By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — War hero Peter Townsend and Princess Margaret, breaking a silence of more than 20 years on their doomed romance, cannot seem to agree on which of them was responsible for the end of an affair that created headlines around the world.

of Britain ace remembers the night in October 1955 that he helped her write a renunciation of any idea of marriage with him.

County Adds Subdivision Paving Rule

AT COMMISSIONERS' instructions, Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin has revised Lubbock County's subdivision regulations to require developers to pave streets before they are turned over to the county for maintenance.

But Griffin said Monday there is no way to close a loophole that allows some developers to circumvent the standards.

The regulations govern the filing of plats, or detailed plans, for future subdivisions in unincorporated areas of Lubbock County. To get the approval of the commissioners court, the plats must meet certain standards on such things as the proposed layout, widths and construction quality of residential streets.

Condition For Plat Okay
Griffin revised the county regulations, as commissioners had requested, to require paved streets as a condition for plat approval.

The revised rules were presented to commissioners Monday. They apparently will be approved later this month.

However, as Griffin and commissioners noted, there is another way, besides filing a plat, to subdivide property.

Some developers simply chop their property into lots and start selling them by metes and bounds — that is, by an individual description of each piece of land. In so doing, they escape scrutiny by the county.

City of Lubbock officials have urged the county to seek an injunction against such developers, to prevent sloppy, unplanned subdivisions within the city's five-mile extrajurisdictional jurisdiction.

However, Griffin told commissioners Monday he can't find "any way to control the sale of land by metes and bounds. There's nothing you can do to stop that."

Unless a metes-and-bounds subdivision represents a "health hazard or public nuisance," there is little chance of getting an injunction, Griffin said.

Can Refuse Maintenance
But the county does have one recourse: it can refuse to maintain the streets of subdivisions that have not been duly platted and approved by the commissioners court, Griffin said.

That's the tack commissioners decided to take. Commissioner Coy Biggs, for example, said his Pct. 2 road-and-bridge crew will be instructed "not to step foot on any unplatted subdivisions from now on." That order, he said, will apply only to future subdivisions, however.

Snow, Rain Due Today

SNOW AND freezing rain are expected to invade the South Plains this afternoon as cloudy skies and near-freezing temperatures are expected to shroud the area through Wednesday.

Lubbock forecasters expect the Lubbock area to receive less than an inch of snow and less .01 of an inch of moisture by late tonight as a massive high pressure system remains over the state.

Cloudy skies should hold afternoon highs in the mid 30s today and Wednesday and force temperatures into the mid teens tonight and Wednesday night.

Forecasters are predicting a 20 percent chance of snow by this afternoon, rising to 50 percent tonight.

Southeasterly winds are expected to rise to 15 to 20 mph this afternoon, according to the National Weather Service.

Skies should begin clearing by Thursday.

Bergland Defends Carter Farm Views

HOUSTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Monday night that "we deeply sympathize" with farmers who are striking because of low commodity prices but defended the Carter administration's view that farmers must continue to assume much of their own risks.

"This administration stands by its policy and I think you agree that it is not possible and not the role of the federal government to guarantee all farmers a profit year after year."

Bergland's remarks were in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

are entitled to a fair return on their investment, their labor and their management skills," he said.

"While the nation, in its own self-interest, has a responsibility to keep agriculture productive and strong, the nation does not have the responsibility of assuming all the risks of farming and to guarantee full parity income," Bergland said.

The Colorado-based group, American Agriculture, called a nationwide farm strike on Dec. 14 in an effort to force commodity prices to 100 percent of parity, an indicator which theoretically would give farmers the same favorable purchasing power their forebearers had in 1910-14.

Farm prices are far below the full parity level, however, and last year, averaged 67 percent overall, the lowest annual average since 1933.

"However much we wish full parity prices, most farmers and farm organizations realize that full parity by government fiat would be a mistake," Bergland said.

"It would mean a government-established marketing system that would be an administrative and bureaucratic monstrosity," he said. "Farmers would lose all semblance of independence and

High Court To Rule On 'Dirty Words'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide if seven words the federal government considers indecent may be aired on radio or television.

At the same time, the justices turned down an attempt by 130 federal judges to insulate their salaries from inflation and sidestepped what may become an important test case on the rights of reporters to cover trials.

Senior Member Out
Only eight justices returned to the bench following a four-week recess, however. Justice William J. Brennan Jr., the court's senior member, was reportedly undergoing treatment for a cancerous tumor in his throat.

A court spokesman said Brennan, 71, would not sit in on cases heard and considered for 10 days, and will be receiving for the next seven weeks cobalt radiation treatment for a malignant tumor of the left vocal cord. Brennan began receiving the treatments three days before Christmas, the spokesman revealed.

"Dirty Words" Case
In the "dirty words" case, the court said it will hear an appeal by the Federal Communications Commission seeking to have reinstated its 1975 absolute ban on the seven words.

The words depict sexual or excretory organs and activities.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington struck down the ban, ruling that it was overbroad and vague.

The legal dispute began four years ago when a New York City FM radio station, WBAI, played a segment from the record album, "George Carlin, Occupation: Foolie."

Spoken By Comedian
Carlin, a popular comedian, spoke about seven "cuss words" in a satirical monologue. The FCC ruled that the monologue was obscene and banned the use of the words in any context.

The appeals court agreed with the station's owner, the Pacifica Foundation, that the Carlin monologue was not obscene and therefore deserved to be protected by the Constitution's free-speech guarantees.

Some of the words can be found in great literary pieces and even the Bible, the appeals court noted.

In another case, the justices refused to hear an appeal by federal judges who contend the Constitution guarantees them inflation-proof salaries. The judges had lost their case previously before the U.S. Court of Claims.

Tax Problems Aid Offered In Series

A SERIES by Ray De Crane giving advice on filling out income tax returns and pointing out ways taxpayers can trim their taxes continues in today's Avalanche-Journal.

The second segment of the 14-part series may be found on Page 6, Sec. B.

Copies of De Crane's 64-page book are not available at The Avalanche-Journal as was incorrectly stated in a Monday morning story.

However, a copy can be obtained by sending a check or money order for $1.25 to "Cut Your Own Taxes," in care of The Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Please allow three weeks for delivery.

The 130 judges filed their suit against the government after their salaries were raised only 5 percent between 1969 and 1977 — a period in which the cost of living rose more than 50 percent.

The judges had relied on that part of the Constitution which states judges' compensation "shall not be diminished."

And the justices sent back to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court an appeal that asked them to decide whether criminal trial courts, at the request of a defendant, automatically may bar the public and press from pretrial hearings and cut off all information about those hearings.

The state Supreme Court, in ruling on appeals from various news organizations in a trio of much-publicized criminal cases, upheld the practice. The news organizations' appeal to the Supreme Court challenged the constitutionality of such court orders.

The justices said they needed to know

Civil Rights Agency Accuses City Schools Of Rules Violations

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
THE U.S. OFFICE for Civil Rights says Lubbock schools are in violation of federal regulations for their alleged failure to provide special help to all students of limited English-speaking ability here.

Gilberto L. Herrera of Dallas, regional chief for the agency, said federal funds to the Lubbock Independent School District may be curtailed unless more bilingual teachers are hired, the district's bilingual education program expanded and other cited deficiencies are corrected.

But school officials said Monday Herrera's findings are wrought with errors. The district, they retort, is doing an "excellent, thorough" job of meeting the needs of children lacking in English language skills.

Rebuttal Planned
They plan to write a rebuttal to Herrera's letter, received late last week. If the discrepancies can't be resolved, school administrators said, the district will do its best to implement Herrera's recommendations — a task described as a "massive undertaking" by Ed Stokes, the district's director of elementary education.

The findings by the Office for Civil Rights are unrelated — indeed, school officials said, in some ways contrary — to the U.S. Justice Department's push for a systemwide desegregation plan for Lubbock public schools.

The office conducted a review of Lubbock and about 330 other school districts in 26 states for compliance with the U.S. Supreme Court's 1974 decision in Lau vs. Nichols. In that case, involving students of Chinese descent in San Francisco, the court ruled that a school system's failure to provide special assistance to pupils not proficient in English constitutes a violation of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

"Observations Obsolete"
The information for Herrera's review of Lubbock was collected in 1975. For that reason, many of his observations are obsolete — if in fact they ever were true, according to Stokes and Mary Gryder, the district's bilingual education specialist.

In his letter, Herrera noted that recipients of federal funds, including Lubbock schools, which annually get millions of dollars from the federal government, "are obligated to provide equal educational opportunities to national origin minority group children deficient in English language skills."

He went on to say Lubbock has been found "in violation" of that requirement.

"We have concluded that your district's efforts to identify and assess the linguistic needs of national origin minority students deficient in English skills and to provide appropriate language services to such students are inadequate," Herrera said in a letter to Superintendent Ed Irons.

Covers Three Areas
The alleged violations cover three areas.

First, the district "has not properly identified on an individual basis those students who have limited English-speaking abilities."

When Lubbock applied for 1975-76 federal bilingual monies, the district reported it had 8,488 "non-English dominant" students, Herrera said. And yet, he said, in a statement to the Texas Education Agency shortly thereafter, the district reported having only 1,239 youngsters who were "predominant speakers of Spanish" enrolled in formal bilingual programs.

The discrepancy between these two figures suggests many students may be going unserved, Herrera said. He said the district's methods for identifying students of English language deficits appear "inaccurate and invalid."

The second area of non-compliance, Herrera said, is that "the district has failed to categorize (the identified) students... in order to determine the extent to which such students need bilingual services."

Only in the first grade has the district used a bilingual test to determine how limited in English skills the identified students are, he said.

The third area of non-compliance, Herrera said, is that the district's bilingual program is limited to too few schools.

In 1975, he noted, the district told the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare that about 2,500 students

Hurricane-Force Winds Flog Northeast

By The Associated Press
Snow squalls in the Great Lakes, sub-freezing weather in the South and coastal floods with plummeting temperatures and hurricane-force winds in the Northeast — not a nice day in the nation's eastern half Monday.

In the West, meanwhile, Californians dealt with rising tides that caused some damage before receding, and snow and freezing rain fell in Montana.

Hurricane-force winds swept across Cape Cod at Chatham, hurricane tide gates were closed across harbor channels to shut out the battering surf at New Bedford, Mass., Providence, R.I., and Stamford, Conn.

Also in Connecticut, two Amtrak trains were delayed for hours by a stuck drawbridge and a third was halted by wind-blown debris on the tracks. Waterbury police said the wind triggered burglar alarms, and in Hartford, firemen said the wind and rain apparently set off the city's air raid alarms, awakening residents around midnight.

Rains Take Life

Heavy rains in Massachusetts took at least one life. John Gorman, 23, of Medford, Mass., was killed and a companion injured before dawn when their car swerved off a Medford road in a down-pour and smashed into a tree.

The Great Lakes east to New York State area bore the brunt of the snow — seven inches fell in parts of Ohio — and the National Weather Service said snow squalls that reduced visibility to zero at some lakeshore points would continue through the night.

The harsh weather in Appalachia caused striking coal miners to cancel a planned caravan to a non-union coal operation in Prestonsburg, Ky.

As much as 7 inches of snow had fallen in southwest Virginia by mid-morning.

Winds Topple Towers

From the mid-Atlantic states to Maine, winds toppled transmission towers, blew out windows and along the coast and drove tides to more than 6 feet above normal levels.

Authorities in Knox County, Ohio, said helicopters were pressed into service in the search for a woman who reported by citizens band radio that she and her two children were stranded in their car, which ran off a road and became stuck in snow.

Chess Masters

Adjourn Match

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Victor Korchnoi and Boris Spassky adjourned the 17th game of their 20-game world chess championship challengers' match Monday after 40 moves.

Korchnoi, playing white, sealed the 41st move of the Queen's Indian defense he was pursuing. The game will be resumed Tuesday.

The self-exiled Russian grandmaster leads former world champion Spassky by 8.5 points to 7.5 points.

Korchnoi needs two points to win the match, which will determine who plays against Soviet world champion Anatoly Karpov for the title later this year.

Both players had the same number of pieces when the game was adjourned, but some chess experts said Korchnoi had the advantage.

Korchnoi now resides in the Netherlands. Spassky lives in France with permission of the Soviet government.

In Minnesota, where the wind-chill factor drove temperatures to 64 below at Rochester near the Twin Cities, residents dealt with burst water pipes and had trouble starting cars.

Temperatures in Georgia fell from the 60s to the teens during the night, icing roads and causing numerous power outages.

Atlanta had a low of 12 Monday morning, and thousands of power customers were without electricity for varying periods during the night.

Florida citrus farmers were warned to prepare for the coldest night so far this winter as temperatures were expected to drop into the teens by early Tuesday, with freezing temperatures forecast as far south as the Everglades. Jacksonville's temperature of 36 combined with the wind chill for the equivalent of 7-degree weather early Monday.

On the West Coast, officials said waves up to 5 feet smashed against board and sandbag barriers Monday at Malibu, Calif., but the damage was not as severe as Sunday's tide.

Rivers Near Flood Stage

Erie County in western Pennsylvania had 10 inches of snow, while rivers approached flood stage in the Pocono area of the east, causing families to evacuate low-lying homes.

The National Weather Service issued gale warnings for the coastal areas of the Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean.

The Northeast dealt with heavy rains and winds that, combined with frigid air moving in from the West, caused temperatures to plunge.

In New York City, Central Park had a high of 58 at 4 a.m., but by early afternoon, the temperature had reached 32 and it was snowing. The National Weather Service expected readings in the teens by nightfall.

To the north, the historic Cape Cod, Mass., town of Provincetown was reported swamped as the wind-driven sea rolled over the beaches.

"It's about 3 to 4 feet of water in some streets," said a volunteer fireman. "It's getting like a river."

Roads were reported impassable, boats smashed against bulkheads, and power outages were reported in scattered communities along the Massachusetts coast.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said 36 federal reservoirs in New England were storing flood waters.

In Portland, Maine, piers along the waterfront were flooded and authorities began a search of buildings to make sure no one was trapped.

In Providence, R.I., pumps were pressed into emergency service to keep the Providence River from flooding downtown. The Weather Service said the coastal tide reached 10.3 feet early morning — almost 4 1/2 feet above normal.

The Coast Guard reported that a 700-foot tanker carrying about 40,000 tons of heating oil ran aground in the bay east of Bistol, R.I., but there did not appear to be any leakage.

Officials did not know if the grounding was due to seas, which ran as high as 10 feet in 60 mph winds. The crew was reportedly out of danger.

Scattered school closings and numerous delayed openings were reported throughout the state, and the high winds apparently caused some mysterious incidents in several places.

In Bridgeport, Conn., one of three transmission towers used by WDJZ radio was blown over by the wind Sunday night, a spokesman said. The 180-foot tower fell on station property and there was no damage, except to the tower, said the spokesman. The incident did not affect the station's broadcast schedule.

Shooting Suspect Held

A local woman remained in Lubbock County Jail Monday after being charged with aggravated assault in connection with a weekend shooting incident.

Charged was Billie Jean Agers, 28, of 1515 E. 28th St., Apt. 8. Justice of the Peace Charles Smith set a $1,500 bond.

The suspect is accused of shooting Willie S. Lockett, 40, of 1511 Ave. D, late Saturday. Lockett was in satisfactory condition Monday at Methodist Hospital.

The shooting incident occurred about 11 p.m. in the 2800-block of Weber Drive. Lockett told officers he had been arguing with a woman and had ordered her out of his car.

He said the woman got out, and then shot him. Lockett sustained a gunshot wound in his right side.

In another case, a high school student was charged with the Saturday break-in of Wester Elementary School at 4602 Chicago Ave.

Named in the burglary charge was Michael Benjamin Polick, 17, of 5011 57th St. Polick, a Coronado High School student, was freed from county jail after posting a $1,000 bond.

A second person was turned over to juvenile authorities in connection with the case.

Police reports indicated that two were apprehended by officers inside the school cafeteria.

Building Officers Elected

A-J Correspondent

TULIA — Tommy Womack has been elected chairman of the Swisher County Program Building Committee.

W. D. Inglis is the new vice-chairman and Mrs. Odell Jennings, secretary.

YMCA Groundbreaking Staged

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Groundbreaking for the new Young Men's Christian Association building here will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday with the public invited.

At a recent executive meeting, YMCA board members decided to add back into the construction contract handball courts and sky lights over the swimming pool, bring total cost of the building to $693,100.

Norman Wright, chairman of the fund-raising drive, said additional funds are being raised, that the new response is good and that the addition of the two items in the contract will make it necessary for the drive to continue.

Wright and board chairman Marshall Formby said at least $100,000 more dollars must be raised.

"These last two items are somewhat based on faith that the people of Plainview will continue the necessary additional funds to provide Plainview with the kind of YMCA building that is needed," the two men said.

Hobbs Extends Cablevision Franchise

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS, N.M. — The Hobbs City Commission has agreed to renew Hobbs Cablevision's franchise for another 12 years.

According to Peter M. Nisselson, president of Cable Information Systems in New York and parent company of the Hobbs firm, most of the franchises around the country are on a 15-year basis, but the firm agreed to a compromise when some city commissioners suggested only a 10-year renewal and others asked for 12 years.

The agreement between the city and the franchise holder calls for Hobbs Cablevision to pay to the city three percent of its gross revenues earned within the city. This also means revenue earned from the Home Box Office operations.

Hobbs Cablevision manager Thomas Staubitz, says the company in Hobbs plans to spend some $125,000 during this year to "upgrade and expand" the Hobbs system.

Staubitz also says the system plans to drop the CBS affiliate, Channel 7 in Odessa, and add KAVE-TV, an ABC affiliate with offices in Carlsbad. This will leave only one CBS affiliate on the cable system which is KBIM in Roswell.

City commissioners were hesitant about extending the cable's franchise 15 years because of citizen complaints about the quality of television reception on the cable in late 1975. However, a new manager for the company, Peter Hess came to town at that time, and he was able to restore acceptable television reception in the area.

According to Staubitz, the Hobbs firm plans to extend cable television to Eunice and Jalisco.

Probation Meeting Planned In Lubbock

The newly created Texas Adult Probation Commission will meet here at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Lubbock's Hilton Inn, 505 Ave. Q.

The agenda will include discussion of proposed standards for adult probation and development of a state-wide system for funding adult probation departments.

The commission was created by the recent legislature to make adult probation services available throughout the state and to improve program effectiveness.

According to executive director Don R. Stiles, the commission was also formed to provide alternatives to incarceration by providing financial aid to judicial districts for upgrading of services and facilities other than jails and prisons.

Judges and chief adult probation officers have been invited to attend the session.

Mayor Re-Elected To Unwanted Post

BIWABIK, Minn. (AP) — Robert Woods tried not to be mayor of Biwabik any more. Oh, how he tried.

But it didn't work. Woods has been mayor of the Iron Range community for 12 years. He resigned. He refused to run for re-election. He snubbed a write-in campaign on his behalf.

But he won the 1977 race anyway, 381 to 195, all on write-in votes over a lone candidate who did file.

"And it makes me feel good. You bet it does," said Woods, 46, who is employed by a mining company.

Rescuers Seek Ship's Survivors

HONOLULU (UPI) — Nine military airplanes, a Coast Guard cutter and a naval cargo ship searched Monday for signs of the 70 persons who abandoned the Indian grain freighter Chandragupta in stormy seas Thursday.

A partially submerged lifeboat, several empty life jackets and other debris were spotted Sunday, the first sign of the 627-foot vessel or its crew since the first and last distress call Thursday night.

Among the 70 missing were four wives and two children who had accompanied the ship's officer when the Chandragupta left Portland, Ore., for Iran and Sri Lanka on Dec. 28. The ship was last reported 1,000 miles northwest of Honolulu.

The freighter, owned by Shipping Corp. of India and carrying a cargo of 34,000 tons of wheat, began to leak when beset by high winds and extremely rough seas. Weather conditions which have hampered the search for survivors began to moderate over the weekend.

The Coast Guard said the winds were blowing at 30 to 40 knots in the search area and the swells were 30 to 40 feet.

Coast Guard officers said launching lifeboats in such weather was extremely dangerous — even with a well-trained crew — and survivors could soon perish in open boats because of the cold.

