Teamsters out on strike across nation

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) - Teamsters Union members marched in picket lines today as talks resumed in an effort to end a nationwide trucking strike.

Negotiations, which continued into the early morning but failed to bring about a settlement, resumed shortly after 9:30 am. CST with wages, fringe benefits and a cost-of-living clause still the sticking points.

The strike was the first nationwide by truckers, and there were scattered reports of violence as picket lines were thrown up in a number of states from Connecticut to Colorado

The Teamsters haul about 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods, and the walkout threatened a major blow to the economy.

The Interstate Commerce Commission took temporary steps to help insure the movement of passengers and property so that "essential services are not totally disrupted.'

Auto officials said they were worried that the industry could be crippled within a couple of days, shipments of gasoline could be in peril in Florida and a supermarket manager in Terre Haute, Ind., feared a run on his grocery shelves.

Labor Secretary W . J. Usery Jr. and other top federal troubleshooters had no comment today and there was no word from the White House whether President Ford would seek a Taft-Hartley injunction:

In Cleveland, police said two men fired at trucker Paul Allen, of Marilla, N.Y., as he drove through the city early this morning. Officers said Allen's cab was hit twice but he was

In Detroit, where truck company employes reported operations paralyzed, police said a 23-year-old man was beaten by several picketers when he tried to park his truck at the International Cartage Co.

State Police at Rockford in the southwestern corner of Michigan said a group of men threw rocks at trucks near Michigan 50 and Interstate 96. No injuries or arrests were reported.

It appeared that the strike might have an immediate effect on the auto production, which has been on the upsurge in recent months after last year's poor performance...

In Detroit, Richard Haupt, director of transportation and traffic for Ford Motor Co., said today the walkout would have some immediate effect.

In one week it could completely halt production of the company's cars and trucks in the U.S.

A General Motors Corp. spokesman said GM would begin to feel the efsects almost immediately. He said if a settlement was not reached, GM probably would have to begin closing some plants early next week.

Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons said three hours after the midnight strike deadline that Teamsters were "on record if we didn't conclude an agreement by 12:01 midnight that our people weren't going to work There is a strike. Our people have walked off."

The strike, Fitzsimmons said, covers "the entire United States of America." Of the possibility of a federal back-to-work order, Fitzsimmons said, "It's entirely up to the government.

'We haven't reached an agreement," he added. "At one point we were very optimistic. Unfortunately, we came to this point." But; he also said, "We're in the ball park.

The Teamsters leader refused to elaborate on the latest industry offer. Earlier, though, William G. McIntyre, chief negotiator for Trucking Employers Inc. - the trucking firms' bargaining agent - told reporters its offer had been improved substantial-

How many firms would be forced to keep rigs off the road remained uncertain as Teamsters locals around the country continued a push begun Wednesday to pressure individual companies to sign interim agreements.

This strategy, seen by union sources as a means of breaking up the employers' solidarity, would guarantee the Teamsters' demands until an agreement is reached.

Before the midnight deadline, more than 160 firms had adopted the agreements, in return for assurances terference in event of a strike. Fitzsimmons said he did not know how many companies had signed the agreements operate without Teamsters' in-

The union lists 400,000 members. The union's bargaining position remained the same throughout the talks: A three-year contract providing for an unlimited cost-of-living increase, a $1.75 hourly-salary increase over the life of the contract and an additional $17 weekly in pension, health and welfare benefits.

The industry firmly opposed an uncapped cost-of-living increment.

The present figure, however, is down $8,524,719 from the all-time high of $544,905,836 reported last Dec. 31.

The photograph captured a moment in the life of a tornado that had taunted Midland's far westside late on the afternoon of May 24, 1957. Other than taunt, the stringy little funnel frightened quite a few folks out of town on that day. "This is what we call a minitornado," commented Lunney, chief meteorologist at the National Weather Service (NWS) station at Midland Air Terminal. "They usually don't last too long and don't cause too much damage.

Lunney put aside the picture of a cloud disturbance 19 years ago. He talked of tornadoes, of their unpredictability, and of their future in West Texas.

Before the debris had settled, the dark funnel returned to the dark, lowfloating clouds.

The tornado, from Farr's account, dived down at a place called Midway where he lives and works as a land consultant, That place is about five miles west of Midland on U.S. 80.

First National Bank low bidder on MC's $6.3-million bond issue

First National Bank of Midland bought $6.3 million in Midland College construction bonds Wednesday afternoon through "an extremely good bid" for the college.

One of five bidders for the bonds, First National's offer presented an effective interest rate of 5.0482 per cent. Premium is $248 and the gross interest cost will the 212,168.95. Net interest will total $3,211,920.75. Bob L. Davis of Underwood, Neuhaus & Co., Inc., the college's fiscal agent, said bringing representatives from two New York bond rating firms to the Permian Basin was "very instrumental" in garnering two "AA" ratings and subsequent low interest rate bids.

Other firms bidding on the bonds and their respective effective interest rates were Underwood, Neuhaus & Co., Inc., of San Antonio, 5.19957 per cent; First City National Bank of Houston, 5.329062 per cent; Northern Trust Co. of Chicago, 5.22468 per cent; and Republic National Bank of Dallas and Associates, 5.1352 per cent.

In other action, trustees rehired instructors for the 1976-77 school term, raising salaries $500 for persons below the Ph.D. level and $300 for persons with Ph.D. degrees.

The change will boost the salary for a new instructor with a master's degree from $9,239 to $9,739. At the opposite end of the scale, persons with doctorates and nine or more years' experience will go from $16,729 to

Salary changes also were approved for five college administrators not included in previous adjustments.

New salaries were sanctioned for Chester Story, athletic director, from $18,300 to $19,500; L. P. Coston, director of the learning resource center, $18,252 to $20,252; Joe Hopkins, maintenance director, $13,500 to $15,000; H. A. Tuck, public relations director, $13,500 to $15,000; and Gary Askins, director of student activities, $13,664 to $14,864.

Trustees also changed the title of Marshall Box from dean of occupational-vocational programs to vice president of occupational education and that of Raymond Yell from dean of instruction to associate academic dean.

In the area of personnel, trustees also approved hiring instructors to fill six new academic instructional posts and three occupational-technical posts. The trustees' action will hike the number of MC instructors from 53

The increase in faculty over the past three years, however, was cited as a major reason for dropping instructors Wednesday night from a legal liability insurance policy. The policy, approved at a cost of

$2,205 for three years will cover administrators and members of the board of trustees. The previous policy, which expired at midnight Wednesday, covered the college instructors, according to Dr. Al G. Langford, Midland College president. Langford said only 14 teachers were employed at the time that policy was enacted three years ago. With the increase in staff, he noted, the same coverage now would cost $3,885. He pointed out, however, the instructors all have $25,000 coverage through their memberships in the Texas Junior College Teachers Association.

Trustees set a special meeting for 4 p.m. Monday in the district cour-troom of the Midland County Courthouse to canyass election results and swear in trustees.

"I've always been a do-gooder, you know," confided Katherine K. "Katy"

She had just been enrolled in "The Book of Golden Deeds" by the Exchange Club of Midland for her cultural, social and political leadership in Midland since 1939. And the crowd was just leaving.

Mrs. Linehan had been singled out by the club in its 23rd annual Golden Deeds Award Banquet Wednesday night at the Midland Country Club.

"There's no way we can do whatever we do alone," she said after receiving the award from club president Murray Fasken

"Imagine for being honored for doing what you want to do," Mrs. Linehan said.

Today, she is executive director of the Midland Bicentennial Commission. In previous years, she carried out leadership roles in such organizations as the League of Women Voters, the Midland Symphony Guild, the Parent-Teacher Association, Friends of the Library, The American Association of University Women (AAUW), the Midland swim team, and the Permian Basin Chapter of Arthritis.

Harriet Herd, who offered the club's tribute to Mrs. Linehan whom she characterized as "Katydid." described her as "a supportative, thoughtful, and generous friend."

Mrs. Linehan said her opportunities for community service in Midland had been made possible because of "special people" in a "special" town

Tornadoes usually skip over Midland backed up his claim Though readily identified by eyesight, tornadoes may or may not be picked up by radar.

That, simply, is because radar cannot detect winds or clouds. But it "sees" rain, hail, and snow very well.

And the shape radar makes of precipitation may hint of a tornado. We can follow it by radar," Lunney said. "but we can't make a positive identification" until the storm is visually confirmed as that of a tor-

The shaping up of a storm could be a bit misleading, at least sometimes, Lunney said.

"The hook (funnel) is not always present with a tornado; sometimes you have a tornado without a hook. And conversely, you have hookedshaped clouds that are not tornadoes.

'But when we (NWS) do see a hook, we will investigate it quite thoroughly."

That hook is made visible by swirling dust, dirt, debris and water vapor caught in the funnel's grasp, Lunney said.

Tornadoes - confirmed ones, that is - hit Texas about 100 times a year, mostly in the springtime and early summer. In sparsely populated West Texas, tornadoes may touch soil unnoticed.

Lunney, like other weathermen, however, is concerned about noticing potentially severe storms and the saving of lives through warnings of approaching storms.

He recalled the tornado that reaped death and destruction in Lubbock in May 1970 and another infamous twister: the one in 1953 that plowed into Waco. Both occurred on the 11th day of May Heretofore, both cities had gone unscathed by violent storms called tornadoes.

When tornadoes or other storms are brewing, the NWS issues alerts and warnings via radio and television broadcasts, Lunney said.

"This is the most important part of our work: the warning of severe weather," Lunney said.

If we can give (storm) warnings that are going to save lives (and lessen property damage), . . . that's what we are here for," the weatherman said.

Chamber payment topic of Odessa councilmen

ODESSA - The Odessa City Council will meet today to discuss a quarterly payment due to the Research and Develop-Economic ment Council of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce.

This department of the chamber, along with the Convention and Visitors Bureau, is being audited by the chamber and the city council following separate meetings of the two groups Monday.

The R&D Council is due to get $81,673 from the city this year, in quarterly payments.

City Councilman Dub Duff called a special session of the council Monday to start the investigation. He said he has reliable information concerning "suspected irregularities" in the way the chamber is handling tax money it receives.

There is a possibility that some of the tax money given to the Economic Research and Development Council and the Convention and Visitors Bureau has become mixed in with the chamber's general fund, he said.

Some people, including chamber officials, have charged the decision to audit the chamber has political overtones since it comes just a few day's before Saturday's city elections. Duff denied these statements.

MC students to visit cave

It'll mean a rugged 800-yard trek up a mountainside but Midland College geology students will be among a limited number of persons to view the 'New Cave' in New Mexico. The 24 students will make the field trip Sunday to the recently opened cavern located near the well-known Carlsbad Caverns.

Clyde Chenoweth, Midland College instructor, will be in charge of the student group that will be primarily interested in the geological aspects of the cave.

"The cave itself is fairly small only about one-half mile in length but its formations are unusual and quite different in many respects from Carlsbad," he said.

Shown to limited numbers of people as an example of a natural cavern, the "New Cave" has only one ladder at a particularly rough spot as the only man-made addition. The only lights are the lanterns and flashlights carried by the visitors and the National Park Service rangers.

The tentative settlement is expected to set a pattern for upcoming city negotiations with civil service workers, policemen, firemen and

A strict raise for any city worker is illegal under legislation passed at the height of the fiscal crisis, but cost-ofliving raises - which have the same

Senate panel checks New York finances

WASHINGTON (AP) - Faced with potential budget problems that could aggravate New York City's finances, New York officials must now convince Congress they're living up to the pledges of fiscal responsibility made when they asked for emergency federal loans.

The Senate Banking Committee today started two days of hearings to determine how the city is doing on its promises made last year when city and state officials were trying to convince Congress and the Ford administration to approve emergency federal loans to the city.

Those promises include balancing the city budget and overhauling an accounting system that has been compared to a Byzantine paper maze.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon and New York Gov. Hugh Carey were to testify today. On Friday, New York City Mayor Abraham Beame and Elmer B.

Staats, comptroller general of the United States, will be among the witnesses.

Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., said the city is now faced with unanticipated problems that could put it "in really bad shape."

Simon, who administers the loans, has said several times he has no doubt the city can repay the $1.6 billion it borrowed from the federal government to buoy its books this fiscal year. Carey has also been optimistic about the city's ability to repay its current loan.

Under the emergency loan program, the city may borrow up to $2.3 billion in each of three fiscal years for the life of the loan bill. Before the city can reapply for another loan, it must repay in full the amount previously borrowed from the federal govern-emergency services at the hospitals regardless of picket lines. However, 1,800 of the city's 2,500 hospital workers could honor them. Union leaders and the city's Board of Supervisors met separately Wednesday night to map strike strategy and possible solutions.

The strike began Wednesday when 1,900 machinists; plumbers, electricians and others walked off their obs over proposed cuts in pay. About 3,100 other city employes, including bus drivers, either refused to cross picket lines or stayed home in support of the strikers. The strike played a hardship on thousands of the city's 677,000 residents who rely on buses to commute downtown to work. The city, anticipating a crush of private automobiles, suspended parking meter fines.

Thousands of high school students, who also ride buses to campus, did not report to class. Attendance in the lower grades, however, was about normal.

Supervisory personnel kept sewage treatment plants operating, but recreational facilities including the city golf course and zoo were closed. Police and firemen, who staged a one-week strike last August, remained on the job. "We had a rather successful day Wednesday in terms of providing services in the face of a strike,' Moscone told reporters. The 1,900 crafts workers walked off their jobs over a proposed $5.7-million house Bill designed and has been building for three years.

Bill is a cook, too, we discovered, sniffing the aromatic bourbonflavored stew he was cooking in the crockpot for the evening meal. As Elena and I sat at the round, early American dining room table with the lazy Susan, Bill whipped up a delicious lunch of apple salad, toasted hot bread and red wine, elegantly served on antique pewter plates and It's small wonder Elena likes to visit the Averys, her friends for over 20 years. Flo was at work. She's chief hairdresser at Universal Studios and takes care of Elena's hair when she appears as Nurse Consuelo Lopez on-'Marcus Welby, M.D.' The antiquefilled house is being built onto the original house, giving the place the feeling of a Spanish hacienda. The interior is eclectic, rich with natural finished woods, including the matched redwood parquet tiles that Bill handpicked for the foyer, raised brick fireplace, "witch's windows" (aften found in New England houses), antique colored glass, paintings and a mixture of period and contemporary furniture.

