

HELPING OUT — Snowy, spine-tingling winter weather Wednesday sent Lubbockites scurrying around town bundled up like kids dressed for a snowball fight. To keep from facing chilly winds or slipping on icy streets, Paula Kirk of Lubbock maneuvered her way around town with the aid of a nearby wall to steady her. Around town, Lubbockites came to the assistance of each other, some helping stalled motorists and others, like Tom Gallaway of Lubbock and Pat Hood of Austin, making sure nobody went sliding on slippery sidewalks. Storm Numbs State; Warm-Up Forecast

A-J News Services
 THE WORST storm of the winter tightened its grip on the Lone Star State Wednesday with ice, sleet and snow chilling residents as far south as San Antonio. However, forecasters predict temperatures will warm and driving conditions will improve in the South Plains early today and in the remainder of the state by this afternoon.

The icy highways were blamed for at least one traffic fatality Wednesday when a San Antonio woman was killed near Snyder.

Mrs. Nora Knoll Maples, 56, was killed instantly about 9:50 a.m. when the station wagon she was driving skidded on the glazed road into a crane parked on a median on U.S. 84 south of Snyder.

Mrs. Maples' daughter, 20-year-old Sandy Maples who was a passenger in the car, was treated for injuries received in the accident and released from Cogdell Memorial Hospital in Snyder.

Reportedly Mrs. Maples and her daughter were returning from Lubbock where they had taken another daughter to register at Texas Tech University.

Travelers Advisory Canceled
 A travelers advisory for the Panhandle and South Plains was in effect most of Wednesday morning, but improved road conditions prompted the National Weather Service to cancel the advisory early Wednesday afternoon.

Although Lubbock police reported a rash of about 30 traffic accidents occurred during a 3 1/2 hour period Wednesday morning, only two persons had injuries requiring medical treatment.

Several of the collisions occurred on slick overpasses and on Loop 289 as light rain made streets even more hazardous.

Schools in Clarendon and Paducah were closed due to a gas curtailment, but students were expected to return to classes today.

Airline Shuts Down
 The sleet and freezing rain caused Southwest Airlines officials to cancel all Wednesday evening flights, as well as two earlier flights. A Southwest Airlines spokesman said flights which were running had been landing very late. Airline employees in Dallas got a half-day holiday due to the bad weather.

Other airlines reported some flight delays, but no canceled flights.

The numerous fender benders in Lubbock paled in comparison to massive traffic tie-ups in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Ray Crowder, director of the Fort Worth City Ambulance Service, said so many major accidents occurred Wednesday morning he ran out of ambulances.

A Fort Worth police spokesman said a jackknifed truck on the old Dallas-Fort Worth Turnpike stopped traffic in that city for three hours.

14-Car Pile-Up
 The dispatcher for the Irving Police Department said 14 cars were damaged in a chain reaction collision on Texas 114 west of Texas Stadium during the Dallas rush hour.

"It was a really bad scene this morning," said Bob Shaw, spokesman for the Dallas Police Department.

In Mount Pleasant, 120 miles east of Dallas, officials opened the Titus County Civic Center just off Interstate 30 to stranded motorists Wednesday afternoon. Cots and blankets were issued to motorists wishing to spend the night.

Ice conditions were prevalent throughout the Texas Hill Country in Central Texas and several large trucks were reported off the road on I-20 and on S.H. 36 Wednesday.

Law enforcement officials were preparing for the worst late Wednesday as the melted sleet and snow on roads started to freeze. Fort Worth reported all roads covered with sleet and ice late Wednesday, with slush on Dallas roads expected to freeze during the night.

Haunted Houses Given Governmental Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force may have pooh-poohed UFOs but another government agency seems less skeptical as to encounters of the ghost kind.

They've even put out a guide called "The Supernatural — Haunted Houses and Legendary Ghosts."

The U.S. Travel Service's eight-page foldout lists upwards of 21 ghosts in eight states and 29 sites including Southern plantations, boyhood homes, a governor's mansion, Army fort, and an anchored frigate.

Most of the shades apparently are content to simply show themselves at the tourist spots. But others do interesting things like sipping wine, chattering, peering into sleeping faces and complaining about poorly hung pictures.

The guide gives telephone numbers, too — to communicate with real people, of course.

Unfortunately for ghost fans, most spots close by 5 p.m. — long before prime time for spirit-viewing starts. Only The Myrtles in St. Francisville, La., offers "evening by appointment" hours.

Here, at the state's oldest plantation, a French governess makes an appearance "to peer into sleeping faces in the bedroom." But visitors don't get test sleepovers.

Louisiana and Virginia lead the haunt parade with 10 sites each, followed by the District of Columbia with 2, California 2, Maine 2, and one apiece in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Ghosts seem to cotton to Louisiana plantations. Parlange, at New Roads, is haunted by the spirit of a lovely girl, the guide says. At St. Maurice, reports the travel service: "Tales persist that this massive home is haunted by a child who rises from the cemetery and by spirits who noisily turn calendar pages."

Other quirky spirits include one with a fondness for spirits who empties decanters at the Governor's Mansion in Dover, Del., and at Shirley Plantation in

Carter Hails Sharp Cut In Jobless Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter hailed as "good news for the country" the Labor Department's report Wednesday that the December jobless rate fell to 6.4 percent, its lowest level in more than three years.

The half a percentage point decline from November's 6.9 percent level broke an eight-month pattern that has seen the unemployment rate bounce between 6.9 percent and 7.1 percent.

Unemployment stood at 7.3 percent when Carter took office last January and the administration set a goal of reducing joblessness to 6.6 percent by year end.

"The statistics look good," the president said at a hastily called White House meeting with reporters and Charles Schultz, his chief economic adviser. Carter spoke hopefully of further improvements this year with the aid of his proposed tax cut.

The Labor Department said a record 58 percent of the population was working last month. Over the year, employment increased by 4.1 million to a total of 92.6 million — the biggest 12-month increase since World War II.

Schultz said it shows "the economy is healthy, is improving and we can keep it moving, but we'll have to work at it."

Asked by the president if the proposed $25 billion tax cut is still important, Schultz replied, "That's right...the point was always that this was a tax cut that wasn't to rescue an economy that was on the verge of recession or stagnation, but a rather sober way to keep it going in the future."

The Commerce Department predicted earlier this week in its annual forecast that economic growth in 1978 will be sluggish and unemployment will decline only slightly without new action by the government to stimulate growth. Some private forecasters are predicting the jobless rate will begin rising again later this year.

Carter noted that federal job programs, including doubling of the public service employment program to 725,000 jobs by March, have yet to take full effect and will have further impact.

The drop in the December unemployment rate took some government economists and administration officials by surprise.

"Six-four? Is that right?" Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal asked when reporters told him of the report. "That's very good. It means we exceeded our targets."

At 6.4 percent, the unemployment rate is at its lowest level since October, 1974, when it was 6.1 percent. It rose to a recession peak of 9.1 percent in May, 1975.

Unemployment averaged 7 percent for the year in 1977, down from a 7.7 percent

HEW Mounts Campaign On Cigarettes

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. launched a massive government attack Wednesday on cigarette smoking, declaring it "public health enemy No. 1," and a killer of thousands of Americans.

Califano promised help to the nation's 54 million smokers to quit the habit. The government will expand its smoking research and urge broadcasters and educators to spread the message that "smoking maims, smoking kills."

Tax Hike Studied
 He announced that a joint HEW-Treasury Department task force will study the possibility of recommending that Congress raise the eight-cent-a-pack federal excise tax on cigarettes. The panel also will consider the possibility of graduating the tax according to the tar, nicotine and carbon monoxide in cigarettes.

The Tobacco Institute, voice of the $14 billion-a-year cigarette industry, attacked Califano's program before its unveiling and said the government should not intrude into people's personal habits.

Califano urged the Civil Aeronautics Board to ban all smoking on commercial flights. He announced a tightening of smoking restrictions in HEW buildings and urged industry and other federal agencies to follow his example.

Califano said a new Office on Smoking and Health with a $23 million budget will coordinate all HEW's smoking research and information efforts. It will spend $6 million next year on information and education, compared with less than $1 million last year.

Califano announced his program on the 14th anniversary of the now-famous surgeon general's report on smoking and health. Thirty million Americans have quit smoking since 1964, and the percentage of adult smokers has dropped from 42 to 34 percent.

Smoking is "a major factor" in the premature deaths of at least 320,000 Americans each year from heart disease, lung cancer and other diseases, he declared, saying the program would be "a counterweight to the (industry's) blandishments" to youth to take up smoking.

Califano's strategy was criticized immediately by two health activists who said it did not throw enough of the government's weight behind anti-smoking efforts.

JERRY AIRHART
 Entering Representative Race

Texas House Race Set By Jerry Airhart

JERRY AIRHART, 35-year-old accountant and lifelong Lubbock resident, today is announcing his candidacy for state representative from the city's east-side Dist. 75-B.

He will challenge incumbent Froy Salinas in the Democratic primary in May. Salinas announced for re-election several months ago.

"I plan to be an energetic representative of the people in my district. And I will keep them informed and represent the office with respect and dignity," Airhart said.

He adopted a campaign theme, "A Responsible Approach to State Government," and zeroed in on three main campaign issues — agriculture, opposition to an individual state income tax and education.

Airhart is in charge of the Plains Cotton Cooperative Association gin accounting program.

He said his experience of the last eight years in the field of agribusiness puts him in good stead to pursue his concern for agriculture.

"I plan to do whatever I can to keep this main segment of the West Texas economy financially healthy," he said.

On the tax issue, Airhart stated, "I believe that with fiscal restraint no new taxes from the state level will be needed."

He said that "as a father of four children I am also very concerned about education at all levels. This matter will also be a chief pursuit of mine at the state level."

Airhart resides at 1904 28th St. with his

Israel, Egypt Parley On Sinai Settlements

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The defense ministers of Egypt and Israel took their "battle for peace" to a Cairo conference table Wednesday to seek agreement on Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula and to determine the fate of Jewish settlements that have blossomed in that wasteland.

The meeting was seen by Egypt as a key barometer in advance of parallel but wider-ranging talks between Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers set to open Jan. 16 in Jerusalem.

Awkward Beginning
 According to an Israeli source, the Cairo talks began on an awkward note with Egypt demanding that an opening statement prepared by Israeli defense chief Ezer Weizman be withdrawn, apparently because it conflicted with Egyptian opposition to Jewish settlements in Sinai.

The source, who asked not to be identified, gave reporters copies of the text. In it Weizman said Israel and Egypt will "examine arrangements for continued maintenance of the Israeli settlements."

There was no immediate Egyptian comment on the flap.

The joint military committee convened at the Tahrir — Purity — palace in a Cairo suburb, a four-story brick structure once the residence of the family of Egyptian King Farouk.

Discussions were held in a second-floor room with the two eight-member delegations seated opposite each at a rectangular table.

Weizman entered the palm-lined palace compound after a 55-minute meeting earlier Wednesday with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. The meeting took place at the Nile city of Aswan, about 600 miles south of Cairo, where the president has been mapping his Mideast strategy in the wake of his historic journey to Jerusalem that brought Arab and Jew together after three decades of war.

Negotiations between Weizman and Egyptian War Minister Mohammed Abd-El Ghany Gamassy will focus on the future of a score of Israeli Sinai settlements in a peace settlement.

The controversial issue became the target of a war of words, with Sadat vowing that no Israeli, soldier or civilian, will remain in a Sinai returned to Egyptian control. Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin, speaking with equal passion, declared: "The Israelis do not burn settlements. They build them and keep them."

Before leaving Tel Aviv, Weizman defined the settlement controversy as "a critical one" and said Israel's overall aim was "to achieve security measures."

Egyptian officials say they will be watching Israel's response as a test of the Begin government's willingness to reply to Sadat's solo peace initiative. The Sadat drive is anathema in much of the Arab world where critics accuse him of seeking a separate peace with Israel.

Israeli sources close to Weizman reported the ex-fighter pilot in good spirits and quoted him as saying he expects the negotiations to be "long but not long-winded."

"I hope the last battle with Egypt will

New Winter Storm System Moving To Northeast Area

By The Associated Press
 A NEW WINTER storm system shoved eastward Wednesday, threatening more misery for the already-frozen northeastern quarter of the nation.

At least 23 persons died as a result of two days of temperatures dipping well below freezing. Two others died in storms that are lashing California.

Louisiana reported the first death of the new storm — a man killed when his car skidded on a patch of ice during freezing rain and slammed into a bridge.

Meanwhile, the heavy demand for electric power eased Wednesday as temperatures rose some and voltage cuts made during Tuesday's cold weather were restored.

Ohio was hardest hit by the cold wave with 14 weather-related deaths during the two days of sub-freezing temperatures. Three died in Illinois, another three in Alabama, and one each in Maryland, Pennsylvania and New York.

As the new storm system moved eastward, traveler's advisories went into effect in Texas, Oklahoma, northern Louisiana, Kansas and Missouri. A winter storm watch was issued for northern Arkansas and parts of Tennessee. Forecasters said it would continue east.

On the West Coast, California had a day of sunshine, but more rain was on its way. Heavy rains earlier in the week drenched the state and a Pacific storm pounded the shore causing widespread damage and at least two deaths.

The storm also brought water levels up to the natural rim of Lake Tahoe, and for the first time in months water flowed into the drought-parched bed of the Truckee River.

In Michigan, where Detroit Edison Co., Consumers Power Co. and Indiana Michigan Power Co. had reduced voltage by 5 percent Tuesday, full power was restored.

Earlier, Indiana Michigan broadcast appeals to customers in both states to reduce power usage after the utility lost about 45 percent of its generating capacity.

Detroit Edison spokeswoman Peg Furlong said: "It's warmed up a bit, and also, there's less wind, which reduces heat loss from buildings. Additionally, companies to the south are not buying as much power from us."

Indiana Michigan, though still having trouble handling frozen coal, was "back to where we have the capacity to serve our load," said spokesman Phil Carl.

Full power also was restored in Illinois and Ohio after a day of widespread voltage reductions because of heavy demand and lack of generating capacity due to frozen coal stockpiles.

Two tankers, two barges and a Coast Guard patrol boat were driven ashore earlier in the week by high winds and pounding waves along the Atlantic Coast from New England to Maryland.

One of the tankers, the Achilles, which grounded Sunday near Providence, R.I., was freed Tuesday without spilling its cargo of heating oil. But another tanker, the Coast Guard boat and two barges remained ashore Wednesday as crews attempted to refloat them.

A fuel barge grounded and partially sank in a Long Island Sound about 20 miles east of New York, spilling 75,000 gallons of oil when one of its tanks was

FBI Chief Search Narrows To Two

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin Bell said Wednesday he believes the search for a new FBI director has been narrowed down to two candidates, apparently two federal judges from the Midwest.

Although Bell did not refer to the judges, President Carter has personally interviewed only two potential FBI chiefs, U.S. District Judge Frank J. McGarr of Chicago and Federal Appeals Court Judge William H. Webster of St. Louis.

Bell talked to reporters after a meeting with Carter and Webster at the White House.

The attorney general said Carter asked him to return next Monday to discuss the search for a successor to retiring FBI Director Clarence J. Kelley.

Water Crisis Seen In Future For Americans

By RASA GUSTAITIS
Pacific News Service

Now that the country has finally acknowledged that it faces an energy crisis, Jimmy Carter is about to confront it with an even tougher issue: that of water.

Like fossil fuels, water is finite. There is only so much. Unlike oil, it has no substitute. And though it is renewable, it is quickly becoming scarce and expensive. The General Accounting Office recently warned of "increasing signs that the next great resource crisis—an inadequate water supply—may be rapidly approaching and may be a more difficult problem to solve" than energy.

The crisis has been brewing for decades, quite aside from the droughts in the West and floods in the East. Carter is the first president, however, to point to water as an urgent national issue and to try to map a strategy to preserve and protect it. He is expected to announce this strategy early this year, bringing on another furor in Congress.

Crisis Of Dramatic Nature

The water crisis is nationwide, though it is especially dramatic in the semi-arid Sunbelt states, which lately have experienced the greatest population and industrial growth.

In the Texas high plains, thousands of irrigated acres of cotton may have to revert to dry grazing land within 20 years when, according to some geologists, groundwater will run out. The problem is similar in western Kansas, Colorado, Arizona, Nevada and parts of California.

In several coastal states, salt-water intrusion threatens underground fresh-water supplies because too much water has been mined from aquifers (underground reservoirs) allowing sea water to enter. In Florida, which depends mainly on groundwater because its streams are shallow and brackish, the state's principal supply is endangered. It takes very little salt water to destroy an aquifer and the damage is almost irreversible.

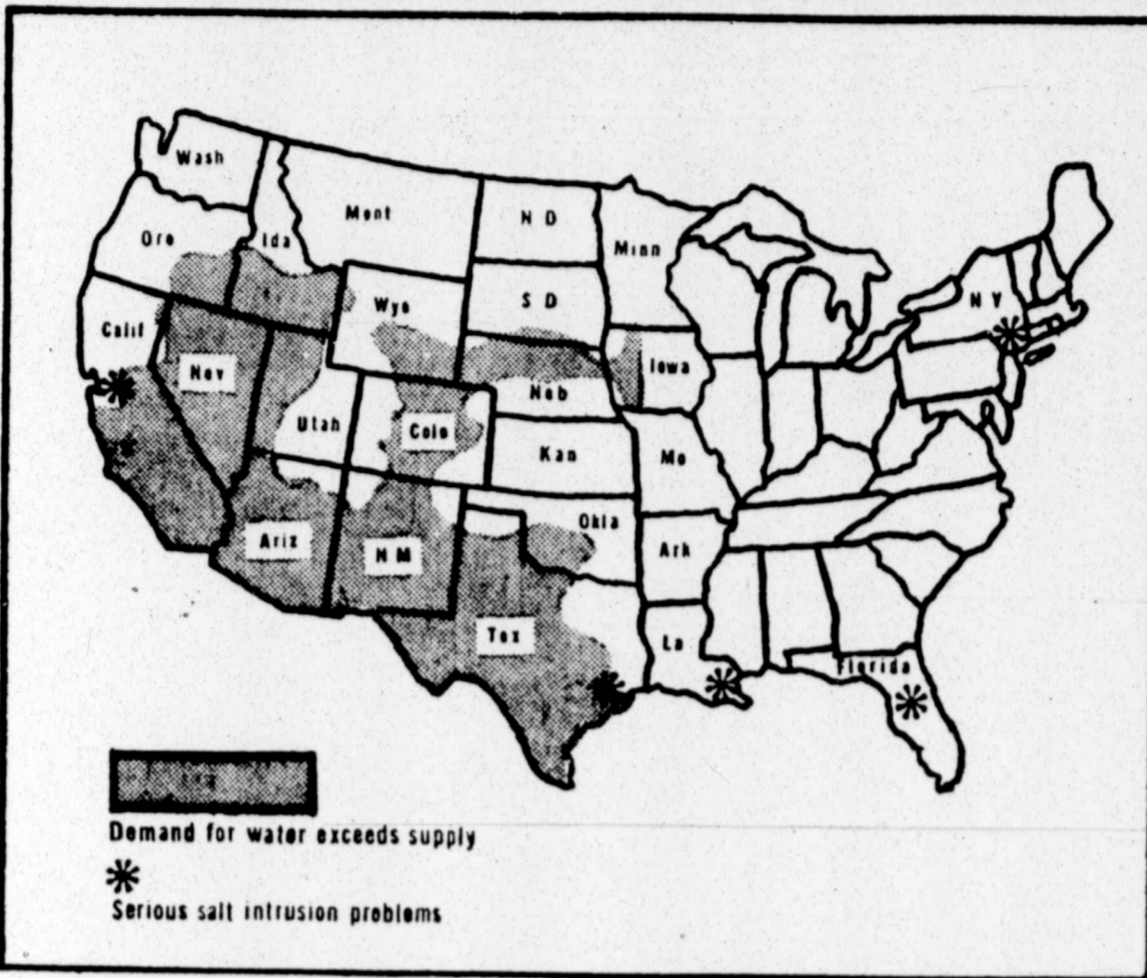

Because of overuse of ground water, more than a thousand square miles of land have subsided in Arizona and elsewhere.

Excessive irrigation has degraded the soil by salt build-ups in most Western states.

Pollution Problem Observed

Industrial and agricultural chemicals have polluted much of the country's drinking water supply. Deep underground supplies, which are now considered inaccessible but might perhaps be tapped with more advanced technology, are being poisoned by injection of toxic chemicals into underground dumps.

Conflicts are building among farmers, urban interests and Indians as competition for dwindling supplies grows more intense. Meanwhile, plans to extract coal and mine metals with hydraulic methods are about to place a massive new demand on the scarce water in the Southwest and the Great Plains. That demand can only be met at a heavy cost to agriculture.

In the past, the assumption has been that if there's shortage of water in one place, more could and should be brought in from elsewhere. But so many rivers have now been drained, so many valleys dammed, that the price of continuing has grown exorbitant. Looking north for new sources now means looking to Canada and even the arctic glaciers. And that implies a loss of national self-sufficiency.

Conservation Assumes Importance

The alternative course, the one favored by Carter, is to explore the vast potential for conservation and to encourage self-sustaining patterns of use. That implies a change in federal policies that have encouraged waste of water by providing it to users at far below cost, courtesy of the taxpayers.

One of President Carter's first action after inauguration was to order a review of 32 major dams, flood control and irrigation projects and then cancel 18 of them. In so doing he brought upon himself the wrath of Congress, for he stepped into the jealousy guarded terrain of pork-barrel politics.

The water policy Carter is now expected to propose will anger even more political leaders and special interests. For it will affect the way millions of federal dollars are spent.

The policy is expected to stress conservation and to call for more realistic cost accounting, requiring beneficiaries of federal water projects to pay the costs. It will probably also discourage projects that moved water from one place to another and may require a search for non-structural alternatives—not developing on a flood plain, for instance, instead of building a flood control project.

Opposition will be especially strong in the West, where Carter has already reaped anger with his first project cancellations, as well as his Administration's attempt to enforce a long-ignored law that requires federally developed water to go only to family farmers.

Federal Mixups Costly

Federal agencies spend nearly $5 billion a year on water projects, not counting water quality improvement. Forty-three departments and agencies are involved, often at cross-purposes.

For instance, the Soil Conservation Service sends out alarms that two million acres of agricultural land are being destroyed each year by urban development. But the Farmers Home Administration routinely funds sewers for subdivisions on prime agricultural land. The Bureau of Reclamation encourages further irrigated agriculture on desert lands, creating a demand for more water imports that are possible only at the cost of farms elsewhere, and of landscapes the Interior Department tries to protect.

Much of the current water crisis is a result of the policies of the federal Bureau of Reclamation, created in 1902 to encourage farming by bringing water to arid lands. The Bureau sells water to users at a fraction of its development cost. It thus subsidizes some growers at the expense of taxpayers, blocks incentives for conservation and tips the scales for Sunbelt farmers at the expense of farmers in the rain-rich Northeast and Southeast.

Of the 420 billion gallons of water used in the U.S. daily, 80 percent goes to irrigation, mainly to states west of the Mississippi. The federal water is priced so low that farmers find it cheaper to let much of it run off unused than to install more efficient irrigation systems that could cut water use in half and eliminate the need for more planned water projects.

Confusion At State, Local Levels

But though the federal role is great, water policy is largely under the jurisdiction of the states and localities.

There are now growing doubts over the wisdom of trying to conquer nature by turning deserts into lush greenery. "We cannot continue to presume that as people concentrate in a particular region they will necessarily be provided with those resources they had in another region in the same amount and at the same price," Mohamed El-Ashry, a staff scientist for the Environmental Defense Fund, told a recent Water Resource Policy hearing in Denver.

Whether Carter manages to prod the country toward a new course or not, he is sure to create an awareness that water is neither limitless nor inexhaustible.

District Seeks Library Grant

The Lubbock Independent School District said Wednesday it will apply for about $105,000 for additional library and audio-visual materials under Title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

The application will be submitted to the Texas Education Agency, which does not fund the funds, within the next few weeks, Warner Sims, the district's director of special projects, said.

If approved, half the money would go for library books and other library materials, and half for audio-visual equipment.

The funds are available under Title IV.

Part B Monies also may be available under Title IV, Part C, for special or innovative school projects, Sims said. Part C grants are "very competitive," however.

Sims said he does not know whether school departments plan to submit proposals for Part C funds.

Non-Union Miner Slain In Freak Accident

By United Press International
A 25-year-old non-union miner became the second fatality of the six-week United Mine Workers strike when he was shot and killed Wednesday in a freak accident at a strip mine operation near Sturgis, Ky.

In Washington, no new developments were reported in efforts to end the strike's $188,000 soft coal miners in 22 states, that began last Dec. 6.

Authorities said Anford Hibbs of Providence, Ky., was killed when a .38-caliber pistol slipped from the dashboard of a pickup truck in which he and another miner were riding. The pistol fired a bullet into Hibbs' head.

Webster County Coroner Morris Townsend ruled Hibbs' death as accidental.

Both Hibbs and John C. Ronemus, 27, of Sturgis, who was in the truck with him on company grounds, were employees of the Pyro Mining Co., which has been the frequent target of striking UMW pickets.

Hibbs' death was the second since the nationwide UMW strike began Dec. 6 against the Bituminous Coal Operations Association Mack Lewis, 65, of Stanville, Ky., a retired UMW coal miner, was shot and killed last Friday at a crossroads picket station.

Ralph Anderson, 50, of Prater Creek, Ky., an off-duty mine watchman charged with the slaying, waived examining trial Tuesday in Lexington, Ky., and was ordered held for grand jury action. Anderson was being held in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Temperatures hovering around zero and snow from a weekend storm continued to keep picket activity at a minimum in eastern coal fields. A few pickets in Harlan County, Ky., were reported Wednesday huddled around oil drums being used as makeshift outdoor stoves.

In other developments:
— District 12 UMW President Kenneth Dawes said Wednesday that striking UMW members in Illinois would not picket coal being moved from mine stockpiles for delivery to hospitals, churches, schools or nursing homes. He said District 12 has received several requests during the recent cold wave and added that preventing the movement of coal to such facilities would not help the UMW win a "just contract."

— Kentucky State Police Commissioner Ken Brandenburg Wednesday said all state police patrols related to the UMW strike were under longstanding orders to limit their work to protecting property, trying to avoid violence and enforce court orders. Brandenburg said state police officials have been in frequent contact with leaders of the UMW and the mine operators in order to help avoid violence.

