

Irons Orders Survey Of School Ring Prices

By JEFF SOUTH
 Avalanche-Journal Staff
 SCHOOL SUPT. Ed Irons said Monday he has asked his staff to investigate alleged discrepancies in the prices of class rings sold at Lubbock's five public high schools. "We do plan to follow it up as a result of your article," Irons told The Avalanche-Journal. "If there are differences in ring prices from school to school — and they can't be attributed to the size, style or design of the individual rings — we want to know why."
 Lubbock Independent School

District trustees expressed surprise at claims that some local schools have been charged more than others for alma mater rings, as reported in Sunday's A-J. "I've never heard of such a thing," said school board secretary Joan Ervin. Board president Charles Waters said he wants more information on an administrative policy that forbids jewelers that do not hold an official high school ring contract, from advertising their rings in local student newspapers. "That sounds like something the board should follow up on," he said. School officials were responding to an A-J report on class ring arrangements here. In the article, Monterey High administrators said the company that sold rings at their school last year charged teenagers at other Lubbock high schools as much as $10 more for comparable class rings. For example, they said, a boy's ring that sold for $65 at Monterey last year cost Coronado students $74.95. Monterey officials said the alleged discrepancies are the result of different business practices used by local schools in negotiating for ring contracts. They said Monterey takes bids and awards a firm, long-term contract for its class rings account, while other schools do not. Representatives for the company that supplies rings at Lubbock high schools deny the alleged price differences and insist all schools are treated the same. Irons said he was unaware of any discrepancies in ring prices. "I thought the prices were the same all over the school system. We do plan to look into the situation," he said. School trustee Jose Ramirez was "very concerned" about the report, especially about the effect of the alleged price differences on schools in low-income areas, such as Estacado, Dunbar and Lubbock High. "If it (the report) is true, then the students who can least afford it are paying the higher prices for rings," Ramirez said. Besides carrying Monterey officials' claims of ring price variances, the Sunday A-J article told of a school district policy that prevents competing jewelers from advertising class rings in student newspapers. Journalism and publications sponsors at a number of high schools said the policy has cost them money because some jewelers, barred from placing ads for their class rings, refuse to advertise any of their products in student papers. The policy was established long ago by the school district administration. See IRONS ORDERS Page 12

Fuel-Conservation Grants Slated Poor, Schools, Hospitals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In their most productive effort yet on energy compromises, members of a House-Senate conference committee Monday agreed to provide almost $1.3 billion in federal funds to weatherproof schools, hospitals and homes of the poor. Two major conservation programs emerged from the panel's fourth session aimed at putting together a plan acceptable to President Carter and both houses of Congress. One is a $900 million plan designed to help states protect schools and hospitals against cold and heat. It would provide states money under a formula taking into account population, climate, fuel supply and special hardships. The other program would set up $385 million in grants that could give each poor family up to $800 through 1980 to insulate and weatherstrip homes. Homeowners would be eligible for the program if their incomes exceeded the poverty income level — now $5,850 a year — by no more than 25 percent.

Crackdown On Appliances
 In still another energy compromise the committee agreed on legislation requiring efficiency standards for 13 home appliances. They also tentatively agreed to let citizens sue appliance makers who violate the standards or the federal government if it fails to enforce them. The standards would apply to new refrigerators, freezers, dishwashers

Christmas. We look ridiculous." Replied Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.: "I'm prepared to sit here until the snow flies to work out a bill." The issue was resolved when members settled on a 240-day maximum, including 60 days for federal approval of plans submitted by the states. The program for schools and hospitals was based primarily on House recommendations. Senators wanted to divide money among the states according to population, but House members successfully argued that fuel availability was more important. Conferees also agreed to require energy audits of all schools and hospitals before they got funds, and they decided each state could get a minimum $4.5 million and a maximum $90 million under the program. Senators on the panel accepted the House version of the audit plan, even though they had wanted to consolidate the new program with two similar existing efforts. They agreed as a compromise that all three programs should be reviewed after a year, with the possibility one or more might be eliminated.

$400,000 Frees German Boy, 4

HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — A 4-year-old boy kidnaped from his home a week ago was released Monday after his mother dropped a ransom payoff worth more than $400,000 off a highway bridge. Police said the boy, Felix Wessel, was found Monday in "relatively good condition" after his mother made the payoff — 1 million German marks, or $434,783 — from money she raised and supplemental funds contributed by Hamburg authorities.

The child was still suffering from shock, however, and could not be questioned about his ordeal. Follows Telephone Instructions Mrs. Christine Wessel said she followed telephone instructions from the kidnapers and found her exhausted and frightened son in a neighborhood park. Felix was abducted from the family home Oct. 17 while Mrs. Wessel was away. She said when she returned home the boy was missing and she found a typewritten note demanding a million marks for his safe return. In a telephone call from the kidnapers Sunday, Mrs. Wessel was told: "Get the boy's clothes ready and bring them along with the money tonight."

Walkie-Talkie Used A later call told her to wait in a Hamburg cafe, where she received yet another telephoned instruction which directed her to a church where she found a walkie-talkie, which the kidnapers used for all further communications. Over the walkie-talkie, the kidnapers told Mrs. Wessel to drive to a superhighway bridge where she was instructed to dump the money and the walkie-talkie into a field about 60 feet below. The kidnapers later called to confirm receipt of the money and again telephoned Monday to tell Mrs. Wessel that Felix could be picked up in the park. A police spokesman, who said tape recordings were made of all telephone calls from the kidnapers, said no trace has been found of those responsible despite a massive search.

He declined to give further details on the case. Police said they had no indication that the kidnaping was connected to a recent wave of terrorist violence in Germany.

Togethermess Feat May Be One For Book

IRVING (AP) — Girl Scouts from this Dallas suburb joined hands for 36 hours to promote international understanding — and may have qualified for the Guinness Book of World Records in the process. Eighteen Irving Junior High School girls, members of Troop 1564, slept side by side, ate together using two hands from different bodies and followed each other around constantly for a day and a half. They broke the chain only five minutes each hour. The girls bumped their heads getting in and out of vans, but managed to keep the chain intact. Their biggest complaint was sweaty hands, but that was helped by doses of baby powder. The girls ended the 36 hours of constant togetherness at dusk Sunday. "They're getting very tired," said troop leader Jean Smith as the vigil ended. "Having to be close to someone for that many hours is quite a feat."

Lighter High Court Case Loads Urged

By KIM HOVDEN
 Avalanche-Journal Staff
 A REDUCTION in the Supreme Court case load and additional judges for the high court were recommended by the head of the American Civil Liberties Union in a speech Monday at the Texas Tech Law School. Dr. Norman Dorsen, national chairman of the ACLU, told about 100 law students and professors that more and more citizens are being denied access to federal courts. Increasing the number of Supreme Court justices and reducing the number of cases they hear could be a possible remedy to the problem, Dorsen said.

He said an ACLU study group recently stated that the Supreme Court "has turned its back on the public. It has not just rejected claims, but has refused to recognize them at all." Dorsen said the legal system today was working to shut off citizens' access to the federal courts, leaving them "without judicial remedies." Problem Areas Involvement The ACLU currently is involved in several problem areas, Dorsen said, including courts which were "preventing people from getting the merits of their cases heard." "We're (the ACLU) schizophrenic in that we are concerned with the rights of the individual and with guarding the civil rights of as many people as possible." Dorsen said often cases brought by the ACLU before the Supreme Court do more harm than good because of the precedents they set. He said the decisions may be beneficial to the person seeking the court's opinion but the nationwide implications of the decisions might be damaging. "You just have to use your best judgment. We're not infallible, we know we make mistakes," Dorsen said.

Aid Enlisted
 In a 10-step system of bringing the Supreme Court's problems to the public's attention and initiating reforms, Dorsen said he enlisted the aid of coalitionist groups, lawyers, the press and national figures like Griffin Bell and Gaylord Nelson.

Dorsen told the Avalanche-Journal he is "waiting eagerly to see what Carter would do if he got to make some appointments to the (Supreme) Court." The ACLU chairman mentioned Carter's abortion policies and slowness with reform of intelligence agencies as the organization's biggest disappointments with the current administration. Other areas which Dorsen said needed improvement were Carter's stand on women's rights and the criminal code. In reference to a question concerning the Allan Bakke discrimination case now before the Supreme Court, Dorsen said he supports affirmative action programs at state schools in order to train minority groups to satisfy the needs of the community in law and medical professions. "Bakke's suit claims he was denied admission to the University of California at Davis Medical School solely because he was white.

Hit-Run Plane Kills Strolling Florida Woman

PERRINE, Fla. (UPI) — Federal aviation officials and police searched Monday for a red-and-white light airplane which swooped down, killed an unidentified woman as she walked down a farm road, and then flew off. Dade County Detective Charles Major said he did not believe the woman was killed intentionally, although the pilot in the unique hit-and-run accident south of Miami Sunday might have been trying to scare her. "It's hard to believe someone would try to swoop down on someone and kill them. That would be suicide," he said.

Few Fly That Well
 "Few people can fly a plane that well to actually bump something on the ground," he said. "You're putting a thin line between killing yourself and crashing the plane, but that is not to say someone wasn't attempting horseplay, or trying to frighten the woman."

Major said he was convinced the pilot knew he had hit someone. "Yes, he knows. If nothing else, he felt the impact," he said. Officer Ted Bradley, the first policeman to arrive at the scene on the road bordered on both sides by cornfields, said, "The whole front of her chest was cut open."

 Major said the Federal Aviation Administration was making a check for the plane at airports in the southern part of Florida and Dade County police were See HIT-RUN Page 12 clothes washers, clothes dryers, water heaters, room air conditioners, space heaters, television sets, kitchen ranges, humidifiers or dehumidifiers, central air conditioning units and home furnaces.

While the Senate and the House both took Veterans Day off, Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., chairman of the conference panel, opened the session with a call for his colleagues to abandon the feuding and personal exchanges that slowed their progress last week.

For the most part, they followed his wishes.

Debate Grows Sharp
 At one point, however, progress bogged down in sharp debate over how long each state should get to come up with a conservation plan under the $900 million weatherproofing program.

"What I'm concerned about is we're going on here ... nitpicking on little things," warned Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash. "We'll never get through, even by See FUEL Page 12

CHARRED BODIES FOUND

BRUNSWICK, Ohio (AP) — Three of the four bodies found in the charred ruins of a home in this fashionable Cleveland suburb were soaked with a flammable fluid, authorities said Monday. Firemen found the bodies of Donald Swihart, 41, his wife, Sue, and two of their sons, Brian and Russell.

Bonn Beefing Airport Security

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — West Germany, still reeling from the recent Lufthansa hijacking, Monday sent border guards to 13 foreign airports to take over security checks for Germany-bound planes in hopes of preventing terrorist attacks.

Government officials would not release the names of the airports involved, but the list was said to include the Spanish holiday island of Majorca, where the Lufthansa hijack drama began Oct. 13.

Other airports where German officials thought security to be so lax that special checks were needed were believed to include Barcelona, Spain; Algiers, Algeria; Dakar, Senegal; Bombay, India; Istanbul, Turkey; and Tripoli, Libya.

Transport ministry spokesman Heinz Ruhnau told reporters between 100 and 150 unarmed Border Protective Police — the same unit that rescued 85 hijack hostages at Mogadishu, Somalia, Oct. 18 — were on duty Monday, the first day of the new controls.

Three leaders of Germany's Baader-Meinhof terrorist group, whose release had been demanded by the hijackers, were found dead in their prison cells shortly after the daring rescue. Their deaths, which German officials called suicides, triggered violent protests in France and Italy.

Ruhnau said passenger and baggage checks of all German airliners flying to Germany from the 13 airports had been taken over by the border guards because security was not up to German standards. Germany threatened to bar flights from the airports unless they accepted the controls, which would have been a severe blow to countries dependent on German tourists.

"We now have at the 13 airports the same security we have in Germany," Ruhnau said. "There is no doubt of the effectiveness of the measures. Lufthansa and German embassies reported good results the first day."

In Germany, the deaths of terrorist leader Andreas Baader and two followers continued to stir controversy.

Stuttgart Mayor Manfred Rommel, son of wartime German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, dismissed mounting criticism over his decision to permit the three urban guerrillas to be buried in a public grave.

"There is no danger that the terrorist's grave will become a shrine," Rommel said.

The Stuttgart state government already is under attack by the federal government for lax security at the Stammheim jail, where officials said two of the three radicals committed suicide with smuggled guns and the third hanged herself.

Four Arabic-speaking hijackers commandeered the Lufthansa Boeing 707 shortly after takeoff from Managua. Before the hostages were freed, the hijackers executed the plane's captain in front of the other hostages during a landing stop in South Yemen.

State Department Mediates Dispute With Embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department protocol officers are trying to negotiate a peaceful settlement to a dispute between a foreign embassy and an irate neighbor over barking dogs and marching music.

Protocol officials, who usually spend their time greeting foreign dignitaries and determining who sits where at state dinners, say it's an unusual case. "It's an amazing situation," said one.

The dispute is between the Embassy of Hungary and neurologist Bernard Sussman, neighbors in a fashionable area of Washington. Sussman says the embassy's guard dogs bark at night and keep him awake.

He also complains that the embassy's air conditioning equipment is too noisy, and that antennas on top of the building are unsightly. So he retaliated.

His first salvo was a 6 a.m. phone call to the embassy's No. 2 official. "If I can't sleep, why should you be able to sleep?" Sussman demanded. Some words were exchanged and the embassy official hung up, Sussman said.

Then Sussman erected a 30-foot flagpole in his yard and began flying the Stars and Stripes, supposedly to remind his neighbors they are in the United States. The flag is illuminated at night with a 500-watt floodlight, placed so as to shine in the ambassador's window.

In protest against the barking, Sussman puts marching music on his stereo and turns up the volume.

He planned to raise the flag of the Hungarian Freedom Fighters on the anniversary of the Oct. 23, 1956, Hungarian revolt.

But with a possible diplomatic incident in the making, the State Department entered the case.

Evan S. Dobbelle, the U.S. chief of protocol, called Sussman and an attorney for the embassy last Friday and arranged a two-week truce. The embassy agreed to pen its dogs at night, and step up efforts to quiet the air conditioning and block the view of the antennas.

"The moratorium is holding. The doctor's called off his assault," a protocol spokesman reported Monday.

Dobbelle had considered returning to Washington from his mission of accompanying Prince Charles of Britain on a U.S. visit, but decided that wasn't necessary.

Protocol officials said the embassy has been trying to get along with Sussman. The embassy planted 15-foot high trees to block the doctor's view of the antennas, but Sussman wants 30-foot high trees. The embassy is trying to arrange it, the protocol spokesman said.

An embassy attorney says the Hungarians hired an engineer and changed the velocity of the air conditioning, but Sussman wasn't satisfied. Engineers are taking another look.

Protocol officers, describing their role as "a friendly mediator between the two parties," say they will sit down with Sussman and embassy officials and ask each side to put its complaints in writing. "Then we'll begin to negotiate."

Hampton Davis, assistant chief of protocol for diplomatic consular services, describes the dispute as "a very unfortunate situation." He said, "I'm sure the doctor must be bothering his neighbors as much as they're bothering him. We don't like embassies to have this type of trouble in addition to the substantive troubles they face here."

Another protocol officer, promising to monitor the situation closely, said, "I don't know who's right and who's wrong in this case."

Proxmire Raps Gifts By Defense Firms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Monday defense contractors have provided several million dollars worth of entertainment, meals, football tickets and sporting trips to military and space officials in the past three years.

Proxmire said a survey of 41 large aerospace, electronics and shipbuilding contractors showed that the practice of providing free entertainment to government personnel has been "much more pervasive... than previously suspected."

Virtually all of the firms which responded to an investigation by the Joint Committee on Defense Production were found to engage in entertainment of officials with whom they do business. Proxmire said, despite government regulations outlawing such activities.

He said the activities help firms "to develop and maintain useful contacts in the government, to create good will for the contractor, to obtain advance or inside information and to secure preferential treatment."

Proxmire said the Department of Defense's inquiry into the committee's regulations and enforcement following the committee's inquiry appears "to have reduced significantly the incidence of prohibited activity."

But he cautioned that previous congressional inquiries in 1969 and 1967 led to only a temporary abatement, because of the DOD's lack of continued interest in preventing conflict of interest situations.

The contractors surveyed were among the top 100 recipients of prime military contract awards during fiscal 1975 and represent key sectors of the defense industry.

At least 30 of the 41 contractors said they had purchased tickets to sporting and cultural events and made them available to government customers. The firms acknowledged sponsoring nearly 1,200 hospitality suites at trade and professional conventions over a three-year period.

At least 35 companies purchased meals for government employees, and at least 16 firms sponsored sporting activities in which government officials engaged, ranging from a golf tournament to out-of-town hunting, fishing or skiing trips.

The committee's report said resort outings included transportation, hunting licenses, ammunition, meals and lodgings, hunting and guide fees and game preparation approaching $200 in value for each government employee.

Proxmire said the cost of the gratuities were not large, but that the aggregate spending on entertainment of government officials "probably exceeds several million dollars annually." He said he was most concerned about the "repetitious nature" of such entertainment.

12 Television Sets Returned By Agency

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams Monday ordered the return of 12 color television sets that had been purchased last month for top department officials to keep them in touch with "what's going on."

Adams ordered that the sets be sent back after inquiries had been made last week by a United Press International reporter who was tipped about the purchase by a source within the department.

DOT information officer Frances Levine said the color sets cost the department $375 each and were meant for "various senior officials within the department."

Asked why the 12 officials needed color television sets, Miss Levine said, "To keep them informed of what's going on."

After inquiries about the sets had been made over several days last week, Miss Levine told a reporter, "Secretary Adams got wind of this and has ordered that they be returned."

She said the matter was brought to Adams' attention by DOT Information Director David Jewell following UPI's inquiries about the sets.

The tipster also said that Deputy Secretary Alan Butchman had purchased nine art posters from a New York City art dealer to decorate his office walls and had the posters flown to Washington aboard a Coast Guard plane.

The department spokesman said the art had cost $169 but ~~was~~ that it had been shipped on a government aircraft.

She said the art work was needed because the previous occupant of Butchman's office had decorated it with "his own personal art collection. When he left office, the walls were bare."

The department plans to keep the posters.

Treaty Opposition Pleases Legionnaire

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The national commander of the American Legion Monday said he was encouraged by the size of Panamanian opposition to a plan to take control of the Panama Canal from the United States.

"Our primary concern and one of the greatest concerns of all Americans should be the matter of the proposed Panama Canal treaties," Robert C. Smith of Springhill, La., told a news conference at the Maine Statehouse.

The treaties which would turn control of the canal and its adjacent zone over to Panama by the year 2000 were approved by a 2-to-1 margin, but Smith said Panamanian leaders had indicated there would be no strong opposition.

"We would think a 2-to-1 showing means that all is not as we've been told. Maybe there's more opposition down there than meets the eye. We expected approval, but this vote indicates more opposition than we had counted on," he said.

Smith — silver-haired leader of the 27 million member veterans organization — said he would travel to Washington, D.C., Tuesday to meet with other groups opposing the proposed treaties.

"We'll try to use this vote to the best of our campaign. We'll try to find out Tuesday how we can use it," he said. Smith, wearing his red American Legion cap and a grey three-piece suit, reaffirmed the Legion's opposition to the plan on military and economic grounds.

"We're opposed to any change in the sovereignty of the Panama Canal. Our main reason is the canal is needed greatly for our military security. We do not have a two-ocean navy. We need the canal to transit from one ocean to the other as the need arises," he said.

Smith said the Legion's effort against the canal proposal was "one of the largest issues and challenges we (the Legion) have combined on in a number of years" and one of the Legion's largest lobbying efforts ever.

The Legion commander concluded a two-day swing through Maine. He had also spoken out against the canal treaties during a Sunday stop at Waterville.