Elena says she isn't talented as an interior decorator. "But I love to cook! I'm the fastest cook in the West. I can cook as easily for 20 as I can for two. My neighbor says my home is like Grand Central Station!" Elena and her psychiatrist husband, Charles Rosewall, live in a Hollywood apartment. "Cooking is easy for me because I alternate between my microwave oven and the regular range. I can be doing something in the oven and, at the last minute, decide to have baked potatoes. I just prick them, pop them in a bag and stick them in the microwave oven. In 12 minutes, they're done. I pile on some sour cream and clams, and they're stocked. I can thaw a chicken quickly in the microwave and then create any number of good chicken dishes. My husband and I have very different tastes. He's still the Minnesota boy who likes meat and potatoes, even just gravy on bread. Being the Latin, I like spicy things!" She gives her chicken an unusual flavor, using salsa, a Mexican tamato-chifi sauce. and red wine to flavor and tenderize the chicken. "Sometimes, I do a tarragon-wine chicken and that's delicious, too. For a heartier version, I use Mexican chili sauce, mushrooms and rice cooked right in the casserole. We're both very cholesterolconscious, so I skin the chicken.'

Elena likes fresh vegetables, such as broccoli, but her husband prefers canned string beans. "Can you imagine that? 'She laughed. "I used to bake all our bread until we both started getting heavy. The only way to beat that was to stop baking bread!" She likes to whip up quick enchiladas, using frozen tortillas warmed up in the microwave oven. "I fry them lightly in a skillet, then fill them with a soft, delicious Mexican cheese. You can also use Monterey jack or mozzarella. Then I grill them ike cheese sandwiches. We both love fettuccine. I make the lower-calorie kind, with plenty of freshly grated parmesan cheese, skim milk and margarine. Salads are easy, because I always have my lettuce ready. I like rice vinegar for salad dressing, because it's not so acidy. Dessert is simple—assorted cheeses and lovely tropical fruits, like mangoes and papayas. Lately, I can't get my fill of papayas! I must be getting ready for a trip to Hawaii!" Elena and her husband are travel freaks. Currently, they are torn between buying a house and staying footloose and fancy-free, ready to pick up and travel at a moment's notice. "We have very different tastes in furniture. I'like curvy, curly things and my husband likes square, Scandinavian things. He's a very tidy person, and my dresser drawers look like a backstage dressing room! But we're very happy, and I keep him laughing," she said, smiling. Elena and her doctor married four years ago. "I actually made up uy mind to marry him while Flo was working on my hair!'

When the Rosewalls are entertaining and the conversation gets a little too serious for Elena's tastes, she says, "I just ask everyone how

Angelo unopposed; five vie for two council seats

By DEBBIE PIERCE

Midland voters will go to the polls Saturday to elect a mayor and two city councilmen from a field of six contestants.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. is unop-posed in his bid for re-election. The Place 4 post is being sought by Bill C. Thomas, G. Thane Akins and Brad Patteson, while the Place 5 post will be a race between incumbent Mark S. Martin and Horace Robb.

The election will be held jointly with the Midland Independent School District. Voting will be from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., with polling places at Midland and Lee high schools.

The Reporter-Telegram questioned all six contestants on four separate issues regarding Midland and its city government. Their answers are in the order they will be listed on Saturday's Ernest Angelo Jr.

City needs to diversify, Angelo says

What do you feel are the priorities for the city as influenced by the coun-

Diversification of our economy is the number one priority for Midland. The city council can be a strong influence in meeting this need by maintaining sound fiscal policies. At the same time, the council must see to it that needed improvements throughout the city are accomplished in an orderly manner. Expanded air service and improved Air Terminal facilities also are a must if new industry is to be attracted and our status as headquarters for the Permian Basin oil industry is to be

Do you think the council should return to at least one night meeting a month in order to give more of the public an opportunity to attend?

I would not favor night meetings in the near future because I don't believe they accomplished any desired objectives of additional citizen participation. The lengthy experiment last year proved this to be true. The night meetings put a burden on the council and staff which is not justified by the results.

In what ways do you think your stated qualifications will help you as a council member to represent the people of this city for a two-year period?

would hope that my experience in office during the last four years plus my nearly 20 years as a petroleum engineer plus a long-standing interest the future of Midland would combine to enable me to represent the people of our city on the city council. General statement and additional

We are facing challenging times in the near future, complicated by Federal legislation and interference in our principal industry. We still have basic control of our own destiny and I firmly believe that, if we keep our house in order at the city level, we can provide leadership to begin needed reforms at higher levels of government. To be successful, Midland must continue to have participation from a broad segment of our community. City government must be a responsibility of every

More service for citizens, Thomas says

What do you feel are the priorities for the city as influenced by the coun-

As the growth and prosperity of Midland continues, a strong fiscal policy should be maintained to assure this growth. Midland Air Terminal needs additional improvements and upgrading to insure adequate competitive service, keeping Midland the headquarters/city of the Permian Basin. Our parks and recreation centers need additional improvements. City services must continue to improve to provide adequate service for all Midlanders. The council should encourage industry to locate here and thus help keep a diversified urban economy. In my opinion, the main priority for the city council is to see to it that the citizens are entitled to more service for their tax dollar, and that the city council is more responsive to the public an opportunity to attend? Yes, I would be in favor of the council having one nightly meeting a month in order to give the public more of an opportunity to attend. -

In what ways do. you think your stated qualifications will help you as a council member to represent the people of this city for a two-year period?

I am the only candidate who has over 16 years of experience in the ambulance service. The City of Midland is going into this service June 1, 1976. My knowledge and experience in the ambulance service . could be a valuable asset to the city council. I would use this experience and knowledge to make our ambulance service superior to any such service in this area.

General statement and additional comments. Like all candidates, I'll tell you I'm . in favor of tax control, expansion of industry, fiscal responsibility, community participation and all of the other things candidates promise. So, let's assume I've promised you all of that because I'll stick to those promises once elected. I want to promise you more than that. I'll also promise you to do my best to see to it that this community can get the most for its tax dollars. I want to make the City of Midland responsive to the citizens for the way it spends our tax money. The citizens of Midland are entitled to more service for their tax dollars. The list could be longer, but the point is this - anybody can promise, I'll promise, too, and I'll deliver - or you'll know the reason

Update plans for growth, Akins says

What do you feel are the priorities . for the city as influenced by the coun-

I believe the city council should continue to update the master plans to provide for orderly growth and to maintain a healthy economy. Integrated in this should be continued efforts to obtain other industries while providing as much support and cooperation for the oil and gas in-dustry as possible. To attract new industry, as well as better service to all of us in this area, we must work toward expansion of airline activity and encourage general aviation. There is also a very present need to upgrade the parks and recreation system, and such plans are before the council at this time

Although the evening meetings were not particularly well-attended in the past, it is my opinion that possibly a compromise could be made that would make such meetings more attractive to all citizens. This would involve conducting routine agenda items sometime in the afternoon. After a break for the evening meal, the council could reconvene for the 'public" hearings. The meetings should be well-publicized by the news media, and hopefully, more citizens will be in attendance in the future.

In what ways do you think your stated qualifications will help you as a council member to represent the people of this city for a two-year period?

The most practical part of my qualifications are my three years of experience on (and current chairmanship of) the Planning and Zoning Commission. Also of particular importance at this time are my three years of experience on the Aviation Committee of the chamber of commerce. My 20 years of experience in the business world with a major corporation will certainly help in understanding multi-million dollar budgets and the solving of economic problems facing the city. Most important, however, is the need for anyone in public life to be honest, forthright, open- and fair-minded, and accessible to everyone — I pledge this to the voters of Midland. General statement and additional comments.

In this campaign, I have pointed out that the only issue is the qualifications of the candidates for Place 4. I have demonstrated leadership as chairman of the 1,000-member Permian Basin section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, general chairman of the 1974 Permian Basin Oil and Gas Recovery Conference, and an officer or director of the Evening Optimist Club, Boys Club and Barbershop Quartet Society. Maturity is an improtant qualification for a council member. In this regard, am 42 years old and an 18-year resident of Midland. I am an elder of the North A and Tennessee Church of lax increase undesirable, Patteson says

What do you feel are the priorities for the city as influenced by the coun-

I feel it will be the city council's responsibility to hold city taxes at their present level and not allow inflation or excessive spending to overload the Midland taxpayers. The council will also have the responsibility of undertaking a serious economic diversification program and promoting industry in Midland in order to assure further growth and prosperity in Midland. Midland Air Terminal is one of the main priorities that the city council will have to deal with in the coming years. If we are to remain the headquarters city of the Permian Basin, we must continue to upgrade and maintain Midland Air Terminal

The city council recently experimented with night meetings and attendance at those meetings was no more than at the day meetings. However, during the period of time that the council held night meetings there were no major zone changes. would propose that the city council continue with its day meetings but hold special night meetings to take action on issues that draw considerable citizen interest, those usually being zone changes. A majority of the council's business is routine and time-consuming and better be handled in a day session rather than a lengthy night session that would run into the late evening hours. The city council has a pretty good idea which issues will draw a lot of citizen input, and special night sessions could be used to handle those

I am a former member of the Parks and Recreation Commission, I have organizations and chamber of commerce committees, I have had considerable budget preparation experience both in private business and in various positions the city council has appointed me to, and I have made my position on the issues known to the people of Midland These qualifications will help me be an experienced and knowledgeable city councilman, and serve the people of Midland intelligently.

General statement and additional comments. I want very much to be a part of Midland's growth and development; to keep Midland a good place to live, work and raise our children. Because I am self-employed, I can and will dedicate the time necessary to do a good job on the council. I am not running for the office because I have an ax to grind with the council, or because I was talked into it, to serve as a mere push-button for special interest groups. I am running because want to work and be a part of this city's growth. I want to help make Midland a city that will attract its college students back to raise their

Attract more industry, jobs, Martin says

What do you feel are the priorities for the city as influenced by the coun-

To try to maintain the positive and optimistic attitude by the people of Midland in order to keep the economy expanding so as to attract and diversify industry which will create more jobs. To provide the necessary municipal services while keeping city spending and taxes at acceptable levels. To retain competent city employes and increase the efficiency within city operations. To obtain a regional shopping center. To continue the improvements and development of Air Terminal. To provide the necessary planning to provide logical city development. To improve park and recreational facilities. To improve law enforcement, and to maintain the proper environment so Midland will continue to be the best place to live and raise families. Do you think the council should return to at least one night meeting a month in order to give more of the people an opportunity to attend? would like to see, on a trial basis, the council schedule one night meeting per month. We held night meetings for six months last year at my suggestion, and I have to admit public attendance did not increase. Night meetings create a hardship on the staff and council because we all work a full-workday, and some night meetings have lasted until midnight. People do not attend council meetings unless they are personally affected by pending council decisions. However, I would favor trying night meetings once again if they would prove to increase citizen participation and interest in city government.

In what ways do you think your stated qualifications will help you as a council member to represent the people of this city for a two-year period? My qualifications have been stated previously, but, more important, with two years' experience on the council. I can now make a larger contribution to the decisions reached. I have a strong interest in improving our city and am very concerned about anything affecting the city where I live and work. I've never been rich and don't expect to be, and have the same money problems as do most Midlanders. Therefore, I am very interested in economy and efficiency. I have demonstrated without question — I represent no particular group or individual but am only interested in representing all the people of Midland.

General statement and additional comments.

We have a problem in Midland concerning apathy toward city government. We are not the only city with this problem; however, it is something we need to work on. This starts with voter participation at the polls, which has been very discouraging in recent years. Citizens are, by and large, satisfied with the way their city is being run. However, this does not excuse the lack of concern. About the only time we have a turnout at council meetings is when a controversial subject is being discussed. We need more folks taking more interest in our city.

Horace Robb

Diversification important, Robb says

What do you feel are the priorities for the city as influenced by the coun-

My first priority as a member of the Midland City Council will be to do my part in planning for the continued economic growth of our area. This will include doing all within my power to encourage industry diversification to the fullest extent possible. Oil has been very good to us, but we must work to spread our base. Next, the city council should lead the way in planning for the proper and orderly development of our city as it continues to grow. Also, adequate ad-ministration of the maintenance and improvements of city streets and services, our parks and recreational facilities, the Midland Air Terminal and the assurance of desirable housing for all citizens should be primary concerns of the council.

Do you think the council should return to at least one night meeting a month in order to give more of the public an opportunity to attend?

My slogan has been "The Candidate for All Midlanders," and I have on several occasions stated that it is my belief that members of the city council should be accessible to the citizens of Midland. The idea of having at least one night meeting of the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of briefly and the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each month goes along with my ideas of the council each man and the council each with my ideas of bringing the government of our city closer to the citizenry. Therefore, I would favor holding at least one night meeting of the council each month on a trial basis while publicizing these meetings and encouraging people to attend. I would look forward to meetings of the council which would be required to be held in a large auditorium because the present council chamber was too small to contain the interested participants. In my opinion, townhalltype meetings with input from all of the people would be most desirable.

In what ways do you think your stated qualifications will help you as a council member to represent the people of this city for a two-year period?

As the managing partner of a Certified Public Accounting firm, I am an independent businessman. In this capacity, my time is my own to budget in such a way as to devote the necessary time to the office of city councilman. Also, as a CPA, I believe that I could add a new dimension to the city council. I am experienced in working with budgets, audit reports and other financial statements. I believe that I can aid the other members of the council in understanding the vast number of financial reports which the council must study. Further, I believe that I can add a new voice in the council in communicating with the leaders of our state government and in communicating with important representatives in the federal government — an area in which our city has been lacking for the past several years.

General statement and additional comments.

My wife and I brought our family to Midland in 1961 because we liked what we saw here. We liked the people. We liked the attitude. We liked the optimistic, forward-looking spirit of Midland. And, above all, we liked the people. We found the people of Midland to be generous and friendly. We were accepted at face value right away. It is now my strong desire to represent the people of Midland on the city council. I am tree trom prior commitments, not obligated to any special interest group and will ap-proach each problem with an open mind. My decisions will be made after examining the issues from all points of view and most especially after determining as best I can the will of the majority of the people of Midland If elected, my personal opinions will be put aside should I find them to be in conflict with the desires of the people. WASHINGTON (AP) - Advocates of a national no-fault automobile insurance law are taking their battle to the House after a defeat in the Senate that may end all chances for the bill this year.