The missing Chandragupta is the first 1978 casualty of treacherous weather conditions which caused the sinking of four large vessels in the North Pacific in 1977, with the loss of 35 lives.

Last January, the 370-foot Panamanian ship Crown Pearl began taking on water when rough seas shifted her cargo of logs. All 25 crewmen were rescued by a Swiss vessel.

The same storm broke in half the 600-foot Greek vessel Irenes Challenger, which spilled 4.5 million gallons of light crude oil 200 miles southeast of Midway Island. The two halves of the vessel sank and three men were lost.

Last February, the 518-foot Liberian vessel Rose S. sank 1,200 miles northwest of Midway with a cargo of scrap iron and logs while en route from Vancouver to Japan. No sign of its 31-member crew of Korean nationals was ever found.

The 840-foot Liberian super tanker Hawaiian Patriot developed a massive hull crack last February and was leaking oil when blown apart by a sudden explosion 320 miles west of Hawaii. Thirty-eight crew members were rescued. The 39th man jumped into the flaming oil slick and was lost.

Cruise Missile System Tested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The sophisticated cruise missile, a pilotless jet designed to carry nuclear warheads to distant targets, was tested over the weekend against U.S. air defense radar, the Defense Department said Monday.

For security reasons, spokesmen declined to say whether the missile was detected on the radar system.

The department said only that an 18-foot-long Tomahawk cruise missile was fired from a Navy A6 attack plane Saturday at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., and was flown against an unidentified type of radar system.

Since President Carter decided against production of a fleet of B-1 bombers, the cruise missile has been given top priority in the administration's strategic weapons development.

Saturday's test was the first of six scheduled this year, all designed to give the Pentagon some idea of how well the cruise might perform against Soviet air defenses.

There have been allegations the weapon might prove vulnerable to the massive Soviet defense system.

Future tests will be aimed at determining whether present U.S. air defense systems would be able to shoot down cruise missiles. Pentagon sources said the tests will pit the cruise against the Army's Hawk antiaircraft missile and the Phoenix missile system carried by Navy F14 fighters.

The cruise is a pilotless jet plane with a highly accurate guidance system based on a computer "map" of terrain enroute to its target.

Pentagon sources said the Tomahawk is expected to produce the same image on radar screens as would be made by an object the size of a basketball, making it difficult for Russian defenses to pinpoint.

Cruise missiles armed with nuclear warheads are a new development in strategic warfare and one that has figured prominently in SALT negotiations with Russia.

The Soviets, who are behind the United States in cruise missile technology, have insisted on limiting the cruise range to about 1,500 miles.

Sources have estimated the Soviets would have to spend $50 billion on a crash program to develop an adequate defense against the missiles, which would be launched from outside Russian borders by U.S. B-52s or jumbo jets.

The administration hopes to have limited production capability of cruise missiles as early as 1980, but it will be several years later before they are available in large numbers.

Solons Okay Laetrile

TRENTON, N.J. — The Assembly Monday passed legislation making New Jersey the 13th state in the nation to allow the use of the controversial drug Laetrile in the treatment of cancer.

The measure, passed by a vote of 47-6, also would make New Jersey the first state to allow the drug to be manufactured and sold. The measure was sent to Gov. Brendan Byrne, who has said he will sign the bill.

Gregorio said people who are terminal ill with cancer should have a last resort to the drug.

AN EDITORIAL:

Defense--Cut Fat, Not Bases

IF THE PENTAGON has as much of a one-track mind in military strategy as it has in budget cutting, we'll be in a heap of trouble come the next war.

About the only way the Department of Defense appears to see for "saving" money is to close training bases.

While this approach may, indeed, have a small impact on the Defense budget itself, there is little evidence to suggest that in the total context of the federal budget it really helps the taxpayers at all.

In fact, it may have more harmful effects than good ones in many instances.

PENTAGON PLANNERS are now at work on a new round of military base closings and reductions which they calculate will save up to $300 million a year, news services report.

Out of a total budget that is expected to jump by $9 billion or so to the neighborhood of $125 billion next year, that "savings" would be more window dressing than real.

While we are 1,000 percent for saving a couple of hundred or three hundred million dollars anywhere we can if it can be justified by the facts, we'd feel a lot more confidence in the Pentagon if it would look in places where there is real fat to trim.

We refer, of course, to personnel costs, including the $9 billion-plus being paid out each year for military retirement pay.

Salaries of active and retired military personnel are specially generous in relation to those of the civilian population. Since the Pentagon planners would be cutting into their own gravy train if they recommended any cutbacks here, though, they certainly won't do so.

CLOSING MILITARY bases, however, can be counterproductive in the total context of national programs.

Increased unemployment in the community, for example, may bring widespread economic suffering and bigger outlays by other government departments in the wake of a base's closing.

There is some indication, too, that Snow Belt states are pushing for closing Sun Belt bases in order that the military payrolls can be shifted to the colder climes.

A NUMBER OF superfluous and unnecessary bases have been closed over the years. It's to the point now, however, that additional closings must be weighed carefully to determine, first, if the action would actually improve Defense efficiency and, second, if the savings would be real or illusory considering all the side effects.

Holding the line on pay and benefit packages for servicemen would appear to be a far more effective and commendable way to make the Defense dollars stretch farther.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

'Ring' In New Year?

ANDREW TULLY:

We Tote The Note

WASHINGTON—I am pretty sorry for the more than 3,000 employees of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund stationed in Washington because they are forced to live in one of the world's most attractive cities and sometimes the toast under the caviar is cold. But they just strained the quality of my sympathy.

The two agencies are asking Congress for a budget increase of four billion dollars. And since Uncle Sam is the biggest contributor to their lifestyle, the biggest bite would come from thee and me.

My interest in the agencies, which lend money to underdeveloped countries and try to stabilize national currencies, has been reawakened because I recently spent an afternoon enjoying some of their employees' perks.

To wit, I was rich for a few hours, lolling about the private country club maintained for high-level toilers at the World Bank, the IMF, the Asian Development Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank.

THIS FUN PLACE was financed by the agencies, which means the taxpayers of participating countries. It cost $1,128,000 to buy 282 acres of land in nearby, expensive Montgomery County, and another $1 million to build the elegant joint.

Financing comes from interest collected on loans and from returns on other investments. The agencies' charters say interest money must be earmarked to cover administrative costs.

Anyway, this recreational Taj Majal tempts me to join up with the World Bank as vice president in charge of champagne-chilling.

There is an 18-hole golf course, a 270-yard driving range, putting greens, a field for soccer, football and cricket, a croquet course, a small lake stocked with fish, picnic areas, a summer amphitheater, eight tennis courts.

And, volleyball and badminton courts, a "swimming pool complex," a golf building, a combination bar and grill, a field house with snack bar, locker rooms and 638 parking spaces. There is no initiation fee, only a charge of $42 a month.

YEAH, WHEW! But a neighbor who works for the IMF defends the place on the grounds that many foreign employees are barred from other country clubs because the color of their skin is wrong, or they lack an Ivy League accent, or can't boast of a forefather who stole a railroad. He seems to suggest that anyone who criticizes the club is a racist.

I'll run the risk of being so-labeled, however. Washington—like a lot of other cities—is full of people who can't get into private clubs because of social deficiencies.

Such citizens are forced to use the public parks and drive a hundred miles to the nearest beach. Public monies have not yet been employed to finance a private club for accountants at the Agriculture Department or the charwomen at the Internal Revenue Service.

AT ANY RATE, there is a movement in Congress to cut these agencies down to merely bigger-than-life size.

The Senate Appropriations Committee complains that the personnel practices of the organizations "are suggestive of an institutionalized granting of lifetime sinecures...and the pursuit of fringe benefits has been raised to an art form."

Have at it, Congress. At the very least, sirs, you could recommend that if the agencies have too much money on their hands they might use said mazzama to pay operating expenses. Outside of government, most of us employ this last resort.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Time For Change?

ZERO-POPULATION-growth boosters aren't too thrilled over hints that another baby boom is on the way, but businessmen are jubilant enough to start knitting tiny booties.

Their enthusiasm is understandable. Lots of babies means lots of buying, and when the birth rate goes up, so do sales of everything from houses to cribs to washing machines.

Small wonder they're keeping their eyes on statistics showing that, for more than a year now, more babies are being born each month than in the same month a year ago. In September, which was the last time anybody counted new noses, the total was up a yawling six percent.

Not only that, there are more prospective mothers around. If you include women from 15 to 45 (you almost have to), a million teen-agers get pregnant every year, 35 percent more. And this group is expanding by nearly a million a year.

That's the bulk of the postwar baby boom and it's beginning to hit 30, a now-or-never age for any young wife who's been postponing a family. And, apparently, a lot of them have decided now is the time.

THE BEST PART OF all this, as far as the merchants are concerned, is that a higher proportion of these births will be first children. And anybody knows new parents (and grandparents) spend twice as much on the first one as they do on any others that come along.

The boys in the baby business can hardly wait. They figure the long dry spell is finally over.

But they might be counting their chickens before they're hatched.

At least one group of charts-and-graphs experts is convinced there's no guarantee that even a mini baby boom is on the way.

And even if one does come along, it won't have anywhere near the impact of the 30-year postwar birth rate.

For one thing, according to economists from New York's Citibank, despite the 35-percent growth of women of child-bearing age between 1961 and 1977, they didn't increase their families as much as they told poll-takers they planned to.

IN FACT, IT WAS the other way around: births actually declined by 2.5 percent. (So much for hanging your hat on what a woman tells a surveyor, at least anything as private as how many babies she wants.)

No matter what they say, young wives are limiting their children to 2.1 each. And anybody who thinks inflation isn't clipping the stork's wings hasn't paid attention to what it cost to feed, house and educate a kid these days. $165,000 is a bare minimum and that's a lot of money to look at when you're starting out on a budget.

Another reason big families aren't popular any more is that young wives are, thanks to Lady Libbers, more career-conscious than ever before. In fact, women are finding jobs faster than the labor bureau can keep up with them.

Last year it raised its estimates of the increase in working women to 2.5 million by 1980 and five million by 1990. But even that's out-of-date: women entering the labor force have already passed the 1980 total, and there's no sign they'll decide to stay home, babies or no babies.

So what's a poor businessman to do?

WELL, THE EXPERTS have an answer for that one, too. Better ne should buy a crystal ball and learn to anticipate changing life-styles and shifting population patterns.

That, they say, is the best way to keep those cast registers clanging.

For openers, he should zero in on those in the 24-to-44-age group and pay more attention to how they buy than how they breed.

Economists think this will be the fastest-growing group in the next 10 years and (which is what the marketing men are really interested in) the heavy spenders.

Horns have to be bought, furniture and appliances picked out and children raised. (Even if the boom doesn't materialize, there are still those 2.1 to be cared for.)

BUT SMALLER FAMILIES mean fewer teeth to straighten and more money left over for things Mom and Pop need, or think they do. Especially if Mom is working—and more than half of them are these days.

The successful marketing man is the one who finds ways to anticipate what will lure this age group into parting with their extra dollars.

And he'd better not forget Grandma and Grandpa. Any businessman still hooked into the youth-centered culture of the '50s and '60s will be as out of it as hard rock.

The country is growing older, the number of over-65s is increasing twice as fast as the rest of the population (by 1990 it will total 12 percent).

Thanks to pensions and Social Security, a lot of them have money to spend and an itch to spend it, either on travel, new life-styles, or sports and hobbies.

They won't be buying baby carriages, but (check the crystal ball) there may be a moped in their future. Or at least a space-age wheelchair.

Whatever, there's a big change coming—and it isn't all in diapers.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

Q. "IF THERE'S EVER been a worse TV show than 'The Man From Atlantis,' please name it. And where'd we get the notion about a lost continent of Atlantis, anyway?"

A. In reply to your first query, none worse comes to mind. My memory must be slipping. As for the Atlantis legend, Plato the Greek passed along that one from what evidently was a bungled translation of the stories of his ancestor Solon. Students of ancient history now think a volcanic explosion on the Aegean Sea island of Thera around 1470 B.C. wiped out a sophisticated little civilization there and sank the whole island. Bad reporting parlayed that event into the Atlantis myth.

Divorce papers about 100 years ago in the Utah Territory could be bought for $2.50 from a sort of slot machine. Not everywhere there, I don't mean that. One law firm only put the gadget together. All the documents needed to be legal were the signatures of the divorcing man and woman.

Kuwait gets less than six inches of rainfall a year. Therefore, it pipes in the sea from the Persian Gulf and distills multimillions of gallons. But, distilled, it has no flavor. So it's seasoned with a little brackish muddy gruel to make it taste like water.

AN EDITORIAL:

Motorists Earn Rate 'Hold'

A SHORT "breathing spell" before another increase in car insurance rates has been granted Texas motorists by the State Insurance Board.

That almost comes under the "man bites dog" heading, so rare a bit of good economic news it is.

Insurance companies, despite soaring profits last year, had requested higher rates that would have boosted premiums charged Texas car owners by an average of 17.4 per cent.

The Insurance Board said "no," however, and advised the industry that it won't consider any increases until its next regularly scheduled rate hearing in July.

EVEN IF IT APPROVED a rate boost at that time, the new premiums probably would not go into effect until October, according to Board Chairman Hugh Yantis.

The Insurance Board's own staff had recommended an immediate 10.1 per cent increase in car insurance rates. This would have been on top of a 7.1 per cent increase in October, 1976, which was on top of a 17 per cent increase in 1975, which was on top of an 8 per cent increase in 1974.

ART BUCHWALD:

Overdoing It Is Human, Especially On Holidays

I BELIEVE I SHOULD have an opportunity to defend myself against the insidious charges that I behaved in a gluttonous manner, and engaged in a disgusting display of excess eating and drinking during the recent holiday season.

There are two sides to every Christmas and New Year's story.

First, I would like to deal with the fruit cake. It's true I ate the whole damn thing in three days, but there was a perfectly valid reason for it.

Contrary to reports, I did not order the fruit cake, nor did I pay for it. It was sent to me by an old college friend named Jerry Altschuler, whom I haven't seen in years.

He lives in Oklahoma City, so I have to assume he struck it rich in either oil or gas—or fruit cakes. In any case I happened to be at home when it arrived and I signed for it.

My lawyer, Ed Bennett Williams, advised me that the person who signs for a fruit cake at Christmastime has to eat it. So I did, and therefore everyone is going around saying that I made a pig of myself.

NOW ABOUT THE seven cups of eggnog I drank at the neighbor's house across the street on Christmas Eve.

I won't deny I did drink them, as witnesses have testified, but the fact is that was all they were serving, and after chomping on fruit cake a guy can get pretty thirsty.

I'll skip the Christmas dinner because I didn't eat any more or less turkey and stuffing than my son-in-law.

The big bullabuloo came at dessert time when my daughter surprised us all with a bouche Noel, which happens to be a log of cake filled with whipped cream and topped with coffee or chocolate cream. My wife had made a pumpkin pie.

There I was, caught between the bouche Noel and the pumpkin pie. I did what any decent person would do, and had a piece of each. And for this I am charged with gluttony?

ALL RIGHT, WE'VE now come to the poppycock on the evening after Christmas. If you recall that was the day of the playoff games.

My wife had bought the poppycock (popcorn covered with molasses and stuck against walnuts) for my guests to eat while we watched the Los Angeles-Minnesota game.

The only trouble was no guests showed up.

Geyelin had to go to Philadelphia to visit his relatives. Califano canceled out at the last moment so he could revise his welfare reform bill once again, and Valenti's wife made him go caroling with the children.

So the poppycock was just sitting there in the can. I didn't touch it until the first half ended. Well by then one poppycock led to another, and before I knew it the game was over and the can was empty.

I KNOW WHAT YOU'RE going to bring up next—the Kron Chocolate covered strawberries from Neiman Marcus.

I swear I didn't know they were loaded. Someone placed them out on the piano right on the path to the kitchen where we keep the beer.

It was a case of pure entrapment. The person who put them there is just as guilty as I am, but the media hasn't written a word about him? her? it?

I won't dignify the charges concerning the disappearance of the pistachio ice cream from the refrigerator.

It's true I was in the kitchen that evening at midnight when it was last seen in the freezer.

But someone else followed me in there after I went upstairs. I know because the next morning all the pumpkin pie was gone, and I had left one slice in the pie plate.

AS FOR DRINKING, I'll admit I lost my moral compass. First there was the Gil Hahn party when he broke out four bottles of Chateau Latour 1965.

Then the Quinn party to celebrate Christmas past, and the Bellows open house party to celebrate Christmas future, followed by the Elfin annual New Year's Eve party where someone tried to take my gusto away from me.

It's all rather hazy, but the point is not one action I took in terms of eating or drinking during the holidays was premeditated. They were all crimes of passion.

And I don't see why I should take the rap from my doctor just because I didn't want to spoil, what many people consider, the happiest time of the year.

Strike Not Seen As Solution

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of the American Farm Bureau Federation said Monday strikes and national protectionist attitudes are no solutions for the nation's farm problems.

Allan Grant of Visalia, Calif., had frequent criticism of the Carter administration while opening the 59th annual meeting of the federation that represents 2.9 million farm families.

His only mention of strikes was made as he said farmers still earn less each year than the average steelworker, plumber, autoworker, or carpenter.

"Farm prices have dropped consistently while other prices were rising," he said.

"I can understand why some farm and ranch people might feel like quitting and going on a strike at a time when the price of wheat is below production cost as the price of bread rises in the supermarket.

But quitting is not the answer." Demanding that the market improve, he said, also is not the answer.

"And, if we want to retain our farm decision-making freedoms, demanding guaranteed full parity of farm income from the federal government is not the answer," Grant said.

Grant said that, over the years, the Farm Bureau has placed into effect many long-range programs aimed at a goal of full parity for U. S. agriculture.

"They include greatly improved farm credit; farm and ranch representation on critical boards and at important hearings, and support for farm programs that do not put ceilings on income," he said.

"But they do not include government guaranteed prices, for these bring guaranteed controls and guaranteed federal supervision of farming. Free-choice in agriculture could not survive."

Grant said the federation has been aggressive in conducting discussions abroad while seeking broader foreign trade.

"This Farm Bureau effort was an attempt to get meaningful trade talks going again at a time of very little action by the Carter administration," he said.

Grant said he remains greatly concerned about a growing national protectionist attitude in this country and around the world.

"This negative attitude is generated by industries which have lost their competitive leadership by allowing their plants and equipment to outdated, and by unions anxious to protect worker jobs, even as their wage demands have priced us out of many world markets."

He said protectionist trade policies protect no one.

Grant said farmers are alarmed about growing evidence of shifts within the U. S. Department of Agriculture toward "a consumer oriented cheap-food policy."

Vast Cotton Crop Figures May Foreshadow Low Price

WASHINGTON (AP) — With production up 71 percent in Texas and Oklahoma, the 1977 cotton crop is expected to total 14.5 million bales, 37 percent above last season and 1 percent more than forecast in December, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

Included in the figure was 96,300 bales of the American Pima variety.

The 13.3 million acres expected to be harvested amount to a 21 percent increase over 1976, the Crop Reporting Board said.

Expected average yields, with harvests nearly complete in all areas, were put at 525 pounds an acre, an increase of almost 13 percent.

The Texas-Oklahoma crop was pegged at 5.9 million bales.

In the Mississippi Delta states, the 3.9-million-bale crop is 34 percent greater than in 1976, while production from California, Arizona and New Mexico is up 20 percent at 4.1 million bales.

In the southeastern growing areas, however, the crop is 32 percent smaller than last season at 522,000 bales from Georgia, Alabama and the Carolinas.

At the end of last season, only 2.9 million bales of cotton were carried over in reserve, compared to 3.7 million the year before and 5.7 million two years earlier, helping boost prices and encourage planting.

Foreign demand for the fiber helped the market last year, a recent department analysis said. The incoming heavy supply has dropped prices 2 to 6 cents below competing synthetic fibers, it added, so farmers' returns could pick up in coming months.

The increase in production also may be counteracted by marketplace demand later if low water supplies and other weather-related problems in key growing areas cut into 1978-crop yields, that bulletin noted.