Tower Reflects On Campaign

TOWER ANNOUNCES FOR ANOTHER TERM — Texas Sen. John Tower, a Republican, as he announces at a news conference in Austin Wednesday he would seek another term as senior senator from Texas. (AP Laserphoto)

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, says he thinks President Carter will take no part in Tower's re-election campaign in Texas, "either consciously or wittingly."

"The administration policies have found very little favor in Texas," Tower told a news conference in Austin, the first stop on a three-day schedule of campaign rallies to formally announce his re-election plans.

Tower is unopposed in the GOP primary and apparently will face the winner of a hot race between Democrats Bob Krueger, New Braunfels congressman, and Joe Christie, former state insurance board chairman.

Tower said Wednesday his record in Congress will be his main issue.

"Issuewise, I think I reflect the majority view in Texas," he said.

Tower flew from Austin to Arlington, then on to Houston, Tyler and Wichita Falls. Thursday he planned to visit Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland-Odessa, and El Paso. Friday he completes the campaign trip with visits to San Antonio, Corpus Christi, and Harlingen.

At the Austin rally a jazz combo played "The Yellow Rose of Texas" as Tower and his family appeared. He was introduced by former ambassador to Australia, Edward Clark, an Austin attorney.

Tower was first elected to the Senate, as a successor to Lyndon B. Johnson, in a special election in 1961. He is chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee and ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Tower said he would appeal to Texans "in every walk of life, of every race, color or creed, who long for the day when the heavy hand of government shall be lightened, and the oppressive army of regulators, bureaucrats and tax-eaters once again enter the private work force of a free society."

On other issues, Tower said:

— He would wait to see what sort of energy policy legislation comes out of conference committee before taking a stand.

— He will actively oppose ratification of the proposed Panama Canal Treaty.

— He has asked the Republican policy committee to study cost factors of the processing and marketing of farm products in hopes of helping farmers. "Farmers must have a much higher income," he said, and he advised them to formulate legislation incorporating their needs.

Ex-UT Regent Erwin Accuses Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Texas-Austin Board of Regents Chairman Frank C. Erwin Jr. Wednesday accused the University of Houston and the state auditor of gross negligence for speculating in short-term investments.

The University of Houston announced last November that it had problems with its short-term investment program and would conduct an investigation.

Erwin, an Austin attorney, said the transactions were "illegal from the outset and resulted from a deliberate violation of and/or callous disregard for existing law."

"The truth is that the University of Houston Board of Regents and its chief administrators and the state auditor are all guilty of gross negligence in not knowing or discovering the illegality of these transactions and putting a stop to them long ago."

The UH Board of Regents fired financial analyst Samuel Harwell, 34, and placed Douglas G. MacLean, vice president for financial and management services, on six months administrative leave.

State News

UH officials insist MacLean's leave has nothing to do with the investigation of the investments that were a part of MacLean's responsibility.

Erwin stated his opinion in a letter to Herbert D. Kelleher, a lawyer hired by the UH board to assist in the investigation.

UH said in earlier statements that Harwell bought securities of the Government National Mortgage Association and then borrowed money on the already purchased securities to buy more securities.

When Harwell was fired last November UH had $250 million in the scheme and was committed to purchase $100 million more. UH officials have not accused Harwell of any illegalities, saying only that he acted unwisely.

Erwin said he got involved in the UH case because he feared if the UH case developed into a scandal it would pose serious problems for other universities in the next session of the legislature.

"More specifically, the scandal will almost certainly result in some demand that all state institutions of higher education deposit all of their cash receipts in the state treasury and withdraw them only upon warrants sent through the offices of both the comptroller and treasurer."

"Such a change in depository practice would have a tragic effect upon the amount of bank interest the University of Texas system and other innocent colleges and universities have been able to earn on the deposit of their local funds, all of which interest-bearing bank deposits have been made in strict accordance with state law."

In Austin, state auditor George McNiel said he thought Erwin used a "broad stroke" in including the auditor in his criticism. "I think maybe he included us when he didn't intend to," McNiel said.

"When we made our audit we called everything we found to everybody's attention. We published it (in the August 1975 audit report). Everything was legal up to that point ... Other than that, I really have no comment."

American Nazis Seeking Use Of Telephone Tapes

HOUSTON (AP)—The American Nazi Party asked a state appeals court Wednesday to remove a temporary injunction prohibiting telephone tape messages that offer a $5,000 reward to any white who kills a non-white "while being attacked."

A spokesman for the Houston chapter of the organization told The Associated Press that non-white included those of the Jewish faith.

The three-judge 14th State Appellate Court took the request under advisement and gave no indication when a ruling would be announced.

State District Judge Richard Millard approved the temporary restraining order in early December on the request of Marvin Zindler, a Houston television personality, who is Jewish.

After the court order was handed down, Dennis Milam, a secretary of the American Nazi Party, said the judges "of this nation and this state are just so much garbage and we have the right to offer a reward for whites who protect themselves against non-whites."

Mike Maness, attorney for the Nazi party, told the court the injunction "was a violation of the right of freedom of speech. It is unquestionable unconstitutional. The injunction violates the rights of the Nazi party."

Attorneys for Zindler told the appeals court that certain types of speech "are not protected under the Constitution, and that includes threats."

Manpower Agency Funds Frozen By Director

AUSTIN (AP) — Don Adams, acting director of the troubled Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs (GOMA), said Wednesday he has frozen payment of all manpower grant money dispensed by the agency.

Adams said he did so because of severe criticism by auditors of the way federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds were managed by the office and its subcontractors.

Over $1 million in expenditures were held "questionable" by auditors. GOMA and its grant holders also were criticized by evaluators for the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

Adams said he stopped payment of the grant money "because I don't know whether those contractors are in compliance. They have been severely criticized in the audit. Before any grant money goes out, I am going to be sure they have a contract and that they have supporting data for the expenditures."

Undocumented expenditures were one of the many criticisms leveled against GOMA grant holders and the agency itself.

"I can tell you, there is no money — period — moving out of this agency," said Adams, whom Gov. Dolph Briscoe put in charge of GOMA after its director, Rogelio Perez, was charged with forgery in Brownsville.

The charge was an outgrowth of a court of inquiry into a job training program founded by Don Gray, business manager of the Harlingen plumbers union local.

AN EDITORIAL:

Big Brother On Radio, TV?

ANOTHER STEP in what many see as an effort to "take over" or unduly influence the presentation of news, as well as views, by the broadcast industry is shaping up in Alaska.

The move is similar to others across the nation, in which those with special axes to grind—from environmentalists to minority groups—seek to put pressure on what is and is not broadcast or televised.

In some instances, similar approaches have been made on the print media.

BECAUSE THE airwaves are the property of the people in a broad context, and therefore their use regulated by the Federal Communications Commission, the broadcast industry is subject to unusual pressure.

At stated intervals, when renewal or granting of a license for the broadcast media comes up, the public is invited to submit opinions to the FCC which may or may not weigh in whether a license is renewed.

The same public pressure comes to bear on sales and mergers. It is in this context that the Alaskan case has arisen.

RECENTLY, THE general manager of Station KCBD-TV in Lubbock was asked to discuss his job before a meeting of the Downtown Rotary Club.

He posed a question at the outset.

"How would you like to own a business where you are required, every three years, to justify your performance to seven political appointees, and perhaps lose that business, if they arbitrarily don't think you measure up...or perhaps, be forced to give away one of whatever you produce, for each one you sell?"

The speaker, W. Robert McKinsey, was taking note of the license renewal problem, plus the demands of various pressure groups which demand "equal-free-time" to take issue with anything or anything which the station may present, be it news, views, entertainment or advertising.

MR. MCKINSEY pointed out that not only the FCC, but other governmental regulatory agencies, such as the Federal Trade Commission and now Consumer Protective groups, are exerting pressure to decide what can and can't be presented.

It goes without saying that if these tactics are successful, then sooner or later it will be the Federal Bureau, not private and free enterprise, which determines what Americans will hear and see, what products will or will not be advertised, what views will or will not be expressed.

WE HAVE NO argument with dissent, with opposing views and with the proper presentation of such views.

But, we feel much safer—for an unfettered, free press as we have known it throughout this nation's history—with its control in the hands of those trained to handle it, and the public's response to it through normal channels, than in having pressure groups and Big Brother decide what we may hear, see or read.

We recognize that there must be regulation of the airwaves to the extent that there are no overlapping signals and interference, and that each station is given its own channel in which to operate.

But we think that the best criteria for determining if the industry is doing its job and responding to the public's needs, whether it be in the presentation of news, entertainment, documentaries or advertising, is whether the public watches or listens to what is presented and therefore, in the context of the free enterprise system, decides whether the station stays in business or not.

ACCORDING TO The Associated Press, a group of Alaskans has asked the FCC to deny license renewals for and sale of seven radio and television stations owned by Mid-Night Sun Broadcasters Inc.

The petition, filed on behalf of a coalition of civic and environmental groups known as Alaskans for Better Media, addresses itself to a number of alleged grievances.

These include such things as hiring, programming and handling of commercials.

Some of those associated with the stations have charged that the protesting group has suggested that some of its membership be named to any board of directors or management which might be named.

BEFORE WE go any further, one major item should be emphasized.

That is, although the broadcast industry does utilize the nation's airwaves, and in so doing should be responsive as well as responsible to the public it serves, the stations are for the most part private businesses, privately funded and privately operated.

They, like any business, must be operated in such a way as to meet all the rules and regulations which govern other businesses.

And, most importantly, they must be run in such a way as to make a profit. Otherwise, they go out of business and those employed there are out of work.

WASHINGTON—The farm strike, which so far has failed to grasp the nation's attention, will soon be regenerated by a muscular alliance with the truckers who tied the nation in a knot exactly four years ago.

A massive farm-and-trucker rally is planned to coincide in Washington with President Carter's State of the Union address Jan. 19.

It is aimed at forcing Congress to confront both farmer demands for higher prices and independent trucker demands for more favorable long-haul rates.

What makes this demonstration, still in the planning stage and not publicly announced, something different for the embattled farmers is the new alliance they have quietly formed with the independent truckers.

These are the same truckers who, under the organizing genius of Mike Parkhurst, publisher of "Overdrive" (the Bible of the independents), conducted the 1974 trucking strike that immobilized interstate transportation, forced widespread layoffs of industrial workers and created shortages of food and other commodities.

INDEPENDENT TRUCKERS are owner-operators who carry a major percentage of farm produce.

Plans for the Jan. 19 "tractor-and-truck-in" are impressive, with every sign that what is promised will actually occur.

The promise is to line Washington's streets with hundreds of tractors and heavy truck rigs and thousands of farmers.

Violence of any kind is out, but inconvenience is not.

On Jan. 20, inconvenience will escalate with plans to close at least one of the main bridges between Virginia and the District of Columbia.

So far, the farmers' strike has had little success in pressuring the Carter administration to live up to campaign promises for higher farm prices.

But the surprise alliance between farmers and truckers might find a political base in Congress.

Separately, the truckers have been unable to win the rate-making and route-making changes they want from the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC).

Separately, the farmers are nowhere close to achieving the prices pledged by Jimmy Carter and Fritz Mondale during the campaign. Now they will try together.

Rolling Gnomes At Fault For Dollar's Instability

WASHINGTON—Every time you pick up the newspapers these days you read that the Dollar is falling. Most people, except those in financial circles, are not paying any attention to this. The main reason is they don't understand it.

Perhaps I should explain it in a question and answer format.

Q—Where does the Dollar go when it falls?
A—It falls below the West German Mark, the Swiss Franc and Japanese Yen.

Q—Why is it falling?
A—Because money speculators in London, Zurich and Frankfurt are pushing it down.

Q—IS THERE anything worse than the Dollar falling?
A—Yes. It could be plunging or sinking.

Q—Why is the Dollar falling at the present time?
A—Because the money speculators are worried about it.

Q—Why are they worried about it?
A—Because the United States has a huge trade deficit, no energy policy, and Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve, just lost his job.

Q—Why would Arthur Burns losing his job make the Dollar fall?
A—Because nobody knows what his replacement, G. William Miller, will do when he becomes head of the Fed.

Q—What should he do?
A—Rescue the Dollar and keep it afloat.

Q—Why can't we make a Dollar that won't fall?
A—We could, but the cost could bankrupt us.

Q—HOW FAR WILL the Dollar fall?
A—Until it bottoms out.

Q—Then what will happen?
A—It will start rising again, particularly if the West Germans and Japanese dredge it up.

Q—Why would they want to do that?
A—The lower the Dollar falls the harder it is for them to sell their goods in the United States, and the easier it is for the United States to sell their goods in the rest of the world. A strong currency has a lot of weaknesses.

Q—Where does the British Pound stand in all this?
A—The British Pound is rising while the Dollar is falling.

Q—HOW DO YOU explain that?
A—The British have oil in the North Sea.

Q—So?
A—It's easier to float a Pound on oil than it is a Dollar on water.

Q—Can we go back to the Dollar?
A—We can, but since we've been talking it's dropped two more cents.

Q—What caused it to do that?
A—Someone in Paris just read this article and called his banker in Brussels and told him to sell the Dollar and buy Norwegian Kroner with it.

Q—How did the Norwegian Kroner get into this?
A—The West German Mark and the Japanese Yen are considered by the Belgians to be overpriced, so they're buying the Norwegian Kroner instead. They may not keep Kroner for long.

Q—WHAT WILL THEY do with them?
A—Probably buy gold in Amsterdam as a hedge.

Q—What can I do to keep the Dollar from falling?
A—The first thing is to let it slide, then prop it up and finally pump some life in it.

Q—How do I do that?
A—You have to get through to the gnomes in Switzerland.

Q—Gnomes in Switzerland? What do they have to do with all this?
A—They're behind the whole thing. When you see the Dollar fall you can bet there's a gnome in Switzerland dropping a rock on George Washington's head.

Offhand Thoughts

The Kiwanis Club bulletin says that if you put all of our Congressmen together, they weigh about 96,000 pounds. And then it concludes, "It's hard to get anything that weighs 48 tons to move quickly."

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Tractors To Trucks

WASHINGTON—All right. The United States should never have committed ground troops to the Vietnam War, although it made geopolitical sense earlier on to send in military advisers.

But two things always bothered me about the noisy campaign waged by the more rabid big mouths among the so-called "peace" crowd. They cheered every Communist victory over American troops.

Indeed, while not egging the Reds to kill Americans, certain members of Congress agreed that heaven on earth would be produced in Indochina under Communist rule.

Well now, a kind of poetic justice would be achieved if some way could be found to ship the crazies and peace-loving Congressmen to the Vietnam-Cambodia border areas with orders to inspect what's going on in that suburb of paradise.

ASSUMING THEIR humanity, the result would be comparable to ingesting a veterinarian's dose of ipecac.

Foreign observers and refugees from both countries all report seeing atrocities of a foulness that might have turned even Joe Stalin's stomach. During the current virtually full-scale war over frontier disputes, both sides have been guilty of:

Wholesale massacres. Beheadings. Looting and arson. Slaughtering the peasants' cattle and destroying other food supplies.

The old lesson is posed again, to wit, that Communist regimes are inclined to go ape even in disagreements with other Communist regimes. Lenin, Stalin, Mao & Co. set the example, and it has been put into practice across Eastern Europe, in Africa, and in Southeast Asia.

IN FACT, THE successors to the masters in the Soviet Union and Red China are in this one up to their eyeballs. The Chinese are dictating strategy and tactics to the Cambodians and the Russians to the Vietnamese.

What it's all about this time is Red Vietnam's long-term aim to become a dominant power in Southeast Asia as head of what it calls a future "Indochina Union."

Next on the list, if Vietnam's overwhelming military power prevails in Cambodia, are Thailand and Laos, where the Vietnamese regime has installed what a State Department man calls "an army of agents-provocateur."

That is not at all the cup of tea of Peking's political nobles. They have enough on their plate, alternately protecting their frontier with the Soviet Union, and dispatching guerrillas to carve out bits and pieces of Russian acreage.

SO THE TEMPTATION here would be to cry "Let's you and him fight," were it not for the plight of plain people on both sides of the Vietnam-Cambodia border.

As we learned during the Vietnam War, it is the civilian men, women and children who suffer most from the war-making of Communist forces.

Meanwhile, we have had Sen. Ted Kennedy and family-wandering around Red China and politicians fighting to get on the next plane to Cuba to pay their respects to that Torquemada of the Western Hemisphere, Fidel Castro.

They are potential customers of the gold-brick propaganda that while Communies sometimes are disagreeable, it's only because they're trying to escort the world to a demi-Eden.

'This' Is Heaven?

JAY HARRIS: A Matter Of Faith

AS ONE WHO has had it both ways, we can understand why the fear of flying still is a psychological block for many persons.

But, because of a lessened fear of the wild, blue yonder, lowered fares or both, thousands are now going by air who for whatever reason formerly got there some other way. Or didn't go.

Not only are most U.S. domestic carriers reporting record or near-record travel of late, but foreign lines as well. And one has to go no farther than Lubbock's International Airport to see what it means.

The city is now served by four major carriers. Most of the time, the traffic is heavy, with boardings the past year setting an alltime high. It's the quickest and safest way to get from here to there, whether it's from Lubbock to Dallas or El Paso or Lubbock to Timbuctoo.

BUT, AS WE said, a good portion of the population doesn't see it that way. Such persons, one psychologist says, are "flight phobics."

Roger McKinley, a clinical psychologist and commercial pilot, says there may be 17 million normally non-neurotic people who have a tremendous aversion to flying. He, along with others, is attempting to do something about it.

For instance, McKinley notes that a true flight phobic isn't impressed by irrefutable statistics that show it is 10 times safer to get on a plane than get in a car. Certainly this is true in Lubbock.

Nor are they convinced that those flying the thingamajigs are competent, although millions crawl in autos with incompetent or even drunk drivers or share the streets with same.

According to McKinley, many phobias about getting off the ground are learned through one or more bad experiences that happened to the individual or someone he or she knows.

THE PSYCHOLOGIST says that it may be no more than flying through a thunderstorm.

Or it may be a rough landing, or seeing photos of a tragic plane mishap and reading of the high toll involved.

Never mind that as many as 50,000 persons a year have been killed and three or four times that many maimed in auto accidents in the U.S. alone. It's the thought of the "unknown," and the fact that many prefer to have their own hands on the wheel, so to speak.

In fact, the fear of the unknown may be one of the major factors for many persons.

"You know all you can do is sit there," McKinley says. "You have to totally depend on someone else and you must accept that person is competent and capable of handling the aircraft and your safety. You have to have something called faith."

OF COURSE, there are other reasons for flying and not flying. But, to a great degree, the one just mentioned rates high on the list.

At least it did in my case.

Many years ago when we had just got started in this business, we took a hop in a private plane with a then widely known local pilot, a boxing promoter and none other than the fighter, Max Baer.

Everything went fine until we came in for a landing, which had to be aborted at the last minute. We got as close as a look at a fence as we ever wanted, and at the same time decided the next time we would take the bus.

Many years passed, during which our former boss would chide us with: "The horse and buggy is gone. The plane is here to stay."

THEN CAME an opportunity to go abroad, a trip of a lifetime which we couldn't refuse.

We took a jaunt to the West Coast for a family reunion, another to New Orleans. Just to get the feel of it. Everything went fine, except for a dive-bomb landing at El Paso.

Nevertheless, we took the "big one," to South America. South Africa, Egypt, Italy, England. Later, we went back to Israel and the Mideast, all in the space of a few months. Since, we have chafed up so many more journeys abroad the distance in less than three years easily exceeds 250,000 miles.

As a result, we have met world leaders and the man in the street, in places which not only have been fascinating, but which are playing key roles in helping shape current history.

We have been privy to sights and sounds, people and places, ancient and modern, which completely changed our life and outlook. We often think how close we came to missing it all.

NOT THAT IT all has been easy. We have been on a plane where there was a reported "minor" engine fire far out over the South Pacific. Almost at the point of "no return" we made it back to Rio.

That came at a traumatic moment because it was our first Atlantic hop. We flew out of the Transkei on a small plane, harboring second thoughts. As it turned out it was one of the most beautiful flights we ever made.

We have sweated out a stopover in Nairobi in the middle of the night and watched coffee swish over the cup in what the pilot said was "unusual" conditions on a flight from Cairo to Rome.

But, boiled down, the guy who flew the plane on that trip with the engine problem put it best. "I don't know what sort of God you worship," he told us. "But you can worship a God of Fear or a God of Faith. I have flown this route 300 times and have a wife and five children. I always have faith I will make it."

We've never looked back since. And we have been rewarded in more ways than just walking through doors which open on ancient history and modern pageantry and politics. The philosophy can be applied to Life every day, anywhere, aground or aloft.

A. It developed exactly where you might suppose, in the mideast harems. The desirous inmates of same competed nightly with one another thusly for the amorous attentions of the sultans. Most of those poor helpless girls so exploited in bygone years actually thought it was pretty nifty. Strongarm Holdup Trio Gets Necklace, Cash, Victim Says

While investigators checked into the city's latest-reported armed robbery, an early Wednesday incident, uniformed officers were taking a spate of new burglary and theft reports.

Police said a 56-year-old man told them he was robbed by three bandits about 3:30 a.m. Wednesday, after he struck up a conversation with them at a South Lubbock restaurant.

After the man left the restaurant and began walking home, he said, the trio of men showed up in a vehicle and offered him a ride.

After accepting the ride, the victim said, he climbed into the front seat of the car only to be grabbed from behind and beaten on the head by one of the bandits.

The robber, who reportedly told the victim he had a knife, succeeded in taking $50 in cash and a $200 turquoise necklace before he and his accomplices released the victim at a nearby vacant field.

Burglars who broke into a Lubbock residence during the past few months took several small appliances, a power converter, a CB radio and $35 in change, according to Roland Paul of Rocky Comfort, Mo., who was storing the merchandise at a relative's house at 5017 Magnolia Ave. The haul was worth about $375, Paul said.

Both Bill Roy of 808 Ave. U and Tom Loyd of 3805 64th Drive said their hubcaps were stolen during separate incidents this week. Loyd estimated his loss at $206, while Roy said it would cost him $150 to replace his pilfered wheel covers.

Several hand tools, clothing and 8-track tapes were taken from Dale Ray Thompson of 2215 14th St. last November. The victim told police Wednesday he was reporting the theft of the items valued at $538 for insurance reasons.

Ed McKenney of 2902 3rd Place said someone broke into a rented storage unit in the 4900 block of Brownfield Road during the past month and stole 35 of his record albums, a loss estimated at $250.

Vandals caused a reported $100 damage to Roy Ramos's car Tuesday or Wednesday when they shot the automobile, parked at 3209 Baylor St., in the roof.

A $100 pistol reportedly was stolen Saturday or Sunday from a trailer belonging to Wayne Teague of 1008 Ave. A.

Burglars also cost Sherry Lynn Foster of 3510 22nd St. more than $1,000 worth of headaches Wednesday. The victim said someone had stolen her $450 television set, a $700 reel-to-reel tape recorder and about $25 worth of recording tape.

Car burglars broke into Ken Neher's pickup over the weekend while it was parked at his 4311 57th St. residence. Neher said a $150 CB radio was taken along with an ice cooler.

Elsewhere in the city, a 73-year-old East Lubbock resident learned a lesson Tuesday when he allowed a stranger inside his home to use the telephone.

According to reports, a man knocked on the front door of the E. 17th Street house and asked the occupant if he could use the phone. After the elderly man consented and allowed the stranger inside, the occupant reportedly then went inside his garage to do some work.

When he returned a few minutes later, the stranger — and a television set — were gone.

State Approves County Jail Construction Plans

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With problems over safety codes and the size of dayrooms now resolved, state officials say Lubbock County may "progress immediately" with construction plans for a new, but slightly smaller county jail.

To get that approval, county architect Arnold Maeker had to cut the long-term detention capacity of the proposed facility from 270 inmates to 267.

That minor change, coupled with other modifications, enabled Maeker to design larger dayrooms for the project, in compliance with specifications of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards (TCJS).

Maeker met Monday in Austin with Guy Van Cleave, executive director of the state agency, and other officials to discuss revision of the jail drawings and resolve issues concerning "life safety rules" — primarily, emergency evacuation in case of fire.

Van Cleave reported in a letter to Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw: "Concerning the lack of space in dayrooms, Mr. Maeker presented a revised drawing wherein the minimum standards are met."

"With this revision and the resolution of life safety rules questions, Mr. Maeker was informed he could progress immediately to construction drawings and bid documents without the intervening submission (to the TCJS) ordinarily required."

Maeker's suggested changes in the original design for the new jail still must be approved by the Lubbock County Commissioners Court.

On Wednesday, Commissioners Alton Brazell and Edgar Chance, who compose the court's subcommittee on jail construction, met with Maeker and endorsed the revisions.

Afterward, Brazell said the plans "look good. I'm glad to see we were able to comply with the state standards and yet only lose three inmate units" in the revision.

He said he will recommend to his colleagues that the commissioners court "give Arnold (Maeker) the go-ahead to proceed with the plans as revised."

If the court concurs, Maeker said he should be able to stick to his timetable of getting the plans out to bid by March and getting the new jail built and ready for occupancy by January, 1980.

As originally drawn, the new jail was to have a 65-inmate holding area and three 30-inmate cellblocks for long-term detention. But Maeker was unaware at that time of state rules on the size of dayrooms.

To make the dayrooms comply with those rules, commissioners feared they would lose about 10 cells — reducing the efficiency of the new facility.

But Maeker found a way to enlarge the dayrooms by cutting the capacity by just three prisoners. Under the plan, some space that originally had been allocated as a corridor also was converted for dayroom use.

The new jail as revised, Maeker said, will have three long-term cellblocks with capacities for 91, 88 and 88 inmates respectively.

Van Cleave had discouraged the county from seeking a variance to the state rules so that the original plans, with the smaller dayrooms, could go out for bids. The chances that TCJS would approve such a variance are "minimal at best," and it would be at least a month before such a request could be considered, he said.

The new Lubbock County Jail, to be built east of the old jail downtown, is expected to cost about $3.6 million. The county hopes to pay for the project out of available federal revenue-sharing funds.

Water Board Denies Requests

PLAINVIEW — The Canadian River Municipal Water Authority Board of Directors in a regular meeting here Wednesday denied a motion to increase the authority's water allocation to its member cities for this year.

J. Ray Dickey, representing Lubbock on the board, made a motion to increase water allocation supply to 86,000 acre feet.

However, the motion was denied and directors then approved keeping the supply the same as last year, 72,000 acre feet.