Smith succeeded past national commander William J. Rogers, the first Maine native elected to head the Legion.

CBer Inflicts Wound On Self

FORT EDWARD, N.Y. (AP) — A five-hour citizens band radio conversation between two state troopers and a man bent on suicide ended Monday with a rifle shot as the man seriously wounded himself.

The troopers said they heard Terry Mannell, 24, broadcast a threat to take his own life late Sunday night, and they began talking with him on the CB radio in their car.

They eventually located Mannell in his car and followed him for several hours through this central New York community, at one point attempting to approach him.

He refused to unlock the doors or to roll down the windows, so the troopers returned to the CB radio conversation.

Their attempts to talk Mannell out of committing suicide were hampered by other CBers who overheard the conversation and joined in, said the troopers, who were not identified.

"They said the civilians' efforts to help may have had the opposite effect because we couldn't control the situation."

At 11:15 p.m. Sunday, the troopers said Mannell began broadcasting on his CB radio.

"He said he was armed with an M1 carbine and was going to commit suicide," one trooper said. "I understand he was despondent over a recent separation from his wife."

At 4:40 a.m., Mannell put the rifle to his abdomen and pulled the trigger, the troopers said.

Glens Falls Hospital officials said he was in serious condition Monday after undergoing surgery.

Pleasant Fall Climate To Continue In Area

Although most West Texans continue to anticipate the arrival of winter-like weather, temperatures closer to spring-time are forecast for the Lubbock area through Saturday.

Fair skies, light variable winds, and mild temperatures which climbed up to 80 Monday should return to the South Plains the next few days, according to the National Weather Service.

Temperatures are expected to range from the low 40s to high 70s the rest of the week.

While the western two-thirds of the state enjoyed moderate fall weather, the eastern portion of the state was subjected to damper conditions along a line extending generally east from Dallas to McAllen.

Cloudy skies, created by the stationary front, brought light rain along the middle and upper Texas coast and scattered showers and thundershowers over northeast and east Texas. Partly cloudy skies should return to these damper regions of the state today.

Temperature highs across the Lone Star state ranged Monday from 82 at Junction to 87 at Tyler by 4 p.m.

Sunny skies also prevailed over the New England States extended into Florida, and covered the Rocky mountain regions, Monday, bringing promise for more seasonably mild weather.

LINE UP FOR IMMUNIZATION SHOTS — A worker fills immunization syringes at left while another at right checks names at Herman Kiefer Health Complex in Detroit Sunday. In background children wait to get their required immunization shots against measles, polio, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus. As many as 6,000 students may have been turned away from 200 city schools Monday morning because they could not prove they had the required immunizations, health officials said. It is the second year in a row Detroit school officials have barred children without immunizations from attending classes (AP Laserphoto).

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, observing Veterans Day, called on the nation Monday to join him in a "demonstrable will to preserve freedom in order to prevent war."

This, he said, would serve as "gratitude for those in the past who have given their lives and those who were willing to give their lives for the preservation of the greatest nation on earth."

Carter spoke at the Memorial Amphitheater at Arlington National Cemetery after placing a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

A crowd of 3,000 stood in mute reverence while the ceremony unfolded as it has each year for six decades, with a 21-gun salute, a muffled drum roll, a bugler playing "Taps" and a minute of silence as honor squads from each service stood at attention.

Carter was accompanied by his wife and their daughter, Amy. On hand were Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and representatives of other government agencies, Congress and the Supreme Court.

National leaders or representatives of most of the nation's veterans groups were present. Flags were handed out and waved in a massive display after the playing of the national anthem.

Carter was introduced by his longtime friend, Max Cleland, the head of the Veterans Administration who lost both legs and an arm in Vietnam. He told the President, "Your presence here means more than words can say about your personal commitment against war and for those who gave their best for this country."

Carter drew prolonged applause when he said, "I think there's a special debt of gratitude on the part of the American people for those young men who went and served in Vietnam, because they have not been appreciated enough."

He added: "Although I came back from the war as some kind of hero, although I was not a hero, my son came back unappreciated, sometimes scorned by his peer group."

Carter served during the Korean War. His son, Jack, served in Vietnam.

The President noted that the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier has representatives of World War I, World War II and Korea but he said there is none from Vietnam because all bodies discovered so far have been identified.

Although this Veterans Day was a national holiday, nearly all the states will observe it Nov. 11, which will be the date of the national holiday again starting next year.

The confusion began in 1968 when Congress moved several holidays so they would always fall on Monday to create three-day weekends. Veterans groups vigorously opposed moving Veterans Day from Nov. 11.

That date had been observed as Armistice Day starting in 1919. It later was changed to Veterans Day.

Congress voted two years ago to move Veterans Day back to Nov. 11 but delayed it until next year to accommodate calendar makers.

School System Asks Vaccination Proof

DETROIT (AP) — Thousands of youngsters were sent home from school Monday because they could not prove they had been vaccinated against five childhood diseases.

"I think sometimes they have to go through the shock of actually being excluded before they realize we have to have them immunized," said Lavinia Wingo, principal of Jamieson Elementary School in Northwest Detroit. She said she had sent nine pupils home.

Under Michigan law, students must be vaccinated for measles, polio, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus. If parents object, for strong personal or religious reasons, school officials may waive the requirement.

As of two weeks ago, 12,000 of the public schools' 165,000 students had failed to show proof they had been vaccinated, school officials said. Their parents were sent warning letters.

Clextion said about 1,500 students had received shots at public health clinics since last week. More were immunized by private physicians but it was not known how many.

City Health Director William Clextion estimated early in the day that as many as 6,000 youngsters might be barred from classes. But he and Russ Charter, director of the school immunization program, said they might not know until Wednesday exactly how many children were turned away.

"Last year we had 2,000 excluded out of 9,000 who received warnings," Charter said. "We have a few more kids this year so I really don't know what the status will be."

Joan Chaisson, coordinator of the immunization program, said, "We were very successful last year. We immediately saw measles go down to zero."

A supervisor at one East Detroit clinic reported a steady stream of youngsters arriving for shots Monday.

Among them was 5-year-old Alfred McCaskill, whose mother, Verneil, said, "I had an appointment to come in today anyway. There are so many diseases going around and I think kids should have their shots."

Court Overturns Whale Hunting Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals overturned Monday a lower-court ruling that would have forced the United States to object formally to a one-year ban on whale hunting by Eskimos.

The ruling, handed down hours before the International Whaling Commission ban went into effect Monday evening, was a defeat for the Eskimos, who argued the loss of bowhead whale hunting would destroy their culture and deprive them of a traditional source of protein.

A U.S. objection to the ban would have permitted Eskimos to kill bowheads.

But the Appeals Court said a U.S. objection would have the effect of "prejudicing the on-going effort of the United States government to establish and administer effective international machinery for the protection of marine mammals."

In overturning the lower court ruling ordering the State Department to file an objection, the Appeals Court said U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica erroneously "assumed there would be no injury to the United States because such an objection could be withdrawn."

Government lawyers told an emergency Appeals Court session earlier Monday that the United States' responsibility to ward Eskimos "does not require that they be able to engage in the hunting of marine mammals."

The filing of an objection also would endanger American efforts to preserve other species of whales, the lawyers said. They argued that an objection would encourage other nations, principally Japan and Russia, to ignore International Whaling Commission quotas.

The court heard the arguments in an emergency Veterans Day session a few hours before the Monday evening deadline for filing an objection to the IWC regulation.

Attorneys for the Alaska Eskimo Whaling Commission won a lower-court ruling Friday requiring the government to object officially to the one-year ban.

S. Lynn Sutcliffe, the Eskimos' lawyer, argued that "The United States is balancing subsistence hunting of bowhead whales against the inability to further reduce the taking of commercial whales."

Eskimos killed 26 bowheads during this year's spring hunt and wounded another 78 whales which could not be retrieved. The tally for this year's fall hunt has not been determined.

The State Department announced last week it would not object to the IWC recommendation, but would appeal to the commission later this year to establish a bowhead quota for Eskimos.

"The United States is confident it can persuade the International Whaling Commission to change the bowhead quota," said Bruce H. Rashkow, a government lawyer.

The State Department decision apparently was an attempt to pacify both the Eskimos who sought an objection and

Examiner Closes Presley's Case

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — As far as the Shelby County medical examiner is concerned the death of Elvis Presley is a closed case.

Dr. Jerry Francisco said Monday he will have nothing more to say about the entertainer's Aug. 16 death.

Francisco said Friday at a news conference that Presley died of hypertensive heart disease. He outlined two months of tests on blood samples and tissue taken from Presley's body and said death was caused by hypertensive heart disease with coronary artery disease as a contributing factor.

The doctor said four drugs — codeine, methaqualone, ethinamate and unspecified barbiturates — were found in significant quantities in Presley's bloodstream. He said four other drugs were found in trace amounts.

conservationists who opposed bowhead hunting.

The fall hunt already has concluded, and the administration hoped to persuade the IWC to set an Eskimo quota before next year's hunts begin.

Authorities estimate between 600 and 2,000 bowheads survive in the Arctic seas.

Francisco says that drugs had nothing to do with Presley's death.

All of the drugs found in the 42-year-old singer's bloodstream had been prescribed by his doctors and were present in therapeutic amounts, he told reporters Friday.

Francisco said exhaustive tests were conducted because of published reports that Presley had a drug problem, and because of rumors that he died of a drug overdose.

The Commercial Appeal, Memphis' morning newspaper, raised questions about Francisco's findings during the weekend.

Sunday editions of the newspaper quoted unnamed sources who said a California laboratory which conducted some of the tests found Placidyl, a depressant, in Presley's blood samples.

Jury Deliberates KKK Rally Incident

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — A jury began deliberations Monday in the trial of a white former Marine who injured 30 persons when he drove a sports car into a Ku Klux Klan rally in President Carter's hometown last July.

The defendant, 30-year-old machinist Buddy Cochran, claimed he was made temporarily insane by his hatred of racism.

The prosecution said Cochran was not insane but drunk.

Cochran was charged with eight counts of aggravated assault.

None of those injured in the Plains incident was a Klansman.

The defense admitted that Cochran drove his car into the crowd, but Cochran's lawyer, Robert R. Bryan, argued,

"It has been said that the KKK is not on trial, that is legally correct. But I contend that racism is as much a part of this trial as the air that permeated that rally."

"I told you that the fact is Cochran drove his car into the speaker's stand but the real issue is what state Cochran's mind was in at the time," said Bryan.

"Buddy's state of mind was certainly not the behavior of a normal person."

During the trial, which began Oct. 17, Cochran testified that he had had a black friend in the Marines in Vietnam who "got me through overseas" and was later killed in action. He recalled having seen two black Marines who had been hanged in North Carolina shortly after a Klan rally was held nearby, and he said, "I felt, well, the Klan has hung some more."

A psychiatrist said Cochran's strong feelings against racism were reinforced by the fact that he was serving his country at the time, and that he had come to think of racism as un-American.

In his closing argument, however, Sumner County Dist. Atty. Claude A. Morris said Cochran was simply drunk. "If Cochran blacked out it was because of his voluntary state of intoxication," he said.

"No one forced Cochran to attend the rally in an intoxicated condition," Morris said. "He knew before he went he was looking for trouble and when he couldn't find any, he started some himself."

Morris said the crowds at the rally did not intend to create an atmosphere of racism and that "the unusual spectacle of the Klan rally was like a circus coming to town. Even Miss Lillian (Carter's mother) was prompted to drop by. Who dares to accuse her of being a Klan sympathizer?"

The prosecutor pointed to testimony by law enforcement officers that Cochran called out for people to watch what he was going to do before the car was driven into the crowd.

"Does that indicate a blackout? Does that indicate an insane person? What more do you want?" Morris asked.

In charging the jury, Judge William F.

Blanks said it could return one of four verdicts — guilty of aggravated assault, guilty of simple assault, not guilty, or not guilty because of reason of insanity.

MISS VICKY — A MISS AGAIN — Victoria Budinger of Haddonfield, N.J., better known as "Miss Vicki" after her marriage to Tiny Tim leaves the Camden, N.J. City Court Monday. Miss Budinger was granted a divorce at the court without the presence of her former mate (AP Laserphoto).

Tiny Tim, Miss Vicki Married With Fanfare, Divorce Quietly

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Tiny Tim and Miss Vicki won't tiptoe through the tulips together anymore.

The couple, who married with fanfare on national television in 1969, was quietly divorced in Superior Court here Monday over Tim's objections.

The falsetto singer, whose career peaked in the late 60s with his hit song, "Tiptoe Through the Tulips," did not attend the proceedings. His lawyer, Philip Paley, said he was on a concert tour.

Acting on a petition filed by Miss Vicki in 1975 which cited irreconcilable differences, Judge Paul A. Lowengrub agreed to end the marriage that began on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show.

There was no request by Miss Vicki for alimony or child support for the couple's 6-year-old daughter, Tulip. The judge ruled the girl could continue living with her mother in Collingswood. Miss Vicki, the former Victoria Budinger, said she has not lived with Tiny Tim since 1973.

Although he contested the divorce, Tiny Tim, whose real name is Herbert Khaury, has admitted his wife's occupations as a go-go dancer and part-time nude model caused him "embarrassment and mental anguish."

But, his lawyer said, "He believes strongly that what God hath joined, no man shall put asunder."

AN EDITORIAL:

Mother Tongue Not Sacrosanct

ALTHOUGH IT'S been nearly 10 years since Congress enacted the Bilingual Education Act and nearly 4 years since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that public schools must provide assistance to children who speak little or no English, bilingual education has just begun to surface publicly as a common if controversial feature of American education.

Some educators fear that bilingual education will magnify differences among ethnic groups and hinder rather than facilitate the assimilation of non-English-speaking persons.

Others are concerned about the expense of bilingual education at a time when schools are having to cut back on music, art, athletics and other special programs.

THE U.S. Office of Education estimates that as many as 3.6 million school-age children have English-language difficulties.

The theory underlying bilingual education is that a child can be guided from the known to the unknown. In the case of non-English-speaking children, this guidance involves regular classroom instruction in their dominant language while helping them gain fluency in English.

This ostensibly allows a student to progress in math, science and other subjects without having to wait until he gains proficiency in English.

PROGRAMS ARE as diverse as the students they serve. But most fall into one of two categories: either the so-called "transitional" or the "maintenance" concept. The differences between the two are great and have created deep divisions within the educational community.

Transitional programs are designed to bring the language minority into the mainstream of society as quickly as possible. It is little more than a temporary solution until the child catches up, as it were, with his English-speaking classmates.

Maintenance programs, on the other hand, have a much broader purpose. They strive to educate the students as bilingual-bicultural citizens. The two languages and cultures are given equal importance and both languages are used equally as mediums of instruction.

BUT DESPITE the growth in the number of bilingual programs in recent years—and in the amount of federal, state and local funds expended on such programs—there is as yet little evidence of the positive effectiveness of bilingual education.

Research results are sparse. But what evidence there is appears to indicate that bilingual education may not be working as well as was expected.

A recent study conducted for the government found that Spanish-speaking children enrolled in 38 bilingual programs were not learning to speak and read English as quickly as students who were picking it up on their own.

While bilingual education should not be in policy or practice an attempt to compete with the English language, it could be a bridge whereby language minorities could gain equal access to society. At the same time, it is not the federal government's responsibility to finance and promote the teaching of ethnic languages and culture.

Bilingual education can never be more than a waste of time, effort, energy and money as long as it sets as its primary goal the preservation of the mother tongue at the expense of a good quality education.

Trouble On Down The Line

THESE ARE trying days for Amtrak, the national rail passenger service. If the nation does not "want to build and support a properly operated system, then maybe we should eliminate it entirely," groused Amtrak President Paul Reistrup.

Reistrup's basic complaint is that Congress has not, in his opinion, appropriated enough money for Amtrak to provide all the services ordered by the Department of Transportation.

BEGINNING SUNDAY, Amtrak will cut service on many of its routes, including an average of 22 trains a day in the Northeast (Washington to Boston) Corridor, the most heavily traveled passenger train route in the nation.

Amtrak had requested an operating budget of $534.1 million for Fiscal Year 1978, that began this month. House and Senate appropriations committees trimmed the budget to $488.5 million.

Amtrak said the cut threw it behind on modernization of its fleet, thereby worsening operating losses. Subsequently, Amtrak asked for a $56.5 million supplemental appropriation, warning of additional cutbacks after Jan. 1, otherwise.

AMTRAK ARGUES that it can attract all the riders it has seats for once problem-plagued cars are replaced with reliable new equipment.

And to that end, its five-year improvement plan proposes improvements in many facilities, along with the purchase of 353 new passenger cars.

It's just hard to believe that pouring more money into a bottomless pit will solve the problem, eventually. In 200 years, sending good tax dollars after bad ones hasn't worked yet.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Liberal Social Engineers Color-Blind...Sometimes

CHICAGO—The symbolism of the demonstrators who marched in Washington before the Supreme Court heard the Allan Bakke case was almost perfect.

The marchers demanding that Bakke's claim of reverse discrimination be rejected were using a weapon of political protest in what is supposed to be a proceeding of constitutional law.

It was indeed an appropriate symbol, since the purpose of the drive for racial and ethnic quotas is, precisely to overturn the rule of law as we have historically understood it and to put in its place the unchecked rule of liberal ideology.

Such is the single point that emerges with any clarity from the brief submitted by the Justice Department. Over and over in this document, one encounters the phrase, "It is appropriate to take race into account" to deal with past discrimination and the like.

"There is no racially blind method of selection that will enroll more than a trickle of minority students in the nation's colleges and universities," says Archibald Cox.

"Race is very relevant," says Solicitor General Wade McCree Jr. "To be blind to race today is to be blind to reality."

IN OTHER WORDS, these gentlemen are saying, the Constitution emphatically should not be color-blind when that conception stands in the way of programs we are promoting.

In that event, we junk the rule of color-blindness, and pick and choose according to race as we see fit.

One rule for the rest of society, and quite a different rule for us.

Which means, in essence, no rule at all, except the convenience and discretion of those who have set up shop as professional friends of "civil rights."

The issue joined before our highest court is thus of great significance, not only for Allan Bakke, or even for the continuing debate over "affirmative action."

The crucial point is whether we still possess the rule of law in the United States.

If so, then Bakke has a chance of winning. If not, then he will lose, and the social engineers of "civil rights" will be at liberty to change our constitutional guidelines as they please.

Lubbock Doctor Has Good Reason To Back Seat Belts

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
 My daughter went to sleep while going back to college traveling at a rather high rate of speed. She went off the highway and suffered rather minimally, except for a compression fracture of one of the vertebrae of her spine. The girl who was with her was not hurt.

I am sure they would have both been injured badly, chances are they would have both been thrown out of the car or thrown through the windshield. Very likely they could have been killed if they had not had their seat belts on. I am sure the only reason they had their seat belts on was the fact that the car would not start without the seat belts being fastened.

I realize it is a dead issue, but I do feel the law was a good one and saved many lives and severe injuries when cars would not start without the seat belts being fastened.

Hereford Woman Defends Farm Strike As Justified

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
 I have been very disappointed in your coverage of American Agriculture Rallies. In my opinion, the news is an asset to our cause, but you also need us. Lubbock would be especially aware of the conditions of farming, because your economy is farm oriented.

I realize your cotton has been bringing you a good income but, the market price of cotton has dropped 20 cents this year so your economy is dropping. You are going to be hurt also.

Several countries have called, wanting the same thing, because their market is controlled by ours. They are in trouble also.

We need a Farm Program for farmers, run by a farmer from every phase of Agriculture. We don't need to be saddled with welfare, food stamps, and school lunch programs as part of it. Sure the farm program is allotted a great deal of money, but less than 50 per cent is given to the farmers' program.

There is this talk of the government subsidizing the farmer when in fact, the farmer subsidizes the American people.

We need to get rid of the bureaucrats and so-called politicians (sic) who are ruining us.