Texas Farmers Block Cold Storage Plant

By United Press International
Farmers blocked a livestock exchange in Michigan and a cold storage plant near the Texas-Mexico border Monday while President Carter told a cabinet meeting he would do what he could to improve farm prices.

As bitter cold spread across Michigan, farmers used tractors to block the Michigan Livestock Exchange terminal in Casopolis. The farmers said the blockade, which lasted several hours, would be expanded to other exchanges.

South Texas farmers protested cheap foreign imports by blocking entrances to the Laredo Cold Storage Co.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, following a cabinet meeting, said President Carter offered to help the farmers, but declined to be specific about what help the president would provide.

Bergland also criticized striking farmers, with whom he met last Friday in Omaha, for not having a detailed plan by which, the government could increase farm prices.

"The burden really falls on the strike leaders," Bergland said.

The agriculture secretary said he would not meet with the farmers again unless they had something new and concrete to present. He said Friar's meeting produced nothing new.

Bergland's comment about a lack of concrete plans by the farmers was echoed in Houston, where the American Farm Bureau Federation opened its annual meeting Monday.

DWANE G. MILLER

Miller Named To State Board

Dr. Dwane G. Miller, chairman of the Department of Plant and Soil Sciences, has been appointed to succeed agricultural sciences dean Anson R. Bertrand as the Texas Tech University representative on the Texas State Seed and Plant Board.

The board is an advisory council reporting directly to Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan V. Brown. Its purpose is to maintain high quality in seeds sold for planting purposes in the state.

The board works directly with the seed certification program of the state in setting standards for seed certification.

The six-member panel meets two to four times per year. It consists of farmers, seed company representatives and representatives from Texas Tech and Texas A&M University.

By DUANE HOWELL

COTTON INDUSTRY REPRESENTATIVES met last week with Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Dale Hathaway and others in the USDA to accelerate efforts to generate additional exports from the 1977-78 crop.

The meeting included representative from the American Cotton Shippers Association, AMCOT, and the National Cotton Council.

"We are greatly encouraged both with export opportunities and the aggressive manner in which government leaders are moving to assist in export sales," W. D. Lawson III of Gastonia, N. C., board chairman of the cotton council, said following the meeting.

Lawson, who was spokesman for the industry group, added in a statement: "WE RECOMMEND USE OF EVERY TOOL available, including maximum use of export credit, increased use of trade and orientation teams and other cotton marketing development activities, change in Japanese Ministry of Finance policy on import payments, and a rifle approach on a country-by-country basis to meet export potentials."

Lawson also pointed out that a recent council special study indicates there is a realistic potential of an additional 700,000 to 1 million bales over cotton export commitments as of Dec. 18.

The potential, he said, is based both on historic U. S. share of market and past records of total exports as compared with current commitments.

DEPRESSED PRICES RESULTING FROM large crops in the United States and across the world and continuing depressed textile activity abroad make maximum efforts to expand cotton exports essential, Lawson said.

"We must move more cotton into consumption," he said. "This is the basic answer to our present dilemma."

Besides Hathaway, USDA participants included Kelly Harrison, general sales manager; Tom Hughes, administrator of the Foreign Agricultural Service; Bill Davis, international cotton marketing director of the FAS; and George Shanklin and Geron Rathell, both of the office of general sales manager.

In addition to Lawson, the industry delegation included: Fred Deans, president of the ACSA; C. R. Sayre, president of AMCOT; Robert Swires, general manager of Southwest Irrigated Cotton Growers; Charles Wuelser, director of Cotton Council International; Earle Billings, executive vice president and secretary of the ACSA; and Albert Russell, Earl Sears, Carl Campbell and David Hull, council staff members.

Exchange Shows Cattle Futures Trading Mixed

By Reuters
CHICAGO — Cattle futures were up 10 to off 12 points in mixed trading of 7,833 contracts Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The January delivery was up the most with June pacing the later months lower. February was up 42 and June off 15 points in erratic trade during the session.

The market worked lower after posting daily highs early with many traders marking time as they seek fresh leadership.

Although beef is holding steady thus far, traders fear price erosion as continued heavy slaughter takes effect.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 69 1/4 to 69 3/4 cents a pound for all weights, highest since January 1976. The six markets expect 16,500 head today.

Cash cattle were steady to up 50 points, with the best top at $46.75 per hundredweight, also the highest since January 1976. Slaughter was 148,000 head.

Hog futures fell back after early gains of 72 points and closed 82 points lower to 35 points higher. December was weakest, falling 90 points, with the nearby up the most after climbing 72 points early. Sales were 6,057 contracts.

Early demand on light hog runs and higher prices lifted February through July to new season's highs and the highest levels since November 1976. The late reaction came on profit-taking and fears of increased hog runs when the weather moderates.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one cent at 76 to 81 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, a three-week high. The six markets expect 27,500 head today.

Cash hogs were up 50 cents to $2, with the best top at $48 per hundredweight, a three-week high, at Peoria. Slaughter was 282,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures shot up the 200-point limit in February through May for the second day in a row and lifted all contracts, except May, to new season's highs before reacting.

Finals were up 152 to off 20 points. Only August was lower with February up the most. Sales were 4,367 contracts.

Demand spilled over from Friday's limit gains across the board and came in the wake of cold weather.

Colder Weather Helps Farmers Harvest Crops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cold weather in late December gave farmers a chance to clean up almost all delayed harvests of their 1977 corn, soybean, sorghum and cotton crops, the agriculture department said Monday.

The department's crop reporting board said wet soils in the delta region continued to slow up some harvesting. But in other areas where wet conditions had held up work, the firmer ground produced by cold weather allowed producers to get back to work.

Soybean combining in southern states was reported nearly complete and in Missouri, where only 84 percent complete by the end of December.

The report said low temperatures put the 1978 winter wheat crop into a near-dormant state by the end of December. The crop was classed as in fair to good condition in the southern great plains where lack of moisture was posing a threat to potential yields, but Kansas wheat was reported in good to excellent condition.

The report said the first government forecast of 1978 winter-season potato production put the potential harvest at 2.9 million hundredweight, up 8 percent from a year ago.

Hay stocks on farms Jan. 1 were estimated at 91.3 million tons, up 18 percent from a year earlier. Most of the gain came in Wisconsin and the west North Central states, officials said.

Departmental Memo On CBs Draws Protest From Group

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A group of police and civilians, who say the Lubbock Police Department is "cutting its own throat" with an order severely restricting officers' use of personal CB radios, met this weekend in reaction to the recently issued memo.

Among those present at the session were two of the three women who police officials feel are too friendly with officers, and whose airway conversations have caused the department "embarrassment."

The furor was touched off Thursday with the issuance of a memo directed to officers who use CBs in their marked police units — a practice officially allowed by the department.

The strongly worded memo, issued by Maj. C.G. Bartley, head of the uniformed services division, was read to officers at each briefing Thursday. The terse statement, in part, read:

"...the calling of wives and other females, and the calling of other officers on where to meet for coffee or other social activities has caused considerable embarrassment to the department. You are instructed that you will not transmit on CB radios unless the matter is clearly a police problem...All other transmissions will cease."

Under the "fleet plan," uniformed officers now use their marked patrol cars 24 hours a day — for personal as well as professional use. With inception of the plan several months ago, officers were allowed to install — at their own expense — personal CB radios in the vehicles.

Thursday's memo applies both to on and off-duty hours.

According to Bartley, the memo was necessitated by "citizen complaints" of CB use by policemen.

"Specifically, it involved officers talking to three women, who apparently are police buffs," Bartley said. He added that discussions unrelated to police business and "ratchet-jawing" with women will not be tolerated.

"It (the memo) was brought about by the abuse by a few officers, but the other officers know it has been going on for some time."

LPD Chief J.T. Alley late Friday expressed displeasure that word of the memo had gotten out, and termed the subject an "interdepartmental matter."

Alley and Bartley both denied talking with any citizens. The chief said "high-ranking" members of the had been receiving the "citizen complaints," but refused to name the officials.

When first questioned early Friday, Alley said he had nothing to do with the memo. However, Bartley indicated it was the chief who made him aware of the situation and ordered the statement issued.

A visibly upset Alley also vehemently denied the possibility that the "citizen complaints" stemmed from organized CB group interests who have ties with the police department.

One policeman this weekend said officers "weren't upset (about the memo) — they were downright mad," and stated several had removed their radio equipment from the cars in protest.

The situation, those present at the gathering said, was completely misrepresented in the memo.

According to the civilians, there is a group of about 40 citizens on the CB channel who talk with police.

"We try to keep them awake for one thing," a CBER explained. "Especially on midnights, just riding around, it can get awfully lonely, and it's hard to stay awake when it's quiet."

"When they're busy, they (police) don't talk," another said. "That's why we all have scanners so we'll know when not to bother them."

Most police contacted voiced concern over what many described as a "sub-standard" LPD radio system.

"No information is given to the public about the radio system," said one. "A lot of times we wouldn't know where other officers are if it weren't for citizens."

Police say it "just worked out" that the private CBs were helpful in official business; however, they maintain the radios were bought individually and were intended for personal use.

"At first they told us not to use them for police business — said too many people would hear it," an officer pointed out. "Now they said use it only for police business."

"I didn't pay $200 to use it for police business — I thought we had another radio for that."

"If something happens to that police radio, there would be nothing left," another said. "If they can't use the CBs, I guess they can start issuing rolls of quarters at shift change."

Police said the "handles" (names used for CB identification) on two of the women in question were mentioned at each briefing Thursday, and that they were told not to communicate with them by way of the radio again.

Those two women were present this weekend. The third woman, reportedly a policeman's wife, was not identified at briefings.

"I talked to her last night, and she was really upset," said one of the women. "This (the memo) makes us look like trash."

"Sure we talk to them. A lot of times we just say, 'Wake up,' and we joke around with them a lot. But we're just as friendly with the officers' wives, and what policeman is going to make a 'date' with another woman while his wife is listening?"

The husband of one of the women, also present at the discussion, said he knows of and encourages his wife's CB talk.

"It sure makes me feel a lot better knowing she's talking to them, with me working nights," he commented. "We know them, and we're all friends. I kid around just as much as everybody else."

Everyone seemed to agree the channel serves as a "public relations" medium, and has done much to further police-community awareness.

"Last year, I wouldn't have given a past nickel for police," one CBER remarked. "Now that's changed. I've gotten to know them by way of the radio, and I've found that they're actually human."

"A lot of times they just want to talk," another said. "They work a wreck or something, and they have to hold it all in there, but then they can get on the CB and let it out. You can tell how they feel about things, and you realize they're human."

Several persons also remarked the friendly conversations also result in other benefits.

"Before I knew the police, I'd speed," said one man. "Now, it would be embarrassing to have a friend come up to give you a ticket. I'd be defying his authority if I asked him not to give it to me. And I'd think, 'Look at the position I've put him in.'"

"They're blaming it on three women, and they're taking it out on the police," one person remarked. "The freedom of speech should apply to those who protect our rights as well."

"The police are just being used as scapegoats," was another comment. "A lot is being taken out on the police because of personalities."

Several CBERs leveled criticism at certain group-affiliated radio users who used their position with police as threats against the citizens.

"I thought it was very ignorant of the department to issue the memo without even listening to the channel to hear what goes on," a woman said. "Just to shut them up is completely unfair. I can do just as much good just knowing them, than I could playing policeman."

"They're cutting their own throats," one man remarked. "Last night I couldn't get a cop on it, and I hate to see that happen."

One officer said the CB radio has been a boon to citizen support and to department morale.

"Right after the survey, morale was the lowest it's been in a long time," he said. "Then we got the CB, and it wasn't so bad working midnights anymore. Now morale is at a low point again."

That policeman admitted some inappropriate remarks had, on occasion been made by a few officers, but "if Joe Blow did something, Joe Blow's sergeant should have said that it was not discreet, or that it was past the gray area."

Reacting to publicity on the memo, Alley late Friday lashed out at dissenters and said if the problems continue, "We'll yank the CBs out."

According to Bartley, no disciplinary action yet has been taken against officers who allegedly have been responsible for abuses, but indicated further actions would be forthcoming if the practices do not cease."

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is presented as a public service. Information provided by the Lubbock Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, in compliance with current tax laws.)

QUESTION: I have some Series E bonds that I have been purchasing during the year through a payroll account deduction. Do I pay income tax on this when I cash the bonds?

ANSWER: The amount you paid for the bonds is included in your W-2 Form as wages and therefore you will pay income tax on the purchase price of the bonds in the year the withholding takes place. These bonds are issued on a discount basis and the value of the bond increases from the purchase date of redemption or maturity.

This increase in value is taxable interest income. If you use the cash method of reporting income, you may defer reporting the interest income until the year you cash the bonds, or the year they mature, whichever is earlier. You may also elect to report the increase in redemption value as interest each year.

In either case, you report only the increase in what you paid for the bond over what you redeemed the bond for, not the total you receive.

QUESTION: I run a car pool in the morning and receive about $50.00 a month from my riders. Is that money taxable?

ANSWER: Amounts received from passengers in a car pool may not be included in gross income. These amounts are considered reimbursements for transportation expenses incurred. Since these amounts are not income, the related costs of repairs, gasoline, and similar items in connection with operating an automobile used in a car pool to and from work are personal expenses and are not deductible.

Further instruction concerning filing your 1977 tax return can be obtained by attending the "You and Your Federal Income Tax" program, a public service course jointly sponsored by the Lubbock Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Internal Revenue Service and the Avalanche-Journal. Each registrant will receive the Internal Revenue Service publication, "Your Federal Income Tax," a 200 page booklet which details many tax deductions forms and filing requirements. While the course is free to the public, there is a $1 fee to cover administrative costs.

Scientists Seek Chicken Vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists at the University of Connecticut are using a $60,000 federal grant to find a vaccine to protect chickens against arthritis.

The Agriculture Department, which is financing the three-year project, says that a kind of arthritis caused by viruses — also called infectious tenosynovitis — is costly to the nation's poultry producers.

"Birds affected by the disease often are unable to walk and they sometimes die," the department said. "The infection in commercial poultry flocks is usually accompanied by a marked decrease in either egg or meat production."

The research is aimed at finding a vaccine which will prevent the disease and let chickens walk and lead normal productive lives.

outlined in Lubbock at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Scheduled to speak at a meeting of the Lubbock Restaurant Association at Lubbock International Airport will be W. H. "Buckshot" Price, TRA executive vice president from Austin.

Price will also meet with the officers and directors of the Lubbock chapter on Wednesday afternoon before the dinner. He will be seeking suggestions on a broader scope of association activities and services to the membership in "Reshaping the Future of TRA."

Price says Lubbock viewpoints and recommendations will be sought as to the future restructuring of TRA, new programs and services, present and future goals and what costs, if any, would be involved in expanding the scope of TRA activities throughout Texas.

The TRA executive vice president directs a 23-member staff at the association's headquarters in Austin and sub-offices in Dallas and Houston. He is a past president of the International Society of Restaurant Association Executives.

Texan Convicted Of Spying For Arabs

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Terry Fleener, a 23-year-old American woman convicted of supplying information about the Jewish state to Arab guerrillas, began a five-year prison term Monday.

Miss Fleener, of San Antonio, confessed during a one-day trial last Tuesday to charges of conveying information to the enemy, conspiring to convey information to the enemy and rendering service to unlawful groups, her attorney reported. Other charges were dropped after she entered the guilty plea.

To Appeal Sentence

"It's better than the death sentence," Miss Fleener said after the closed-door trial. Her Israeli lawyer, Felicia Langer, called the five-year sentence, handed down Monday, "cruel and unbiased." She said she will appeal.

"This is not a heavy sentence, compared to the maximum of 15-20 years," said prosecuting attorney Sarah Sirotta. "These are offenses which strike at the security of the state. In other countries she would be hanged."

Details Withheld

Details of the proceedings were withheld, the customary procedure here in cases dealing with security.

Miss Fleener was arrested Oct. 25 on arrival at Israel's Ben-Gurion Airport. In December, U.S. Embassy officials said Miss Fleener, who is not Jewish, was suspected of intending to photograph military installations in Israel.

The indictment alleged she was gathering information in Israel and passing it to a member of an Arab guerrilla organization in Lebanon.

Witnesses Testify

Her mother, Mrs. Mary Boettcher of Enon, Ohio and Dr. Catherine Edwards, her former professor at the University of Texas in San Antonio, were present at the sentencing and testified as character witnesses during the trial.

"She is idealistic, somewhat naive, impetuous, and fiercely loyal to her friends and principles," said Dr. Edwards, trying to shed light on Miss Fleener's motives. "She was interested in the Middle East, and very well read."

"She confessed in court ... but the sentence does not reflect what she actually did. She didn't hurt anyone," Dr. Edwards told The Associated Press.

Mrs. Boettcher burst into tears after the sentence was read — first in Hebrew, then in English. She said her daughter stood stoically during the sentencing. Miss Fleener was then taken, under armed guard, to Ramleh prison near Tel Aviv, where she changed her gray-and-white striped dress for prison blues.

Miss Fleener visited Israel once before, in 1976. It was not clear if the charges against her resulted from activities during that visit or from her activities outside Israel. Under Israeli security laws, persons can be tried for offenses committed against Israel in other countries.

Woman, 23, Reports Being Raped By 'Good Samaritan'

A 23-year-old Lubbock woman told police she had been raped at knife-point in her home early Monday.

The victim told officers that at approximately 8:25 a.m. she began having car trouble in the 1400 block of Ave. S. She said that a man stopped to help and later took her and her two small children home.

The woman told police that the man asked to use her phone and that she let him in the house. She said the man then walked into the kitchen and returned to the living room with his hands behind his back.

The man then brandished a butcher knife, she said, and forced her to a bedroom where he raped her at knife-point.

She described the suspect as an obese, 18-25 year old Mexican-American with black hair and brown eyes, wearing a black jacket, blue T-shirt, blue jeans and black gloves.

In recently reported break-ins, Jack B. Turner, traffic manager for Gifford-Hill & Co. Inc., told officers that a calculator, cassette player and two radios had been taken from the facility at 2323 Marshall sometime between Saturday and Monday. Items were valued at $760.

Meanwhile, Ray A. Purkerson of 7707 Lynnhaven Ave. said $450 in assorted tools were taken from his garage sometime Sunday or Monday.

According to C.L. Lewis, a gray Lincoln arc welder, valued at $1,500, was stolen from a construction site at 7900 Indiana Ave. between 5 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Monday.

John V. Serda of 3402 E. 14th St. said a color television and record player, valued at $800, were taken from his home sometime Sunday or Monday. Apparently entry was made through a back door, which had been pried open.

Joyce Baucham of 2602 Teak reported the loss of a $200 TV set Monday, telling officers that burglars had kicked down her front door to obtain the set.

According to Rebecca Ann Palmer, someone pushed a piece of cardboard from a window at her 2306 3rd St. home early Monday and made off with a stereo and CB radio, valued at $250.

The manager of a North Lubbock club reportedly had a close call this weekend when a robber stuck a pistol in his face and pulled the trigger. Fortunately for the victim, however, the weapon misfired.

The incident began about 2:45 a.m. Sunday when another employee, Paul Douglas Kirkpatrick, got off work at the club and went to his car. After he started the vehicle, Kirkpatrick said, an unknown man opened his door and confronted him with a pistol.

The victim said the bandit, who appeared "nervous and frightened," ordered him out of the car and demanded his wallet. After being handed the billfold and two rolls of quarters, the bandit reportedly made Kirkpatrick walk to a corner of the building and get on his knees. The victim said he refused, scuffled with the robber and broke free.

Reports indicated Kirkpatrick ran inside the club and told manager Larry Grant to call the police. When Grant opened the door, the robber reportedly stuck the pistol in his face and pulled the trigger. The gun failed to fire, and Grant slammed and locked the door.

According to reports, the victims called police, waited about 30 minutes and went to the police department later that day to report the incident.