The board also denied a request for water by Hale Center, which is not a member city.

In making their decision, board members said the authority could not allocate water to a non-member city unless a surplus first is declared. But Hale Center could make a deal with one of the member cities to borrow water, directors said.

The board did approve transferring 30 million gallons of water from O'Donnell to Lamesa, both of which belong to the authority.

The board also elected director Ray Renner of Lamesa as president and Jack Skaggs of Plainview as vice president.

Payment Sought For Research

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A man who claims the city ignored his warnings prior to last September's flash floods in the Kansas City area is demanding $19,000 for his research on floods.

F. Neal Bosco, who operates a rain-making service in Golden, Colo., said he was hired by the city early last year to do research on flooding and to prepare warnings. He said he did the job and submitted a bill of $19,205.61.

"The cost of my research is a pittance to what could have been saved just in terms of life if the warnings had been heeded," said Bosco.

The city says that it never hired Bosco and that his reports were a muddle of newspaper clippings, duplicated public records and weather service reports.

"From June I sent them warnings every two weeks that they were facing a flood of devastating proportions. I did what they asked me to do. If they don't pay, I'm going to court," said Bosco. "I specifically told them that heavy cloud-seeding operations and levels of ground saturation in the Kansas City area made a flood inevitable."

The National Weather Service in Kansas City said, however, it found no evidence of cloud-seeding that could have contributed to the flooding.

The flash floods Sept. 12-13 killed 26 people in the Kansas City area and caused damage estimated as high as $100 million, much of at the County Club Plaza shopping area.

Bosco's research apparently started after a two-paragraph letter in June from Charles J. Coughlin, a retired police colonel, who asked Bosco if he would be "kind enough to send" any information he had developed on the flooding of rivers in the Kansas City area.

"We had simply asked if he'd send us copies of anything he already had concerning flooding in this area," Coughlin said. "We had no idea he'd construe that as an offer to hire him as a consultant."

Police Chief Marvin Van Kirk said, "We're having our attorney look this file over, but I can tell you we have no intention of paying this $19,000 bill."

He said Bosco's periodic letters contained general remarks about the possibility of a flood but the only letter predicting a flood at a specific time was dated Aug. 9. In it, Van Kirk said, Bosco referred to flooding north of Missouri and said flooding could hit the Kansas City area within a week.

Van Kirk said Bosco's warnings were unclear and no real information could be gleaned from them.

Mondale Hears Pleas On Colorado Visit

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale was urged Wednesday not to let the quality of life deteriorate in the West as the rest of the nation turns to the region for energy supplies.

At an hour-long town meeting attended by about 500, several people told the vice president that the West, with its abundance of natural resources, is ready to help the rest of the nation but should not have to suffer as a result.

Earlier, during a series of tours in Grand Junction, the vice president visited a school for the mentally retarded, a community home for juvenile offenders and a halfway house for alcoholics. The visits were arranged hurriedly when hazardous flying conditions prevented Mondale from making a one-hour helicopter flight to tour the energy boom town of Craig, which is undergoing explosive growth because of oil shale and coal development projects.

Mondale, on a five-day, seven-state tour of the West, planned stops later in the day in Montana, Idaho and Washington.

Arriving at Grand Junction's municipal auditorium for the town meeting, Mondale walked across the street and talked with striking farmers. He said President Carter had signed the costliest farm bill in the nation's history this year, but the vice president agreed with farmers that farm prices aren't good enough.

Mondale said he would not argue with farmers that "we've got to get that income up." He accepted a bumper sticker that read, "Crime Pays More Than Farming." At the town meeting, former Colorado Gov. John Vanderhoof noted the demand being placed on the West for energy supplies.

"In reality, we mainly wish that this development would take place somewhere else," Vanderhoof said. He added that the West realizes it has to help the rest of the country "but we also insist that as we grow we do it in such a way that we can preserve and maintain our good western way of life."

Mondale agreed with him that "water is the lifeblood of the arid West." Vanderhoof urged that the administration support construction of four water projects which President Carter has termed unnecessary.

Underlining the importance of water to the West, Vanderhoof said, "We must have storage facilities and an understanding of the fact that our streams exceed our needs only two months each year and fail to meet our needs 10 months each year."

Barbara Chambliss of Grand Junction, a member of the Colorado Land Use Commission, said that energy boom towns developing in the West lessen the quality of life by overloading demands on schools, utilities, social services and other areas.

Texas Farmers Carry Economic Protest To Austin

By United Press International
 Hundreds of striking farmers surrounded the Capitol in Austin with huge tractors Wednesday and took their protest into the Senate chamber, where they demanded state lawmakers help them beat the cost-price squeeze.

In West Texas, farmers who admitted they were trying to generate publicity stopped five freight trains and invited the crews to have coffee and sandwiches. The offers were declined.

Challenge Issued To Kansans

By The Associated Press
 A leader of the nationwide farmers' strike said Wednesday that the strike will succeed if farmers in Kansas go along with a recommendation to destroy a third of their winter wheat crop.

"We can make this thing work," said Bill Nicholas of the American Agriculture state office in Johnson, Kan. "If Kansas can plow up its wheat, we're home free."

But even some of the farmers at the Tuesday meeting in Great Bend that came up with the recommendation were unenthusiastic.

"If I plow up 30 percent tomorrow, my banker will have me committed the next day," one man said. Another told strike leader Jim Kramer, "When we get home, some people will say we're crazier than hell."

And Earl Hunt of Arkansas City, vice president of the Kansas Association of Wheat Growers, said, "It's been historically true in the past that farmers do a lot of talking but when it gets down to action, they wait for their neighbor to take the first step."

Elsewhere Wednesday, the Colorado Legislature approved a resolution supporting the strike. And 13 Canadian cattle trucks, escorted by Minnesota patrolmen, eluded border pickets set up by striking farmers and apparently made it safely to markets in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Copies of the Colorado resolution, which has no force of law, were to be sent to President Carter, Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland, the Colorado congressional delegation and the presiding officers of the legislatures in 18 western and midwestern states.

American Agriculture, which is based in Colorado, organized the strike by asking farmers not to produce crops or buy farm goods until the government guarantees higher prices.

Minnesota leaders of American Agriculture have accused the U.S. and Canadian governments of trying to break the strike.

Olmo Olson, a Finley, N.D., farmer active in the border blockade that was eluded Wednesday, said "somebody is attempting to break our organization. Somebody is out to break up this tactic we are using of stopping shipments ... and no doubt it's the higher echelons of the two governments."

The striking farmers are demanding federal government action providing full parity for their products. At full parity, farmers theoretically have the same purchasing power for the items they sell as their forebears had early in this century when prices and costs were said to be in step.

By comparison, farm prices as of Nov. 15 averaged 66 percent of parity, one of the lowest marks for the indicator in 44 years.

Russians Link Three Ships In Space

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts, carrying mail and newspapers from home, made a historic linkup with two orbiting comrades Wednesday.

It was the first time two space capsules have connected with the same space station to form an orbiting, three-craft ensemble.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the Soyuz 27 capsule that was launched Tuesday connected with the Salut 6 orbiting space station at 5:06 p.m. Moscow time (9:06 a.m. EST.)

Soyuz 26, carrying Commander Yuri Romanenko, 33, and Georgy Grechko, 46, was launched Dec. 19 and docked the next day with the space lab.

Soyuz 27 is commanded by Vladimir Dzhanibekov, a 35-year-old air force lieutenant colonel on his first space flight. Civilian Oleg Makarov, 45, a space veteran, is flight engineer.

Soviet television showed Romanenko and Grechko laughing and joking as the newcomers squeezed through the hatch toward them into the space station.

Then all four drank a toast of cherry juice squeezed from small tubes.

Tass said the four would do experiments for five days. The newcomers then would return to earth on Soyuz 26, taking with them return mail and scientific materials.

The Soviets gave no indication how long the other two, already aloft for more than a month, would stay up.

The Soviets gave no elevation or location of the linkup, but a television diagram of the procedure appeared to show it taking place over the Soviet Union.

Soviet commentators have said they envision colonies of space capsules, linked together sausage-fashion, as the way of the future for space exploration.

The Salyut 6 space station, launched Sept. 29, is the first Soviet orbiting station to have ports capable of handling more than one space capsule at a time.

The tractorcade in Austin stretched for three miles along busy Congress Avenue, stalling rush hour traffic already encumbered by streets slick with sleet and rain. The farmers parked their tractors on the Capitol grounds and crowded the Senate chamber for a public hearing of the Senate Subcommittee on Agriculture.

"We demand a pay raise," said Victor Marek, a Bartlett farmer and spokesman for the American Agriculture movement, to cheers and applause of more than 250 farmers. "You Texas legislators voted yourselves a raise. Now vote the farmers a raise."

Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, the only one of the three subcommittee members at the hearing, also heard testimony from state officials and agriculture experts from Texas A&M. Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, was unable to attend the hearing because his flight was canceled due to an ice storm and the other committee member, Sen. Max Sherman, D-Amarillo, has resigned from the Senate.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Attorney General John Hill, House Speaker Bill Clayton and Rep. Joe Hubenak, D-Rosenberg, chairman of the House Agriculture and Livestock Committee and a candidate for Texas Agriculture Commissioner, issued statements announcing their support of the farmers.

During the hearing in Austin, William Black of the Texas Agriculture Extension Service and Agriculture Experiment Station urged farmers to focus on themselves rather than the federal government to find answers to the cost-price squeeze. Black said farmers can help themselves by improving their marketing techniques and by cutting production costs.

He (the farmer) loses out in several places and if his cost is above the price he receives he is automatically looking into a losing situation," Black said. "He also loses out if he uses a less productive marketing system."

"I think we (state officials) ought to get down to realizing that either we want to speak to the goals of full parity or we don't," Hill said as the farmers cheered and applauded. "I, for one, want to speak to them."

Hill said his office will investigate grain dealers to see if they are guilty of price fixing, as alleged by some farmers.

"In making this statement, I am making no allegations or accusations," Hill said. "Whether or not anything here is illegal, I don't know. It's simply that I think this matter ought to be investigated."

Hill said the Texas Legislature could help the farmers by lifting the sales tax on utilities and by proposing a constitutional amendment to tax farmland on productive rather than market value.

Clayton and Briscoe, in a joint statement, said they endorsed the farmers' movement for 100 percent parity and would urge Congress and the Carter Administration to act immediately to remedy the situation.

"Here we live in a country where we are so efficient that the farmer is penalized for it," said Clayton, who read the statement.

Hubenak said the state needs less government and more qualified agriculture leaders.

"I don't think you can make farm policy unless you have leaders that chopped cotton, hauled hay and milked those cows seven days a week," Hubenak said.

Butz Urges Farmers Refrain From Strike Participation

HOUSTON (AP) — A policy statement to the American Farm Bureau Federation's 59th annual convention and an impromptu speech by former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz Wednesday discouraged any participation in a nationwide strike by American farmers.

Butz spoke to delegates to the 2.8 million-member organization at an afternoon business session.

The 238 voting delegates were scheduled later Wednesday to take up a policy statement prepared by a committee headed by Iowa Farm Bureau President Dean Kleckner.

"I think these people have served a useful purpose in pointing up to the people of this nation the serious economic crisis of the American farmer," Butz said, referring to the American Agriculture strikes. "Beyond that, I think it might become counterproductive. The country soon will turn off any sympathy they might have had."

The committee's policy statement said in part: "Farm Bureau, as an organization, cannot legally endorse any agreement or understanding which limits the marketing of commodities or controls the prices to be obtained for such commodities without violating the antitrust laws and subjecting itself and its members to severe criminal and civil penalties."

TRAIN SHUTDOWN — Striking farmers Wednesday halted nine Santa Fe Railway trains across the South Plains for periods as long as three hours in protest of low farm prices. Farmers who lined the tracks near Ropesville kept this train from moving for nearly three hours by placing flares along the tracks. Santa Fe spokesmen said the trains legally are required to stop for the flares much like automobiles are required to stop for red lights. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

Strikers Blockade Area Rail Lines

Protests against low farm prices by area farmers will be brought back to Lubbock today as farmers, who Wednesday stopped Santa Fe Railway trains to point out their plight, stage a special session to educate area businessmen about the American Agriculture Movement.

About 2,000 farmers, businessmen and political leaders from the South Plains, Panhandle and New Mexico are expected to attend the 7:30 p.m. rally in Fair Park Coliseum.

Amarillo agribusinessman Don Kimball and Lubbock National Bank Vice President Johnny Lutrick will speak, according to rally organizer Marvin Meek of Plainview.

Tonight's rally will be distinctly different, he said, from the tactics used Wednesday by farmers to halt nine Santa Fe trains across the region for periods as long as three hours.

A Santa Fe spokesman in Amarillo said the farmers placed flares along the tracks in nine different locations, apparently knowing that trains are legally required to stop for the flares much like automobiles are required to stop for stop signs.

Striking farmers made no demands of the crews, and even offered engineers and other members of train crews coffee and doughnuts while the trains were stopped.

Tractors and pickups lined the tracks at each location, but in only one instance did farmers actually block the tracks.

One train was stopped between Bovina and Farmerton about 10:45 a.m., but was restarted when crewmen determined nothing was blocking the tracks. After they proceeded, farmers placed a pickup on the track a few miles down the road, the Santa Fe official said.

"We're just trying to get news coverage and inform the American Public" of the farmers' problems, Tommy Applewhite of the Hale Center strike office said.

While farmers involved admitted the event was staged as a publicity stunt, state strike leader Mike McCathern said the shutdowns were supposed to protest the manner in which Texas grains are transported by rail to the coast and then shipped to foreign countries at low prices.

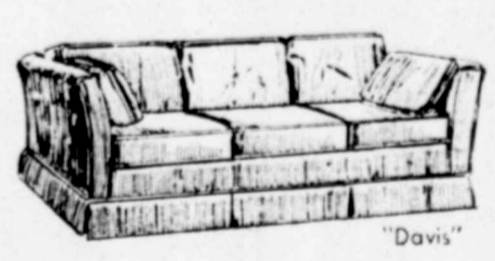

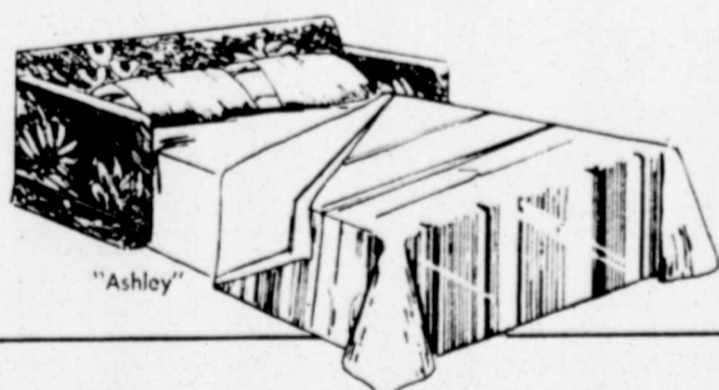

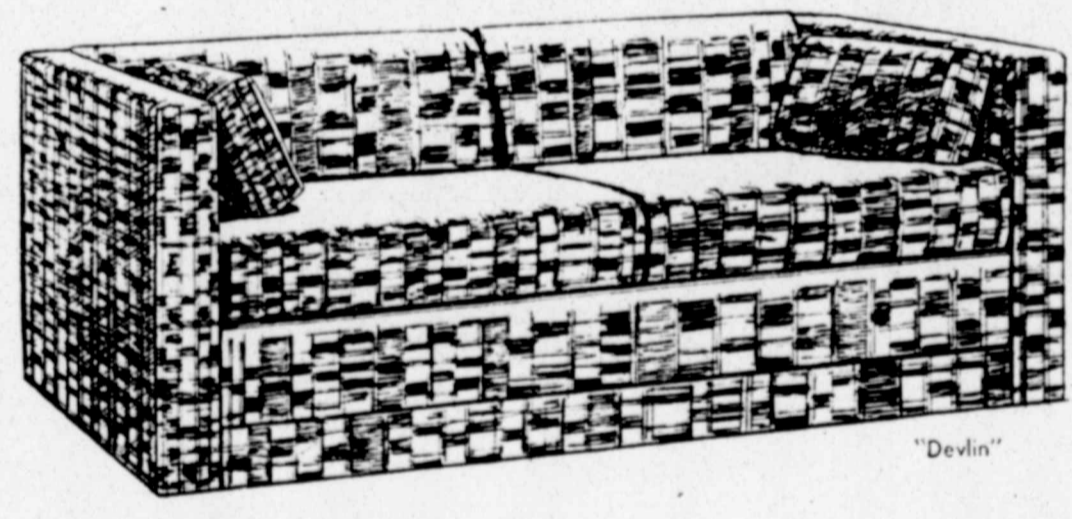

Santa Fe officials said trains were stopped for 45 minutes near Hale Center, for 50 minutes between Alley and Abernathy, for 50 minutes between Ferbuson and Hale Center, for 70 minutes between Anton and Littlefield, for 30 minutes between Slaton and Burris and for nearly three hours near Ropesville.

Several trains were stopped twice along their routes, the spokesman said, but no problems were encountered because of the delay.

Famed Trial Attorney Leibowitz Dies At 84

NEW YORK (AP) — Samuel Leibowitz, the trial lawyer who saved the Scottsboro Boys and more than 100 other persons from execution, then became a cantankerous Brooklyn trial judge, died Wednesday in a Brooklyn hospital.

He was 84 and had a history of illnesses, including stroke.

As one of the nation's most sought-after defense lawyers in the 1930s, Leibowitz sometimes turned down fortunes rather than defend clients he believed guilty. He would take fancy fees from the likes of Al Capone while taking little or nothing from indigents.

He spent four years on the Scottsboro case without fee to keep nine young blacks from being executed for the rape of two white women in Alabama. A lasting effect of his work was to end the Southern practice of excluding blacks from trial juries.

He failed, however, to get the convictions reversed. All the defendants served jail terms and the case loosed a fury of racial and religious antagonism. But feelings that the defendants had been railroaded persisted, and the last survivor among them, Clarence Norris, finally received a pardon in October 1976.

"Mr. Leibowitz was a beautiful man, he really did a job for me and the rest of the fellows," Norris said Wednesday from his home here. "Alabama people called him nigger-lover. The world is a little different now and he helped change it."

"It takes more than a crowd of hooded bigots to scare a Jew boy from the sidewalks of New York," Leibowitz said as he took the case.

Leibowitz also boasted that he defended 140 persons in first-degree murder cases and only one of them ever was executed.

He turned down an invitation to defend Richard Bruno Hauptmann, saying the kidnapper of the Lingbergh baby would not tell him the truth. Other celebrated turn-downs included Lucky Luciano on a white slavery charge and a $250,000 fee to defend seven members of Murder Inc. But he defended Capone and killers Albert Anastasia and Vincent "Mad Dog" Coll, saying he believed them innocent in those cases.

"I never consorted with them," he said. "They never slapped me on the back and called me Sam. I looked upon them as a doctor would a case."

Leibowitz became a judge of Brooklyn's County Court on Dec. 22, 1940, and less than two months later sentenced a convicted killer to the electric chair. In the following 28 years, during which the County Court became absorbed in the state Supreme Court system, Leibowitz's sometimes intemperate tongue brought him into conflict with his colleagues and the bar association. He did not hesitate to call a defendant a "rat" and light into police, prosecutors and judges.

He retired in 1969.

Born Samuel Simon Lebeau in Romania on Aug. 13, 1893, and brought here by his parents at age 4, Leibowitz grew up on the Lower East Side and in Brooklyn. He received his law degree from Cornell in 1915.

His widow, the former Belle Munves, survives, with their daughter, Marjorie, twin sons Robert and Lawrence, and two grandchildren.

Burial will follow a funeral service today in Brooklyn.

Mysterious Young Man Keeps Silent Throughout Ordeal

CLAREMORE, Okla. (AP) — He left Claremore the same way he had arrived, walking silently along the highway with a Bible tucked under his arm.

The young black man had been in the Rogers County jail for two weeks since an Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper brought him in for walking along the Will Rogers Turnpike, where pedestrians are not allowed.

After his arrest Dec. 28 he refused to talk to anyone. He sat mute in the jail cell until Sunday when a minister posted his $25 bond and took him home.

No one learned his name although deputies and cellmates tried to get him to talk. He had still refused to give any explanation when he walked away from here Tuesday.

Later Tuesday he was reported picked up in Mount Vernon, Mo., after truckers notified authorities a man was lying in a ditch along Interstate 44.

"But he wouldn't talk," an officer there said, "and we had no reason to hold him, so after he drank about four cups of coffee and got warmed up he just walked out of here."

The officer said the man, wearing two coats, moccasins and a stocking cap, was carrying the Bible and a grade-school version of Bible stories.

People in Claremore said he responded to the name Kevin Kirby, which was scrawled in the tattered Bible. A birthdate recorded in the Bible indicated Kevin is 23 years old and a Christmas card was addressed to him at a Dallas address.

The card, with no postmark, had the message: "To Kevin, with all my love. Please find it in your heart to start talking to me. I love you. Mama."

Assistant District Attorney John Boggs talked to Dallas police in an effort to locate relatives. Records showed a man named Kevin Kirby with that birthdate. Records also showed the name Charlotte Brown and a telephone number, but the number had been disconnected.

Coast Guard Seals Off Barge Hatches

By United Press International
A U.S. Coast Guard team Wednesday sealed off six hatches of a grounded barge that had spilled some 50,000 gallons of home heating oil into Long Island Sound. Another barge and two oil tankers also were aground in other areas on the Atlantic Coast.

A Coast Guard spokesman said a special strike team boarded the Bouchard 100 at dawn at Huntington, N.Y., and successfully closed six of the barges' seven hatches. Officials said they hoped to pump the remainder of the 1 million gallons of oil and gasoline from the barge later in the day.

Donald Middleton, regional director of the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, said he could find no environmental damage from the spill.

"Our biologists observed about 10 different species of water fowl, and they didn't find any dead or oiled birds," he said.

At the mouth of Port Everglades, Fla., four tug boats and a Coast Guard cutter tried at high tide Wednesday to dislodge a 638-foot oil tanker stuck on a sand bar. They were unable to budge the vessel with its 180,000 barrel crude oil cargo.

Coast Guard spokesman David Tait said a barge was dispatched from Key West and will reach the disabled SS Exxon Chester Thursday to remove about 40,000 barrels of the tanker's cargo.

The tanker, after being freed from a sand bar on the north edge of the harbor channel Tuesday, ran aground on another sand several hours later.

The Coast Guard had reported "there was no leakage" from the first grounding, but it was impossible to tell if any damage resulted from the second.

High winds and waves Wednesday again delayed the Coast Guard's effort to refloat the 918-foot tanker Tulsa Getty, aground in the mouth of the Delaware Bay with 922,000 barrels of oil aboard.

The Coast Guard said there was no danger of an oil spill or of damage to the vessel, resting on the sandy bottom 13 miles west of Cape May.

Two barges, towed by tugs, had hoped to leave Philadelphia early in the morning to begin the seven-hour voyage to the anchorage area and unload some of the tanker's cargo of thick African crude oil. But high winds forced the Coast Guard to postpone the trip and delay the arrival time at the anchorage to no earlier than 6 p.m.

At Havre De Grace, Md., the Coast Guard made plans designed to lighten a barge which ran aground in the Chesapeake Bay by removing some of the 50,000 gallons of heating oil carried by the vessel.

John Blanchard, a Coast Guard spokesman, said the owners of the 240-foot barge, the Allied Towing Co. of Norfolk, Va., planned to send another barge to the site to remove some of the cargo in an attempt to free it from the bay bottom.

A Coast Guard cutter was unable Wednesday to budge the barge at high tide. It ran aground Tuesday after high winds lowered the water level in the area. Blanchard said no oil has leaked from the vessel.

CONCRETE IDEA

In 1824, an English bricklayer, Joseph Aspdin, invented portland cement, so named after a look-alike stone on the Isle of Portland. This comprises 98 percent of cement made in the United States today — a high quality cement made by pulverizing limestone and clay, burning the mixture then grinding it into a fine powder. When sand, gravel, and water are added, it makes concrete.

Biography Of Soviet Leader Issued In London

LONDON (AP) — The non-communist world's first authorized biography of Leonid I. Brezhnev, published Wednesday by a British firm, portrays the Soviet president as a leader in the mold of communism's most revered founder, Vladimir I. Lenin.

"As a leader of Lenin's type Brezhnev relies in his work on the collective experience of the masses," the book asserted in one of many references to his Leninist qualities.

In another hero-worshipping passage the anonymous authors — from the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee's Institute of Marxism-Leninism — told of the expressions of "deep respect, love and affection" which reached Brezhnev on his 70th birthday 13 months ago. They wrote, "A Lenin-type politician and Communist leader could wish for no greater, no more valued reward."

Former Labor lawmaker Robert Maxwell's multinational Pergamon Press launched the glossily printed, profusely illustrated book entitled "Brezhnev: A Short Biography." The hardback printing was for 20,000 copies, priced at $10, to be followed by an issue of 80,000 paperbacks.

Several Brezhnev biographies were published in the Soviet Union on his 70th birthday a little over a year ago.

Pergamon Press said its biography is a translation of one written by the Institute of Marxism-Leninism with two chapters added, one dealing with "mature socialism" in the Soviet Union and the other headed "Toward Detente" with the Western powers. The text and an analysis of the new Soviet constitution also have been included.

The biography contains no criticism and seems to be part of a concerted attempt by Brezhnev and his team to enhance his image in the West. As such its omissions are as significant as its contents.

Among the omissions:

—The name of Joseph Stalin is never mentioned even though Brezhnev's initial rise to power depended on his loyal fulfillment of Stalin's often ruthless orders.

—There are no references to the part Brezhnev may have played in the ousters of onetime Prime Minister Nikita Khrushchev and former President Nikolai Podgorny.

—The Kremlin's ideological dispute with China is not mentioned.

—Former U.S. President Richard M. Nixon does not rate a mention although the authors describe Brezhnev's 1972 talks with him as a "turning point in Soviet-American relations" and for world peace.

The 1968 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia is dismissed in a single paragraph which says in part: "During the situation that endangered Czechoslovakia's socialist gains in 1968, the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Hungary, the GDR (East Germany) and Poland acted on principles of socialist solidarity. Performing their internationalist duty they came to the aid of a fraternal nation."

The book said Soviet aid enabled the North Vietnamese to win "a glorious victory" over U.S. and allied forces and helped the Angolan and Mozambique people to free themselves from Portuguese rule.

