Ronald Reagan greets backers at Terminal.

Ronald Reagan challenges Panama Canal 'give-away'

By ED TODD

Ronald Reagan, instead of detailing his stand on the nation's energy pro-blems, Tuesday night elected to stomp on the Ford administration's apparent policy of letting United States control of the Panama Canal ebb away.

The Republican presidential contender also pounded away on other politically-sensitive areas here when he spoke before a largely hurrahing crowd of 2,000 in the Lee High School

Reagan, deeming the Panama Canal "sovereign United States territory" and owned by the people of this land, said President Ford has issued written instructions to the State Department" to give the canal to the Panamanians.

However, he said Ford would make no decision on fate of the isthmus "until after the election.'

"It's ours, we built it,...and we intend to keep it," Reagan said the U.S. ought to tell Panama's military ruler, Gen. Omar Torrijos, whom Reagan labeled as "that tin-horn dictator." Reagan said Ford earlier had stated "flatly that he doesn't intend to give away the Panama Canal." Reagan, the 65-year-old former governor of California and one-time movie actor, was flanked on the auditorium's stage by local Republican candidates and by his delegate-nominees in the May 1 primary election. His backdrop was an oversized U.S.

flag.
And in front of him were starstudded balloons towering above the overflow crowd. Even higher, centered in the balcony, were Lee High School bandsmen who were at rest after having welcomed the ex-governor with their rendition of "Dixie."

Reagan said he had just learned (More photos of Reagan visit,

He said U.S. Rep. Gene Snyder, a Republican from Kentucky, released the heretofore secret testimony.

Reagan read to his audience excerpts from the Bunker-Snyder dialogue which, the candidate said, 'makes it quite clear just what Mr. Ford's intentions are about this sovereign United States territory. Bunker, the U.S. chief negotiator on

"We have been directed to proceed with the negotiations . . . to give up the Canal Zone after a period of time and to relinquish control of the canal itself after a "longer period of

The ambassador, according to Reagan, said the negotiation guidelines were established "both by President Nixon and President Ford." Directives on the canal were signed by Ford at "various dates,"

Reagan quoted Bunker. (President Ford's campaign chairman, Rogers Morton, said in Midland last week that the Panama Canal was a U.S. leasehold and therefore was not sovereign U.S. territory.)

Reagan, however, likened the Panana Canal to statehood.

Reagan's 281/2-minute speech appeared to be his stock campaign multi-message on conservatism from the virtues of the free-enterprise system and of fiscal responsibility to the bunglings of big government grown bigger. He spoke at a fast clip.

Unlike his late Tuesday afternoon rally in easternmost Odessa, Reagan in Midland had no time left for a question-and-answer session he eemed to relish there.

His speech was generously in terrupted with applause, cheers and three standing ovations.

After his speech, Reagan, escorted stage and headed to the sunflower yellow Hughes Airwest airliner that had landed him, his entourage and his national press corps at Midland Regional Air Terminal at 4 p.m. about 15 minutes ahead of schedule.

Leaving with Reagan on his campaigning in Texas was Ernest Angelo Jr., Midland's mayor who is co-chairman of the statewide Texas Citizens for Reagan campaign. The airliner was bound for Austin.

As the crowd was leaving the auditorium, Reaganite Carroll Thomas explained to a reporter possibly why Reagan had bypassed his to-be-expounded energy message: it wasn't fully prepared, yet.

Thomas, co-chairman of the Midland County Reagan campaign, said Reagan's speechwriter told Angelo in Wichita Falls last week that the text likely would be readied for delivery at his Midland campaign.

Whenever and wherever Reagan does detail his policy on energy, his message will cover the vast energy spectrum - not just oil and gas -Thomas said.

That energy policy is to entail solar, wind and nuclear power, as well as that generated by the fossil fuels. Reagan's message to Midlanders

The presidential contender won waves of applause as he cited the Washington establisment as the culprit in a wide variety of ills plaguing the nation, ranging from declining achievement scores in the public schools to problems created by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Reagan, who arrived at Midland Regional Air Terminal shortly after 4 p.m. Tuesday for another campaign swing through Texas, made his first public adress in the gymnasium of Odessa's University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

He spoke to a crowd numbering about 1,000, most of them apparently on campus only as visitors.

His address was essentially the same one presented later in the evening at Lee High School in Midland, but the UTPB appearance included a question and answer session-"a dialogue instead of a

Reagan applied this philosophy to serveral questions about American education-busing, declining achievement scores, prayer in the schools and interference by the Department of Health, Education and Stockade. The inmates used a coat hanger to unlock an iron bar in their wing of the jail. Perotti said the inmates fashioned a key from the coat hanger to unlock the heavy door, then kicked out another door and scaled an eight-foothigh fence topped with barbed wire to make their escape.

By midmorning, 12 of the escapees were back in custody.

Sheriff's Office spokesman Sgt. William Knowles said authorities throughout central Florida were using dogs and helicopters to search for the remaining inmates who fled Tuesday night.

Meanwhile, some residents of the area near the jail took special precautions.

"I'm scared," said Dora Favors, 17, who carried a baseball bat. "It's my brother's and I decided to bring it

The prisoners fled from a wing that held 132 of the stockade's 380 inmates. The wing includes eight cells, each designed to hold 28 men.

"We were wondering why the other 100 didn't leave, too," said Perotti. "There's no doubt that some (of the escapees) wanted to get out, but I'll bet others just saw the door open."

The Midland City Council, despite heavy opposition both voiced and silent, approved on first reading a zone change request to allow construction of an apartment complex at the southwest corner of the intersection of Wadley and Tarleton.

The request, presented by Midland attorney Jim Alsup representing Landmark Properties, sought to change the local retail zone to multiple family to allow construction of a "family-oriented, high quality apartment" development.

Twelve persons appeared in opposition to the request, though only two actually voiced opposition. However, council approved the request by a 4 to 0 vote, Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. and Councilman Charles Tighe abstaining. Angelo said he had property interest in that area, while Tighe said one of the signers of a petition opposing the request was one of his business partners.

Alsup told the council that apartments could be built on the property without approval of the zone change, but the change was requested to upgrade the zoning of the area.

Architect James Farkey explained that 120 units would be constructed, each of which would consist of two stories and two parking spaces. He said a six foot wooden fence would be erected on two sides of the 7.12 acres in question with landscaping on the other two sides. Two entrances to the apartments would be on Tarleton Street and two on Wadley Avenue, he said. The units would be set back some 80-90 feet from the road, and construction costs would top $2.3 million, according to Alsup.

Three persons spoke in favor of the request, noting the property had been vacant for quite some time and that this proposal was the most reasonable approach to its development.

Two petitions were presented to council stating objection to the proposal because of the possible heavy traffic such an apartment could cause and because many neighbors felt duplexes or single-family homes would be better in that location.

Councilman Mark Martin said that, as more people move into the city, more traffic will result, but that Wadley Avenue can handle the expected amount of traffic from the proposed apartments.

The request will come before council again in two weeks for final

Reagan: no weapon ruled out

AUSTIN (AP) - Ronald Reagan said today that potential enemies should never hear leaders of the United States say there is any weapon in the nation's arsenal that would not

His statement responded to a news conference question on whether he would rule out a first strike with nuclear weapons.

'No one wants a nuclear confrontation," the contender for the Republican presidential nomination said in the crowded state Senate

"Our present weakness in conventional weapons is such that what threatens us most is a Russian attack or advance, let's say, in Western Europe, with conventional weapons and we are so weak in conventional weapons in response that the only thing left to us would be the nuclear button-the choice of whether to use that or not," Reagan said.

"As to whether anyone should ever say that there is a weapon we would not use under any circumstances, this is something no potential enemey should ever hear you say. They should always remain in doubt about that....I just don't believe any country should ever reveal what its response to any situation might be in advance.'

Reagan also said he sought support in the Texas presidential primary from former Gov. John Connally several weeks ago but that Connally said he was neutral. He said he would make a courtesy phone call to Connally during his swing through Texas but would not repeat his request.

"I am sure that if he ever changed that stand, I would be the first to know," Reagan said.

Reagan, believed to be running ahead in the Texas primary, said if he loses he will simply pick up the pieces and go on with his campaign.

Reagan said earlier that the May I primary will give Texas Democrats a 'great opportunity" to cross party Undersheriff Harold Barker said Miss Hearst was in stable condition and that the prognosis is good. A doctor who examined her said she probably would remain hospitalized for four to five days.

"She was in considerable pain," said Dr. Jeffrey Wiseberg, the physician who performed the 45minute-procedure to reduce pressure in Miss Hearst's chest. "But she was very level-headed and handled it quite well. There is no question that this was an acute emergency requiring immediate care.'

Security was tight around the hospital, about 25 miles south of San Francisco. Sheriff's deputies were stationed at the emergency entrance and elsewhere in the facility. Miss Hearst was in a private room in a section of the three-story hospital where maternity and surgery patients are usually kept, said Arthur J. Faro, the associate hospital administrator.

It was the first night in the nearly seven months since her capture that Miss Hearst had not slept in a cell at the jail. She was to have been flown to Los Angeles early today for a pretrial hearing on state kidnaping, assault and robbery charges.

It was at that hearing Miss Hearst was to have encountered Wittiam and Emily Harris, the Symbionese Liberation Army members she reportedly implicated in a Sacramento bank robbery during a meeting Monday with FBI agents.

President jabs at Carter remark

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford says he rejects the term "ethnic but believes "an ethnic heritage is a great treasure" that should not be destroyed by federal

Asked about Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter's reference to "ethnic purity" of neighborhoods, Ford said Tuesday, "I would not use that term to describe any of my policies."

At a White House news conference. he said it is "not the way to describe the practical situation" involving government housing policy.

Carter stirred controversy last week by saying in an interview that the government should not pursue policies that force the alteration of 'ethnic purity'' of neighborhoods. Some critics claimed there were racial overtones in the statement.

Carter later apologized for the use of the term, but said he remained opposed to the "arbitrary use of federal force" to change a neighborhood's ethnic character. His comments were in regard to legal efforts to force the government to finance construction of low-income housing in affluent suburbs as well as in poor inner-city areas.

Ford seemed to support Carter's stand on allowing neighborhoods to retain ethnic identity, saying, "I don't think that federal action should be used to destroy that ethnic treasure."

But he said he is sworn to uphold present federal housing laws, which give local governments a great deal of autonomy and responsibility as to where low-income housing should be

Ford said Carter will face a test in the April 27 Pennsylvania primary, which will determine "whether that remark will have any impact on the support that he has heretofore gotten in the black communities of the various states."

Carter was campaigning in Philadelphia where he said, "I am happy to have aroused the interest and the opposition of the President."

The former Georgia governor said "has often expressed his preference not to have me as an opponent and I guess he has now joined the 'stop Carter movement.' But what he should know from me is that I am going to stop him in November."

Hanoi makes 'very hard-line' response to American overtures

By MURREY MARDER The Washington Post

WASHINGON — The United States has received what informed sources describe as a sternly-worded reply from North Vietnam to the Ford administration's overture for exploratory talks on normalizing rela-

Hanoi's response is characterized as "very hard-line" or "negative" in many respects without "closing the door" to diplomatic discussions.

Another source said the reply "does not establish preconditions" that prevent talks, but shows discussions 'will not be easy.'

The response to a U.S. offer made on March 26 was delivered Monday in Paris from the Vietnamese embassy to the American embassy a State Department official said Tuesday.

U.S. officials said the Hanoi message "is being studied right now" and declined to discuss any specifics.

Administration sources indicated the diplomatic message was somewhat less caustic in tone than an editorial highly critical of the U.S. overture, which was published on Monday in the official North Vietnamese newspaper, Nhan Dan. The official message reportedly also used language protraying Vietnam as the deeply aggrieved party.

The Hanoi newspaper charged that American offers "to normalize relations" are "a ruse, a merchandize offered by the Ford Kissinger administration to the home market in this election year.

It said that "for all its alluring words, the Ford administration does not yet want to normalize relations with Vietnam." If that is the real American goal, Nhan Dan said, the United States "must prove this by deeds.

-Instead, the article said, the United States is "trying to buy voters with its 'goodwill' and putting the blame on Vietnam.

The Hanoi newspaper said that: 'Since the complete liberation of South Vietnam (the Communist conguest in April 1975" the DRV government (North Vietnam) has many times declared that it is ready to talk with the U.S. government to reach an early settlement of the remaining postwar affairs concerning Vietnam and the United States as provided by the Paris agreement ... Nhan Dan went on to specify that this includes: "The U.S. contribution to the healing of the wounds of war in Vietnam, the search for missing Americans, the exhumation and repatriation of the remains of American dead in the war, etc." "And on this basis," Nhan Dan said,

"Vietnam will normalize its relations with the United States in the spirit of article 22 of the Paris Agreement on Vietnam.