Verbal Disputes Follow Clash

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodia claimed Monday to have dealt Vietnam a defeat in the border war between the two Communist neighbors, but Thai intelligence sources said Vietnamese troops were entrenched well inside Cambodia. But much of the new fighting in the conflict appeared to consist of propaganda barrages via state radio. President Carter's security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, meanwhile, described the conflict as a "proxy war" between the Soviet Union and China with the Soviets backing Vietnam and China backing Cambodia. The official Soviet news agency Tass brushed off the suggestion Monday and said the statement demonstrates a Western desire "...to see that Soviet-Chinese relations remain spoiled..." In the propaganda warfare, Cambodian radio accused Vietnam of waging an invasion aimed at overthrowing the Cambodian leadership. Hanoi's official Voice of Vietnam attacked the charge as "brazen slanderous allegations" and said the fighting was over Cambodian incursions into Vietnamese territory. The Vietnamese rejected as "fabricated" Cambodian claims to have retaken the Parrot's Beak area of Cambodia, which juts into southern Vietnam. The Thai sources said Vietnam may have had minor losses in the Ha Tien area, at the southern tip of the border, and around the Cambodian town of Snoul about 13 miles from the frontier. They regard Cambodian claims of "great historic victories" as grossly exaggerated. The Thai sources say the militarily superior Vietnamese probably have gone as far into Cambodia as they intend to and now are consolidating their gains. Cambodia has acknowledged setbacks but claims they are temporary. Radio Phnom Penh broadcast a letter attributed to former Cambodian head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk which blasted the Vietnamese as "aggressor forces" and "lackeys." Sihanouk, said by some observers to be a virtual prisoner of the radical Communist Phnom Penh regime, has emerged briefly in recent days as a critic of Vietnam. While in exile in China, he headed a government that opposed Lon Nol's U.S.-backed regime. But he was not included by the Communists in the government after their victory in April, 1975. Brzezinski, in a CBS television interview Sunday, said, "The Vietnamese are clearly supported by the Soviet Union politically and the Cambodians are supported politically and perhaps militarily by the Chinese. I find it very interesting primarily as the first case of a proxy war between China and the Soviet Union." But Brzezinski acknowledged intelligence reports that there is no evidence of Chinese or Soviet advisers in the field. Vietnamese and Cambodians have fought border disputes for more than 1,000 years. Ethnic antagonism between the two is high. The roots of the current conflict date to 1972 when the newly formed Cambodian Communist Party tried to tighten control over North Vietnamese stationed in Cambodia. The Cambodians tried to require permits for transit of men and supplies by their then-allies, and a number of clashes were reported. Several intelligence sources pieced together this overview of the fighting to date: —Cambodian forces in small units have counter-attacked in several spots but no major Cambodian assault is foreseen soon. —Vietnamese infantry, armor and air power have struck near or into the key Mekong River town of Neak Luong, 55 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, and virtually stopped the flow of supplies on the river from the rice-rich border area to the capital. —Vietnam controls the Parrot's Beak area near Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. The area was the site of the American incursion into Cambodia in 1970. —Vietnam has made inroads into the southeastern corner of Cambodia but has not crossed to the west bank of the Mekong River, a move which would threaten the underbelly of Phnom Penh.

Commissioners Court Applies For Detoxification Center Grant

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Assured that county funds won't be involved, the Lubbock County Commissioners Court voted Monday to apply for a $136,000 federal-state grant to set up a detoxification center for alcohol abusers here. And the county's court-at-law judges said the project — expected to be implemented by May — will fit in handily with a special probation program they've just initiated for persons guilty of driving while intoxicated. The detoxification program, called by County Judge Rod Shaw the "missing link" in alcoholism services here, has been proposed by the Lubbock Regional Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center. The center's board of trustees meets this afternoon to consider a formal endorsement of the project. Dr. Ron Whittington, MHMR executive director, says funds may be available from the Governor's Criminal Justice Division to establish the detoxification program. He asked the county commissioners court to be the vehicle in applying for such monies.

tain the detoxification center as the grant runs out. Whittington said the program would need an initial annual grant of $136,000. As that grant is phased out over a five-year period, he said, other funding — from increases in MHMR's annual state allocation and from contributions by local Alcoholics Anonymous groups — would keep the program going. Some commissioners, notably Alton Brazell, expressed "strong reservations" about the proposed grant application, fearing the county may be responsible for assuming future funding of the detoxification center. The center, backed by numerous government officials and community groups, would provide facilities for alcoholics and persons arrested on alcohol-related charges to sleep off their stupor and receive medical care and counseling. The center would attempt to channel such persons into other, long-term programs, such as half-way houses, already available for the rehabilitation of alcoholics. J.Q. Warnick and E.H. Boedeker, judges of the county's courts-at-law, told commissioners in a letter the detoxification center would be "very beneficial to this community and would be an adjunct to the alcohol offender program" they started last week for DWI cases. The judges said they are now requiring persons guilty of DWI to attend alcohol offender courses sponsored by the local MHMR agency as a condition to probation. DWI offenders are required to pay a $35 fee for the program and attend all four sessions, the judges said. They expect to channel 475 to 500 persons into the courses this year. The proposed detoxification center, the judges said, could assist in sobering up DWIs and getting them into such a counseling and education course on the prevention of alcohol abuse.

Soviets Repudiate Proxy War Theory

MOSCOW (AP) — The official Soviet news agency Tass brushed off as "groundless" Monday a report that Soviet advisers are aiding Vietnam in the border war against Cambodia. It rebutted in particular a statement on a CBS television program Sunday by Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, that the Indochina conflict is a "proxy war" between the Soviet Union and China. Brzezinski said, "The Vietnamese are clearly supported by the Soviet Union politically and the Cambodians are supported politically and perhaps militarily by the Chinese." Tass said the "proxy war" theory demonstrates a Western "desire to see that Soviet-Chinese relations remained spoiled, still better — tense, and count to poison the international atmosphere." It said Brzezinski "obviously passes off the desirable for the real."

Auto Companies Dispute Slowdown Predictions

DETROIT (UPI) — Two of the "Big Three" auto companies Monday disputed the government's gloomy predictions that U.S. cars sales will dip in 1978 and force the layoff of 10,000 workers. General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. officials stood by their 1977 year-end predictions that domestic car sales and production will keep pace or surpass last year's near-record figures and any temporary production slowdowns will be absorbed without significant layoffs. Chrysler officials, who last September predicted an increase in both company and industry sales in 1978, were silent on latest government predictions contained in the Commerce Department's annual industrial outlook. American Motors Corp., which already has begun laying off workers, also declined comment. The government report, released in Washington last weekend, predicted gains in sales in all of the nation's top 10 manufacturing industries except autos. It said car sales would be down 1 percent, and trucks and chassis off 4 percent. The decline would follow record sales of 15 million vehicles in 1977. The report said motor vehicle sales last year accounted for record shares of personal income and probably cannot be maintained in 1978.

FROSTY HEADING SOUTH—Frosty, a giant snowman, appears to be looking for a ride south as he hitchhikes along Milwaukee River Parkway in Glendale, Wis. The snow hitchhiker is the creation of Bob Rasmussen. Monday's weather menu included snow squalls in the Great Lakes, sub-freezing weather in the South and coastal floods with plummeting temperatures and hurricane-force winds in the Northeast. For the South Plains the forecast for today is 50 percent chance of snow. (AP Laserphoto)

Administration Stands Firm On Farm Policies

(Continued From Page One) producing commodities and to stop buying all but essential goods until farm prices are raised. Bergland said Carter asked if the strike has had any effect so far on commodity prices and the supply of food. "I had to tell him that there was no evidence that it has had any noticeable impact on the markets," Bergland said. Carter "simply asked to be kept informed" about the strike and the farm situation, Bergland said. "I know of no plans for us to present to meet with this so-called strike group." Bergland said that he "kind of put it on them" at last Friday's meeting to come up with a specific plan on how to proceed on raising market prices of farm commodities, control production and solve what he said would be many other problems which would arise. Bergland said that he does not himself plan to meet further with the strike leaders. The next move is for them to develop a course of action, he said. "I have no intention of calling a conference to which I invite them to come here and spell out this in detail," he said. "But if they have a plan and want to come here and discuss it with me I'd be willing to do that. I'd be delighted."

100 Percent Parity Asked The strike leaders want commodity prices to be raised to 100 percent of parity, an economic yardstick which theoretically gives farmers the same purchasing power as their forebears had in 1910-14. Prices of farm commodities generally are far below the full parity level. Last year they averaged 67 percent of parity, the lowest level since 1933. Bergland said the leaders in Omaha rejected the idea that direct federal subsidies should be paid farmers to give them full parity. But some strike leaders want the government to ensure that all farm commodities be sold for 100 percent of parity. However, Bergland said that this would require legislation and that such a program also would involve many other factors, including the regulation of farm production. "I doubt very much if there are many members of Congress that are prepared to vote for that...with those kind of controls," Bergland said. One problem, he said, is that the strike group "has not attempted to translate their movement into political action by bringing matters to the Congress in the way of a very positive kind of strategy."

County Adds Subdivision Paving Rule

(Continued From Page One) mended the revised subdivision regulations, especially the requirement on paving, which had been optional. Making developers pave streets, he said, will ensure that county taxpayers aren't stuck with the bill. The revised subdivision rules also stress that developments within the extrajurisdiction of any city must meet the standards of that city before approval from the commissioners court can be obtained. Pay Grievance Aired Also Monday, Griffin was asked to study the validity of a petition signed by 189 county employees, including a few elected officials, seeking a hearing before the county's salary grievance committee. The employees are asking a 10 percent pay hike and want the committee's support in that effort. However, County Judge Rod Shaw — non-voting chairman of the grievance panel — said he can't find "anything in the (state) statute that permits employees to petition" for a committee hearing. Shaw said, as he reads the law, the salary grievance procedure is open to "any elected county or precinct officer" but does not apply to rank-and-file workers. Shaw asked Griffin to determine whether that interpretation is correct. Shaw said he wants to treat the employees' petition "with all courtesy," and that he realizes many county workers are underpaid. But he doubts whether the grievance committee could hear the appeal of the non-elected workers. And he doesn't believe a grievance by the two elected officials, a justice of the peace and a constable, who signed the petition, could be expanded to include all county employees as a class. The grievance committee has the power to recommend salary increases to the commissioners court. Also Monday, commissioners appointed Benny Brito to the county welfare board.—JEFF SOUTH

News Ruling Appeal Rejected By Court

(Continued From Page One) whether the state court's ruling was based on federal or state claims. Presumably, the case could return here. In letting stand two other decisions by lower courts, the court handed the news media other setbacks in its attempt to give more comprehensive coverage to trials. Review Refused The court refused to review an order by a federal judge in South Carolina barring all participants in the much-publicized criminal trial of a state senator from talking to news reporters. Several news organizations and individual newsmen had challenged the order given by U.S. District Judge J. Robert Martin Jr. in the trial last year of then-Sen. J. Ralph Gasque, who was convicted of defrauding the federal government by misusing federal manpower funds. The organizations said the order infringed on their constitutional rights to gather news. The Supreme Court also refused to hear an appeal of a West Virginia man who claimed he was denied an open trial on charges stemming from his holding 13 hostages at gunpoint in a Cleveland office building. Leach Appeal Refused Ashby Leach of Huntington, W. Va., contended that his right to an open trial was denied when the presiding judge prohibited him and his attorneys from talking to reporters or the public. In other matters Monday, the court: —Cleared the way for a trial on charges by the two sons of convicted spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg that New York lawyer Louis Nizer and two publishing firms illegally used copyrighted materials for Nizer's book about the Rosenbergs' 1953 execution. —Left intact a court-imposed ban on importing the skins of baby seals from South Africa, a significant legal victory for eight animal-welfare groups. —Turned down an appeal by Vesco Co., a company controlled by fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco, that it should not have to pay a $2.4 million debt owed by Vesco. The debt is owed to the International Controls Corp. —Agreed to settle a dispute between the federal government and New Mexico over water rights in national forests — particularly Gila National Forest in southwestern New Mexico. Shah Of Iran Backs Sadat's Peace Effort ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — The Shah of Iran plunged into a more active role in Middle East diplomacy Monday, giving his unqualified support to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace offensive. "I have come to express my feelings of admiration and friendship to President Sadat... We hope what your president is doing will bring peace," Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi said on his arrival in this palm-lined Nile resort city for talks with Sadat. "I think Egypt is doing precisely what we believe is right." Center For Meetings Aswan has become a center for meetings between Sadat and other world leaders, including President Carter, who stopped here last Wednesday during his seven-nation foreign tour, which also included a visit to Iran for talks with the shah. After conferring with the shah in Tehran, Carter said the Iranian monarch — most powerful non-Arab leader in the Middle East — was leaning toward support of Sadat's initiative, begun with a dramatic journey to Jerusalem for talks with Israeli leaders last November. But the Iranian leader's forthright support came as a critical boost for Sadat at a time when the Egyptian-Israeli peace dialogue, already deadlocked over the issue of a Palestinian state, appeared to have run into new snags on the question of Israeli settlements in the Sinai Peninsula. Police Drop Case Against City Man A capital murder charge in a Wichita Falls incident has been dismissed on a 28-year-old Lubbock man, according to his attorney, Bill Wischkaemper. The attorney said the charge was dismissed and Robbie Robinson of 2824 56th St. was released from Wichita Falls Jail Friday, following his Lubbock arrest late Wednesday. Robinson and an Iowa Park man had been charged in connection with the Wednesday death of 23-year-old James Thomas Cole in Wichita Falls. Cole was shot in an apparent fight at his residence. Police said as many as seven persons may have been present at Cole's residence, which he shared with roommates, when the shooting occurred.

Business Halts When Tractors Hit Littlefield

(Continued From Page One) against the threat of forced blockades if they didn't close. "We definitely accomplished what we set out to do," Hershel Wilson, a Sunnyside corn farmer, said. "I think we proved the city of Littlefield and Lamb County as a whole back the American farmer. We just got started around here a week ago, and in one day, we've closed the entire city."

Wilson and other strategists of the Littlefield shutdown claimed farmers decided to close the city because of residents' attitude toward their movement, but that their intent was not to disrupt business as completely as they did. So effective were the farmers' efforts, motorists passing through town and some of the farmers themselves were frequently heard trying without success to find the one, place open to fill up their gas tanks or their stomachs before leaving town. "We farmers just got together and decided we'd see how the city felt about the American Agriculture Movement and the Littlefield farmers," Wilson said. "You know last week we had a little tractorcade through town, and some of the merchants just watched and said 'look at the farmers out on their toy tractors.' So we thought we'd just see how they stood behind us."

Most Close Voluntarily Littlefield farmer Dale Thompson said most businesses called strike headquarters and offered to close in sympathy with the movement as soon as plans for the shutdown were announced. The remainder of the firms said they too would close as soon as farmers contacted them. Picketing farmers' wives managed to close major chain stores by setting up walking pickets in front of the stores until employees locked up and went home. A small group of tractors encircled a truck-tractor trying to deliver new pickups to a car dealer that said he would comply, but then tried to continue business as usual. The farmers eventually gave in, but the car dealer locked his doors after lunch. The local tax office closed, and school was scheduled to recess at 2 p.m. Mayor J.E. Chisholm refused to sign an official proclamation, but verbally announced Monday would be American Agriculture Day several weeks ago. Banks, required to be open by federal laws, opened late and some closed early. Lamb County commissioners also proclaimed it American Agriculture Day in the county and merchants in Sudan, Spade, Fieldton, Pep and Amherst also closed. But with almost everything in Littlefield closed voluntarily, the group had little to do but talk of their problems. "Why am I out here," Thompson said. "I'm not sure I really know, but last year Bulah lost their school, and with it we lost people. If we lose much else, there won't be anything left to keep people, to keep the little towns from drying up."

Thompson said. "It's sort of like fighting for the way you've lived for years to keep on living. Without successful farmers, nobody can pay the taxes to keep things alive, and without that, you don't have a town." An American flag hung upside down from a pole on J.L. Cox's truck, one of the vehicles blockading the Littlefield club. "It means dire distress, and that's the predicament we're in now," Cox, a farmer-turned-spraying contractor because his farm didn't pay, said. "We've just set around here long enough waiting for the good times to come to us," Wilson argued. "Now we're going to go after them. I don't want you to starve to death, but I don't want to starve either."

'Violations' By Schools Disputed (Continued From Page One) here were "receiving instruction in English as a second language, or in a language other than English." But when the civil rights team visited Lubbock, Herrera said, only 1,635 students — of whom 1,344 were Mexican-Americans — were enrolled in official bilingual programs. Herrera said there is "no evidence that the 1,344 Hispanic students... included all of the students that had been identified as limited English-speaking." He noted that Lubbock's official bilingual program is "restricted to selected schools and, in some cases, specific grades at these schools." There is "no educational justification for limiting participation in bilingual programs to only 17 campuses of the 36 elementary schools" in Lubbock, Herrera said. (Actually, school officials pointed out, the program is limited to 16 campuses, of a total 37 elementary schools.) Herrera said the "17 schools" are "insufficient to meet the linguistic needs" of all limited English-speaking students. He found "no evidence to indicate that the district has initiated any effort" to provide services for students at other elementary and at secondary schools. Deadline Established Herrera said the district has until March 4 to propose a "specific plan" to rectify the alleged violations. That plan, he said, should include proposals and target dates for "identifying all students who use another language more frequently than English," assessing the needs of such students and designing programs for them, and hiring more bilingual teachers. Stokes and Mrs. Gryder said the criticisms simply are not valid. True, they said, the district has "official" bilingual programs at only 16 elementary schools — but only because those schools are where the needs are greatest. Besides the 92 bilingual teachers in the formal bilingual programs, they said, there are hundreds of other teachers scattered throughout the other elementary and all secondary schools capable of giving bilingual help to students who need it. "All students who need extra help in English language skills are getting it," Mrs. Gryder said. "We may not call it a formal bilingual program, we don't necessarily sit the child down and say, 'This is bilingual education,' but we are providing the special services these students need." The formal bilingual programs — which are funded with federal, state and local monies — enroll the 1,600 or so students Herrera refers to, Stokes said. The 2,500-pupil figure is the number served by "informal" programs, at the secondary level, for instance, he said. Stokes said the comment on "8,488 non-English dominant" students refers to the district's total of Spanish-surnamed youngsters in 1975 — not necessarily to pupils of limited English-speaking ability. Only Portion Need Aid In fact, Mrs. Gryder said, only a portion of Spanish-surnamed students actually need extra help in English. Stokes said the Office for Civil Rights must realize that formal bilingual instruction is not the only way to meet the needs of students limited in English. Other informal ways, and instruction in English as a second language, can be just as effective, he said. He also said that instead of administering language tests, Lubbock screens students for extra help in English or enrollment in bilingual programs on the basis of observation and conversation with teachers, parents and students — methods the district feels are more accurate than tests. And, Stokes said, the district doesn't officially categorize students by language deficits because instruction is "individualized to each student's needs."

Weather

(Continued From Page One) day becoming partly cloudy by Thursday afternoon. However warmer temperatures cannot be expected over the South Plains until the weekend. The extended forecast calls for temperatures to rise only to the mid teens in the north portions of West Texas and into the 30s in the southern regions through Thursday, with afternoon highs climbing into the 30s north and 60s south by Friday, according to the National Weather Service. Highs Saturday should reach the 60s across the South Plains. Clear skies remained over the much of the state Monday, although the Panhandle and far West Texas areas had partly cloudy skies. Sunny skies however, did not allow temperatures to rise above the 30s in the Panhandle and only into the 50s in the southern regions of the state. Single-digit temperature readings were reported in Wichita Falls and Amarillo before dawn Monday.

Controversy Fierce Over Golden Eagles' Killing Of Lambs

DEATH APPROACHES

IN THE EAGLE'S GRASP

VICTOR AND VICTIM

JOB FINISHED

HUNT (AP) — The golden eagle — with its bold approach to living courageously and fearlessly in the wild — symbolizes American ideals.

But to many American ranchers and farmers the eagle is nothing more than a fierce predator that preys on helpless little lambs, goats and young calves. The eagle is protected by federal law. But stockmen ask who is to protect them from the eagle.

Three men were recently prosecuted in Uvalde, Texas, for killing eagles, stirring a controversy between environmentalists and ranchmen.

Accompanying this story is a dramatic series of photos showing a golden eagle swooping down and killing a lamb.