The Brezhnev biography is the first of a series on world leaders planned by Pergamon, Maxwell said. Next on the list is President Carter. Maxwell said he intends to visit Carter's Press Secretary Jody Powell soon to discuss who should write it, and he added he expects "someone friendly to Carter" to do so. His hope is that a Russian language edition of the Carter story will be circulated in the Soviet Union.

Another leader on Maxwell's biography list is Chinese Prime Minister Hua Kuo-feng. There seems no possibility, though, that Brezhnev would consent to the sale of that one in the Soviet Union.

Saudis Urge Americans Use Less Petroleum In Future

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia cannot meet the projected American demand for oil in the 1980s with existing production facilities, Saudi sources say.

Unless Americans cut back on oil consumption, they will require from 14 million to 16 million barrels a day from Saudi Arabia by 1985, the sources said. They added that despite assurances from the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco) that daily output could average 14 million barrels, Saudi Arabia found last year it could not raise the figure much beyond 12 million barrels.

Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani is reported to have ordered a new assessment of production capacity and Aramco has made what it calls a study of "option programs" for raising daily production above the current 8.5 million barrel ceiling. The options were not disclosed.

A Beirut newsletter, the Middle East Reporter, said the study envisions up to 16 million barrels a day, requiring an added outlay of $22 billion by the end of 1978.

Arab production capability is certain to be discussed during U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger's meetings this week with Saudi and Aramco officials.

The Saudis have used their high output potential to control oil prices. During the first quarter of 1977, they increased their daily production average to 11.8 million barrels to keep an oil price increase to 5 percent. The majority of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had insisted on a 10 percent increase with another 5 percent hike later in the year.

Petroleum engineers who operate the Ghawar oilfield, the world's largest, have said they were not notified of plans to raise production and ruled out any immediate increases "because we lack vast surface facilities."

Surface facilities include storage tanks, sea water injection wells and water-oil separation units.

"I'm confident that Saudi Arabia can attain the 14 million barrel a day rate," said a Saudi petroleum engineer who declined to be identified. "We even can go up to 16 million. But we will have to get to work on that at once."

Saudi Arabia's existing surface facilities are sufficient for handling about 11.8 million barrels a day, with 30 million barrels in maximum storage capacity. Limited storage capacity forced a production drop to six million barrels a day in the second quarter of 1977 when oil tankers had to divert to Iranian terminals because of adverse weather conditions in the Persian Gulf.

Saudi Arabia is the world's largest exporter of crude oil, and Aramco manages about a quarter of proven global reserves.

Raising production to 16 million barrels per calendar day would require beefing up our surface facilities to handle 24 million barrels," the engineer said.

According to the Beirut newsletter, the production options study was a major reason why Saudi Arabia delayed taking over 100 percent ownership of Aramco. Saudi Arabia owns 60 percent of Aramco.

The remaining 40 percent is shared by four U.S. companies — Exxon, Standard Oil of California, Texaco and Mobil.

John J. Kelberer, Aramco's newly elected board chairman and chief executive, insists the study had "nothing to do with the takeover."

U.S. May Seek Brezhnev Vow On Bomber Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to complete a nuclear weapons treaty, the Carter administration may ask Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev for a letter promising to impose limits on the use and deployment of the Backfire bomber.

However, a high-level U.S. official who asked not to be identified told the Associated Press no decision has been taken by administration arms experts and the letter is only one of several options under consideration.

The Backfire and other problems involved in completing the treaty were reviewed Tuesday by a cabinet-level committee.

The Backfire is one of the principal obstacles to a new treaty limiting U.S. and Soviet strategic missiles and long-range bombers.

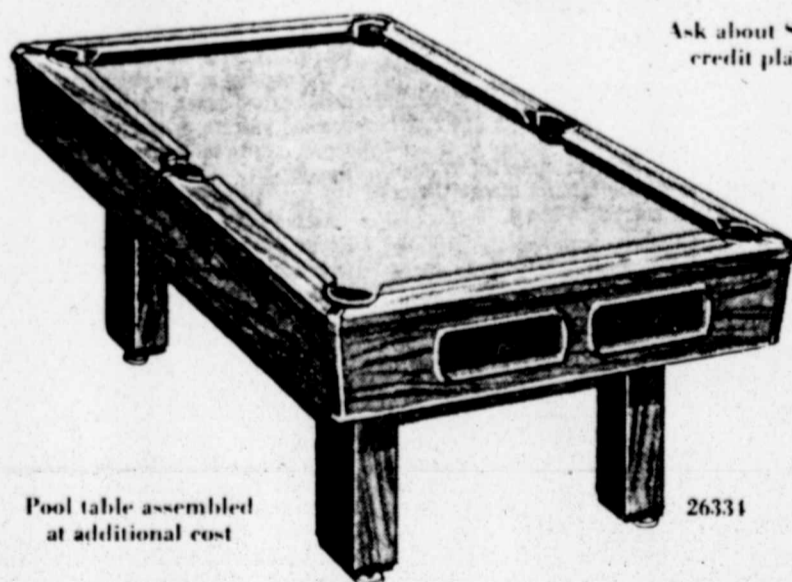

The Soviets have tried to exempt the Backfire from counting against their allowable weapons total on the grounds it is not a strategic bomber. Some U.S. arms experts are inclined to agree — provided Moscow accepts limitations on refueling and also does not base the bombers within easy striking distance of the United States.

If Brezhnev were to agree in a letter to such limitations, then Backfire presumably could be excluded from the treaty. However, that approach also could make ratification by the Senate more difficult.

The weapons negotiations have been slow, despite optimism expressed publicly by President Carter that the general terms of the settlement will soon be reached.

Besides Backfire, there are disputes over the fast-developing U.S. cruise missile and Russian heavy missiles.

Last fall, the Russians proposed issuing a unilateral statement that they would not deploy Backfire in a way that directly threatens the United States.

Dollar Skids Again In Money Markets

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was back in trouble on foreign and domestic money markets Wednesday, just one week after the United States announced a major rescue operation.

Reacting to a series of negative developments, U.S. currency fell against every major European currency and the Japanese yen. The price of gold also was down.

Overseas money dealers blamed U.S. officials for insufficiently supporting the dollar, despite the much-publicized rescue plan announced last week by the U.S. Treasury and Federal Reserve System.

The rescue plan was praised later in the day by Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, who said the United States had achieved its purpose in its recent intervention to shore up the dollar.

Blumenthal told reporters the government's main goal was to restore stability to the market. "The main purpose of what we wanted to do has worked, has quieted things down. We've always said we'd work to avoid a disorderly market."

But Blumenthal refused to say whether there is a floor value below which the government is determined not to let the dollar fall. "I'll just let the way we have intervened speak for itself," he said.

The United States has been buying dollars on foreign exchange markets for the last week to keep the dollar from further declining against other currencies.

The dollar's year-long slide in value is a reflection of the United States' economic problems — inflation, high unemployment and a trade deficit which reached an estimated $30 billion last year.

Dollar Buys Less

As the dollar drops in value in comparison with other currencies, American travelers abroad are able to buy less with their U.S. money, and the cost of foreign goods in this country is greater.

European dealers said the dollar fell Wednesday sharply as the major central banks withdrew from the market and the New York market opened. This was a sign, they said, that the Federal Reserve was providing insufficient support for the dollar.

"This isn't the time to be discreet," complained one London dealer looking for a more aggressive demonstration of U.S. support.

In New York, the dollar fell sharply against major foreign currencies, despite government intervention.

"Terrible Problems"

"We've got some terrible problems here," one dealer said. "Central banks have lost the initiative and are now on the defensive, and you can't support a currency by being on the defensive."

The pound was worth $1.9417 in New York, against $1.913 Tuesday. Among other currencies in New York, the dollar was worth 2.0933 German marks, against 2.1358 Tuesday; 4.6794 French francs, against 4.7348; 1.9685 Swiss francs, against 2.0120; and 240.09 Japanese yen, against 241.37.

Here are late rates Wednesday for the dollar in major financial centers compared with Tuesday's prices:

Late Dollar Rates

Zurich—1.9795 Swiss francs, down from 2.01075

Frankfurt—2.1138 Deutsche marks, down from 2.1325

Paris—4.7015 French francs, down from 4.73375

Amsterdam—2.2645 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2880

Milan—872.75 Italian lire, down from 875.15

Tokyo—241.175 Japanese yen, down from 241.575

In London, the pound gained nearly two cents to reach $1.9370 from Tuesday's $1.9188.

Meanwhile, the price of gold bullion fell back in Europe after sharp gains the previous two days. An ounce of the metal sold for $172.375 at the close in Zurich, down from $173.125 the previous day. The closing London price was $172.55 an ounce, down from $173.125.

European dealers, commenting on the dollar's troubles, said the West German central bank may have purchased about $155 million Wednesday to support the U.S. currency. But there was an absence of similar intervention from the Federal Reserve.

News items that depressed the dollar included reports that New York City may again seek federal aid to fend off insolvency, and an official statement that Saudi Arabia may press for the replacement of the dollar as the oil price yardstick.

ruptured by the savage surf. The vessel was carrying about a million gallons.

On the other side of Long Island, the Coast Guard was trying to refloat one its 40-foot patrol boat, driven ashore Monday while trying to rescue a stranded duck hunter. The hunter was later picked up by a helicopter.

Another fuel barge was aground in the Chesapeake Bay at the mouth of the Susquehanna River. The barge, towed by the tug Teal, is carrying 500,000 gallons of heating oil and 50,000 gallons of kerosene, according to the Coast Guard.

In Delaware Bay, the 918-foot Liberian tanker Alabama Getty was blown aground from its mooring at the Big Stone Anchorage about 13 miles west of Cape May, N.J. Efforts were under way were to refloat the vessel by unloading about 160,000 barrels of the tanker's 923,000 barrel cargo of Arabian crude oil, according to Lt. Tom Morse of the Coast Guard's regional headquarters in Philadelphia.

Neither the tanker nor the Chesapeake barge was leaking oil.

Humphrey Due To Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, who has inoperable cancer, hopes to return to Washington after the congressional recess ends next week, but no definite date for the trip has been set, an aide said Wednesday.

"He's hopeful that he can return by the start of the second session of the 95th Congress (on Jan. 19)," said Humphrey's administrative assistant, David Gartner, in a telephone interview from the senator's home in Waverly, Minn.

"It will depend upon his condition at the time," Gartner said of the 66-year-old senator. "We have no set date."

Humphrey, D-Minn., is receiving weekly chemotherapy treatments on pelvic cancer which was discovered last August. Gartner said the senator has been resting and tending to senatorial business during the recess.

"I'm not saying he will return," the aide said. "I think it's best to say that he hopes to return."

Humphrey flew to Minnesota on Dec. 22. He said at the time that he had no plans to resign unless he became "totally incapacitated."

Inspection Stickers' Color 'Coincidence'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Department of Public Safety says it really wasn't promoting Texas' somewhat marred football fortunes in this year's car inspection stickers.

FREMONT, Neb. (AP) — Twin sisters who were among the first women to break the sex barrier in medicine and pharmacy in this country marked their 100th birthday Wednesday at a nursing home.

Dr. Marie Morse and her sister, Hannah Hansen, who are both confined to wheelchairs, celebrated with a birthday cake and a party attended by about 60 old friends and fellow residents in the solarium of the Memorial Hospital annex in Fremont, Neb.

Miss Hansen "said she had never seen so many cards," according to Mary Calmes, activities director. "Some were from people they've never met."

There were no candles on the cake, but it was inscribed, "Happy 100th Birthday, Mary and Hannah."

forth a mouse," declared John Banzhaf, director of a group called Action on Smoking and Health. He said that "with a stroke of the pen," Califano could have required schools and other recipients of HEW funds to restrict smoking.

Noting that the tobacco industry spends more than $400 million a year on advertising and promotion, Banzhaf said, "Califano thinks he's going to throw $1 million or $2 million a year into anti-smoking programs and he's going to beat them. There's no way."

Evidence Questioned

Sen. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., also said that Califano had not backed up his statistics with evidence. He declared, "While obviously some restrictions should be placed on where people smoke, smokers should not be treated as second-class citizens and their rights should be respected."

Califano, who quit a heavy smoking habit in 1975 at the request of his young son, did not attack the Agriculture Department's price support program for tobacco farmers, nor did he take any action that would restrict cigarette sales or make them more expensive.

Want To Quit

The National Clearinghouse for Smoking and Health in Atlanta has said surveys show 9 out of 10 smokers want to quit. Califano appeared to be offering these people a stick rather than a carrot. As another incentive, Califano said he

ENCOUNTERS OF THE GHOST KIND—Even though the Air Force Poo-poo's the prospect of flying saucers another government agency is taking its encounters less skeptical and the agency has prepared a guide called "The Supernatural — Haunted Houses and Legendary Ghosts." Haunted Houses Given Governmental Boost Charles City County, Va., the portrait of "Aunt Pratt" makes ghostly noises when hung wrong.

Chattering spirits inhabit the Marine Antique Shop in Wiscasset, Maine, home of over 250 mechanical music machines.

"Most ghosts" award might belong to Fort Monroe, Hampton, Va., which houses at least 10 spirits in private residences and military casements.

You'll find big-name ghosts on the list, too. Henry Clay visited often at Oaklawn Manor in Franklin, La., and today returns in spirit form to the mansion, according to the travel service.

Gen. Robert E. Lee's boyhood home in Alexandria, Va., reportedly is haunted by a little boy "who many agree is the ghost of Robert E. Lee himself," the agency says.

Col. Fielding Lewis, a Revolutionary War patriot, is said to haunt Kenmore, a home of Georgian design at Fredericksburg, Va.

Should the spirits move you there, West Coast ghosts occur in San Diego and San Jose, Calif.

In the latter city, you'll find the 160-room Winchester House. Its former owner kept expanding it in the hope that "rooms for good spirits would keep evil ones away."

Whaley House, San Diego's city hall in the 1860-70s, is said to be haunted by an unfortunate gallows victim. Judge Thomas Whaley lived there and presumably died the sentencing.

Two naval ghosts are listed — one a hero, the other a suspected coward.

In Washington, Decatur House "is haunted by the spirit of its first owner, Stephen Decatur, a naval hero who died in a tragic duel."

In Baltimore, aboard the USS Constellation "lurks the ghost of a sailor who died in 1799 and returns to clear his name of charges of cowardice," the agency says.

average in 1976 and an 8.5 percent average in 1975.

Some 480,000 Americans were dropped from the jobless rolls last month, leaving 6.3 million unemployed. That is also the lowest total since late 1974 but is still considered high by historical standards.

The December improvement affected all major demographic, occupational and industry groups, the Labor Department said. Substantial declines were reported in the jobless rates for adult men, down from 4.9 to 4.7 percent; for women, down from 7.1 to 6.7 percent; and for teenagers, whose rate dropped from 17.1 to 15.4 percent.

Migrant English Training Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary Ray Marshall signed on Wednesday a $500,000 federal contract with farmworkers leader Cesar Chavez to teach migrants English.

"Language is a job skill and that's something we need to emphasize," Marshall said.

Chavez, president of the United Farmworkers of America and its related National Farmworkers Service Center Inc., said he was "very pleased" about his first government contract and was working on a second, an apprenticeship program for farm laborers.

Marshall, who is sending aides to the La Paz-Keene, Calif., center to discuss such a program with Chavez, said, "Farm work is ideally suited for apprenticeships" because of the need to understand agronomy, horticulture, chemistry and machinery.

Chavez said such a program also would "help the public understand that farmworkers are skilled workers...Some job that such work is the most fulfilling job (but) it is one of the most fulfilling jobs, provided the conditions are right, the wages are right."

Chavez, who has led product boycotts, hunger strikes and extensive organizing of seasonal farmworkers on West Coast fruit and vegetable operations, told reporters later that farm owners would welcome the English-training program.

Skilled, longtime workers could be given better jobs and supervisory provisions on the farms when they can speak English fluently, he said.

"If they don't know the English, they'll never be more than stoop labor," he said.

The money comes from a section of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program specifically aimed at groups in the work force with special needs, such as migrants and seasonal workers. That section has $1.8 billion in funds for this fiscal year.

"I feel certain this program will pave the way for a better life for these hard-working Americans," Marshall said at the signing ceremony in his office. "The inability to speak English in our society is a very important job barrier."

Chavez said that he is not sure how many persons will emerge from the year-long program speaking fluent English. Labor Department spokesman Jack Hashian said that about 1,500 should be served.

Beginning Feb. 1, the workers chosen from throughout California and Arizona will come to live at the 15-year-old center in groups of 30 for language courses and leadership and social-services training.

Chavez said he expects the groups will reflect the language divisions of the farmworker population in the two states, which includes with the Spanish-speaking those whose first language is Arabic or Punjabi.

"They'll be eating together, studying, working all day on speaking a new language," he said.

Growers, workers and his 25,000-person union all should benefit from the spreading of the new skills, Chavez said.

Greek Government Plans Anti-Smoking Campaign

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Greek government is planning an anti-smoking campaign on a population estimated to be the heaviest smokers in Europe.

Recent statistics show Greeks smoke nearly three times more than they did 40 years ago.

Professor Spyros Doxiadis, newly appointed Minister of Social Services who started the campaign this week, said Wednesday he is preparing a report on anti-smoking measures to be submitted for government approval later this month.

His move comes after statistics showed that per capita cigarette consumption has increased at a steady five percent annually since 1938.

The national statistical service said cigarette consumption has risen from 5.1 billion then to 20.2 billion in 1976.

It means that on average Greeks aged over 15 now smoke 2,822 cigarettes a year compared with 1,011 in 1938.

Said Doxiadis: "Though we do not yet have exact comparative figures, initial estimates clearly indicate that Greeks are in per capita terms the heaviest smokers in Europe."

Unlike the Soviet Union, other European countries and the United States, Greece has up to now made no state effort to cut smoking.

In Washington Wednesday, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. launched a new sweeping government effort to help 54 million Americans quit smoking. Officials estimate that since a 1964 report on smoking hazards, 200 million or more Americans have kicked the habit.

Greeks, however, are not only smoking more, but are doing it in style. In a major tobacco-producing country where local cigarettes cost only 30-65 cents a pack, consumption of imported American, British and European brands is increasing at twice the national average.

Despite its own large tobacco exports, Greece spent an estimated $1.5 million in 1977 on imported cigarettes and cigars, the statistical service said.

Doxiadis said his plans include measures tried in other countries such as carrying health warnings on cigarette packets, limiting advertising, and offering greater public advice on health risks.

The minister, who is a doctor and does not smoke, began the campaign on a personal note this week by putting up "no smoking" signs in his offices.

In a circular he asked ministry staff to reduce smoking as much as possible and to respect non-smokers.

Doxiadis said he expected a sharp reaction from local tobacco manufacturers.

U.S. manufacturers have accused Califano of a "prohibitionist mentality" with his new anti-smoking campaign.

A successful Greek campaign would also hit tax revenue. In 1974 tobacco taxes yielded 7.1 percent of fiscal revenue, the national statistical service said.

But Doxiadis said other national campaigns showed the reduction in smoking was gradual and "not seriously threatening to tobacco interests."

Lubbock Gets Halfway House For Supportive Mental Care

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Mental health clients coming home from Big Spring State Hospital soon will have a halfway house here to help them make that transition.

And the Lubbock Regional Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center says such a residential program — the only one of its kind in the city — may be just the thing to keep former patients from being re-admitted to the state hospital system.

The MHMR board of trustees has agreed to lease a building near the downtown area for a halfway house for persons who need additional care, vocational training or other rehabilitative services before they can return to private living.

The program, explained Dr. Ron Whittington, executive director of the local MHMR agency, is intended especially for persons who are returning from Big Spring State Hospital but "may not feel quite independent enough" to live on their own immediately.

The halfway house will channel services, available through MHMR and some other agencies, including the Texas Rehabilitation Commission, to help clients make that adjustment, Whittington said.

"It's a project I'm most enthusiastic about," he said. "I just can't feature a city the size of Lubbock not having a halfway house for mental health clients."

Not too long ago, a similar program was started by a private group in Lubbock, according to an MHMR staff report on the matter. The agency had considered contracting with this group for service to MHMR clients.

But the privately operated halfway house "has since closed down, leaving the responsibility for mental health intermediate care services solely with our agency," the report said.

The report said permanent facilities for a halfway house here are sorely needed. Last year, 124 persons were released from Big Spring State Hospital to the South Plains region — with 84 of them returning home to Lubbock County.

Without a halfway house, a substantial percentage of these clients may end up being readmitted to Big Spring, the report said. It noted that of all state hospital admissions last year, about half were readmissions — persons who had already been there.

"What seems to be happening is that the number of first admissions is dropping significantly and the readmissions are staying about the same," the report said.

"In other words, the (regional MHMR) center seems to be having an impact in terms of keeping people out of the hospital system, but is having less of an impact on those who have already been to the hospital."

"The transitional services being proposed might be the key to impacting the clients who are already part of the system."

The halfway house will have an annual budget of about $100,000, according to Dr. John Morris, MHMR director for mental health programs. The house will have accommodations for 16 persons, he said.

Funding already has been authorized by the state. Whittington said he hopes to have the halfway house in operation in 30 to 45 days.

The halfway house also will headquarter MHMR's "partial hospitalization program," workshops and other daytime services for mental health clients who live at home.

By having both programs at the same facility, the MHMR staff says it can save about $20,000 a year.

Churchill Portrait Destroyed

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill's wife so detested a controversial portrait of him that she destroyed it, the executors of her estate announced Wednesday. The great statesman once said the portrait made him look "half-witted."

The work by Graham Sutherland, one of Britain's most respected artists, mysteriously vanished after being presented to Churchill by the Houses of Parliament to mark his 80th birthday in 1954.

Sutherland said after learning of Wednesday's disclosure that the painting's destruction was "an act of vandalism" but he was "not unduly distressed."

Lady Clementine Spencer-Churchill, who died on Dec. 12 at age 92, had always refused to say what she had done with the work, a large portrait of Sir Winston in black coat, striped trousers and bow tie, sitting in a chair.

The art world and the politicians who commissioned it were ignorant of its whereabouts, and Churchill's widow was approached several times to reveal its location.

The executors of her estate said they now "felt it right" to announce that the painting was destroyed by Lady Spencer-Churchill before her husband's death in 1965.

The executors said in a statement: "This was done on her own initiative by Lady Churchill before Sir Winston's death. She neither consulted anyone, nor informed anyone of her intention."

"Both she and Sir Winston had been truly and deeply moved that members of both Houses of Parliament and from all parties had joined to show him so much honor, respect and affection."

But she had been distressed to see how much the picture, which both she and Sir Winston disliked, preyed on her husband's mind.

The executors said that after destroying the painting, Lady Spencer-Churchill told her family she had promised Sir Winston the portrait "would never see the light of day."

Sir Winston himself once said of the work: "It makes me look half-witted, which I ain't."

Sutherland, now 74, who was in Wales Wednesday, told a reporter for the Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency: "It is without question an act of vandalism, which is very rare throughout history in relation to the destruction of works of art."

But he added: "I am not unduly distressed and I bear no rancor about it."

Sutherland, whose works hang in the British Museum, London's Tate Gallery, New York Museum of Modern Art and other leading museums around the world, added:

"I have tried time and time again to find out what happened to the picture, but I have always met with no answer."

"I put in a great deal of work on it and the controversy at the time was a little worrying. I knew Sir Winston didn't like it, but he was always impeccable, very civilized and very kind, and even after the donation of the thing he was awfully nice."

Scientists, Doctors Win Public Esteem

By LOUIS HARRIS

In the opinion of the American people, by far the most prestigious occupations are those of scientist and doctor. The least prestigious, among the 15 occupations tested, is that of salesman.

Here are the findings of a special Harris Survey of 1,520 adults nationwide in which the public gave its estimates of key occupations:

—Scientists are viewed as being engaged in the most prestigious field, with 66 percent of the public saying that they have "very great prestige," and an additional 25 percent regarding them as having "considerable prestige."

—Doctors are the only other group who rival scientists. Sixty-one percent of the public find medicine a field of "very great prestige," and another 29 percent feel that it has "considerable prestige." Doctors have always been held in special esteem by most Americans, and this feeling continues unabated.

Far behind these top two professions are a number of other occupations with essentially positive ratings:

—Ministers are seen by 41 percent as having "very great prestige," and by another 32 percent as having "considerable prestige."

—Lawyers are given a "very great prestige" ranking by 36 percent of the public, with an additional 37 percent feeling that they have "considerable prestige."

—Lawyers were hurt by the disclosures of the Watergate period, and they still have a long way to go before they regain their former high place in public confidence.

—Thirty-four percent of the public give engineers a "very great prestige" rating, and another 43 percent say they have "considerable prestige."

—Teachers are believed to have "very great prestige" by 29 percent, and are credited by another 36 percent with "considerable prestige."

—Athletes are cited by 26 percent as having "very great prestige," and by 32

—Businessmen finish in a tie for ninth place, with 18 percent of the public feeling that they have "very great prestige" and another 42 percent saying they have "considerable prestige."

—Entertainers score 18 percent as having "very great prestige," and 32 percent as having "considerable prestige." However, a substantial 48 percent of the public think entertainers have only "some prestige" or "hardly any."

The bottom five occupations on the prestige list are:

—Journalists, who are cited as having "very great prestige" by 17 percent, although another 43 percent say they have "considerable prestige."

—Bankers are credited by only 17 percent with "very great prestige," and by 39 percent with "considerable prestige." There is little doubt that bankers were hurt by the Bert Lance affair earlier this year.

—Skilled workers are seen as having "very great prestige" by 15 percent, and "considerable prestige" by 35 percent. However, a substantial 48 percent of the public disagree with that assessment.

—A modest 17 percent view politicians as having "very great prestige," while 25 percent more think they have "considerable prestige," and 22 percent feel they have "hardly any prestige at all."

—Finally, only 6 percent of the public hold salesmen in "very great" regard, and 19 percent in "considerable" regard. A much higher 43 percent say that the occupation of salesman has "some prestige" and 31 percent feel it has "hardly any at all."

percent as having "considerable prestige." They rank seventh on the list of 15 occupations rated. It would appear that the prestige of athletes has grown along with their compensation.

—Artists are viewed by 21 percent as having "very great prestige," and by an additional 37 percent as having "considerable prestige."

Americans See Crisis In Health

CHICAGO (AP) — A study shows that 61 percent of Americans think there is a "crisis in health care" in this country — at least for other people. But only 12 percent say they are generally dissatisfied with the health care they themselves are getting.