No-fault had been seen by consumer groups as one of the major consumer issues of the year, but it was strongly opposed by lawyers, who saw it as a threat to their legal business arising from automobile accidents, and by the White House.

to enact no-fault laws within four years and would have set up federal programs in states failing to comply. in which accident victims could sue. 'They raised a large warchest and they have been spending it," Moss said. "I guess it just proves that lobbying still exists and still works." The Consumer Federation of America, a consumer group backing the legislation, said the lawyers spent $400,000 lobbying.

A number of major insurers, including State Farm, the largest, backed the bill. But other industry groups opposed it.

Detroit fiscal crisis quickly reaching critical stage

DETROIT (AP) — The City of Detroit is struggling with a budget crisis this week that almost certainly will lead to thousands of layoffs and further deterioration of city services.

The numbers involved seem paltry against the figures that added up to the fiscal crisis in New York City, but Detroit officials say they are critical

Detroit has a budget of about $790 million and a deffcit of about $40 million in the fiscal year ending June 30. New York City's budget this year is about 15 times as large, but its accumulated deficit is 25 times greater than Detroit's.

Mayor Coleman Young estimates, and no one is challenging his figures. that without increased tax revenues, the gap will grow to $1 03 million in the year ending June 30, 1977.

Michigan law demands that Young submit a balanced 1976-77 budget by Friday and that any budget deficit this year must be paid off in the next fiscal year.

So unless Detroit increases revenues it has no option but to eliminate more workers, further curtail services, and risk further damage to the city's already depressed economy

Detroit's unemployment rate was 17.5 per cent in February, the latest figures, and averaged 20 per cent in 1975, the worst of any major U.S. city. The jobless rate is tied directly to the troubles of the automobile industry, far-and-away the city's principal

Since July 1974, when Young took office, the city has cut its payrolls from 23,677 workers to about 19,000, less than one-tenth the size of New York City's workforce, which has been cut by about 45,000 jobs to around 300,000.

museums. A year ago, the "Motor City" even declared it would not be buying new cars for the city fleet.

It has completely shut down four city departments - Consumer Affairs, Council of the Arts, Senior Citizens and Youth.

"We have cut past fat, or even bone or muscle," Young told a meeting of the Detroit Economic Club on Monday. He and other city officials insist that new taxes are the only option left, but so far the state has refused to pass them. The city has no independent taxing power.

And no matter what happens in the current budgetary duel that climaxes on Friday between Democrat Young, Republican Gov. William G. Milliken and the Democrat-dominated state ing ceiling.

The city has had a job freeze since legislature, the city says it will go December 1974. It has closed two ahead with 1,200 more layoffs — more than 800 of them police - starting April 5. Depending on the outcome of current budget talks, there could be thousands more in the next fiscal

The mayor says the cutbacks now scheduled will save the city only $46 million of the $103 million projected deficit. Unlike New York City's situation at the end of last year, Detroit is not fac-ing default on any bonds or notes. All city borrowing must be cleared in advance by a state body called the Municipal Finance Commission, which sets a borrowing ceiling.

The city has about $390.7 million in outstanding bonds and notes, well below the city's $579 million borrow-

By GARY GARRISON

SAN DIEGO, Tex. (AP) - A year ago today George B. Parr, the Duke of Duval, drove alone into an isolated area of the land he ruled, away from the people he had manipulated for decades and, at 74, looked at a bleak future in a federal prison.

The man who had controlled a large area of South Texas and had sent friends to Congress pondered over the events that had led to the practical dismantling of his political empire. He reached for a pistol and shot himself in the head. Texas Rangers found his body later. His shadow still hangs over Duval County and he is still remembered as a "benevolent dictator," a man who set his own rules, but let others share in the political spoils. 'I miss him a lot," said county auditor Walter Meeks, "we grew up

"He never saved a dime," Meeks went on. "He didn't have to because if he wanted something, he could just reach out and get it. George never took more than he needed for the moment."

Meeks said the Parr authority so dominated county politics and county residents that he is still missed even though his political empire has been dismantled by a state investigation that has resulted in a long list of indictments of county officials, and by bickering among the political factions in the county.

By the time he died Parr was facing a federal indictment. His nephew Archer Parr was on his way to federal prison and the Carrillo family of Benavides, for many years a strong ally, had turned against him. His death was believed to have opened a new era in county politics, but Meeks said it will be a long time before Duval County gets away from Parr's shadow.

"The people of Duval County are not yet ready for self-government,' he said. "They require leadership."

Asked if he can visualize anyone else taking over the county in the manner in which Parr did, Meek replied "There's certainly no one in

The tall, slender, silver-haired auditor scoffs at reports that a new era in Duval County politics has dawned because 87 candidates filed for election to 30 elected posts up in the upcoming Democratic primary election.

Reagan hits hardest at Kissinger

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan has made a sweeping attack on the Ford administration — from Henry Kissinger's handling of foreign policy to the economy.

In his first national television speech as a 1976 Republican presidential contender, Reagan said Wednesday night that Ford had not done a good job pulling the nation out of its recession.

pulling the nation out of its recession.

But Reagan's most stinging remarks during the 30-minute national broadcast were in the area of foreign affairs.

He said he doesn't want to live "in a world where the Soviet Union is No. 1," and he quoted Kissinger as saying his job as secretary of state is to negotiate for an acceptable second-place position.

"Dr. Kissinger is quoted as saying that he thinks of the United States as Athens and the Soviet union as Sparta," said Reagan. "The day of the United States is past," Reagan quoted Kissinger as saying, "and today is the day of the Soviet Union.' And he added, "My job as secretary of state is to negotiate the "... In Washington, Kissinger's top aide, Lawrence the major issues of his GOP campaign challenge to Eagleburger, said the quotation Reagan attributed Ford. to the secretary was false and "totally irrespon-

Reagan did not cite a source for the statement he attributed to Kissinger, but a Reagan campaign spokesman said it came from Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, the former chief of Naval operations who now is running for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate in Virginia.

Zumwalt, who was reportedly in London and not immediately available for comment, has been sharply critical of Kissinger. Zumwalt made comments similar to those used by Reagan in his for-thcoming book, "On Watch," in which he recounts what he says are notes taken after a meeting with Kissinger more than five years ago. .

Reagan said peace will not come from weakness or retreat, "it comes from the restoration of American military superiority." Reagan said he spent $86,000 to buy time for the speech, taped here Tuesday, on the National Broadcasting Co. to underscore what he considers

Democratic candidates stump in New York, Wisconsin

Ronald Reagan has continued his offensive against the Ford administration's foreign policy, declaring it has left the nation dangerously inferior in military strength, wandering the world "without aim."

"The evidence mounts that we are No. 2 in a world where it is dangerous, if not fatal, to be second best," the former California governor — Ford's challenger for the Republican presidential nomination — said in a nationally televised speech Wednesday night.

As Reagan took to the airwaves with his message, candidates for the Democratic nomination were on the stump, preparing for primary elections next Tuesday in New York and Wisconsin.

Four of them, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson, Arizona Rep. Morris K. Udall and ex-Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris, were due at a Manhattan hotel early today for a Democratic mayors' forum.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, the Democrats' presidential candidate in 1968 — who hasn't entered the race this year but has said he would accept a draft — was expected to be at the municipal meeting.

Jackson was in New York City Wednesday, looking for votes from various groups. He visited a hospital in Harlem, met with a group of Puerto Ricans and conferred with representatives of the Com-munications Workers of America.

But there has been no requirement that the

From New Haven there were reports Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso will endorse Jackson on Friday. The Connecticut Public Information Network said it learned of her plans from several sources the radio news service did not identify.

Udall, meanwhile, spent Wednesday in upstate New York, and Carter planned to go there today, after the mayors' meeting. Udall was due in Wisconsin before week's end. Reagan, who won his first GOP primary in North Carolina last week, canceled his campaign schedule to make the national address. He concentrated on foreign policy and national defense. There were these other developments on the political front Wednesday: -South Carolina's Democrats gave Carter nine national convention delegates to eight for Wallace and one for Church. Thirteen were not committed to any candidate.

-Election officials in Ohio announced four presidential nominating slates will appear on the statewide Democratic primary ballot June 8, while President Ford will be alone on the Republican side. Petitions circulated for Reagan, Wallace and Idaho Sen. Frank Church didn't have enough valid. signatures to qualify for the statewide ballot, officials said, but these presented by Carter, Udall, Jackson and Gertrude Donahey, the state treasurer,

-The Senate voted in Washington to condemn as the "work of a gang of thugs" incidents in Madison, Wis., in which Jackson was spat upon and Wallace was taunted by demonstrators in wheelchairs.

-Congress finished action, with Senate passage, on legislation to permit the 2.8 million federal employes to engage in partisan politics. The bill was sent to the White House, where President Ford is expected to veto it.

Final House action was expected today on legislation to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission, which due to a Supreme Court ruling, has been unable since March 22 to dispense matching funds to presidential candidates.

-Carter's campaign aides appeared more bemused than angry at a burglary at their New York City campaign headquarters. About $20 in stamps THESE PRODUCTS SOLD DIRECT FROM was stolen Monday night, and the thief pried open a briefcase and removed telephone-poll results and plans for getting out the vote next Tuesday.

Stevens probably has key death penalty vote

By LINDA MATHEWS The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - A marathon Supreme Court hearing on the constitutionality of capital punishment was droning into its fourth hour Wednesday when Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr. suddenly brought the crowded courtroom to life.

He cited FBI statistics that showed a 50 per cent jump in the homicide rate in a five-year period, and then, without raising his voice, announced _in his soft Virginia cadence:

"It is perfectly obvious from these figures that we need some way to deter the slaughter of Americans. I use that term because that was the term that was used to describe the Vietnam war. And more Americans have been killed in the streets of this country than were killed on the battlefields of Vietnam.

This striking defense of capital punishment was unusual, and not simply because it came from Powell, a man of unfailing gentleness, courtesy and restraint. Courtroom spectators were also stunned because it is almost unheard of for any justice to indicate so boldly how he will vote in a case before the court.

Yet, judging from the arguments that opened late Tuesday and lasted all day Wednesday, Powell is not the only member of the high court who has already made up his mind on the death penalty.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun, for example, chided attorneys attacking capital punishment for ignoring the 'innocent victims" of the murderers whose death sentences were under

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger mocked those same lawyers by contending that their reluctance to let their clients' fates be determined by juries displayed a distrust of the entire American system of criminal Justice William H. Rehnquist said little, but his few remarks indicated that he, too, had not been persuaded that the death postaty violates the Eighth Amendment's ban on cruel and unusual punishment.

In fact, it appeared as the hearings drew to a close that Powell, Blackmun, Burger and Rehnquist would cast their votes against the position urged by the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., which for 10 years has spearheaded the movement to abolish capital punishment.

These four justices dissented in 1972, when the Supreme Court, on a 5 to 4 vote in a case called Furman vs. Georgia, invalidated death penalty statutes then on the books.

The four justices remaining from the 1972 majority also appeared Wednesday to be just as staunchly against executions as they were four years ago. One of them, William J. Brennan Jr., remained silent throughout the hearings, never once asking a question of the lawyers who paraded before the bench. Brennan announced in 1972 that, in his view, the time had come to abolish capital punishment.

With eight justices apparently standing pat in the positions they had staked out four years ago, the attention this week focused on the newest member of the court, John Paul Stevens. Last December, Stevens took the seat vacated by retired Justice William O. Douglas, who had supplied the fifth vote in the 1972 ma-

Stevens, then, will almost certainly prove to be the key to the final decision, but this week he provided few clues as to how he may be leaning.

Not that he was shy or retiring.

Weather given partial blame for crash

WASHINGTON (AP) - Government safety experts indicated today that a thunderstorm was at least partly responsible for the worst single airplane disaster in U.S. history when an Eastern Airlines jet crashed last June while trying to land at New York's Kennedy airport, killing 113 of the 123 persons aboard. The National Transportation Safety

Board, in a broader study of storm impact on safety, also said concern by pilots and air controllers about storms might lessen when the aircraft are near the terminal because the uninterrupted traffic flow becomes of greater concern.

The New York storm was so severe that the chances of a safe landing were only marginal, the board said today. The board also said that "In the case of Flight 66, (the Eastern flight), impact might possibly have been avoided had the flight crew recognized the onset of the descent rate more quickly."

The plane smashed into the ground short of the runway. In terms of fatalities, it was the worst single-plane aviation accident in U.S. history, exceeded only by the mid-air collision of two aircraft over New York City in 1960 that killed 134 persons.

The safety board statements were included in a letter to Federal Aviation Administration chief John McLucas detailing 14 recommendations on how to improve aircraft safety in heavy thunderstorms and other adverse weather conditions.

The safety board did not say what caused the Eastern crash other than to say the aircraft developed a highrate of descent as ft passed through or just below the thunderstorm. The board will issue a full report on that accident later.

The board noted pilots of other flights which preceded Flight 66 on the approach into Kennedy reported they also encountered problems in controlling their aircraft

"These aircraft avoided an accident possibly because the prevailing conditions were less severe or because the pilots recognized and responded to the situation faster than the pilots of Flight 66," the board said in the letter.

With great zest, he pressed attorneys from Texas, North Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana and Florida to explain the workings of the new death penalty statutes that have been enacted to circumvent the high court's 1972 ruling. With equal fervor, Stevens prodded the attorneys representing condemned men on Death Row in each of those same states to reconcile the 1972 decision with an earlier case, McGautha vs. California, that seemingly accepted the theory that the states could execute some murders. "He was like the new boy in class," a Legal Defense Fund lawyer, James Gray, said of Stevens afterward. "It was as if were saying, 'Come on, cat-ch me up on what's happened. I just arrived.' But his personal feelings just didn't come through.'

The only real clue to Stevens' leanings - and it was far from conclusive - came in his repeated attempts to pin down Stanford University law professor Anthony Amsterdam on whether he thought there were any circumstances or any crimes for which capital punishment would be acceptable.

Amsterdam, who represented convicted murderers from Texas, Louisiana and North Carolina, said no, after some wavering, and condemned capital punishment as "atavistic butchery which has run its course.'