The Ford administration has renounced any obligation to supply North Vietnam with postwar reconstruction aid under the January 1973, Vietnam cease-fire accord. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has said the U.S. pledge was linked to the rest of the agreement which Hanoi "grossly violated" by the conquest of South Vietnam.

One source said Tuesday that, despite the language used by Nhan Dan, the official Hanoi message pass-discussions.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) Tuesday called on the administration to adopt a policy "which seeks to heal the wounds of war." Mansfield told the Senate the administration's attitude, a year after "the shooting war is over," is "a petulant reaction" with elements of an "ostrich complex."

> WASHINGTON The House Judiciary Committee voted 20 to 12 Tuesday to ban the manufacture of small, cheaply made handguns but not the ownership, sale or transfer of the existing guns, known as "Saturday night Specials."

> The bill would ban the manufacture and import of revolvers with barrels of 4 inches or less and of pistols less than 6 inches long overall.

> Last month, the committee voted narrowly to send a stronger measure back to a crime subcommittee. leading many members to predict that gun control > legislation was dead for this year. The subcommittee then weakened that measure, but the result still was too strong to win the significant bipartisan support that Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino (D-N.J.) thought sale or transfer of existing guns. After the vote, Rodino promised to take the bill to the Rules Committee, which must clear it for the floor, as soon as possible after the Easter recess ends

'We've now been assured that some of the Republican members will work ... to expedite passage of the bill," Rodino said, adding that since the President supports the measure he was hopeful it would pass both bodies and be signed into law.

A spokesman for the Senate Judiciary subcommittee handling the bill said, however, that its members would wait until the House acts. The Senate previously passed a gun control bill that died

The Railsback compromise, adopted 26 to 6, would ban the future manufacture of Saturday night specials, using criteria now in effect to ban the importation of such guns. In addition to size, it takes into account safety features and other factors. The Railsback compromise dropped a provision

House insurance rates increased by state board

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Building insurance rate increases, which will raise annual premiums on a $35,000 brick veneer house by $12 to $21, have been approved by the State Board of Insurance.

Board Chairman Joe Christie said the relatively low 4 per cent average statewide increase points toward a possible leveling off in rates that have risen rapidly over the past two years.

The increase will add $24 million to Texans' total

Insurance men had asked for a 5.1 per cent increase at the board's Feb. 18 hearing. Board statisticians had recommended 5.4 per cent.

There is every indication that inflation will not be as much of a problem during the life of the policies written under the new rates and we felt there should be a downward adjustment of the proposed rates," Christie said in a statement.

"I think the adjustments point to a general consensus that as inflation levels off there will be more stability and a leveling off of insurance costs,'

Utility panel studying 'lifeline' rates

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN (AP) - "Lifeline" rates for electricity are "a compelling choice over the present system," says a report by the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs.

Some legislators, Gov. Dolph Briscoe and the Texas Public Utility Commisscon now are studying the feasibility of lifeline rates, at least in the areas to be regulated by the commission as of Sept. 1.

Commission member Alan Erwin recently returned from California, where lifeline rates are being im-plemented, and said, "They can

All who are studying the possibility of such rates advise caution, however, in establishing them and against expecting too much in the way of relief for hard-pressed middle income

The LBJ school at The University of Texas at Austin dealt with lifeline rates in a "Policy Research Project has these advantages: Report" issued last year and made available to the commission.

Lifeline rates provide electricity or gas at a fixed price, below actual cost, for quantities presumed to be essential for a rock bottom but decent standard of living. Even that is rapidly being priced out of the range of families on low, fixed income, by rising natural gas prices.

"The lifeline rate assumes that a minimum amount of energy is critical to human welfare, and that this concern should be reflected in the rate structure. In addition, the rate gives tremendous incentive for residential conservation where consumption can be held below the base amount," the LBJ school's report said.

Present rate structures generally use the "declining block" method. Rates per kilowatt hour decline with each "block" of increased power use and favor large industrial consumers.

The LBJ school said the lifeline rate

"By establishing a maximum rate for a level of utility service designed to meet minimum residential needs, residential consumers are protected in periods of economic fluctuation: conservation is an equally significant aspect of the rate structure since the fixed price is applied only to the base

Because the utility has considerable latitude in the determination of rates above the base amount, the problem of meeting revenue requirements should be minimized.

'The simplicity of application, in addition to its potential for achieving equity and conservation, makes the lifeline rate a compelling choice over the present system.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe has spoken favorably of putting the lowest rates per kilowatt hour at the lowest level of consumption, rather than the highest. Two legislators, including the one' that represents his Uvalde County home, have advocated advancing the start of the utility commission's regulatory power from Sept. 1 to June 1 so it could put lifeline rates into effect during the hot months.

The commission believes it has the authority to impose lifeline rates in the predominantly rural areas over which it will have jurisdiction. But it is moving carefully.

Both Erwin and commission member George Cowden indicated they would vote for lifeline rates if the agency's continuing research provides data to support such action.

Erwin said last week, however, that even if the commission were able to act in June, benefits from lifeline rates would not begin to appear until consumers' August bills.

Already, there appears to be some resistance to lifeline rates from business and industry. Somebody would have to pay more for electricity if some residential customers pay less, and commercial users would be the most likely candidates.

House Speaker Bill Clayton, who has a strong probusiness orientation, said he feared lifeline rates would hurt the business climate. Even if passed on to out-of-state customers-as well as to Texans-in product prices, added power costs would damage business, he said. Higher prices, Clayton said, would "put business at a disadvantage competitively."

Cowden said the three utilities commissioners conferred Friday with Louis Austin, chief executive officer of Texas Utilities, parent corporation of Texas Electric Service, Texas Power & Light and Dallas Power & Light concerning lifeline rates.

"It would be correct to say that Mr, Austin does not favor lifeline rates,' Cowden said.

He said Austin wanted to make the commission aware of "some pitfalls

MARJAYOUN, Lebanon — Where are the Syrian invaders of Lebanon?

They were supposed to be here in this largely Christian town, five miles from the Israeli border and well within the "sensitivity belt." This is the area of southern Lebanon below the Litani River where the Israelis are expected to become alarmed should Syrian forces appear.

Reports Monday said the Syrians had passed through Marjayoun, and details had it that they had with them 18 armored vehicles. Surely sufficient to trigger the Israelis into a reaction if true.

But spot checks Tuesday showed the story, like so many, not to be true. Officers of the Lebanese Arab Army said five Syrian trucks did pass through Monday, but no armor.

The officers questioned were not certain whether the trucks were officially Syrian army trucks or others ostensibly belonging to Saiqa, the Damascus-backed Palestinian guerrilla organization. The only difference is whether the word "Saiga" has been hastily scrawled on the bumper of what in every other respect is a Syrian army truck.

Since Saiqa is hardly more than an arm of the Syrian army, the Lebanese see little distinction between the two. But there is a vital political distinction: the Israelis have accepted the fiction that Saiqa, like the Palestine Liberation Army (PLA) units brought into Lebanon, are not simply branches of the Syrian army.

Thus they are not part of a Syrian "invasion," in Israeli eyes. This fiction, plus heavy pressure from Washington, has kept the Israelis out of the Lebanese crisis so far.

The invasion itself started last Friday with the movement of Syrian armored units into the Lebanese border town of Masnaa. There appears to have been little movement since then.

The Syrians have run patrols up the main road to Beirut, as far as the security post at Dar El Baidar on the crest of the Lebanese mountain range. But they only had tea there with units of the Lebanese Arab Army, and returned to Masnaa.

There are other reports that they have been disarming Palestinian and Lebanese army troops on the road, but they could not be confirmed. They have not interfered with the operations of the lebanese Arab Army headquarters a few miles from Masnaa in the Bekaa Valley.

They are also getting supplies into some beleaguered Christian towns such as Zahle. But the town remains sealed off by Lebanese Arab Army troops

The Syrian move into Lebanon on an open basis — they have been here disguised as PLA troops and in Saiqa ever since the intervention began Jan. 22 — took place the day before the Lebanese Parliament met to amend the constitution and get a political solution moving out of the deadlock. It was obviously designed as pressure on Lebanese politicians to get with it or face an imposed Syrian solution.

Since then, however, howls of protests from Lebanese left wing and Palestinian circles have increased. Socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt, his own private mountain war against the Christians was stopped by Syrian pressure, has called on Syria to withdraw its military forces.

Jumblatt says there are between 5,000 and 6,000 Syrian troops in the country, Zoheir Mohsen, leader of the pro-Syrian Saika, puts the figure even higher — some 16,000 including Syrian troops, PLA soldiers and Saika men.

Wherever else they might be, the Syrians seem to be deliberately keeping armed formations out of the area where they might be used to justify an Israeli intervention. In addition to the officers at Marjayoun, Lebanese Arab Army officers, Palestinian guerrillas and others questioned during a 140-mile swing all denied having seen any Syrian forces in the deep south.

Franjieh praises intervention by Syria

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian praise for Syria's military intervention in the Lebanese civil war put the spotlight today on the alliance between Syrian President Hafez Assad and the Lebanese Christians opposed by Assad's former proteges, the leftist Lebanese Moslems.

Lebanon's Christian president,
Suleiman Franjieh, telegraphed Assad expressing his "gratitude for Syria's action to safeguard Lebanon."

Pierre Gemayel, whose rightwing Phalange party has the largest militia fighting on the Christian side, declared: "Assad has acted to resolve the tragic situation after a year of bloodshed and warmongering by the false left."

Assad is trying to force Kamal Jumblatt, the leader of the Lebanese left, into a political settlement preserving some power for the Christian minority. He warned Jumblatt Monday that he was "prepared to move into Lebanon to protect any victim of aggression," and he said his forces "have the capability to take any position we want."

Jumblatt is demanding full power for the Moslem majority and a socialist economy. Claiming that 6,000 Syrian troops and 7,000 Syriancontrolled Palestinians are operating in Lebanon, he appealed to the other Arab powers to check the Syrians.

The Syrian intervention in Lebanon has the tacit support of the United States. On Tuesday it got similar approval from the Israeli government, which threatened earlier to invade southern Lebanon if Syrian troops entered the Lebanese fighting.

Modifying this stand, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told a group of students in Jerusalem: "Israel will take steps in Lebanon only if there is agreement in the government that there is a direct threat to Israel's security."

Israeli analysts interpreted this to mean Israel would not move if Syrian troops did not cross the Litani river, a natural boundary about 15 miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese frontier.

Assad's pressure forced Jumblatt to agree to a cease-fire on April 2, when his forces appeared on the way to complete victory over the Christians. The cease-fire has been extended to the end of April to allow time to elect a successor to Franjieh, but sniping, machine-gun fire and mortar and rocket duels continue:

The police reported 51 persons killed Tuesday, the first anniversary of the start of the war, and 95 wounded. In the year of fighting some 15,000 persons have died.

There was more firing through the night, and the police reported 31 more persons killed and 53 wounded.

A Christian radio station claimed that Christian militiamen captured the leftist village of Beit Chabab, in the mountains overlooking Franjieh's headquarters 12 miles north of Beirut. The leftists claimed they still held the village and were firing rockets and light artillery into the Christian enclave below.

U.S., Soviet ships cruise off Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A series of U.S. and Soviet naval moves and countermoves in the eastern Mediterranean has resulted in a buildup of warships off Lebanon.

The Pentagon acknowledges that 10 ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet, including the aircraft carrier Saratoga, are in those waters. U.S. officials refused to discuss Soviet ship movements. But sources report the Russians have sent four surface warships, several submarines, an intelligence-gathering vessel and a number of auxiliary ships into the same area about 400 miles from Lebanon.

The United States has attempted to picture as a normal operation its concentration of naval power within a day's steaming time of the Lebanese coast.

However, the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda has linked the U.S. naval presence with the crisis in Lebanon. On April 8, the newspaper warned against any U.S. military intervention there. The article was signed "Observer," which usually means a highranking Kremlin authority.

The buildup began in late March with the arrival off Lebanon of a seven-ship U.S. naval task group headed by the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal. The group included several amphibious ships carrying a Marine battalion of about 1,700 men.

Pentagon sources said at the time that the ships were in a holding pattern in case they were needed to evacuate more than 1,400 Americans from Lebanon, wracked by a civil war between Moslems and Christians.