We need farm groups who will lobby for us in Washington, not go up there on our money and then fight over which one is best.

"Why can't we get an income for our labor? We're not now."

"Why should we continue to go in debt, for a nation who can only think of cheap food?"

"Why not give us a fair profit? We work very hard. The farmers in the grain belt have not made a profit for so long that the money lenders are turning away 20 per cent again this year. Are we not allowed new cars, nice homes, and air conditioned tractors. Why can't we have a standard of living that you do?"

"Who of you does not have an air conditioned building to work in? We're only human, we only want what you have, even though for the most part it's all mortgaged. What will happen if all these things are repossessed? It really boils down to a morals issue. There are some farmers who were free of debt a number of years and now they are in debt up to their ears, just to feed the consumer."

This year 20 per cent of farmers are being pushed out again of a chosen profession, and what scares me is foreign citizens are coming here and buying as much as 10 or more sections at a time, with the money we paid for too high priced oil. What is to become of our children when they own the farm market and they already own the stock market? They will be our dictator. It reminds me of what Krusch said, "We won't have to fire a shot to take your country."

We have tried everything else. To strike is all we have left. We only ask our fair share for our labor. I do hope you will help us as we have no other alternative but to strike for 100 per cent parity.

Seagraves Man Claims U.S. Leaders Have Misled People

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
 Giving up the Panama Canal under the proposed conditions is wrong. The American people know and instinctively feel it is wrong, and no amount of explaining by Mr. Carter and Mr. Ford is likely to change this. Perhaps that is because the siren's song of the politicians has hit too many flat notes lately.

The performance of those who control our destiny would not inspire the confidence required for rubber stamping this important action. Let's look at the record. Americans were promised a Great Society, and were given a welfare state and a war run by politicians that wasted husbands and sons when there was no intention of winning.

They saw their president welcome back into the fold those who fled the service and duty which they foolishly accepted.

They have become accustomed to having their lives disrupted and changed to comply with regulations from a government that seems to be on a crusade to right all of the wrongs committed by men since the beginning of time.

Historians and philosophers may look back and say that America freely chose the road that it would travel and therefore deserved its fate. This would only be half true, for America has been lied to by its leaders. No man could win a national office on a platform advocating no-win wars, forced busing and doubling the welfare rolls.

The people are right about Panama. They know that the United States has operated the canal efficiently and fairly to the benefit of all the trading nations of the world, and that it is wrong to turn it over to a small, relatively powerless, unstable, Central American country that is presently being governed by a dictator who may remain in power for 30 years or 30 days.

This nation has been plagued with leaders who have lost faith in America, but seem to be obsessed with the belief that western civilization is in decline and are determined to make it so.

New Deal Resident Offers Praise Of Nursing Homes

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
 In recent weeks the news columns of The Avalanche-Journal have carried stories regarding alleged shortcomings or wrongdoings regarding nursing homes elsewhere in Texas and even in Lubbock.

I do not know what may have been involved in these instances, but I should like to put in a word of commendation, if I may, for nursing homes and their personnel.

Within the past year, two members of my family have been residents of a Lubbock nursing home, and in no way have I ever had cause to be displeased with the care they received. In fact, it has been my observation that the quality of care and the concern shown are equal and perhaps even superior to that which an ailing or infirm person might receive at the hands of a relative.

Nursing homes offer a very necessary service in today's society, and I feel that most—if not all—function very ably and most sympathetically to carry out what is often a very difficult undertaking.

Lvelland Man Takes Issue With Farm Strike Threat

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
 I see in The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal of Oct. 15 where "farmers send strike message."

I have no quarrel with the farmers, for this is a free country.

But, wouldn't it be great if all the oil companies would just get together and shut down all their wells and all their plants and not produce or sell any oil or fuels of any kind for six months?

Then we could go back to the early 1930s almost overnight.

If you wasn't there you don't know what you missed. This could be a lesson for all of us. We need the farmers. But the farmers need the rest of the world too. None of us can live independently.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Blood On His Hand

IRON-FISTED Wang Tung-hsing, 61, now emerges as Red China's new strong man. On the surface, Communist party Chairman Hau Kuo-feng, Mao Tse-tung's successor, rules the roost. But Wang is now in control where we have so much at stake. No man's hands are bloodier.

This is a switch.

Wang suddenly arrested ruthless, ambitious, suave Chiang Ching, Mao's widow (known in Red China oddly, as Miss Chiang), and three Politburo members last October.

Formerly an actress in Shanghai, Chiang was Mao's fourth wife and fully as brutal as Mao himself: a tough, dangerous guerrilla fighter who made her spurs with Mao during the famous Long March to the Yunnan Caves.

Wang was a protégé of Chiang. Nevertheless, he accused Chiang of plotting with the three others to take over Red China's government on Mao's death. Nobody knows, but all four may now be executed.

RED CHINA'S secret police is the Hai-Wai-Tiao (Public Security Bureau) and Wang was Mao's personal bodyguard during the Long March in the mid-1930s. During this, Wang began his Communist career.

Born in Kiangsi Province, south-central China, Wang is a short partly bald man—the typical secret policeman.

He keeps the party's most intimate records and files on all key figures, handles the security for Red China's top leaders, has a file on all Politburo members and other prominent Chinese as well as run-of-the-mine people both at home and abroad.

Mao elevated Wang to head the Public Security Bureau, whose agents are everywhere in Red China. He did this at the instigation of Chiang. The elevation was the result of an intense, top-level backbiting scheme in which Chiang came out on top.

This required purging powerful Hsieh Fu-chin, a member of Red China's Politburo and Chairman of the Peking Revolutionary Committee. In addition, Hsieh was Mao's old and trusted friend and adviser.

IN ADDITION, Wang claims that Chiang attempted to get one of her followers made deputy director of the Public Security Bureau or political commissar and that he rebuffed her.

Wang became commander of the cryptic 8341 unit as well. This has about 45,000 agents all over Red China and is composed of two divisions of guards, an independent armored regiment and some special anti-aircraft, engineering and signal detachments.

The bloody Cultural Revolution in 1966-69, which killed countless Chinese and convulsed millions into renewed support of Mao, gave the 8341 unit increased support among Community party leaders.

Behind the scenes, Wang's most noticeable advance apparently came during the Cultural Revolution. Mao ousted many party chiefs and abolished the party office of Secretary General, although Wang himself appropriated many of the party secretariat duties. And by 1967 he was elected an alternate member of the ruling Politburo.

THE 8341 TROOPS seized six Peking factories and took over Peking and Tsingtau Universities. The unit also prepared the "Little Red Book" of Mao quotations and distributed hundreds of millions of copies.

The 8341 unit also ordered its members "not to establish social contacts with society at large to insure protecting the 8341 secrets."

Wang, a steadfast admirer of Mao, insists that to the end of Mao's life, he was not senile and absolutely in control of Red China's government—in spite of contrary evidence. This conviction separates Wang from many Peking leaders, especially Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

However, Wang's influence is immense. When the party leaders arrived at Mao's mausoleum to commemorate the first anniversary of Mao's death, Wang directed them to their places.

Our State Department feels that Wang emerges today as Red China's most powerful man since the incredible Dwaiger Empress Tsu-shi, the last of the Manchus, with her power of life and death over the Chinese millions.

Salt is somewhat scarce in East Africa. That's why the Masai tribesmen thereabouts drink cow's blood. There's salt in it. They mix it with milk.

Incidentally, they bleed their cows routinely without butchering them.

WAS NON OTHER than Havelock Ellis who said the most noted feature of the female anatomy is the eyes. What he did not explain, though, is why.

Marlene Dietrich, whose eyes have been noted world-wide, did explain it. She said, in effect, the only reason a man notices first a woman's eyes is that he wants to find out if they notice him. Believe she had that right.

It has been claimed that nobody ever observed any woman's eyes as beautiful except when those eyes gazed straight back at the observer.

The drinking cup of the early Danes was called a "rouse." To empty it was to "gar rouse." Which is where we get our word "carouse," says our Language man.

Q. "Wasn't there a time when Coca-Cola contained cocaine?"

A. Not in the last 74 years. In 1903, caffeine replaced the cocaine in that original recipe.

Girl Reports Being Beaten Near School

A 17-year-old O.L. Slaton Junior High School student told police Monday she was attacked while walking to school alone in the 3300-block of Avenue Q.

Police said the youth told them she was walking along the roadway about 7:50 a.m. Monday when two other youths she knew came up behind her.

The three began arguing, she said, and when the other two refused to agree with her, they reportedly knocked her to the ground and began kicking her.

The young girl was treated at a city hospital for minor injuries and released.

Just after midnight Sunday, burglars pried open a door to Patrick Pappas' 4005 24th doctor's office and attempted to enter the safe there.

Pappas told police the bandits didn't open the device, but their efforts inflicted more than $1,600 to the office.

Bobby Phillips of Phillips Welding at 1006 Ave. A reported the burglary of his firm in which $250 worth of assorted tools were taken sometime between 4 p.m. Sunday and 8:15 a.m. Monday.

Burglars also entered the 5208 11th St. No. 13 residence of Jo Smith and removed $50 from her wallet before 1:45 a.m. Monday, she told police. Paul J. Roberts of 4117 Brownfield Road No. 45 told police someone removed a $1,700 stereo unit from his home between Saturday and Monday morning.

John Daniel Wilson of 705-B 47th St. told police someone stole $1,000 worth of tools and a CB radio from his pickup parked at his home Sunday morning.

According to Juan Poroz, someone walked through his unlocked front door at 3504 E. Colgate St. Sunday and made off with a stereo and 11 posters, with a total value of about $800.

Sybil Hudson of 1605 Vanda Ave. said a small amount of jewelry was stolen from her home during a three-hour period from Sunday. Reports indicated there were no signs of forced entry.

Burglars got into Huse Brake and Alignment at 615 19th St. sometime during the weekend, the shop's owner said. Reportedly taken was a CB radio from a pickup parked on the premises and an undetermined amount of change from a soft drink machine and a coin box. Entry was gained by breaking a glass in an office door.

Careless Smoking Blamed For Blaze

CHICAGO (AP) — Authorities blamed smoking in bed Monday for a fire which killed seven persons in a hotel for transients.

Police investigators said that there was no evidence of arson and that the fire apparently started when a cigarette ignited a mattress on the first floor.

The blaze swept through the Toledo Hotel on South Ashland Avenue early Saturday. Twelve persons were injured, including three firemen who were treated and released.

Six of those killed were trapped in a first-floor addition to the building, authorities said.

"There was a mad rush of everybody trying to get out," said a neighbor, Robert Burton, 27. "I heard people trapped. There was smoke everywhere. It was a total mess."

Church Ponders Gays

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The General Assembly of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) approved a resolution Monday supporting laws to protect the civil liberties of homosexuals. It specified, however, that it was "neither approving nor condemning homosexuality."

The resolution also stated that homosexuals are victims of discrimination and that sodomy laws are unfairly and unevenly applied against them.

The measure admits that the church has contributed to the persecution of homosexuals and should now support legal reform concerning their civil rights.

One delegate argued that the phrase "neither approving nor condemning homosexuality" implied spiritual consent, but others insisted the church should favor protecting the rights of all groups in society.

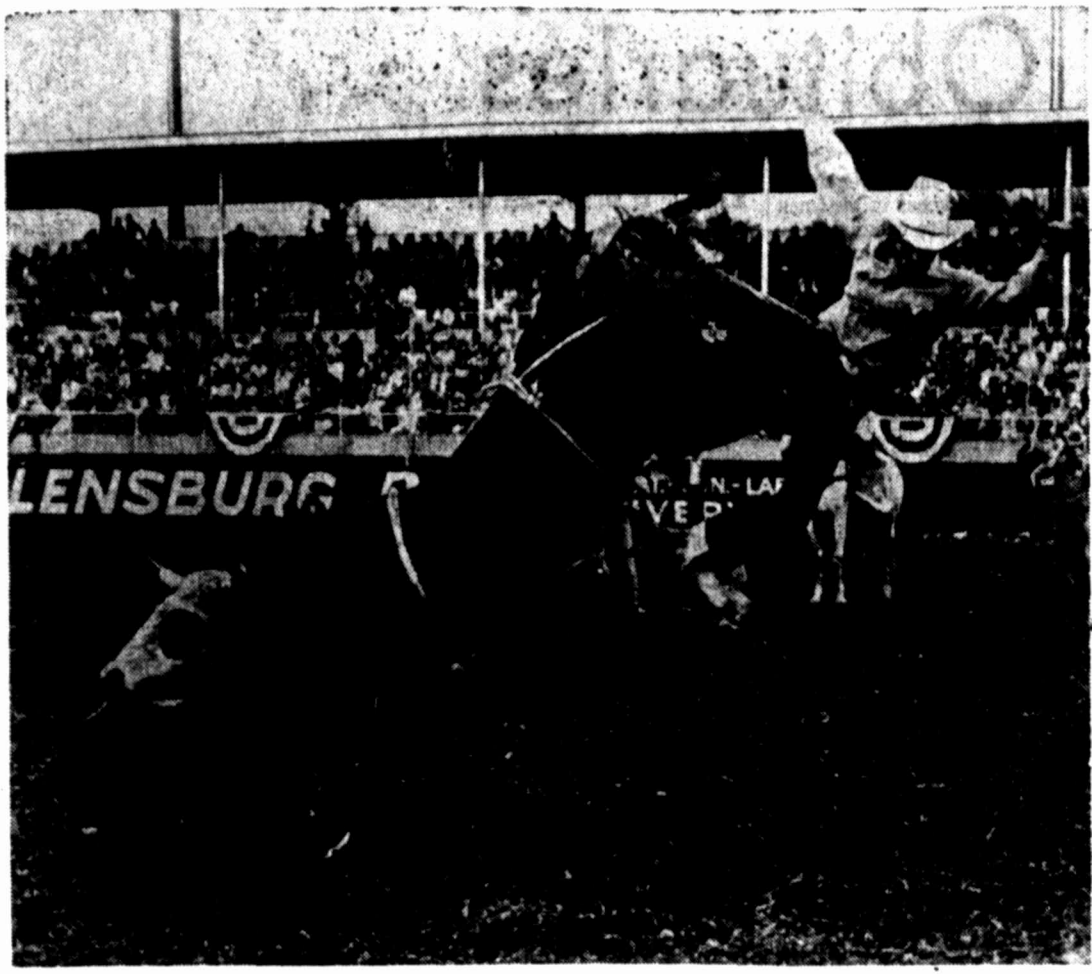

About 11,000 persons are attending the assembly, which runs through Wednesday in Kansas City. The denomination claims 1.3 million members in the United States.

On Sunday, the body voted to accept a report for study by local congregations that says the church should work for human and civil rights for homosexuals.

Competition In Tech's 31st Rodeo Begins Wednesday

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Top notch arena action unfolds here Wednesday through Saturday as the 31st annual Texas Tech Intercollegiate Rodeo plays out in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Cowboys and cowgirls from 15 colleges and universities in Region 9 of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association will be taking on tough rodeo stock, each other and the clock for low times and high scores.

Points earned will count toward a share of the $100,000 in scholarship funds distributed to schools in the name of NIRA rodeo champions.

In the 1976-77 season Region 9 won the largest slice of the annual scholarship monies available from the U.S. Tobacco Co.

Of the $12,800 going to nine schools in the region $4,700 went to Howard County Junior College, $2,700 to New Mexico State University, $1,600 to Tarleton State University, $1,400 Texas Tech, $1,100 to Western Texas College, $500 to Northwest Texas State College, $500 to Sul Ross University, $200 to Eastern New Mexico University and $100 to Ranger Junior College.

Scholarship money is presented to schools in the names of regional and national winners in bull riding, bronc riding, steer wrestling, calf roping, team roping, girls' barrel racing, girls' goat tying and girls' breakaway roping.

Funds are used for education of a participant in the institution's rodeo program.

Regional awards are $500 each for six men's and three women's events in addition to $1,000 for top men's team and $500 for the top women's team.

After national finals were played off, $1,000 went to Howard County in the name of Jack Himes bareback bronc champion and to Western Texas College in the name of Joan Whitehead as barrel racing champion.

Similar amounts were won for their schools by Sid Morrow of New Mexico State University in saddle bronc and Steve Fryar of Tarleton in steer wrestling.

Contestants in the Tech event will be appearing in the new look of Tech rodeo with stock producer, Harry Vold of Avondale, Colo., managing the entire production to ease the rodeo through a financial bind.

Bob Romer of Canyon will be rodeo clown with Hub Hubbell of Sarasota, Fla., the announcer.

The Abernathy Riding Club will furnish special pageantry which replaces the traditional grand entry and the Francisco Zamoras will fill the entertainment spotlight for two performances each night.

Wednesday is family bargain night with $3 buying any seat in the house on a non-reserved status. Tickets from Thursday on will be $5.50, $4.50 and $3.50 with $1 off for those 12 and under.

Rodeo time is 7:30 p.m.

Vigilante Group Says Klan Nowhere In Sight

MCALLEN (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan, which pledged to keep illegal aliens out, was nowhere in sight and a group of Mexican-Americans who promised to keep the Klan out of the border could not find any Klan members this weekend.

The sheriff of Hidalgo County dismissed claims by either group and said he had other problems to worry about.

The formation of Mexican-American vigilante groups was the result of announcements made last week by KKK spokesmen in California that the organization would patrol the border to keep illegal aliens out.

The vigilante group was formed in Crystal City, a mostly Mexican-American town southwest of San Antonio and about 45 miles from Eagle Pass on the Rio Grande. The group was made up mostly of members of the Raza Unida Party which controls Crystal City politics.

Not all Raza Unida leaders agreed. Mayor Francisco Benavides said: "I think they (the KKK and the vigilantes) are both wrong," he said. "Neither group has any authority to do it."

But Arturo Gonzalez, leader of the Barrio Club of Crystal City and a former mayor of the town, said he had led a group of Saturday and Sunday that patrolled a 50-mile area from El Indio to Quemado on either side of Eagle Pass along the river.

He said several pickup trucks and private cars were used to drive on U.S. 83 and a farm road near the river.

Gonzalez said there was no sign of the KKK, the U.S. Border Patrol or illegal aliens.

Law enforcement officials said the two groups would have a hard time patrolling the nearly 1,000 miles of border between Texas and Mexico.

Gonzalez said his group was patrolling the area to make sure the KKK did not come to the region to harass Mexican-Americans.

Asked if the groups were armed, he answered: "No more than the KKK."

A KKK spokesman said last week the Klan members would defend themselves if attacked.

Gonzalez said the illegal alien problem was one for the federal government not private groups.

In Laredo, a spokesman for the Border Patrol said there had not been any signs of KKK members or Crystal City vigilantes.

He pointed out the difficulties in patrolling through private land along the river and the distances involved.

"I think the two groups ought to stay home and let us handle the problem," he said.

Sheriff Brig Marmolejo of Hidalgo in the middle of the Rio Grande Valley, where the majority of the population is Mexican-American laughed about reports of the KKK patrolling the border and said:

"There aren't enough gringos to patrol the border. We don't have any (racial) problems here. We are too civilized for that."

Referring to the illegal alien problem, he added: "If they really want to end, all they have to do is fine every employer who hires an illegal alien, but they won't do it because they can pay them very low wages."

In Rio Grande City, a spokesman for the sheriff's office said KKK patrols "will not be tolerated. It's a job for the law enforcement agencies (to keep illegal aliens out)."

In San Antonio, former state senator Joe Bernal said he did not condone the Barrio Club activities, but saw them as a reaction to the KKK announcement and a move to prevent harassment of Mexican-Americans.

Bolles Murder Case Defendant Testifies

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Murder defendant James Robison testified Monday that confessed killer John Harvey Adamson told him he was going to blow up a car three months before reporter Don Bolles was slain in a dynamite blast.

Robison, 55, a suburban Chandler plumber, and Max Dunlap, 48, a Phoenix contractor, have been on trial since July 11, charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy in the June 2, 1976, bombing of a car occupied by Bolles, an Arizona Republic reporter.