True, it was a staged event and the lamb was tethered near the blind of San Angelo Standard Times photographer Scott Campbell.

However, Campbell said he only had to wait an hour for a gathering of eagles. One of them attacked the lamb.

Ranchers may say the pictorial evidence disputes claims by government biologists that the eagle only kills lambs once in a while and that they only attack weak or dying lambs.

Dr. Dede Armentrout of Brownwood, southeast regional representative of the National Audubon Society, says "attacks on flocks are rare. Very rare. An eagle's predominant diet, as evidenced through the analysis of material found in the stomach, is rodents and jack rabbits."

"The society believes the claims of eagle depredation by ranchers are inflated and their claims are unrealistic," she says.

"Eagles may kill one lamb or so."

Bill Sims of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association, says a study in Montana at the Helle Ranch showed that 76 per cent of lamb deaths in 1974 were caused by eagles. That amounted to 1,092 lambs, or 32 per cent of the lamb crop for the ranch.

The Audubon Society asked for more study of the situation.

Interior Department representatives have admitted that eagles kill lambs but offer no solution.

It seems as though eagles will concentrate in one area, which accounts for sighting of a flock of eagles at one time. That area may be a West Texas ranch, thus that owner may suffer many lamb losses while his neighbors are unaffected.

"Frankly, we doubted that eagles killed lambs or kids. Now, however, for the first time, there is absolute proof that golden eagles kill lambs." — Tucker Sutherland, editor-publisher of the San Angelo Standard Times, said.

Adair Fire Team Struggles With Raging Blaze

LOVING, N.M. (Special)—Firefighters this morning continue to wrestle with a raging natural gas well near here, hoping to snuff it out today or Wednesday.

Early Monday firefighters briefly blasted out the blaze but had to reignite it when they could not cap the escaping gas.

"Red" Adair, the world's best-known firefighter, Monday told the Avalanche-Journal that the fire was burning 9 to 10 million cubic feet of gas daily.

Adair has sent of his men—Raymond Henry and Paul Sauliner—to the blaze which began Wednesday morning. "I'm going to fly out there (Loving) if I get caught up here," Adair said from his Houston office.

Adair said Monday's explosion blasted off the rotary table, which turns the drilling pipe, giving workers a better look at what needs to be done next.

Eddy County Sheriff's Sgt. Doc West said a 500-pound charge was dropped into the wellhead about 11:30 a.m. Monday, knocking out the raging fire.

However, workers at the scene had to reignite the escaping gas when they were unable to cap it.

Adair said his two-man crew, along with about 50 other men, should need no more assistance and that their jobs might soon be completed. "They've done a hell of a job so far," he said.

The well, which belongs to Delta Drilling Co. of Tyler, was being drilled on a 13,000-foot contract by Brahaney Drilling Co. of Midland when flowing gas got out of control Tuesday morning and was ignited Wednesday.

James Wible, executive vice president of Delta, said the mishap, which had not caused any injuries as of late this morning, began when the column of mud containing the gas flow pressure collapsed. He said the strength of the flow pressure had been underestimated, and broke through the mud barrier.

Wible said he did not know what caused the escaping gas to be ignited, but added the burning fuel was safer than if there was no fire at all. "We don't want flammable clouds of gas floating over the country," he said.

Wible said he estimated the gas was escaping at a rate of 9 to 10 million cubic feet daily, and would cost his company at least $400,000. He said there was about a "50-50" chance the blaze would be capped by the end of the week.

"The main thing right now is getting it stopped as soon as possible," said Adair, who just finished a job in Algiers and needed to get back to Canada where another task waits.

Wible said shields to protect the men from the burning gas had been completed. The executive said the gas pressure was about 5,700 pounds per square inch, spewing through a hole 8 inches wide.

Adair works with a crew totaling only about 10 men. He said Henry and Sauliner needed no more assistance from Houston because of the capable hands who are at the well site now.

One of those men, "Three-Finger George" Curry, is a former Adair crew member who is at Loving battling the fire. Adair said Three-Finger is doing the same thing here that he did in a John Wayne movie — driving a bulldozer.

The well caught fire about 5 a.m. Wednesday, soon after workers had cleared the area and pulled away movable equipment.

Seagraves Coach Feted At Chamber's Banquet

By MONA HARVEY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SEAGRAVES — Texas Speaker of the House Bill Clayton shared the spotlight with Seagraves' high school football coach here during the Chamber of Commerce Banquet Monday night.

Jim Eddins, high school football coach whose team was runner-up in state gridiron competition this year, was honored as "Citizen of the Year."

Eddins was described by Supt. W.L. Willingham Jr. as "a master teacher. He has every kid at heart whether on the field or in the classroom."

The Seagraves Eagles coach has compiled a 62-11-1 record during the six years he has been coaching at the high school.

Keynote speaker Clayton, a Springlake farmer-businessman, told the audience of 200 in the Seagraves Community Building that the plight of farmers is beginning to be realized across the nation.

Describing the present cost squeeze as unequaled except for Depression days, Clayton said. "All the farmer wants is his fair share — parity in the marketplace."

The veteran legislator said the American public reads so much about corruption in government that they believe everyone associated with government is corrupt.

Clayton, who is seeking a third term as Speaker, commented "It's hard to find good men to run for office."

Police Seek Cause Of Family's Death

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Simon Peter Nelson tried frantically for a week to save his collapsing marriage — with hard work, flowers and vows to stop drinking. But his wife left him anyway. Police say he then bludgeoned and stabbed his six sleeping children to death.

The 270-pound Nelson, a 46-year-old employment agency counselor, is accused of beating the children, aged 3 to 12, so badly they had to be identified through fingerprints when their bodies were found Sunday.

In a court appearance Monday, Nelson heard the charges placed against him and received a court-appointed attorney. He entered no plea, and another hearing was scheduled for Jan. 13.

Michael Weldon, Nelson's supervisor at work said Nelson told him "the whole thing started to come to a head over the weekend before and that (his wife) Ann had set down rules." Weldon said Nelson agreed to stop drinking, lose weight, shave his beard and trim his hair.

Weldon said Nelson also began working "harder than usual" in an effort to "straighten things out."

"He was a changed man," Weldon said. "This marriage and his family were so important to him."

But, Weldon said, when Mrs. Nelson talked to attorney Carl Winkler on Thursday, he advised her to leave town to think things over. She checked into a Milwaukee motel Thursday night and on Friday, Weldon said, she told her lawyer to go ahead with the divorce.

Weldon said the lawyer called Nelson at work about 3 p.m. Friday and Nelson became so upset he had to leave the office. Weldon said Nelson met with the attorney after the phone call.

Later that afternoon, Weldon said, Nelson called his supervisor and got a salary advance and some time off to follow Mrs. Nelson to Milwaukee. "He said he was going to try to work things out with his wife," Weldon said.

Weldon said Nelson called him at about 11 p.m. Friday and talked for about 30 minutes. In the background, Nelson said, were noises that sounded like "kids playing."

Weldon said Nelson told him he had dropped off some clothes at the home of a friend, Mike Clark.

"He said, 'I'm going to pick up Ann, and if she wants me to, I'll stay with Mike.'" Weldon said Nelson seemed "in full control of himself."

Fifteen minutes later, according to Milwaukee police, Nelson called Ernest Johnson, a family friend, in Waukesha, Wis., who agreed to drive to Milwaukee to try to talk Mrs. Nelson out of the divorce.

Johnson told police he arrived in Milwaukee shortly after midnight, tried to call Nelson in Rockford at 3 a.m., but got no answer.

Johnson and Mrs. Nelson then called Rockford police and asked them to check the house. Neighbors said Rockford police knocked on the Nelson home door twice before dawn, but no one answered.

Nelson then appeared at the Milwaukee motel room shortly after 6 a.m. A man, believed to be Johnson, told the motel clerk to call police because there was trouble in room 425. Police arrived and arrested Nelson for beating his wife.

Mrs. Nelson told Milwaukee police that Nelson said he had killed their children. Rockford police were notified, broke into the house, and found the bloodied bodies.

In the motel room, police found flowers and a card signed "Love, Peter" — evidently one more effort to save the marriage.

Energy 'Inaction' Draws Concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, in a report Monday to his Cabinet on his overseas trip, said foreign leaders expressed "grave concern" about American inaction on energy. He said the inaction is harming efforts to curb oil prices and nuclear spread.

White House press secretary Jody Powell, who reported Carter's statements, said the president was surprised by the "depth of concern" he heard overseas about excessive U.S. energy imports and their effects, including damage to the dollar.

Powell quoted Carter as telling his department heads he found "grave concern expressed in every foreign capital." In reply to the foreign leaders, Powell said, the president restated his commitment to make energy his top priority.

"It all indicates the importance of moving rapidly on energy when Congress comes back," the press secretary said. Congress, currently in recess, returns to work Jan. 19. Energy conferees are expected to try again on Jan. 23 to reach agreement on a bill.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, who left before the Cabinet meeting for energy discussions in Morocco and Saudi Arabia, said Sunday the president told foreign leaders he might impose oil import fees if Congress fails to enact an acceptable energy program.

Most administrative actions Carter could take in such an event, including the imposition of oil import fees, "are not the most desirable," Powell said. He cited "unintended side effects" of such actions in other areas such as the economy.

Schlesinger will tell the Saudis "we certainly would like to see the freeze on oil prices continue," Powell said.

But he added that the Saudi response is likely to be something like: "We see the dollar falling. That's what you pay us in. One reason for the fall is your trade deficit. The main problem with that is your energy imports. When are you going to do something?"

Powell said this country's failure so far to deal with its energy problem also is making other nations "question our credibility" when the United States asks them not to contribute to possible spread of nuclear weapons by generating energy with plutonium.

Powell said it might be necessary to get tougher "down the road" than even the toughest energy plan likely to come from Congress this year. But he said a survey by pollster Pat Caddell shows a bright spot: Americans are more energy conscious.

The poll shows the number of people who name energy among the nation's top four problems "quadrupled over the past year," Powell said. Asked for the figures in the poll, he said the percentage went from "a little under 10 to over 30 percent."

"It's not as high as it should be," Powell said. "But it's a rather remarkable increase in public concern."

Schlesinger told reporters Sunday he met Friday with Chairman Henry M. Jackson of the Senate energy committee, who told him to tell Carter "he and his colleagues will make a whole new effort" to end the congressional impasse over energy.

The deadlock is centered on whether to end the federal ceiling on natural gas prices.

Jackson helped scuttle a plan for a compromise before Christmas. It would have retained price controls but permitted more than two-fold increases in prices over the next six years.

Astronomer Sets Comet Speech

Astronomer Dr. Fred L. Whipple will speak on the physical and chemical nature of comets at 3 p.m. Thursday in Room 60 of the Science Building on the Texas Tech University campus.

Whipple, who discovered six new comets, is director of the Smithsonian Institute Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass. He has been a staff member of the Harvard College observatory since 1931 and served as chairman of the astronomy department there.

Whipple is appearing here as part of the Harlow-Shapley visiting lecture program sponsored by the American Astronomical Society.

He also will speak at 7:30 p.m. in the Moody Science Building at Wayland Baptist College in Plainview. His topic there will be "Comets from Heat to Tail" including a slide presentation.

He developed the theory of the icy comet model and has done research on meteors, planetary nebulae, the stellar and solar system evolution as well as tracking of artificial earth satellites.

Powell said this country's failure so far to deal with its energy problem also is making other nations "question our credibility" when the United States asks them not to contribute to possible spread of

LOOKING UP — New Orleans Associated Press reporter David Rosenthal doesn't spend all his time looking up, it just seems that way when he interviews Louisiana State Basketball players Julie Gross, right, and Marea Jackson. However, at 5-foot-4, Rosenthal has some definite views on Randy Newman's song "Short People." (AP Laserphoto)

Short Reporter Leery Of Song

EDITOR'S NOTE: David Rosenthal, 27, is a short, rather long haired AP reporter in New Orleans who is often mistaken for a short, rather long haired high school student. Here is his look down at a popular song about persons of similar stature.

By DAVID N. ROSENTHAL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — And I used to like Randy Newman. Interviewed him once and in between numbles, he seemed like a nice fellow.

But my appreciation is beginning to pall. His latest single, "Short People," may be satire, but most of the world doesn't realize it. And I am getting a little sick of tall folks humming it when I walk into the room.

It's tough to laugh at lines like "short people got no reason to live" when you are 5-foot-4, standing on what Mr. Newman so eloquently describes as "little baby legs."

For those who missed the catchy tune and the furor that has accompanied it, the song is a litany of short people's shortcomings — their little hands and little eyes, little noses and little teeth, the platform shoes on their nasty little feet. Not to mention their little cars going beep, beep, and their little voices going peep, peep, peep.

It's really rather funny, and I know he's only joshing when he says you have to pick me up just to say hello. But I don't think anyone else is fool-man. Usually I crack them first in self-defense.

Heightism, if one will allow a bit of literary license, is one of the unspoken discriminations of this age.

Probably wasn't so bad in Napoleon's day. He didn't really have a some advantages. I wear designer suits at half the price because I can still fit in the largest boys' size. I've never hit my head on a low door-frame. And I'm all the kiddies' pal.

Not that I haven't wanted to be taller. It's taken a great deal of restraint not to blow $8.95 on one of those back-of-the-magazine ads which guarantee to add inches in weeks. But I keep having this image of a huge medieval rack.

However, if I thought that would work, I'd probably do it because it is a fact of life that society has all sorts of ways to make a short person feel small.

How many women's image of Mr. Right is "Short, Dark and Handsome?"

How much money do short basketball players make?

How tall is he?

I'm not sure what can be done about the attitude toward short people. Except to say that because of it, we of the short persuasion often end up with lousy self-images, feeling we just don't match up with our taller brethren.

And that's not true. I'm as good as anyone — sitting down.

ing — not the guy who started singing it at a bar when I was trying to whisper sweet nothings into a girl's ear, nor the basketball player who broke into it when he spied me.

Even my own mother, half of what made me the size I am, often comments on how short someone is.

"But, mom," I say, "he's three inches taller than I am."

"Well," says she, "I just don't think of you as being that short."

She may not, but everyone else does. In my short life, I must have heard every short joke known to Napoleonic complex then because people didn't get very tall.

But he'd have one now for sure. He'd only have to be a short kid and have someone ask his mother "How old is he?" when he's just told them. Or be a short adult and have to buy shoes at Buster Brown's. Or flash an American Express card and have a saleswoman ask, "Is this your credit card or your daddy's?"

I suppose, however, the saleswoman can be excused. Most of those who frequent boys' departments are either mothers or 12 years old.

Actually, being short does have

Inflation Barometer Being Phased Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's Wholesale Price Index, in use since 1913 as an economic barometer, is being phased out in favor of what the Labor Department claims is a more reliable measure of inflation before it hits the consumer.

Wholesale prices generally foreshadow changes at the retail level, but most economists have long argued that the Wholesale Price Index doesn't do a very accurate job.

So on Thursday when the Labor Department issues its December report on prices in the producer (wholesale) markets, a new yardstick will be used. It will be called the Producer Price Index.

Julius Shiskin, commissioner of labor statistics said double-counting of price increases was a problem in the Wholesale Price Index all-commodities index.

"The finished goods index is a superior index," he told a news briefing Monday. He also said it's a more accurate presentation of the inflation process and less misleading than the Wholesale Price Index all-commodities index.

In computing the new index, government economists will look at the same materials as in the current Wholesale Price Index. Only the materials will be organized differently to avoid some of the duplication in prices.

The monthly Wholesale Price Index takes prices on goods at various stages in the production pipeline, including some raw materials such as iron ore, semifin-ished goods such as steel, and some finished goods such as automobiles.

Because producers along the production pipeline pass on price increases, a price change for a raw material or semi-finished good may be reflected again later in a finished product, and the price rise is thereby exaggerated.

The new wholesale-price measure will focus attention on finished goods, which Shiskin said will give a better indication of the eventual price changes at the retail level.

Finished goods are those commodities that are ready for sale to the ultimate user, either an individual or a business firm. Producer finished goods include commodities such as machine tools, trucks and farm equipment. Consumer finished goods include both foods and other items purchased by retailers.

Consumer foods include unprocessed foods such as eggs and fresh vegetables, as well as processed foods such as meats and bakery products that are ready for sale on supermarket shelves. Consumer finished goods include durables, such as autos, furniture and jewelry, and nondurables such as clothing and gasoline.

The current Wholesale Price Index is based on mail questionnaires to about 9,000 businesses. Prices are taken on 2,700 commodities, including food products, fuels and manufactured goods.

The basic data and method of gathering the information will be the same for the new index, but Shiskin said the government will gradually expand its base of information to cover 500 industries, twice the current number.

Councilman West Announces Candidacy For Mayor's Office

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In what came as no surprise to anyone, Lubbock Councilman Dirk West Monday became the first formal candidate for mayor.

West's announcement, made at a morning news conference, confirmed widespread rumors that he will be one of two serious contenders to succeed Mayor Roy Bass, who recently declared he will not seek a third term.

Council colleague Alan Henry, also frequently mentioned as a possible candidate, Monday said he will announce his future political plans within the "next few days."

Henry said West's candidacy "is only one of many factors to be considered in making my decision."

Both West's and Henry's council terms expire this spring.

West, long a law-and-order advocate and police department supporter, singled out crime control as the focus of his campaign and mayorship, if elected.

"I am a real redneck when it comes to crime control," he said. "We must get tougher on law violators, work harder at crime prevention, back our police 100 percent and make Lubbock a very unpopular place for the criminal element."

West said his approach to crime and traffic problems is simple: "abide by the law or pay for it."

Although he did not propose specific measures control, West said that "between now and election time, I hope to have formulated plans to present."

However, his overall approach will be to "start leaning on these people (criminals) a little harder or maybe a lot harder," West added.

Other issues he would address as mayor include controlling the cost of living in Lubbock and guiding the city through "growing pains" and accompanying problems, he said.

"As Lubbock continues to grow, more and expanded services must be provided," West said. "Very careful planning and an ultraconservative approach is the only answer. In spending tax money, there comes a time when you must say, 'that's enough!'"

As Lubbock continues to grow from a "big country town into a big city," West said, there will be problems that he proposes to approach in a "hard-nosed, tough-minded" way.

Necessities such as sewers, streets, water, recreation, arts, and fire and police protection will have to be provided at the same time that an "orderly and healthy development for the homeowner and the businessman" is conducted, he said.

"Lubbock looks great to those folks freezing and out of work in other parts of the country, and they are headed our way," he warned.

His mayoral candidacy notwithstanding, West reaffirmed his dislike of politics and politicians. In fact, he said, the mayorship "is the last political office I will seek."

"This would be no stepping-stone for me, because as I've said before, politicians and politics turn me off," West said.

He said he considers a "legitimate, 100 percent politician" to be anyone who makes a career out of politics, ever seeking a higher office.

Those people are "boring" to him, and he has no aspirations to follow them, he said.

to spend the rest of my life here," West added. "I don't have much, but what I do have is here."

When asked how he would handle issues regarding Lubbock Power and Light (LP&L), West, who handles the advertising account for LP&L's competitor, Southwestern Public Service Co., said he would do what he has done for the past four years: abstain from discussions and voting.

He explained that he does not believe an energy problem exists for Lubbock. "There is not one and I don't think there is apt to be one," he said.

All that would leave for council consideration is rates and regulations governing LP&L and SPS, he said.

And since he has abstained for four years from utility company discussions without any problems, West added, he does not anticipate any as mayor.

"I'm just a hired hand" for SPS, he said, adding he is not involved in the company's policies. He sees no conflict of interest if he abstains from votes and discussions.

West said he plans a low-profile campaign. Although he will designate a steering committee and campaign chairman, he said, he does not plan to raise money or have a campaign budget.

"I don't want to be obligated" to campaign financiers, he explained. All expenses will be paid out of his pocket, he added.

"I don't intend to sell myself to the public," he said. "I may be kidding myself, but I think the public knows who I am."

The mayorship is a job that "requires someone with experience," and he has that after four years as mayor pro tem, West said. The council, for which three positions will be open for the April 1 election, will need some "continuity," he said.