Within a few days, the Russians

Remodeling? Better use caution

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - The remodeling contractor appeared to be an honest fellow. He was polite and earnest. Besides, he offered the lowest price.

Ronald Uharriet, a school teacher, trusted his home and nearly $20,000 to the man for a major remodeling pro-

"He had 'Jesus Saves' signs plastered all over his truck and the sidwalk leading to his house had painted footsteps saying 'Jesus is the Way,' "Uharriet recalled later. "I figured anyone that religious wouldn't try to take me." Today Uharriet is sorting through the debris of shoddy workmanship, unfinished work and financial losses which will more than double his advance payments to the contractor he

It will come as little consolation to the homeowner to know he is not alone. He is but one of hundreds of Californians who have set out to have. their homes remodeled and ended up being victimized.

"Of course, the problem is that one bad contractor can inflict a lot of damage on consumers," said Samuel Bender, Central Regions Deputy for the Contractor's State License Board

For his money, Uharriet got a new roof which leaked and ruined his kitchen ceiling, a newly tiled upstairs shower stall which leaked into the electrical work between floors, stucco and paint which must be replaced and doors and windows which were never installed in the holes created for

But most of the holes were created in Uharriet's pocketbook. Within days after the contractor abandoned the project, Uharriet's mail was filled with lien notices from suppliers, plumbers and electricians who had not been paid by the contractor. Under California's lien law, the homeowner is responsible for all debts a contractor incurs in connection with his project. A district attorney's investigator looking into the case called such use of the lien law "legalized thievery." Before the project is completed Uharriet may have to pay as much as $6,000 in liens — for work he has

"This whole thing has cost me more than money, Uharriet said. "You'll understand if I'm a bit bitter."

Abandoned excavations, plywood patches on unfinished room additions, bare frames waiting for builders who will never return and houses ravaged by shoddy work are scattered throughout California. One investigator called them "monuments to homeowner ripoffs." State license board officials have no statewide figures on losses in such cases, but they estimate consumers were able to avoid $4.7 million loses in the last fiscal year, thanks to state investigators.

The losses were averted through intervention by deputies of the board who forced contractors to correct faulty workmanship or to complete work on abandoned projects. Last year's savings represent nearly a 100 per cent increase over a three-year period. Over the same three-year period, more than 1,000 contractor licenses were either suspended or revoked. Investigations of complaints against 451 additional licensees were pending going into the current fiscal year. A homeowner in search of the ultimate protection will have trouble finding it. Many who have been victimized thought they were taking every precaution.

Some followed the advice of attorneys, some insisted on trust accounts, some paid only as work was completed and some put their money in escrow voucher accounts.

Training Act. The act was passed by Congress in an effort to get unemployed persons on city payrolls.

A dispute has arisen over how much for instructional services of the federal money can be used by cities, not to hire unemployed city residents, but to place laid-off municipal workers back on the city payroll. The issue has already led to a court fight with the city of Detroit and eould precipitate a fight with Congress.

Labor Secretary W. J. Usery Jr. said Tuesday the new rules issued by the department are intended to strike a balance between hiring furloughed municipal employes and providing jobs for the chronic unemployed. The program was designed originally to help the chronic unemployed. Detroit and a number of other cities, hard-pressed by the recession, began using CETA funds last year to rehire laidoff city workers. And for a time, the Labor Department went along with this.

But the department took a tougher stand last autumn and limited the

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Khieu Samphan, one of the two Communists believed to be the dominant men in the Cambodian government, was named chief of state today, Radio Phnom Penh announced. the broadcast said, and his wife, Ieng Thirith, was reappointed minister of social action. One specialist on Cambodia concluded that Khieu Samphan, 45, who was named chairman of the state presidium, will be "the most important man in Cambodia." But observers were mystified by the

Background tip given on Bargello

Last week, I talked about a whole new world of needlepoint-doing simple, vertical or horizontal straight stitches through the canvas holes and creating a tapestry-like effect that was once reserved for rare, old museum tapestries!

The tapestries of centuries ago were woven on upright looms, with the weaver sitting at the back so that the working threads could be left hanging. The weaver would watch the progress in a mirror, as he or she referred to the painted 'cartoon' beside them. Hardly appropriate in today's "portable" world, is it? Can you imagine hauling a 6-foot loom and mirror onto the bus for some casual stitching to and from

He can dye plaid Easter egg

By JOHN SINOR Copley News Service

The story is that a poor woman in Germany dyed some eggs for her children as an Easter gift and hid them in a nest. Just as the children discovered the nest, a big rabbit leaped away.

Thus a legend was started. The Easter bunny is still very important around here. The youngest child has not yet decided she is old enough to tell us he isn't real.

However, we help him out. Tomorrow we dye the eggs. I am an expert at this and over the years I have finally learned how to dye an egg

On Easter morning a lot of people go around cracking their eggs on other people's heads. I don't know where that custom comes from. The Stone Age, probably.

Anyway, there is sure to be at least one egg that is dyed but is not hardboiled. When that egg is cracked on somebody's head - well, we think we are an awfully funny bunch.

Easter brings an end to Lent. This means some people around here can go back to eating ice cream. Some can go back to cookies. And one can go back to red cream soda.

That red cream soda was a real sacrifice, and if he hadn't had black cherry soda to fall back on, he might never have made it.

I did not actually give up anything during Lent. However, with the help of the government, I cut down on several things.

Things like food, gasoline, clothing, etc. And it looks like Lent is going to last all year long and well into the

THINKING" with ODOM

PHILIPPIANS 4:8

An eminent English editor once said, 'Opinion is free, but facts are sacred. Yet many people revere their feelings but often times reject the facts. May I hasten to add to this that feelings change but facts do not

Some people are impressed by some facts while unimpressed by other facts. Did you know that the average 7-inch-long pencil can draw a line 35 miles long; it can write an average of 45,000 words; and it can take an average of 17 sharpenings? Now, I don't-know why anyone would be that interested in the workings of a pencil, but apparently someone was. So you see, nearly everyone conerns themseleves with some kind of facts of one sort or another. To be sure most men are concerned with the mundane affairs of life, even the facts about a pencil. But what about the soul? life, even the facts about a pencil. But what about the soul? How concerned are we about life here that will affect our life beyond this veil of tears?

Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." (Mt. 11:28-30) He has set forth in a perceivable manner just how men are to come to Him. He declared, 'Take my voke upon you and learn of me." The word "yoke" (ZUGOS in the Greek) means, "a yoke, serving to couple two things together, and is used metaphorically of submission to authority." [W. K. Vine, Pg. 246) Hence we may rightly conclude that men mist submit to the authority of Christ before they can come to Him for salvation. (Mt. 18:18) It must also be admitted that when one submits to His authority one must be willing to DO whatever Christ REQUIRES. Some folks call this "law keeping," or "legalism" but the FACT remains, that sinful man, before he can be saved, must SUBMIT to Jesus Christ. For the reason the apostle Paul said the "gospel is the power of God to save." (R.1:16) But how is the gospel his power to save? Obviously the Bible is not tacit on this point, for we are told that one "purifies his soul in obedience to the truth." (1 Pe. 1:22) Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are the truth." (1 Pe. 1:22)

Reader friend, here are the FACTS about salvation from sin. Are you more concerned about them than you would be in the facts about a pencil? I ask you today, why won't you bend your stubborn will and plumb your life with His Word before it become too late to walk in the heavenly light? THINK ABOUT IT!

Tower's sound advice

The Reporter-Telegram agrees with Sen. John Tower (R-Tex) that Congress would be making a dangerous mistake if it creates a permanent Senate committee to oversee the activities of U.S. intelligence agencies.

This is one of the most hazardous measures before the Senate today, and every effort should be made to sidetrack the proposed legislation.

Sen. Tower, who is well informed on the subject, told the Senate Rules Committee that creation of a permanent committee on intellegence activities would not be the best way to prevent abuses of CIA and FBI, but rather would substantially increase the danger of security "To keep our enemies from penetrating our national defense," Tower said, "we must necessarily restrict the number of Americans—and that includes senators-having full knowledge of intelligence operations.

"The principle underlying limited access is, and always has been, quite simple. As the number of people having access to knowledge increases, the greater the risk of disclosure of consequent damage to the nation."

There is nothing strange about this. It holds true in Midland or anywhere else, just as it does in Washington. It is like telling a committee of three or 30 persons in the Tall City not to say anything recommend repeal of a law about a certain matter "outside of this room." Within an hour or so after the meeting, the secret will be fairly well known over the community

How much more important, heed Tower's sound advice

then, to assure the secrecy of matters affecting the nation's security.

Tower's comments were made while testifying against a bill favored by the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence Activities. favored by that panel's majority to create a permanent committee on intelligence.

He said that if such a committee were given exclusive access to classified material, committees like Armed Services and Judiciary which need access to CIA and FBI material would not be able to do their jobs properly.

"Intelligence should continue to be viewed as integrally related to the other questions within the general jurisdiction of the present standing committees on Foreign Relations, Judiciary, and Armed Services - rather than exist in the spotlight where intelligence has lived for the last several months" Tower said.

He pointed out further that if a permanent intelligence committee were to have access to classified material in addition to the jurisdictional committees, there would be needless duplication and danger of leaks.

Investigative committees of both the House and Senate have done enough damage already to the essential intelligence of the nation without this.

Tower went even further in urging the Rules Committee to. enacted in 1974 which requires the President to report intelligence activities to numerous committees of the House and Senate.

AMERICANA:

Before government got big, as it were

By SAM STEWART Copley News Service

Grover Cleveland was elected three times as president of the United States, and served two terms. That seeming contradiction is cited - anyway, at least every four years as one of the reasons why the Electoral College system of electing presidents is no good, because while Cleveland led the popular vote three times, he moved into the White House only twice. In 1884, Cleveland defeated James G. Blaine with a popular plurality of 62,683. In 1888 he got 95,713 more votes than Benjamin Harrison did, but Harrison got them in the right places and won it in the Electoral College,

But Cleveland bounced back, and beat Harrison in 1892, with a satisfying lead of 363,312 votes.

While historians in the main speak respectfully of Cleveland, his birthday (March 18) has never won redink or holiday recognition.

Cleveland was a Democrat, but he would never be so labeled in 1976, 139 years after he was born and 91 years after his first inauguration. Party philosophies have changed that much.

They had a depression in his last administration, only they called them panics in those days, and Cleveland held firm in his contention that it was none of the government's business. even when Coxey's army marched on Washington demanding federal

Said Cleveland, in words which might well be studied today by primary-minded Democrats and Republicans alike: .

The lessons of paternalism ought to be unlearned and the better lesson taught that while people should patriotically and cheerfully support their government, its functions do not include the support of the people.' Can you imagine a politician taking that sort of stand at this point in the 20th Century? And Cleveland spake another mouthful, on another occasion, which someone might well shout from the housetops today: When more of the people's sustenance is exacted through taxation than is necessary to meet the just obligations of government and expenses of its economical administration, such exaction becomes ruthless extortion and a violation of the principles of a free government.'

The quotation most often attributed to Cleveland — that "a public office is a public trust" — probably was not spoken by him in just those words, but is very probably a paraphrase of his utterance in his first inaugural, when "Your every voter, as surely as your chief magistrate, exercises a public trust

Cleveland's career was a living application of that principle of the public trust, and if he had sprung from humble beginnings he might have won greater acclaim for his accomplishments. He was a minister's son and a Yale man, neither an absolute guarantee of greatness. Yet successively he was assistant district attorney, district attorney, sheriff of Erie County, N.Y., mayor of Buffalo, governor of New York, and eventually, president of the United States.

And on his way to the presidency. his every campaign was against entrenched corruption. And the record indicates a pretty good batting average on his campaign promises.

Tammany Hall ran the Democratic Party in those days, and Cleveland whipped Tammany within his own party in winning both gubernatorial and presidential nominations.

It may be that Grover Cleveland did not achieve greatness in the grandiose sense but he left a priceless heritage in his conception of government - that public officers are the servants and agents of the people, not Military rule is now the general rule in Latin America.

Only half a dozen Latin nations can boast of civilian-dominated governments, since the removal of Maria Estela Peron from the Argentine presidency.

Americans have welcomed a military takeover of the government. The coup that ended Mrs. Peron's 21 months as Argentian's and the world's first woman president prompted no widespread protests, either at home in Argentina or abroad. Even the Peronists, the Argentine masses who for many years so faithfully followed her late husband, Gen. Juan Domingo Peron could not control the myriad factions into which the Peronist movement splintered after his death. What happened in Argentina, though was the reverse of what transpired in most of the other South American countries where the military runs the government

In Argentina, just three years ago, Gen. Alejandro Lanusse, then the man in charge, permitted the first completely free elections in 18 years, since Peron's ouster in 1955. As Lanusse expected, the Peronists won easily. But what might not have been expected was that neither Hector Campora, the dentist Peron had picked as his stand-in, nor Peron himself was able to get a firm grip on the reins of government.