Adamson has pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of second-degree murder and testified that Dunlap hired him, and Robison built the bomb and detonated it with a remote-control device. The defense contends that Dunlap was framed and Robison was on a plumbing job at the time of the bombing.

Robison, testifying in his own defense, said he had loaned Adamson $50, and asked in April 1976 when he was going to repay it.

"He said in a week or two he was going to San Diego to get some money and he would pay me. He said he was going to blow up a car."

Adamson has testified that he went to San Diego in April 1976 to buy a remote-control device for setting off the Bolles bomb, and that he called Robison to discuss the purchase.

Robison admitted that Adamson called him from San Diego twice in April 1976 but said Adamson never mentioned a remote-control device.

"He (Adamson) said he was to meet a man at the baseball game," Robison testified. "He said that this particular person wouldn't talk to him except in a crowd. He said, 'It has to do with the thing I told you about.'"

The defense contends that Adamson was working with persons in San Diego, and not Robison, when the reporter's car was bombed.

Robison said he was working on a Phoenix apartment house on the day of the Bolles bombing, and left the job at about 10:30 a.m. to drive to a plumbing supply store about 15 minutes away.

The defendant said he dealt at the plumbing wholesaler's with Chris Stamps, who has testified that Robison was with him 45 minutes between 10:30 a.m. and noon on June 2, 1976. Police say the bomb maimed Bolles at about 11:30 a.m.

In other testimony, Robison said he was a friend of Adamson, whom he considered boastful. "You couldn't always put much credence on what he said," Robison testified.

Tourist Misses San Francisco

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Erwin Kreuz, the German tourist who mistook Bangor for San Francisco, wound up in jail Monday — but as a tourist, not an inmate.

The tour of the Penobscot County jail was the latest adventure for the 49-year-old brewery worker from Augsburg, West Germany, who got off a charter jet last week when it stopped at Bangor International Airport for refueling.

Kreuz, who speaks no English, had wandered through Bangor for three days before realizing he was not in California. After finding someone who understood German, he was introduced to the owners of a German-American restaurant who befriended him and became his hosts.

"He said he wanted to visit an American jail, so I called down there and arranged it," said Ralph Coffman, the restaurant manager.

During his visit to the jail, Kreuz was ushered through jail cells and introduced to the inmates. "He was tickled to death. He wants to stay right here in Bangor. He doesn't want to go to San Francisco," said Joel Rudom, the jail supervisor.

'Vampire' Harrasses Family

FEDERAL WAY, Wash. (AP) — A family in this Seattle suburb says it's weary of being harassed by a prankster in vampire attire.

The family, which police say asked not to be identified, has had intermittent visits from the Dracula-type person over the past two years. Sunday night was the 10th or 11th time, police said.

"He hasn't done any harm. They're just a little tired of it," said police spokeswoman JoAnn Cratty.

Although he wears heavy makeup on his face — complete with a vampire scar — the family describes the man as young, tall and slender, said Miss Cratty.

He wears a cape and black clothes and drives a black vehicle. Last spring on one occasion he drove a hearse. He merely smiles and escapes into the night.

Miss Cratty said the visits come at irregular times and do not seem to coincide with symbolic occasions, such as Halloween or a full moon. But they're always at night.

MDs Say Laughter Medicinal

NEW YORK (AP) — Doctors report increasing evidence that a person can laugh himself to health.

The November issue of Science Digest cites several studies in which laughter produced beneficial physical and mental results.

A hearty laugh benefits the lungs and clears the respiratory system, the researchers said, and also provides a healthy emotional outlet, discharges superfluous energy, combats boredom and alleviates social pressures.

Researchers from the Yale School of Medicine said they found people who enjoy humor columns and comic strips generally had sound mental health. Researchers also found that those who avoid humor and laughing may have a fear of appearing to lose control of any situation.

Toy Makers Getting Ready

CINCINNATI (AP) — Toy manufacturers here, anticipating the Christmas rush, are awaiting the verdict on such toys as a cow that gives milk and a doll that has a heartbeat.

"When the days start turning colder and the television ads start coming on, that's when people start thinking about Christmas," said John Beck, a spokesman for Kenner Toy Co., headquartered in Cincinnati. "We have done advance research about what we think will happen, but you never really know."

This year Kenner has "Milky, the Marvelous Milking Cow," selling for under $14. It comes with its own trough, and when you pull its tail, it drinks water. The head comes up and the cow moos.

"That means it's ready for milking," said Beck. Kenner also provides a bucket to catch the milk as it squirts from the udder.

"We've already had a request from the New York Dairy Council for six cows to use in training programs to teach city kids that milk doesn't come from cardboard cans," he said.

Ford To Recall 70,000 Autos

DETROIT (AP) — A recall of nearly 70,000 1977 and 1978-model cars and trucks was announced Monday by Ford Motor Co. for replacement of faulty hose clamps and steering gear attachments.

Ford said the problems could create "the potential for an underhood fire" or a loss of steering but said no accidents or injuries have been reported because of the conditions.

Ford said the faulty hose clamps might be on about 49,700 domestic-sold Ford Mercury, LTD II, Cougar and Thunderbird passenger cars and Rancho and F-Series light trucks with 351- and 400-cubic inch engines. Another 5,300 units in Canada and 600 in export markets were affected.

Ford said owners should return the vehicles to dealers for free replacement of a fuel line hose clamp adjacent to the carburetor fuel filter.

"On some of these vehicles there is a possibility that improper hose clamp assembly could cause fuel leakage, creating the potential for an underhood fire," said Stephen Geoffrey, a manager in the parts and service division.

The problem was discovered in pre-delivery inspection of one of the models.

Prince Pilots Space Shuttle Simulator During NASA Tour

ROVER INSPECTION — Prince Charles of England climbs out of a moon rover Monday after getting a briefing on its operations at the Johnson Space Center at Houston. Behind the rover is Astronaut John Young and Johnson Space Center director Christopher Kraft, right. (AP Laserphoto)

HOUSTON (AP) — His Highness Prince Charles took a spin in a space shuttle simulator Monday and afterward described the experience as "very, very nice."

Joining the prince in the simulator were Fred Haise and Gordon Fullerton, who will make the next space shuttle flight Wednesday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. Haise said Prince Charles "flew very well. He seemed to enjoy it."

Indian Languages Added To Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is adding seven Indian languages to the 13 other languages in a Bilingual Education Fellowship program.

The seven are Northern Cheyenne, Blackfoot, Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, Kiowa and Seminole, the Office of Education said Monday.

Navajo, Crow and the Pueblo languages already were eligible for study under the three-year-old program, designed to help train educators who specialize in teaching students with limited English-speaking ability.

The government is spending $4 million in grants for 665 graduate students studying one of the 20 languages at 42 universities in 16 states. The fellowships average $5,940.

The most commonly studied language is Spanish.

Space Center, said, "The prince showed a great deal of interest in our projects and obviously was greatly interested in what we have done to date. He showed a good technical knowledge of our projects."

Prince Charles did not stop to chat with the press at any time during the day.

During a tour of the museum at the space center, he was accompanied by astronaut John Young and on several occasions was heard to say "marvelous, simply marvelous."

Later the prince toured Saks Fifth Avenue store on the outskirts of downtown Houston, where he was greeted by several thousand people crammed on the three floors of the British-owned department store. He stopped to chat with several persons, including Felix Mendoza.

Mendoza said the prince commented on a display of cosmetics nearby and "he told me, 'Those look very expensive.' I told him that if he wanted them, I would buy them and give them to him. He laughed at that."

The prince also stopped to admire a youngster in the arms of his mother and said, "I would like to have one like that myself."

About two dozen persons in the department store carried British flags and the prince received loud applause as he walked slowly through a roped-off area. One woman shook his hand and said, "I was in your country 10 years ago and I hope you enjoy my country as much as I enjoyed yours."

Prince Charles, on his second day of a three-day visit to Texas, came here from the 50,000-acre South Texas ranch owned by Tobin and Anne Armstrong.

The prince and his party arrived at Hobby International Airport at 10 a.m. to be greeted by Houston Mayor Fred Hofheinz. Nearly 50 persons were on hand in the misty morning to welcome the prince, who waved and then was taken away to the Space Center.

Strange Case Puzzles Lawmen

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Mrs. Laura A. Hawkins, 68, who was found at the base of a brush-covered ravine here shortly before midnight Saturday, is in satisfactory condition at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

The circumstances surrounding the case of how Mrs. Hawkins came to be found in the ravine are strange, and at this point, are still unclear, since sheriff's deputies have been unable to interview Mrs. Hawkins.

Her son, Frank Timmons, and daughter, Mrs. Mabel Dickenson reported to the sheriff's office that Mrs. Hawkins had been missing since Thursday.

At the time of her disappearance, Mrs. Hawkins had given consent to a Corsicana man and woman to stay with her in her home. They had been with her since last Tuesday.

The man was a recently released mental patient, and the woman was his 60-year-old mother.

While Timmons had not seen his mother since Thursday, a neighbor claims to have seen Mrs. Hawkins sweeping her back porch about 8 p.m. Friday.

Neighbors claim they also heard arguments at the home of Mrs. Hawkins Thursday evening.

Timmons discovered his mother at the bottom of the ravine, after which she was rushed to the hospital.

Shortly after, sheriff's deputies Frank Corey and Bill Shankles arrested the Corsicana man and woman on suspicion of assault.

In a statement made in the sheriff's office, the male suspect claims to have driven Mrs. Hawkins to the edge of the ravine at about 8 p.m. Friday.

What happened then is still unclear and will remain so until sheriff's officers can interview Mrs. Hawkins.

Howard County District Attorney Rick Hamby is being consulted for possible felony charges.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

ACREAGE SPRAYED IN THE HIGH PLAINS Boll Weevil Control Program by Friday had already exceeded what was expected for the entire year.

Comparatively, weevil numbers were small and infested acreage less widespread early in the year, points out Ed Dean, field service director of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

So program officials anticipated insecticide treatments on an aggregate of around 750,000 acres. Instead, the fast-maturing crop caused weevils to spread over a larger area in search of food and oviposition sites.

And it already has been necessary to spray more than 1.1 million acres. Weevils prefer to feed on and deposit eggs in cotton squares and young bolls. When there is a scarcity of this young fruit, as is the case in mature cotton, migration from field to field is greatly accelerated.

IT WAS THOUGHT AT THE BEGINNING of the program in early September that base acres in the control zone would be 200,000 to 250,000, but excessive migration spread the zone over about 425,000 acres.

Fields have been sprayed from one to five times. The base acreage now is declining, Dean says, as some cotton in the infested area is being harvested following defoliation or desiccation.

Approximately 300,000 acres were covered in the last application completed last Thursday.

"We have had to spray many more acres than expected and the cost of the program has of course been greater," Dean says, "but weevils are still being kept in bounds and there is no reason to expect that the numbers going into hibernation will be greater than in past years."

TEN APPLICATOR PLANES BEGAN program treatments on Sept. 6. It was expected that no more than 20 planes would be required at the peak of spraying activities, but the unpredictable extent of migration required the use of 25 applicators at one time.

Aggregate acreage sprayed in 1976 was 1,161,000 in a base control zone of 350,000 acres.

The assault on weevils will continue until their food supply is destroyed either by chemicals or the first freeze.

The annual program was initiated by the PCG in 1964 to prevent the spread of the dreaded pest across the huge High Plains cotton acreage west of the Caprock. It has been highly successful.

Cost of the program is borne jointly by High Plains cotton producers, the USDA, and the Texas Department of Agriculture. The USDA matches funds contributed by producers and the TDA.

Set-Aside Requested On Grain

The Grain Sorghum Producers Association (GSPA) at Lubbock has appealed to Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland for at least a 20 per cent set-aside on feed grains.

In a recent letter to Bergland, Elbert Harp, GSPA executive director, said: "With the October crop report showing a record corn crop and a large increase in grain sorghum over 1976, we want to plead again for a set-aside program of not less than 20 per cent for feed grains. A 10 per cent reduction will not decrease supply enough to restore prices to profitable levels.

Grain Sorghum Producers Association figures show that even if there were an actual 10 per cent reduction in production, the yield would be a combined total of 5.9 billion bushels, the official noted.

Over a three-year period the average production per year for corn and sorghum together was 6.6 billion bushels. In the same period the average per year combined consumption of the two grain was only 6.1 billion, said Harp.

The yearly carryovers have produced the 1 billion-bushel surplus of grain we now have, he added.

Farmers' Strike Called Serious Threat

SPRINGFIELD, Colo. (UPI) — A farmwife working in American Agriculture's strike headquarters Monday disputed Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland's claim that farmers are not serious about striking.

"It isn't just a threat," said Laurie Schroder, who helps her husband, Ekene, operate a 1,600-acre farm in south-eastern Colorado. "We will strike. I'm afraid we are going to carry it out."

Mrs. Schroder made her comments after Bergland was quoted as saying a threatened strike by farmers is only an attempt to call national attention to their serious economic problems.

Bergland said warnings of a Dec. 14 strike by farmers were "just a threat — an attempt to call attention to the seriousness of the agricultural economic situation, particularly regarding producers who have had three and four years of financial losses in livestock and now a drop in grain prices."

Mrs. Schroder said farmers were tired of getting only attention and now wanted action.

"We have to have some help," she said.

"It's not just the young farmers that are threatening to do this," she said. "At a meeting in Oberlin, Kan., an 80-year-old farmer who homesteaded there stood up and said we should go ahead with the strike."

"He told people they should get behind the strike, and he said he was going to try to do something to help, too."

Bergland also questioned whether farmers were serious about going along with the strike because of field reports which indicate winter wheat now is being planted on fallow land as usual.

Dock Strike Talks Broken Off

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — Despite early optimism, talks between striking dock workers and the shipping industry broke off Monday when a federal mediator again declared a stalemate.

"After four days of intensive discussions with the parties, I have reluctantly concluded that an impasse has been reached," said Wayne Horvitz, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

"Since no further progress is possible under present circumstances I have recessed the negotiations subject to call," Horvitz added.

He had called both sides to Bal Harbour for weekend meetings in which shippers made an unusual entry to talks with waterfront employers and proposed settlement terms.

The proposal, dealing largely with job security for longshoremen displaced by containerized cargo-handling, was discussed, revised and discussed again.

"The carriers felt they could revise their proposal no further," said John Rogers, a Horvitz spokesman.

Some 50,000 members of the International Longshoremen Association have been on limited strike since Oct. 1, halting all containerized shipments through Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports. The strike also stopped grain exports at New Orleans.

Cattle Futures Steady On Market

CHICAGO — Cattle futures finished unchanged to up 20 points Monday led by February on a turnover of 9,423 cars on the Chicago Mercantile Exchanges.

The February option was off 15 points early, while the nearby gained 42 points to its highest since early June at $42.35 per hundredweight.

Demand was prompted by strength in cash cattle, despite increased arrivals coupled with some sharply higher feed prices.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 66 1/2 to 67 cents per pound for all weights, highest since May 1976. Cash cattle were steady to $1.50 higher with the top at $44.50.

The six markets expect 16,500 receipts today.

Hog futures ended 30 points lower to 10 higher. December lost most, falling 37 points early in the trade, while October was up most. Volume was estimated at 4,267 trades.

Early demand followed light hog runs and higher feed grain prices but follow-through was lacking. Late selling increased as cash hogs weakened and Iowa-Minnesota hog runs swelled to 110,000 head.

Commission house selling was noted early in the December contract.

Wholesale hams were unchanged at 80-86 cents per pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were off $1.25 to 50 cents higher with a top at Indianapolis of $43.25 per hundredweight.

The six major terminals expect 28,500 arrivals today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures rebounded from early losses of as much as 32 points to closed 52-75 points higher led by August. February was up 107 points early in the session. Turnover was estimated at 4,387 exchanges in mostly local action.

Prices climbed two cents above recent lows to their highest points in 31/2 weeks on strong feed grains coupled with light hog runs. Some early selling was tracked to weak cash hogs.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged at 45 1/2 to 50 cents per pound, f.o.b. river, a 1 1/2-week low.

Luxury Liner Revived To Serve As Hotel

PARIS (AP) — The luxury liner "France," whose transatlantic career fell victim to skyrocketing oil prices, has been rescued from the mothball fleet as a floating hotel — by a Saudi Arabian businessman.

Akkram Ojeh's Luxemburg-based international financial group bought the 66,348-ton liner through a Swiss subsidiary for a price between $12-$20 million, Jacques Friedmann, president of the Compagnie Generale Maritime, told a news conference Monday.

The company will help Ojeh find a location for the "France's" new career, which could be North America or the Middle or Far East, Friedmann said.

"Wherever it is," Friedmann said, "Mr. Ojeh wants the liner to remain an ambassador of France, a prestigious operation featuring French cuisine and promoting French products" and indicated the liner likely would continue to be called the "France."

Ojeh is a Francophile who already has been awarded the Legion of Honor for services to France and was described by the company as having "worked hard for more than 30 years to tighten the economic links between France and Saudi Arabia." He recently bought a large stake in a troubled third-level French domestic airline, Air Alpes, and commutes between Jeddah and Paris.

The liner was ordered by the old French Line, now merged into the CGM, in 1956 to replace the aging "Liberte" and "Ile de France" on the Atlantic, then still the scene of fierce international prestige rivalry.

By the time of its launching by General Charles de Gaulle and his wife Yvonne in 1960, it had cost nearly $90 million in pre-inflation dollars.

But jet airliners changed the face of world travel and the "France" became an embarrassing symbol of ostentation for the French government, which found it was subsidizing the wealthy few to the tune of $20 million a year.

The quintupling of oil prices was the last straw and in November, 1974, the "France" was retired to the "Quai of the Forgotten" at Le Havre. Crewmen occupied the vessel but lost out on their attempt to force the government to keep it in service.

County Voting Practices Called Illegal

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County, said to say, has long conducted its elections in a lax manner which has not, even in the most cursory way, paid respect to the laws of Texas which require secrecy of the ballot.

"Through this lax attitude, Lubbock County has opened its elections to future charges of unfairness, dishonesty, coercion and all the other dangers inherent in these present days of hotly contested elections. To allow the situation to continue is to court disaster."

With those words, the local League of Women Voters in a specially commissioned law brief warned top Lubbock County officials they'd better do something about voting practices here.

The brief, outlining alleged illegalities in the continued use of paper ballots and tabletop voting and urging the adoption of voting machines, was circulated rather quietly in 1973.

League officials say the document is still current, because nothing has changed — in the county's election arrangements or applicable law — since attorney Willis Taylor drafted the study.

The voters' group did not seek a showdown in court over the issues Taylor raised, in part because the league feared Lubbock County might remedy the situation simply by buying voting booths to go along with paper ballots, league president Carolyn Lanier said.

"We think Lubbock County can do better than that," she said. "The time is long overdue to get away from paper ballots altogether and use voting machines."

The county commissioners court will consider that matter at 9 a.m. Wednesday when it convenes for a demonstration of the "lever-type" automatic voting machines. After the demonstration, commissioners are expected to vote whether to take bids on a mechanical election system — of either the lever or punch-card variety.

"I'm very confident they will decide to go with some kind of voting machine," said Mrs. Lanier. "As for which system, the league has no preference. I think we'd be out of place to suggest that they choose one kind of machine over another."

The proposed punch-card system, at an voting machines say their system is more durable, saves money on election supplies and causes fewer mistakes.

With the purchase of either system, Lubbock County commissioners will solve two disputes.

First, they will eliminate the use of paper ballots, which have been attacked card or lever, come with built-in voting booths. Thus, local voters will no longer be marking their ballots on tabletops, a practice the League of Women Voters has questioned.

"While an election conducted without voting booths is not considered illegal and void per se, it is indeed voidable and subject to attack if an injury or harm which could have been avoided by compliance with the law is found to exist," Taylor said.