"Why this paradox exists is a mystery still to be probed," said the University of Chicago researchers in their report Wednesday. "It could be a product of the human propensity to seek reassurance and support when in need. When people contemplate their own medical care... the response is from the perspective of a patient...."

"It is quite another matter to respond to questions about health in the abstract, simply as part of the aggregate...."

The causes of dissatisfaction most frequently cited were high costs and long amounts of time spent in waiting rooms.

The researchers also found that although most Americans have better access to medical care than ever before — with particularly dramatic improvements among blacks and other minorities — nevertheless, 24 million Americans still have no regular access to treatment.

The findings were based on a statistical cross-sampling of nearly 8,000 people across the country between September 1975 and February 1976. Those questioned were asked more than 150 detailed questions about their medical care.

The study was conducted by Lu Ann Aday, director, Ronald Andersen, principal investigator, and Gretchen Voorhis Fleming and Grace Chiu, assistant directors, of the university's Center for Health Administration Studies. It was sponsored by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Princeton, N.J.

Among the questions were: "Is there a crisis in health care?"

THE ONLY WAY TO TRAVEL — Three-year-old Sebastian Grinham-Ceponis is well equipped for winter with his woolies and umbrella. Sebastian kept cozy on his way to school in Toronto Tuesday morning while his mother, who supplied the power, struggled through wind and blowing snow. Meanwhile, severe cold weather kept its grip on both Canada and the United States. A new icy storm system was shoving its way eastward Wednesday, threatening more misery, especially in the Northeastern regions of the U.S. At least 23 persons died as a result of cold weather during the past two days. Two other persons died as a result of storms that are lashing the California coast. (AP Laserphoto)

Councilman Announces Bid For Mayor Pro Tempore Job

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The burgeoning race for city offices took a new turn Wednesday when City Councilman Alan Henry announced his candidacy not for the mayorship but for mayor pro tempore.

Although he affirmed that he had seriously considered making a bid for the mayorship — confirming widespread rumors that he would join Councilman Dirk West to become the second candidate in the race — Henry said he believes that the office of mayor pro tem "offers the best opportunity for service at this time."

With his wife, Sandy, at his side, Henry further explained that the office he seeks "carries with it more responsibility than my present position, yet does not require the time of the mayor."

The 36-year-old insurance agent declared his political plans to a group of about 50 city staffers and citizens who braved icy weather to hear his intentions. The crowd applauded at the end of Henry's announcement, and a throng of well-wishers gathered to chat with him.

The seat of mayor pro tem will be vacated by West, who Monday declared as a mayoral candidate. Roy Bass earlier this month announced he will not seek a third term to the council's top spot.

When queried, Henry said West's candidacy was a factor in his decision, but not an overriding one. After all, he said, West has been announcing his candidacy for two years.

Family considerations were a weighty factor in his political decision, Henry said, explaining that he has two 18-month-old daughters and a 6-year-old son.

For his family, he said, being mayor pro tem would be the best situation "right now."

And, said Henry when asked, he has "no immediate plans" for other political offices later.

Although many consider the position of mayor pro tem nothing but a titular honor — the job carries no extra duties apart from presiding over the council when the mayor is absent or abstains from voting — Henry views the matter differently.

In his opinion, he said, the position means more responsibility than a regular council spot. The people "look to someone to provide leadership when the mayor can't be in attendance," he explained. The position can and should mean more responsibility, he added.

Henry has not yet designated a campaign treasurer, but he said he plans an active candidacy.

"It's the only kind of campaign I know how to wage," he said, explaining he plans to shake lots of hands and meet lots of people.

Apart from "finding out what people are thinking," Henry said, he currently has no specific issues he will address as a candidate.

He cited three areas in which he said he can serve Lubbock: leadership, management and attitude.

The four-year council veteran explained that he believes council members "have an obligation to take the lead in discovering new and innovative means of solving problems." He practiced what he preaches, Henry indicated, when he recently persuaded his council colleagues to adopt a crime prevention program that enlists the cooperation of Texas Tech.

HENRY

"I want to stay on the council to help implement this crime prevention program," Henry said.

And because of his insurance industry background, he said, "I also want to continue to provide leadership in reducing losses from fires in our city."

"By working closely with our fire fire department, I am hopeful that we will see a leveling and even a reduction in fire insurance rates during the next years, due in part, to the addition of new manpower squads and equipment which I strongly supported," he added.

Henry said his value as a council member also lies in an "important management tool that I personally have used and will continue to use" — the question "where is the money coming from?"

Posing the question sometimes "brings on an awkward silence, but I intend to

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: In spite of all your good efforts, we still received far too many seasonal form letters written under the guise of "thoughtful messages to family and close friends." (This includes anyone whose last name they can spell.)

Among all the form letters arrived something new. A fancy announcement informing us of all the deaths in the family. How tacky and tasteless can you get!

In retaliation I plan to devise, for next year, a form letter of my own which should get the message across to even the dullest clod — the idea being, if you don't care to send a personal letter, note or card, send nothing.

Here's my message for Christmas, 1978:

Dear Friend: Since hearing from you, Sister Clara Mae ran off with the milkman, and happily they got married before the baby came. Grandpa fell in a hole on his way to the outhouse and has been on crutches ever since. We finally got Uncle Joe to quit messing around. Brother Billy joined the Foreign Legion, thank the Lord. He is an idiot. We think of you often and wonder if you are dead or put away again. Write a letter if you feel like it, otherwise just leave us out your list — Your Country Cousins

Do you think they'll get the drift, Ann? — Hopeful

Dear Hopeful: I doubt it, but it's worth the shot. Let me know the reaction, will you?

Dear Ann Landers: My best friend asked me how I would feel if she had sex with my brother. I told her she shouldn't ask me such a question because I couldn't give her an honest answer. She looked dumbfounded. I then said, "I don't think I could respect you anymore if you did such a thing." (This girl and my brother are both 16.)

Well, she ignored my advice and had sex with my brother anyway. Now I don't know what to do. I am very uncomfortable in her presence and so is my brother. She hangs around our house uninvited. Whenever she comes in, he leaves. I think she just wants to be friends with me so she can see my brother. I'd appreciate some advice from you — Marcella in San Juan

Dear Marcella: Cool the friendship for the time being. She is sure to get the message if you tell her you have other plans and that she can't just drop in the way she used to.

After a while, if you feel more comfortable about her, resume the friendship. If you sense she is still after your brother — stop it.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and kids aren't speaking to me these days and I am not sure the dog likes me anymore either. We had a kitten who started to act wild and crazy. He tore the draperies and ruined two upholstered chairs. He seemed to be going from kittenish playfulness to getting really vicious — so much so that I was starting to worry about the safety of our youngest child.

My wife and I had a big argument over this nutty cat and the next day she had it destroyed because I raised so much hell. Now the whole family treats me like I have some loathsome disease. Can you come up with a solution? I feel like a heel — Purrfectly Unwanted

Dear Purr: Go to a pet shop and buy a mild-mannered, sweet-tempered kitten. It may well be the one you had was a little goofy.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Blackwood with every intention of bidding a slam if North showed one ace. When North showed two aces, South really should have settled for six, but he bid five notrump to invite seven.

We don't know what he would have bid if North just showed his three kings by bidding six spades, but North bid seven directly. North's reasoning was that with two aces and four kings his hand would have been too strong for a mere four-spade call. Hence, he should bid seven with three kings.

It worked out very well. South drew trumps with three leads and went after diamonds. The suit broke 4-2, so he got two club discards, trumped one heart in dummy and wrapped up the slam.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have two friends who have been on a predigested-protein diet. One followed his doctor's instructions throughout, lost the weight he wanted, and looks healthier than ever. The other did not consult a doctor. He lost his weight, but looks like he has 20 extra yards of skin.

I work in a drugstore. When people ask me for instructions on how to use it, I tell them, "The instructions come from your doctor." Please tell people that the diet is very delicate and intricate. — N.J.R.

And, you can add, potentially dangerous for some. I, too, had a friend who undertook this weight-loss method without consulting her doctor. She soon abandoned it because of weakness, nausea and vomiting. If any of those appears, drop it like a hot potato.

I do not advise it for anyone less than 30 pounds overweight. Other possible effects to watch for are low blood pressure, cramps, dehydration, dry skin, hair loss, stopping of menstruation, increase of uric acid. The most serious complication is deficiency of potassium. Also, acidosis, a change in the acid-alkaline balance in the blood, may occur. All are good reasons to seek diet advice and supervision from a physician.

Typically, such a plan can constitute an intake of about 480 calories a day. Weight loss can be achieved with diets as high as 800 calories a day. I prefer 1,000 a day, which is often effective while allowing some leeway for variety and something to "chew on."

In many excessively stringent diets, the risks can be worse than those of obesity itself. Also, with such diets there is usually a lack of emphasis on education, which is necessary for keeping weight down after the diet has had its effect. My booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," outlines a variety of plans tailored to selective weight-loss needs. It's outlived many of the fad diets. At least it is the kind of plan that should be checked out before attempting the other kinds. For a copy send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. It may help you keep your weight off once it is lost.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a person is allergic to one drug will he likely be allergic to another? — Mrs. W.R.

Being allergic to one drug doesn't mean one will be allergic to another. Some drugs are closely related in chemical structure. In those cases there is the possibility of double reaction.

Some people may be allergic to substances used to "bind" the drug materials together or to the solution in which they are mixed. The same substances may be used for several different drugs, so the same reaction might be expected even though the drug itself is harmless.

When there has been a reaction to medicine, it is best to determine just what the person is sensitive to — the drug or the material in which the drug is prepared.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was having stomach pains and went in for an examination. Nothing was found amiss. I read your item on hiatal hernia and began to wonder if that was what was wrong with me. Would it give me stomach pains? — I.G.

Let's say it could produce pains that might appear to originate in the stomach. Pain often "radiates" from the precise area of origination. The hiatal hernia occurs in the gullet, or, more precisely, at the point where the gullet passes through the diaphragm on its way to a connection with the stomach. Your doctor probably considered the possibility, but you might mention it to him next time. There would be other symptoms, such as swallowing difficulties, regurgitation, etc. An X-ray of the stomach should have revealed a hiatal hernia. Gall bladder and bowel disease must also be considered.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Any special instructions for a woman getting a urine sample for use in determining pregnancy? — Miss F.D.

Best to get the first morning "catch" after having avoided liquids the night before. This provides a more concentrated specimen.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you comment on the benefits, if any, from taking steam (or sauna) baths. I have asked many people this question, including a physician I frequently see in the steam room, but no one seems to know. Do you? — Mrs. J.A.

I can't come up with any real benefit, medically speaking. Many people find steam and heat relaxing. Certainly can't beat it for cleaning the body, but considerable electrolytes (such as sodium and chlorides) may be lost in the sweating. Persons with high blood pressure and heart disease should avoid steam baths.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can tuna fish cause an acne flareup? I love tuna fish. — C.B.

It might or might not have an effect. I'm not hedging. Diet does not play quite the role in acne that was once thought, and that can be significant for some persons with acne. Freshwater fish should be tolerated. You should not expect dramatic results but it would not hurt to substitute other food for the fish to see if it helps some. A balanced diet is the best rule.

To learn of the many factors involved in the treatment of hiatal hernia (which concerns the esophagus), write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "Hiatal Hernia and Eight Ways to Combat It." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Maybe someone else has the same problem that I did.

Even though we use an electric blanket my husband did not like to sleep on percale sheets, especially in the winter months. I do.

We had many "discussions" over the bed being cold and I could not convince him to sleep in twin beds. So I came upon this idea and it has worked out great and solved our problem.

I bought a flannel sheet, cut it in half lengthwise and took one of my regular sheets and cut it lengthwise also.

Then I sewed one half of the flannel sheet to one half of the regular sheet and, presto, two full sheets.

When I make up the bed my husband has the flannel top and bottom sheets on his side and I can still sleep on the regular sheets and we still share the same bed.

Both of us are happy! — Happier Grandparents

By cracky, that's sneaky but works like a charm.

Dogab it, don't throw in the towel when you hit a brick wall. You have just proved that there is a solution to every problem.

Thanks for sharing your solution with us. — Heloise

'Unusual' Checks Topic Of Class Discussion

By SUSAN GARLAND

BALTIMORE (UPI) — If the rent is due and you've run out of checks, how about using a watermelon? Just write "pay to the order of," sign your name and your landlord should be happy.

The bank almost certainly won't be happy, but is legally required to cash the check, barring mutual agreement to the contrary, according to Joel Woody, a professor in commercial transactions in the University of Maryland Law School.

"The banking industry has imposed a notion that it is necessary to write a check on a piece of paper they have issued," Woody said. "But under the law in the 50 states, you can write a check on anything and the only requirement for a negotiable check are the words 'pay to the order of.'"

When Woody teaches his first lesson of the semester on commercial transactions, he tries to enliven what could be a dull subject by writing a facsimile of a check on the blackboard and informing his class it is a "negotiable blackboard."

"I make sure to erase the blackboard lest some wag tears it from the wall to cash it," he said.

Since Woody began teaching the class eight years ago, he has collected anecdotes of unusual checks.

Checks have been written on a side of a live cow, a squash and a concrete door. Comedian Phil Silvers wrote a check on a banana and cashed it. A Baltimore resident recently gave a bank a check for $318.57 written on his undershorts.

In 1919, in Elmira, N.Y., a woman took the shirt off her husband's back and exchanged it for more money than the shirt was worth when it was new and non-negotiable.

A steel company wrote a check on a slab of steel and the Chase Manhattan Bank used a submachine gun to cancel it.

"People do it for publicity, to be unorthodox," he said. "There's a lot of herd mentality to checks and insurance and people just want to break out of it once in a while."

Woody said banks can refuse to cash an unusual check if an agreement was signed to that effect when the bank account is opened. But he said banks have refused to accept unorthodox checks when no such agreement is made, although they are legally required to accept them.

In addition, he said, a bank customer does not have to endorse a check, which allows the bank to take money from the customer's account if the check is returned for insufficient funds.

"I tried to do this once. I had an argument with the bank manager and I won because I knew the law," he said. "It all depends on who can outbluff whom..."

"It's a sort of consumer area that Ralph Nader and others have not ventured," he said. "We have become sophisticated consumers when it comes to products, but we have not become sophisticated about our financial affairs."

"We are being pushed around. We need a second revolution."

Woody admits that even when banking customers develop a better knowledge of their money rights, they will not, in any great number, start depositing fruit, animals and doors into their checking accounts.

After all, he said, it is somewhat impractical.

"You have to keep your checks for a few years for tax purposes. How do you file a watermelon?"

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED
NEW YORK — Soap opera fans pop up in the most unexpected quarters. Aficionados of ABC's "All My Children" include several football players.

The Baltimore Colts are such devotees of Susan Lucci's portrayal of ravishing Erica Brent that they'd like nothing better than to make her their unofficial mascot. Colts running back Don McCauley is so addicted to the serial that his wife videotapes the show for later playback when he's practicing on the field and can't catch the "AMC" antics.

The Miami News reports that whenever Larry Little, offensive guard for the Miami Dolphins, misses an episode of "AMC," he can always depend on his roommate, offensive tackle Wayne Moore, to recount the day's serial passes. And middle linebacker Steve Towle, whose mania stems from college days when "it was something to talk about around school," is presently trying to convert fellow linebacker Kim Bokamper to the "AMC" huddles. Conflicts arise when Bokamper switches to "The Gong Show." But he'll probably come around in time — unlike cornerback Curtis Johnson, who says of the soaps, "They put me to sleep."

The hoi polloi of society blue-bloods who enter the portals of Manhattan's posh "21" restaurant invariably recognize host Fred Porcelli as Freddie, the headwaiter of "AMC's" Le Chateau, Nick Davis's watering hole. Fred was written into the serial by the show's creator, Agnes Nixon, who appreciated Porcelli's headwaiter poise: Floored fans who spot Fred at "21" have included celebrities like movie producer Joseph E. Levine, Lillian Carter and Carol Burnett.

If fan mail is any indication, Judith Light is having a heavy struggle to gain acceptance as the new Karen Wolek on "One Life to Live." The previous Karen, Katryn Breech, was dumped "by mutual agreement," according to the studio. But she had an avid fan following that is hesitant to greet Judith with open arms. Give her a chance, folks. Trenton, N.J., born Light toured in "Guys and Dolls" for a USO production in Europe for American servicemen. She's performed in repertory theatre groups around the U.S. and appeared with Liv Ullman in last year's Broadway revival of "A Doll's House." The 5-foot-7, 125-pound Light is an amateur oenologist (the science of wine and wine-making), yogaist and a Russian and Jewish gourmet cook. Meanwhile, Karen's cooking something foul for hubby Larry on "OLTL."

Serial newcomer Kathleen Turner has been cast as Kathryn Harrold's replacement in the role of Nola Dancy Aldrich on "The Doctors." On the same show, Philip English originates the role of Australian medico Colin Wakefield, who once broke Sarah Dancy's heart and will undoubtedly cause a few more tears in the future.

The Mailbag: I have a bet that the actor who plays Charlie Hobson on "Another World" has appeared on other soaps, but I can't prove it. Can you? — B.L., Tucson, Ariz.

Fred J. Scollay (Charlie) has appeared in dozens of short-term serial character roles, including Lobo Haynes on "The Edge of Night" and Ike Harding on "Somerset." Fred is a playwright and stage director when he isn't acting, and he was one of the original stars of "The Doctors" when that serial debuted in 1963 as a half hour anthology series. He played the hospital chaplain, Reverend Sam Shafer, until the show changed its format to a more conventional serial.

Please tell me who plays Jim Matthews on "Another World." I have a bet on it. — G.J., New York, N.Y.

Hope you bet on Hugh Marlowe, the veteran film actor whose movies pop up on the late show every other night. Hugh's first wife, by the way, was K.T. Stevens, who currently appears on "The Young and the Restless" as Vanessa Prentiss.

You will be interested in the booklet I've edited that includes a short history of "All My Children." Get your copy by sending one dollar to: Tune In Tomorrow, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019. Ask for "All My Children."

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise:

When you have lived in one house a while things get kind of messy.

You keep more than you should of everything. You let the paint and the wallpaper go.

Maybe the roof or the drive needs repairs.

Then you decide to sell and find a better house. So you clean up, clear out, re-decorate, landscape.

And all of a sudden you realize that you have a great house. You want to stay!

We should know — we have been through it three times. — H.M.B.

Dear Heloise:

Here is a suggestion for people who have a salt and pepper shaker that they like but do not use because the holes are too large. This is sometimes true of the fancy pottery kinds.

Dip the top of the shaker in melted paraffin and then use a needle to make new holes by punching a needle through the existing holes.

The size of the needle will govern the size of the new holes.

The wax can be replaced occasionally when needed, but it does not spoil the appearance of the shaker. — BeBe

Dear Heloise:

Here is my solution to the problem of puckered borders on towels.

With a razor blade, carefully cut across the border at several places allowing the border to relax.

Using pre-shrunk, lightweight trim tape, ease over the border on each side, covering the slits and sew on.

It adds a little cost to the towel but it is less costly than discarding an otherwise good towel.

And it provides an opportunity to add an accent color to the bathroom. — Mrs. George Elliott

Dear Heloise:

When making cupcakes from a regular homemade cake recipe, it is sometimes difficult to judge how to make the frosting come out even for all of them.

Now I stir the frosting well, then in the same bowl, I divide the frosting into fourths, also the cupcakes.

It is a good way to approximate your frosting so there is not too much left over when you're finished, or, worse yet, not have enough to cover them all. — Mrs. John Roch

Dear Heloise:

Did you ever have the instant coffee or tea get hard and impossible to get any out for a cup of "cheer"? (Maybe it only happens to folks that don't use a lot.)

I covered it with water and it soon dissolves. Now I can spoon a couple of teaspoons in my cup and add hot water. Keep refrigerated and it will last to the last drop. — Mary Anna Yoder

THOUGHTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise:

"Happy is the bride that the sun shines upon"

"Happy is the soul that the rain falls upon..."

Every time that I have a funeral, when it's raining and the family is so depressed, I quote that and it brings them a ray of light — a feeling that the Lord is taking care of their loved ones. — Lelon Cude, Funeral director

Dear Heloise:

Being put back in a cold bed is enough to wake anyone up not to mention a tiny baby.

Keep a heating pad with a towel wrapped loosely around it by the baby's bed and as soon as the baby is lifted out

Criminal Court Hears Four Death Appeals

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawyers pleaded with the Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday to overturn four death penalty cases, including ones involving a former Amarillo police officer and a fellow inmate of Fred Gomez Carrasco in the 1974 attempted prison breakout.

Jimmy Paul Vanderbilt, the ex-police man, "confessed" to the shooting slaying of Katina Moyer only after the district attorney promised not to seek the death penalty, Vanderbilt's lawyer said.

Jim Brown of Canyon told the Court of Criminal Appeals Vanderbilt's death sentence should be reversed because District Attorney Tom Curtis broke that promise.

Curtis denied that, saying Vanderbilt knew the deal had been "vehemently called off" before Vanderbilt made an oral admission of accidentally shooting the 16-year-old daughter of former State Rep. Hudson Mover.

Vanderbilt refused to sign notes written by a police officer after making the oral statement because they did not contain the promise not to seek the death penalty.

Four and a half hours later, at 3 a.m. April 11, 1975, Vanderbilt signed a written confession that contained the promise. But the defense got the trial judge to exclude that confession because Vanderbilt had been in custody nine hours at the time he signed it and had been allowed to confer with a court-appointed lawyer only after making the oral statement.

The trial judge allowed the oral admission to be introduced into evidence because it led to a "fruit of the crime" — a bullet with a hair fragment on it.

But Brown said the bullet never was connected with a murder weapon, and the state's own expert witness had only been able to say the hair fragment was "similar" to Miss Moyer's hair.

In his written confession, Vanderbilt says he only intended to frighten Miss Moyer into agreeing not to turn him in on a kidnapping charge when she tried to jerk away from him beside a country road in Potter County. The bullet entered the back of her head and exited the front. Officers later found it 250 feet away in a pasture.

Four days earlier, on March 27, Vanderbilt allegedly had kidnapped another girl. He told her he had emotional problems. He had been dismissed as a police officer on March 25. She was released unharmed.

Ignacio Cuevas' death sentence should be overturned, his lawyer argued, because Texas law allows the exclusion of prospective jurors merely because they say the death penalty affects their judgment.

Will Gray of Houston told the Court of Criminal Appeals the U. S. Supreme Court set a different standard than Texas law.

The Supreme Court said in the Witherspoon case that a juror is qualified to serve in capital cases if he can set aside his scruples against the death penalty and apply the law, Gray said.

One juror in Guevas' Harris County trial was excluded over defense objections and another cost the defense a peremptory challenge, Gray said.

Two women hostages and another prisoner were killed in the attempted breakout. Cuevas, also a prisoner, was wounded.

Court Rules For Howard County Farmers

AUSTIN (AP) — A South Plains cotton cooperative owes three Howard County farmers $246,292 — the difference, plus interest — between 1973 contract and market prices, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

Without writing a new opinion, the court upheld an Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals decision that the purchase contract was based on misrepresentation.

A Lubbock jury also had ruled for the farmers — Jack Wolf, James Barr and David Barr — in their suit against Plains Cotton Cooperative Association.

The American Cotton Shippers Association considered the case so vital that it filed a "friend of the court" brief urging the high court to enforce the cotton contracts.

The appeals court's opinion said the farmers agreed orally with Alvin Hill, agent for the cooperative, to sell their cotton to Plains.

It said the farmers balked at signing contracts, however, and did so — without reading them — only when told they could escape by giving 30 days' notice.

The court said the farmers also were told their oral agreements were binding, anyway.

Cotton prices rose that season to double the amount the farmers would get under the contracts.

When they tried to give 30 days' notice and get out of the contracts, Plains said there was no such escape clause. They delivered their cotton in February.

The farmers then sued for the difference between the price paid by Plains under the April 1973 contracts and the market price for cotton on the date they delivered their crops to the cooperative.

Plains said the farmers were negligent in not reading the contracts. But the court of civil appeals said this did not matter.

"We have concluded that a party's own negligence should not bar him from seeking equitable relief from a contract executed in reliance upon the false representations of the other contracting party," it said.

The court said the farmers' "mistaken belief . . . that their cotton was already sold for the contract price (under their oral agreements)" justified canceling the contracts.

"It is our opinion that the mistakes found in this case which were brought about by misrepresentations of the defendant and its agent were ample grounds to afford the plaintiffs (the farmers) relief from the contracts which they would not have signed except for such mistake," it said.

The cotton shippers association said in its brief that Hill, the Plains agent, had told the farmers exactly what the contract said — that the escape clause applied only in case of proven "hardship."

It said the farmers merely were seeking a windfall profit at the expense of Plains, which was locked into sales contracts with textile mills at prices fixed earlier in the year.

Father Enters Not Guilty Plea

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — As his six young children were being buried in white coffins at Calvary Cemetery on Wednesday, Simon Peter Nelson pleaded innocent in Circuit Court to charges of murdering them.

The prosecution indicated it will seek the death penalty.

The burly 46-year-old employment counselor, dressed in jail coveralls, faced Judge Philip Reinhard at the arraignment and said he preferred not to have the formal charges read to him.

Asked whether he pleaded guilty or innocent, Nelson turned to his public defender, Craig Peterson, who answered: "Not guilty to all six counts."

"Is that your plea?" the judge asked Nelson.

"Yes, it is, your honor."

"Are you under any kind of medication at this time?"

"No, your honor."

Nelson was led away. No trial date was set.

The bodies of Nelson's children were taken in five hearses to the cemetery, which was covered by snow. The temperature was 10 degrees below zero. There were no flowers.

No family members attended the private interment. The mother, Ann, a 38-year-old ice skating teacher, and close relatives had attended a private funeral Mass Monday.

The Rev. Timothy Doherty of St. Peter's Cathedral blessed the coffins and he and police Chaplain William Wentink said brief prayers.

A Mass is to be said Thursday at St. Peter's Cathedral, and St. Peter's school, across the street, will dismiss classes so the 225 pupils can attend. Jennifer, 12, the oldest of the Nelson children, was in the seventh grade there.

The other children killed were Simon Jr., 10, Andrew, 9, Matthew, 7, Roseann, 5, and David, 3.

The children and the family dog were beaten and stabbed to death as they slept Friday night. Nelson was arrested in a Milwaukee motel early Saturday. Police, summoned to a disturbance, said they found him beating up his estranged wife, who had decided to divorce him.