Peron had just turned 78 when he was inaugurated for the last time and his health was failing. His wife, who had been elected vice president with him, was willing and tenacious but lacked his charisma and political experience. She never received the sound advice and disinterested support that she, or any other president, needed. Argentina suffered

When the near-chaos became obvious even to the man or woman in the streets, who more likely than not was a faithful Peronist, the armed forces quietly put Mrs. Peron on an air force jet and sent her out of the city of

In Brazil, Peru and Chile, though, the situations were reversed. There the presidents were strong-willed individuals, with considerable charisma and a lifetime of political experience. However, in 1964, when Brazilian

President Joao Goulart seemed to be taking his vast homeland too far and too quickly to the left and corruption was widespread, the nation's armed forces deposed him. Many Brazilians felt the country had been saved from the threat of communism. Goulart has made his home in exile in neighboring Uruguay where, reportedly, he is one of that nation's richer property owners. The military, meanwhile, has dedicated itself to working "the Brazilian miracle," to the economic development of the nation at a rate that is, the envy of the rest of the developing world, and to the eradication of corruption in Brazil. In 1968, Peruvian President Fernando Belaunde Terry, a dynamic former professor of architecture in Texas, displeased the left-leaning armed forces, which had arranged his election in 1963, and he was deposed. Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado, the

When he refused and, with the help of some of his followers, sought to fight off the military units sent to arrest him, the army opened fire on La Moneda, the presidential palace, and air force Hawker Hunter jets bombed it. Allende committed suicide rather than submit to capture

That coup, too, met with initial opular approval in Chile. But from Moscow and Havana, in the beginning, and now also Washington and London, the Chilean military government is being harassed in its efforts to rebuild the Chilean economy and to eliminate the Marxist underground.

Of all the military coups in relatively recent years in Latin America that which brought Gen. Omar Torrijos to power in Panama probably is the one that has had most impact on the United States. Because the National Guard had ousted Dr. Arnulfo Arias, probably still Panama's most popular political figure, only 11 days after Arias' inauguration, Torrijos needed a patriotic theme to attract popular support for his government, and he found it in the issue of U.S. control of the Panama Canal and the Canal conservative Republican critics in Zone. Ford's all-out support of Kissinger is questioned

Novak

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - President Ford's claim that his Wisconsin primary victory over Ronald Reagan "fully justified my faith in Henry Kissinger' has now been refuted by a highly professional private poll for a Democratic Congressman in a Midwest farm district that precisely parallels agricultural Wisconsin.

The scientific sample, tapping sentiment of 408 voters of both parties in mid-March, showed the Secretary of State with a hefty 42 per cent "negative" rating, contrasted to the President's 31 per cent negative. Both Kissinger and Mr. Ford had virtually the same "positive" rating: just under 30 per cent, with the balance 'neutral. Congressional Democrats privy to this poll say it reflects latent concern about Kissinger which has not yet shown up in national polls. The last Harris poll gave Kissinger a 58 per cent positive rating - below the spectacular readings he used to get but still respectable

What is significant about the Democratic poll is that it was not limited to conservative Republicans, the fiercest Kissinger critics, but included all voters. Thus, the poll may strengthen anti-Kissinger operatives within Mr. Ford's political high command who question the President's all-out support of the Secretary. Presidential aides who feel Kissinger is a political liability were dismayed when the President cited his relatively narrow Wisconsin primary win over Reagan as proving Kissinger's rectitude.

But one top-level Ford aide believes that, despite the new evidence showing that Kissinger's political liability goes far beyond the Republican right, nothing will change.

"Like it or not;" he told us, "there's no finessing that problem now. HHH'S EARLIER START

Close associates are pressing Sen Hubert Humphrey to jump into the Democratic presidential race in late April - about six weeks earlier than originally intended but late enough to avoid all primary elections.

Humphrey long ago decided he would not again undergo the primary election ordeal. In conversations with intimates, however, he frequently has suggested he might become a candidate on June 9 - the day after the last three primaries (California, New Jersey, Ohio) - if the nomination was still open.

But advisers are now telling Humphrey June 9 is much too late. Their target is April 30, three days after the Pennsylvania primary. That would be one day too late for Humphrey to enter any major primaries but soon enough perhaps to prevent a fait accompli at Madison Square TRICKY JIM? Sixteen "uncommitted" delegates elected from Erie County (Buffalo) in the New York Democratic primary are in no mood to ride Jimmy Carter's bandwagon, thanks to, backstage double-dealing which scarcely comports with Carter's public image of truth and love.

Carter visited Erie County leader Joe Crangle, who was running slates of nominally uncommitted (but actually pro-Hubert Humphrey) delgates in Buffalo March 26. Carter was cozy and friendly with Crangle, the former state party chairman and one of New York's most influential Democratic figures. In fact, Carter asked, could Crangle take off to travel the entire country in his behalf?

'political boss' to campaign for him? Slight, soft-spoken and as low-key as Carter himself, Crangle made no public outburst but noted the incidentcarefully. Those Crangle delegates could be a long time coming to Carter at Madison Square Garden

Pleading the press of other duties, Crangle declined. But later that very day he was stunned when Carter denounced "New York's political bosses" - presumably including Joe Crangle. Crangle asked his colleagues, why would Carter want a party operative stigmatized as a

Doctor says Hughes pitted with bedsores

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) - On the day he died, Howard Hughes weighed only about 80 pounds, his hair and beard were long and stringy, and his body was pitted with bedsores, a Mexican doctor who attended him reports. Hughes was unconscious, dehydrated, had a head infection and was suffering from kidney failure, Dr. Victor Manuel Montemayor Martinez said in a signed declaration given to the Mexican attorney general's office.

dead when the plane landed. Federal Judge Antonio Uribe Garcia made Montemayor's statement available to newsmen Tuesday along with those from others questioned during a police investigation into Hughes' death.

Montemayor's declaration said: He was called to the 20th-floor penthouse about 5 a.m. April 5 and found Hughes "half naked with only bed-ordinance has been apstreets covering his body, ... very proved by the City pale with his right eye open, the left Council which allows not so much but about half open, breathing in pants, slowly, in a state of complete unconscioueness."

His eyes showed little reaction to light, and his neck and face twitched. Hughes' hair was long, thin and gray, his beard stringy and dark chestnut in color. There were numerous bedsores on the body.

Aides said an open sore on the left side of Hughes' head was the result of a benign tumor that had been aggravated by a blow received in a fall. One of Hughes' aides told the court he suffered the fall in the Bahamas before he came to Acapulco Feb. 10.

Montemayor said Eric Iverson Bundy of Hughes' staff appeared to be in porary rates of 15.5 per charge, and there were also two cent and 16.5 per cent, American doctors and a bodyguard in respectively, permitted the room. Nevada moves to deal with growing rape problem

By BRENDAN RILEY

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) - The move to change public attitudes and laws on rape, launched in the nation's urban centers, has extended to Nevada, where rapes occur at a rate far above the national average.

The fight to curb rape in this tourism-oriented state has been led mainly by underfinanced and widely scattered volunteer groups.

But leaders of the movement say the combination of innovative rape counseling techniques by volunteer groups and sweeping changes in state law dealing with rape are producing positive results.

FBI statistics show an eight per cent increase in reported rapes or rape attempts in Las Vegas, Nevada's largest city, in 1975. That compares to an average national increase of just

That looks bad, but the figures indicate victims who were unwilling to report rapes before are now beginning to realize they'll get help instead of hassles, the movement leaders say.

Florence McClure, a 54-year-old grandmother who runs "Community Action Against Rape" in Las Vegas, says, "There have always been a lot of rapes, but they went unreported. Victims didn't think they would get a fair shake from anyone. But the word they used to be.' Mrs. McClure works mainly in Las Vegas, a gambling mecca which draws millions of tourists yearly. The area has been ranked third mationally in incidence of rape on a per capita

We attract our share of weirdos along with the tourists who come here to gamble," says Mrs. McClure. "We have a unique problem.

That problem has produced programs which are apparently among the most advanced in the nation. The Nevada rape centers, all run on shoestring budgets by volunteers, provide immediate counseling for rape victims, along with help in dealing with police, hospitals, court appearances and families. In some needs," says Mrs. McClure. "We can cases self defense programs are of-

French Bicentennial band bids to change De Gaulle's image

By JIM HOAGLAND The Washington Post

PARIS - Of all the foreign visitors coming to the United States to help celebrate the Bicentennial year, a small but dedicated band of French politicians may have set themselves the most difficult task: to convince the U.S. that Charles De Gaulle really liked Americans.

'De Gaulle was not anti-American," Yves Guena, a Gaullist ex-minister and leader of the six-man delegation, asserted.

Guena admitted that this view and the title of a talk the Gaullists will give on "Gaullism and French-American friendship" may surprise Americans who recall the French leader's withdrawal from NATO, the swift closing of American bases here and his stinging attacks on American foreign and monetary policies in the

"It is always a good thing to sur-prise people. And we should correct the mistaken view," Americans have of the late French president, Guena

"Besides," he added, indicating that there was more than historical revisionism at stake in the visit, "We don't know what view De Gaulle would have taken of American policies today in view of the Soviet Union's thrust in the world now."

Guena will be traveling to the United States as the representative of Jacques Chirac, the honorary secretary general and effective head of the Gaullist Party. Chirac is also France's prime minister, but Guena emphasized that his visit would be a political rather than an official one." He will meet with Demogratic and Republican party leaders and Ford administration officials during his stopovers in Washington and New York beginning Monday. Like President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who arrives in the U.S. on May 17, the group also will visit Louisiana to emphasize the linguistic and cultural heritage of that one-time French territory. "But we won't call for a single 'la Louisiane libre ensingle," Jacques Godfrain, another member of the group, promised with a smile. General De Gaulle touched off an international furore in 1967 by shouting "vive le Quebec Libre" (Long Live Free Quebec) in that Canadian city at a time of French separatist agitation. Guena, who served as transport minister under De Gaulle and who is a member of France's National Assembly, indicated that his talks with Republican and Democratic politicians would center on the Gaullist concern about the increasing strenght of Communist parties in Western Europe. Gaullist sources also noted that there are 800,000 French citizens overseas who now can vote in national elections and indicated that the bicentennial visit would be the first step in a campaign to woo overseas voters into the Gaullist camp.

"Giscard's margin of victory in the 1974 presidential race was less than 800,000 votes," one Gaullist politician said, noting that current public opi nion polls suggest that the margin has been cut even thinner. "I think you will see a lot more interest in our overseas citizens in the future.

Bunny business growing rapidly

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Rabbits are still multiplying like rabbits these days, and growing up to become, more often than not, food for

To many people, the word rabbit conjures up visions of bunnies and Easter. But to others, rabbits mean sales for food, fur and laboratory use. To these people, rabbits are livestock. The rabbit business is still relative-

Coyotes stalk pets

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Coyotes in search of food for their litters are stalking pets in this South Central Texas city, Byrl Bierschwale, district supervisor of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department, says.

"When they are feeding the pups, they will kill the animals," said Bierschwale, referring to domesticated animals and pets. Quite often at other times of the year, they'll kill animals just for the fun of it.

Government hunter Alvin Becker said the coyotes are moving inside the city limits to rummage through garbage cans and look for pets as

He said coyote complaints have been steadily increasing for the past three years, corresponding to a ban on certain poisons such as strychnine.

ly small, but interest in the animal as a commercial proposition is growing steadily. The American Rabbit Breeders Association, Inc., founded 52 years ago, has 20,000 members, upfrom 8,000 five years ago.

Bob Bennett, former publicity director of the association and author of a book on rabbits, estimated that there are 200,000 breeders in the nation, ranging from commercial farmers producing thousands of animals to individuals who keep a few rabbits in the backyard.

Bennett said almost 35 million pounds of rabbit meat representing about 8.5 million animals are sold annually, with wholesale prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.25 a pound, depending on whether the animal is live or dressed. The fur used in coats and as trimming on a wide variety of items is a byproduct of these rabbits. So are such novelties as the "lucky" rabbit's Rabbit still lags far behind more conventional meats in popularity, however. The amount of rabbit meat sold every year in this country is only about one-thousandth of one per cent of the total U.S. meat production.