He quoted state law and a 1964 opinion by the Texas attorney general that "it is the duty of the county election board to furnish voting booths for all polling places within each city of 10,000 population or more."

Taylor said, "It should be noted that Lubbock County's respect for the letter and spirit of the law is so lax that voting booths are not even provided as the legislature intended."

"By not following the legislature's direction in this matter, the county runs the very real risk of making itself subject to a writ of mandamus to compel it to follow the law and compel those empowered by law to conduct an election to follow their statutory duties."

Taylor's brief continued: "We live in the latter part of the 20th Century, a fact which would not be remarked upon except that it has been overlooked for so long by those conducting elections in Lubbock County..."

"The integrity of the ballot cannot be maintained by continued use of a large paper ballot marked by the voter, in full view of others, at a table shared by others marking their ballot."

"To argue that such a practice does not bother or interfere with an individual voter is only a comment on that voter and not an argument that the procedure maintains secrecy. The time has come when Lubbock County should join with every other metropolitan area in Texas in securing the secrecy of the ballot by the adoption and use of voting machines."

investment of about $300,000 (or $200,000 should the county decide to contract with an outside firm for ballot-counting), is by far the less expensive system. Because of cost and easier storage and distribution, courthouse sources say the punch-card proposal probably has the edge.

However, proponents of the lever-type as confusing and unwieldy, difficult and time-consuming to count, requiring too many election workers, and generally antiquated.

And — perhaps more importantly — commissioners will settle the issues raised in Taylor's brief. The proposed election devices, punch-

Candidate Claims Name Ruse

By PAT PATRICK

Attorney general candidate Mark White Monday accused his opponent in that contest of trying to trick his way into office.

"My opponent (Price Daniel Jr.) I frankly believe, wouldn't be in the race if it hadn't been for the fiasco of the Yarborough situation," declared White, on the stump in Lubbock.

Daniel, former Texas House speaker, is the son of former Gov. Price Daniel, now an associate justice on the state Supreme Court.

The younger Daniel has said he thinks name identification will play a large part in the attorney general's race next year.

"Two years ago, because of misidentification," Texans elected Don Yarborough to the Texas Supreme Court, apparently linking him in their minds with the popular former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, White hinted.

"My opponent has tried to duplicate that feat" but "the people of Texas are not going to be fooled twice," he said.

Yarborough resigned his court seat in July amid a swirl of controversy, including forgery and perjury indictments, a dozen or so civil suits and State Bar attempts to disbar him for 100 alleged improper acts.

White said he intends to make sure the public knows who it is voting for and what the candidates' philosophies of government and records in office are.

He predicted those two areas will make him the winner in the May Democratic primary.

Daniel takes a "more government" approach, and pushed for a new state constitution that meant "an assumption of more power in Austin" at the expense of local government, White said.

He claimed that Daniel's record as House speaker showed a "lack of leadership."

"In all likelihood, he'll do just about as well" in any other office he is elected to, White said of Daniel.

On the other hand, he declared his near five-year stint as Secretary of State and three years as assistant attorney general depicts a record of decisive action that helped Texans.

He pointed to a streamlined election code, statewide voter registration drive that resulted in a record 6.3 million persons registered for the 1976 election, consumer protection investigation into "usurious" interest rates and efforts to make the secretary of state's office more accessible to citizens, such as installation of a toll-free long distance call line.

White labeled himself as "much more conservative" than Daniel, who he charged "has associated himself with the far left in this state."

The 37-year-old Houston lawyer said it is "too early" to lay out campaign platform in detail, but commented that he will be a strong "law and order" man if elected attorney general.

Strict law enforcement is "imperative" for an orderly society, while lax enforcement breeds further law-breaking, he said.

He voiced support for "shock probation" which allows a judge or jury to sentence a young offender to a short time in prison and then to probate the rest of his term, rather having to hand him either an all-prison or all-probation sentence.

Giving young offenders a "taste" of what prison is like, without subjecting them to several years of the "dehumanizing" and possibly brutalizing atmosphere of the penitentiary, can make a difference in future conduct, White indicated.

He also pushed for the constitutional amendment which Texans will vote on next month that would allow judges more latitude in denying bail to persons already facing felony charges.

Law-abiding citizens must be protected from criminals, White said.

"If it takes more jails, build them. It's cheaper to have them in there than to have them running loose on the streets," he stated.

White said that if elected he would like to put together a special team of criminal prosecutors available, on request, to help local district attorneys with particularly difficult cases.

White also said that he would try to be the kind of attorney general who keeps the state out of court.

"The State of Texas can put more emphasis on advising the different state agencies...on how to conduct their affairs so as to not get involved in lawsuits," he said.

This will save taxpayers litigation money and agencies time that should be spent on serving citizens, he went on.

White, appointed secretary of state in January, 1973, resigned from the post last week when he announced he would seek to replace Atty. Gen. John Hill who is running for governor.

He said he did so because the secretary of state is the chief election officer in Texas.

He said it "would be wrong to be campaigning for political office and hold the position of referee."

"I couldn't be referee for an election and still be a participant on the field," he said.

RRC Requests Legal Action On Tax Files

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN —The Railroad Commission requested Monday that the Attorney General's Office take legal action against Rimrock Gas Co. of Amarillo because of its apparent failure to file quarterly gross receipts tax statements with the regulatory agency.

All Texas gas utilities are required by law to file such reports.

In the past Rimrock has complied with the reporting requirement, according to RRC Gas Utilities Division hearing examiner Austin C. Bray Jr.

In a letter to Atty. Gen. John Hill, the Commission noted that certified letters were sent on Sept. 13, and Oct. 13, 1977, requesting the Rimrock to file the required forms. The October letter was returned with the notation "refused," the Commission said.

The letter to the attorney general further advised Hill that Rimrock has failed to furnish the required quarterly reports for Dec. 31, 1976, March 31, 1977, June 30, 1977, and Sept. 30, 1977.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A tanker truck carrying 9,000 gallons of paint thinner burst into flames after colliding with a car on the Mexico City-to-Puebla superhighway, police said. Three persons died in the crash.

Officers said the highway, the main road to the Gulf Coast from Mexico City, was closed for six hours, creating traffic jams that stretched for miles.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My husband, who is actually a pleasant, well-behaved, law-abiding man, has got himself into a peck of trouble. He ignored several dozen traffic tickets and showed up to argue his case — fortified by a little "bottled courage." He got mouthy with the judge and was given a choice — $100 fine or 15 days in jail. He chose jail.

We have three small children — two boys, seven and five years of age, and a baby girl 10 months old. I am just sick to think that their children will have the stigma of their father's jail record all their lives.

Please tell me what to say to them. I have worried myself sick over how to break the news. I need your help. — Ashamed and Tongue-Tied Mother

Dear Mother: It doesn't make much difference what you tell the girl, but I suggest you tell the boys the truth.

Explain that Daddy is not a bad man and he didn't hurt anyone. Tell them people who drive cars must follow certain rules or they will get into trouble with the police — and this is what happened to their daddy. Explain that his punishment is to spend 15 days in jail and that's why he won't be home for a while.

Dear Ann Landers: So many people are unaware of the help available to them free of charge, will you kindly print this information in your column? I learned of it at a church meeting last night, went home, checked it out and it works fine.

Dear Hilda: You are helpful indeed.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a dedicated worker in a hospital auxiliary that does many wonderful things for handicapped children and adults. I feel very good about this group but one thing gripes the daylight out of me.

I can name at least 25 women who brag about being active members, yet they do nothing but pay their dues and attend meetings when it doesn't interfere with their social life. They refuse to accept any committee assignments and do absolutely no work.

What can be done about these lazy-bones?

Dear J.P.M.: Nothing. Just continue to collect their dues and use the money to good advantage.

Every organization has its wheelhorses and sparkplugs — then there are the other 94 per cent. There will always be the "joiners" and the "doers." Take it from me — the "doers" have the most fun.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Over the years I have had kidney stone problems. I have had operations for removal of stones in both kidneys. On occasion, I still pass blood. My last examination showed a small stone in the left kidney. My urologist is not too concerned because it has not moved.

I do pretty strenuous exercises as a member of a gym. The problem is right after the exercise I have bleeding. Then it stops. Maybe you know what the problem is. — W.T.

Stop the exercising. I'm surprised your doctor hasn't commented on this, assuming you mentioned it to him. The bleeding may of course be due to the small stone in the left kidney, and, some bleeding can also be expected following the surgery. But your strenuous exercising can cause sufficient congestion to result in the bleeding. In fact, this kind of bleeding has been known to occur in athletes with normal kidneys after violent competition.

Your next move should be obvious. Go back to your doctor and get some rules to follow in the future concerning diet, liquid needs, activities, etc. They're discussed in the booklet you ordered.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have read that vitamin A acid is used in the treatment of acne. Is this valid treatment, and must it be supervised by a doctor? My doctor says he has known of it for a long time, but thinks it is not effective. — T.W.

Information I have is that vitamin A acid is an accepted and effective form of treatment for acne. It can irritate the skin, however, so the treatment should be supervised by a doctor. However, this doesn't mean every case can or should be treated by such methods. In my booklet on acne I suggest some simpler ways for handling milder problems (which you might have). Young people need to know that some extent acne is to be expected and doesn't represent a weird abnormality. If you want a copy of the booklet, send a quarter and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have not had a menstrual period since I gave birth 18 months ago. I nursed my daughter for the first six months. Pregnancy tests are negative. I have also had routine pelvic exams. The doctor tells me not to worry. He says the reason for my not starting my periods is that I nursed. I'm also told that when I'm ready to conceive again I can get medicine to start my periods.

My husband and I would like to know why I haven't started and exactly what will be given to make me start. I am 23 years old, 5 feet 7, and weigh 124 pounds. Before I got pregnant my cycles were irregular (from 34 to 60 days apart). I was also told I have a tipped uterus. — J.P.

Breast feeding can delay return of menstruation. But since you were so irregular before, there are probably other factors at work in your lengthy delay. The tipped uterus has nothing to do with it. Your thyroid function should be checked, especially if you have other symptoms — fatigue, etc.

Your physician knows your physical condition and should be able to account for your problem. It's possible the medicine he's referring to is one of the hormonal preparations.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have an embarrassing question. Is female masturbation harmful in the early stages of pregnancy? Thanks for allowing us to be frank and ask questions we cannot ask our parents or physicians. — J.B.

The same rules apply that would for intercourse, and your doctor should rule on that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I discovered a lump on the side of my neck, and since my family has a history of cancer, I went to my doctor to have it checked out. He said he didn't know what it was, but not to worry about it unless it started to hurt. Should I ignore the lump or have it checked? — T.D.

Get a second opinion.

Don't take chances with "kidney trouble" — it could be dangerous. Read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Your Kidneys — Facts You Need to Know About Them." For a copy write to him, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

 1 cup sugar
 1 cup distilled white vinegar
 10 whole cloves
 1/2 of a cinnamon stick
 Drain liquid from beets — there will be about 1 pint. In a medium saucepan bring to a boil the beet juice, sugar, vinegar and spices, stirring until sugar dissolves. Boil gently for about 5 minutes. Add beets, simmer about 5 minutes. With a slotted spoon pack beets into a 1-quart jar, pour the spiced liquid over them. If there is not enough liquid to cover them, add enough boiling water to do so. Chill for a few days to blend flavors.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED
NEW YORK — Daytime serials have a reputation of confining scenes to domestic settings. But in recent years, as the shows have grown out of the confines of the kitchen, there have been an increasing number of spectacularly-staged non-domestic disaster scenes. These are the small screen's daytime versions of "Towering Inferno" and "Hurricane."

Whenever CBS-TV incorporates disaster scenes into its soap operas, the network calls upon its special visual effects department. The unit contributes everything from rain and snow showers to cars colliding or veering off cliffs and bursting into flames.

Two weeks ago on "As the World Turns" an apartment building on the show went up in flames. Special effects director Neal Schatz devised and executed the blaze with co-special effects director Mort McConnell.

"In this instance," said Schatz, "I was informed three weeks in advance what the writers wanted in terms of the story, although the visual effects department sometimes works on an overnight's notice. We had time to plot out the progression of the fire with the show's production staff, and then prepare all the equipment needed. The scenery flats were covered with fire-retardant material. Then a specially prepared fire compound was applied. The compound burns itself but not the material. It's a process akin to pouring lighter fluid on a table — the fluid ignites immediately but not the table. The flame produced by the compound only lasts a minute or so and can be raised, lowered or extinguished by a propane burner."

"Of course, great care and control must be maintained when working within an enclosed stage set like "ATWT." While taping the fire, eight men were stationed around the set to control the flames and the smoke. The smoke produced by the special-burning compound is not noxious and is propelled by small fans that direct the desired wind currents. But it is a potentially dangerous situation and our prime concern is the effectiveness of the visuals and the safety of the cast and crew. The flames are as hot as the real thing and can burn just as severely."

In the storyline, Nick Dixon leaped through flames, crashing through the door of Mary Ellison's apartment to save Mary and her son Teddy. The leaping figure was a professional stuntman who wore a fire-proof suit under pajamas. One of his shoes briefly caught fire. Although it quickly extinguished itself, there was an asbestos tarp, just out of camera range, that he could have rolled onto if the spark had flared. Men with fire extinguishers were standing by an additional precaution.

The total fire sequence, which resulted in about five minutes of air time, required four hours to tape. But it was a tribute to the wizardry of the CBS-TV special visual effects department. The crew's other notable soap opera efforts in the last few years include the collapse of a construction-site scaffolding and a raging tornado, complete with flying debris propelled by giant wind machines. Both scenes were on "ATWT." Perhaps the department's crowning daytime achievements were produced for "The Edge of Night" when that show was aired on CBS (it is now shown on ABC). In addition to a villainess' car plunging into a ravine and the explosion of a honeymoon yacht, there was the stunning burning of the New Moon Cafe. An entire set was set aflame, with collapsing beams and walls turned to apparent ashes. That sequence required a full nine-hour taping and involved several characters running amok the blazing rubble. Despite the intricacies of the effects, no one was injured — a testimonial to stunningly executed visual effects and painstaking planning.

Smoldering of another sort took place on the "Mike Douglas Show" when he hosted a week-long tribute to daytimes' leading lovers. Beau Kayzer and Victoria Mallory (Brock and Leslie on "The Young and the Restless") demonstrated a variety of screen kisses. Bill and Susan Seaforth Hayes (Doug and Julie on "Days of Our Lives") were shown a clip of their first screen smooch on "Days" which led to their real-life romance and eventual marriage. Deidre Hall (Marlena on "Days") credited castmate Jed Allan (Don) with getting her the role on "Days" after her audition involved a torrid love scene with him.

Peter Simon and Courtney Sherman, husband and wife in real-life as well as on "Search For Tomorrow" as Scott and Kathy Phillips, noted that Kathy is nearly four months pregnant on the show, while in fact Courtney is due to have a child of her own within two months. The last time Courtney was pregnant the show had to "cover up the fact" because her character at that time had been adamant against having children.

Rounding out the week's love-couples on the Douglas show were Nancy Frangione and Nick Benedict (Tara and Phil on "All My Children"). Nick did one of his accomplished impressions of Burt Lancaster selling a used car. Other guests during the week included country-music superstar Charlie Pride and comedienne Tote Fields who both confessed that they were soap addicts. "Kojack's" Kevin Dobson revealed that his first acting role was as an extra on "The Nurses," and on "The Doctors" he played everything from a janitor to a cadaver.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise

In our area, we have been converting men's shirts into "Johnny" coats for use in homes where there is a need for hospital-type gowns.

To do this, first remove the buttons, cut the collar off, and cut the sleeves to measure seven inches at the underarm seam (unless it is already a short-sleeved shirt).

Cut the shirt in half down the back. Then, make narrow hems on these edges. Hem the sleeves. Lap the button side over the buttonhole side and stitch down both edges, and again an inch and a half or two inches from that edge, being sure to catch the edge of the buttonhole side underneath.

Stitch bias fold tape around the neck, inserting twill tape at each end for a tie. Double-stitch for strength.

Contrasting tape is attractive around this neck edge and can be repeated on the sleeves.

The shirts can be used as bibs for protecting patients who find it difficult to feed themselves as well as inexpensive hospital-type gowns. — H H B

Beautiful! Check your closets, gals and guys, for those out-of-style or frayed shirts. If you can't use them, pass them on. There are many folks who would be able to. I'm sure. — Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise

Artists sign their paintings wouldn't it be nice if quilt-makers signed their quilts?

Dear Heloise

When reading a monthly issue of a magazine I note on the table of contents page any pertinent information about a particular article that might come in handy later.

Before storing the magazine I tear this contents page out and place it in a file. "Voila!" When it comes to mind that "somewhere I read something, I only have to quickly thumb through this file instead of having to drag out all the magazines. — M. Wells

Dear Heloise

I have found that after baking a cake, if I spray it lightly (while it is still hot) with my plant mister, the cake will be much more moist, especially the edges. (Of course, I always put fresh water in the mister before spraying the cakes.)

Try it! I'll bet you'll do the same thing from now on. — Cindy House
 P.S. Works for cookies, too!

Dear Heloise

I have a tiny bathroom with very little shelf or storage space so I put up a 12-compartment shoe bag on the back of the door.

Marvelous help! It keeps combs, brushes, hair spray, hand lotion, shampoo, etc., all nicely sorted and easily accessible.

Just be sure to fasten the bag securely to the door. — Working Homemaker

Dear Heloise

We like to pop corn at home but the unpopped kernels were a problem until I emptied the popped corn into a wire basket that I use when making French fries.

After a shake or two, only big, popped kernels remain. — L.W.

Dear Heloise

When brown sugar gets too hard to use in baking, I put the whole clump in the top of a double broiler, sprinkle a few drops of water on it, cover it and heat over a medium flame.

The sugar gets moist and soft in a short while. — Brina Rodin

"Starship Invasions" stars Robert Vaughn and Christopher Lee. Written and directed by Ed Hunt. Edited by Milla Moore and Ruth Hope. Special effects and technical design by Warren Fisher. Photographed by Mark Logan. Music by Gil Melle. Rated PG. At the Winchester.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Fine Arts Editor

Artistic films — be they the psychological drama of "The Godfather, Part Two," the searing human study of "Save The Tiger" or the heartfelt fantasy of "Star Wars" — have only rarely been known to breed more of their own kind. But should an artistic film appeal to the masses, look for an immediate outbreak of imitation, exploitation and disguise.

The films' illegitimate children quickly don superficial masks in a weak attempt to fool audiences and fill pockets.

When George Lucas' "Star Wars" hit the screens last summer, breaking boxoffice records everywhere and no doubt earning multiple Academy Award nominations in the process, we of course expected a galaxy of cheap ripoffs to follow soon enough. But nobody could have possibly realized how soon — or how cheap.

"Starship Invasions" is the first such illegitimate child to emerge, the similar name being tacked on for an express purpose. But whereas no one would have done the new film the disservice of expecting it to live up to "Star Wars," it is equally certain few expected it to wind up insulting the intelligence of grade schoolers.

Indeed the film's budget couldn't have run over a couple grand — and only three or four bucks of that shows up on the screen. We've yet to understand why established thespians like Christopher Lee and Robert Vaughn decided to risk ridicule with this monstrosity unless they simply wanted to take a short vacation in Canada. That's where the film was shot and it certainly couldn't have taken more than a couple days of their time.

The plot concerns Christopher Lee's forces, the Legions Of The Winged Serpents, readying for an invasion of earth. Seems they need our world because their own planet Alpha is about to supernova on them. Ah well, like they say you can never go home again. In any case they kidnap a few Earthlings for study and then decide to make the big push, or biting a ray which makes Earthlings go bananas on a suicide craze.

But they must also battle the Intergalactic League Of Nations located on the Earth's ocean floor and existing for the sole purpose of watching us safely grow. Mind you these are all supposed to be "advanced" civilizations of supreme intelligence. But when the bad guys knock out their computers, our bubble-headed friends turn to mere Earthlings, astronomer Robert Vaughn and his computer expert friend, for assistance.