Stevens' persistence on this point may indicate that he believes the death penalty is suitable for a limited number of crimes and is unwilling to accept the argument that it must be banned forever. His official verdict will be known by early summer, for the court is expected to release its opinion before it recesses in late June. Its decision could affect the fate of the 527 condemned men and women now on Death Row, whose number will probably top 600 by summer.

Panel refuses to okay JFK death probe bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Rules Committee refused Wednesday to send to the House floor a resolution asking for a new investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The committee, which schedules most legislation for House action, voted to delay indefinitely a proposal that would have set up a special committee to reopen the Kennedy assassination investigation.

The same resolution would also have reopened investigations of the assassinations of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., as well as the attempt on Alabama Gov. George

Most opponents of a new probe argued it would serve no purpose.

Reps. Henry Gonzalex, D-Texas, and Thomas Downing, D-va., sponsors of the resolution, contended the American people had a right to know the truth about the death of Kennedy, his brother and King and the attempt on Gov. Wallace. They said that there was sufficient new evidence to warrant reopening all of the investigations. A motion to put off a decision on their proposal was approved 9 to 6.

Rebels, Bulldogs to face strong field in Angelo Track Meet this weekend

The Lee and Midland High track squads face that final lap around the oval in San Angelo Friday and Saturday as the gigantic San Angelo Relays hails that final gun before the all important District 5-4A track

Like it or not, the two local squads will have only a week more to prepare for the 5-4A run, which will be held Friday night, April 9, in Odessa's W. T. Barrett Stadium.

The Rebel's, who lost the district meet by a mere point last year in Midland to Odessa Permian, is one of four teams expected to make a run at this year's title. San Angelo and Abilene Cooper, two other district hopefuls, will be in San Angelo this weekend. The other team is Abilene High, which has its sights on a state championship.

Lee has not finished ahead of San Angelo or Cooper this season, and will be looking for momentum in Saturday's finals, which are slated for a 1

IN ORDER for the Rebels to make a run at the district crown, most feel Lee must show well in the 440 and mile relays. Mitch Pryor, Mike Kerley, Robert Johnson and Clyde Gary will be relied on to come improvement Saturday.

Otis Butler and Earl Evans, both expected to win the 440's top two district spots, will join Stanley O'Neal and Jamie Berry in the mile relay. This team has promise, but Butler and Evans have to run the open quarter while O'Neal is the do everything man, who runs both hurdles and the long jump before cracking the mile relay. The team is always tired before the race.

O'Neal has won high point honors in five of the six meets this year, and is a valuable comodity for the Rebs.

Lee's Billy Skinner is the heavy favorite to capture the discus, where he holds the state's best mark of 188-71/2 feet. He could help the Rebels even more, however, if he improves in the shot put where he is ranked third

LEE HOPES to get additional help from Robert Ochsner, who is improving weekly in both hurdle events: Midland High's best bet for a regional qualifying position seems to be Robert Wilson, who is the district's top miler so far. Wilson is the District

5-4A cross country champion. Richard Brown and Harold Stewart could be strong in the 880 while Paul Garrett is a threat in the 220 and 100. Garrett, however, is entered in two points for District 5-4A.

The Bulldogs can also expect help from Alvin Price, Pat Darden and Grady McGowan.

Other teams in the San Angelo meet will be Permian, Odessa High, Big Spring, Bryan, Del Rio, Eagle Pass, Temple, Wichita Falls Rider and

This is a strong field, and the team title could be up for grabs as the teams split points.

THE MAIN attraction of the San Angelo Relays, however, may come in Division II, where Lampasas' Johnny Jones will be entered.

Jones is the state's top quarter miler with a 46.5 to his credit this year. He also owns a 9.2 in the 100 and has a long jump of 24-014. Lampasas coach Scott Boyd says the sprinter is out for the national record in the 440, and that it could come at San Angelo if the conditions are right.

St. Louis infield could spring leaks this season

Departed fielding whiz Ken Reitz has warned that the infield of the St. Louis Cardinals may resemble an ear-

But if the Cards can survive early tremors, they have hopes of parlaying oung pitching and strong hitting into title contention in the National

'It was a gamble we had to take," St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst acknowledged in respect to the risk the club took in trading Reitz to the San Francisco Giants for left-handed pitcher Pete Falcone

'Even with Reitz, we didn't have the kind of defense we needed," Schoendienst said, however. "If we're going to win, we're just going to have to stop giving away so many runs."

Almost without explanation, a Cards defense that sparkled in 1974 became an unstable, erratic commodity in 1975. The Cards are hoping that Don Kessinger, a 33-year-old shortstop acquired from the Chicago Cubs, can provide the leadership that was absent a year ago.

And at second base, where Ted Sizemore has also moved on via a trade, Mike Tyson is seen as returning to his more natural position after three seasons at the Kessinger post. A maturing Keith Hernandez, 22, is expected to have few problems in handling first base and is considered capable of hitting better than his .250 average of last year.

That leaves Hector Cruz, 22, who was last summer's Minor League Player of the Year but whose major league abilities are unproven, to fill Reitz' vacant position at third base.

"I think Hector can handle it. He's just going to have to roll with the punches and not press," Schoendienst said hopefully. "The kid has good hands. We're not going to think about what we'll do if he fails.'

While Cruz' early performances post a question, the club's hittig and its speed among outfielders Lou Brock, Bake McBride and Reggie Smith do not.

The amazing Brock has as yet to show signs of slowing down despite approaching his 37th birthday and needs only 84 more stolen bases to set a major league career record.

McBride hit :300 with a strong finish in 1975 as one of the NL's swiftest center fielders and Smith, a switchhitter with chronic back problems, is a strong-throwing right fielder who Problems, nonetheless, were evident for St. Louis a year ago when injuries sidelined first Smith and later McBride for three-week periods. To guarantee against recurrence, the club has obtained Willie Crawford from Los Angeles in exchange for Sizemore and has reserve Luis Melendez to go with Mike Anderson, who was acquired from Philadelphia.

Cardinals Prospects: Philadelphia. Greater versatility may also be available to the Cards in the form of utility infielders Vic Harris and Bee Bee Richard, who can play positions in the outfield.

And in addition to Ron Fairly, a 37year-old backup for Hernandez at first base, the club has an adequate reserve in the form of Ken Rudolph for workhorse catcher Ted Simmons.

Schoendienst indicated that Simmons, another switch-hitter whose .332 average was second in NL batting, may be rested more for defensive if not offensive purposes.

"But if we do, I don't think we'll play him at any other position," the Cards' manager added in respect to Simmons, who caught 154 games in

Kapp seeks $12 million in suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Former quarterback Joe Kapp is going for $12 million in his damage suit, according to National Football League lawyers who concluded, "He should get zero."

The antitrust trial which began a month ago should reach the U.S. District Court jury today or Friday.

"If your verdict were for a $12 million settlement, every seat at NFL games would cost $400," said one defense attorney, Joseph Alioto, in a final argument Wednesday. "He should get zero." should get zero."

Alioto said the $12 million total for damages claimed by Kapp is the figure on a chart which will be presented today by the former Minnesota Vikings and New England Patriots' quarterback.

"The word kids use for it is ripoff," said Alioto, representing the San-Francisco 49ers and Oakland Raiders

Kapp was the highest paid player in the NFL in 1970, getting $200,000 a season under a memo agreement he signed with the Patriots, but was ordered out of training camp in 1971 when he refused to sign an NFL standard, player contract. The antitrust suit was filed in 1972, alleging Kapp was victim of a boycott.

For almost two weeks, the national pastime was played on the diamonds of spring training camps from Florida to California. Now the spotlight shifts back indoors, where Kuhn will attempt to resolve whether the Yankees have a valid claim to the 30-year-old pitcher, who was declared a free agent last December in an arbitrator's ruling that rocked baseball back on its spiked heels.

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York agent, Herb Osmond, entered into a four-year agreement—for an estimated $1.5 million—on behalf of the former Los Angeles Dodger pit-cher. But Messersmith said he would not sign because the agreement entered into by Osmond had been altered significantly when the club drew up a formal contract.

"I will not sign with them," Messersmith said. "I was really getting pumped up. I was all set to go.
I was packed, had my shoes dyed and was damn near out the door. Then Herb called and said, 'Don't go."'

Entering the picture on Messer-smith's behalf was Dick Moss, attorney for the Major League Players Association. Moss charged the Yankees' claim was "totally without merit and it will be appropriately challenged." Kuhn must seek the answers to three obvious questions:

-Did Osmond have the right to sign an agreement for Messersmith?

benefit of the game." - Alabama's

C.M. Newton.

-If he did, was such an agreement valid without Messersmith's signature?

-Did the terms in the original agreement different substantially from the formal contract?

On the first question, Messersmith told The New York Times that Osmond "has no right to sign anything for me. He has no power of attorney." If that's true, the Yankees' only apparent recourse would be to sue Osmond.

The final point should be easy to answer when the agreement signed by Osmond is compared with the contract Messersmith has rejected.

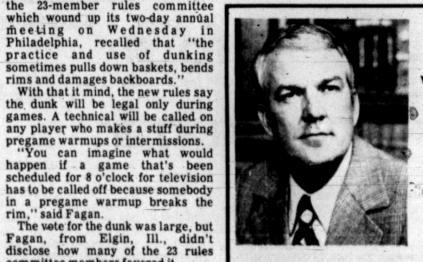

Gabe Paul, president of the Yankees, accused Messersmith of "attempting to void the terms of the agreement," and there were rumors, denied by the pitcher, that he had received a more lucrative offer, reportedly from the Texas Rangers.

"We intend to perform our obligations and expect Mr. Messersmith to do likewise," Paul said. "I think I have been in this business long enough to know when we have a firm agreement. It appears to me that Andy Messersmith is being made an unfortunate pawn."

But Moss contended there has been no legal agreement.

There were discussions between Osmond and the Yankees," Moss said. "Some ideas were put down on paper. But these were subject to agreement on the part of Messersmith."

However, the Yankees have what they say is an agreement in Osmond's handwriting which the agent signed at 1:30 a.m. Sunday in a motel at the Tampa, Fla., airport. Later that day Paul returned with a uniform player's contract, but Osmond felt the terms weren't the same to which he had

Firm policy needed

The U.S. Department of State addressed a problem that concerns many people in the West when it announced the cancellation of Cabinet-level meetings with the Soviet Union on energy, housing and commercial cooperation.

The problem is what can we do about future "Angolas" physical Soviet-sponsored aggression' to spread communism? The issue was focused sharply recently when Secretary of State Henry Kissinger declared in Boston that the process of detente "cannot, specifically, survive any more Angolas." He also promised to "firmly discourage and resist adventurist policies" on the part of the Soviet Union.

Fears that the United States lacks the will to do exactly that are widespread, particularly in Western Europe. The drift of the United States was the subject of discussions last month in Nice between French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and West German Chancellor Helmut Schimdt. And it will be a principal agenda item at the meeting of Common Market heads of state in Luxembourg this week. Commentators on the Continent are asking openly about America's "eclipse," "neo-isolationism" and "withdrawal." They note that there has been no response at all from Washington to their fears about our behavior. -

It is doubtful that State Department cancellation of two meetings will change many minds. The value of retaliation-is that it must be swift, vigorous and painful. The cancellation of largely cosmetic meetings that really are minor flourishes of the 1972, 1973 and 1974 summit meetings fails on all counts.

Indeed, senior State Department officials went out of their way to insist that the act was symbolic and "cosmetic" and not designed to affect the substance of American-Soviet relations. Secretary of State Kissinger, who testified for nearly three hours on the same day before a Senate committee looking at long-range foreign policy, did not even bring up the subject of the cancellations.

And at the same time that the State Department was making its announcement, American food, technology and industrial goods were continuing to pour into the Soviet Union to prop up her policy failures.

In popular terminology, the two strands of America's Soviet policy as enunciated by Mr. Kissinger are the carrot and the stick -"firmness in the face of pressure and the vision to work for a better

The trick is to apply the firmness without upsetting the vision. The State Department's current effort goes in the right direction, but not far enough.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rumsfeld wins opening rounds

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON - With quiet efficiency, the new Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld has quickly solidified his control over the Pentagon and has won a bureaucratic battle lost by his purged predecessor James Schlesinger.

Rumsfeld began changing the guard at the Pentagon shortly after he moved in. This is an exercise in patronage that causes a great ruffling of feathers. But Rumsfeld is accomplishing the changeover smoothly, with scarcely a feather out of place.

Six top Péntagon aides have been shown the door by Rumsfeld and at least two more will soon be asked to depart. Five others have shifted jobs in a maneuver that has impressed the Pentagon brass that their new boss will be calling the signals. Six new arrivals have moved into the secretariat and another is waiting in the wings.

But what has impressed the Pentagon crowd the most is the way Rumsfeld neatly outmaneuvered Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in a bureaucratic power play. Kissinger was hostile to Robert Ellsworth, an aggressive assistant defense secretary, who was in charge of 'international affairs." His office was commonly called "the Pentagon's State Department.".

Ellsworth sometimes clashed with Kissinger over foreign policy. This opposition had the support of Kissinger's old nemesis, James Schlesinger, who tried to elevate Ellsworth to deputy defense secretary. Our sources say Kissinger quietly blocked the promotion, fearing this would enhance Ellsworth's influence on foreign affairs.

State Dept. officials insist, however, that Kissinger simply didn'twant another deputy defense secretary. He was opposed for efficiency, not personal reasons, the officials said Schlesinger hadn't been out of the Pentagon long, however, before Rumsfeld quietly moved Ellsworth into the deputy secretary's post. Rumsfeld was able to draw on his close personal relationship with President Ford to overcome

Indeed, Rumsfeld has also had quiet success in pushing other Pentagon projects that brought Schlesinger under heavy fire. A former Schlesinger man told us with some awe that "Rumsfeld is out-Schlesingering Schlesinger."

The Washington-wise Rumsfeld. however, knows when to give ground. Unlike Schlesinger, who stood up to Senate Appropriations Chairman John McClellan, D.-Ark., Rumsfeld carefully appeased the crotchety old McClellan.

Schlesinger made the mistake of fighting too vigorously against budgetary excesses. He worked through Assistant Secretary Leonard Sullivan, who headed the Pentagon's Program Analysis and Evaluation office. Sullivan antagonized the military brass by slashing their pet projects.