During his four years on the council, West said, the city has seen the opening of the Memorial Civic Center, the Lubbock International Airport, the Yellowhouse Canyon lakes, new development and annexation. But, he added, there also has been an increase in crime, a "tragic" increase in traffic fatalities and rising costs "beyond anyone's expectations."

The problems "demand attention and solutions, not a lot of talk and study," he declared.

West, who is known for what some consider to be a "flippancy" attitude toward council matters, said he does not intend to change.

"I will speak my piece and I intend to take the same approach," he said, adding, "I think you can have some fun at this job."

He pledged not to "back off of any problem that needs to be solved," even if he trods on "some toes and make a few enemies."

And, he added, "I'll listen anytime you want to talk, I'll say no to special favors and I'll spend all the time it takes to help you with a legitimate problem."

West, a native Lubbockite, is married and has three children. In addition to running an advertising agency, he taught at Tech for three years. He is a 1954 Tech graduate.

He also was in television work for four years and served as past president of the Lubbock Advertising Club. He was a member of the Parks and Recreation Board for seven years, serving three of those years as chairman.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Always a best man, but never the groom. That seems to be the fate of Don Craig on NBC's "Days of Our Lives."

Don had an odd-man-out yen for heroine Julie Banning for four years. But she upped and wed her true love, Doug Williams, after toying with Don's passions. There's been recent hope that heartthrob Don will marry Dr. Marlena Evans. Undoubtedly he will one day, but not before overcoming many years of stumbling blocks checking his way to the altar. That's the path soap opera lovers see paved. For actor Jed Allan, who plays Don, the path to soap opera idolom has been much smoother.

Jed joined the serial in 1972 as the lawyer handling Julie's divorce from Scott Banning. The role was originally intended to last a week. But Jed's dynamic combo of macho intensity and light-hearted flippancy attracted strong audience response and the role was expanded.

The actor was born Jed Allan Brown March 1, 1937, in the Bronx, New York, son of a musician father and a singer mother. As a child Jed was afflicted with a host of physical ailments, including bouts with rheumatic fever and heart problems, that left him an outsider with his school peers and with a reputation as a "bad, unruly student."

He studied radio and TV in college, planning to be a disc jockey. Instead, he apprenticed in summer stock while odd-jobbing as a bookkeeper, clothing clerk and taxicab driver. He later appeared in a three-month stint as Ace Hubbard on "Love of Life," followed by a year as Paul Britton on the defunct "Secret Storm." Jed's big shot at Broadway came with the starring role in "The Paisley Convertible" which folded its flop top after a handful of performances.

He moved to California with his wife, Toby, who is currently co-owner of a service business called Renta Yenta. In Yiddish, yenta means a busybody, someone willingly capable of accomplishing anything. Toby's company supplies everything from elephants and giraffes for lawn parties to cocktails and peacocks for beach bashes. Toby will arrange parties in a treehouse or on a yacht and will cater gourmet dinners. But years ago it was hungersville for Jed, Toby and their three, now-teenaged sons.

"I had $6 in my checking account and waiting for my tax return to arrive so I could live off that," Jed told this column's West Coast researcher, Isobel Silden. Then he was cast as one of the forest rangers during "Lassie's" last primetime wandering-days year. It was uphill after that — dozens of nighttime TV guest appearances, host of the still syndicated "Celebrity Bowling" series and tons of commercials, which he's directed several as the first step in his long-range goal of "being the best comedy director in the business."

Jed, who's been honorary mayor of Tarzana, Calif., admits that his "always-the-good-buddy" characterization of Don contrasts sharply to his own personality.

"I'm not nearly as nice as he is. I have very little patience or tolerance. I can be irrational and angry over the most inconsequential things." But he does admit he enjoys the adulation of the soap opera fans.

"They bang on the hotel door when I go on the road for promotional appearances and they range from teeny boppers to college students to middle-aged women."

And all of them are waiting for the day Don will stop being a romantic second fiddle and instead play beautiful marimba music with Marlena.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When I lie down to read, I occasionally have these skipped heart beats. It really worries me and I wonder if I should go see my doctor about it. My wife tells me you said these are harmless. — D.S.

Usually harmless, not always. These are usually not skipped beats but breaks in the pattern of beats. I mean by this that the grouping of two beats closer together than normal, followed by a pause, may give the impression of a "miss."

It's often sensed while lying down quietly — perhaps even waiting for the "skip" to occur. But if you have a healthy heart there is little to worry about.

Some are more sensitive than others to such items as tobacco or caffeine in coffee, tea or cola drinks, all stimulants that can affect heart muscle.

For most folks the problem subsides when they get up and walk around. Such beats usually disappear with normal heart activity.

But if you are like most patients, you are going to worry about this no matter what I say. So I advise you to have a checkup, which you may be due for anyway. Your doctor might find a bit of high blood pressure, which can contribute to the symptoms.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please send me any material (booklets, etc.) you have on gout, which I suspect I have. I am interested in foods that contain the material (I forgot the name) one should avoid with gout. — D.L.

Forget about the booklet. You need to find out if you have gout before launching on any diet plan. Only a doctor can diagnose it. In fact, diet (low purine) plays a somewhat minor role in gout treatment today. Effective medicines are available to control blood uric acid, which is produced from the purines. If you find you do have gout, I'll be glad to send along a copy of the booklet. Send 35 cents a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. It does include some diet suggestions.

Courtesies

EVY THURMAN
Evvy Thurman, bride-elect of Larry Ameen, was honored Thursday with a miscellaneous shower in the home of Mrs. Shirley Sanders. Four co-hostesses assisted.

Mrs. Mary Lou Thurman, mother of the bride-elect, was a special guest. The couple plans to be married Jan. 22 in the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

CAROL TROUT
Carol Trout, bride-elect of Travis Cherry, was honored Saturday with a miscellaneous shower in the home of Mrs. Gravel Scott. Co-hostesses were Mrs. Don Scott and Mrs. Debra Holly.

Special guests were Mrs. Robert Trout, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. Howard Cherry, mother of the future bridegroom.

The couple plans to be married Feb. 11 in Christ The King Catholic Church.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter, 38, has a numbness in her legs and buttocks. Tests of the spinal column and brain were negative, but the doctors said she had what they called "demyelination." No medicine or therapy was prescribed. Is this a forerunner of multiple sclerosis? She is going in for acupuncture treatments once a week. — A.A.M.

Demyelination is damage to the sheaths (coverings) of the nerves. That can be an early sign of multiple sclerosis. In view of the negative tests I can't say much more. She should be checked regularly. I question the need or value of the acupuncture. Could be a localized problem in nerves serving the leg area.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am considering using the fertility pill to help me have a baby. Just out of curiosity, what exactly does it do? — H.W.

Help you get pregnant, hopefully. The pill stimulates the pituitary gland, which is more or less "in control" of other glands, including your ovaries. The hope is that it will stimulate the ovaries sufficiently so that they will ovulate — produce an egg for potential impregnation by a sperm. A certain percentage of women using it are in for surprises, because multiple births have been reported from its use. No way to tell when this will occur, however. The pill is not taken continuously but in 10-day cycles, which your doctor will explain.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife likes to make tea by running the hot water tap until the water is hot enough. I say it's not only wasteful, but probably unhealthy. Am I right? — J.W.

Nothing unhealthy about it. Wasteful. Perhaps. Depends on how much electricity (or gas, or whatever) is used to replenish the hot water supply in the tank compared to the amount of energy required to heat up a pan of water on the stove.

Much heart trouble is preventable. Write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How To Take Care of Your Heart." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

The general rule for a jump to game in a major is that you hold good trump support, but never as many as 13 points in high cards. The general rule for going on is that the opener must start with either first-round control in at least three suits or first-round control in two and second in the other two.

South probably overbid a trifle when he failed to stop at four spades, but the slam was unbeatable.

East took his ace of hearts and put immediate pressure on South by leading back a club. South thought and decide to refuse the finesse and hope for a squeeze that would materialize if the man with the king of clubs held four diamonds. He cashed all his trumps and the king of hearts and sure enough East had to choose between unguarding his jack of diamonds or chucking the king of clubs.

The jump to game when partner has not limited his hand is never a slam invitation in itself, but obviously partner may have enough to warrant continuing to six or even to seven once or twice during a lifetime.

Clip 'n' Cook

FRANKS MANDARIN

6 to 8 franks, sliced in 1/4-inch round pieces
1 tbs. vegetable or peanut oil
1 1/2 cups liquid; reserved pineapple liquid and cold water
2 tbs. cornstarch
1 tbs. brown sugar
1 tbs. vinegar
1 tbs. lemon juice
1/2 tsp. dry mustard
Dash of ground pepper
1/2 cup minced onions
1 cup diagonally cut celery
1 13-oz. can pineapple tidbits, reserve liquid
2 11-oz. cans mandarin oranges, drained
1 sliced green pepper (optional)

Pour oil into wok and preheat uncovered to 375 degrees. Meanwhile, in small bowl, combine liquid, cornstarch, brown sugar, vinegar, lemon juice, salt, dry mustard and ginger. Stir-fry sliced franks until browned, about 2 minutes. Push up the side. Add onion, celery and green pepper (optional) and stir-fry 1 minute. Add cornstarch mixture. Combine with franks and vegetables and stir until thickened, about 2 minutes. Reduce heat to simmer. Add pineapple tidbits and orange segments. Heat, stirring gently, for 1 minutes. Serve over hot rice. Yield: 5 to 6 servings.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS AU GRATIN

2 lbs. fresh Brussels sprouts of 3 packages (10 oz. each) frozen Brussel sprouts
3 tbs. butter or margarine
1/2 cup flour
1/2 tsp. salt
Pepper to taste
3/4 cup milk
3/4 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup white wine
1 cup grate Gruyere cheese
Pre-cook Brussels sprouts by boiling in salted water for 10 minutes, or according to package directions. Drain and reserve. In skillet melt butter. Blend in flour, salt and pepper. Combine milk, broth and wine. Gradually stir into flour mixture. Add cheese and cook over low heat until mixture thickens. Add cooked Brussels sprouts. If desired turn into chafing dish over canned heat to keep warm. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

TOMATOE TASTE

Tomatoes in any form — from stewed to ketchup — often help to make a meat or fish stew taste savory.

CORNERED BEEF BARBECUE

You can "barbecue" corned beef. After simmering the meat in water until tender, pour off the water and put the meat in a shallow baking dish. Pour some barbecue sauce over it and bake, uncovered, in a preheated 350-degree oven, basting with the sauce several times, for about half an hour.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: If I didn't know better, I'd think you hit the bottle occasionally because some of your advice is really off the wall. For example: That wife who imagines her husband is Kirk Douglas when he makes love to her.

According to you it was perfectly "normal" — nothing to be concerned about — so the dumbbell went and told him about her mental substitutions!

If a wife has to think about Kirk Douglas when her own husband is right there, the least she can do is keep it to herself. I wouldn't be very flattered if I learned the reason my husband was enjoying himself so much was because he imagined I was Ann-Margaret. If he confessed such a thing to me I'd tell him to get lost.

We hear too much these days about switching, swapping, nude shows, and weird sexual practices of every conceivable type. What this country needs is someone to stand up for decency and morality. I thought you were it but I see I was wrong. — Deeply Disappointed.

Dear D.D.: The human mind is such an intricate piece of machinery that no one knows exactly how it functions — or why — particularly in the area of sexual response.

What turns some people on is a mysterious mix of everything they have ever seen, read, heard, dreamed about, plus assorted bits and pieces that are so private they are shared with no one.

I agree with you that not every person can tolerate complete openness and candor. In such cases it is best to keep your mouth shut. The wisdom lies in knowing the emotional temperament of your partner and behaving accordingly.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter. If it helps just one person clean up her act, it will be worth the space.

An open letter to every young girl who is running around with a married man:

So you think he loves you best because he does everything he can to be with you for a few stolen hours.

Where is he on the holidays? Who does he spend his birthday with (and probably yours)? Who did he go to when he was sick? Who did he take when he went on vacation?

Wake up and realize you are throwing away the best years of your life. Instead of having fun with friends your own age, you sit by the phone waiting for him to call and to say he can "get away" for a few hours.

Don't you realize you are being used? You're merely a diversion to bolster his ego. If he really planned to leave his wife for you, he would. It's easy enough to do these days.

The fact that you are willing to play second fiddle should tell you something about your opinion of yourself. Is it any wonder he has the same opinion of you?

Gather up what's left of your self-respect and get out of the back seat and the motel rooms. Find yourself a man who will be seen with you in public — someone you can take home and introduce to your parents.

The life you are living will bring only more pain and heartache. Believe me, I know, because I've — Been There

Dear Been: You and thousands of others. Thanks for the testimonial. It's a good one.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1199t, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Funds Increase Vanpooling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vanpooling is growing steadily in America, thanks to the availability of federal funds to help the projects, the Transportation Department reports.

The department says a dozen states have taken advantage of the new federal aid program.

Even though most of the projects are just getting underway, officials said 35 vanpools are operating in seven states.

Vanpooling is an arrangement where a group of people — up to 15 — share commuting costs by using a large passenger van.

The energy saving is high, typically providing as much as 120 person miles of transportation per gallon of gasoline.

Federal money can be made available for as much as 90 percent of the startup costs of a vanpool, including purchasing or leasing the vehicle.

The projects are operated and coordinated on state levels and the Transportation Department has produced some materials explaining the system.

Safeway Signs Consent Order

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest supermarket chain, Safeway Stores Inc., is being required to sell advertised items at or below the prices advertised, under a consent order announced by the Federal Trade Commission.

Safeway operates some 2,400 supermarkets in 30 states. Its headquarters is in Oakland, Calif.

The FTC had alleged in a complaint that in a number of Safeway stores a substantial number of advertised items were placed on sale at prices higher than those advertised.

Under the consent order, Safeway also must correctly price advertised items and post in its stores copies of the advertisements and notices to customers suggesting they check prices of the advertised items.

The consent agreement does not constitute an admission by Safeway that it violated the law.

Indian Loan Rules Altered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration is planning to change its rules to make it easier for Indian tribes and tribal corporations.

Currently the rules prohibit the tribes from purchasing land for more than its market value based on an appraisal.

Under the new regulations, loans from the agency would be limited to the appraised value of the land. However, if the purchase price was more than this value, the Indian group would be allowed to make up the difference in a down payment from other money.

The proposed change will be open for public comment until Feb. 6 and interested persons should write to the Chief, Directives Management Branch, Farmers Home Administration, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Room 6316, Washington, D.C., 20250.

LADIES OF THE LINE — Four members of the famous Rockettes troupe pose recently just before showtime at New York's Radio City Music Hall. They are, from left: Jackie Fancy, Joan Peer, Carol Harbach and Eileen Collins. The last lineup for the Rockettes troupe, the most famous precision dancing group in the world, may be on April 12. That is when their home, the Music Hall, plans to close after 45 years in Rockefeller Center. (AP Laserphoto)

RECOVERED HAGGERTY — Actor Dan Haggerty laughs with his wife, Diane, Friday during a news conference to announce his recovery from burns he suffered on his hands and arms six weeks ago during a birthday party for him. Haggerty will return to the television locations for "Grizzly Adams" in which he plays the title role, in Salt Lake City, Utah and Payson, Arizona, to resume filming the series Saturday. Folklife Magazine Launched

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Library of Congress has launched a new quarterly publication aimed at persons interested in American folk culture.

"Folklife Center News," reports on the activities of the library's folklife center, projects and articles on folk culture.

Persons interested in the magazine should contact the American Folklife Center, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C., 20540. There is no charge.

Gold-Plated Buddha Recovered

CHICAGO (AP) — When Pramuke Semasak saw an 18-inch gold-plated statue of Buddha on sale for $500 in Chicago's chaotic Maxwell Street open market, he recognized it as a real steal. Literally.

Local folklore has it that on Sundays, Maxwell Street is the best spot in town for picking up no-questions-asked bargains — $20 mink coats, color television sets minus serial numbers.

Semasak hurried to Chicago's Thai Buddhist Temple, where he is a lay member, and found a monk who might be able to identify the statue.

The monk did identify it. He said it was 500 years old and had been stolen from O'Hare International Airport last July.

Police who confiscated the statue said the Buddha had been en route from Thailand to the Wat-Buddhaharam Temple in Denver when it disappeared.

They arrested Cornelius Coleman, 53, who ran the cluttered junk shop, and charged him with theft of lost or mislaid property.

One authority said the Buddha was worth as much as $50,000.

Bomb Squad Blows Up Snoopy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Somewhere, the Red Baron is gloating.

Bomb specialists from the San Francisco police department blew up a comb and brush set inspired by Snoopy, the insightful mutt from the "Peanuts" comic strip who occasionally imagines himself in a World War I aerial battle with the Baron.

The electric comb and brush were in a package being sent via Greyhound bus from Los Angeles to Oakland. When the bus arrived Saturday, the package was ticking, bomblike. No one could tell it was just that Snoopy's batteries had been activated by accident.

After some frantic phone calls, the bus raced across the Bay Bridge and was met by the bomb specialists who listened to the ticks, attached a charge and blew the package apart. Bits and pieces of Snoopy fell to the ground.

Police telephoned the party to whom the package was addressed and relayed the bad news.

Ambitionless Film Star Garner Reaches Top In Three Fields

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Many men fantasize about becoming a movie-TV star. Others dream of driving race cars. Some hope to become scratch golfers. Jim Garner is all three.

The big, laconic Garner came late to the profession of acting and equally tardy to road racing and golf. But he is making up for lost time, fast.

Garner won the Emmy this year for best actor in a continuing dramatic series for his performance in "The Rockford Files."

Last week he was inducted as a founding member into the Off-Road Racing Hall of Fame, along with 15 others.

He also came away a winner in several charity golf tournaments, shooting in the low 70s.

Ask him to what he attributes his brilliant success in three different fields, Jim answer sleepily, "Lack of ambition."

Garner was sincere. Until he was 26 years old, he was in and out of the University of Oklahoma, bumming around the country holding 50 different jobs from filling station attendant to bouncer, model, lumberjack and carpet layer.

"I was just trying to make ends meet, keep a roof over my head and have enough to eat," he said during a break from his show at Universal Studios.

"I had no goals. I had no ambition to succeed in any particular field. I fell into acting accidentally while working in a Hollywood Boulevard gas station."

"Paul Gregory, the producer, was one of my customers. He told me I should become an actor. But the idea didn't appeal to me. He told me some day he'd be one of the biggest producer in town. I didn't believe him."

Fourteen months later, after two Purple Hearts to show for a hitch in Korea, Garner returned to Hollywood to find Gregory had indeed hit it big.

"I was looking for a job in the Arabian oil fields," Garner said. "I was getting sore knees and swallowing too many larks laying carpets. But the oil companies turned me down."

"Then I drove by a sign on a door that read 'Paul Gregory Productions.' It so happened there was a parking place right in front of the door. If there hadn't been I wouldn't have gone in."

"Paul put me in the stage version of 'The Caine Mutiny Court Martial' with Henry Fonda, Lloyd Nolan and John Hodiak. Charles Laughton directed. I didn't have a single line. It was just as well. I'd never acted before in my life."

"I played one of the silent jury members for 512 performances without saying a word. But I cued Nolan before the first reading and Fonda was so impressed he had me cue him. I got paid $25 extra a week to understudy Hodiak. Altogether I got paid $150 a week."

"To be honest, I was also a gofer (errand boy) and doubled as bartender for the cast. Later I got Hodiak's role in the national company of the play. But ambition played no part in it."

"I'm still not ambitious. If I knew what I wanted to do after 'The Rockford Files' leaves the air, I'd be doing it now."

"I'm just tickled to death to be working and getting well paid for it. When I think of all the guys who come to Hollywood and don't make it, I realize how lucky I am."

"If I were to start acting all over again, knowing what I know about how damned tough this business is, I wouldn't tackle it."

Furness Apologizes For Remarks Made During News Show

NEW YORK (AP) — Betty Furness said Monday she was "personally sorry" about any misunderstanding that may have resulted from a television report she did in which teen-agers were served 30-proof alcoholic beverages.

The report four weeks ago centered on the appeal that sweet alcoholic drinks may have to teen-agers. Miss Furness, consumer affairs reporter for NBC-TV, commented when it was aired, "They're all drinkers."