Rabbit has long been a popular food in Europe and South America; the average Italian ate over five pounds of rabbit in 1973. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says rabbit meat has more protein and less calories than any beef, pork, poultry or lamb. Why, then, don't Americans eat more rabbit meat?

The problem, according to Bennett, is partly in the name. People think of rabbits as pets and repulsive to many. "Other meat animals get less sympathy," Bennett said, "partly because they are not as appealing while alive and partly because their promoters have contrived a pseudonym for their carcasses: beef, pork, mutton.

Many people don't know what rabbit meat tastes like. Even the experts can't agree, saying it does - or doesn't - taste like chicken.

Not even the U.S. Department of Agriculture knows for sure how many rabbits there are in the country, mainly because, unlike beef, rabbit meat does not have to be inspected before it is sold.

Bennett estimated that about 12 million of the long-eared animals are raised in the United States every

Within a few days, Searle said, the child gets bored with the rabbit, the parents don't want to bother with it and the animal is turned over to the local humane society and destroyed.

If you're serious about wanting a rabbit and you have the space and time, there's one other thing to remember, especially if you purchase more than one: it's true what they say about rabbits.

"Rabbits are rabbits," said Ben-nett. "They mate like rabbits."

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Traffic accidents tend to become a "problem of public health" in Romania, press reports here say, despite the fact that only about 10 in 1,000 people of Romania's 21.4 million population own a car.

> WASHINGTON - Presidential candidate Jimmy Carter has staked out a distinctly more conservative position on economic issues than the stance taken by his current main opponents for the Democratic nomination Sen. Henry M. Jackson and Rep. Morris

The Washington Post

Carter conservative

The differences are subtle, because each has pledged to follow the traditional Democratic strategy of fighting for greater employment, now, and to worry, if need be, about controlling inflation later. The main economic issues, they each say in almost identical language, are more jobs and faster economic growth. Carter diverges from Jackson and Udall in three main areas: he would push for growth primarily through the private sector, he would be more cautious on federal government spending and he would preserve rather than attack the and banking. 'independence" of the Federal Reserve system.

ASKED TO DIFFERENTIATE his economic views form Udall's and Jackson's, Carter answered: 'The difference is my commitment to the free enterprise system. I'm a businessman and an engineer, and I believe in scientific principles. I think that's alien to the experience of Jackson and Udall. I would opt for equality of the state and local governments (with the federal government), and would go with the private sector where I could before Tuesday's New York and Wisconsin primaries, Udall offered this general observation:

'I'd say, by God, while the private sector is to be preferred, the overriding importance to society is to create jobs. If we (government) must create them, then we'll create them." And if this results in inflation, Udall says, "so be it - we'll deal with inflation

Jackson said: "Jobs are central to everything that needs to be done. The President must be the economic as well as the political leader of the country. It's an interventionist role."

Initially, Jackson and Udall could be distinguished from Carter by their total and vigorous commitment we lost because of economic slack. to the Humphrey-Hawkins "full employment" bill now before Congress which establishes the legal right of every adult to a job and sets as the "full employment" target a 3 per cent unemployment rate for adult (not defined) within four years.

As for Carter, Udall said, "He seems to be saying that inflation takes priority, and you should deal with it indirectly by high interest rates, a restrictive budget and no programs for people.

DESPITE THIS CRITICISM, it is hard to find anything in Carter's public statements that gives inflation a priority over combating unemployment. He has said that he doesn't regard the economy as the central political issue of the campaign (which is different from the Udall-Jackson view), but affirmed in an interview last week that his "major domestic thrust would be to reduce the unemployment rate."

The problem, he said, "is to see how far down the unemployment rate can be pushed without causing an effect on inflation." His belief is that the present 7.5 per cent jobless rate can be squeezed down to 4 to 4.5 per cent before various ways of putting a lid on prices would have to be considered.

'I've always favored." said Carter, "in highly concentrated jobless areas (use of) federal jobs as a last resort, something like the CCC," or Civilian Conservation Corps. In such jobs, he would "maintain" the minimum wage.

JACKSON HAS TRIED to make jobs his special economic issue, insisting that "we've never had full employment and price stability because we've never had the right presidential leadership.

"I wouldn't hesitate to intrude directly to deal with all issues relating to wage and price stability, although I am aware of the political problems," he

To induce the increased amount of investment needed to create jobs and reduce inflation, Jackson said in an interview, something "more innovative" than tax write-offs for industry is needed. He mentioned joint government-industry ventures, especially in the field of energy, government guaranteed loans or government construction of prototypes in "high-risk areas," and accelerated public works pro-

Jackson said that if he were now President, he would "err" on the side of economic stimulation at this point, "because there are reasons to believe the recovery is not so healthy as some profess."

THIS IS HOW the three leading Democratic presidential candidates view other main economic

Jackson and Udall feel that the Federal Reserve Board, which controls the nation's money policy, has grown too powerful, and that its influence should be cut back through congressional surveillance and other reforms. Carter said he would like to "maintain the relative independence of the Fed," noting that the President and Congress have enough existing ways of influencing the central bank. 'They (the Fed) brought us to the Brink in 1974 of the most serious financial crisis since the Great Depression," Jackson charged. "Can we continue to delegate such awesome authority to a board?" Udall, who said that Fed Chairman Arthur F. Burns is "decent, but very conservative," will "occasionally cooperate with a Ford or a Nixon, but would he cooperate with me?" Udall would cut the Federal Reserve governors' terms from 14 to 2 years, and subject the Fed to "some kind of an

WAGE AND PRICE CONTROLS

Carter and Udall favor standby wage and price controls, although Carter says, "I don't feel I'm ever likely to impose controls." Asked how effective a bargaining lever he would then have, Carter responded: "I wouldn't commit myself not to use them."

An Analysis

Udall said, "I'd start first with more powers for the Cost of Living Council, then apply vigorous jawboning. I'd point a finger and shout, and if need be, go to controls, but concentrate on selective controls as (John Kenneth) Galbraith recommends." Galbraith argues for controls on selected "administered" industries, those that are said to be able to control prices without regard to competition. Jackson said he wouldn't hesitate to go all the way to wage and price controls, "although I'm aware of the political problems." He said he would let Con-gress terminate controls "by a single majority vote." But he stressed that controls can be avoided by an "activist" President who would "meet at least once a month with representatives of business, labor.

GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Carter attacks the "bloated" bureaucracy in Washington, and says as President he would take a 'conservative" position on federal spending. He declined, however, to say what the federal budget ought to add up to for fiscal 1977, or to choose between President Ford's $396 billion budget and the proposals of the budget committees of Congress, which run $16 billion to $17 billion higher.

Udall said he thinks the congressional committees relying on the public sector." In Philadelphia after are about "on the right track" but insisted "we can do a lot of social things if we cut defense costs." He ridiculed Jackson's demand for boosting defense spending as a discredited "guns and butter" theory. Carter wants to trim Pentagon waste but accelerate naval spending. His aides say that it must be recognized that in the long run the defense budget must increase or else it will be eroded by higher costs, including those for the volunteer Army. Jackson rejected Udall's critique, saying that defense expenditures are the lowest percentage of the total budget in 25 or 30 years and that there is plenty of room for an increase if the nation gets to full employment, "recovering the $100 billion a year

Udall advocates jobs to cure most of nation's ills

By DON McLEOD AP Political Writer

Morris Udall looked straight at his audience at the Milwaukee Police Training Center and declared: "The best way we can reduce crime in Milwaukee and in the nation is to give people jobs.

"People who have jobs are not the muggers, burglars and hold-up men who are causing the national crime statistics to rise," Udall said.

IT WAS JUST one of countless speeches the Arizona congressman has made in his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination, but it provides some important clues to his campaign.

It wasn't the most popular line a politician could take with a police audience: telling them that conditions in society lead to crime and the best way to fight crime is to fight its causes.

But Udall also leaned hard on the need for law and order, a point he made just as strongly in Harlem a few

AND HE TOLD both the New York ghetto and the Midwestern police department that there are no easy answers. "The mayors and the police commissioners have the responsibility to fight crime," Udall said. "But I can assist from Washington. Udall had been just as frank in talking about the future of Israel in a suburban New York synagogue: "No one has the solution. The best thing we can do is to hunker down and just live ANOTHER CLUE to Mo Udall in the Milwaukee speech is the way he brought a complex and controversial issue around to his main theme unemployment.

"J-O-B-S. It's the centerpiece of the Morris Udall campaign," said Tom Kiley, Udall's national campaign

'The issue before the voters is iobs," Udall told a labor convention in Green Bay, Wis.

"This is the Pentagon scoop shot," he said as he sailed the ball toward the goal. "You give it all you've got." Later he commented, "This is the detente dribble. It only goes one way."

His criticism on another occasion was bipartisan. "If President Ford and Jimmy Carter become the candidates in the fall and abortion is an issue, all sides will be represented,' he says. "There will be Ford in the middle and Carter on both sides.'

CARTER WAS CRITICIZED after the Iowa precinct caucuses for allegedly misleading supporters on abortion. He said later he thought abortion was wrong, but did not favor passage of a constitutional amendment to prohibit it. Ford favors giving each state the power to adopt its own regulations through legislation or public vote.)

The strongest Udall outburst in quite a while came in New York as he described former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter's position on the jobs bill. 'Fudge, fudge, fudge," he shouted. But the bottom line is always jobs.

WHEN HE'S ATTACKING Jackson on defense spending, it comes down to

'We don't need B-1 bombers and Trident submarines," he said in Neenah, Wis. "We need more jobs." "Defense spending sprees - as suggested by some in this presidential contest - actually cost jobs," he said in Stevens Point. (Jackson has urged increasing the size of the Navy from 477 ships to over 600. He says he is opposed to the B-1 bomber program and would cut it from the defense budget.)

ENVIRONMENTAL protection, Udall contends, is good for the unemployed. "Here in Stevens Point," he said, "environmental efforts have created jobs."

"I stand with Mayor Anthony Dufek of Manitowoc in urging all possible assistance to preserve Lake Michigan rail ferry service," Udall said. "It means the savings of jobs that would be lost.'

Udall supports a bill in Congress sponsored by Sen. Hubert H. Humohrey, D-Minn., and Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., which proposes to create five million jobs and bring the unemployment rate down to about 3 per cent in 18 months.

EVERYWHERE HE GOES, Udall makes a pitch for this bill as the answer to the jobs problem, which he pictures as the central problem of the economy

"People in America want to work," he says at every stop, "The sun came up this morning and America went to work today. But eight million of them wanted to go to work and there wasn't any work. "The first order of business on Jan. 20 (presidential inauguration day) is going to be to put America to

Then he goes into the suburbs and says the same thing. "And I said it in George Wallace's Alabama," reminds crowds in upstate New York and agricultural mid-state Wisconsin. 'If New York falls, Rochester might be next, or Milwaukee or Phoenix.", UDALL ALSO TALKS about foreign policy, saying he agrees with efforts toward detente with the Soviet bloc but, like other administration critics, arguing that the United States isn't getting enough in the bargaining.

The possibility has been with us for many years that

The virus which caused the 1918 pandemic was par-can we predict how severe might be its effects. But we do know that after a half-century's absence the virus is again present and active in the population. It has been isolated at Ft. Dix, N.J. and in other communities. Because of its long absence from the scene, most Americans have no protection against it

BUT WHETHER OR NOT the virus will reappear in full force in the fall of 1976 is not the most important question to me. What people want to know is whether this huge, nearly unprecedented public health program is justified. I think it is. It is an opportunity for once to close the barn door before the horse is stolen. The proposed mass immunization program would prevent the so-called swine virus from taking hold and in addition would protect the population for several years.

Flu vaccine has been used successfully for 33 years, but we have never really taken advantage of it as an instrument of preventive medicine. If ever we are to lighten the economic burden of illness and reduce the tragedy and waste of death at all ages, we are going to do so by practicing both preventive medicine and health care. The physicians of ancient China were paid as long as the patient remained well; they were not paid when the patient became ill.

As part of his economic program, Udall hits strongly at the large corporations which he accuses of controlling the economy through competition-killing monopoly.

"WE'RE GOING TO break 'em he told an election eve rally in Milwaukee. "And the big oil companies, too. What we need is some good old American competition.'

Udall continues to struggle with an identity problem despite months of campaigning. One of his aides was sitting in the lobby of a New York hotel when someone noticed the campaign entourage passing through and asked what all the commotion was about.

"I'm with Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona," said the aide. And he explained still further: "He's running for president."

Our Sheriff Knows His Duty ... And He does It!