Sen. McClellan usually sympathized gruffly with the military brass when they came crying to him about cutbacks. Sullivan, therefore, soon found himself in a dangerous confrontation with the powerful Schlesinger stood staunchly behind his man Sullivan, thus getting the evil eye himself. The more astute Rumsfeld quickly concluded that Sullivan was expendable and gave him his twoweek's notice.

This, has placated the irascible

Senate Appropriations chairman and has brought triumphant grins to the faces of a few generals and admirals. But the budget watchers in the PAE office have found themselves stripped of power and reorganized into near impotency. "The frustration level" inside the PAE, says a source, "is kind of high.

NICK THIMMESCH ~

Candidate Jimmy smokes out 'non-candidate' Hubert

WASHINGTON - Jimmy Carter seems to have smoked out Sen. Hubert Humphrey, this political season's coyest but surest candidate. In charging that the "anti-Washington" theme of presidential candidates "is nothing more or less than a disguise for a new form of racism," Humphrey betrays his fear that Carter could be nominated while Minnesota's beloved son waits and waits and waits.

Humphrey's charge is nonsense, of course. And so is his righteous disclaimer that he didn't mean Jimmy Carter, he meant bad old Republicans like President Ford and Ronald Reagan. "Carter is no racist," Humphrey declared. "Let's get that Well, Jimmy Carter didn't get it that clear. After dodging peanutmissiles in Madison, Wis., which only shows that state's lack of appreciation for the South, Carter punched Humphrey right back.

"I resent it," he declared, as much as a soft-spoken male can declare, "when the question is raised that an attempt to make the government more effective is an attack on Washington or an attack on the poor or racist."

Then Carter laid it on how Hubert is a loser, that he stayed out of the primaries, and what about Humphrey's connection with Howard

Thimmesch

Hughes and Humphrey's campaign manager convicted in the Watergate investigation.

Humphrey, as likable a gent as there is in politics, and a smart one, too, asked for this counterpunching. He is vulnerable to many charges; and in all those years of old-style liberal politics, the good senator did break a commandment now and then.

He was just plain foolish, however, to make the racism charge. Humphrey, who has spawned programs the way salmon spawn eggs, knows that the failures of some federal programs hurt the objects of his federally supported benevolence - the poor and the blacks. By raising false hopes, by not delivering, by allowing funds to wind up in consultant firms the liberal often mocks blacks and the

Moreover, to criticize Washington is largely to criticize other programmatic excesses such as:

-Certain farm price supports. Humphrey, with milk spattered on him plenty in 1972, is aware of the shortcomings in federal supports for milk, cotton, tobacco and peanuts. -Impacted School Aid, a boondoggle mostly benefitting affluent subur-

-The Hill-Burton hospital construction program — an expensive white elephant which should be allowed to die.

-The aberrations of Medicaid wherein some doctors collect so much government dough that they put society docs to shame.

-Military spending programs, including Army Engineer projects, of which H.H.H. is quite conversant. And is Humphrey saying that those programs designed to help the poor and black are sacrosanct and not subject to criticism? Are we to be muffled on welfare, food stamps and some loan programs of the Small Business Administration? Tsk, tsk, Sen. Humphrey, if there is any old pol in the republic who, in his heart, knows the limitations of federal programs, it should be you. All manner of candidates, from Reagan on the right to Fred Harris on the left, have put the knock on Washington's shortcomings. It's the season.

And to claim that you didn't have Jimmy Carter in mind? Come on now, Carter's success is largely due to this

"I am not a Washington pol" pitch. The approach must be successful because everybody else in the race is

It could be that Sen. Humphrey's plan was to allow the Democratic dozen to run themselves into the slag in the primaries and then step forth, on solid dry ground, as the candidate. But the story is leading another way. Carter has put distance between himself and the herd, and is definitely not headed toward the slag.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Human-frailties and the limitations of science make the protection of people from cancer-causing substances in air, food and water a very difficult, emotion-laden and controver-

This was clear following a panel discussion here by experts looking at the problem from different points of view. Among the viewpoints:

-A labor leader interested in protecting workers from occupational exposures to carcinogens (cancer-causing substances) charged that the National Cancer Institute is keeping secret the release of reports showing that some 150 chemicals under study are carcinogenic.

-The NCI director denied the charge of secrecy, explaining that each test takes two to three years, costs $150,000 and must be done with care because the reports could serve as the basis for legal action.

A scientist said there is no certain method to prove that cyclamates (artificial sweetners) and dozens of other "weak carcinogens" cause cancer in

-SEVERAL SCIENTISTS said that while some doubtful carcinogens should be abolished because their uses are frivolous, abolishing others would severely cripple industry and adversely affect con-

-An authority said that most asbestos workers refuse both to stop smoking cigarets and to change their jobs, even when told their risk of getting lung cancer is 92 times that of men who neither work with asbestos nor smoke cigarets.

The panel was part of a seminar for science writers arranged by the American Cancer Society.

One issue which the labor leader, Sheldon W. Samuels, director of worker safety for the AFL-CIO, and Dr. Frank Rauscher, director of the NCI, agreed upon was that there is poor communication among researchers, federal regulatory agencies and in-Rauscher announced creation of the National Clearing House on Environmental Carcinogens. whose job it will be to accumulate and act on research information indicating a danger exists from exposure to certain substances. NCEC will consist of representatives of NCI, regulatory agencies, industry and consumers.

Samuels cited the example of kepone, a chemical used in industry, for which there has been reason since 1960 to suspect as carcinogenic. Samuels said Allied Chemical Corp. submitted reports in 1960, 1961 and 1962 clearly "indicating kepone as a car-

One of the consultants was an employe of NCI and three were faculty members of the Medical College

Yet. Samuels said, there was no research, regulation or action aimed at kepone as a carcinogen until 1971 when NCI began its study. Kepone is one of the 150 chemicals still under study and for which reports have not yet been released.

IN THE MEANTIME, Samuels indicated workers are being exposed and perhaps will get cancer as a consequence.

Another example (also under study by NCI) is dimethylcarbamyl chloride (DMCC), which he said may be one of the most potent carcinogens known. It is used in the manufacture of drugs.

He said NCI first received a report in 1972 but that neither NCI nor a New York University scientist with earlier evidence of DMCC's carcinogenicity reported the information to the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health until last month.

The cyclamate expert is Dr. Arnold L. Brown, professor of pathology at Mayo medical school and chairman of a national committee that several weeks ago concluded cyclamates are not carcinogenic

In 1969 the Food and Drug Administration banned cyclamates as a carcinogen. They were widely used in soft drinks. Most experts predict that the FDA will soon once more allow the use of cyclamates.

Brown said the committee members, as scientists, were forced to their conclusion by virtue of the fact that cyclamates are one of many compounds for which current bioassay techniques lack the sensitivity to make an absolute determination.

Brown said if it were his decision, he would allow cyclamates to be used on a limited basis but not on the wide basis that existed before 1969.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE of a so-called weak carcinogen is red dye No. 2, a food coloring. Brown said the quality of research which implicated red dye No. 2 as a carcinogen was "lousy" but that he would take it off the market nevertheless for safety's sake.

Dr. Marvin Schneiderman of NCI and Dr. Cuyler Hammond, vice president of the American Cancer Society, provided a reason for removing red dye No. 2 despite weak scientific proof: Its use is one that is frivolous - such as to color cake icing.

Unlike red dye No. 2, cyclamates are said to have a benefit. They are used by diabetics, for example, as a sugar substitute, a benefit which may be more valuable to them than the risk of getting cancer from cyclamates, some scientists believe.

Hammond, one of the first researchers to show the relationship between cigaret smoking and lung cancer, said more research emphasis should be placed on so-called "cocarcinogens."

A cocarcinogen is something which by itself may not cause cancer but which greatly enhances the cancer-causing capacity of low doses of carcinogens, or which inhibits or destroys the body's ability to defend against carcinogens.

ST. PETERSBURG BEACH, Fla. - "I'm so jittery and shakey I can't even get a job. It's a life of hell. Liquor is the best answer," wrote a Midwest housewife whose husband and 18-year-old son both died of cancer within ! wo years.

Her letter to a Stanford University social worker, illustrates a problem that is receiving an increasing amount of attention from cancer specialists: the psychological stress that dying cancer patients put

A New England attorney said the experience of watching his 10-year-old daughter die of leukemia "is still vivid and unreal" four years later.

"I still lay awake nights thinking about her and have fits of depression which are obvious around the holidays. My wife and I have ulcers as a result of the one year of waiting and watching - nothing

A STUDY at Stanford University Medical Center showed the reaction of the Midwest housewife and New England attorney are typical, Dr. David M. Kaplan, an expert in psychiatric social work, told an American Cancer Society seminar for science writers. He said the Stanford study of 40 families shortly after the death of a leukemic child uncovered massive emotional and physical health problems.

Physically, 95 per cent of the families had at least one member who later became ill. Almost as many — 11 per cent — reported some members suffered from "morbid grief reactions:" They had problems working, going to school and taking care of the house. Thirty-five per cent of the families had one member in psychiatric treatment after the death and. 40 per cent reported someone in the family had developed a serious drinking problem.

The death also hurt the parents' relations with their other children and, in 70 per cent of the families, aggravated marital problems. Divorces were blamed on the death in two families and separations in seven families.

IRONICALLY, new treatment method that keep cancer patients alive longer often exasperate the emotional problem that they and their families face.

"The multiple crisis in cancer exhausts the parents emotionally," said Kaplan. "And often leads to the feeling that they wish the child would die." Currently, Kaplan said, treatment for the emotional problems of cancer patients and their families

But, he added, detecting these emotional problems early is as important to their successful treatment as the early detection of a cancer is for its successful

"We need to care for the families of patients who have cancer," said Dr. La Salle D. Lefall, a surgeon from Howard University School of Medicine in Washington The attitudes of families and friends is important to the cancer patient's well being, said Orville E. Kelly, 45, a formér Illinois newspaperman who is suffering from cancer.

"I always thought that cancer happened to somebody else, so I wasn't very well prepared," said Kelly, who was told in June 1973 that he had lymphoma, a cancer of the lymph glands. He said he expected to die within six months, but under drug treatments his cancer has been in remission for the "Following my hospitalization," he said, "I went home to await my chemotherapy (drug) treatment and I began to discover fear and depression are terrible things to live with. I gave up. I went to bed to await the inevitable. I even considered suicide as an easy way out.

"I discovered the attitudes of family, friends and relatives had changed. Old friends were uneasy around me, afraid they would say something wrong.

Mellerdrammer to highlight library meeting

A "mellerdrammer" with the fun of an olio but backed by the research of a scholar, will be a highlight of Sunday's annual meeting of the Friends of the Library, volunteer service and support organization for the Midland

County Public Library.

"Frail Vessels, the Victorian Woman," is the title of a program to be presented by Dr. Diana Olien at the meeting. The program will feature slides and humorous commentary by the speaker.

The annual meeting also will see the election of officers to guide the Friends organization during the coming years and presentation of

Members of the-service organization will hear a report on the Friends' annual used books and records sale held last September. which netted the organization approximately $3,000 for use in various programs and projects benefitting the public library. Members also will be advised that the 1976 sale is schedduled next Sept. 24-26 and that books, records, magazines, puzzles and art works already are being collected for

The Friends' principal projects at the public library include supporting the scientific and technical depart-ment with gifts of books, magazines, maps and journals, and the library's popular picture rental service which the Friends started with proceeds from several earlier book sales and which has been expanded several times in later years. Various other projects of the Friends include library beautification programs, additions to the audio-visual section of the fine arts department

Dr. Diana Olien, featured speaker at the Sunday event, holds a B. A. from Swarthmore College. She holds master's degrees and the Ph. D.degree from Yale University. From 1969 to 1973 she was an assistant professor of history at Southern Methodist University, Dallas. Her special field is British history, with emphasis on 19th Century history, and she recently completed a biography of the seventh Earl of Carlisle, 19th Century politician.

The Sunday meeting is scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. in the American Legion Hall, 206 S. Colorado St., just south of the public library. A social hour will follow the meeting.

Exhibit features Texas artist

Paintings by Joe Ruiz Grandee, one of Texas' best-known artists, will be featured during the month of April at Museum of the Southwest here.

Grandee, a native of Dallas who now has his home and studio at Arlington, will be honor guest at a reception scheduled Friday night in the museum's Turner Memorial Gallery, 1705 W. Missouri St. Hours will be 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Grandee, who has had special, brief exhibitions of his work in Midland in the past, has gained a large following, and an even wider reputation, for his expertise in the subject he has chosen to specialize in, the American frontier. This expertise has led to his selection as a consultant on the subject, and related subjects, for many books and articles, including the famous Time-Life book on cowboys brought out several years ago.

The art of Joe Grandee is basically Historical Western— but it is more besides. It has been said of his work that it is so very unique it might well defy classification. This unique artistry has brought many honors and awards to Grandee and he has been represented in many of the most prestigious art shows in the nation. He has exhibited at the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth, the El Paso Museum of Art, the Texas

A Sunday afternoon art show in Midland's Holiday Inn will feature paintings by two well-known West Texas artists, Kenneth Wyatt and Ben Konis.

The exhibition will open at 1 p.m. Sunday in the Frontier Room of the Holiday Inn, continuing until 7

Wyatt, who lived in Midland as a youngster, now resides at Tulia. Hailed as a chronicler of the Western scene, he is especially noted for his paintings of cowboys, and he also is active as a sculptor. One of his paintings is featured in a new book, "American Cowboys," recently brought out by Southern Living magazine. He will have a painting in Philadelphia's Independence Hall next month, representing the Texas cultural scene.

Konis, a transplanted New Yorker who has his studio in Amarillo, has gained a wide following during the last decade for his paintings of Indians. He also is known as a teacher, regularly conducting art workshops and painting seminars throughout West Texas and in New Mexico.

Wyatt will be on hand during the Sunday afternoon open house and exhibition here. Konis is ill and cannot attend the event.

Tragic clown myth or fact?

By DON FREEMAN Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Comedians like to relate the story, which may be fact or legend, about the great clown of the 19th Century, one Joseph Grimaldi, who was known as the "Michelangelo of Buffoonery." Grimaldi, a man of awesome melancholy, was celebrated by a critic of the time for his "comedy born of tragedy."

