general welfare of society.

What that means could be anyone's guess and is sometimes.

Tulsa congressman fined in Gulf case

By TIMOTHY S. ROBINSON

WASHINGTON — Rep. James R. Jones (D-Okla.) was fined $200 early this week failing to report a 1972 congressional campaign contribution of more than $100,000 from Gulf Oil Jones, 36, a deputy Democratic whip, is the first sitting member of Congress to be convicted in connection with contributions from Gulf Corporate funds. He pleaded guilty Jan. 29 and could have been fined up to $1,000 and jailed up to one year.

When asked by U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant if he had any comment to make before sentencing Jones said only, "I'm sorry this mistake ever occurred."

Afterward, Jones, a second-team congressman, indicated he would seek re-election this fall from his Tulsa district.

The Watergate special prosecutor's office said there was no evidence that Junes knew the $100,000 to $200,000 in cash he received actually came from Gulf cor-

Petroleum industry 'bombarded by rules'

AUSTIN (AP) — Oil and gas executives described their industry Thursday as one "bombarded by mountains" of federal regulations and challenged by imports that "may go wild" and customers angry over soaring utility bills.

The executives repeatdly indicated at a statewide railroad commission hearing that what they fear the most is the possibility that the federal government will try to take over the

"The advocates of dismemberment of the large oil companies are only courting disaster for the American consumer," said C.S. Nicandros, executive vice president of Continental Oil Co.

"Breaking up the oil companies will do nothing to break OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Companies)," Nicandros said. "To those who want to tear down the houses they live in-they had better make sure that they know what the new house will look like and where they will live in the meantime."

'Increasingly, the government has something to say about every phase of business, including, it would seem, whether or not we will be allowed to stay in business at all," said Harold Berg, executive vice president of Getty Oil Co.

The president of Lone Star Gas Co., Louis Huley, said, "At one end of our elines we are faced with fierce healthy competition and high prices for new reserves. On the other end of our pipeline, we are experiencing as never before a great hue and cry over rising gas costs in consumer bills. It seems impossible to satisfy the wants of those at both ends."

K.B. Watson, president of Pioneer Corp. of Amarillo, which serves some 60 cities in the southern and high plains, said Pioneer established a special employe training course to handle consumer complaints over high utility bills.

"Contacts were more frequent, more vociferous, and more difficult to handle," said Watson, but he added, They did not rise to the ultimate level for which we prepared."

Nevertheless, he admitted, Pioneer's own employes had complained of utility bills, which

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Residential and business customers will no longer be required to obtain any of their telephone equipment from the telephone company under a far-reaching Federal Communications Commission decision announced Thursday.

The decision will essentially eliminate the telephone company's control over installation of phone equipment in homes and offices throughout the nation. It will spurcompetition in the infant, but already burgeoning, telephone equipment industry.

The FCC had chipped at the phone company's control last November when it decided to permit connection of some equipment - like extension phones, message-recording devices and data equipment - to the telephone system without the need for telephone-company-supplied "protective" devices required

Under a program scheduled to go into effect May 1, manufacturers of telephone equipment — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its competitiors — would only register their equipment with the FCC so that the commission could make sure it wouldn't harm the phone system.

The November ruling excluded the "main" telephone provided residen-tial subscribers, switchboards, coin telephones and the "key" telephones used by businesses to handle a number of incoming phone calls on separate buttons.

Thursday's decision expands the FCC policy to include the main telephones, key telephones and switchboards in the registration pro-

In its 5-2 decision the commission

"The present requirement of connecting such equipment solely through telephone company-provided connecting arrangments is unlawfully restrictive of the customer's right to use the telephone network in a manner which is privately beneficial without being publicly harmful."

AT&T said it would abide by the FCC decision but reiterated its belief that the introduciton of such competition would hurt the telephone system and its residential users.

system and its residential users.

'We regret that the FCC has chosen ... to continue down a path that will inevitably have harmful long-range effects on customers' quality of service," AT&T board chairman John D. deButts said. The company will "adhere fully" to the provisions of the FCC order but "will not give up the right - or, perhaps I should say, responsibility — to call public attention to the fact that the quality and cost of telephone service for millions of Americans will be adversely affected by this decision,

Midland area farmers return from convention

NEW ORLEANS, La. - Midlander Vernon Chandler, who served on the policy drafting committee of the seventh annual Farmer's Union Convention in New Orleans, La., and several area farmers will be returning home today after a busy week of meetings and conferences.

Other Midland delegates to the convention were Mrs. Naomi Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Doris Blissard, and their granddaughters, DeAnn Cravens, Melinda Cravens and

Midlander arrested for forgery

A 20-year-old Midland man has been charged with felony possession of a forged instrument and is being held in lieu of $5,000, Peace Justice John Biggs said.