Through the years of Midland's fantastic growth and boom, Sheriff Ed Darnell has stood solidly and firmly against those forces which would bring dishonor to this community. Other West Texas counties have been plagued with lawlessness fostered by elements of organized crime . . . but those forces have learned to steer a wide path around Midland County and our unyielding, no-nonsense Sheriff. That's one big reason why Ed Darnell is the best Sheriff in Texas!

Re-Elect SHERIFF Democratic Primary, May 1st

By relying upon prevention rather than depending upon cure, the President and Congress are guarding our physical health as well as our economic health. SOME CRITICS of the immunization program point out that antibiotics have been developed since the devastating pandemic of 1918. True - but there are no antibiotics against influenza which is caused by a virus. We can treat secondary bacterial pneumonia, but not the pneumonia which frequently stems from the original virus. The point that critics miss is that even though antibiotics exist and often are helpful, people die of influenza - at least a hundred thousand in the dozen or so epidemics which have occurred in the United States in the past 18 years. Antibiotics did not prevent these deaths, and modern medicine was able to do little to cut the toll of illness which caused a high rate of absenteeism in schools, factories and offices. It is also argued that an immunization program should be aimed only at the old, the young, and other high-risk groups. It would be well to remember at this point that the 1918 pandemic killed men and women in their prime. The recruit at Ft. Dix, whose death was caused by influenza virus pneumonia and from whose lungs the swine-type virus was isolated, OTHER QUESTIONS have been raised about the flu vaccine itself. This is absurd. We have been using flu vaccines for more than 30 years and side effects. other than the occasional sore arm, are very rare. The vaccine should not be given to people who develop asthma or hives when exposed to eggs; other than that, I know of no serious contraindication. Infants and young children also require protection and can be given proportionately smaller doses.

The military has been routinely using flu vaccine with great effectiveness against the viruses which caused epidemics in the winter just past. The identification of swine-type virus at Ft. Dix is another indication that vaccines currently being used do not protect againsat it.

ARE WE SURE swine flu is the culprit? One way to find out would be to wait and see. Another way would be to act on the chance that it might occur and take the necessary precautions. This is a disease that can be serious and even fatal. Whether or not it would kill as many as it did in 1918 or "only" as many as in a "normal" epidemic, it seems to me prudent to safeguard our health since we have the means to do

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) - With Jack Nicklaus among the missing and one of the smallest fields of many years on hand, a wide-open race appears in prospect for golf's prestigeladen but controversial $225,000 Tournament of Champions.

NICKLAUS, however, chose not to compete this season-for the first time in many years. He was the defending champion in last week's Masters, is committed to play in next week's New Orleans Open and has a personal rule against playing in three in a row. He cited numerous reasons for his absence, including the fact that the T of C is being played over Easter weekend.

He's going fishing. With his decision not to play, the play over the 6,855-yard, par-72 La Costa Country Club course appears a wide-open affair. Chief among the contenders are the multiple-winners from the last 12 months. They include newly-crowned Masters champion Ray Floyd, defending T of C title-holder Al Geiberger, British Open king Tom Watson, Hale Irwin, Hubert Green, Johnny Miller, Gene Littler, Ben Crenshaw and Roger Maltbie. GREEN, WHO clicked off three in a row just before the Masters, and Irwin each have won four times in the last 12 months. Gieberger and Miller are three-time winners in the eligibility period. Watson, Crenshaw, Floyd, Littler and Maltbie are two-time win-

ANOTHER CHANGE that should stimulate interest occured at San Antonio, where the Texas Rangers replace the Cleveland Indians as the parent club.

Marty Martinez will manage the Rangers' farm which moves to Texas from Pittsfield, Mass., of the Eastern League, to escape the vagaries of New England's spring weather.

In all probability, Sommers will start Ed Putnam, former USC star and a first round draft choice in the secondary phase of the 1974 winter draft, behind the plate with Scott Thompson, a first round draft choice two years ago, at first; veteran Bill Huisman, Midland's MVP two years ago, at second; newly acquired Bob Hrapmann at short, and Mike Umfleet, who batted .298 last season, at third.

In the outfield, it will be Bill Droege, 291 here last year, in left; Earl Chew, .450 in 16 games here last year, in center; Steve Verban in right and Wayne Tyrone, 21 homers, as Designated Hitter.

Hockey teams given warning

By The Associated Press

If the Quebec Nordiques can be persuaded to play their World Hockey Association playoff game in Calgary tonight, the Nordiques and the Cowboys had better be on their best behavior.

Hours before a hearing on Sunday night's brawl between the two teams was to begin in Winnipeg, Attorney-General Jim Foster told the Alberta legislature hockey violence will not be telerated in

CALGARY HOLDS a 2-0 lead over Quebec in their best-of-seven Canadian Division semifinal series. The coaches, general managers and players from the Calgary and Quebec teams were to attend a meeting called today by Ben Hatskin, the WHA's chief executive officer, to look into the brawl. John Dacres, president of the Nordiques, has said his team will forfeit the series unless three conditions Dacree called for a lifetime suspension for the Cowboys' Rick Jodzio, the suspension of Calgary Coach Joe Crozier for the rest of the season and the dismissal of Bud Poile as the league's vice president in charge of hockey operations.

MEANWHILE, Jodzio was ordered to appear in a Quebec court May 10 on a charge of assault causing bodily harm with intent to injure as a result of the incident that set off the brawl that last more than 20 minutes in the first period of Sunday's game. The charge carries a maximum 14 years imprisonment as a result of the incident.

Foster was asked by Walter Buck, Social Credit member for Clover Bar, if he had received any requests for additional police protection at upcoming WHA games in Calgary and Edmonton. "The position I am taking is that no one gains an exemption from the provisions of criminal law simply because he takes a hockey stick into his hands and steps onto an iced surface," he said. There is every possibility of criminal charges be ing laid if conduct on the ice demonstrates a violation of a criminal law. That, I think, should be clear." A report of Sunday's game said Jodzio left the Calgary bench and skated 80 feet before catching Marc Tardif with a two-handed stick attack across

Dealer demands cars from stars

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - A Memphis automobile dealer who supplied luxury cars to Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield during their days as Memphis Grizzlies, wants the cars back.

The 'Big Three' have promised to return the three Cadillacs.

In the confusion surrounding the fall of the World Football League on Oct. 22, 1975, they apparently departed for home with the cars without realizing they were to be returned

Csonka, Kiick and Warfield, as part of their $3.6-million contract with the Grizzlies, were to have use of a luxury

The contract stipulated, however, the cars would only be for the time they were in Memphis and under contract to the Grizzlies, team of ficials said

'It was a small part of the deal and maybe through a communications gap between the three and their attorneys, it didn't occur to them to check the details "one source said

John Bassett, president of the Grizzlies, released all his players from any contractural obligations

"We didn't have to return them. It's technicality," said attorney Ed Keating, who represents Csonka and Kiick. Keating also represented Warfield at the time of their signing with the Grizzlies in 1974, but Warfield has since retained another attorney.

'We could have kept the cars nine more months under the contract, but we just decided to turn them back in." Keating said.

However, Keating's views differed from those of Grizzly executive vice president Mike Storen and an executive of the automobile dealer-

Storen said the cars were to be retained through the life of the contract and their stay in Memphis.

The fact is, they have gotten new contracts and these included luxury automobiles," Storen said: "We'll send somebody to pick them up, although I can't exactly say when the pickups will occur

Costello shakes tears as Bucks whip Pistons

The tears that had welled in his eyes only days ago were gone. For the time being, anyway, Coach Larry Costello of the Milwaukee Bucks-battling for his job and his team-could enjoy his club's victory in the opening game of the National Basketball Association's Western Conference quarter-finals.

Goring finally in spotlight

By The Associated Press

Butch Goring of the Los Angeles Kings had played in 11 National Hockey League playoff games, never scoring a goal, never playing the hero's role that always seems reserved for the glamor boys. After more than two seasons of waiting, that role is hiseven if the moment in the spotlight is as fleeting as the 27 seconds of overtime it took Butch Goring to

He seemed unaccustomed the attention that accompanies a playoff game-winning goal. "It was a lucky goal, but we'll take it," Goring said after his Kings had trimmed the Boston Bruins 3-2 on the power play score Tuesday night.

"I got the puck in our end, carried most of the way down ice and dropped it to Bob Murdoch just inside the Boston zone," explained the hard-working center from St. Boniface, Man. "I broke for the net as Murdoch shot. (Boston goalie) Gerry Cheevers made a fine save but the puck went right out to Mike Murphy. I was beside the net and when Murphy shot, I just directed it in."

The goal gave the Kings a split in the first two games of the Stanley Cup quarter-final series and broke a 21-game Boston unbeaten at home. The Bruins' last loss came on Dec. 23 of last year...at the hands of Butch Goring and the Kings.

The return of Boston defenseman Brad Park, who underwent knee surgery March 5, wasn't enough to hold off the Kings. Hungry after a 4-0 loss to the Bruins in the opener, they came back after Jean Ratelle's game-opening goal for a tie on Marcel Dionne's firstever playoff marker.

Sabres 3, Islanders 2 Buffalo right wing Danny Gare, though only in his second season, is far more at home than Goring during overtime games. His third career overtime goal-second in four games-at 14:04 of the extra new help session lifted the Sabres past the Islanders and gave his club its seventh triumph in eight such games. New York had staged a valiant comeback from a 2-0 deficit with goals by Denis Potvin and J.P. Parise late in the third period-Parise's 20-footer with 1:55 remaining forcing the overtime. But Buffalo, which had taken the lead on goals by Brian Spencer and Don Luce, held the Islanders without a shot in the added period and Gare sent home a Luce pass from behind the net to win it.

Canadiens 3, Black Hawks 2 Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Lemaire scored power play goals within 14 seconds late in the second period to help Montreal overcome an early Black Guy Lafleur scored the other Canadiens goal at 12 seconds of the third period. Darcy Rota tallied for Chicago, which got a great effort from injured veteran defenseman Bill White. 'He came up to my room at 6 o'clock and said he wanted to give it a try," marvelled Chicago Coach-Billy Reay. "I thought he had come for a plane ticket All the Black Hawks are going home now, facing a comeback from a 2-0 deficit against the league's best "They can come back; they have a lot of good guys on that team," said a cautious Cournover. Flyers 3, Maple Leafs 1 Philadelphia wing Ross Lonsberry, who hadn't scored in 22 games, received a letter and a religious medal in the mail before the game. He wouldn't say if the charm worked, but he did break the scoreless string and Don Saleski tallied 76 seconds later in the second period to carry the Flyers past the Maple Leafs for the second night in a row.

Dave Schultz had the other score for the NHL's defending champs as the Flyers extended their mastery over Toronto to 19 games since 1971. Borje Salming tallied for the Maple Leafs.

Texas Wesleyan hurler Byron Thornton held the Sooners to only four hits, but walked eight batters. In the bottom of the 10th he walked center fielder Gary Thweatt, gave up a hit to second baseman Keith Drumright, moving Thweatt to third. Thweatt then came home on a throwing error on a ground ball.

The second game was scoreless until the seventh when Paul O'Neil brought home two runs with a single. But Oklahoma roared back with four runs in the bottom of the inning on four walks and three hits, including two-run single by Gary Krug.

Mickey Lashley got the win, his seventh in 11 decisions, with relief help from George Frazier in the ninth.

Oklahoma is now 40-14 and Texas Wesleyan is 30-10.

That, and throwing more strikes. You get them to hit your pitch. Last year I lost my last eight because my arm was really tired from playing winter ball. I didn't play this year.' Sixto Lezcano opened the ninth against Detroit relief ace John Hiller with a single and stole second. Third baseman Rodriguez booted Gorman Thomas' grounder for an error and Robin Yount followed with a fly ball to right which Rusty Staub misplayed into a scratch single that loaded the bases. Hiller struck out Pedro Garcia before Charlie Moore hit a sacrifice

George Brett singled to score Nelson and McRae's single to deep center brought home both Otis and Brett. Steve Dunningreplaced Hassler in the seventh and yielded two runs on a triple by Otis.

Once-proud Queen Mary wallows in sea of red ink

By HOLGER JENSEN

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) -Hitler once offered $250,000 and an Iron Cross for the sinking of the Queen Mary. Her present crew of merchants and tour guides would gladly scuttle her for less.

The grand old dame of the Atlantic seems in danger of becoming a ghost ship in the Pacific. Her restaurants and 40-room hotel are half empty. Her museum faces eviction proceedings. Her shopkeepers are either jumping ship or mutinying against maintenance bills imposed by the City of Long Beach.

Rising costs and a scarcity of visitors threaten to succeed where Nazi U-boats failed.