As the story goes, Grimaldi, broken in health and spirit, sought help from a doctor in London. After examining the comic, the doctor could find no physical ailments. He suggested that the best avenue out of his despair would be laughter.

"Go see Grimaldi," the doctor recommended.

Postal unions to fight 'conspiracy'

The Los Angeles Times

America's major postal unions have a war chest of more than $1 million to campaign against what they charge is a "conspiracy" to turn the U.S. Postal Service over to private enterprise, union leaders said.

The unions are going to start what they call "informational icketing" Friday in San Diego, and will hold rallies in Fresno and other California cities beginning Sunday. The demonstrations are to protest the alleged "conspiracy" and dramatize complaints that postal workers are being forced to speed up their jobs at near-impossible rates to head off bankruptcy of the service.

THE MASSIVE, pro-Postal Service campaign is complicated by two Rademacher and his supporters generally favor keeping the Postal Service as a semi-autonomous government agency, independent of Congress. Overby and his allies believe Congress will not give the Postal Service enough funds to operate as long as it remains indepen-

But all of the unions are in agreement on the basic contention that the Postal Service faces what Rademacher called a "conspiracy to strip the service of all of its profitable operations and give them to private corporations."

IN HOUSTON, Francis Filbey, president of the 300,000-member American Postal Workers Union, said proposals from Ford Administration officials are "apparently part of a conspiracy by members of the Administration, certain members of Congress, and people in the private sector to take over the U.S. Postal Service and turn it over to private entrepreneurs.'

Both Filbey and Rademacher said that if private industry did move into the postal system on a large scale, it would skim off the profitable sectors but ignore the costly unprofitable deliveries to rural America.

Neither man, however, offered evidence of a "conspiracy," other than to note the public statements of Ford Administration officials in favor of considering laws to allow private companies to take over portions of the postal service, and the complaints of Postmaster Benjamin F. Bailar.

Bailar told Congress Monday that Ford's budget advisers had refused even to meet with him over the current financial crisis in the Postal Ser-

These actions of the Ford officials were seen by union leaders as part of the "conspiracy" of Ford to allow the service to go into bankruptcy, and then open the way for private firms to

The postmaster is seeking to double the $1.5 billion annual subsidy the service now gets from Congress, but so far, at least, the Postal Service management has not said if it believes it can meet a Congressional mandate to become self-supporting

The unions, however, said it is impossible to provide full service to all Americans without a continuing sub-

"We pay 88 per cent of our own costs out of revenue, and we're the only agency of government which comes close to (that) record," declared Rademacher, the union president.

The unions' campaign will be aimed at the Ford administration, which Rademacher said is "trying to torpedo a sinking ship," and at "the American public so that they can understand the need for continuing to have a postal service for all Americans."

In their defense of the major elements of the Postal Service, the union leaders and the postmaster seem in agreement. Their disagreement begins with what management calls its latest efforts to get "a fair day's work for a fair day's day."

PRESSED BY RISING COSTS and declining mail volume due to the general economic downturn and higher postal rates, management makes no secret of the fact it is trying to get more work out of its employes for the same pay.

Hector Godinez, acting postmaster in Los Angeles, said, "It is true that postal workers have never been evaluated as closely as they are being evaluated these days.'

Close studies are being made of each worker's day, minute by minute, to see where their work can be made more efficient, Godinez said.

Mail, milk could arrive together

WASHINGTON - Imagine the Avon lady ringing with cold cream and Newsweek; the milkman arriving with two gallons of skim milk and National Geographic; and the telephone company calling you with your monthly bill.

That picture of a radically different type of do-ityourself mail service is being painted by some postal

The unions in particular believe (or say they do) that the Ford Administration is part of a right-wing business plot to let the service Benjamin Franklin Bailar inherited from Benjamin Franklin wither on

OBJECT OF THIS, the conspiracy theory goes, is to let the public and Congress become so fed up with postal service, rates and service cutbacks that it will let private industry take over the more lucrative (and there are some) aspects of mail delivery.

Already many big mailers are talking about alternate delivery methods, despite the government's monopoly on first-class mail. Examples:

One news magazine has already experimented with having its weekly product delivered by dairies in Rhode Island and Kentucky.

—Businesses in Florida and Texas have formed or joined giant messenger services which deliver products, samples and bills to many suburban residences. (To counteract this some postal unions have persuaded local communities to ban bagged deliveries left on doorknobs or doorsteps, on grounds this is a tipoff to burglars that nobody is home.) -In the Washington area many government agencies and news organizations - under the very noses of the Postal Service and the guardians of the firstclass mail monopoly law - depend more and more on private delivery services to take messages, notes and packages on short-haul, across-town trips.

CONGRESS IS WORRIED about the postal service, prices and deficit problem - but doesn't know what, if anything, to do about it.

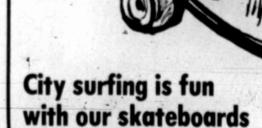

Hearings in the Senate this week do not bear out the theory that big business, in cahoots with the Ford Administration, is out to kill off the postal service and pick up the pieces.

But the hearings do show the Administration being cleverly indifferent - or rudely dumb - to cries for financial help from the U.S. Postal Service. USPS brass say they will have to cut more services, and raise prices again, unless they get a massive inflow of federal dollars to help pay for service items. The issue, in simplest form, is this: Is the USPS a business? If so, people should be told that straight out, and that they must pay the going rate or deliver their own letters.

Or is the Postal Service actually a public service all people need or use, one way or the other? If that is the case, should anybody be required to fork over 25 cents (which is where first-class rates are heading) per letter, for bill; or should more tax money b pumped in to hold or lower prices and restore ser

Unwed father loses

AUSTIN (AP) - The U.S. Constitution does not give unwed fathers parental rights, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

In the 6-3 decision, the court said Texas law giving an alleged father the right to a hearing on his claim of paternity was sufficient safeguard of his rights.

The decision came on an appeal by a man identified only as S.D.A., a penitentiary inmate, from lower court orders denying him parental rights to "K., a baby girl" born out of wedlock in April 1974.

S.D.A. sought voluntary legitimation of the child as his own and appointment of himself as her caretaker. Courts have the power to enter a decree after a hearing. declaring a child to be the legitimate offspring of a man asserting paternity.

S.D.A. claimed this should have been done automatically in his case since he was the child's biological father.

"The overriding interest of state and courts is the welfare of the affected children. We are not nearly so far down the road to unrestrained egalitarianism as to hold that the Constitution guarantees an unwed father parental rights in violation of the best interests of the child," thecourt majority said.

It said there was a rational basis for the state to "distinguish between the father who has accepted the legal and moral commitment to the family and the father who has not done so.

"The biological father may be a sperm donor or a rapist or someone as S.D.A. who has simply engaged in a single hit and run sexual adventure," the court said.

The court said that after learning of the mother's pregnancy, S.D.A. "showed no disposition to assist with her problem or expense" and within a month was arrested for interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle and a 14-year-old girl. S.D.A. has been in jail or the penitentiary since October 1973.

Aspen transportation proposal stirs up citizenry

The Washington Post

ASPEN, Colo. - County officials in this mountain resort town are seeking federal funds for a million-dollar-amile rail transit system to haul skiers 13 miles from here to the Snowmass ski area.

Opponents of the plan, who claim the cost will be closer to $5 million a mile, are seeking recall of the county commissioners.

The transit plan is part of the controversial three-year effort by Pitkin County commissioners to halt growth and preserve the environment of this scenic mountain valley.

What the three county commissioners want is an 80 per cent grant ministration (UMTA) to cover the cost of a light rail system running from Snowmass to Aspen. European light-rail street-cars would be used to transport skiers along the four-stop route. A plan submitted to UMTA envisions 20 cars, each carrying as many as 50

According to county officials, UM-TA originally encouraged the grant, but has now cooled to the idea since receiving 2,400 signatures — almost one-sixth of the county's 15,000 residents - on petitions opposing the

according to commission chairman Dwight Shellman, because it will curb the use of automobiles and help curb air pollution.

Taxpayers, however, are concerned that they will be stuck paying the bill for a transit system far more expensive than the commissioners estimate.

Already, the plans call for paying the cost of winter transit fares from local tax revenues. The visiting skiers will ride filee.

Shellman says the system will also serve low-income workers who make the beds and wait on tables in Aspen. Those persons, who attorney Shellman says make an average of commute to work. But, housing in Snowmass is scarcely less expensive than in Aspen, where small, three-bedroom homes sell for more than Shellman and commissioners Joe Edwards and Michael Kinsley are the subject of the recall campaign.

William Cleary, an Aspen jeweler, is heading the recall petition drive. Cleary says he wants the three out before they can commit any more county funds to the transit system and other projects, such as bringing agriculture back to the Aspen area.

Cleary estimates he has about half of the 1,900 signatures he needs on petitions for each commissioner. The Other critics question the propriety of Aspen seeking funds earmarked for needy cities.

"What does a rich community like Aspen need with federal funds for transportation that are supposed to go to needy cities?" asks Michael Hernstadt, a wealthy former stock analyst who leads the anti-transit drive.

UMTA officials, who rejected an initial grant request and have asked the county commissioners to study alternative ways to finance the rail line, also wonder why Aspen needs the

"Everybody knows what Aspen stands for," said an UMTA official when asked why there was controversy over the plan.

Shellman and county manager Alan Blomquist say Aspen's image as a resort catering to rich skiers hampers the quest for federal funds.

'We tend to get associated with John Denver and Jack Nicholson, who live up on the mountain," Shellman

Blomquist said that paying the cost of upgrading roads and other facilities to meet the increasing auto traffic demands would exceed the cost of building the rail line. If the commissioners were to simply expand highways, he said, there would — George Frederick Cumming Smillie by rights should be the most famous of American artists.

Fifty-eight years ago, working in metal for his government, Smillie engraved an image that has been reproduced by the billions, collected by the millions and generally coveted by all.

On May 18, 1918, Smillie etched the portrait of George Washington used to well known, though more sought after, likeness of Hamilton on the ten-

"I think it's from a painting by Gilbert Stuart," said Leonard Buckley, foreman of designers at the Treasury Department's Bureau of Engraving and Printing. A check of the archives proves him right, but no one is sure which of two Stuarts. Smillie used for his model.

Buckley is positive, however, that Smillie's is the only Washington the department affixes to its currency, bonds and other official notes. When the dollar shrank in 1928, so did the portrait. When silver certificates were abandoned a few years back.

Smillie's Washington soldiered on. Oh, sometimes the background is changed; to distinguish among documents and to foil counterfeiters. But that's Smillie's handiwork all right. "There was one master die," Buckley said. "The image is always the same.'

Smillie's image is less distinct. The government may know more than privacy laws permit it to say, but people who thumbed through his personnel record say there isn't much to tell.

He was appointed to the bureau on Feb. 3, 1894, with a $6,000 salary; not bad in those days. On March 19 he took the oath of office. By 1909 his salary was up to $6,600, and nine years later he was named superintendent of engravers. In 1919 Smillie really came into the money; his salary jumped to $7,500. But when President Warren Harding retired Smillie by executive order on March 31, 1922, his pension was a picayune $648 per year. The government isn't sure what became of him then. It seems certain he was not retained by the Post Office, an agency which also gets a lot of mileage out of George Washington.

"You look at the postage stamps,"

Buckley said in an interview, "and you can see there is quite a variety." While Treasury Department por-traits are virtual twins — thanks to Smillie — it's hard to tell whether some of the Post Office prints are even related. Thumbing through a stamp album you meet a weak-chinned fellow here, a periwigged President with an amazing over-bite there, and a generally dour looking cuss elsewhere. Sometimes Washington seems to have forgotten his famous false teeth. Often you can't be sure it's old George at all.

Buckley, a tall, thin 37-year-old, said the Post Office began printing Washingtons in 1847. Engravers were permitted a certain amount of artistic license, sometimes producing wildly dissimilar pictures from the same

Sometimes the work was farmed out to private firms. These days artists are commissioned. In many instances, the paintings used for models were merely artists' conceptions. The result is a conception of a conception. Were it law instead of art, such reproduction would be inadmissable

A series run in the 1930s purports to portray Washington's life. Some of the models weren't painted until after his death. And many portraits painted by Washington's contemporaries were merely from memory. Renditions of Washington as a young man are frequently pure imagination.

Our New Life." This mixture of the German past and Marxist present is typical of the German Democratic Republic, the portion of the prewar Germany which, with defeat, became first the Soviet zone of occupation and then one of Moscow's most faithful political

FOR THE GERMANS of the East, there is little history in between the ancient past and present. The Nazi period officially is considered a case of a foreign occupying force which was expelled by the Soviet army across the arbitrary occupation dividing line to find shelter in the capitalist West. The rewriting of history gives the East Germans a split personality which shows up in conversations.

On one hand, Communist Party professionals see the East Germans as a new people, born with the formation of the German Democratic Republic. But most private citizens of East Germany think of themselves simply as Germans, like Uncle Fritz. And most of them are concerned that they are cut off from their cultural and family ties with other Germans in the West.

SITTING OVER DRINKS and coffee, a professional party worker denounced the "Fascists and Nazis" who he said were holding commanding positions in the West German government.

Another boasted of the remarkable feat the East Germans had performed . in taking a badly battered fragment of old Germany, an unnatural third of the country with few natural resources except farmland and the brown coal lignite, and building the most prosperous country in the Eastern Communist bloc of nations.

The statistics show our standard of living is the same as Great Britain,"

THE STREET SCENE tells another story, however, and nonofficial East Germans discuss it freely.

"Seventy-five percent of the people of Leipzig are living in houses built before World War I," commented a young man standing on the grounds of the city's famous industrial fair.

"Be sure to lock your car," he added. "People are always stealing. Things are so expensive - coffee costs 30 marks ($12) a pound, and it is not very good.

THE YOUNG MAN then offered to swap currency at the rate of two East-German marks for one West German mark, although the official rate of exchange makes them equal in value.

Told the usual black market rate was four East marks to one West mark, the young man replied: "I know, but during the fair they are easier to buy because there are so many people from the West here. I really need to buy some so I can take my holiday over there.

The man, who suffers from a nervous disorder, is one of the East Germans who receive disability or old age pensions and are permitted by their government to travel to the

IN 1975, 1.3 million trips were made by East German pensioners to West Berlin or West Germany. Only 40,442 nonpensioned East Germans, out of a total population of 17 million, were permitted to visit West Germany, and then only after getting special family invitations to attend such affairs as weddings or funerals.