What follows is a comical battle between good and evil, a lot of blood as the world's populations keep straining their wrists and blowing their brains out and the usual happy ending. If not for the fact the military is portrayed as such utter nincompoops — officers ordering rockets fired at blips on a radar screen, even though the signals could have been private planes or flocks of geese — bookmakers would certainly have established brought on board the spacecraft early in the film.

Alas, she is zapped early so much for saving graces.

Practically everyone in the film speaks by means of mental telepathy, quaintance as "a man in an asbestos suit with an 8-track tape on his stomach," deserves to have his arms pulled out of their sockets by the nearest Wookiee.

In short, even sci-fi buffs will be laughing "Starship Invasions" off the nation's screens, all the while wondering why large, exquisite theaters like the Winchester are even bothering to show it. After all, the film boasts not only poor art direction, editing, writing, direction, costuming, makeup and special effects, but also keeps pace with its dialogue.

One alien warns us that "a little knowledge can be a dangerous thing." My only question is this: how would these particular filmmakers know?

A-J FILM REVIEW

Earth as the home team favorite.

But in the meantime, writer-director Ed Hunt tries to grab a following any way he can. So you'll be happy to know that sex goddesses reside on the planet Alpha. Portraying Lee's assistant, Sherri Ross is gorgeous and, for no apparent reason, even bares all for a Swedish farmer which says not so much about alien communication as it does about film budgeting. By using no talking aliens, no sound equipment was needed on the set. Starting to get the picture?

That set by the way looks more like a Canadian disco than anything else. And anyone who would believe in the heroic robot, described best by an ac-

MOVIES AT THEIR WORST — A robot representing an intergalactic League Of Nations attacks a member of the renegade Legion Of The Winged Serpents during a climactic scene from the latest science fiction offering in the cinema.

'Starship Invasions' — A horrible movie for any age group, the film's imagination is said to be on the same level with its budget, according to A-J critic William Kerns. Rated PG, it's currently playing at the Winchester Theater.

Tentative Sentence For Hayes Criticized

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A tentative life sentence given former Castroville town marshal Frank Hayes was criticized Monday by Mexican-American leaders who said it may open the door for Hayes' freedom.

Hayes was convicted by a federal court jury in Waco last month of criminally violating the civil rights of Richard Morales, a 27-year-old construction worker who was fatally shot while in Hayes' custody Sept. 14, 1975.

Hayes already had been convicted in state court of aggravated assault in the death and was serving two to 10 years in the Texas penitentiary.

The civil rights conviction carried a maximum life sentence.

U.S. District Court Judge Adrian Spears last Friday tentatively sentenced Hayes to life, but ordered him first to undergo 90 days of testing and observation at a U.S. Bureau of Prisons facility.

Hayes' lawyers have claimed the former law officer is severely depressed and cannot function without heavy drug doses.

At the end of the test period, Spears will review an official report and could adjust Hayes' sentence.

Ruben Sandoval, lawyer for the Morales family, told a news conference Monday that Hayes already had been found mentally competent at separate examinations before his state and federal court trials.

Sandoval said Judge Spears should have imposed the maximum life term on Hayes last Friday because another psychiatric examination would prove nothing.

"We want to demonstrate our opposition that the judge has taken a step backwards," Sandoval said. He said Spears' tentative sentence opens the door for Hayes to be given a probation sentence.

Ruben Bonilla, state chairman of the League of United Latin American Citizens, termed the tentative sentence "an unnecessary setback — an absurd calamitous ruling."

Bonilla said Hayes should be confined to prison for life, not given refuge in a federal prison hospital.

The court has left itself vulnerable to a charge of giving preferential treatment by showing compassion for Frank Hayes, he charged. The court's action could result in a complete nullification of the court proceedings against Hayes.

Other leaders at the news conference also charged the tentative sentence had been misinterpreted as a real life sentence.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio and chairman of the House Mexican American Caucus, said in a statement: "We do not ask for Frank Hayes' life, only his liberty. Life at its worst is better than death at its best. The voice of Richard Morales cries from the grave."

Joe Bernal, national Democratic committeeman, said Hayes already has been afforded "special protection" by the courts that was not given to Morales, a Mexican American.

Judge Spears could not be reached for comment.

Young Favors Sanctions Against South Africans

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young said Monday he personally favors some form of sanctions against the government of South Africa, which carried out a sweeping purge of black leaders and organizations last week.

Young spoke with reporters following a Security Council meeting where black-ruled African nations called on the council to order a mandatory arms embargo and other sanctions against South Africa's white-minority regime. The United States previously has vetoed such an arms embargo proposal.

Young replied "Yes" when asked if he favored the sanctions against the Pretoria government.

He stressed that this was a personal opinion and added: "The president and secretary of state will have to decide what sanctions are appropriate in these conditions."

But the black U.N. envoy, who earlier in the day met with President Carter in Washington, indicated the United States would seek some middle ground short of a binding arms embargo. "I certainly hope we could come up with a position we wouldn't have to veto ... (one) we could all agree to," he said.

Young added he expects the Carter administration to make a decision within the next two days.

The council debate, scheduled to run four days, was requested by the 49-nation African Group after South Africa banned virtually all important black organizations, closed two black-operated newspapers and arrested some 50 black leaders last Wednesday.

Ambassador Mahmoud Mestiri of Tunisia opened the debate in the 15-member council with a call for approval of four resolutions providing tough punitive actions including an arms embargo.

"If the United Nations does not meet Pretoria's latest challenge, then racial justice cannot be had anywhere in southern Africa," he said.

In Nairobi, Kenya, at a United Nations

Day ceremony, Kenyan Foreign Minister Munyua Waiyaki called South Africa "an unpleasant thorn" in Africa's side and said "the stage has been reached when the thorn must be removed by force, however unpleasant this might be."

He added that Kenya "is resolved to assist the freedom fighters, materially, politically and morally until African people gain their legitimate rights in that country."

International sanctions against South Africa could pose a problem for the Carter administration's southern Africa policy, part of which has been to seek South African help in arranging black majority rule in neighboring Rhodesia.

One Western diplomatic source viewed the call for a mandatory arms embargo as an "opening bid."

"We haven't even begun to negotiate with the Africans on this," he said.

The United States, Britain and France in 1975 vetoed a resolution calling for a mandatory worldwide ban on sale of arms to South Africa. The United States and Britain currently abide by a voluntary arms embargo.

The three Western powers were understood to be undecided on whether to veto such an arms embargo proposal.

In reaction to the South African crackdown, the State Department last week recalled its ambassador to Pretoria, William Bowdler, for consultations. The Netherlands and West Germany have done likewise.

If the Western countries cannot negotiate a more general condemnation of South Africa and instead must vote on an arms embargo or economic sanctions, the Carter administration will be faced with a difficult choice.

A veto could undo some of Young's success in improving U.S. relations with black Africa. But voting for sanctions would antagonize South African whites and jeopardize the U.S. position as a mediator in the racial disputes in southern Africa.

The General Assembly debate on another issue, South Africa's defiance of U.N. demands that it surrender control of South-West Africa, was drawing to a close Monday.

The 86-nation nonaligned group here issued a statement condemning last week's crackdown as "one more act of senseless oppression" in South Africa. But the group, which includes most African nations, did not call for immediate sanctions against South Africa.

Instead, it proposed that sanctions be imposed later if South Africa does not meet a deadline, not yet set, for withdrawal from South-West Africa.

Besides the arms embargo, three other black African resolutions are pending from a South Africa debate suspended last March. They would:

—Call for a halt to new investments in South Africa. This resolution would not be binding.

—Commit the council to consider binding sanctions if South Africa continues to defy other U.N. decisions, including a trade embargo against Rhodesia. This was viewed as a fallback proposal by the black Africans.

—Demand that South Africa "end violence and repression against black people and other opponents of apartheid."

New African State Celebrates Birthday

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Transkei, the South Africa-created home of 3.3 million Xhosa tribesmen, celebrates its first birthday this week unrecognized by anyone except the South African government on which it depends for its economic survival.

The independent, multiracial state, off to a promising start, has begun showing signs of strain.

New industries and rapid economic growth have brought money to the 170,000-square-mile territory, but little has drifted down to the impoverished rural majority.

Created as a democratic republic, Transkei has become a one-party state, with major opposition leaders jailed for indefinite terms under stiff antipolitical laws, echoing those of South Africa.

The ochre, white and green Transkei flag went up over Umtata, the capital, last Oct. 26, ushering in independence to the boom of a 101-gun salute.

Transkei, located along the Indian Ocean coast, was the first of nine tribal areas to become independent under South Africa's plan to consign 19 million blacks to tribal states. The country is larger geographically than Switzerland or the combined states of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

It has been blackballed in its bids for diplomatic recognition and membership in the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity. Opponents claim the state provides a means for continuing South Africa's policy of racial separation.

Observers say Bophuthatswana, scheduled to become South Africa's second independent tribal state on Dec. 6, faces similar diplomatic limbo.

The Transkei and South African governments contend that independence is a step in the decolonization of Africa. But critics complain blacks are being given only 13 per cent of South African land, few urban centers and no major ports in the tribal states.

Arguing unsuccessfully for U.N. membership, Paramount Chief Kaiser D. Mantanzima, the prime minister, said his nation meets the criteria of a state. He said Transkei has a larger population and higher gross national product than one-third of the United Nations members and is geographically larger than 16 per cent.

Observers contend that Transkei probably would have been recognized if its parent had been Britain, rather than South Africa.

Economically, Transkei along with Botswana, Swaziland, and Lesotho, remain dependent on South Africa. More than half of Transkei's 1977-78 national budget of $274 million is supplied by Pretoria, which has promised to continue support until Transkei can stand alone.

According to 1973 figures, the country's gross national income was $468 million, giving its citizens an annual per capita income of $194 — higher than that of 27 U.N. members, Mantanzima says.

The figures indicate that the 1.6 million Transkei blacks living and working in South Africa's cities must have earned more than three times that of their countrymen living in Transkei itself.

The poor rural economy is based on grazing animals and agriculture, while the main sources of income remain tourism and the export of cheap black labor to white-ruled South Africa.

Mantanzima's government has consistently attacked South Africa for its racial policies. However, a basic foundation of apartheid — laws barring marriage and sex across color lines — are on the books in Transkei, although they have not been enforced since independence.

Whites and blacks live and work side-by-side, but blacks are said to resent the separate schools and a hospital accorded the country's white population. There are no figures available on the number of whites in Transkei.

Relations with South Africa have been strained over the question of status of the Transkei citizens living in South Africa.

All Xhosas, even those born and raised in South Africa, were forced after independence to take out citizenship in their Transkei homeland.

Now those remaining in South Africa, although labeled aliens, are not accorded the privileges of a foreigner and remain subject to most South African apartheid laws.

ENTICEMENT FOR SHOPPERS — A poster in a Windsor, Ont., window shop points out the value of the U.S. dollar compared to Canadian dollar, which is falling in value. Last week the Canadian dollar slipped in value to 90 U.S. cents, a 40-year low. (AP Laserphoto)

Theft Of Time Called Big Economic Burden

TORONTO (UPI) — You can't hold it, see it or store it away, but Canadians will steal $8 billion worth of it this year.

"Time theft is the biggest crime of all," says personnel expert Robert Half.

The had of the world's largest financial executive and data processing employment firm, Robert Half Personnel Agencies, said the Canadian economy will lose $8 billion this year as a result of deliberate ate employe actions which waste or abuse time on the job.

A poll of personnel agencies indicated that the average Canadian worker "stole" an average of 3 1/2 hours each week.

The problem is even worse in the United States, he said. The most recent study there showed the average "time thief" is guilty of stealing 3 hours and 45 minutes each week.

"Time theft is a very real threat to the Canadian economy," Half told an international conference of personnel managers from Canada, the United States and Britain during the weekend.

"In addition to dealing a harsh blow to the nation's productivity it fuels inflation, since the increased costs of producing goods and services are, almost invariably, passed on to the consumer in the form of higher prices," he said.

Half said the most common examples of "time theft" were:

- Getting to work late.
- Leaving early.
- Office socializing.
- Reading novels and magazines during working hours.
- Taking sick days off unnecessarily.
- Excessive personal telephone calls.
- On-the-job daydreaming.
- Eating lunch at the desk — and then taking a lunch break.

Property, Casualty Insurers Report Loss Again In '76

NEW YORK (AP) — Property and casualty insurers recorded an overall underwriting loss for the third straight year in 1976, the Insurance Information Institute said Monday.

The property-casualty insurance industry recorded a $2.2 billion underwriting deficit in 1976, according to the 1977 edition of Insurance Facts, an 80-page booklet published by the I.I.I.

The industry recorded an estimated $60 billion in written premiums in 1976, an increase of about 20 per cent from the previous year's total, the report said.

Although inflation eased in 1976 from the 1975 level, the cost of goods and services for which insurance companies pay claims continued to rise at a greater rate than the cost of living, the report said.

The I.I.I. also reported these developments for 1976:

—Traffic accidents increased about 2.2 per cent. The traffic fatality toll was up 2 per cent, and the number of related injuries increased 5.8 per cent. Economic losses from traffic accidents were up 15.4 per cent to a record $40.9 billion.

—The nation's overall crime rate held steady compared with the previous year.

Sloan Labels Allison As Doubtful Performer

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Steve Sloan is answering the questions over a Lubbock-to-Dallas-to-Austin hookup.

"Rodney Allison is doubtful for the (Texas) game, and Mark Johnson got hurt in workout last Saturday."

There was a pause, then from Dallas, "What happened to Johnson?"

"Pulled a muscle."

"Where?"

"His thigh," replied Sloan, "that's above the knee."

It was good for a telephonic laugh, from the Tech athletic dining hall to a sports writers gathering in Dallas to Texas coach Fred Akers' office in Austin.

But, although Sloan smiled and laughed at the exchange, his mirth was not as energetic as the rest.

He was talking about a series of quarterbacking injuries at a time when he expected to go into Saturday's SWC game at Austin against the No. 1 college football team in the land.

Both on the three-way hookup and also prior to that, in his regular weekly press conference, Sloan reported that the situation was not good.

Allison, he said, is doubtful. The Raider senior, who went out in the first half of the Texas A&M game, has shed his cast and crutches which carried him through the days when his broken leg was in the critical healing stage. But, although he returned to some work last week, he continues to limp around the campus.

Not only that, but "He hasn't reached the jogging stage yet," Sloan said. "We'll just play it by ear this week, but (as of now) he won't start."

Sloan later said that if Allison recovers, "I would consider using him, if the game is such that we thought he could help."

"If he had not gotten hurt, Johnson (the sophomore from Corpus Christi Ray) would be our starter," the coach said. "It will be Mark or Tres Adami. We're making our plans without him (Allison)."

"We have respect for Allison," said Akers, as he stepped to the telephonic loud speaker. But, "Tech has proven itself to be a fine football team without him."

The Texas coach, who has seen his Longhorns whip unbeaten teams in Oklahoma and Arkansas on successive Saturdays before scuttling SMU last Saturday, added, "Tech is a quick team, it pursues well, and it has an outstanding kicking game."

Sloan pointed to three major areas about Texas which impressed him.

"First, they have an outstanding kicking game, probably better than A&M's, since (Russell) Erxleben is such a great punter, as well as field-goal kicker."

"Then, they have so much speed. I don't think I've seen any team as fast overall. They have three receivers who run 9.5, 9.5 and 9.1."

"And, they have several outstanding football players—and surrounding them are others playing superb football."

Sloan pointed to fullback Earl Campbell, the 220-pound fullback "who reminds me of Jim Brown. He has the great size, speed, balance and determination."

The Raider coach said that Allison is not the only Raider on the doubtful list because of injuries.

Sloan said he did not expect guard Greg Mahoney to play and if the junior from Dallas is not healed from a knee injury

Minnesota Bows To NCAA Edict

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A University of Minnesota committee reversed itself Monday and voted to declare Big Ten scoring champion Michael Thompson and Dave Winney ineligible. The action by the Assembly Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics ended a year-long impasse between the university and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The NCAA on Oct. 21, 1976, had placed the entire men's athletic program on probation because the university had refused to declare the two basketball players ineligible.

The university said the penalties were too harsh and took the issue to court. After winning the first round in federal district court, an appeals court last summer sided with the NCAA.

The sanctions imposed by the NCAA bars all men's teams from post-season play and NCAA-sponsored television appearances.

The resolution, approved on a 9-5 vote, directs the university to appeal the ineligibility of Thompson and Winney to the NCAA, and also asks the NCAA to immediately lift its probation on all men's sports.

Don Henry
The Bowl Cup
Runneth Over

AS THE FINAL seconds ticked away, the scoreboard blinking out that surprising 49 for "ND," 19 for "them," it would not have been beyond possibility's realm to have seen Dan Devine reach for a composite football schedule.

Already, the PA system in South Bend had blared out that Minnesota had stuck it to the Michigans, then the accepted No. 1 team in the entire land.

Let's see, Devine could have said to himself, who do we want for Christmas?

To the winner goes the spoils, and for Notre Dame, the spoils are the national championship. The leader at the end of the season will be the one Notre Dame will want—and could get—at bowl time.

It's only the last week of October, but already it's time to start blocking out the bowls—if not on contracts, at least on paper. And the Irish could be the most wanted commodity on the bowl market this year.

The Cotton Bowl could be on the Irish's holiday list, too, depending on who's on top. Remember seven years back?

And, it's all because of what happened to USC on its trip to South Bend, Ind., last Saturday.

IN THESE TIMES of fewer undefeated teams—Texas stands today as the only unbeaten "major" major team—the national title can fall to a team with a loss. Actually, it depends on who loses and how early.

In this sense, ND's loss came at a fortunate—for it—time. It wallowed around the Second Ten after that loss (to Ole Miss, of all people) until its solid thumping of Southern Cal last Saturday.

Now, it's right back in the national title picture, as well as the major bowl picture, and Cotton, Sugar and Orange folks may be checking plane schedules to South Bend again.

Cotton? Sugar? Orange? The bowls do the asking, but in the case of Notre Dame, it is influential enough to do some spawdwork and, if a national title could be on the line, it probably will want a shot at the leader.

If Texas were to continue on unbeaten, the Irish would lean toward the Cotton—provided they keep winning. The Orange has a Big Eight tie-up, which could bring in OU, if it is on top. And the Sugar is married to the SEC, which could produce Alabama.

From there, the other bowls will fall into place... And fall into place... and fall into place... and fall...

WHAT WITH AN epidemic of upsets and the leveling off of talent this year, it appears as if any team over .500 can call itself a bowl contender. Now, 22 teams can claim unbeaten or one-loss records. Eleven more have two losses and stand in positions to yearn for bowl trips.

And, dangling in front of them are 24 bowl spots. Yep, two dozen.

This includes the regulars from past years, plus the first-time Hall of Fame Classic at Birmingham and the Tangerine which went Big Time last year. This bowl list doesn't include the Independence, at Shreveport, which has the Southland Conference champ and somebody else.

There is more than a little validity to the cry that there are too many bowls now. But, until a couple of them go under for lack of funds, the list will remain glutted, and teams with as many as four losses can dream of holiday trips.

The abundance of offers awaiting will bring more incentive for marginal teams during the last month of the season, even for teams out of conference title consideration.

THE LINEUPS COULD BE altered from past seasons, too. Possibly, four SWC teams could land bowl trips. It has happened before but not often. It's a good bet that Tech, the Longhorns, Arkansas and the Aggies could share in the bowl gravy.

Conversely, the Southeastern Conference, usually a prime hunting ground for teams, is not flushed with prospects. Kentucky is in the top ten—with only one loss—but it is on NCAA probation and ineligible for a bowl. And, outside of Alabama, Florida (3-1-1) and LSU (4-2) are the best of the rest.