"We can't save the Queen Mary." says William H. Thompson, general manager of the Specialty Queen Mary Corp., one of the ship's major leaseholders. Specialty is trying to find a buyer for its interest in the project.

"I blame myself for not knowing better. This is a jinxed ship," moans Graham Stewart, president of the Queen Mary Merchants Association.

Long Beach city officials deny that their queen is foundering, although they admit her retirement at Pier J has not been as profitable as was hoped. They have hired a consultant to do some fiscal bailing and ironing out of what they call "a problem of confused management.

The Queen Mary has been in troubled waters ever since the City of Long Beach purchased the former luxury liner for $3.75 million in 1967. She wallowed in a sea of red ink almost from the day she berthed in Long Beach Harbor.

Cost overruns in converting the vessel to a floating commercial complex and tourist attraction leaped from the original $8 million estimate to $62 million - $36 million more than it cost the British to build the Queen Mary in 1934.

Federal grand jury investigators discouraged some would-be tenants by looking into the possibility of an organized crime connection in a shipboard pinball concession. No indictments were returned.

Specialty filed 25 lawsuits in 38 months to collect back rent and other 'unpaid bills from its financially strapped merchant tenants.

The tenants complain that the Queen Mary simply has not lived up to all the promotional hoopla that marked her arrival eight years ago. The ship that carried 4 million passengers on commercial round trips and 810,000 troops during World War II seems to have lost her drawing power along with her engine power.

Attendance has declined ever since the first year of operation, when 1.5 million persons visited the ship and spent more than $6 million.

There are only 22 tenants in the 50 shop's aboard ship, and two of them are leaving, Stewart said. Mary's Gate Village, a shoreside commercial complex next to the ship, is virtually a ghost town with only eight tenants in restaurants and its tenants. its 40 shops.

Retail shop revenues were down 19 per cent in the last six months of 1975, paid attendance at the Museum of the Sea dropped 14 per cent and four shipboard restaurants reported an 11 per cent decrease in business.

The Queen Mary's hotel, leased by Pacific Southwest Airlines and managed by Hyatt, is operating with a 50 per cent occupancy rate.

The only figure that has not declined is the cost of running the ship, now more than $3 million a year.

Specialty's bill has nearly doubled from $364,705 in 1971-72 to $682,388 this year. It is prorated on a squarefootage basis among Specialty's four

The Queen Mary Museum of the Sea Foundation considers its common area charges excessive. It is refusing to pay another $2 million in back bills demanded by the City of Long Beach.

The city has threatened to take over the museum unless the money is paid by March 30, but this would also mean assuming a $1.3 million debt that the museum foundation still owes the Bank of America.

On March 10, the foundation's board of directors voted to defy the city's eviction notice.

Use of hard liquor tapering off

By CARL CANNON

The Los Angeles Times

America is getting ready to give up the martini. It won't be cold turkey, but neither will it be all that long a goodbye. Tapering off is expected to be so rapid that in 14 years not only the martini drinker but any imbiber of distilled spirits exclusively will be in an ever-shrinking minority. The majority will be drinking wine.

By 1990, according to the most prevalent forecasts, America's favorite premeal "cocktail" will be a simple glass of white wine - in bars, restaurants and in the home.

If these predictions are tough to swallow for hard liquor drinkers, some people in the liquor and wine industries consider them conservative. And they are easily accepted by bartenders from Beverly Hills to Boston who have seen their martini and other aperitif business give way more and more to calls for a glass of chablis, Chenin Blanc or California

One authority traces the martini back to 1862 when it was called the Martinez cocktail.

Originally it was made with equal parts of gin and dry vermouth but in the 1930s the recipe had changed to four parts gin and one of vermouth. In America, it got progressively stronger until now the "mixture" is in some cases as high as 20-to-1. At this stage few could argue that it is a cocktail instead of merely cold, straight gin.

One liquor producer says the martini's demise started with the onset of the recession and the consequent curtailing of expense accounts which made the three-martini lunch. Rolf Nonnast, manager of The Saloon in Beverly Hills, said the martini is no longer the most popular cocktail in his establishment. "It is vodka in almost any form," he said. But white wine is gaining fast and the switch is being led mostly by the younger customers. Of course, there are some hard-core whisky drinkers still hanging on, but they seem to be dwindling every day. "The turn to white wine is sharply noticeable here. And why not? It is a more civilized way to drink." The most fervent prophet of the white wine surge is Marvin Shanken, editor and publisher of Impact, a research newsletter for the distilled spirits and wine industries. Shanken recently told a meeting of liquor industry marketing executives that wine would overtake hard liquor in four years, and that by 1990 or before white wine alone would sell more than all distilled spirits combin-

Shanken said that Smirnoff, Bacardi, Gilbey's and Gordon's will not disappear, but will be retarded by the turn to white wine. Why the big switch in taste? Shanken and other industry observers see it as only the most visible evidence of the American consumer's long trend toward lower proof and lighter spirits.

'White wine has four big things going for it," Shanken said. "Lightness, dryness, coldness and less calories compared to other spirits. All four are big points with women, who are in the vanguard of the swing.'

Puerto Rico tourism industry fighting inflation

By WILLIAM RICE The Washington Post

SAN JUAN - It has been, they say here, a good year. Hotel occupancy was up through the season and reached standing-room-only in February. It has been a "cold" winter as well, with stretches of unpleasant weather and more chilly days than usual. Tourists come, but will they come back?

In the recent past a number of clouds have intruded on the sunny sparkle of Caribbean waters. Visitors have encountered rapidly rising costs for rooms and food, attitudes ranging from surly to hostile and, in some cases, political unrest. Despite efforts by tourism officials to improve the situation here, mainlanders living on the island express fears that any matters further.

A MOVE to either independence or to statehood would end a series of benefits (special tax status among them) and would, they reason, quickly bring pressures for additional revenue. Logical targets would be mainland businesses and tourist hotels.

"We still have a sunny spot," said John Lohner, one of the principals in the corporation that owns the intown Hotel Pierre, the adjoining Swiss Chalet restaurant and a certing operation. When Pan American canceled its Caribbean routes last year the Pierre lost Pan Am's contract to house crews, a blow after 14 years in season and out. "It can only get better," Lohner continued. "February was a good month, but what's one good month?'

native of the island recruited from the Hilton chain. He reported that attendance has been good for the Folies Bergere, which was booked into the hotel for a two-year run. The neighboring San Juan Hotel is staging a spectacular as well. In relatively hard times, big name headliners have been few.

De Aldrey is the Americana's first Puerto Rican manager and is keenly aware of how little the personality of this island-as distinct from any island in the topics-is reflected in the luxury hotels. At the Americana's El Gaucho restaurant, for example, only black bean soup alters a stock list of steak and continental dishes. At the handsomely decorated El Convento. an abandoned convent restored as a hotel, corned beef was the luncheon familiar food and for exploration can find good island food. One might begin at Restaurant Borinquen, 106 Condado Ave., in the Santurce section, which offers a wide range of wellprepared fish dishes. Conch, turtle steak and land crabs are on the menu along with more than half-a-dozen versions of red snapper. The interior has several elegant features not evident in the facade, not the least of which is an on-the-house cordial served at meal's end. It is chilled blend of rum, creme de menthe, creme de cacao and anisette.

NOT FAR AWAY, at Stop 22 on Fernandos Juncos Avenue in Santurce, is a Cuban restaurant, the Metropole. Here tiny, exceptionally sweet Puerto Rican oysters are removed from the Cuban or Puerto Rican fashion and even fried rice. The place is small, totally unpretentious and well staffed.

In the mountains, an hour or so from San Juan, in the general vicinity of Aguas Buenas, is an outdoor dining place with a touch of class. It is hard to find.

Daylight saving's history spotty

1700s, frugal Benjamin Franklin proposed an idea for saving at least one hour a day. Franklin called his idea "Daylight Saving Time."

His reputation as a scientist was so great in America and in Europe where he had been the first American to receive an Honorary Degree from Oxford University and was serving as the first American Minister to France that nearly everybody believes that his proposal was made for purely scientific reasons.

Not so. Ben loved science, but he also loved parties.

At the Court of King Louis XVI and his fun-loving Queen, MarieAntoinette, Franklin was a great favorite - and Ben considered it his duty as a U.S. diplomat never to leave a big party too early.

Consequently, getting up late one morning after having stayed up late the night before, Franklin wished the day included just one hour more of daylight - and he relayed his thoughts to the King. All that had to be done to assure one extra hour of daylight at the end of the day was to push the hour hand of a clock forward one hour. The King allegedly kept thinking about this revolutionary American idea until the French Revolution, and then the revolutionaries took all his clocks away

Surfing combines skills with thrills

HONOLULU (AP) - When the Big Kahuna speaks everyone listens.

The Big Kahuna is a mythical Hawaiian witch doctor, a demi-god, who watches over surfing. At his command waves rise and surfers fall.

Right now, according to George Downing, the Big Kahuna is brewing big magic for surfing. Downing should know because he is a Big Kahuna in his own right. He is considered to be one of Hawaii's greatest living surfers, one of the most influential in the sport since the legendary Duke Kahanamoku.

The Duke, a full blooded Hawaiian, was three times a member of the U.S. Olympic team and winner-of two gold medals for swimming the 100 meters freestyle event.

Called the world's greatest surfer, he turned surfing into a celebrity sport by teaching the Duke of Windsor, Douglas Fairbanks and scores of other notables how to ride the waves at Waikiki. Then, he popularized the sport in California and Australia and went on to appear in movies.

Duke Kahanamoku set the record for the world's longest surfing ride, a mile and a quarter across Waikiki Bay, ending up on a ripple against the sands of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel beach. George Downing duplicated this feat but stopped short of the beach by 10 yards to keep the Duke's record intact.

A man who respects tradition is George Downing. And a man who is intent on making surfing as popular a sport as baseball and football. Ever since he gave up winning all the surfing titles around, Downing has worked to develop a standard of professionalism for the sport. Now he is ready to launch it upon the world, th a world, series of professional surfing to be held on four continents this year, including events in Australia, Japan, Hawaii, Brazil and the United States.

The sport has changed greatly from what it was in the Duke's time, Downing notes. In the early days of the sport, the main point of surfing was the long ride. Surfers used heavy redwood boards 17 feet long to ride a wave from its peak all the way to shore. Then, the emphasis changed to the trick ride, with surfers riding in tandem or with one standing on the shoulders of another. In the 950s, the sport was transformed into the wild ride as surfers tried to out-macho each other in risking the biggest and fiercest waves around

Downing, 44, survived this period with a worldwide reputation for daring and skill. Many of his contemporaries, however, did not. They fell victim to crushing waves 25 feet high or a forest of pilings in the path of their waves. The high rate of injuries and fatalities gave surfing an unpleasant image and for a while threatened the existence of the sport.

Downing was one of the first to realize the damage done to the sport and sought to transform the wild ride into the skilled ride, where performance was judged on a surfer's ability to maneuver his board into zigzags and turns while riding the face of a wave.

'The emphasis on skills will open the sport to everyone," Downing claims. "There's no need to search for the biggest and highest waves, because zigzags and turns can be performed even on small waves. No one has to prove he can beat a big wave or be ashamed of not facing up to the rough ones.

For the professionals, though, there is still enough risk to excite the most ardent thrill seeker. Professionals surfing in competition under Downing's skill system earn their highest points for performing maneuvers in large waves and close to the point where the curl of the wave collapses. Here, the slightest mistake in performance can lead to a wipeout under tons of raging water.

Downing has also announced an award to any surfer in professional competition who can ride his board in a 360 degree loop down, up and around the face of a wave. The surfer who can perform this skillful maneuver will get a cash prize of $1,000 donated by Japan's Sake industry association, according to Downing.

"We're trying to make surfing more interesting for both the participant and the spectator," Downing says, "and to make it into something everyone can do. For anyone who can swim, it's a lot safer than skiing and a

According to Bulova Watch Company's researchers, DST was not adopted by anybody until nearly 150 years later, during World War II - as a temporary emergency measure to aid the war effort. To be specific, DST cut electric power consumption in war plants by adding an extra hour of daylight at the end of the business day, while simultaneously making wartime plant blackouts more effec-

Today, most but not all American communities move clock and watch hands ahead an hour when DST starts, back when it ends. But many people, including experts on time, refer to DST as "America's annual bout with confusion" because observance has not been uniform throughout the nation.