The travel in the other direction to East Germany — last year totaled 3.1 million trips from a West German population of more than 60 million. The travel from West to East within the divided city of Berlin was even greater.

AND ALTHOUGH the East German government built the Berlin Wall and maintains a heavily fortified and guarded barrier all along its western border to prevent the kind of refugee flow that nearly crippled the country 15 years ago, it cannot halt the invasion of Western influence.

The rooftops of Leipzig, like those of East Berlin are crowded with television aerials aimed at the West more than 100 miles away.

WEST GERMAN radio stations also are popular in the East.

"My husband hopes to go to the West for the first time this year," one young woman of Leipzig said. "He is waiting for the invitation to attend his brother's birthday."

Would she go too? "No, it is impossible — I have no relatives in the Like other young couples, this family received a long-term, interest-free government loan of 5,000 marks ($2,000 at the official rate of exchange).

When their child was born, they received a gift of 1,000 marks in cash and a direct 1,000-mark credit to reduce their loan.

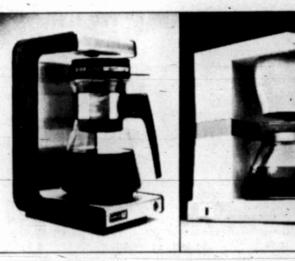

THE FAMILY receives 20 marks a month in "kindergeld" (child money) for the child, and there is a kindergarten for her to attend, an essential in a country where 80 per cent of the women work.

"I don't like the way they teach the children there," the mother said, however. . "The children learn bad manners."

The bidding indicated that South had at least nine cards in the major suits. The opening lead indicated that South still had the king of clubs. Hence South could have only two diamonds at most, and East could not expect to get a diamond ruff.

West took the ace of diamonds and returned a diamond, expecting his partner to ruff. This defense gave South time to start the trumps, and the fortunate distribution made-it easy for declarer to draw trumps and set up his spades.

WRONG SWITCH East made the wrong switch when he led a diamond at the second trick. There was a ruffing trick for the defenders, but not for East and not in diamonds.

It was very reasonable to suppose that South had a five-card spade suit since few experts will open a fourcard spade suit headed by queenjack. West therefore had two spades at most.

East should lead the ace of spades and then a low spade immediately after taking the ace of clubs. When declarer leads trumps, East must step up with the ace of hearts to lead a third spade. The ruffing trick defeats

Prep schools in resurgent phase

By SHELLY COHEN Associated Press Writer

Prep schools for a time looked like the dodos of the educational world, headed for sure extinction. Now many of these secondary schools face record high applications and in some cases have set limits to halt everincreasing admissions.

Day schools, boarding schools, city schools, country schools - all are experiencing a resurgence of popularity, despite a depressed economy and their own high tuitions. Educators agree it's a phenomenon with no single explanation. They cite unrest in the public schools, including turmoil over forced busing, teacher strikes, a permissive atmosphere and parents' worries over college entrance exam scores, which have nosedived nationally. "There is a dietary deficiency in the scholastic lives of young people today in school," said Joshua Miner, admissions director at Phillips Academy in Andover. "Kids and parents are feeling it. ... Tennis with the net down is no game. It's disrespectful of young people. ... They respect standards. They need them At Phillips, the nation's oldest private school, admissions were up 17 per cent this year and 14 per cent the year before. Miner said. The school had a record 2,300 applicants this year for 380 seats. At the Holderness School in Plymouth, N.H., enrollment has gone from 75 in 1951 to 210 this year, and trustees have set a limit at 220. "There is no one factor you can pin it on," said headmaster Donald C. Hagerman. "It's the whole attitude of parents and adults saying, 'What are we going to do?"

Hagerman said the now-coed school experienced a decline in applications three or four years ago and then "suddenly things turned around."

The headmaster points to problems in the nation's public schools as the major reason private schools are

"Declining (public school) budgets, cutting out of programs in some of the schools, strikes and the lost time in school - parents are beginning to look for alternatives," Hagerman

Mary Frances Wagley, head-mistress of St. Paul's School for Girls just outside Baltimore, Md., said that in Baltimore's public schools discipline is the main problem and parents may be reacting to that by sending their daughters to private day school instead. 'I don't think it's that they fear violence, but you just can't make forward progress in the class where the teacher's attention has to be focused on discipline and not on teaching and learning," she said.

Miner agreed, saying, "Parents can't tell what's going to happen next year in the public school situation. It isn't white flight. They are really, really concerned with stability. And when you compound that with our attempt to solve some social problems, such as the inequity in our minority situation, through education - which is coming out of the hides of children. Why it's absolutely criminal. It hasn't been all roses for the nation's private schools. In the past five years, 30 schools have closed - 19 of them boarding schools, which were hit hardest by declining enrollments in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

But in that same period, 36 new schools were accepted into membership with the National Association of Independent Schools. To be eligible for full membership they must have been in operation five years. In all, about 80 new schools have been founded in the past .0 years, about 80 per cent of them day schools, according to the association.

The Environmental Protection Agency last month exempted eight steel plants from new water pollution restraints, saying compliance costs might endanger their existence and that of an entire local economy.

The goal of eliminating all pollution from a plant, said C. R. Dahl, president of Crown Zellerback Corp., which says it is spending $190 million to clean up the environment, is an "illusion." In a talk to the Chamber of Commerce of Camas-Washougal, Wash., he stated:

"If pollution control regulations remain unmodified, there is every possibility that the control measures will contribute more to the degradation of the total environment than to its improvement."

To seek total cleansing is to squander billions, he suggested, because the environment is capable of harmlessly assimilating some degree of pollution. And then there is the rule of diminishing returns. In the field of air quality control, he said, "moving

He said he is worried about beverage service at two other restaurants under construction.

Another statute requiring Texasowned companies to be the only ones that can sell alcoholic beverages also is causing grave concern, the newspaper said.

Gun supreme law in war-torn Northern Ireland

By ED BLANCHE

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) - Fred Proctor answered the knock on his door. When he opened it, a masked gunman shot him six times.

Four days earlier, Proctor, a Belfast city councilman, had denounced what he called criminal rings - both Catholic and Protestant - which he claimed had built up a multimillion-dollar network of crime in Northern Ireland

That was 18 months ago. Proctor, a 44-year-old Protestant, survived. But he may be crippled for life.

No one was ever arrested for the shooting. But 'police say they are convinced the gunman was a professional killer for a faction of the Ulster Defense Association — UDA biggest of the province's Protestant paramilitary groups and widely suspected of criminal racketeering.

Belfast Judge Ambrose McGonigal voiced growing official alarm at the growth of organized crime in the province when he jailed 10 UDA members, nine of them women, convicted for the slaying of a woman who broke the association's rules.

The 58-year-old judge, a World War II British commando, declared: "What appears before me under the name UDA is gun law - a vicious and brutalizing organization of persons who take the law into their own hands, who terrorize a neighborhood and rule an area of this city."

The victim, 31, was battered to death, police believe, because she had accused UDA officials of pocketing part of the money collected to send food parcels to association men held in prison.

In the 61/2 years of Catholic-Protestant warfare in Ulster, Northern Ireland has been swept by a major crime wave.

"Ulster," declared an editorial in the Belfast Telegraph, "is sliding towards the criminal abyss. Moral standards have been eroded by years of violence. Ordinary crime is feeding on the political unrest.

The gangsters rule parts of Belfast, particularly in the jigsaw puzzle of Protestant and Catholic working class enclaves, bleak, cheerless districts that have become an urban bat-

They rule by fear. No one talks readily about the intimidation or asks questions.

"We're hampered by this wall of silence," said Sgt. Dave Hanna, a plain-clothes officer at Royal Ulster Constabulary headquarters in Belfast's fashionable eastern

The battle against the terrorists and the gangsters is closely linked and the distinction between political terrorism, ordinary crime, or one side or the other simply settling personal grudges is blurred.

The lawlessness in Ulster, where nearly 1,500 men, women and children have been killed since 1969, is largely controlled by the Irish Republican Army, with predominantly Roman Catholic adherents, and the main Protestant "paramilitaries," the UDA and the Ulster Volunteer Force -UVF - police say.

The IRA, based in the Catholic communities, and the UVF are activities. The UDA, formed four years ago as a street army to defend Protestant areas from IRA attacks, has frequently clashed with security forces but is still legal. However, security authorities believe it harbors groups of Protestant killers. "Organized crime is a spinoff from the political terrorism," Hanna said. "Paramilitary involvement is extremely heavy.

The guerrilla groups use the loot from holdups, protection rackets, hijackings and, the local speakeasies, to buy weapons and explosives, support the families of men killed, jailed or on the run and pay the guerrillas themselves, security chiefs

Statistics about IRA and UVF funds are difficult to obtain. But the UDA admitted it spent the equivalent of $80,000 last year to aid the families of hundreds of its members jailed as suspected terrorists or convicted of UDA officials said the money came from donations made by its reputed 50,000 members. But Protestant sources reported that is "only a fraction" of the UDA's treasury.

More than 300 UDA men convicted of robbery, most of it at gunpoint, were listed as "special category," or political, prisoners before the British abolished that category this year. The UDA has supported their claims that their activities were politically motivated. Three men jailed last year for robbing a milkman of $408 said in court they did it to raise funds for the UDA. Other men have claimed to have committed holdups for the IRA and UVF.

In the last six years, police statistics show, armed robberies have resulted in nearly $8 million in loot. The robbers got away with $1.6 million in 1972 alone.

A supermarket chain sold its branch store in Andersontown, a violence-scarred IRA stronghold on Belfast's west side, after it had been held up 15 times in 21 months, the last four times within two weeks.

Hanna said hundreds of hotels, trucking outfits, - merchants, cab

Washington police chief says city safe

WASHINGTON - Metropolitan Police Chief Maurice J. Cullinane said Tuesday that "the city of Washington is a very safe city." "In cities of over 500,000, we are 16th out of 20." meaning that 15 other major cities have more crime than the District of Columbia, he said. The news conference was called so that Cullinane, city administrator Julian Dugas and the Very Rev. Francis B. Sayre, dean of Washington Cathedral, could respond to a sermon last Sunday in which Canon Jeffrey P. Cave told a Cathedral congregation of about 1,200 that the city has become "a slaughterhouse" of violent crime.

Canon Cave was also at the news conference. He said his sermon was not "reflected accurately" in Monday's edition of The Washington Post. The reports, he said, "placed all the emphasis on the fact that I suggested that Bicentennial visitors be warned and the interpretation was that I was telling people to avoid Washington, which I certainly wasn't." In his sermon Sunday, Cave warned "the citizenry of the world of making any Bicentennial plans for a Washington visit (because) our nation's capital is a human slaughterhouse ... He said Tuesday he merely meant to put potential visitors on notice that 'when they get here the newspapers are going to be full of death" stories.

Egg industry fighting back

FARMINGTON, Me. 8 For Walt Lamkin and the other poultrymen here in the egg basket of New England, there was more bad news the other day from the U.S. Department of Agriculture: America is losing its appetite for the "incredible

In the last two years, the department's annual report said, egg production has declined 10 per cent continuing a downward trend accelerated by the cholesterol scare of a decade ago and the increased popularity of quick, on-the-run breakfasts. In the last 30 years the average American has cut his consumption of eggs from 400 to 280 a

"Sometimes," grumbled Lambin, a university graduate who runs the farm his father started in 1924, "I feel like I'm trying to keep a business alive in a dying industry.

"THE FIRST thing that hit us was the heart association people telling everyone not to eat more than three eggs a week. Then came the big food manufacturers with millions of dollars to exploit the issue so they could push these egg substitute things that are so bad they'd kill a rat. And all this time we just sat back. We didn't promote. We didn't advertise.

Last week the inactivity ended. With a growing number of competent medical authorities challenging the theory that a low-cholesterol diet lessens the chance of suffering a heart attack, the egg industry met in Washington to take the offensive with a multimillion-dollar blitz telling America about the benefits of the "incredible edible egg.

The occasion for the gathering was the first meeting of an 18 member National Egg Board, appointed this month by Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz and approved overwhelmly last November in a referendum of egg producers anxious to reverse the declining consumption trend.

With producers contributing onesixth of a cent for every dozen eggs they sell, the board is considering a $5 million to $7 million budget, most of which will be used for promotion. The board also will conduct medical research - poultrymen unanimously contest the cholesterol theory - and hopes to develop new markets for eggs, 90 per cent of which are bought by consumers in the shell form

"THERE'S NO QUESTION that we have not maintained the public's esteem as a viable food industry,' said board member Hank Wentink of Lancaster, Pa. "But we've advanced sufficiently in terms of medical research recently for me to feel that eggs are going to be completely vin-Kunken said that the major goal of the new Maxillo Growth Guidance Center at North Shore will be toward eliminating and preventing major dental problems as children grow older. He said his group also plans to do research into the causes of bad habits in infancy and early childhood. 'At this point, we have a lot of theories but not irrefutable facts."

Many of the habits cause problems as they exert external force on the mouth area, he said, thus changing the growth of the dental arch.

'Take the tongue-thrusting habit," he said. "Normally, when a person swallows, the tongue goes to the roof of the mouth. With the thruster, it moves forward to fill a tooth gap or laterally. The thumb-sucker, too, is causing a change in his oral environ-

"We get many queries from anxious" mothers asking how to keep their offspring from developing these habits. Should they spank? Try to force a substitute? Get very upset or hysterical about it? The answer generally is no. A very young baby who is developing what seems to be a habit may grow out of it in a few months. We really cannot cure one of the bad habits until a child is old enough to understand what he is doing and what the effects of the habit can cause on his further development and growth. In other words, he must be old enough to cooperate.

"We can help many young children in changing their behavorial patterns by the use of simple conditioning techniques and with the use of simple orthodontic appliances where indicated," he said. "Basically, we try to bring the unconscious act to the consciousness level and extinguish it. However, if there is a security element involved — especially with thumb-sucking — it is sometimes more appropriate to wait until the child is better able to understand and cope with his problem.

Elk Hills development bill sent to President

By RICHARD T. COOPER The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - The House Wednesday passed and sent to President Ford a bill ordering rapid com-mercial development of Elk Hills •naval petroleum reserve in California and two smaller naval petroleum reserves, as well as accelerated exploration of the huge reserve in

The vote was 390 to 5.