Wife Due Benefits Via Degree, Court Finds

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A wife who helps pay her husband's way through college should receive benefits for that effort if the couple later divorces, the Michigan Court of Appeals says.

The court upheld an Oakland County Circuit Court ruling which awarded Susan Moss a $15,000 alimony settlement.

"This case presents the not-uncommon situation of a wife who, having worked so that her husband could obtain a professional education, finds herself left by the roadside before the fruits of that education can be harvested," the appeals court said.

Mrs. Moss worked as a guidance counselor to earn money to put her husband, Lee, through medical school. He later graduated and began a surgical residency in Maryland.

But the Oakland County court then granted the couple's request for a divorce.

Both parties appealed the lower court decision. Mrs. Moss said the alimony should be raised to $60,000 for her contribution to her husband's degree. Moss claimed that alimony should not have been granted at all, because his former wife earned more money as a counselor than he was making.

But the appeals court held Tuesday that Moss's diploma was the only asset the couple had and that the lower court's finding was fair.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q Several years ago we invested $10,000 in a tax shelter, although we are poor folks and there wouldn't have been any savings. But we were told the project was a real money maker. However, we've received only $350 interest on our money in three years. Then we went into a real estate project which hasn't sent us any money in years. We are in our early 70s...

A I don't want to seem unfeeling and cut off your tale of woe after only a paragraph or two of long letter, but there is little I can do help you recover money which seems pretty well gone.

All that can be done with your letter is to use it as warning: 1) If you don't understand where your money is going, don't send it; 2) tax shelters are only for wealthy, sophisticated investors who are in a position to sustain losses and who can use them to recover part of their investment from Uncle Sam.

You had absolutely no business in either of these details. In fact, you might consult the State's Attorney General or your own lawyer to see whether you were the victims of fraud.

You confess you are "totally ignorant" of securities or investments. But I refuse to believe that any person who has reached your age doesn't know that there are federal agencies insuring accounts in savings banks, savings and loans and credit unions... and that these accounts yield interest up to 7 1/2 percent. What, then, possessed you to hand over all that money to someone you don't know to be invested in something which is a deep dark mystery to you on the premise that it would protect your from income taxes you don't pay?

Only a masochist would pay more income taxes than legally required. But I am last learning that many, many unsophisticated low tax bracket investors are losing more money via "tax-shelter" investments than via the income taxes they would normally pay. In other words, the cure is worse than the disease.

Q About a year ago I was talked into putting all my money, $20,000, into a mutual fund which I was told would treble my money in a few years. I asked whether it would cost me anything to invest and was told no. The stock has gone down and now, when I asked again, they told me there was a fee of $1,500. I'm sick about the whole deal.

A There's not much point in being sick about it after you have turned over your money — unless you are "sick" enough to threaten a suit to get your money back on the grounds that you were misled. That "trebling" business was, of course, mere salesmen's talk. But concealing the fact that you were paying a commission of 9 1/3 percent is pretty close to fraud, it seems to me.

For about 22 years I have tried to explain here that if you see a mutual fund listed $13.94 bid and $15.24 asked (or $13.94 "selling" and $15.24 "buying") you are not looking at a no-commission (no-load) fund. The difference between $13.94 (which represents the fund's assets behind each share) and the $15.24 you pay is the commission, or "load." In fact, practically the entire difference between what you paid originally and today's current asset per share value is represented by the nearly $1,700 paid in commissions. But that salesmen certainly knew how to lie.

Testimony Opens In Price Support Fraud Case

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Lakeland, Fla., man who qualified for government cotton price support payments in 1972 told a jury Wednesday that "my understanding of the arrangement was never very clear."

Responding to questioning from Asst. U.S. Atty. Bob Slough, Sidney W. Carter, a former chemical company executive, said he was basically ignorant of operations on farmland he leased.

Carter was the chief witness during opening day testimony in the criminal trial of John H. Thomas, accused of duping the government out of lucrative price support payments in 1972 and 1973.

Thomas, 44, a former Brownfield businessman who now lives in Houston, is on trial in U.S. District Court here on charges of converting Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) funds for his own use and of supplying false information to the government agency.

Thomas converted property to his own use, the government alleges, by causing price support payments to be allotted to individuals who actually had no real interest in farm land they reportedly leased from Jon-T Farms Inc., a Thomas company.

In that way, the prosecution contends, Thomas avoided the $55,000 cotton price support payment ceiling then in effect.

The indictment charges that payments of over $53,650 each were illegally authorized in approximately 40 instances in the two years.

Defense attorneys Michael Tigar and Travis Shelton, however, say Thomas was told by government agriculture officials that his joint venture plan was legal. The defense also says individuals who leased land under the plan did take an active interest in the land.

Carter, who lived in Connecticut and worked in New York City during the time in question, said he was first approached by Thomas about entering the venture in 1971.

He said he was contacted again in 1972 about leasing Gaines County farm property.

"He (Thomas) said basically I would have to apply for an allotment to the Soil Conservation Service, apply for a loan and then enroll for the joint venture," Carter said.

He said that in 1972 he did receive allotment application, joint venture agreement, power of attorney and assignment of payment forms.

"I thought I was not in the joint venture at this time," he said.

"Why?" Slough asked. "Because I did not sign the joint venture agreement," Carter stated.

He said he made a copy of the joint venture agreement, and mailed the original back to Brownfield, unsigned.

Slough then showed Carter a joint venture agreement form. "It appears to have been signed 'Sid Carter'?" the prosecutor asked. "Right," Carter said.

"Is that your signature?" Slough continued.

"No, sir," Carter said. Slough asked Carter if he had anything to do with who was to farm the land, what their wages would be, who would buy the cotton or what the cotton would sell for. Carter answered no to all the questions.

Carter said he did not know from whom the land was leased.

On cross-examination, Carter said he had met with an Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service official in Brownfield before embarking on the venture and had been given the impression he would be qualified for the program.

He said he had signed a power of attorney, which authorized another agent to sign his name.

He also told Tigar he had gone to Gaines County to see if cotton was being grown.

"You went down more than once, didn't you?" Tigar queried.

"I believe so," Carter said.

Testimony was to resume at 9:30 a.m. today. Sources indicated the trial could last from three to five weeks.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — J. Paul Getty III, the late billionaire's grandson whose right ear was severed by kidnapers in a $3 million extortion plot, is having the ear restored by an eminent Stanford University plastic surgeon.

Dr. Burt Brent said this week young Getty "has undergone two operations and some further work will be necessary to complete the restoration."

Brent described Getty as a "pleasant, cooperative patient who has begun to mature since surgery began."

Restaurant Alcohol Sales Curbs Due New Study

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council at its meeting today once again will consider ordinance amendments to tighten control over the sale of alcoholic beverages in restaurants.

The latest in a series of proposals drafted by the city legal department would allow the sale of alcoholic beverages as an incidental use by restaurants in certain zones.

Those zoning districts include local retail (C-2), restricted local retail (C-2A) and general retail (C-3).

Other businesses in those districts that want to sell alcoholic beverages would have to apply to the Zoning Board of Adjustment for permission. If the board ascertained certain restrictions were met, the businesses would be able to sell the drinks as a conditional use.

Conditions that would have to be met include an acceptable site plan, a 600-foot separation between businesses selling alcoholic beverages and a 200-foot separation from residential zones.

The most controversial feature of the newest amendment proposal may be the abolition of late-hour permits in restaurants. The permits allow a business to sell alcoholic beverages until 2 a.m. instead of the usual midnight.

City Atty. Fred Senter said he interprets the amendments to mean that already issued late hour permits could be cancelled upon adoption of the proposal. Inclusion of the change would mean restaurants could not act as "mini-bars" by selling only alcoholic beverages after their kitchens close, the city legal staff says.

Another feature of the new proposals is that no quarterly audits would be routinely required. The audits, which supposedly show the business meets the 60-40 limit on alcoholic beverage sale profits, can be falsified easily, the staff says. Therefore, staffers say the audits are meaningless.

Instead, under the proposals, the zoning administrator could require a notarized affidavit from restaurants indicating gross revenues on incidental and primary uses. The administrator would use his own discretion in seeking the affidavits.

Apart from not requiring ZBA approval of alcoholic beverages, the latest proposal differs little from the one council members rejected last month. The council could not reach a consensus on the drafted suggestions and tabled the discussion after an hour of wrangling.

Council members seek the changes to prevent bars from operating as restaurants in zoning districts reserved for eateries. Also, zoning staffers say, they want to prevent restaurants from acting as "mini-bars" with late-hour permits.

During their work session, to begin at 9:30 a.m. in the emergency operation center, council members will discuss the timetable for the April 1 municipal elections. Filing deadlines and other details of the elections will be outlined by Asst. City Atty. Ken Jones.

Possible dates for seeking a bond rating on airport revenue bonds will be considered. The council proposes to sell the bonds and use capital improvement funds to finance a $2.4 million parking lot expansion at the airport.

Council members will review the status of capital improvement projects being delayed by court action. Primarily they will discuss water, fire and sewer improvements that have been held up by a suit filed by city hall critic Jimmy Marshall to have the May 21 bond election declared void.

Marshall already lost the first round in a district court here, but has carried his case to the 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo. No date has been set to hear the case. Representatives of the Executive Limousine Service once again will appear before the council to seek permission to provide limousine service at the Lubbock International Airport.

The company's representatives have been turned down by the Airport Board and are appealing the board's decision. The board says it sees no need for the service.

The council also will consider amending a Community Development funding agreement with the federal government to give the local Urban Renewal Agency authority to approve 312 rehabilitation loans.

Council members are expected to formalize an agreement with Texas Tech whereby the university will pay the city $10,000 annually for the use of the Auditorium-Coliseum parking lot.

GM Worried Over Sales Lag By Some 1978 Automobiles

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors President Elliott Estes acknowledged Wednesday that sales of GM's new, smaller intermediate cars haven't met company expectations and said "we might have been too cocky" about them.

But Estes reaffirmed the giant automaker's optimistic forecast for 1978, saying GM hopes the outlook will become a "self-fulfilling prophecy."

He also called on the federal government to clear up the "unusual number of question marks" hanging over the economy as 1978 unfolds.

Estes told reporters after a talk to the Detroit Rotary Club that GM will make "some changes in the way we merchandise and advertise" the intermediate models to counter lagging sales.

He would not elaborate, but said "price cuts and rebates are not in the picture."

The auto industry, led by GM, has been in a nagging sales slump since mid-November. The biggest problem for GM has been its sharply-downsized intermediates.

For the first three months of the 1978 model year, sales of the intermediates were down 16.8 percent from the same period a year earlier. Those are the Chevrolet Malibu and Monte Carlo, Pontiac Le Mans and Grand Prix, Oldsmobile Cutlass and Buick Century and Regal.

As the second step in GM's program to build smaller cars to meet government fuel economy standards, the cars have been restyled and cut by up to 18 inches in length and 800 pounds.

"GM's new midsize cars are selling well — very well," Estes told the Rotarians. "But the truth is, these cars aren't selling quite as well as we thought they would or want them to."

He said that after last year's success with GM's reduced-size big cars, "maybe we were too cocky going into the 1978 model year...I don't think we were complacent. But there's no question that we weren't selling as hard as we had been a year earlier."

GM has predicted record U.S. auto sales of 11.75 million this model year, compared to 11.17 in 1977. The No. 1 automaker is considerably more optimistic than Ford Motor Co., the U.S. Commerce Department and most analysts, who predict a slight drop in car sales.

"We haven't changed any numbers," Estes said. Asked whether the industry would reach the 11.75 million figure in the car model year or the calendar year, he said "the calendar year for sure."

Estes said GM thinks it helped the nation's economic recovery with an optimistic forecast in late 1975. "Given that choice again in 1978, we still choose to be optimistic."

The GM president put part of the burden on the federal government for creating a climate of confidence by ending "the conflicting signals that we keep getting on energy, tax, economic and other important policies."

"Confidence is the whole game," he said.

Estes wouldn't suggest deadlines for government action to ensure a health automotive economy for 1978, and denied that GM was positioning itself to blame the government if GM's forecast doesn't pan out.

keep asking it," he said. "That's part of good management, in my opinion."

Only by such management supervised by the council "can our citizens escape future money problems," he said.

Henry singled out a "good attitude" as a basic ingredient to a successful city council. His visits to other cities across the nation have convinced him that a "positive, hopeful and encouraging attitude" in councils means a better ability to cope with problems, he said.

Lubbock has been successful in uniting to improve the city, he said. "However, there still remain many areas for improvement if all our citizens are to fully enjoy the benefits of living in Lubbock," he added.

Henry said he would like the progress to continue "through creating a positive attitude while never overlooking opportunities to help those who legitimately cannot help themselves."

If problems can be solved on the local level, he added, the city will not have to lean on the federal government as much for help.

Henry, who lives at 3302 43rd St., earned a bachelor's and a master's degrees from Texas Tech. From 1965-67, he was an assistant to U.S. Rep. George Mahon in Washington, D.C. He also taught for two years at Tech.

He is a member of the First Baptist Church, Lubbock Association of Insurance Agents, Southwest Rotary Club and American Business Club.

Past offices he has held include Board of Directors of the Southwest Light House for the Blind, president of the YMCA board of directors, president of the Goodwill Industries board of directors and membership on the Guadalupe Neighborhood Center board.

He served as president of the American Business Club, vice president of the South Plains Association of Governments, president of the Society for Crippled Children and secretary of the Food and Fiber National Institute.

IRS Drops Short Form Reluctantly

By RAY DE CRANE

For more than 30 years Americans talked of using either the Short Form or the Long Form in the filing of income tax returns. But no more. There is no Short Form this year.

There still is a Form 1040A — the number that has been assigned to the Short Form. But the 1040A is now identical in length to the venerable Form 1040.

Internal Revenue Service form designers had to expand the 1040A

Fourth In A Series

to convert it into a one-sided tax form. Last year's abbreviated Short Form required its users to flip from one side of completing their entries. It is believed that this type of confusion may have played a part in the great number of errors made last year.

Now the redesigned 1040A is all printed on one side and everything is in proper sequential order.

Of all the many changes in the tax forms this year, the dropping of the Short Form designation is the one that Revenue Commissioner Jerome Kurtz accepted most reluctantly according to Washington insiders at IRS.

There is no income limitation on the use of Form 1040A, so long as all the income was only from wages, salary and tips, with not more than $400 in dividends, nor more than $400 in interest income.

Should there be any income from other sources, such as capital gains, rental income, capital gain dividends, or if the interest or dividend income exceeds $400, Form 1040A may not be used.

Also, 1040A is only for those who do not itemize their deductions and persons who do not claim a moving expense adjustment, disability income exclusion or child and dependent care credit.

Despite its limitations, IRS anticipates that more than 30 million filers will use the streamlined 1040A, even though it is no longer a Short Form.

(You may order the 1978 tax book by writing to: "Cut Your Own Taxes," c/o The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019, and enclosing a check or money order for $1 plus 25 cents for postage and handling. Make check payable to "Cut Your Own Taxes.")

You And Your Federal Income Tax

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is presented as a public service. Information provided by the Lubbock Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, is in compliance with current tax laws.

QUESTION: I run a small business and expect a loss this year. Since it was my first year in business, I would like to use it to offset next year's income. Is this permissible as I understand that you must first carry back the loss?

ANSWER: Prior law provided that taxpayers were generally allowed to carry a business net operating loss back to the preceding three years and forward to the five years following the year of the loss. Different carryback and carryover periods are allowed for certain specific types of taxpayers and certain types of losses.

The new law provides two additional carryover years for business taxpayers in general and insurance companies (making a seven-year carryover), as well as for regulated transportation corporations (making a nine-year carryover). In addition, all taxpayers presently entitled to carryback periods for their net operating losses may elect to forego the entire carryback period for a net operating loss in any taxable year. These provisions apply to net operating losses incurred in tax years ending in 1976 or later.

QUESTION: I wrote several checks at the end of last year that did not clear the bank until 1978. Do I deduct these in my 1977 or 1978 tax return?

ANSWER: Payment by check by a cash-basis taxpayer can be deducted when the check is delivered, if paid on presentation. Checks posted to another tax year cannot be deducted before the date shown.

Second In A Series

For example, Mr. A. contributes to a college fund. He sends the college a check, in December, 1977. The check is dated 12-31-77. The college does not deposit or cash the check until January, 1978. The contribution is considered made in 1977 and the deduction is taken in the 1977 return.

Further instruction concerning filing your 1977 tax return can be obtained by attending the "You and Your Federal Income Tax" program, a public service course jointly sponsored by the Lubbock Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Internal Revenue Service and the Avalanche-Journal. CPA's volunteer their time to assist taxpayers during a two-night informal program to be offered February 7 and 9, 1978, from 7-10 p.m. The course, which provides both instruction and question and answer periods, will teach participants how to fill out the revised tax forms using recent changes tax law.

Each registrant will receive Internal Revenue Service publication, "Your Federal Income Tax", a 200 page booklet which details many tax deductions, forms and filing requirements. While the course is free to the public, there is a $1 fee to cover administrative costs.

Classes will be held at the following Lubbock locations: Lubbock High School, Atkins Junior High School, Evans Junior High School, Smylie Wilson Junior High School, O.L. Slaton Junior High School, and Roosevelt High School.

Other courses will be held at Littlefield, Floydada and Plainview.

To register for the "You and Your Federal Income Tax" program, simply fill out the registration form below. Money and registration form must be mailed by January 31, 1978.

Red Raiders Invade Waco For Battle With Bears

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

WACO—There's something ominous about Texas Tech playing a basketball game in this central Texas city, and Raider coach Gerald Myers is not even considering the weather as part of the matter.

Tech plays the Baylor Bears in Heart O' Texas Coliseum tonight, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, and icy conditions just bring back memories of past trips here—as if the present weren't enough of a concern.

Tech and Baylor collide with 1-1 records which puts additional pressure on the contest. Both teams won where they were supposed to—at home—and lost on the road, which adds to Myers' concern.

But, looking back, one of the two losses the Raiders absorbed in 1973, the year it won the championship under Myers, came in Waco. And, in 1965, when Tech assembled one of its greatest teams—only to lose it all on an eligibility case—its only conference defeat came at the hands of the Bears.

In 1970, a loss here was a key factor in Tech's unsuccessful bid for the SWC title. Why, even three years ago, Myers remembers that a loss here cost Tech a share of the title.

The icy conditions which hit Waco Wednesday is just another one of those coincidences which seems to pop up when Tech comes to town.

But, "I try not to think about those things," said Myers. "You can get to thinking that way (about the past). But, I don't even mention to the players (whether) we won or lost in a certain place."

"The ball club is the big thing, and stopping Vinnie Johnson is a whole lot more important than what happened last year."

Vinnie Johnson is a 6-1 junior college transfer from McLennan Community College here who was voted the preseason newcomer of the year in the conference, and he has responded with a 23-point scoring average, best in the league. He has scored as high as 43 points in a game this year.

"We just hope we can contain him," said Myers. "No one can stop him. We just can't let him get 35 on us. If he doesn't have any turnovers, gets ten assists and 20 points, Baylor will be hard to beat."

Myers indicated he will start 6-3 Mike Edwards on Johnson, although "We might have to use Geoff (Huston) or Tommy Parks on him."

"And, the thing is, Baylor has three others scoring in double figures and (the fifth starter) Mike Little is hitting about 8 a game."

Tech will go with the 6-1 Huston at the quarterbacking guard spot, Edwards, 6-7 Mike Russell, 6-5 Kent Williams and 6-9 Joe Baxter.

Baylor will call upon Johnson and Little at guards, 6-6 Art Edwards, 6-5 Russell Oliver and 6-9 Wendell Mays as starters.

Baylor rebounded from an opening-

SWC loss to Rice to clip the Aggies 77-61 Monday night, and, said coach Jim Haller, "We had a lot to prove after the terrible showing at Rice."

"We played hard against the Aggies. They were very physical and we were ready to get with them. It was definitely one of the best, aggressive, enthusiastic efforts of the year. From a skill level, it wasn't a good game, but I'll take that game we put on the floor every night out."

Baylor even whipped the Aggies on the backboards, a feat which pleased Haller. "Mays had 11 rebounds, but what helped was that Edwards, Vinnie and Oliver had nine rebounds each."

From here, Tech will head on to Houston and a Saturday afternoon date with Rice in a regionally televised contest.

Also tonight, Arkansas, unbeaten for the year and 1-0 in conference, will play at Rice, and Houston will play the Aggies at College Station.

NCAA Convention Prepares For Fight

ATLANTA (AP) — With the threat of secession by the big-time football powers again hanging over their heads, delegates to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's annual convention are gearing for what is expected to be one of the fiercest floor fights in memory over the controversial issue of reorganization.

Voting on 161 pieces of proposed legislation begins today but the one that has the battle lines drawn concerns splitting the NCAA's 145 major football schools into Divisions I-A and I-AA.

On one side are the big-time football conferences, along with major independents such as Notre Dame, Penn State and Pitt. In the other corner are the Missouri Valley, Mid-American, Southern and Southland Conferences and the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Basically, the big boys — the so-called "super conference" that was proposed four years ago — want the voting power to control their own destiny, i.e., Division I-A.

The other current Division I members, who see themselves as second-class citizens in Division I-AA, feel that such reorganization would lead to the rich getting richer and eventually would mean the end of the aforementioned conferences.

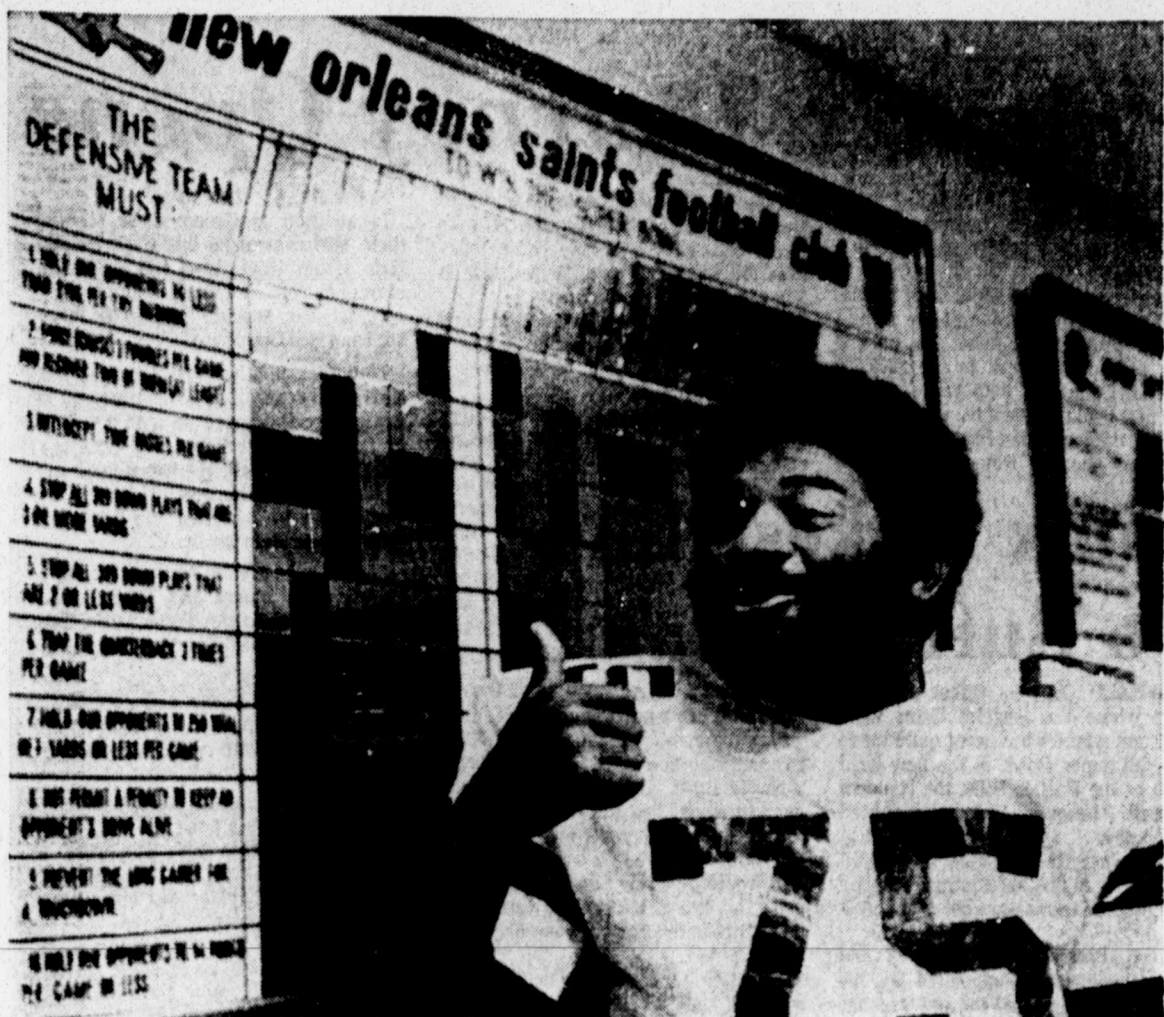

"The NCAA will be decimated if restructuring passes," says Bob Murphy, athletic director at San Jose State.

The PCAA and its colleague conferences claim the proposed legislation, if passed, could spell the end for those five leagues and maybe even the football programs at some of the involved institutions.

To be a member of Division I-A, a school would have to sponsor a minimum of eight varsity Division I sports, including football, schedule at least 60 percent of its games against Division I teams and have averaged more than 17,000 paid attendance at home in the last four years.

A school could meet the last requirement by averaging 17,000 in any one of the last four years and having a stadium

HOW TO WIN—Dallas Cowboys defensive tackle Jethro Pugh smiles at the "must" list on a bulletin board in the New Orleans Saints' clubhouse. Saints coach Hank Stram laid out the list of goals to be achieved in order to win the Super Bowl. The Cowboys are using the Saints' facilities for practice for Sunday's Super Bowl, which Pugh says may be his last game in the NFL. (AP Laserphoto)

Jethro Pugh May Retire

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Jethro Pugh, the silent giant who had to live with the stigma of being the victim of the most publicized block in professional football history, has decided Sunday's Super Bowl game likely will be his last.

"I believe this one will do it," said the Dallas Cowboy defensive tackle, who has played in more National Football League playoff games than any other player—22—which is two more than Lee Roy Jordan and George Blanda.