For example, at 2 a.m. on April 24, 1966, more than 100 million Americans living in 20 states advanced clocks, watches and other timepieces by one hour. But more than 80 million other citizens either were not scheduled to go on DST at all or were to do so on a later date in the

There were then 18 states that observed DST on a statewide basis. and 18 other states where it was observed in some way. In addition, there were and are isolated areas and communities across the country that observe what has been described as "wildcat DST," a sort of voluntary compliance by everybody without any formal legal sanction. In Indiana there was no official state time at all. In Pennsylvania, on the other hand, the state was on Standard Time, but 600 communities moved to DST on

In parts of Texas, North Dakota and Alaska some 500,000 Americans observe time one hour slower than Standard Time; 1,500,000 Americans scattered in communities in parts of Alaska, Idaho, Michigan, Oregon and Utah observe time one hour faster than Standard Time all year round; and another 45,000 Americans in certain Alaska communities observe time two hours faster than Standard Time all year round. In 1967, of 130 cities with more than 100,000 population, 71 observed DST and 59 didn't. Complaints about the patchwork year-round DST.

The idea was that less electricity would be used at the end of the day, resulting in big savings in oil consumption. But too many people switched on too many lights when they got up in the dark in the morning. ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) Three dozen oil companies have bid $571.8 million for drilling rights to more than 400,000 acres of ocean bottom in the Gulf of Alaska.

"I'm just glad that's done with," said Exxon's senior vice president, JohnLoftis, after bidding $47 million for 24 of the tracts up for lease. "Now I just hope we find lots of oil."

If drilling scheduled to begin on a limited basis this summer proves official estimates correct, Loftis and other oilmen won't be disappointed.

More than a year ago, the industry asked the Interior Department to open the gulf to exploration under the government's accelerated leasing program on the outer continental the gulf's harsh environment frequent gales, earthquakes, high waves and floating sea ice - the government offered slightly more than one million acres for leasing.

About 60 per cent of the offering was ignored by companies which focused on 81 of the 189 tracts located about 300 miles southwest of here.

In all, $1.7 oillion was offered the Interior Department by 244 bidders, but only 81 of them were apparent winners. Atlantic Richfield and Shell Oil Co. combined to purchase drilling rights on 12 of the most lucrative

Fuel use may climb

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Fuel consumption could increase as much as 10 per cent during the coming notor fuel season compared to last year, G.J. Morrison, vice president of marketing for Phillips Petroleum Co.

"If people continue to travel and buy big automobiles ... it could-at the present rate- create some isolated outages," Morrison said Monday after speaking to the Texas Oil Marketers Association.

However, Morrison said any shortages which might develop during the April-to-September season would be no where near as drastic as those caused by the Arab oil embargo.

Morrison said Bicentennial travel and poor energy regulation could cause the shortages.

Recent oil legislation signed by President Ford encourages use of fuels and discourages conservation, the executive said. "I have a feeling that Project Independence has been forgotten and we have to give credit for that to our elected officials."

Morrison urged the oil jobbers to communicate to the public through the news media the need for free enterprise in the oil industry. And he blasted proponents of divestiture of

Houston oilman goes to bat for President

Robert Mosbacher, a Houston independent oilman and finance chairman of the President Ford Committee, went to bat Tuesday night for the President before more than 300 persons at the annual Executive Night meeting of the Permian Basin Landmen's Association at the Midland Country Club.

Mosbacher, himself a former president of the American Association of Petroleum Landmen, layed the blame for the U.S.'s present energy plight on Congress, both Republican and Democratic members, and on the "image of the petroleum industry itself."

"Actually, when the President signed the energy bill of 1975 into law in January he didn't think it was a good bill and still doesn't," Mosbacher, who currently is serving as chairman of the board of the M. D. Anderson Hospital at Houston, said.

'The president decided, since the bill did not include a windfall profits clause, that it was the least harmful of several alternatives," Mosbacher explained.

Mosbacher said, that the 1975 legislation was put into the hands of the Federal Energy Administration to enforce and that the administrative level of that board has shown that it is in favor of rules that would increase the price for petroleum.

But, beauracracy below the administrative level has made it impossible for them to move," the speaker said.

Mosbacher expressed great concern for the manner in which the recent gas deregulation bill was voted down.

"The administration is a strong backer of this deregulation, and many members of Congress are in favor of it. Actually there were votes to pass the deregulation bill, but when voting time came minds had changed and some members decided it was time to take a walk.

The former AAPL president said he felt that pressure on key members of Congress, those that were afraid of losing chairmanships of various committees, caused them to change

"If the question of gas deregulation were to come up again in Congress this year. I am not sure how it would fare, but my opinion right now is that the chances are very slim.

Mosbacher perked up his audience when he said there will be new regulations forthcoming very shortly from the Federal Energy Administration, that "will help the independent producer a great deal.'

He said he couldn't reveal the nature of the regulations. Mosbacher told his listeners that the current Congress is not for private business in general or even in favor of the free enterprise system. The speaker left the energy situation and went to President Ford's veto record in what obviously was, as he promised earlier in the evening, the campaign segment of his

'The president has vetoed 47 bills pushed by liberal congressmen. mostly pork barrel bills, and he has made 39 of those vetoes stick." he

HOLLYWOOD - It was because of a debt that Dale Evans, queen of the cowgirls, came out of retirement.

The debt wasn't a financial one but rather, as Dale explains, it was the moral obligation she and her husband, Roy Rogers, felt to keep making people happy so long as the Lord would allow.

She and Roy had just finished working in The Mac Davis Show for NBC-TV when Dale took time out from her jammed schedule to explain why the Rogers, financially able to take their ease, keep working.

"People," she said in an interview, "are of a certain breed, and Roy and I are workers.

"I've been working since I was 17,

"And we realized that, if God has given us the talent to make people happy, to make them tap their feet, we should be using it.

"You owe it to people to serve them

"So Roy and I began working at rodeos, and now we do various series of popular inspirational books, says she may do another next spring based on a "log" of her travels.

Between lecture engagements, other personal appearances and recording dates and visits to her children, she's almost constantly in motion.

"We have 17 grandchildren and one great-grandchild, Amy Petersen," she beamed, "and another greatgrandchild on the way.'

Roy Rogers Jr., Roy's only son, is a contractor and occasional singer, who moved to Apple Valley, Calif., his parents' home community, from the Middle West two years ago. His month-old son, Dustin Roy Rogers, is the youngest of Dale's and Roy's grandchildren, and is the apple of his grandpa's eye.

"Because," as Dale explains, "Roy finally has someone to carry on the Rogers name.

'Sandburg's Lincoln' winds up tonight

By LAWRONCE LAURENT The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The best of the networks' Bicentennial offerings

NBC's six-part dramatization of "Sandburg's Lincoln" - ends tonight and the date wasn't chosen by accident. The series ends on April 14, 1976 and Mr. Lincoln was shot at Ford's Theatre on April 14, 1865.

The good reviews haven't been unexpected; nor should they have been. The finest of ingredients were gathered by executive producer David L. Wolper, beginning with his buying the television rights to Carl Sandburg's biography of Mr. Lincoln, which won a Pulitzer Prize in 1940. Mr. Sandburg died in 1967 at the age of 89.

But television has made hash (or worse) out of fine print materials before and probably will do the same again. In this instance, however, Wolper hedged his bets by hiring the redoubtable George Schaefer as the line producer-director and by hiring a fine cast headed by Hal Holbrook and Sada Thompson.

Another wise decision was in the approach to the life of Mr. Lincoln, surely the subject for more books than any President. Wolper decided to avoid the familiar, perhaps overly familiar events of Mr. Lincoln's life. This meant, even before writers were hired, that the dramatic series would avoid the debates with Sen. Stephen A. Douglas; would leave alone the composition and delivery of the Gettysburg Address, and would not go into the assassination at Ford's Theatre. This left the emphasis on the man his family, his moods and his maturing.

Then, came the writers. James Prideaux was asked to provide a picture of the family man and that was the first drama, "Mrs. Lincoln's Husband." It was telecast Sept. 9, 1974 and provided a good idea of the kind of quality that the viewers could expect. Jerry McNeely of the University of Wisconsin wrote a study of Mr. Lincoln as a wise analyzer of people and that story became "Sad Figure Laughing (telecast Feb, 1975). Emmet Lavery provided the story for the "Prairie Lawyer" script by Irene and Louis Kamp and it provided a portrait of a young attorney (April 7, 1975). The celebrated writing team of Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee were the authors of "The Unwilling Warrior" (Sept. 3, 1975), a picture of the problems facing a Commander in Chief during the Civil War. (This is the same Lawrence and Lee who wrote "Inherit the Wind" and who made their mark in radio by adapting musicals to the 30minute format needed for "The Railroad Hour" in the 1940s). Loring Mandel, who made his reputation during TV's "Golden Age" and whose "Do not Go Gentle Into That Good Night" is a television classic, did the show about the politician. It was called "Crossing Fox River" (Jan. 12). And, finally, this week's script is by Philip Reisman Jr. This drama is When you're dusting entitled "The Last Days" and stresses Mr. Lincoln's with a feather duster, post-war plans and his yearning for foreign travel, once his term of office had expired.

Free-spirited, independent, Brenda Vaccaro

By NANCY ANDERSON Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD - You're probably simply dying to know (Isn't everyone?) what's really happening between Brenda Vaccaro and Michael Douglas but you'll never find out from

The star of the new CBS-TV series "Sara" will talk about Michael quite glibly just as she talks about everything else but when she's through, you aren't quite sure what she meant.

For instance, if one asks, "Is the um, ah, er — relationship between you and Michael over, continuing or what." Brenda answers, "No worthwhile relationship ever ends.'

She and young Douglas were as thick as molasses in January for more than one January and about a year ago were discussing marriage, though neither felt it particularly

They were still in love, but as for marriage, well, maybe someday. Or maybe not.

Now, a year later, Michael is the acclaimed producer of the commercially and artistically exciting "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and is leaving his television series, "The Streets of San Francisco" (the two circumstances not strictly Brenda, who's been married once, doesn't find the institution necessary for herself at least, she reiterated the other day in her mobile dressing room on the Universal Studio lot.

But, one must wonder, isn't she afraid that, unless she marries him, a gorgeous man like Michael will get "My God!" she exclaimed. "You

Brenda has a voice as distinctive as Barbara Stanwyck's plus Miss Stanwyck's astringent honesty.

In fact, in another year, Barbara Stanwyck might have been playing the strong-minded, vital "Sara." She and Brenda have that much in common. When Miss Vaccaro read her first "Sara" script, she was sure she was wrong for the part which she found bland. And bland is one thing she's

'She sighed. 'Then we know the coffee is supposedly done,' she said, 'but it's still all gunky in the bottom of the pot, so we have to stir it.' She asked meif I wanted a cup. I asked her if she was kidding ...

Moving along to other monstrosities, in one of its "Special Reports for Young People," CBS brought us an item with the following title, "What Are the Loch Ness and Other Monsters All About?" An intriguing question, certainly, to us monster buffs.

"Monsters seem to be everywhere," said Carol were warned that the Martin, the show's co-host.

"Tokyo has Godzilla; London has werewolves. Paris has the Phantom of the Opera, Mt. Everest has the Abominable Snowman, maybe, and who knows, what Loch Ness may have?

Who, indeed? On the screen are pictured the crumbling ruins of an ancient castle, close to Loch Ness in Scotland where, of course, lakes are called lochs. Does a monster make its home in those cool waters? If it is there, what does it look like? How peculiar phenomenon as follows: "Airplane coffee is much weight does it displace? Is it mean, like Joe

> But first, this being a show expressly for people," a riddle. Says co-host Joel Siegel: "Do you know the riddle about the three monsters that fell in the lake and only two of them got their hair wet?

'Why only two?" Carol says. 'One monster was bald," Joel says

Thereafter, we learn that the first known report of a monster in Loch Ness dates back more than 1,400 years. Legend insists that St. Columba, who brought Christianity to Scotland, once saved a man from a water monster there in Loch Ness. Scattered tales of the monster, usually described as a water beast about 30 feet in length, have since persisted.

Investigators have employed submarines and sonar as well as cameras and some zoologists state firmly that the monster - or monsters - is descended from a marine dinosaur known as a plesiosaur. Something unusual does appear to be there, in Loch Ness. But as Carol Martin says: Wouldn't it be better to leave the mystery unsolved? After all, mysteries are a large part of what make monsters so interesting ..

I'll accept that - until the next sighting.

Schulberg's wife is television and stage actress Geraldine

'Gerry and I found our resident swans so fascinating that we started keeping a journal, began to feed them and study them," said Schulberg.

'Even after Gerry started photographing them we still had not thought of it as a book for the public. It was a private record, for our friends and guests.