Police said they arrested Jesse Gavia, 1004 N. Terrell St., Thursday after he reportedly attempted to cash a forged check in the amount of $280 at Midland National Bank.

The check reportedly was drawn on Krest Uniform Service, police said. Bank teller Nelda Snodgrass reportedly refused to cash the check after calling the company to verify, police said.

HOUSE DAMAGED A house fire occurred at the home of Cecil Legon, 105 N. Madison St., with both the house and its contents sustaining heavy damage, Midland firemen said.

Firemen pumped one fire unit for 40 minutes and another one for 45 to extinguish the fire at which began at 10:31 a.m. Thursday, they said.

GRASS FIRES BURNED Firemen extinguished eight grass fires Thursday, four of them set and the cause of the other four is un-determined, Midland firemen said.

Grass fires which were set happened at 210 S. Lee St., 100 N. Lee St., in the 100 block of South Lee Street and 14 miles west of Midland on U. S. 80, firemen said.

The other four grass fires occurred at 320 Willowood St., in the 700 block of North Edwards Street, in the 3200 block of Delano Street and again at 100 N. Lee St., firemen said.

conventión delegates. One resolution was to preserve the crop disaster program to protect farm income from severe calamities of nature, such as drought and floods. The delegates did not want to see a costly federal insurance program implemented. The farmers voted to urge quotas on palm oil imports to protect domestic soybean and cottonseed oil producers. The group also voted to urge revision of the estate and gift tax laws to permit the passing of farms from one generation to another without having to break up the land or sell it.

The Farmers Union delegates want to see exemption raised from $60,000 to $270,000. They also agreed gift tax exemptions should be raised from $30,000 to $60,000, and the annual gift tax exemptions should be increased from $3,000 to $6,000.

Grundon talks to group

Rick Grundon, manager of the Credit Bureau Services, spoke on the Equal Credit Opportunity Act at the semi-monthly meeting of the Midland Consumer Credit Association this morning.

Grundon said the Act becomes effective June 30, 1976, after which time all credit applications must read married, unmarried or separated. The reason for this is to prevent credit rejections for divorced persons, Grundon said.

Under the new law, reasons for denial or termination of credit must be based on an incomplete application, lack of credit references or references too new to check, new or references too new to check t temporary residence, insufficient income or inability to confirm information, Grundon said. After Nov. 1, 1976, all accounts must be billed as they are carried, man, woman or joint account.

And Alford has grand plans for his disjointed motorcar: to put her together again, fix her up prettily, drive and show off his roadway beauty, and sell her for a handsome

After all, as Alford readily admits, he's in the car shaping-up business for the sake of money and profit and, with gusto, for the love of fine and respected motorcars of bygone eras. As antique car buffs know, all of Alford's fixing-up efforts hinge on his finding, or bartering for, Stutz parts he doesn't have or else tooling them himself. Or, he may job out some of the needed parts work.

"It's worth a lot of money," said Alford, a man who respects wellmade, well-engineered and substantial motorcars that are set apart from other cars in styling and quality. "This is supposed to be a pretty good-looking show car when we get it done," he said of the Stutz. In addition to that motorcar, Alford's got several irons in the fire to borrow a cliche that got off the ground long before there was such a thing as a self-propelled 'mobile to go a'rolling and a'chugging down un-paved roads and in open pastures.

But most of those "irons" aren't his. One that he's restoring is a 1931 Model A sports coupe - a refined successor to Henry Ford's Tin Lizzie. Alford is detailed in his restoration of the Model A, owned by a fellow in Centerville. (He, or someone, found this coupe abandoned, wasting, and forlorn in a pasture near San Angelo.)

His workmanship even includes painting the coupe's transmission "Ford green."

Alford gets replacement panels and parts for the old Ford and others from parts-making for the Henry Ford line.

"All of these moving components on this (coupe) are new," he said. "It should handle just like a brand-new one." Alford described the Model A as the "working man's car." That model came out in 1927 after Ford phased out the 18-year production of the everlasting Model T — the Tin Lizzie that came into being in 1909.

Model A Fords are much in vogue today, particularly within the nationwide cliques of antique-Ford fans. Henry Ford's assembly lines turned out 6 million Model A's, and today about one-half million of the durable A's are under restoration, Alford said.

And Alford himself has other restorations underway. There's the "boat tail" Peerless, representative of "One of the Three

Those three P's were Packard, Peerless and Pierce-Arrow: "The three most prestigious cars you could buy," Alford commented. That was from around turn of the century up until the late 1930s. And it was during that period, particularly, that man the motorist was fervently honeymooning with his creation. He explored style and power.