The Big Eight has a bowl quartet (OU, Nebraska, Colorado, Iowa State), but it's big head-knocking is on down the line, and all except Colorado (now 5-1-1) lost at least one game in nonconference. Too, with every Pac-8 team bearing at least two losses, chances of a major bid for the runner-up are not optimistic.

This brings in the independents, a list which surprisingly includes North Texas State (7-1) and Florida State (5-1), a couple of teams which collide this week.

The Sugar, Orange and Cotton could be looking most seriously at Penn State (6-1), Notre Dame (5-1) and the Big Ten runner-up (Michigan, Ohio State or Minnesota). With the Aggies falling to the Wolverines and Ohio State having played—and beaten—SMU in Dallas earlier this year, the Big Ten route may not be such a good bet for the Cotton.

With so many spots open, the conference races aren't the only points of interest as November nears, the bowl show should be well worth watching. This time, there are an awful lot of shows to watch, too.

Plainsmen Win Second VB Match

Mary Sue Stiles had 13 points to lead the Monterey Plainsmen to a 15-12, 14-10 volleyball win over Lubbock High Monday night in a District 4-AAAA match. It was the only girls volleyball game in the city Monday.

The win leaves Monterey with a perfect 2-0 district mark, while Lubbock High slipped to 1-1 in loop action.

Mary Jones led the Westerners with 8 points.

In junior varsity action, the Monterey JV downed LHS 7-15, 15-13, 14-11.

Play tonight sees Coronado at Leveland, Sweetwater at Dunbar and Estacado at Lamesa. The Dunbar and Estacado games are District 3-AAA affairs.

LCC Ranked In X-Country

KANSAS CITY (Special) — Lubbock Christian College, despite only second, third and fourth finishes in cross-country meets this fall, received votes in the fifth weekly NAA cross-country rankings.

The Chaparrals and Angelo State, a team they beat in the Wayland Invitational, are the only Texas teams listed.

Currently, Adams (Colo.) State leads, with Indiana (Pa.) University second.

Texoma Conference rival Oklahoma Christian College moved up two notches to ninth in this week's poll.

LCC has only one regular-season meet left, that on Nov. 4 when the Texoma Conference Meet will be hosted by Wayland Baptist. The District VIII meet will be hosted by the University of Dallas Nov. 12 and the national meet will be Nov. 19 in Kenosha, Wis.

Haden, Rams Post 35-3 Runaway From Vikings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rhodes Scholar Pat Haden proved he belonged in the starting quarterback slot for Los Angeles as he ran for one touchdown and passed for two more, igniting the Rams to a surprisingly one-sided 35-3 romp over the Minnesota Vikings Monday night.

The 24-year-old Haden, a University of Southern California Rose Bowl star, replaced veteran Joe Namath a week ago because the former New York Jets star had an injured knee. This time Haden got the start on his own after leading the Rams to a victory over New Orleans.

The Rams responded with their best showing of the year.

The blond quarterback ran 7 yards for the first score, then completed passes of 2 yards to Charles Young and 9 to Harold Jackson for a 21-0 halftime lead in the National Football League game.

Minnesota's only score came on a 42-yard field goal by Fred Cox with 20 seconds gone in the fourth quarter. It came at the end of a drive marshalled by reserve quarterback Bob Lee, who replaced Fran Tarkenton in the third period when the Rams had the game locked up.

Tarkenton came back in later in the third period when Lee was shaken up.

Rams' rookie runningback Wendell Tyler set up John Cappelletti's third-period touchdown dive with a 13-yard scamper to the Vikings' 1-yard line. Then Tyler scored on a 44-yard dash in the fourth quarter.

Los Angeles sent its season record to 4-2 and earned a share of the National Conference's Western Division lead with Atlanta, Minnesota, also at 4-2, maintained its one-game lead over Detroit in the NFC's Central Division. The Lions lost to San Francisco on Sunday.

Boston Bosses Clear House, Fire Brass

BOSTON (AP) — The owners of the Boston Red Sox fired three top executives Monday, including General Manager Dick O'Connell.

The move was orchestrated by Player Personnel Director Haywood Sullivan and former Red Sox trainer Buddy LeRoux, who are buying the franchise from the estate of the late Thomas A. Yawkey.

Executors of the estate immediately named Sullivan, 47, a former Red Sox substitute catcher, as the new general manager.

In addition to O'Connell, who carried the title of executive vice president, those fired were Assistant General Manager John Claiborne and Vice President Gene Kirby.

The front office shuffling was not unexpected because O'Connell, Claiborne and Kirby were not part of the Sullivan-LeRoux management team, which also includes 11 "limited partners." Yawkey's widow, Jean A. Yawkey, is a member of the group that is buying the team for a reported $15 million from her husband's estate.

However, the firings had not been anticipated until after the official sale transaction next Monday.

The new owners face a crucial Nov. 3 vote by American League owners on the sale.

Ten of the 14 teams, including the Red Sox, must approve, or the franchise reverts back to the Yawkey estate.

O'Connell, general manager since 1965, and in complete control of the team since then, is highly regarded among his peers. It has been speculated that some AL owners might oppose the sale because of O'Connell's firing.

The executors of Yawkey's estate — Mrs. Yawkey, James Curran and Joseph LaCour — said that the fired executives "did not fit into... future plans" of Sullivan and LeRoux.

"Rather than leave the task of dismissal to them," the executors' statement said, "we decided to terminate their employment immediately."

The appointment of Sullivan as general manager was said to be aimed at guiding the franchise through "a critical period in the club's operation."

O'Connell, a close associate of the late Red Sox owner, is not on speaking terms with Mrs. Yawkey, according to team insiders.

He began his career as business manager of the Boston farm team at Lynn, Mass. in 1946. He became a Red Sox vice president in 1960. During his tenure as general manager, the team won pennants in 1967 and 1975.

NEW YORK (Special) — ABC-TV announced Monday it would televise five college football games Saturday on a regional basis, but the slate does not include Southwest Conference teams.

There had been indications that the Texas Tech-at-Texas game would be shown, but Monday morning, officials of the two schools were notified their game was not on the list.

TV Slate Bypasses SWC This Week

The selected games are Nebraska at Oklahoma State, Louisiana State at Mississippi, North Carolina at Maryland, Purdue at Northwestern and Bowling Green at Central Michigan.

Pics Lose to UH In Shortened Game

HOUSTON (Special) — The University of Houston junior varsity built a 21-3 halftime lead, then held off the Texas Tech junior varsity 21-15 Monday afternoon in a game which wound up 15 seconds short of regulation.

With the Kittens on Tech's 2-yard line and 15 seconds remaining on the clock, officials called the game.

In the two minutes prior to the end, Tech drew 30 yards in penalties for unsportsmanlike conduct and the officials added another 5 yards on an illegal procedure call which nullified a 43-yard pass for the Picadors.

The fourth quarter had seen the Picadors bounce back with a pair of scores. After receiving a punt at its 45, the Picador team marched 55 yards to score, with Ted Sample going for the final yard.

Later, UH fumbled on Tech's 1-yard line, and the Picadors mounted a 99-yard drive. The big play was a 70-yard pass-and-run play.

Quarterback Richy Ethridge took the snap from center, pitched back to halfback Charles Weinacht who threw to wide receiver Don Earl for the 70-yard bomb.

Tech's first points had come in the second quarter on a 37-yard field goal by John Greve.

In the final two minutes, with the Picadors trying to get the lead, Ethridge hit Earl with a 43-yard pass, but it was rubbed out by an illegal-procedure penalty. The unsportsmanlike conduct penalties followed plays where the Picadors felt they had recovered Kitten fumbles.

The victory gave UH a 3-1 season record. Tech fell to 2-2 in the final game of the season.

Houston had taken the lead in the second period when Mark Jernsted caught a 48-yard pass from quarterback Albert Windom.

CAUTHEN REACHES $5 MILLION—Teenage jockey Steve Cauthen pilots Rare Joel across the finish line at Aqueduct Monday to win the second race. The $6,000 winner's share of the $10,000 Starter Handicap purse brought Cauthen to the $5 million mark in winnings this year. It was the first time a jockey has ever ridden winners of $5 million in a single year. (AP Laserphoto)

Cauthen Reaches $5 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Cauthen became the first jockey ever to ride winners of $5 million in a single year Monday, then proudly disclosed that he had won $45 in a card game before he made horse racing history.

"All right Steve, now you're going for 10," a valet shouted when Cauthen returned to the jockey's room after claiming the $6,000 winner's purse in the second race at Aqueduct, boosting the total earned by his mounts in 1977 to $5,004,312.

"Five million's all right," Cauthen said with a broad smile. "But I made $45 in a card name today."

The 17-year-old jockey from Walton, Ky., made racing history aboard Rare Joel in the 1 1/16-mile second race. Rare Joel, the favorite, broke second and was four lengths behind Franglais entering the backstretch. Midway down the backstretch, Cauthen moved Rare Joel to within a half-length of the lead, where the 5-year-old gelding stayed until the head of the stretch when he took charge and won by a length.

Cauthen made his $45 playing a card game called "race horse rummy" with valets.

"What's race horse rummy?" Cauthen was asked. He took a step toward the recreation room in the jockeys' quarters and said, "Come here and we'll teach you."

Cauthen obviously was pleased with breaking the $5 million barrier although it hasn't been his style to make much of his considerable accomplishment since bursting upon the New York racing scene as an apprentice last Nov. 30.

"Nobody's ever done it," said Cauthen. "I hope to make a little more. I still got a long time to go."

He has about nine weeks to become a 5-foot-1, 95-pound Six Million Dollar Man, a feat that would be extremely difficult since most of the big money stakes in

New York are over for the year.

"I don't plan to jump all over. I'm gonna stay right here," said Cauthen. And those plans also will make it very hard for him to break the record of 546 winners in a year set in 1974 by Chris McCarron, riding mostly in Maryland.

Cauthen's victory aboard Rare Joel was his 420th of the year. He lost a month because of a spill May 23 in which he suffered a fractured wrist and face and hand cuts.

He returned from the accident June 23 and won with his first mount.

Andy Thomas should be ready to return to defensive end, the coach said, and linebacker Mike Mock and defensive tackle Curtis Reed are improving. "I hope (linebacker) Mike McCright should be better."

"We're not going to concede Campbell any yardage," Sloan said, turning the conversation back to the Longhorn fullback. "A lot depends on how often they run him—we think maybe 35 times—but, I have a lot of confidence in our defense."

'Cats Prepare For Floydada, Take Week Off

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Tom Ritchey is pleased, naturally, that his Idalou Wildcats have reached their open date with an unblemished record, but that's only one reason he likes the off week where it is.

The other reason? It comes before the Floydada game.

Presently, Idalou is the only 4-AA team without a loss in league play as the district schedule reaches its halfway point this week.

Thus, the Wildcats' chances of their first league crown as an AA school may be only a victory away.

But don't tell Ritchey that. Three of Idalou's four shutouts have come on the road and the state's No. 4 team has scored fewer than 22 points in only one game—that on the road against Class A Petersburg.

"The state rankings have helped us, but at times we've been a little overconfident," Ritchey says. "A couple of times we've played poorly and I think it's because we took opponents too lightly. But, overall, I think the kids are proud of where they're ranked."

"Naturally, we'd like to win the next two, but we'd also like to get in the playoffs any way we can. But, at the same time, we'd like to play as well as we can while we're getting into the playoffs."

Floydada, the perennial 4-AA champ, must face Idalou on the road. "I think that's a benefit to us in that it's just a little bit more convenient to play at home. But I don't think that it'll bother Floydada when they get over her."

"Eight games up in the season is a long way to go without a rest and it (the open date) will give some kids a chance to get well."

Talking about his schedule, Ritchey said he felt Idalou's two league foes to date (Tulia and Abernathy) has "been pretty good and played extremely well against us. We're just happy to be in this position (2-0, 8-0) and hope we can improve some the next three weeks."

Assessing his team, Ritchey said he felt backs Larry Murphy, who has more than 1,000 yards rushing, and Ricky Hobbs, who has passed the 650 mark, have both run the ball well along with quarterback Paige Burlesmith.

"Buckley Bryant has blocked well as the wingback and also caught the ball well. Defensively, Bryant (safety), Danny Weems (end), Robert Anciso (end), Kenny Phillips (tackle) and Dwain Bunting (end) have played well.

"We really haven't had any stars. But we do have a bunch with real good attitudes, who play real good together as a team and make each other look pretty good."

Poor Calls Irk Saban

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Miami Coach Lou Saban says he isn't blaming the referees for the Hurricanes' loss to Texas Christian, but he says there's no place in college football for some of their judgment calls.

The Hurricanes lost the game 21-17 in Texas Saturday night.

"I don't want to say this is sour grapes," Saban said later, "but I saw things that took place that shouldn't have. Things were done by people who were supposed to control the game and this is unforgivable. The official leaves, goes home and smokes a cigar and can forget it no matter how much damage he did. But not us who are working at our jobs and trying to rebuild."

Watching clipping and pass interference calls on the game film, Saban said, "This is uncalled for. There's no place for it in football."

He was especially irate over a clipping penalty against a Miami blocker at midfield. He said the referee didn't drop the flag until the ball carrier had reached the 10-yard line.

"What's he thinking about?" Saban asked. "If he's any kind of man, he must be asking that question today."

"I believe the men running the show should be capable of doing it right," Saban said. "I must say, in the last four or five weeks a number of coaches have told me when you go from one section of the country to another this (officiating) is the thing that concerned them most."

Half of the officials in Saturday's game were from the Southeastern Conference and half from the Southwest Conference.

Saban wasn't alone in his feelings about the calls. Texas Christian Coach F. A. Dry was unhappy about a crucial penalty assessed his team in the third quarter. He walked toward the official who made the call and asked, "Are you from the Southeastern Conference?" The official nodded yes and Dry turned his back and walked away.

Lone Yank Selected For AL 'Star' Team

By The Associated Press

Second baseman Willie Randolph was the only member of the world champion New York Yankees named to The Associated Press American League All-Star team, which was announced Monday.

In the voting by sports writers and sports broadcasters across the country, Randolph and third baseman George Brett of the Kansas City Royals were the only selections from the two AL division champions.

Randolph received 108 votes, easily outdistancing rookie Bump Wills of the Texas Rangers, who had 64. Brett was an overwhelming choice at third base, receiving 232 votes to 135 for Graig Nettles of the Yankees.

The Boston Red Sox, who finished second in New York in the American League East, placed three players on the team. They were catcher Carlton Fisk, who beat out Thurman Munson of the Yankees, 290-116; shortstop Rick Burleson, an easy choice over Kansas City's Fred Patek, 231-70; and designated hitter Jim Rice, who received 291 votes to 49 for Hal McRae of Kansas City.

It was the first time that the designated hitter position was included on the All-Star team.

Baltimore, Minnesota and California each placed two players on the team, with balloting completed before the playoffs.

Right-handed pitcher Jim Palmer and outfielder Ken Singleton represented the Orioles, with first baseman Rod Carew, the AL batting champion, and outfielder Larry Hise picked from the Twins, and left-handed pitcher Frank Tanana and outfielder Bobby Bonds chosen from the Angels.

Bonds and Nettles, who both finished second in the voting at their positions, two other Yankees were high in the balloting. Reliever Sparky Lyle was the runner-up behind Tanana among left-handed pitchers and World Series hero Reggie Jackson was fourth among the outfielders.

Two other Yankees left-handers, Ron Guidry and Don Gullett, finished 3-4 behind Tanana and Lyle, giving New York three of the top four among the southpaw pitchers.

Rice, who divided the season as a designated hitter and outfielder, also received a split vote for the two positions on the ballot. Along with his 261 votes as DH, the Boston slugger received 106 votes as an outfielder, fifth behind Hise, Singleton, Bonds and Jackson.

Carew, who batted a remarkable .388, was virtually a unanimous selection at first base, receiving 405 of 422 votes cast. His teammate, Hise, who led the league with 119 runs batted in, had a much tougher battle in leading the outfield balloting. He received 195 votes to 189 for Singleton and 171 for Bonds in the tightest race on the ballot.

Palmer, one of only three 30-game winners in the AL, received 301 votes as the top right-handed pitcher to 124 for runner-up Nolan Ryan of the California Angels. Tanana had 173 votes as the leading left-hander with Lyle getting 105.

NBA Chief Issues Stern Message Against Fighting

NEW YORK (AP) — "There is no place in our sport for violence," said Larry O'Brien, commissioner of the National Basketball Association. "Conduct of this nature will not be tolerated and will be punished accordingly."

That was the message sent by O'Brien to NBA players, coaches, executives and fans following Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's one-punch knockout of Kent Benson last week.

If players want to fight, said O'Brien, it would cost them—dearly. And if the fans want to watch a fight, don't go to a professional basketball game.

"Every player in the NBA is on notice that I oppose fighting during games, no matter what the provocation," said O'Brien. "I will use all the powers of my office to prevent violence within the NBA."

O'Brien acted swiftly in levying a $5,000 fine—the largest in league history—against Abdul-Jabbar, the Los Angeles Lakers' superstar center. And he said the only reason the fine was not accompanied by a suspension was that Abdul-Jabbar had suffered a broken hand during the fight, meaning he would be sidelined for possibly a month.

O'Brien was empowered by the league's Board of Governors last season to issue fines up to $10,000, plus suspensions, to anyone involved in fights during NBA games.

Although Players Association chief Larry Fleisher said the fine against Abdul-Jabbar was too stiff, the majority sentiment around the league seems to be that O'Brien was right in taking such strong action. Even many of the players privately acknowledge the need for strong deterrents to fighting.

"We can't have guys going out there and beating up on each other," one veteran NBA player said. "Fighting hurts everyone involved."

Indeed, the result of Abdul-Jabbar's punch could in itself be a deterrent to future fisticuffs. After all, he is out $5,000 and going to be sidelined about a month because of a broken hand, and Benson, the Milwaukee Bucks' standout rookie center, suffered a concussion and facial cuts.

While the bulk of the responsibility for keeping matters under control rests with the players, the game officials also can help. The refs couldn't do anything to prevent Abdul-Jabbar's sudden punch, but every step is being taken to avoid a repeat.

"Good officials know when something is about to happen," said Norm Drucker, a pro referee for the past 25 years and the NBA's new Supervisor of Officials. "It comes from experience. They can sense something happens at one end, and they'll look for trouble at the other end."

What happens when a referee senses trouble?

"There are things I've used, and all officials use," explained Drucker. "They can say things like, 'Okay, I've had enough of you two, the next one is going to be you.' You throw one blow and it'll cost you. You try to make them aware that we know what's going on."

Ex-Raider Angered By Chicago's Play

CHICAGO (AP) — Don Rives, the Chicago Bears' middle linebacker is angry. He's angry with the Bears. He's angry with the fans and he's angry with himself.

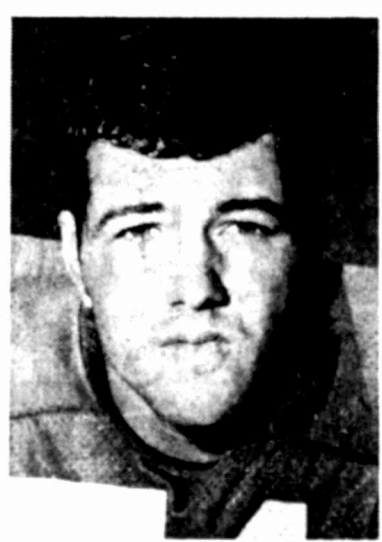

One reason he's so angry is that he can't figure out why the Bears aren't winning, especially against a team like the Atlanta Falcons who came to town Sunday and went off with a 16-10 victory.

"I thought we played our best game on defense," said Rives, "but, then again, their offense is terrible. I don't think they have any offense. Atlanta shouldn't be on the same field with us."

"But Atlanta had three sacks and picked up five turnovers," said Rives. "We didn't have any Atlanta, New Orleans, and even Minnesota don't have the personnel we have. So why aren't we 6-0 instead of 2-4? I don't know."