About 15 students were asked to taste Hereford's Cows, creamy cocktails in various flavors.

The segment, shown on the "Today" show, brought criticism and a demand from Bernard Breecher, president of the Hartsdale school board, for an apology. School officials who approved the filming said they had not been told the teen-agers would be given alcohol.

Miss Furness said Monday she had been investigating alcohol abuse by youngsters and that "we found that sweet drinks did indeed seem to have more appeal to teen-agers than hard liquor."

The filmed report was done with a group of students who take part in an established special program where the youngsters have regular sessions to discuss alcohol and drug abuse, she said.

"Unfortunately," she commented during the "Today" program this morning, "due to some of my closing remarks some viewers may have gotten the impression that I was being critical of the students participating in the program or that they were all drinkers, abusers of alcohol. That was not what I intended and that was not the point of the story."

Miss Furness said, "I am personally sorry about this misunderstanding."

She said she hoped "it will not obscure public awareness of the hazards of alcoholism or diminish the role that special educational programs in schools and elsewhere can play in this educational process."

Lord Thinks About Ending Police Show

HONOLULU (AP) — The cast and crew of the television series Hawaii Five-O have finished filming their 10th season, and the show's star, Jack Lord, says crime fighter Steve McGarrett may not be around for season No. 11.

"Ten years is a long time to stay with anything. I want to do other things with my life besides play McGarrett," Lord said recently, as the cast wrapped up the final episode of the 10th season.

"I'm not saying there will not be (another season)," he said. "At this point, I just want to rest and recuperate."

It was 10 years ago that the stony-faced McGarrett began rounding up island crime elements on TV.

Lord and co-star James MacArthur agree that many factors have made the show a success. The Hawaiian setting, the character of McGarrett and his aides, the strong interrelationship of the cast and crew and a variety of stories all were contributing factors, they said.

The cast and the television audience have become old friends, said MacArthur. "We've been in your living room for 10 years. Friendship doesn't die easily," he said.

"The format lent itself to such a rainbow of colors," said Lord, sitting on the studio grounds near the slope of Diamond Head volcano.

"It's not a hard-driving police show on the precinct level. It's on a high felony level where we can do bizarre things," he said.

He said he questions the future of the show not because of the ratings but because of his own feelings.

He loves the show, he said, but 70-hour work weeks can build up too much pressure.

Family Ties Dictate Course Of Upcoming Film

LONDON (UPI) — The way Joan Collins looked that morning no man in his right mind would have said no to her. But there she was confessing that a friend had refused a simple request — merely the loan of $150,000 worth of jewelry she wanted to wear in a scene of her new film, "The Stud."

Whoever the ungallant fellow was he stood practically alone. Everyone else confronted by the dark pleading eyes, the finely boned face of one of the most durable of the glamorous actresses of our time turned over his valuables without demur.

Counting the contribution (temporary, of course) of the man from Cartier's it amounted at that moment to more than $500,000 of jewels, furs, Rolls Royces and high fashion, male and female.

"Some of it came from relatives," said Miss Collins, thus sounding the keynote of a film so closely entwined with her clan it recalls the old nepotistic days of Hollywood when brother-in-law was a synonym for vice-president.

"The Stud" is occasionally torrid stuff — beautiful cheating wife of billionaire Arab sets up her cheating gigolo in a discotheque, etc — but it is less a skin-flick, despite a certain expanse of orgiastic epidermis, than a kin-flick.

Attractive author Jackie Collins wrote the novel and screenplay for sister Joan whose American husband, Ron Kass, is producer while Jackie's American husband, Oscar Lerman, is executive in charge of production. There are five children of the marriages, but thus far, with great forbearance, only Joan's daughter Katie, 5, is up for a role.

There is still time while they are shooting in a night club, Hobo, which, by coincidence, is actually Lerman's famous discotheque Tramp. Family togetherness can't go much further.

Besides starring, and although the film is well-financed by the Brent-Walker company, Miss Collins' assignment was to help the budget by assembling some of the props, hence the forays among well-heeled friends. She was a good choice. After 26 years of playing everything from adolescents to mature femmes fatales she is still pencil-slim in tight jeans, well curved in a blouse opened one button too low.

That week she was the cover girl for a magazine article on beauties in their forties.

"I'm 42," she said, "and Sophia Loren, Brigitte Bardot and Elizabeth Taylor were my contemporaries when I started out. Sophia is the only other one of that era still able to play glamor roles. I had years of playing bad girls, sexy little sluts. Then years in wallpaper roles — looking good and doing very little. Then I became Queen of the Horror Films and I played villainesses until, at last, the present revival of good roles for women."

That was timely, she said, otherwise the future would have been black, "sitting on a shelf until I was old and grey waiting to play somebody's mother."

Her role in "The Stud" is "an exaggeration but there are a lot of promiscuous but vulnerable and sad women around. All they have is sex and the jet set and, ultimately, misery and unhappiness."

Has she any secrets, other than working out in a gym from time to time to explain her looks and her long career?

"The name of the game is survival," he said. "I'm a survivor."

Nominations For 20th Annual Grammy Awards Announced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Longtime pop music giants Linda Ronstadt, Fleetwood Mac and the Eagles shared the spotlight with newcomers Andy Gibb and Debby Boone as nominees for the 20th annual Grammy Awards were announced Monday.

The Grammys, considered the most prestigious awards given in the music industry, will be presented by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences Feb. 23.

Miss Boone, daughter of entertainer Pat Boone, exploded onto the pop music scene last year with "You Light Up My Life," a love ballad that was the No. 1 record from October through the end of the year. She was nominated for the best record (single) of the year, best new artist of the year and best female vocalist of the year.

"You Light Up My Life," Miss Boone's huge success written by Joe Brooks for the movie of the same title, was nominated for song of the year and best original score for a motion picture, both songwriters' categories.

Miss Ronstadt, last year's best female singer in pop, was again nominated in that category and also for best record for her rendition of the Roy Orbison tune, "Blue Bayou."

The group Fleetwood Mac, whose "Rumours" was far and away the biggest selling album of the year, won a nomination for best pop group. "Rumours" was nominated as best album and best engineered recording.

Competing with Misses Ronstadt and Boone for record of the year were the Eagles, for their "Hotel California," Barbra Streisand, for her "Love Theme From A Star Is Born (Evergreen)," and Crystal Gayle, who was a huge country-pop cross-over success with her "Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue."

Competing with Fleetwood Mac for Album of the Year were the Eagles ("Hotel California,"), James Taylor ("JT,") and the London Symphony Orchestra, for their intergalactic jive piece so loved by halitume bands, "Star Wars." Steely Dan, one of pop's most important groups, came back with their first record in two years in 1977, "Aja," which was promptly nominated for Album of the Year.

In the best pop group category, Steely Dan was vying against another giant rock group absent in recent years, Crosby, Stills and Nash. Also nominated were the Eagles, the Bee Gees and Fleetwood Mac.

Andy Gibb, the Bee Gees' younger brother, came into pop music in a big way with his "I Just Want to Be Your Everything," which was No. 1 during most of the summer. Gibb was nominated for best male pop singer, along with Leo Sayer ("When I Need You,"), James Taylor ("Handy Man,"), Stephen Bishop ("On and On") and Engelbert Humperdinck ("After the Loving").

Standard Deduction Revised For 1977

By RAY DE CRANE

What used to be called the standard deduction allowance — now it is the zero bracket amount — has been revised for income tax filers this year. For most taxpayers it represents an increased allowance, therefore a reduced tax. But it could represent a loss for others.

For years, the standard deduction was tied to income. Now everyone in the same marital status will receive the identical allowance, regardless of the amount of income.

If you do not elect to itemize your deductions, here is what you will be allowed on 1977 tax returns:

- Unmarried taxpayers, $2,200
- Married taxpayers filing joint returns, $3,200
- Married taxpayers filing separately, $1,600
- An unmarried head of a household, $2,200

Two reasons prompted the change. There were so many confusing options in determining the standard deductions last year that 10.2 percent of all those who filed Form 1040 returns made mistakes. On form 1040A — the simplest of all tax forms to complete — the error rate was a horrendous 13.7 percent.

Perhaps the errors were an indictment against the typical American's skill in mathematics. But there is just as good a chance they resulted from too many options and complicated instructions.

To refresh your memory, here is how married persons filing joint returns determined their standard deduction last year: They multiplied adjusted gross income by 16 percent. If that produced an amount smaller than $2,100, they were permitted to claim the minimum standard of $2,800, they were restricted to $2,800, then called the maximum standard. If it fell somewhere in between, that is the exact amount they claimed.

Perhaps the biggest fiasco of last year was the general tax credit. Here, again, mathematical computations and multiple options complicated the procedure. To determine your credit you were instructed to multiply the number of exemptions on your return by $35. Four exemptions (husband, wife and two children) meant a credit of $140. Then there was a second step. You were instructed to multiply your taxable income by two percent. If that produced a higher amount than $180, you were restricted to $180 on Option No. 2. Finally you were advised to claim the highest amount produced by either of the two options.

So unmarried taxpayers (with only one exemption) entered only $35 when many were entitled to much more, often as much as $180. Other low-income taxpayers claimed $180 when they were entitled only to $70. Then there were cases of six exemptions claiming only $180 when they were entitled to $210 (6x$35).

IRS eliminated as much of the math as it possibly could this year by providing tax tables which automatically provide for the deductions, the personal exemptions and the general tax credit.

But simplification is not as easy to come by as it might seem. There was one tax table for everybody last year. This year there are four sets of tax tables, extending over 12 pages.

IRS just hopes everyone will use the correct table.

Tower Slates Lubbock Visit

By PAT PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Sen. John Tower will be in Lubbock Thursday — part of a swing through the state to announce his intentions to run for a fourth term.

He will be honored at a reception in Room S-107 in the Lubbock Civic Center at 1 p.m., and will hold a press conference immediately afterward, at about 1:45 p.m. in Room E-106.

Tower's swing will begin in Austin Wednesday, and he will go from there to Arlington, Houston and Tyler. On Thursday, prior to coming to Lubbock, he will appear in Wichita Falls and Amarillo and from here will go to Midland-Odessa and El Paso.

Friday he will be in San Antonio, Corpus Christi and Harlingen.

Texas' senior senator has drawn two Democratic opponents — U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger of New Braunfels and former Texas insurance commissioner Joe Christie.

The South Plains Democratic Council, a 15-county organization, will have the five announced Democratic contenders for the 28th state Senatorial District seat at a program in Lamesa, Jan. 19.

The five — Jesse George, E. L. Short, Delvin Jones, Don Workman and Morris W. Turner — will be available for question-and-answer sessions after short speeches.

Time and place of the meeting will be forthcoming.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I recently purchased a new stove with chrome burner bibs. The stove's main selling point was more efficient cooking, but the time I've saved has been spent in cleaning the burner bibs.

I've tried soaking, scrubbing (the manufacturer says no steel wool or abrasive cleansers as they will scratch the surface of the bibs), but it's impossible to remove burned-on grease, etc.

Perhaps my husband came up with the right answer...

He bought me an extra set of burners) to use when not cooking!

vi

I can sympathize with your problem, luv. I have a friend with the same kind of stove you mentioned in your letter. She became so frustrated trying to clean those burner bibs, she sent them to work with her husband who threw them in a caustic bath to remove the gunk.

But, don't do anything that drastic...

Put the burners in a large plastic bag and set a cup of ammonia in the bag. Close tightly and leave for several hours.

With a little elbow grease and detergent suds, they should come out shining! Good Luck! — Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Just had my fourth baby two weeks ago and I keep him in a pillowcase. These wee ones are constantly kicking their blankets and off and their little feet get cold. A pillowcase eliminates this.

A receiving blanket can be used to achieve the same purpose — just sew it up on three sides. — Colleen Fierro

Dear Heloise:

If you have metal Venetian blinds, try them. After washing the blinds, wipe them again with liquid wax. They will be nice and shiny and will stay clean longer. — Mrs. B.E.H.

Dear Heloise:

It's always such a chore to make crusts for pies on the day of a big dinner. So I make them a day or two ahead and put the unbaked crusts in the refrigerator.

The bottom crusts are put in pie pans and fluted, and the top crusts are stored flat between wax paper.

Then, the morning of the dinner, I just have to put in the filling, add the top crust and bake. Gives me a big headstart on the meal. — Mrs. Gunnison

Dear Heloise:

Did you know that newspaper is a marvelous source of traction on ice? Let me explain.

I parked my car on ice and later could not gain enough traction to go anywhere.

I happened to have some newspaper in my car's trunk, so I put some under each tire. It sure worked! I had no problem on the ice!

But remember to pick up your newspaper! It can be reused several times. — Landa Marburger

Dear Heloise:

In making hairpin lace, when the loom is full, place long plastic straws over the prongs of the loom, and gently remove loops to the straws.

This keeps them intact until needed. — Catherine Mills

Raiders Leap Past Frogs, Win SWC Matchup 69-56

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

To hear the coaches talk, it was difficult to figure out which team won. To watch the game and not check the scoreboard, it would have been difficult, also.

Here was Texas Christian, a 90-41 victim of Texas in a game at Fort Worth last week (and scoring only 12 points in the first half) ripping Tech out of its favored man-for-man defense in the first half.

And here were the Raiders, hitting nine of its first ten shots and only leading by 6 points.

But, falling back on a zone defense and an extremely hot first half from the field, the Raiders were able to subdue the Frogs 69-56 here Monday night.

"TCU took the fight to us... they outplayed us," is the way Tech coach Gerald Myers put it.

"We took them out of their man defense... we executed and shot well," commented Frog coach Tim Somerville.

"Maybe we're not physically capable of playing good man defense," suggested Myers.

"We fought back. They're a great ball club, and we are starting five guys who had never played major-college basketball before," said Somerville.

"Every game our lineup is getting more unsettled," admitted Myers.

"We're shooting better, and we're husting; every loose ball out there was ours tonight!" claimed Somerville.

And on and on. But, at the end, the Raiders were on top, had evened their Southwest Conference record at 1 and now stand 9-4 for the year. TCU fell to 0-3 in conference, 2-10 for the season.

At the outset, it looked as neither team would miss. TCU hit its first four. Tech hit its first four. Tech went on to hit eight in a row before missing and mounted an 18-12 advantage. When Delonte Taylor hit from the right baseline, cutting the lead to 18-14, that was TCU's seventh hit in eight tries.

TCU, opening in a man defense, went to a 3-2 zone four minutes into the game, but Tech continued to pepper away and had a 22-16 lead when it started missing a few. It missed three in a row, and TCU climbed back to 22-20 before Thad Sanders connected from 20 feet away for a 24-20 advantage.

At that point, the Raiders were shoot-

Don Henry Testing The Winds

FOR THE FIRST 27 items on the agenda, the NCAA convention at Atlanta should resemble one of those political conventions or during a slack session of a legislative. You know... where the delegates wonder around on the convention floor, interviewing each other, checking name tags or exchanging outlandish campaign hats.

But, then it gets interesting. That's when the gavel comes down and the chair calls for consideration of the proposal to restructure the NCAA's largest group, for the Division I schools. Then, it will resemble the situation when Jack Nicklaus lines up a 45-footer with the score all even on the 18th hole at Augusta. That's the signal for serious business.

And just as with Nicklaus, the NCAA has been in this serious position before—and under the same circumstances.

It's the story of the biggies and the almost-biggies. Big-Time Football has wanted, for several years, to call its own shots, on such subjects as scholarships and coaching limits, legislation which only directly affected it. But, the other schools felt that the NCAA was one body, and as a result, it needed only one set of rules.

This is not the way the big powers have seen it.

RESTRUCTURING, TO PERMIT the Big-Time Powers to control their own destiny has popped up regularly for the past five years. And it hasn't passed yet. A year ago, the matter was tabled. This time, J. Neils Thompson, the Texas faculty rep and this year's president of the NCAA, vows that won't happen again.

But, Thompson, nor any other official, can guarantee that the proposal for splitting Division I will pass.

It's the case of the BTPs, or, basically, the ones with large football programs—the ones that command the 50 and 60 and 70,000-spectator crowds every Saturday in the fall—which seek control over their own programs.

Generally, they want the larger coaching staffs, and some want more scholarships—a few want unlimited scholarships. This is a break from the other members of the NCAA Div. I as now structured. A gap exists now—and the argument is actually where the gap should be—between the teams which are in the class with the Notre Dames and Michigans with their multimillion-dollar budgets and the Colorado States which are in Div. I also but face regular autumn gatherings of nearer 15,000 or 20,000.

These gaps amount to more than thousands of fans; they amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars, and the resulting budget, prestige, television and athletic benefits.

BUT, THE QUESTION comes back to what has been the problem for years: Do the BTPs have the votes to get, their structure scheme through?

There came, a few years back, the old power play, where some of the biggest of the major powers dropped hints that if their proposals weren't heeded, they would just pull out of the NCA and form their own organization.

It was a power play, but the schools lacked the power to back it up. And it quickly went under. Then, there came the College Football Association, a slightly larger group formed for the main purpose to overhaul the divisional system.

And apparently, it has not shaken the smaller members—the ones that have the deciding votes—very substantially.

MOST OF THE major conferences are throwing their weight behind the restructuring—if it is to their respective league's advantage—but some delegates are privately looking eastward for some hint of hope.

The key, some think, rests with a loosely formed group called the ECAC, the East Coast Athletic Conference. Now, it's a real conference, not any of this nine-or-ten-team stuff. This is a group of more than 100 schools.

As a group, it has not favored the restructuring. And some of the proponents of realignment feel that if the ECAC comes in and votes as a bloc, then the idea is doomed again. If the members vote individually, then the plan may have hope of being passed.

During the week of meetings now going on, the NCAA has on its agenda to look at scholarship limits, cutting down on non-revenue (track, tennis, swimming, or just about everything except football and basketball) scholarships to tuition and fees, coaching limits, and administrative measures.

But, how many can be considered is dependent on how much time is needed to consider restructuring. Each day, though, delegates may be checking their newscasts for the weather; there is more than passing interest on how the winds are blowing on the East Coast.

Key Tilts Unfold On South Plains

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Teams in 3-A, 7-B and 12-B open district action tonight and, mixed with the eight leagues already underway, important games abound at every turn.
One of The Avalanche-Journal's No. 1-ranked teams tumbled last Friday when Midland Lee upended Abilene Cooper 61-59.
Estacado in AAA, Dimmitt in AA, Lubbock Christian in A and Sands in B will be out to protect their top ranking among the boys tonight and Slaton in AA, Stanton in A and Jayton in B will be trying to do likewise among the girls.
Lee shares the 5-AAAA lead with Abilene and the two will clash next Tuesday. Lee first must get past Big Spring and Permian and Abilene must face Odessa and San Angelo. Abilene is currently ranked No. 2 in the area and Lee, 14-7, is unlisted.

Only one boys team in 3-A, defending champion Vega, is above .500 at present. The girls slate, however, starts out with a key game as Springlake-Earth, No. 3 in the area with a 15-5 mark, takes on defending champ Vega, which is 13-4.
The league title may actually be decided in 12-B tonight as defending champion Jayton (9-5) takes on Motley County (15-5). The Jayton girls are 22-1 and only one other squad in the five-team league is playing .500 ball.
In 7-B, the only boys team above .500, Whitharral (16-3) has a nonconference rematch with Spade (13-9). Whitharral is No. 3 in the area and Spade tumbled from the poll last week when beaten by Whitharral. The top girls battle in that district pits Three Way (13-6) against Anton (18-4).
Three tilts of importance are on tap in 5-AA, two involving boys teams. Slaton (11-5, 3-0) entertains Roosevelt (15-2, 1-1) and Denver City (12-5, 3-0) hosts defending champion Tahoka (6-8, 1-1). Slaton's girls (16-4, 1-0) face Roosevelt (12-6, 0-0), which is ranked No. 3 in the area.
Petersburg will watch the 4-A action tonight with interest as the Bufts (5-6, 4-0) face Shallowwater, No. 2 in the area, in a nondistrict tilt.
Lorenzo (11-3, 4-0) faces Crosbyton (11-5, 2-1) and defending champion Hale Center (8-9, 2-1) attempts to stay in the race against Ralls (5-14, 0-3). The Ralls (13-6, 3-0) and Hale Center (14-4, 3-0) girls will be battling for the league lead, however. HC is listed fourth in the area; Ralls No. 5.
In 8-B, the Smyer, Sundown and Whiteface girls will all try to improve on their 3-0 records against Meadow, Ropesville and New Home, respectively. Southland (17-0, 3-0) and defending champion Ropes (11-5, 3-0) face tough tilts against Wilson (11-6, 2-1) and Sundown (11-7, 2-1), respectively.
The top game in 9-B matches the area's No. 3 and 4 teams, Sands and Klondike. Klondike is 15-4, 2-0 and Sands is 20-2, 0-0.