"I've been around 13 years and lucky to be in a playoff in 11 of them," said Pugh Wednesday. "I've banked over $100,000 in playoff money and wished I still had it. But it has been a good career and I'm getting to be an old man."

For years the 34-year-old Pugh, out of the unlikely football school of Elizabeth City State in North Carolina, labored unheralded on a Doomsday defense anchored by all-pro Bob Lilly. Then came the "Ice Bowl" game of 1967.

With time running out on fourth down, Green Bay quarterback Bart Starr sneaked behind Jerry Kramer's block on an ice-encrusted field for the game-winning touchdown.

"When I have a nightmare, it usually has that play in it," said the 6-foot-6, 250-pound Pugh. "The field was so slick. We couldn't dig in. It (all the publicity) has been a little unfair but that's the way it goes."

Excuses appear out of place for the steady Pugh, who still suffers in extreme cold because of frostbite he received that sub-zero day in Green Bay.

"I think I've given more than I've received," said Pugh. "It's been a good career."

Pugh suffers from a back injury he has had for seven years.

"I've lost my quickness," he said, a fact seemingly lost on some of his opponents who believe Pugh makes up for any speed deficiencies in craftiness. "I couldn't even play the last two games of the regular season because my back hurt so bad."

Pugh said, "I've been thinking about retiring all season but decided I wouldn't say anything about it until now."

Reminded that some players "unretire" as soon as football camp is over in the summer, Pugh said, "I don't think so. My health would really have to improve."

Never one to take himself seriously, Pugh said his lasting contribution to the game would probably be his name.

"Remember when I was drafted?" he said. "The first thing everyone wanted to know was: 'What's a Jethro Pugh?' The second was: 'Where in the heck is Elizabeth City State?'"

Pugh said, "You know it will be nice to be in the record book. Without a name like Jethro Pugh I might really have been anonymous down through the years."

Super Bowl Coaches Differ In Tactics

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They are coaching contrasts, cut of different molds, but both Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys and Red Miller of the Denver Broncos will share a singleness of purpose Sunday. Each wants to win the Super Bowl.

Miller is the man who turned Denver daffy over the Broncos. He served 17 years as an assistant coach with four National Football League teams before getting his first chance as a head coach. All he did was lead Denver into the playoffs for the first time in the team's history, a feat that earned him Coach of the Year honors.

He is an enthusiastic cheerleader on the sidelines, a man who turned a team of the brink of revolution to one on the brink of football's world championship.

"He is the difference on this team," said All-Pro defensive end Lyle Alzado. "He's put it all together for us."

Landry is an exact opposite. Often stoical in his reactions as he stands on the sidelines, he sometimes has been described as computer-like in his approach to the game.

"He is mystical," marveled Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach. "In his relationship with the players, he is somewhere between aloof and being one of the boys. If he praises you or chews you out, it has impact. He's not one to go around slapping you on the back."

Miller, however, definitely is from the backslapper school of coaching.

"Football is an emotional game," he said. "I like to show it myself. The Broncomania back in Denver... that's a great part of what's happened with us this season. I collect all that stuff. We've got an orange telephone, an orange radio, orange shower curtains. We even had an orange Christmas tree. I'm putting together a museum of that stuff in my basement."

That would be like Landry coloring the Dallas computer cards silver and blue for the Cowboy colors. Don't expect it to happen. It's not his style.

"He's very intense," said Staubach. "Sometimes, I think he's too intense."

There was, for example, Dallas' first-round playoff victory against Chicago. The Cowboys had a fat lead and were running out the clock the way the computer says you should, with Staubach taking the center snap and falling to the ground. At the two-minute warning, the quarterback trotted to the sidelines to talk with his coach.

"I said to him, 'Hey, all those quarterback sneaks are ruining my rushing average,'" said Staubach. "I thought it was a funny line. But he didn't."

That's because football is serious stuff for Landry. And at Super Bowl time, it gets even more serious. Other coaches have complained of the distractions surrounding their teams as they prepared for the big game. Miller is not bothered by anything like that but Landry, who is preparing for his fourth world championship game, says he will be.

"There are distractions here," the Dallas coach said. "You don't realize it entirely until game day. It all comes upon you in the last couple of days... just how much it means to win a world championship."

The Broncos will tell you that without Miller, they would never have had a chance at that championship. A year ago after a 9-5 season that was their best ever, a dozen players met with owner Gerald Phipps to tell their boss that Coach John Ralston was not providing the leadership they needed. The answer was Miller, who had been coaching for 28 years but never as a No. 1 man.

Flanker Haven Moses, explains the change this way:

"Coach Miller is very astute to the game and the people. He dealt with us as individuals. His emotion is honest and that's the way it's got to be."

One of Miller's first moves was to install castoff Craig Morton as the Bronco quarterback. Morton, who worked at Dallas before drifting to the New York Giants and then Denver, refused to compare his old coach, Landry, with the new one, Miller.

"But, I'll say this," explained Morton. "He's done something I've never experienced before. He stepped over the barrier that says a coach has to be aloof. He confronts his players one on one. He insists that we stay loose. For the first time in my career, it's fun to play football. His rapport with the players knocks down a lot of the pressure. He's the most patient person I've ever known."

Denver and Dallas played in the final game of the regular season after both teams had clinched their playoff berths. The Cowboys won that one 14-6 and after the game, Landry visited the Bronco dressing room.

"He wished us luck in the playoffs," said Miller. "I thought it was a class thing for him to do."

Landry sees a lot of Dallas in Denver. "They've caught the fancy of the people," the Cowboy coach said. "The American people are sentimentally for the underdog. We were underdogs for a long time. They've created great excitement, the way we did in 1966 (when Dallas had its first winning season but lost the NFL title game to Green Bay). They have the same enthusiasm and spirit now that we did then."

It was suggested to Miller that Landry might have had an ulterior motive in rooting for the Broncos in the playoffs and that the Dallas coach might consider a Denver team experiencing its first Super Bowl easier to deal with than a seasoned club like Pittsburgh and Oakland.

"I hope so," said Miller, his eyes lighting up. "I sure hope so."

Tech Fem Contest Postponed

icy roads between Lubbock and Denton forced a day's delay in Wednesday night's women's basketball game between Texas Tech and North Texas State.

The contest will be held, beginning at 6 p.m. today, in the women's gym.

The game will be the first for Tech since it defeated New Mexico State here Jan. 10. And for NTSU, it will be the first action since Dec. 17, which prompted coach Cheri Rapp to comment, "I expect that we'll be a little rusty."

"On the other hand, Tech has been idle longer than we so it should be equal from that standpoint."

Miss Rapp is a former Wayland Baptist College player.

Tech will bring in a 13-2 record and is ranked sixth in the state. North Texas, with a 6-3 record, is rated fifth.

Tech coach Gay Benson is expected to open with a lineup of 5-11 D'Lynn Brown, 5-5 Karla Schuette, 5-10 Marilyn Payton, 5-8 Rosemary Scott, and 5-11 Cheryl Greer.

Scoring leader for NT is 5-10 Lisa Risinger, a former South Plains College player who is hitting 20.6 points per game.

After tonight, Tech will compete in the New Mexico State tournament Friday and Saturday at Las Cruces.

The Tech women will then host SMU Tuesday as part of a Lubbock Coliseum doubleheader with the Tech men.

ON RAMS' LIST—St. Louis Cardinal football coach Don Coryell arrives in Los Angeles to speak with the Rams about the LA coaching job which was vacated Wednesday when Chuck Knox joined the Buffalo Bills. Coryell is said to be high on the list of Ram prospects, along with Washington Redskins' George Allen and Stanford's Bill Walsh. (AP Laserphoto)

Phoenix Tourney Opens

PHOENIX (AP) — "Let's just say," suggested U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, "there's a little rust in the machine."

Green, coming off a break from tournament golf, heads a group of the game's leading professionals who are starting their season this week in the $200,000 Phoenix Open and help make up the strongest field this event has ever seen.

In all, the tournament has 19 of the top 20 money-winners from 1977 — Jack Nicklaus is the only absentee — and 55 of the top 60 are contained in the 147-man field that starts a 72-hole chase today over the water-logged, 6,726-yard, par 71 Phoenix Country Club course.

"You're never really sure what's going to come out of your bag at this stage of the season," Green said. "I think everybody's a little rusty."

"But by the end of the week, you're going to see the good players playing good."

And there's plenty of them. In addition to Green, those starting their 1978 campaigns this week include Hale Irwin, Ray Floyd and defending champion Jerry Pate, all multiple winners last year, Arnold Palmer, Tom Weiskopf and Ben Crenshaw.

Tom Watson, the 1977 Player of the Year and winner of both the Masters and British Opens, opened up with a victory in Tucson last week but said he really wasn't playing well. He was denied the opportunity for the practice he felt he needed due to a hurried trip home because of a death in family.

Also on hand are the Wadkins brothers, PGA champ Lanny and Bobby, who chased Watson to the Tucson title, Lee Trevino, Bruce Lietzke and Johnny Miller.

Heavy rains Tuesday and continuing showers Wednesday left the course very wet and heavy, with casual water standing in some areas.

"It's going to make the course play longer, and that's a penalty to short hitters like me," Green said. "It's always a pretty tight little course and this is going to make it even tighter, put more pressure on your tee shots."

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS-TV, with Sunday's play scheduled to end prior to the start of the Super Bowl game.

Knox Makes Move To Buffalo Team

BUFFALO (AP) — Chuck Knox, a coach whose Los Angeles Rams were consistent winners but never quite made it to the Super Bowl, is the new head coach of the Buffalo Bills, the National Football League team announced Wednesday.

Bills owner Ralph Wilson said Knox, 45, signed a multi-year contract Tuesday night, but the terms were not made public.

Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Rams, has been disappointed by his team's failure to go all the way and has been talking in Los Angeles with Don Coryell, the St. Louis Cardinal coach who is unhappy with his situation.

In announcing the Knox signing, Wilson said: "As soon as it became evident Coach Knox might be available, we sought and received permission from Carroll Rosenbloom to speak with him."

"We are positively delighted to land a man of Chuck Knox' stature as the new head coach of the Bills. Chuck has experienced nothing but success with the Los Angeles franchise and we know he is just the man to restore the Bills to a position of prominence in professional football."

In Buffalo, Knox will replace Jim Ringo, who was dropped after a 3-11 season in 1977. Ringo had been named head coach five games into the 1976 season, another disappointment for the Bills, who finished 2-12.

In his five seasons in Los Angeles, Knox's teams have won 54 games, lost 15 and tied one while winning five straight titles in the league's NFC West Division.

In the first round of the 1977 playoffs, Minnesota beat them 14-7 in an upset.

Before coming to the Rams, Knox was an assistant coach with the New York Jets and Detroit.

In Buffalo, Knox will inherit a team that had respectable 9-5 records in 1973 and 1974 and an 8-6 mark in 1975 before taking a nosedive.

The most conspicuous asset that Knox will inherit — star runningback O.J. Simpson — may jump ship even before

Detroit Names Clark As New Head Mentor

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Monte Clark, new coach of the Detroit Lions, apparently has found the semi-autonomy he expected but says he didn't get at San Francisco in 1976.

Clark signed a five-year contract Wednesday as a replacement for fired coach Tommy Hudspeth. But Clark also was given the new title of "Director of Football Operations" by William Clay Ford, owner of the National Football League club — theoretically diluting some of the power of General Manager Russ Thomas.

Ford said that job will allow the 40-year-old Clark to have "sole responsibility for all team-related activities," including "the college draft, scouting, waivers and trades."

"His trades, however, are subject to my personal approval," Ford said.

Clark, who quit as San Francisco in 1976, said the Buffalo Bills — who Wednesday signed Chuck Knox as coach — also wanted him.

"I did have talks with them," he said of the Bills. "But my heart was here right along. This is the opportunity I felt was the best available and I'm very pleased to have this one."

At San Francisco, Clark reportedly was disenchanted with the power General Manager Joe Thomas had over the operation of the team.

Clark said the responsibility Ford has given him with the Lions is similar to the deal he had worked out with the 49ers, "but when I went there, changes came about which precluded that."

He said he was offered more money and an extension of his contract, "but I wouldn't compromise my thought in those regards."

Clark said he would attend the Super Bowl in New Orleans on Sunday, then plunge into his new job Monday. He said he wouldn't start naming assistants until then.

"Everybody's going to have a fresh, new start," he said. "It's important to me what they (the players) do from now on."

Clark said he saw only one Lions' game this season, an exhibition game at the Pontiac Silverdome against Cincinnati. He won't make an assessment of Lions' personnel, he said, until he has more time to study the team.

In 1977, Clark said, he kept contact with various coaches around the league and scouted several games for the Miami Dolphins. Before joining the 49ers in 1976 he spent six years as an assistant to Don Shula at Miami. He was offensive line coach the first two seasons, then overall offensive coach.

The Dolphins' offense under Clark was keyed on a strong running attack, and Clark said he will stress a similar system with Detroit.

A star lineman at Southern California, Clark was a fourth-round draft pick of the 49ers in 1959. He was traded to Dallas in 1962, then the Cowboys peddled him to Cleveland in 1963. He played in four NFL championship games.

Clark was born in Fillmore, Calif. He is married and has three sons.

NCAA

To be a member of Division I-AA, somewhat below the super powers, an institution would be required to sponsor a minimum of eight sports in Division I, including football, and to schedule more than 50 percent of its games against I-A or I-AA members.

For Division I members with no football teams — schools like Marquette, the 1977 national basketball champion — a school would be required to schedule at least 75 percent of its basketball games against Division I teams.

The five affected football conferences have submitted a resolution to put a four-year moratorium on reorganization — the NCAA currently has Divisions I, II and III — but the convention parliamentarian has said that legislation is unconstitutional. The 1977 convention tabled a different reorganization plan.

Although the withdrawal threat is not being thrown around as much as it has in the past, it is very real.

"No one wants to pull out of the NCAA, absolutely no one that I know of," said Wade Walker, athletic director at the University of Oklahoma. "But if we're forced into a position where we can't control our own destiny...where do we go from there?"

"Speaking for the Big Eight Conference, I think we would call a meeting of the College Football Association to determine what direction we should take."

"But I have been instructed to go to all lengths to have division come about under the NCAA umbrella."

The CFA was formed several years by most of the nation's top football powers — the Big Eight, Southeastern, Southwest, Atlantic Coast and Western Athletic Conferences, plus the leading independents — and said its aims were to work "within the framework of the NCAA."

If Division I-A does come about, its members would be able to change the scholarship and coaching staff limitations as soon as next year's NCAA Convention.

"I don't see Division I-A throwing all its limits aside," Walker said. "But we want to be able to vote and dictate what the majority of our people want. We're trying to find a level all of us can live with."

Area Ratings Shuffled In South Plains Loops

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Less than 12 hours before, Keith Gast had watched his Southland Eagles become the final South Plains boys team to taste defeat.

But the second-year mentor didn't appear too ruffled by the development Wednesday. "I think we realized we weren't unbeatable. We'd won four games by two points or less and five other times we had to come from behind in the final period," he said of the antics that saw Southland, long the doormat of 8-B, zoom to a 17-0 mark.

"But we just weren't ready to play Tuesday night and Wilson was. They really took it to us and you've got to give them all the credit."

"I feel we'll use that as a learning tool and come back strong. We've actually got the toughest part of our schedule ahead, with New Home, Ropesville, and Meadow to close out the first round."

Despite the 40-38 setback, Southland fell only one notch to third in the Avalanche-Journal's area cage poll, which saw revisions in just about every classification although Abilene Cooper was the only No. 1 ranked team to tumble.

Southland was picked last — again — in the 8-B chase and had lost 47 consecutive league encounters and had not won more than four games in any season this decade.

But Gast has found the winning combination in two freshmen—6-2 twins Perry and Gary Hill—, a sophomore—5-8 Sherman Dougherty—and two seniors—6-1 Nathan Wheeler and 5-7 Frank Valdez.

Of the 42 students attending Southland High School, 22 are boys and 15 are on the varsity, with seven logging much playing time. The starting five are all in double figures with Perry Hill's 14 leading the way. The No. 6 man, 6-0 soph Andrew Hill, is averaging nine a game and 5-9 junior Barry Alvis also has seen much action.

"We had good shooters last year," Gast explained, "and we have some experience back. Plus, our junior high team was 15-3 last year and I just think we have some good players and they're starting to jell."

"Basically, we went back to fundamentals because when I got here the kids were very weak and needed a lot of work in that area. And they still do. But they've taken a good interest in basketball and worked real hard and deserve everything they get."

Sands remained No. 1 in Class B, but Motley County jumped from fifth to the runner-up spot with a win over Jayton, which fell from the listings. Southland dipped to third, with Whitharral falling a notch after losing to Spade and Christ The King assuming the No. 5 spot.

Estacado and Canyon's girls in AAA, Dimmitt and Slaton's girls in AA, Lubbock Christian and Stanton's girls in A and Jayton's girls in B retained the other No. 1 spots.

Cooper fell to third in AAAA after losing to Midland Lee, which jumped to second. Abilene took over as No. 1 there.

Estacado beat both the No. 2 and 4 team last week, but Dunbar and Lamesa held their positions. Monahans, which has won 15 of its last 16, retained third and Borger, despite losing to Pampa, ranked No. 5 in AAAA, held fifth.

Morton and Friona continue to rank 2-3 in AA, with Tulia jumping a notch to fourth and newcomers Slaton and Denver City sharing the No. 5 spot.

In Class A, Lorenzo jumped two notches to second and Shallowater slid a spot to third. Paducah, which had its Tuesday game cancelled by the Gas Company — low pressure — fell a spot to fourth and Petersburg, which has won six of its last seven in evening its record at 6-6, took over fifth.

Muleshoe vaulted into the AA runner-up spot on the girls poll, with Lockney, Roosevelt and Idalou slipping a spot each.

Hale Center knocked off No. 2 New Deal and No. 5 Ralls last week to leap from fourth to runner-up in A. New Deal and Springlake-Earth each slipped a notch and Shallowater took over the No. 5 spot.

Nazareth and Sands remained 2-3 in B, but Silverton and Klondike swapped spots after Sands whipped Klondike. Those five ranked B fem units have a combined 101-14 mark.

ALVIN HARRIS

Grennell, EHS Guard Honored

Estacado guard Alvin Harris and Monterey forward Margaret Grennell received this week's player of the week honors from The Avalanche-Journal.

Harris scored 21 points last Friday night and added 20 more Tuesday in district victories over Dunbar and Lamesa. The 6-0 Matador fired in an 18-foot jumper with three second left to lift EHS past DHS 81-79 in a vital overtime game at the Dunbar gym.

The three-year starter earned coach J.J. Wood's vote of confidence before the time arrived to produce.

"Alvin's been through this before," coach Wood said. "I didn't tell him 'Go shoot' but I had confidence."

Monterey girls coach Phil Hood also shows plenty of confidence in his 5-7 junior Grennell, who leads her team in scoring with 394 points. Grennell scored 53 points in the last two games for Monterey, now 13-6.

Harris led a list of nominees which included Lubbock High' Scotty Garcia, Monterey's Craig Ehio, Christ The King's Ed Connors, Coronado's Jay Norton and Lubbock Christian's David Bryant.

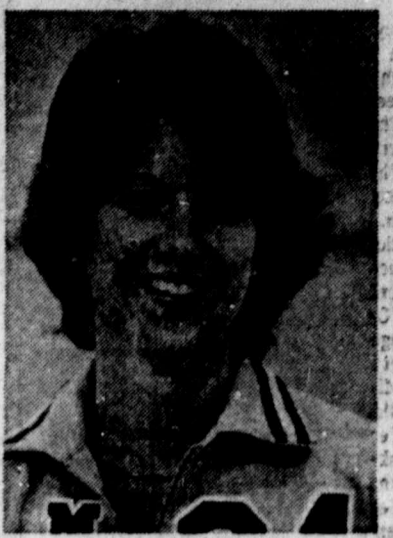

Garcia, a 5-4 Westerner guard, scored 22 points in Tuesday night's loss to Caprock.

Ehio grabbed seven rebounds and scored eight points in Monterey's win at Palo Duro. The 6-2 junior went 4 of 6 from the field in the game.

Connors, a CTK sophomore, performed capably with 30 points, 17 rebounds, 7 steals and 3 blocked shots in the Trojan victory over Amarillo Alamo Catholic.

Norton climaxed Coronado's comeback over Tascosa with two key goals in the final moments.

Other girls nominees behind Grennell were Estacado's Kathy Huey, Dunbar's Shirley Mooney, Lubbock Christian High's Kelly Meyers, Coronado's Kathi Wyatt and a trio of Christ The King guards, Teresa O'Loughlin, Cindy Bacon and Linda Giovannetti.

Huey scored 16 points against Ector and held her opponent to three field goals. She grabbed four rebounds and five steals against Monterey.

Meyers collected 41 points in two games, shooting 56 percent from the field along with 18 rebounds.

Wyatt scored 22 points in the 58-52 loss to Levelland. She shot 60 percent from the field and 50 percent from the line.

The trio of O'Loughlin, Bacon and Giovannetti held their last three opponents to a total of 118 points.

Odessa, NMMI Lead WJC Loop

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Just name a team, any team, in the Western Junior College Conference and said team has impressed Odessa coach Ron Mayberry.

That may sound strange, especially since Mayberry's Wranglers share the league's top spot at 4-1 with New Mexico Military Institute.

But that one loss was to NMMI, of whom Mayberry says, "They beat us worst (95-79) than any other team has since I've been here. They've got some big people and have a lot of discipline and appear to have everything it takes to win the conference. But really, I've been impressed with everyone."

"Down at the Laredo Tournament last weekend it was clear that we and Midland were the class of the tournament. Everyone was asking if all WJCC teams were as impressive. I think they are."

"This is only my second year in the league, but I think it's definitely stronger than last year. Take Frank Phillips, for example. They were picked last, but right now are 3-1 and have beaten Amarillo and Midland, which are two pretty fair teams."

Odessa knows about Midland. The Wranglers and Chaps have already met three times. Odessa won 86-85 in the finals of the Odessa Tournament, Midland took an 81-77 verdict in the Laredo finals but two days later Odessa won a conference tilt.

"We've played six times since I've been here and before that (96-87) game, the widest margin had been four points," Mayberry pointed out.

Odessa faces Clarendon tonight. Due to the weather, Mayberry and the team departed Odessa early Wednesday morning. Other games on tap tonight find Midland at Western Texas, Howard at New Mexico JC, South Plains at Frank Phillips and NMMI at Amarillo. SPC's fens host Frank Phillips in the lone women's game.

Mayberry feels there are many reasons for Odessa's success this year. One is Billy Ray Ennis. "He wasn't heavily recruited," Mayberry said of the Midland Lee product. "He's a 6-1 guard and there's not a great demand for 6-1 guards. We didn't expect him to make the team, but yet he's starting and leading us in scoring."

"We've also got some kids from Houston who not too many people knew about and they've done a super job. We didn't recruit any super players, but they're all playing together well and that helps."

MOB Signup Ends Tonight

Final registration for the Monterey Optimist Basketball (MOB) program is scheduled tonight at Smylie Wilson Junior High, league officials announced.

Boys in grades three through eight are eligible to participate in the program, which is launching its eighth season here.

Tonight's session will be from 7 to 9. Players should be accompanied by a parent or guardian, and those entering the program for the first time should bring a copy of their birth certificate.

Following registration, tryouts for fifth and sixth graders will be held Jan. 21 and for seventh and eighth graders on Jan. 28. Third and fourth graders will be placed on teams according to neighborhoods and elementary schools attended.

Registration fee is $15.

Globetrotters Set Lubbock Appearance

The 1978 world tour of the famed Harlem Globetrotters makes a brief stop in Lubbock Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Auditorium.

The 'Trotters, now in their second half-century of performing, will play from coast to coast and from the Mexican Border to Canada this year. They have played in more than 1500 North American cities during their 52-year history.

Two former Southwest Conference players will be performing for this team Saturday. Jimmy Blacklock, an ex-Texas player, and former Texas A&M performer Steve Jones.

The 6-2, 180-pound Blacklock is a native of Houston and was all-SWC during his Longhorn career. Jones is a 6-7, 198-pound rookie with the Globetrotters and also a Houston native. He was a two-year starter for the Aggies after attending Hill Junior College. His brother, Dwight, is a star for the NBA's Houston Rockets. He led the Aggies in scoring and assists during his senior season.

Theodis Lee, a former Houston standout, also plays for the 'Trotters. He is a 6-8, 225-pounder.

The team leader is Marques Haynes, an incredible dribbler and ball-handler. He is considered one of the best ball-handlers in basketball and also serves as coach of the Globetrotters' International Team.

The Globetrotters call themselves the world's greatest family entertainment, and they have the attendance records to back up the claim.

They set an all-time attendance record in Europe last year, and they also hold the world attendance record for an outdoor basketball game and the indoor pro basketball attendance mark. The outdoor mark is 75,000, set in Berlin's Olympic Stadium in 1951. The indoor record is 31,112 in the Louisiana Superdome in 1975.

The 'Trotters have performed before more than 85 million persons after over 13,000 games. Last season, the team set attendance marks in such cities as Philadelphia, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Oakland, St. Petersburg, Vancouver and Seattle.

This year, the club will play in more than 400 cities on four continents, including South America, Australia and Europe, as well as North America.

The 'Trotters have played in small high-school gyms and some of the nation's largest stadiums and arenas. In the early days, the troupe consisted of owner Abe Saperstein and five players, driving from village to village in an old car. Today, the tour includes more than 30 persons.

Flying Queens Take On North Carolina State

RALEIGH, N.C. (Special)—The top-ranked Wayland Baptist Flying Queens tangle with fourth-ranked North Carolina State here tonight with a crowd of more than 6,000 fans and a statewide television audience as witnesses.

The Queens come in with a 12-0 record and drew 38 of 40 first-place votes in the latest women's basketball poll of college coaches. Tennessee is No. 2, getting the other two first-place votes. LSU is third in front of the Wolfpack.

Gurney, Unser Form New Racing Team

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Dan Gurney and Bobby Unser, two of auto racing's all-time greats, will join forces on the USAC championship circuit this year with a new car and new racing team sponsored by Atlantic Richfield Co., it was announced Wednesday.

Gurney, president of All American Racers Inc., in nearby Santa Ana, is building the 1978 ARCO-graphite Eagle and will manage the team. Unser, two-time winner of the Indianapolis 500, will be the driver of the car aimed at this year's Indy race. The car is owned by businessman Teddy Yip.