But those three P's, like the Stutz line, have perished. Perished, except for any resurrection Alford and others like him might bring about 41 pains-taking restoration.

That Peerless he is returning to style and service had been used for years to haul windmill sucker rods on West Texas ranches. "It was a fine machine," Alford said.

The Peerless' "boat tail" was severely altered for hauling windmill hardware, Alford noted. But with some exacting workmanship, he returned the original style to the prized machine.

And the net product of restoration is engrossing, said Troy Roberts, an antique car collector. (Among his metorcars are two restored Cadillacs: 1914 and 1923 models.

Shaping up, to Alford's exacting specifications, is a 1931 Ford Town Sedan, replete with the most un-common slant (10 degrees) wind-least, are the motorcars he has already restored, primed up, and sold, generally to well-heeled antique car buffs and investors. One such case was, in fact, a 1917

Case motorcar, which he sold to an Odessa physician, Dr. A. B. Finch, who collects antiques for his Museum of Time and Travel. And Alford has much in the mill.

There's a 1939 Lincoln Zephyr, a classic, and a durable one at that. "Man, I'm telling you," Alford said with unabashed enthusiasm and color, "you could drive this thing all Yep, the old Zephyr would move smachinery a tools down the road. It would also go through the oil. "They were oil drinkers," Alford said. Alford likes, very muchly so, the Corvair of the '60s. But, for a man who loves his work and prizes good workand craftsmanship, his real flair is for the classics of yesteryear. And for the money they command when restored.

One of Alford's many antique carloving friends is Bill Walker, who calls himself an "old-car nut."

Walker said restoring old motorcars is "a lot of fun and a lot of labor of love."

Roberts puts adoration of classic motorcars this way: "If it ever gets in your blood you'll want everyone."

Empire State battles for status

By KAY BARTLETT

NEW YORK (AP) - The Empire State Building. No address needed. It's in millions of photographs, sculptures and paintings. It is the skyline of New York, the one building that somehow symbolizes the hopes and dreams of all New Yorkers.

But now she's a has-been. The tallest building in the world for all those years has been toppled to mumber three by the Sears Building in Chicago and the World Trade Center in Manhattan. World Trade Center opened its observatory on the 110th floor — the highest in New York City.

And the cruelest blow of all? Even King Kong is defecting. In the femake of the movie classic, the monster ape will swat at airplanes from atop the twin towers of the World Trade Center. The battle over King Kong is just the showcase battle. The real battle between the two Titans of Manhattan is the lucrative tourist dollar. The people at the Empire State Building are not worried. They point to the romance, to the name, to the fact that the Empire State Building is New York. And they point out that the Trade Center affords a terrific view of

The two views are quite different since the Empire State Building is in the heart of Manhattan and the Trade Center at the foot of the island, near the ferries to Staten Island and the Statue of Liberty. Both views are spectacular and so far there seem to be enough tourists for both. But there are loyalists. Tod Newcombe, a New Yorker who is now a student at George Washington University in Washington, was secently enjoying the view from the Empire State Building.

Why wasn't he down at the World Building and this is it. I've been oming here since I was a little boy, just as high as this railing. This is the Food was sent up and sanitation facilities were provided as they laid 10 million bricks and handled 730 tons of aluminum and stainless steel, 50 miles of radiator pipe and 60,000 tons of steel frame, enough to build a double-track railroad from New York to Baltimore.

The building was expected to cost $50 million, but because of the Depression it cost just $24,718,000. It has been sold three times since, most recently in 1961 when an investment syndicate paid $65 million. It was, at the time, the highest price ever paid

Eighteen people have leaped to their deaths from the building, the most recent a 26-yearold Bronx man who scaled the guard rail on Feb. 3. The guard rail was installed in 1947 to prevent suicide attempts.

Requests to settle arguments are often phoned in to the building switchboard. There may be a dispute over just how tall the building is. Or, the second favorite, how much does it

"I can tell by their voices they are in a bar," volunteers Mildred Noble, an operator and receptionist since 1937.

As the plane plunged into the building its wings sheared off. Bright orange flames shot up nearly to the observatory and one motor careened through the building, falling out the other side onto a 12-story building.

In all, 14 persons were killed, but the tragedy could have been far worse. Since it was Saturday, and rainy, the streets below were not busy and the building itself not crowded. Nor did the building itself suffer structural damage.

William F. Lamb, one of the principals of the architectural firm of Shreve, Lamb & Harmon, designed the building, using a large pencil as his inspiration.

Empire State Building aficionados can recite the tricks Mother Nature likes to play this close to the stars. The most dramatic is the "Kiss of Fire." If the static electricity is just right around the 86th floor observatory, a kiss between two un-suspecting souls can produce a flash of fire.