Since the Senate passed the measure last week and Mr. Ford has long advocated opening Elk Hills, Wednesday's House action all but ended three years of often-bitter controversy over what role the naval reserves should play in U.S. energy policy and who should have authority

Rep. John Melcher (D-Mont.), chief sponsor of the bill and a key figure in working out the compromise that broke the legislative stalemate, said the bill "will assure protection of the national interest in the reserves and at the same time make available new sources of oil for national needs."

Melcher described as a "sound, constructive compromise" the arrangement under which the Navy will retain operational jurisdiction over Elk Hills, located near Bakersfield, Calif., as well as the nearby Buena Vista reserve and Teapot Dome in Wyoming, while the Interior Department takes over responsibility for the Alaska reserve, known as Pet-4, beginning in mid-1977.

Rep. William M. Ketchum (D-

Calif.), in whose district Elk Hills lies, was one of the early advocates of opening the reserves. "I have waited two and a half years to cast this vote, Ketchum said on the House floor Wednesday, "and I did not really think I would ever have an opportunity to do so.'

At the same time, the Navy would be ordered to begin maximum efficient production from Elk Hills, projected to be about 300,000 barrels a day, as soon as possible - a requirement that reassured advocates of full-scale production who feared the Navy might drag its feet. And, while the Interior Department would be directed to step up exploration of Petthere without further congressional

Another important element in the compromise was the antitrust provision giving the attorney-general veto power over any development plans or proposals that the Justice Department considered harmful to competi-

Also, the bill would permit the setting aside of up to 25 per cent of the Elk Hills oil for sale to small refiners and would limit the share any one company could buy in a single year. Income from Elk Hills oil would have to be used to explore and develop all four reserves and to create a national strategic oil reserve, according to the bill.

The naval reserves were created early in this century to assure petroleum for military purposes in a national emergency. Only Elk Hills and Pet-4 now contain significant amounts of oil.

Since the reserves originally were intended for use only in military emergencies, the Navy and its congressional allies historically have managed to fight off most attempts to develop the reserves commercially. The Arab embargo of 1973-74 and subsequent concern over the energy crisis tipped the balance, however.

HNG Oil Co. has completed its No. 1-30 Askew as the fourth Wolfcamp well and as an extension to Canyon gas production in the Sawyer field of Sutton County.

The Wolfcamp zone gauged a calculated, absolute open flow of 1.9 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 3,012-3,074 feet, after treating the pay with 1,500 gallons of acid.

The Canyon section gaauged a calculated, absolute open flow of 850,000 cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-liquid ratio of 105,000-1. Distillate gravity is 65.3 degrees.

Production was through perforations at 4,6 fracturing with 42,000 gallons and 36,000 pounds. Wellsite is 1,375 feet from south and HNG also has completed its No. 1-65 Meador as a producer in the Schleicher part of the Sawyer (Canyon) field.

The calculated, absolute.open flow potential was for 4.55 million cubic feet of dry gas daily, producing from pay behind perforations at 6,654-7,072 feet, after treating the pay with 56,000 gallons and 48,000 pounds of fracture sand.

It was staked as a wildcat, and drilled to 7,275 feet.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford Wednesday created a 10member Cabinet-level task force headed by Commerce Secretary Elliot L. Richardson to recommend clear and enforceable standards governing overseas payments by American corporations.

"The purpose of this task force is not to punish American corporations," Ford said in a statement, "but to ensure that the U.S. has a clear policy and that we have an effective. active program to implement that policy.

The task force is to submit a final report to Ford by Dec. 31. Richardson, sitting beside the President in the Oval Office, told reporters there will be interim reports in the meantime.

With the Securities and Exchange Commission already looking into more than 85 cases involving questionable payments to foreign officials, political organizations and agents, Ford said:

"To the extent that the questionable payments abroad have arisen from -corrupt practices on the part of American corporations, the United States bears a clear responsibility to the entire international community to bring them to a halt. Corrupt business practices strike at the very heart of our moral code and our faith in free enterprise."

However Ford added:

"Before we condemn American citizens out of hand .. it is essential that we also recognize the possibility that some of the questionable payments abroad may result from extortion by foreign interests. To the extent that such practices exist, I believe that the United States has an equal responsibility to our own businesses to protect them from strong-arm practices."

Richardson told reporters in Ford's presence that the aim of the task force would not be to investigate allegations. but rather to recommend a comprehensive government policy in this

Ford said that at this point, "It is not clear to me where true justice lies" and suggested the issue of overseas payments might never be resolved to the satisfaction of everyone. He added: "The central policy question that needs to be addressed today is rather how we can arrive at clear, enforceable standards to prevent such questionable activities in the future. That is the key issue to which this new task force will direct its attentions."

In addition to Richardson, members of the task force are: Secretary of State Henry A. Kiss inger, Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon, Secretary of Defense Donald H. Rumsfeld, Atty.

Gen. Edward H. Levi and Director James T. Lynn of the Office of Management and Budget.

Other members are Frederick B. Dent, special representative for trade negotiations; L. William Seidman, assistant to the President for economic affairs: Brent Scowcroft, presidential assistant for national security affairs, and J. M. Dunn executive director of the council on international economic policy.

The task force will report to Ford through the Econmic Policy Board and the National Security Council.

Ford noted that the issues involved embrace economics, foreign relations and the enforcement of federal laws.

A White House statement said Ford will encourage Richardson's panel "to consider all policy dimensions of questionable foreign payments by U.S. corporations and to obtain the views of the broadest base of interested groups and individuals.

LONDON (AP) - Royal medical advisers are worried about the health of Princess Margaret, the London

Daily Mirror reports. The newspaper described Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth II, as "tired and overwrought" after the separation this month from her photographer husband, Anthony Armstrong-Jones.

"It is absolute nonsense - there is no truth at all in this," a palace spokesman said today.

Despite the reported strain, the princess attended the annual meeting Wednesday of the National Society for

Quinlans win fight in court

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) - "This is the decision we have been praying for," said Julia Quinlan after learning her 22-year-old comatose daughter may be allowed to begin the natural process of dying.

The New Jersey Supreme Court ruled Wednesday the mechanical respirator keeping Karen Anne Quinlan alive for nearly a year in a 'vegetative state' could be removed if doctors agree her condition is

In a 7 to 0 decision, the court appointed Joseph Quinlan legal guardian of his daughter and said he could let her die if competent medical authorities decide the girl's condition is irreversible and that there is no reasonable possibility of her recovery.

She has been in a coma at St. Clare's Hospital in nearby Denville since April 15, 1975, after apparently ingesting alcohol and tranquilizers.

The state attorney general's office said there would be no immediate decision on whether to take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, the only avenue of appeal. The Quinlans said they would give the state time to consider an appeal before asking to have the respirator disconnected.

"We hope at the last minute the

to remove her from her respirator,' the girl's father said.

But, he added, they will order the life support treatment stopped if lef with that decision.

The Quinlans, flanked by three Roman Catholic priests at their parish church in Mount Arlington, sat calmly and faced a room full of reporters on Wednesday night. They discussed the court's decision that their daughter and others who are beyond medical restoration have a right to die, based on the constitutional protection of personal

Two days earlier, they had ob-served their daughter's 22nd birthday at a private Mass.

"There is no hope and there hasn't been any," said Mrs. Quinlan, who told reporters she wept when the family lawyer, Paul Armstrong, telephoned from Trenton to tell thm of the decision.

"I feel this responsibility has been put on us by God. We have to act on it. Once we made our decision, we never had any doubt," Quinlan said.

The Quinlans said their daughter's condition has not changed since last October, when one doctor said she was in state." "a persistent vegetative to the man, he heard the cash register open and went to investigate, found the currency and the woman gone.

By MICHAEL SEILER The Los Angeles times

BISBEE, Ariz. - There still is a Bisbee, which, all things considered, is no small accomplishment. It once was the quintessential company mining town. It isn't any more phelps Dodge Corp., one of the nation's leading copper producers, has closed most of its operations in this picturesque community built up and down a series of hills a few miles from the Mexican border. As late as 1973, the company employed 1,450 workers in Bisbee with an annual payroll of $16 million. They mined the tailend of what was a 95-year-long bonanza.

BEGINNING IN 1881, four years after the discovery of copper at Bisbee, Phelps Dodge mined nearly $2 billion worth of ore from 33 shafts and pits. in the Bisbee area and smelted much of it here. Copper and Phelps Dodge were the Bisbee economy. But by the early 1970s, it was obvious that Bisbee's copper economy was played out. The quality of copper Phelps Dodge could dig out of Bisbee was lessening. Production costs were on the rise and copper prices declining. Phelps Dodge's open pit operation was closed down in December, 1974. The Lavender Pit, as it is called. is one of the biggest holes ever made by man. At the top, it covers 213 acres in area. It spirals down to a

About six months later, the last Phelps Dodge underground mine was closed. Of the 1,200 copper workers employed by Phelps Dodge in Bisbee in late 1974, 600 were transferred to other company operations, 300 retired and another 300 were laid off and not rehired

THE FUTURE COULD have been deadly. "If Bisbee had been some flat little mining town out on the plains, it would have blown away by now," said Steve Hutchison, a local real estate developer and hotel owner.

The old Phelps Dodge mine still being worked is a leaching operation. Relatively small amounts of copper are extracted from water About 30 Bisbee residents are employed there.

Other than that, Bisbee, is no longer a mining town. Instead, it is a strange combination of young people and old, artisan and retiree. Optimists say the town may develop some day into another Taos, N.M. or a high-dna-dry Leisure World.

At the moment, though, Bisbee is just hanging in there, its population hovering around 8,000 - down from about 10,000 in the late 1960s and 35,000 when Bisbee was incorporated as a city in 1902

Those were the glory days. Bisbee was the largest city in Arizona and an El Paso newspaper reporter painstakingly counted 68 saloons in a downtown area known as Brewery Gulch.

There are a few bars left, but the town is checkered with decaying buildings and abandoned storefronts. Grungy and yet quaint, Bisbee survives through tourism, turquoise, good weather and low real estate

Parent company says claims may destroy Lo-Vaca

HOUSTON (AP) - The annual financial report of Coastal States Gas Corp. says the firm believes some of the $1.4 billion in court claims against its troubled Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. subsidiary have been exaggerated for publicity purposes.

The annual report, released Wednesday, said outside counsel believes there are defenses to the claims.

"However, the entry of an adverse judgment on some of these claims, even if subject to reversal on appeal, could have a very material adverse effect on the company and its financial ppoition," the report

Coastal States reported LoVaca's revenues increased 117 per cent last year, totaling $830 million compared to $381 million in 1974. Lo-Vaca was reported to have had a pre-tax loss for 1975.

'However, because of tax benefits received from its parent company, a net income of $1 million was recorded for the year," the report said. "The 1975 pre-tax loss would have been much greater were it not for earnings from the sales of liquids extracted from the gas system.'

Lo-Vaca reported a 1974 loss of $11.2 million.

Coastal States reported Feb. 6, 1975, the had received a proposal calling for the negotiation of a sale or a combination sale and spin-off of the stock of

'There have not been any recent negotiations on this proposal and the company considered it to be no longer viable." the new financial report said.

The report made no reference to the current dispute over the manner in which Lo-Vaca has been recovering the costs of some natural gas that is ntt being fed into its distribution lines.

During periods of supply shortages, Lo-Vaca porrowed supplies from other companies but prices have increased sharply since then. Replacement gas town. It says, "BISBEE, ARIZ. AIN'T NO GHOST now is costing LoVaca considerably more than the gas that was borrowed.

Most citizens happy town's gone to dogs Dog catcher enthusiastic

BISHOP, Tex. (AP) — In her first day on the job as dog catcher for the city of bishop, Tomi Seay did such a good job city officials had to tell her to slow down.

Officials said they had to order her to slow down because she filled the city's dog pound to capacity by noon on her first day at work.

"We had to say whea," said City Administrator Jo Pierce. "We hadn't expected anyone to step into a new job with so much enthusiasm."

She said Mrs. Seay will resume rounding up stray dogs when the dog pound "clears out a little."

PLAINFIELD, Conn. (AP) - This city has gone to the dogs, and most people seem happy about it.

The dogs are greyhounds, but some people say they should be called

'gold''-hounds. Night after night, the dogs burst from the starting gate to chase a mechanical rabbit. They never catch it, but the dogs have fulfilled the quests of politicians, business people and gamblers, all trying to hit the jackpot. The town will never really be the same.

Although opposition lingers, many people in Plainfield are thrilled with what the state's only dog racing track has done for the small eastern Connecticut town since it opened Jan. 2.

"Better than $1,000 a night" for the town's coffers, says First Selectman Richard Mercier. "That's what the track has done for Plainfield.

The town also receives $135,000 in property taxes from the track, which employs 586 persons, nearly half from Plainfield. The town's unemployment rate has dropped from 25 per cent a year ago to 17.7 per cent.

About $1 million a month goes to the state from the track's handle, the amount of money bet. That has averaged $418,000 daily since the track opened, surpassing the track owners' projections.

Mercier says, "I'm not a personal enthusiast. I'm not a gambler by nature. I just like the money coming

He says the track isn't forcing town expenses up. "Dogs don't send kids to school," the town's top official adds.

While many gamblers go home without picking a winner, there are those that strike it rich, such as David

The unemployed father of two bet.$3 last month in the Superfecta, the last race of the night, in which he picked the first four dogs in order of finish. That small wager brought him $16,000.

"I've owed people ever since I've been married 13 years ago, but no more," he says.

Lester Bodo doesn't need such bonanzas to make his night. "I'm happy to go home with what I brought, not like the younger fellows in town," says Bodo, who runs the local American Legion Club. "They have a few dollars in their pockets and they think they're going to make a million. They're looking for that pot of gold in the sky, but it's not there.

Hank Griffin lives near the track and goes there on the six nights a week it is open. He says he bets $300 to $500 a night and usually goes home a winner. He says he's ahead about $2,800 so far.

Residents say there wasn't much to do in Plainfield before the track opened and that now the dogs dominate conversations.

A local businessman says dogs have replaced politicians as the main topic of conversation in Plainfield - "It's the excitement of it, not the gambling. It's a new type of entertainment, something else to do in town."