The planned return to Indy will mark ARCO's first appearance as a sponsor there in some 40 years. One of the firm's predecessor companies dominated the race for more than a decade in the event's early years.

The company will also sponsor two Formula Super Vee cars. That team will be managed by USAC and Indy 500 veteran Bill Simpson, who will drive one of the cars.

The other will be driven by Charles "Pete" Conrad Jr., commander of Apollo 12 and one of the American astronauts who have walked on the moon.

North Carolina State is 9-1, having lost only to Tennessee 70-65.

The Wolfpack is led by 6-2 sophomore Genia Beasley, who is averaging 20.7 points and 13 rebounds a game. Ronnie Laughlin is hitting 11.9 points and 5.9 Christy Earnhardt 10.5 points.

Tonight's game will start a three-day test for the Queens. Friday night, they take on 14th-ranked Montclair State of New Jersey in the first round of the Old Dominion Tournament at Norfolk, Va. Eighth-ranked Old Dominion (7-1) will take on High Point, N.C., (3-3) in the other game. Winners play Saturday night for the championship.

Montclair is 3-4 for the year but has lost to national champion Delta State, to LSU and to No. 15 Penn State. One win was over Tennessee. Leading the Montclair team is all-America Carol "Blaze" Blazejowski, a 5-11 forward who is averaging 32.2 points a game.

Wayland continued to lead the nation in the coaches poll conducted by the Philadelphia Inquirer. The top twenty is sprinkled with Texas teams, as the University of Texas is ninth, Stephen F. Austin 13th, and Baylor 20th.

Miami-Ohio Player Said Ineligible

OXFORD, Ohio (AP)—Starting center Bernard Newman, the No. 3 scorer and rebounder for Miami of Ohio's basketball team, has been declared scholastically ineligible, a school spokesman announced Wednesday.

The 6-foot-7 native of Piqua, Ohio was averaging 12 points and six rebounds for the 7-4 Redskins, who were pre-season favorites to win the Mid-American Conference.

Bill Lake, a 6-foot-11 senior, was named to replace him in the starting lineup against Dayton Wednesday night.

His ineligibility does not affect the team's record, the spokesman said.

Newman had a career high of 22 points in a road victory against Purdue earlier this year.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A CAMPAIGN TO MAINTAIN MARKETING practices which have been credited with having helped to bring improved cattle prices has been announced by the National Cattlemen's Association.

Tom Remington, chairman of the NCA's marketing committee, says the association will be pointing out the cost-price values of continuing to market fed cattle in an orderly and timely way.

"The fourth quarter of 1977 saw feedlots more current in marketings than at any time in several years, and prices reflected it," he adds.

"We sold choice fed steers in the fourth quarter for $3 per hundredweight more than a year earlier, despite the fact that fed cattle marketings exceeded numbers in the last quarter of 1976."

TOTAL BEEF AND RED MEAT OUTPUT was down somewhat because of smaller non-fed slaughter, Remington says, but adds that "it's clear that the market has really been helped by the sale of cattle with no more days on feed than necessary."

Sale of cattle as soon as the animals were ready, he says, resulted in lower average weights and improved feeders' bargaining positions.

"In spite of more fed cattle in the slaughter mix, average dressed weights were down 10 pounds from a year earlier and this helped bring a 4 percent reduction in tonnage," Remington says. "Data from Cattle-Fax (a market analysis service sponsored by NCA) showed average days on feed down by 10 days."

The industry cannot afford to "rest on its laurels or get overly optimistic and return to over-feeding," Remington says.

"WE HAVE SUBSTANTIALLY MORE fed cattle to sell in the first half of 1978 than we had a year earlier or in the last quarter of 1977," he cautions.

"However, non-fed slaughter will be down. And if we sell fed cattle at lighter average weights, we actually may produce less beef the first part of this year than we did a year ago.

"That can be very important, for it looks as though we'll have record per capita supplies of red meat and poultry in 1978. The experience of recent years shows beef prices have trouble showing substantial strength when total meat supplies are large."

Remington says he is well aware that basic economics and individual decisions, in large measure, would determine when cattle are marketed. However, he maintains, feeders "should be fully aware of cost and price relationships when they make their marketing decisions."

AN AVERAGE OF SEVEN FEWER DAYS on feed, for example, can mean a lot, Remington says.

One less week of feeding on all of the feedlot cattle in the nation could mean 4.5 million pounds less beef in a week's period.

Assuming, conservatively, that 1 percent less beef means a 1 percent better price, those seven fewer days could mean at least a $5 per head better return, according to NCA calculations.

"Furthermore," Remington says, "prompt marketing eliminates the high cost of gain which is experienced after cattle reach normal market weight—further improving returns to cattlemen."

Higher Cotton Yields Possible

DALLAS (Special) — Farmers may be able to attain greater cotton yields by placing cotton rows closer together, research being conducted by Oklahoma State University indicates.

OSU agricultural engineer Dr. David Batchelder said that although the differences in yields monitored at the Irrigation Research Station near Altus, during recent years do not prove to be statistically significant, the trend is for higher yields when rows are spaced at eight inches and four inches apart as compared with the normal 12 inches.

He made his remarks at the annual Beltwide Cotton Production-Mechanization Conference here this week at the Sheraton-Dallas Hotel.

"The numerical differences are there," Batchelder explained. "Using two rows per bed gives greater yields than using a single row, and using three rows gives greater yields than two rows."

The number of plants growing in each of the 40-inch beds used in the research was kept constant regardless of the plant spacing, and while the experiment was carried on for four years, only three of the years are used statistically because a different harvesting method was used during the fourth year.

In addition to yield, Batchelder and his associates also conducted a ginning evaluation on the harvests, gathering information on the uniformity of the harvested product, the strength of the cotton lint and various other attributes of the crop.

Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Director W.M. Bost outlined his state's cotton program before the conference Wednesday and said the emphasis may shift in the future from production assistance to marketing.

Bost said extension programs are designed to help growers face and meet the challenges of crises as they occur.

"Farmers must have relief in one or more of three major areas: input costs, prices received, and higher yields. Since 1970, the farmer's input costs for all commodities have increased 80 percent, while his products have increased in value by only 60 percent," he said.

He said the total farm value of the 1976 cotton crop was $3.6 billion. The Texas crop was worth $1 billion at the farm level and Mississippi's cotton was $500 million.

"In 1975, extension workers across the Cotton Belt spent more than 95 man-years on cotton production and marketing programs," the extension director said. "During that year, about half a million contacts were made by extension on half of cotton."

He said U.S. Department of Agriculture records show that most of the time state extension services spend on cotton programs is devoted to production.

keting program to teach cotton farmers how and when to sell cotton on forward contracts?" asked Bost.

He added that changing technology on the farm may create a demand for extension program changes and the future may point to new ways to help farmers.

Bost also advocated a new approach that he called an interdisciplinary concept that recognizes all farming and business practices must work together for success in agriculture.

"I believe we have the technology and the leadership to help today's cotton farmer survive," he said.

The conference is sponsored by the National Cotton Council and the Cotton Foundation, in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute, National Agricultural Chemicals Association, land-grant universities, and other farm and industrial groups.

Beef Cattle Make Recovery In Trading

CHICAGO — Cattle futures rebounded from an early loss of 17 points to finish at the day's highs on gains of seven to 50 points Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

January paced the upturn on sales of 9,207 contracts.

Fresh buying was generated by an improved technical situation coupled with light arrivals and a firmer tone to beef, despite heavy slaughter. The discount under cash also was bullish, even though the latter was lower.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up one-half cent at 68 1/4 cents for all weights. The six markets expect 12,600 head today.

Cash cattle were steady to off 50 points, with the best top at $45.50 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 152,000 head.

Hog futures were up 67 points in the nearby to off 52 points in July before finishing 50 points lower to 30 higher. August was off the most with December up the most. Sales were 6,244 contracts.

Prices slipped to the lowest levels in one week on heavy hog runs and lower prices. However, this was tempered by a light pace of kill coupled with further strength in pork products.

Wholesale hams were up one-half to 1 1/2 cents at 79 to 83 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, a three-week high. The six markets expect 28,500 head today.

Cash hogs were off 75 cents to $2.50 per hundredweight, with the best top at $47.50. Slaughter was 292,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures ended 95 cents higher to 57 cents lower on a turnover of 7,677 contracts. February was up the most with August at the heaviest loss.

The nearby shot up 1.25 cents and set a new season's high along with March, highest since October 1976, before resistance was met. Heavy reduction in local and out of town storage tended to offset heavy hog runs and lower prices.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up one-half cent at 57 to 62 1/4 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, highest since August.

Swisher Soil Fertility Day Jan. 25

TULIA — Swisher County Soil Fertility Day, set Jan. 25 in the district courtroom of the courthouse here, will include discussions on figuring budgets and comparing cost of production on corn, grain sorghum and cotton.

Marvin Sartin of Lubbock, area economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, will speak on budgets for crops grown in Swisher County. All aspects of land, labor, fertilizer, irrigation, insecticides and depreciation will be discussed.

Cost comparisons and loan value also will be figured. Sartin will be available for questions on problems after his talk.

A representative of the Texas Department of Agriculture will tell how the pesticide act concerns farmers and their relationship with chemical dealers. Several chemicals used on Swisher County farms are being placed on the restricted chemical list, said David Gibson, county extension agent, and if a producer applies his own chemical he must be licensed to buy and apply it to his own land.

are present representatives. One term expires and a new representative will be named after lunch during the program.

This year a program is being planned for wives of farmers who attend, according to Judy Carlisle, county extension agent. Ann Smith of Amarillo, an interior decorator, will discuss "Decorating with Color."

Mrs. Smith is a graduate of the New York School of Interior Design and worked for a firm in Houston five years before moving to Amarillo. Dr. Roland Roberts, with the Agriculture Extension Service in Lubbock, will talk on "Care of House Plants."

Special Grain Elevator Safety Review Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, wants a special task force to "thoroughly review" the federal government's grain elevator safety effort in the wake of recent explosions which have killed more than 50 persons.

Clark, a member of the Senate agriculture committee, asked for the interagency task force this week in letters to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall.

The two departments should set up the task force "to thoroughly review current legislative authorities and administrative structures and practices relating to elevator safety," Clark said.

"This review should be conducted in cooperation with the states and the trade, and it should be mounted and completed as quickly as possible," he said.

"I feel this step is necessary because the current diversity and complexity of the elevator-safety effort appears to have created a great deal of confusion of the question of exactly who is responsible for what," Clark said.

Screwworm Menace Decrease Observed

MISSION, Texas (AP) — A cold winter and a more vigorous strain of sterile fly helped in the vast decrease in screwworm cases reported in Texas animals in 1977, according to Dr. M.E. Meadows.

Dr. Meadows, the director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture screwworm eradication program said 39 cases were reported in Texas in 1977. The 1976 total was 39,241.

Meadows said the cold winter reduced the number of screwworms wintering in Texas. The heatier fly was produced in increased numbers at the U.S.-Mexico facility in Tuxtla Gutierrez, Mexico, he reported.

The director warned that a single unreported case of the parasite "can seriously endanger the effort to eradicate all screwworms north of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec in Mexico by 1982."

The most recent screwworm case was reported from the West Texas city of Clint in October 1977.

OSHA ISSUES RULES

WASHINGTON (AP) — New regulations covering some 1,500 known or suspected cancer-causing substances found in the workplace will be issued soon, the head of the Occupational Health and Safety Administration (OSHA) said this week.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $1.35 a bale lower to $2.00 higher Wednesday.

Profit taking caused prices to fall from initial advances, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 93 points to 50.55 cents a pound Tuesday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton No. 2 futures Wednesday on the New York Cotton Exchange.

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was active on Wednesday. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was good.

Growers sold mixed lots of new crop cotton at 150 to 300 points above 1977 loan rates.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations remained steady.

Classing offices graded 14,000 samples. The season's total stood at 2,833,000, compared with 1,618,000 last year. About 3,000 samples were received and approximately 25,000 were carried over as unclassified.

LUBBOCK SPOT COTTON Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, uncompressed, free of all charges in the warehouse at the market.

Comedian Committed To Films Made For General Audiences

CHAGRIN FALLS, Ohio (AP) — Television and film funnyman Tim Conway maintains there's an unfulfilled demand for comedy movies aimed at general audiences.

"There's a market for good comedy — movies without anyone taking their clothes off," Conway said. "There's room for good solid comedy where you actually go into a theater and laugh."

The 44-year-old father of six commented during an interview at the home of his parents in this community east of Cleveland. He was on a holiday visit to the home in which he grew up.

Conway said he has 10 more episodes of the Carol Burnett Show to complete for CBS this year. "I'm waiting to see what Carol does next year," he said, adding he wants to continue with the program.

Conway has been on the Burnett show for 11 years and has been a regular member of the cast for the past three seasons.

But he said he has been active in motion pictures in the meantime, with a commitment to make G-rated comedy films for the International Picture Show Co. of Atlanta over the next four years. G-rated films, according to the Motion Picture Association of America Inc., are for general audiences — all ages admitted.

Conway said he has been trying for seven years to launch a series of comedy films he wrote for the Atlanta firm, which he said had money but no scripts.

His first venture for International Picture Show Co., "The Billion Dollar Hobo," is being shown in Indiana and will be released nationwide in the next several weeks.

He said he will start work on another film next year and is committed to two films a year over the next four years for the Atlanta film maker. Five of the scripts are his.

Conway said the Walt Disney Studios and other major studios had turned down his proposals. He said he was told that there was not a large enough market for comedies rated for general audiences.

"I think there's a tremendous market for general entertainment," he said. "Most people think of special effects or saccharin kid-and-dog stories when 'G' movies are mentioned. But Laurel and Hardy made G-rated movies and yet they were good comedy."

Conway said he is not going into competition with the Disney studios for the general entertainment audience.

"There's more room in the course of a year than the release of just four 'G' pictures," he said. "I like to be closely identified with that type of movie. It's the thing I do best."

Conway, who was featured on the Steve Allen Show and the McHale's Navy series during the 1960s, said he was reluctant to leave his directing job at Cleveland's WJW-TV, now WJKW-TV, to go to the West Coast in 1961. He said the station's program manager "fired me to get me to go."

Post Office Hits Diet Scheme

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service has cut off mail service to Brad Mitchell and Amazing Diets, Inc., of Detroit, Mich.

Officials charged Mitchell with mail fraud in the sale of a weight loss plan named the "Fat Burning System."

Under the order money orders will not be paid to the firm and no mail will be delivered unless it is not connected with the weight loss sales.

Money Regulations Changed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has changed its rules to allow residents of the United States to send money to close relatives in Cuba and Vietnam.

This has not been allowed in the past.

Under the new rules, individuals can send up to $300 in any three-month period to close relatives in Vietnam. In addition, a one-time payment of up to $750 would be allowed to permit the relative to leave Vietnam.

In the case of Cuba, the rules will allow sending up to $500 in a three-month period and a one-time payment of $500 for the individual to leave Cuba.

Vermonters Play Snow Golf

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — This week's bitter winds and swirling snow sent most New Englanders running for cover, but in Stowe, Vermonters found the weather just right for a round of golf — snow golf, to be exact.

Hearty foursomes defied gusts, snow and a frigid wind chill factor to tee off Tuesday for the Labatt Snow Golf Tournament, the latest in a series of games in the town's week-long winter carnival.

Using purple tees and balls, 120 golfers slipped and slid their way across the course, which resembled solid concrete more than the lush green fairways of summer.

The game featured other adaptations of the popular warm-weather sport: golfers were required to knock balls through snow tires and empty anti-freeze bottles, rather than into holes.

"The weather put us behind, but in true snow golf tradition, we carried on," organizer Glen McBeth said.

Inmates To Honor Warden

STRINGTOWN, Okla. (AP) — They may not have had too many to choose from, but perhaps it's the thought that counts.

Inmates at Stringtown Reformatory plan to honor Warden Mack Alford as "Boss of the Year" at a banquet Monday night.

"This warden here has quite a colorful history," a convict said. "He's firm but he shoots straight."

"He'll tell you like it is. The men here know this," said Gene Bissel, who is serving 25 years for armed robbery.

The award will be presented by the prison's Jaycees chapter.

The group also plans to honor state Sen. John Young, whose work in bringing church groups to visit inmates has increased attendance at the prison chapel "threefold," according to Bissel.

Tax Shelters Explained

WASHINGTON (AP) — You probably didn't want to hear this, but it's time to begin thinking about your income tax again.

And if you're bothered by the stories of rich folks avoiding taxes through shelters, remember you can shelter some income, too.

For example, if you have bought U.S. Savings Bonds, you don't have to pay income tax on the interest until you cash in the bonds.

You can pay taxes every year on that interest, of course, but officials of the Savings Bond Division point out that you may be better off not to.

Let's say you keep the bonds until you retire — they keep earning interest even after maturity. Then the tax on the interest would be at a lower rate because your income would likely be less.

Or here's another possibility: You and your spouse both work and save money to buy a house. In ordinary savings you would have to pay annual taxes on the interest earned.

But if you buy bonds the tax wouldn't be due until you cashed them in. And if one of you stopped working to raise the family once the house was purchased, you would be in a lower tax bracket and would pay less on the income from the bonds.

MT. EREBUS

Mt. Erebus is one of three active Antarctic volcanoes. It is located on Ross Island and towers 13,200 feet.

There's more room in the course of a year than the release of just four 'G' pictures," he said. "I like to be closely identified with that type of movie. It's the thing I do best."

Film Star Of '40s Back For New Effort

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lionel Stander, archetypal comic-revved of 1930s and 1940s movies, has returned to Hollywood after almost 30 years of professional and personal exile.

Standar, of the hurdy-gurdy voice, mismatched eyes and pugnacious face, was a movie fixture in the old days. He played inept gangsters, wacky pals of the leading man and obnoxiously funny miscreants.

But it was Standar's real life role that led to his undoing.

A political activist, he was blacklisted by the studios. He was called before the red-hunting House Un-American Activities Committee in 1953. Although never charged or convicted of any crime, Standar's career was ruined.

Politics aside, Standar's private life did little to endear him to the blue nosers of a quarter century ago. He was a legendary swinger with more wives and girl friends than he could count.

Today Standar, approaching his 70th birthday, appears to be as lusty, and robustly unconventional as ever. He dresses strictly mod and still has an eye for the ladies.

He is married to his sixth wife, a Dutch beauty 38 years his junior, and is the father of a 5-year-old daughter.

The couple met in Italy, where Standar lived in splendor for the past decade, earning a fortune in spaghetti westerns and other Italian cinema pasta.

In a career that spans almost 50 years, Standar appeared in 48 Broadway productions and 200 movies. The most curious statistic in his acting record is 50 Italian films made in the past 10 years.

"When I moved from Rome last year I'd worked in more Italian movies than any Italian in town," Standar rumbled in his unmistakable basso.

"In Hollywood it's almost impossible to work in more than one picture at a time. Over there you do several at once, starring in one and playing supporting roles in others.

"It works like this. A producer hires your services for 10 weeks, but only pays you for six weeks because you take four weeks off in the middle of production. You fill in those four weeks with other jobs.

"Say the big picture pays you $100,000 total. You pick up $25,000 for the small jobs. Sometimes I did three or four pictures in a couple of months.

"People in America think of me as a gravel-voiced gangster. But in Italian pictures I played aristocrats, popes and cardinals."

Standar isn't altogether fluent in Italian. But language presented no problem because in Italy all movies are dubbed, even those with all-Italian casts. Happily, Standar's distinctive voice was not lost in the dubbing rooms. An Italian was found with a voice so near his own "that I can't tell the difference myself."

Of his 50 Italian films only two have ever been released in the United States, and they weren't memorable.

"Italian movies are like some Italian wines," Standar said, grinning. "They don't travel well. You take them one kilometer out of Italy and they collapse."

Much as he loved the dolce vita of Rome, Standar longed to return to American movies. He had a score to settle.

After his political difficulties he became a stockbroker in New York for 15 years, a miserable interlude made necessary by his inability to find work in Hollywood or in the theater.

"I was a success in business," Standar said. "I made a lot of money. But I was unhappy. I gained 30 pounds and drank too much. Acting is a horrible disease. Once it infects you, you never get well.

"That's why I went to Rome. And that's why I'm back in Hollywood now. My agent told me this is where the action is."

"But the funny thing is, I've done three more Italian movies since moving here, one in Mexico, one in New York and one in Germany."

Standar's first American film in years was "The Loved One" in 1965. It led to roles in "The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight," "The Black Bird" and "New York, New York."

Currently he is co-starring with Elliott Gould and Robert Mitchum in "Matilda," Albert (Godfather) Ruddy's comedy about a boxing kangaroo who knocks out the world's heavyweight champion.

"I've never fully recovered my Hollywood career," he mused. "Maybe I never

Opera Loses Conductor
 LONDON (AP) — The Royal Opera House was sold out and an all-star cast was ready to begin the evening's performance of Strauss' colorful operetta "Die Fledermaus."

But the conductor, Zubin Mehta, was nowhere to be found. There was no answer at his London apartment.

It all happened Tuesday night when the curtain failed to go up at Covent Garden. Behind the scenes, opera house staff were worried sick while the audience squirmed in their seats.

The house manager announced an unavoidable delay and alert operagoers noticed one member of the audience, the international opera star Placido Domingo, make a dramatic disappearance backstage.

But just then Mehta's telephone was answered. It was the sleepy conductor, who had dozed off after directing a rehearsal earlier in the day.

Legendary Gold Defies Hunters

By JEFF W. HENDERSON
A-J Correspondent

An 1885 bank robbery in Monterrey, Mexico, allegedly netted five young Texans $18,000 in gold coins. However, the price was high and the loot was never spent, so the story goes.

The money, worth much more today as collector's items or just for the value of the gold, reportedly lies buried somewhere in the vicinity of old Fort Belknap, northwest of Graham on the Brazos River.

It seems the five men had gone to Mexico to seek their fortunes. They had thought the way would be easy, according to the legend, not taking into consideration they would be spending money faster than they would make it.

In Monterrey, their funds went in the cantinas and flesh pots, so as they neared their last dollar the leader laid a plan to rob one of the city's banks.

The plan was set and carried out. The only chance for escape, however, was to ride north and cross the Rio Grande. This they did, pursued doggedly by Mexican Rurales, frontier police.

Near the border, the Mexicans caught up with the five men. In the ensuing battle there on the banks of the Rio Grande, four of the five young Texans died.

The battle took place late in the afternoon, so the fifth man managed to escape under the cover of darkness.

And, he had the $18,000 with him. He crossed into Texas and put as many miles as he could between himself and the Mexican border.

As he traveled north, he avoided all the small towns, stopping only to steal food from the many small ranches which dot that part of Texas.

As the bandit neared the larger towns of Northeast Texas, he realized he would have to stash the loot to avoid suspicion. He decided to hide the small fortune when he reached the vicinity of old, deserted Fort Belknap.

According to the legend, he stole an iron kettle from a ranch house, put the coins in the vessel and buried it, marking the location.

Near Fort Worth a couple of days later, the young man fell in with another group of outlaws. He traveled with them for several days before he had an argument with the leader of the band.

The argument was resolved with the Mexican bank robber lying on the ground mortally wounded. The other outlaws rode off. As fate would have it, two ranch hands who were working nearby heard the shot and came to investigate.

They found the dying man. There was nothing they could do except make him comfortable in his last minutes.

The bandit knew he was dying, and wanting to thank the two cowboys for their aid he told them of the $18,000, giving them directions as to how to find money.

The legend notes the man said the treasure was buried about a mile from the old fort. The money was supposed to be buried 250 steps north of a creek and 90 steps west of a stand of prickly pear.

The dying man said the site was marked with a forked stick sticking up on top of the treasure. There allegedly were three rocks piled against the forked stick.

The bandit died and was buried by the two ranch hands. They then discussed the tale they had been told and did not know whether to believe it. Then, one of the men thought it would be a good idea to take a look.

He followed the directions given by the dying man, and after days of searching, he located three rocks stacked one on top of the other. He found them stacked against a mesquite branch that was sticking up out of the ground.

But, before the cowboy could dig, a rider appeared on the scene. The cowboy dropped to his knees and unstacked the rocks and broke off the branch. Then, he began arranging the rocks as though he were building a fireplace.

The rider turned out to be the owner of the ranch. He escorted the cowboy off the property, saying he had been having problems with rustlers and did not want anyone on his ranch.

The cowboy was not deterred. He spent a couple of days at Graham (not far from the site of the old fort) and then hired on at a ranch north of the old fort. All he wanted to do was be in the area biding his time until the rustling problems had been settled so he could return for the treasure.

Several months later, he managed to ride back to where he thought the treasure was hidden. He could not find where he had unstacked the three rocks.

He returned several times but never found the $18,000. Finally, in old age, he told the tale in a bunkhouse one night. Others joined him in the search for the coins, according to legend, but the money was never found.

It is possible to go out to old Fort Belknap today. It is about three miles south of Texas 251 not far from Newcastle (founded in 1908).

The fort was established in 1851 on the Salt (Red) Fork of the Brazos River. There was a shortage of water at the old post, so the Army abandoned the fort in 1859.

The Butterfield (Southern Overland) Mail continued to use the buildings and the limited water. The Butterfield Route ran from Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and Memphis, Tenn., through Texas and on out to San Diego, Calif. The line was the longest continuous stage route in the world. Fort Belknap was a meal stop for the line.

During the Civil War, the Texas Frontier Battalion occupied the fort in an effort to quell Indian problems. Then, after the war, Federal forces again occupied the fort, abandoning it for the last time in 1867.

When Newcastle was built much later, some of the cut stone of the old fort's buildings were used in building structures in the town.

Today, the old fort has been partially restored. It is possible to tour the old site. The fort is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, except on Friday. There is a small admission fee.

Premier Blasts Seal Hunting Regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newfoundland Premier Frank Duff Moores sought on Wednesday to counter what he called "false propaganda" about Canadian seal hunting by telling "truth rather than falsehood." He was immediately accused of distorting the truth.

At issue was a pastboard copy of a congressional resolution saying that "seal hunting regulations in Canada allow the barbarous practice of killing the baby seals by repeatedly striking the heads of animals with clubs."

Moores pointed to this while asserting "the hypocrisy of your Congress is difficult to understand. While condemning the Canadian, Danish and Norwegian seal harvest, they allow the killing of seals in their own country."

Newfoundland sealers conduct a seal hunt each spring on the pack ice off Labrador. A number of conservationists have spoken out against the hunts, describing them as "barbarous" and endangering the seal population.