"We have to start winning and we have to start this week against Green Bay," said Rives. "We're a better team than Green Bay. I know we'll beat Green Bay. I hope we can't win one and lose one. We have to win, win and win. It has to snowball. We need a streak. Pittsburgh lost four last year and then won eight straight."

"I'm not saying we're a Pittsburgh but with our schedule we should beat everyone we play," said Rives, who is in his fifth season with the Bears and had the unenviable task of eventually replacing the legendary Dick Butkus.

"We had a tough schedule last year but we played better football," said Rives. "Now we have a chance to have a winner and we haven't put it together. We can't keep giving the ball up."

"It doesn't make any difference how good you are," he continued. "If we don't start doing our jobs, we'll be out of jobs. You can't blame the offense or the defense or the special teams or the coaches. You have to blame everyone."

Rives, a 15th-round draft choice out of Texas Tech in 1973, then took off on the Soldier Field fans.

"Our fans sometimes make me so sick," he said. "When we come out on the field, it's like a morgue. Everywhere else, the home team gets cheered when it comes on the field. Our fans only cheer when we're ahead. Otherwise, it's nothing but boos."

"All we're asking for is respect and we can do without the boos," said Rives. "But we can't get it from our fans. You know what one guy hollered to me? He asked me why I don't get films of Dick Butkus and study them. Who can be another Dick Butkus?"

Purdue Receiver Garners AP Honor

CHICAGO (AP) — Wide receiver Reggie Arnold of Purdue has been named The Associated Press Big Ten player of the week on offense for his record-breaking performance in Saturday's 34-21 victory over Iowa.

Arnold, a 5-11, 194-pound senior from Bartow, Fla., caught seven passes for 172 yards including a Big Ten record four touchdowns. The previous record of three touchdown passes in one game was held by nine others.

The Boiler-makers went to the shotgun offense to help freshman sharpshooter Mark Herrmann set up quicker and Herrmann responded with five touchdown passes which tied a Big Ten record. He completed 13 of 20 passes for 257 yards.

"The excitement was the thing," said Arnold. "Everyone was up for the game. I'm an emotional person and it helps me."

Also nominated for the award was Ron Springs of Ohio State who set up a touchdown with a 72-yard run and gained 130 yards in 14 carries in a 35-15 victory over Northwestern.

Another nominee was Ric Enis of Indiana. Enis scored his team's only touchdown in a 21-7 loss to Illinois and carried 35 times for 149 yards.

John Denver Discusses Upcoming Movie Role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — John Denver would have made an outstanding evangelist preacher but has chosen instead to get his messages across in song and currently in an appropriate new movie, "Oh, God."

Denver, his shaggy blond hair falling to the rim of his outsized round spectacles, has a compulsion to bring his gospel of conservation to whale killers, water polluters and other human threats to ecological amity.

The 34-year-old minstrel is unwilling to sing love ballads or pop songs without meaning. For that reason more than 70 percent of the songs he sings are his own compositions.

Almost all of his 14 record albums are paeans to the beauties of nature, the human condition and the virtues of environmental awareness.

Costarring with George Burns in "Oh, God" gave him an opportunity to bring his philosophy to the movie screen.

"I haven't got a religion, just faith," he likes to say.

"I don't preach in my concerts and I won't appear on talk shows to discuss my philosophy. I say what I feel in my songs."

"My life work is art which creates space for people to see themselves. I like to think that my own personal truth comes out in my work in a sort of spontaneous way."

"I don't know whether I'd call it a compulsion. But it is a drive. I write what I know about in direct relationship to wildlife and the environment, not just a man-woman relationship."

"My songs have a different kind of focus. I feel somebody has to start saying these things without negating other ways of life."

Denver avoids Hollywood when he can. The smog and glut of Southern California depress him physically and spiritually.

He lives in Aspen, Colo., and hangs out in the Rockies and in wilderness areas of the Pacific Northwest. Recently he has become fascinated with Alaska, Eskimos and saving polar bears.

Denver sees many similarities between himself and the supermarket manager he portrays in the film, which is the reason he selected "Oh, God" from a number of scripts he's been offered in the past five years.

"We're both straight-ahead guys who come from good families," Denver said during an asthmatic lunch break at a glossy Beverly Hills hotel.

"The man I play is in touch with the earth and open to communication with God. He believes in global unity. I think in those terms."

"The point of the picture is that God, in the form of George Burns, is coming down to talk to somebody to let the world know he exists and that we should cherish all the things given to us."

"These are ideas I feel strongly about and have tried to put forth in my music. The movie is a new avenue of expression for me that says in a believable way what I think are truths.

"People who see the film will really enjoy themselves and come out feeling good about themselves and life around them. Some of these truths will stay with them for a long time after they've forgotten the film. I'm very happy to be a part of that. It's a thrill."

Denver said he had little trouble setting aside his guitar to play a straight role. He had high praise for Burns and director Carl Reiner who helped him over the rough spots.

"I found it very easy," he said. "I had a couple of weeks of acting lessons with Jeff Corey who gave me some insights on how to turn a character in a script into a three-dimensional person."

"I feel I was able to become the character, Jerry Landers. At first I didn't know whether I could do it. But my attitude in a doubtful situation is to go for it. So I went for it."

"Before the picture opened I had a screening in Aspen for all of my friends. I thought they would be my hardest audience. If they could lose sight of me and see Jerry Landers, then I would have done my job."

"They said they got into the story and forgot they were watching John Denver. I feel like I did my job. So I'm happy and would like to do more movies."

"I'm a very young, weak actor and I'd like to learn the tools of that trade and make use of them. After 14 albums and the years of singing I'm only now really learning how to sing.

"I believe I'm still learning a lot of other things, too, about energy, diseases, the feminist movement, insanity, pressures and child abuse. I'm really absorbed by nuclear energy. I'm becoming socially aware on a lot of levels."

Denver is off to Australia to tape a special for American television and to spread his own particular gospel to the folks down under — through his songs, of course.

Concert Pianist Sees Career Launched

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Emanuel Ax is living a success story. He won an important piano competition in 1974 and it launched his career — brought him concerts and a recording contract.

Now, at 28, he has 60 concerts to play for the coming season and his fifth record coming out. These things come, he believes, not because of his winning the competition but because of performances he has given since. It's a good foundation for a lasting and solid career as a concert pianist. If the prophecies of critics are right, it'll also be a distinguished career.

Young pianists enter international competitions — of which there are many — hoping for a career sendoff. Ax says, "Competitions are such a strain, I never went to any small ones. If you're going to enter, you may as well enter one that'll do a lot for you. You can only take it so many times. I don't understand some people who can enter so many. They're such an unbelievable strain mentally."

"They're antithetical to everything that you know. There are thousands of approaches to music. And here you are trying to play better than contestant No. 18 as if there is a best."

Ax entered the Chopin competition in Warsaw in 1970, placing seventh. In 1971 he entered the Vienna da Motta contest in Lisbon, placing third. In 1972, in the Queen Elisabeth contest in Brussels, he placed seventh.

In 1973, his career was moving, with a debut recital in Alice Tully Hall and with bookings by Young Concert Artists, so he didn't enter any contests.

Then in 1974, the first Arthur Rubinstein International Master Piano competition was held, in Israel. Ax couldn't resist entering. Rubinstein has been his hero since he was 6. And a new major competition, with Rubinstein present, was sure to garner plenty of publicity.

Ax won. He gave concerts in Israel and London, and signed a recording contract with RCA.

"What we all enter contests for is to get the chance to play in a few places. Then it is up to you. By no means is winning the instant career some say it is."

"I think it is hard for anybody to talk about his own career as an entity, I believe, if you have certain opportunities and play well, that is all. I have tried to play well everywhere. A lot of it is luck. If you keep trying to do it well and have some opportunities, it should work out."

Ax's father had a friend who knew Rubinstein and he arranged for Ax, at 13, to play for him. "Rubinstein was sweet and kind. He kissed me on the forehead and I didn't wash for a while."

"I didn't see him again until the competition. When it came time to award the prizes he said to me in Polish, 'You've improved since the last time I heard you.' And he asked after my father. He must meet thousands of people; the fact that he remembered me was so unbelievable in those terms."

At 13, Ax says, he didn't play particularly well for his age. He was no prodigy and his parents didn't push him. But his father thought he had talent and made sure he always had good teachers.

Ax was born in Lwow. "My father was born there when it was Austria. My mother was born there when it was Poland. I was born in it when it was Russia. It appears on U.S. maps as Lemberg, the Austrian name."

The family spoke Polish at home. They moved to Canada in 1960; Ax's mother had relatives in Winnipeg. His father, now dead, was a speech and voice therapist and amateur singer. He was head of the speech therapy department at Harlem Hospital after they moved to New York in 1962. The name Ax wasn't shortened in the move to America, the pianist says. It has been Ax at least 100 years.

Ax attended the Juilliard School. He met his wife, pianist Yoko Nozaki, from Tokyo, there. They now both are American citizens. She plays with him on "The Mother Goose Suite" on an all-Ravel album to come out in October. His four previous RCA albums are of Liszt and Chopin. Beethoven, Chopin, and the Dvorak Piano Quintet played with the Cleveland String Quartet.

The New York Times commended Ax, soon after he won the Rubinstein prize, for not being as "careful" in concert as young classical prize winners usually are.

He says, "I believe in making a musical experience of a piece and playing with commitment and abandon. You study, you practice, but on stage I think it is wrong to be too careful. The point of a concert is to provide a musical experience for the audience and yourself and if you don't do that, I think you've failed in a very important way."

"Making a recording, now, is more difficult. There you have the situation that people are used to perfect recordings. Musicians play wrong notes; they fix wrong notes. Every record I've made has been pretty much a complete take of a movement of a piece. If one bar is unbelievably disgusting, the engineer may fix it. Again, it is important to have that feeling of doing a performance rather than a series of phrases put together."

Ax practices less than the five hours a day he should, he says, since he likes to watch sports events on TV and he's lazy.

The pianist is tense before a concert. "Once in a while my hands freeze, but most of the time I'm lucky and it's beneficial. Your adrenaline can start going and you want to give the performance of your life. That's the kind of tension I think Rubinstein has. He's always so up for a concert, you know."

"Rubinstein has the biggest technique of the century. He says everybody else plays better but don't believe him. Rubinstein really plays piano fabulous."

Famed Trio Marks 52nd Year In Show Business

RENO, Nev. (AP) — After 52 years the Mills Brothers are still going strong in the entertainment business and they say they intend to keep it that way.

"We are going to keep singing as long as people come around to listen. This is our life," said Harry Mills.

Since 1927 and their first recording, the famous trio figure they have cut 1,246 records — not albums, but singles.

"I believe we have made more singles than anyone in the business. In the near future, after they get them all counted, they are going to give us an award for that feat," said Harry, spokesman for the group.

"When people ask how many records we've sold I tell them it's one million for every year in the business. That's a lot of records. I'm not bragging, but they have been selling."

The brothers, Harry, 64, Don, 62, and Herbert, 65, recently appeared here at Harrah's before full houses every night.

From the looks of the crowd, visitors could have been asked to produce ID showing they were older than 55. Spotlights reflecting from the white hair were dazzling.

The audience was filled with Mills Brothers fans who have been admirers since the late 1920s.

They sang hits like "Glowworm," "O-pus One," "Cab Driver," "Yellow Bird," "Paper Doll" and more.

"We get requests ahead of time by mail when fans find out we are coming to perform. A lot of times people get mad if you don't sing their songs. I don't think we could go without singing 'Paper Doll' for instance, the people wouldn't forgive us," Mills said.

From 1925 when four boys from Piqua, Ohio started singing on the radio — one of the group has since died — the Mills Brothers have performed around the world.

They've hobnobbed with royalty and played with the biggest bands in the Big Band era. Along the way they shared top billing with stars like Bing Crosby.

About the only change in the Mills Brothers' act these days is the frequency. They don't play as often, although they still perform around the country and in

MILLS BROTHERS — After 52 years in show business, the famous Mills Brothers still are going strong. From left, Herbert, Don and Harry Mills, still pack in the people who have been listening to them for so long. They recently appeared in Reno, Nev., and say they have no retirement plans. Book Presents Study Of Photographer Hare AUSTIN (Special) — The first comprehensive study of the professional life of James H. (Jimmy) Hare, an early 20th century photographer, is presented in a new book recently published by the University of Texas Press.

Titled "Photojournalist: The Career Of Jimmy Hare," the book was written by UT history professor Lewis L. Gould who specializes in the early 20th century, and Richard Greffe, photographer with the Texas Department of Public Safety who wrote his master's thesis on Jimmy Hare.

lution and World War I. Robert J. Collier once said that "the Maine blew up and Jimmy blew in."

The book is available in bookstores or from the University of Texas Press, Box 7819, Austin, Texas 78712. Cost is $12.95 plus five per cent tax.

The more than 100 photographs were selected from thousands in the Hare archive in UT's Humanities Research Center.

UT Press editor Archer Mayor, who organized the publishing project, said, "The HRC has the largest known collection of Jimmy Hare's photographs. Hare was a shoot-from-the-hip photographer, a photojournalist who appealed to the masses."

PBS To Air Drama Of Romans

NEW YORK (AP) — "I think I'm a nice sort of person," says the woman who plays Livia, the female lead in the British TV production of "I, Claudius," "and the person I was playing was this monster. I just couldn't get going."

Then, recalled Sian Phillips, an actress with an impressive list of credits on the stage and on television in England, "The producer, Martin Lisemore, told me, 'You've got to think big. Think of America.' It was the only thing comparable to the Roman Empire."

"And then it was like getting the end of a string from a ball of wool and pulling. It comes along and you don't really think about it."

"It was nevertheless one of the most difficult parts I have ever played," said the talented Miss Phillips, who had just completed work on "How Green Was My Valley," another British production that became a hit on public TV in this country, when work on "I, Claudius" began. "I, Claudius" starts its 13-week run on public television's "Masterpiece Theater" the night of Nov. 6. It's an adaptation of Robert Graves' novel of life in the Roman Empire ruled by the corrupt Claudians. Derek Jacobi is Claudius and Miss Phillips is Livia, wife of Augustus Caesar and Claudius' grandmother.

"It's not that the play's hard to do," Miss Phillips said. "It's just that it's difficult to imagine people with limitless money and power, and difficult for a person to imagine an approach to life different from anything we know today."

"For example," the actress said, "how can you behave normally when you talk about sacred chickens, like they did? You have to act normally when you talk about this bizarre idea...."

"I can always understand roles I play," the actress said, "but Livia was totally outside my life. Most people have limits on themselves. She was a woman who set no bounds."

The television series recalls the attempt in 1937 to produce "I, Claudius" as a motion picture. Charles Laughton found it extremely difficult to portray Claudius, and the production was marred by retake after retake. The production was shelved when Merle Oberon, playing the female lead, was hurt in a traffic accident.

"It makes a colossal difference when you're working with television," Miss Phillips noted. "Television is a quick medium. You've got to get in there and do it, and the trick is to hire actors who are able to do it in one take." The London

Films-BBC production was completed in five months, Miss Phillips said.

The series was greeted initially in Britain by bad reviews. "I knew it would be that way," Miss Phillips said. "It's a weird story, with strange costumes and dialogue, and I said we were going to get kicked to death."

"But there's something about it, once people get over the idea of people walking around in togas."

It became something of a fascination for British viewers, Miss Phillips said, and by the end of "I, Claudius" run, the audience was huge. "It's terribly difficult to assess," the actress said of the series. "One does have to beg people to give it a fortnight."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. We have $5,000 in savings earning close to 8 per cent. Would there be any point in switching to corporate bonds? We fear stocks of any kind, especially "growth" stocks which don't seem to grow and which don't pay much. We are a few years from retirement. Shouldn't we consider discount bonds instead of stock?

A. A security you should NOT consider is any security which is going to cause you any worry.

To start with, I see no point in your switching to growth stocks from a high yield, insured, long-term savings certificate.

If stocks worry you — and you are approaching retirement when one should shed financial worries, not take them on — don't buy stocks.

A discount bond has two important attributes — in your case:

- 1) It yields lower current income at a time (the time is now, in your case) when an investor doesn't want more taxable current income.
- 2) It assures him of getting the face value of the bond (assuming, of course, he sticks to top quality issues) when the bond matures.

Let's assume, for example, that you intend to retire in 1982.

On the day your letter arrived, you could have bought (for high current income) a $1,000, 30-year bond (maturing in 2007) at par to yield about 8-8 1/4 per cent. You would now pay taxes on this $80 to $82.50 annual interest while you are still employed, helping to boost your working years' tax bill.

If, instead, you now bought a discount bond, say a 1/2 per cent bond issued in 1952 and coming due in 1982, selling at around 81-82 ($810 to $820 per $1,000 face amount bond) you would receive only $35 a year now and the $1,000 face amount when the bond matures in 1982. Only this $35 would now be taxable as current income. The current return on your money, it's true, would be only 4.31. But the total yield on your investment at maturity would come to 8.13 per cent with the $180-$190 capital gain subject only to long-term capital gains taxes.

When you got your $1,000 back at retirement you could then decide how you want to reinvest it.

I do want to point out, however, that a discount bond — even though it yields a practically assured capital gain — is NOT necessarily "better than" an equity (stock) investment or a bond selling at par. It is merely another item offered in the Wall Street "supermarket" to fill a particular need.

The discount bond's gain is a "built-in" part of the total return. It is not something you get as a "free" bonus. No one could invest money for a 4.31 per cent current yield today if he weren't looking for that bond's rise to par at maturity as part of his total reward.

But if you fear stocks, discount bond maturing after your tax bracket has dropped in retirement makes sense.

Q. Can you give us any information on a real estate trust in which we have bought stock and to which we contribute $20 per month?

A. Sorry, I've never heard of it. You'll have to check local sources. There's no way I can judge their operations and I don't know anything about that monthly contribution schedule.

Q. I've put most of my life's savings into subordinated notes. I need the interest to augment my Social Security. But now I'm worried about the notes.

A. A "subordinated" note — as the name implies — is junior to other debt of the company. If it's a strong company, the note is O.K. (although not as good as the same company's first mortgage bond). If it's a shaky company, the note can be "iffy."

Shulsky welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

For information on corporate and tax exempt bonds, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address your requests to Sam Shulsky, King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Tech Prepares Parade For Homecoming Day

Texas Tech University's Homecoming Committee will sponsor an information meeting from 8 p.m. until 10 p.m. Tuesday for Lubbock organizations, businesses or individuals wishing to participate in the 1977 Homecoming Parade.

Committee chairman Gary Boyd said any firm or individual planning to enter a float or other item in the parade must attend the meeting which is to be held in the Texas Tech University Center Room 207.

At the meeting, forms for entering and regulations concerning the event will be distributed and explained, Boyd said. A description of each float to be entered in the parade must be submitted to the Texas Tech Red Tape Cutting Center in the University Center by 5 p.m., Oct. 31.

Floats built by professional builders will be disqualified from competition for prize money to be awarded to the best entrants, Boyd said, and no float may carry political advertising of any kind.

Businesses or individuals wishing to financially sponsor a float without building their own can do so by calling Boyd at 742-3895 or 763-0881.

Stewardesses Seek Duo's Extradition

MOSCOW (AP) — Three hundred forty-four Soviet stewardesses have signed a letter to President Carter asking him to extradite two Lithuanians who hijacked a Soviet plane to Turkey seven years ago.

The appeal, read to a news conference Monday, asked for the return of Panos Brazinskas and his son, Algedas, who are said to have killed a young stewardess and wounded three passengers in the course of hijacking the plane to Turkey.

The two men forced the plane to land in Trabzon, Turkey, Oct. 15, 1970, and were found by a Turkish court to be immune to extradition because their acts were politically motivated.

Both are said to be living now in the United States, the father in New York City and the son in Worcester, Mass.