The Rivermen employed a 2-1-2 zone defense to keep the ball away from 6-foot-11 center Steve Schall and take advantage of Delph's absence.

The Aggies were never able to get closer than five points in the second half while Baylor's zone defense allowed the Bears to pull ahead by as much as 13 points.
Reggie Franklin tallied 19 points and pulled down 10 rebounds to lead SMU to its win over Rice.
Franklin was aided by Jeff Swablon, who popped in points and grabbed 11 rebounds as SMU kept its SWC slate clean with a 2-0 record. The Mustangs are 5-7 for the year.
Ron Brewer scored 24 points and Sidney Moncrief added 21 points to lead third-ranked Arkansas to its easy victory over the University of Missouri — St. Louis.
The victory was the Razorbacks' 13th without defeat this season, while Missouri — St. Louis fell to 5-7. Roland Nash scored 19 points and Herbert Hoosman added 14 for the Rivermen.

Mention the Lamesa Golden Tors to J.J. Wood, and chances are the Estacado coach will become a might fidgety.
Last year, the Matadors, cruising toward a what appeared to be a District 3-AAA crown after disposing of perennial nemesis and cross-town rival Dunbar, were ambushed by the Tors a couple of nights later in a game that stretched two overtime periods. The marathon ended with Lamesa on top 67-65.
Because of the setback, Estacado had to settle for something besides first place.
"I don't think that will happen this time around," Wood explained. "Last year we had to play them (Lamesa) on a Friday night after we had beaten Dunbar on Tuesday. That wasn't enough time to get over a big win like that."
In a way, history may have a chance to repeat itself again tonight.
Last Friday Estacado shot down Dunbar 81-79 in overtime. And now the Matadors must host the Tors—in what proves to be another key clash for EHS—tonight starting at 8 p.m.
In other action tonight, Dunbar (17-4, 2-1) visits Brownfield in a District 3-AAA affair, Coronado (5-14) travels to Amarillo Tascosa (12-5), Lubbock High (3-15) entertains Amarillo Caprock (4-14), Monterey (10-11) is at Amarillo Palo Duro (4-13), Lubbock Christian boys and girls journey to Seminole and Christ the King ing 71.9 percent, TCU 55.6. And the difference between the 8-4 team and the 2-9 visiting group was only 4 points.

Leading 30-20, following Kent Williams' 25-footer, a 22-footer by Tommy Parks and a pair of free shots by Mike Russell, Tech went into a 2-3 zone to try to hold the Frogs.
"They were getting good shots and we had to go to the zone to try to slow them down a little," said Myers.
"It was the second straight night (the other being in a 68-65 loss to SMU last Saturday) that we've shot well," said Somerville.
Tech finally led 35-28 at the half, assisted by Russell's shot with only three seconds remaining.
Sanders scored off a fast break, and Joe Baxter scored on a follow shot to boost Tech to a 39-28 advantage. Tech was able to maintain a lead of 6-10 points most of the way, before pulling away in the final minutes, thanks to some steals and by breaking the Frogs' press.
Tech played without regular Mike Edwards, who Myers said missed a curfew in Austin Saturday night. "But the way the others played tonight, he didn't hurt his chances to get back in the lineup," the Raider coach added.
Tech finished with a balanced scoring sheet, Russell leading with 14. Baxter had 13, Parks and Kent Williams 12 each and Geoff Huston closing with three straight buckets for 10 points.
High for the game was TCU guard Jim Hund who bombed for 17 points. Guard Ardie Evans had 12 more.
TCU led the rebounding battle 30-23. And from the field, Tech scored its opponents only 25-24. From the free-throw line, however, Tech hit 19 of 27, to TCU's eight of 12.
Referee Irv Brown stepped in to stop a tense moment in the game's final three minutes, as forward Delonte Taylor grabbed Parks around the waist following a steal by Parks.
Players from both teams converged on the pair near midcourt, but Brown, a newcomer around SWC games but considered one of the top officials in the nation, stepped in, thumbed the entire Raider team to its bench, shoved the Frogs to their, called time himself and let the tempers cool.
When the teams returned to the court, he presided over a meeting at the free-throw circle, called for a round of handshakes, and Parks followed with a pair on free shots for a 60-51 advantage.
Tech will now face a pair of road games, playing at Baylor Thursday night and at Rice Saturday afternoon. TCU will return to the practice floor until hosting Houston next Saturday.

Vegas Bookies Like Dallas Over Denver By Three

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Experts in this gaming spa predict that more money will be wagered on next Sunday's Super Bowl than on any of the previous 11 Super games.

While the American Conference champion Denver Broncos and their "Orange Crush" defense go against the National Conference champion Dallas Cowboys, green will become the national color of the day as bettors from Omaha to Anchorage, from Seattle to Miami, try to come up with a winner.

But to the books here, where such activity is legal (as long as you're licensed by state authorities), and to those elsewhere in the country (where such activity is frowned on by law enforcement officials), the name of the game is not to pick a winner. The object is to split the money even so the book doesn't take a beating.

Simply put the task is to "balance the book."

The bookies here don't make their money by winning or losing, they make it from the losers of "straight bets" on the spread who put down $11 for a chance to win back $10 plus their bets.

One must keep in mind that the "point spread" or "line" is not an opinion as to which team is better or favored, but the number which will be most attractive to bettors from both sides.

Keeping that in mind, how is the spread made?

Odds maker Robert Martin makes the line for the Union Plaza Hotel here and is recognized as one of the sharpest handicappers in the nation.

"It is very important to attract money on both sides," Martin said. "We're not saying that Dallas is going to win by five, only that for betting purposes, Dallas should surrender five points."

When the early line opened the Jan. 2 following Denver's victory over Oakland and the Cowboys' defeat of Minnesota, one could get Denver and 4 1/2 points at a lot of books here, 5 points at others. But the money went for Dallas early, so the spread was lifted to 5 1/2 points at most locations over the past weekend in an effort to bring in more money on the Broncos. One-half point can make a lot of difference.

Martin opened the Cowboys as 5-point favorites to win Super Bowl XII. The spread came about after a careful analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of both teams. Using a rating system from one to 10, here is how Martin made the opening line.

COACHES: Tom Landry is by far the superior coach and his record over the years proves it. He has been so successful that he is now taken for granted. Red Miller (who was named coach of the year by the AP) is an unknown, but you can't question the great job he did this year. Give each coach 10 points.

QUARTERBACKS: Roger Staubach is better than Craig Morton. Staubach is at the top of his game now and he has been passing with great accuracy. Morton is under-rated, but he gets the job done. Give Staubach 10, Morton 9.

RUNNING BACKS: The Cowboys have excellent running backs in Tony Dorsett (offensive rookie of the year), Preston Pearson and Robert Newhouse. Denver's Otis Armstrong, Rob Lyle and Jon Keyworth are good. Give Dallas 10, Denver 9.

RECEIVERS: (including wide receivers and tight ends): Both teams match up very well here, but Martin gives the slight edge to Dallas. Give Dallas 10, Denver 9 1/2.

OFFENSIVE LINE: Not a household name in the bunch, but both teams very effective. Dallas' Staubach was sacked 37 times, while Morton was dumped 50 times in the regular season. Martin says there's a message here somewhere. Give Dallas 10, Denver 9.

KICKING: Punters Danny White of Dallas and Bucky Dilts of Denver have to be rated even, according to Martin. Efram Herrera gets a slight edge over Jim Turner. Give Dallas 10, Denver 9 1/2.

DEFENSIVE SECONDARY: For Dallas, they're all super, says Martin. Denver is excellent. Give Dallas 10, Denver 9 1/2.

DEFENSIVE LINEMEN AND LINEBACKERS: Two fine defenses. The "Doomsday" versus the "Orange Crush." A four-man front against a three-man front. Denver has better linebackers in Martin's thinking, but Dallas is better up front. Give both 10.

SPECIAL TEAMS: Both are well-coached and do excellent jobs. Give both 10.

AFC vs. NFC: This is probably the most important factor in rating the game, Martin said. The AFC, on the year, was 19-9 against NFC opponents. Dallas had it easy, beating Chicago and Minnesota to gain the Super Bowl. The Broncos had to butt heads with Pittsburgh and Oakland, who have combined to win the last three Super Bowls. Denver played a stronger schedule this year. Give Denver 10, Dallas 8 1/2.

Reviewing the totals: Dallas 98 1/2, Denver 95 1/2. The indication is a 3-point spread, but:

"Dallas is what is known as a public team," Martin said.

"They will draw the money no matter what (line) you put up, so we impose a tax of two points as an incentive to lure the Denver side," he explained. "By the same token, if you make Dallas a 6-point favorite, the money will show on Denver. So we reach a happy medium at 5, and then let the money move it one way or the other."

Martin says the professional bettors will probably go with Denver, unless there is a dramatic change, but that the Cowboys get the "people" to bet.

Super Bowl Tilt Pits Mystery Men, Stars

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Super Bowl XII presents two vastly different teams colliding for the championship of professional football.

The Dallas Cowboys, representing the National Football Conference, are a team of familiar names, many of them full-fledged National Football League stars. The Denver Broncos, champions of the American Conference, are mystery men, performing on a club whose chemistry came together all at once.

The Cowboys are the team of Roger Staubach, the NFL's leading passer, Harvey Martin, the NFL's defensive player of the year, and Tony Dorsett, the offensive rookie of the year. The Broncos are the team of Craig Morton, a castoff quarterback, Lyle Alzado, the only pro player ever produced by tiny Yankton College, and Jack Dolbin, a chiropractor turned wide receiver.

Both teams were 12-2 during the regular season, records which include a 14-6 Dallas victory over the Broncos in the final weekend before the playoffs began. In the playoffs, the Cowboys produced impressive victories over Chicago and Minnesota to reach the Super Bowl for the fourth time. The Broncos, underdogs in both games, upset Pittsburgh and Oakland.

Dallas started the season with eight straight victories, soaring to the top of the NFC East. "The defense and Roger Staubach's steadiness enabled us to establish that record," said Cowboy Coach Tom Landry. Then Dallas dipped with consecutive losses to St. Louis and Pittsburgh. "That was the crucial part of our season," Landry continued. "Then we started to come back."

The Cowboys finished the year with four straight victories going into the playoffs and now the streak has reached six consecutive victories.

Staubach passed for 2,620 yards, leading all NFL quarterbacks. Martin stabilized the intricate flex defense, emerging as an All-Pro in his fifth season and Dorsett rushed for 1,007 yards, becoming only the eighth rookie in NFL history to go over the 1,000-yard mark.

Denver had a similar kind of season. The Broncos won their first four games and then stunned defending champion Oakland 30-7 to take charge in the AFC West. The Raiders knocked Denver off in their next meeting, ending a six-game Bronco winning streak. But Denver bounced right back to win five more before losing the meaningless last game to Dallas.

By then, though, the Broncos had clinched their title and were warming up for the playoffs and the Steelers and Raiders. Denver disposed of both clubs, who between them had won the last three Super Bowls.

The Broncos' success was built around the Orange Crush defense, a 3-4 alignment that includes nose guard Rubin Carter up front and a pair of All-Pro, Tom Jackson and Randy Gradishar, at linebacking spots. The wheelhouse of the line is Alzado, another All-Pro.

Dooley's Move Surprises UNC Gridders

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Most University of North Carolina football players reacted with shock at the word Sunday that Coach Bill Dooley was leaving to take command of the football program at Virginia Tech.

Starting quarterback Matt Kupec, at home in Syosset, N.Y., during the vacation between semesters, learned of Dooley's resignation from his father who heard it on the radio.

"It's not like I was prepared for it or anything like that," said Kupec, whose brother Chris was also a starting quarterback under Dooley in the early 1970's. "I figured I'd end my career in two years and he'd still be there."

"It's incredible," he added. "It never entered my mind. We were coming off a great season, with so many players back. I just thought he'd be there because we're on the threshold of something great."

Dooley, who had four years remaining on his UNC contract, quit to become head coach and athletic director at independent VPI. He spent 11 years at North Carolina, winning three Atlantic Coast Conference titles and winning more games, 69, than any other UNC head football coach.

The 1977 team finished 8-3-1, won the ACC and narrowly lost to Nebraska in the Liberty Bowl.

Classes at UNC don't resume until Thursday, and most players were at home when the announcement was made.

Middle guard David Simmons, at his home in Rosewood, said he read reports all week that Dooley might go, but dismissed them as rumor because Dooley had not told the team of his intentions.

Pickings Lean In Baseball Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball's January draft of amateur players will be held here Tuesday, with high quality prospects about as abundant as winter sunbathers in the Big Apple.

"We're sitting in the catbird seat wondering why this has to be such a lean year," said Elliott Wahle of the Toronto Blue Jays, who own the leadoff pick in the 13th annual winter draft.

"Every year we bemoan the quality of the January draft," said one American League scout who requested anonymity. "But this year's is the worst ever. There are practically no four-year college dropouts."

The one significant major college dropout is Michael Lebo, a catcher formerly at the University of South Carolina. Lebo, 19, from Middletown, Pa., is a 6-foot-5, 220-pound catcher with "big power and a strong arm," according to a National League scout.

The major league scouting combine rates the left-handed hitting and right-handed throwing Lebo the top player in the regular phase of the draft, which is for athletes never selected before.

The Blue Jays, eligible for the No. 1 selection because they were burdened with the worst record in baseball last year, also have Lebo at the top of their selection list, along with Jim Malier, a slugging first baseman who dropped out of the University of Miami, and David Greir, a right-handed pitcher, who checked out of the University of Maryland.

"We've got to be concerned with signability," said Wahle, Toronto's administrator for player personnel.

The concern of the Blue Jays and other teams is that the asking price of first-round draft choices will be highly inflated. Because the blue ribbon high school college prospects won't be eligible until the June draft, someone has to be No. 1, even if he would be only a 17th round draft choice in June (baseball has agreed not to raid the players in major colleges while they are still in school).

Baseball being a big business there is always the danger that teams will bad-mouth the player pools as a negotiating ploy, however, the scouts interviewed by the Associated Press were unanimous in labeling this group of athletes as lower class.

For example, although Lebo is regarded as the top prospect available the scouts consider him Class A minor league material, the third rung in baseball's farm system.

"Lebo is a good prospect, but he's not Double A or Triple A material like Chambliss and Seaver," said Wahle. Chris Chambliss of the Yankees and Tom Seaver of Cincinnati were winter draft selections who were placed high in the minor league chain and quickly climbed the ladder to major league stardom.

The draft, which will be conducted by a telephone hookup with the 26 teams by the commissioner's office here, will also have a secondary phase for athletes chosen before but who have not signed.

Again, the scouts say the talent in this pool is very limited, there are no Pete Redfers or Bob Shirleys, secondary round selections in 1976, who are now starting pitchers for Minnesota and San Diego, respectively.

"It's all mediocrity," says one scout, whose team has a list of 10 players they might draft in the secondary phase but pick in the bottom half of the draft. "We really wouldn't feel hurt if we didn't draft anybody."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. Frequently, in the last few months, I've read: "Get out of bonds and into Treasury bills." Are Treasury bills safer than A.T.&T. or IBM stock? Can one invest in a Treasury bill fund?

A. Let's start right out by saying that no investment is safer than a Treasury bill. The U.S. government promises to pay $1,000 on a $1,000 face amount bill within the year. And you can't beat that promise.

When someone says "get out of (long-term) bonds into T bills," what is implied is that money rates are going up so don't lock yourself into a long-term bond, but, instead, shift your money to a one-year or less Treasury loan. Then, if rates do climb, you can get in on the higher interest rates. In other words, keep your commitments short and liquid.

If the guess is correct, the advice is good. You may buy T bills directly or invest in them indirectly via money market mutual funds which place heavy emphasis on Treasury bills.

Q. I bought some telephone bonds due in 2011. I won't be around that long (although I have children who will). Wouldn't a higher interest, shorter term bond serve me better?

A. It would, but there "ain't no such animal." If you stick to the same quality level, long-term bonds, by definition, yield more than short-term bonds.

Q. I've just read a book by a man who said one could treble his money by "in and out" play in the market.

A. To each his own fantasy. I've always wanted to be the pitcher who hurls a no-hitter to win the "crucial" game of the World Series and then gets signed to a $2 million contract for the next season. Unfortunately, in real life, I was always the last one picked when teams were gotten up for the afternoon ball game.

Q. We are retired, living on company pension and Social Security. Since my wife is much younger than I, we allow our bank interest to accumulate as protection for her. We have $28,000 in bank accounts, $10,000 is certificates and E and F bonds.

A. I am not clear on the "bank accounts." If you mean you have $28,000 in checking and day-to-day 5 1/4 percent savings accounts you are passing up a lot of income, and that certainly should be rectified at once.

E bonds grow at the rate of 6 percent a year, tax deferrable. I don't know what that tax deferral is worth to you. You'd have to figure for yourself whether it benefits you more than say 8 1/4 percent (taxable) from corporate bonds or 6 to 7 percent (taxable) from a good utility stock which could also offer some help of growth and inflation-offset.

Finally, better do something about those "F" bonds. They aren't working for you any longer. Write to the Savings Bond division, Treasury Department, Washington, D.C. 20226.

Q. I need monthly income, so I'm withdrawing $250 a month from a $50,000 deposit earning 5 percent. Am I using up my capital?

A. Yes-but only at a low rate. It would take 36 years to exhaust it. What puzzles me is: why don't you put the $50,000 into 7 3/4 percent time deposits, draw about $1,000 straight, interest every three months and keep all your capital intact?

Q. My husband is retiring on disability. Can you suggest any no-risk investment to supplement our monthly income?

A. Taking your "no-risk" requirement at face value, your best bets would be Treasury bonds, insured savings accounts or an annuity (providing you are both old enough) purchased from an insurance company licensed to do business in your state. By "no-risk" I mean no danger to the invested principal in terms of dollars put in and fixed dollar income.

SHULSKY welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Lubbockites To Get Improved Access To London By Air

Air fare between Lubbock and London will be reduced and travelers from this area will have less expensive, more direct access to Europe when Braniff International begins its non-stop service between Dallas/Fort Worth and the British capital, the airline announced Monday.

Braniff District Sales Director Randall Jones said the airline is seeking government approval of a variety of innovative fares which will offer reductions in the current normal first class and economy class fares as well as lower excursion, youth, group and Apex fares.

These are in addition to the already announced $399 round trip standby fare between Lubbock and London. Standby passengers will receive confirmed reservations between Lubbock and Dallas/Fort Worth.

Renowned Attorney To Speak At Tech

Noted defense attorney Leonard Weinglass will speak Jan. 19 at Texas Tech on "The Politics of Crime."

Weinglass, who during the past 15 years has become known as defense attorney for such figures as Jane Fonda, Russell Means (American Indian Movement), Emily Harris (the SLA trial), the Chicago Seven and Angela Davis, will discuss the new police/intelligence/military apparatus and its threat to American civil liberties.

Tickets to his speech are on sale at the University Center Ticket booth for $2 for Texas Tech students and $5 for the general public. Tickets also will be available at the door the night of the speech.

Weinglass currently is a lecturer at the University of Southern California Law Center. He recently was awarded the first annual Clarence Darrow Foundation award for his work exemplifying the ideals of fair trial for which Darrow fought so hard.

In addition to his lecture, Weinglass will meet with Tech students Jan. 18-20 before leaving Lubbock.

Cold Blast Blamed In 20 Deaths

FEEDING THE FAMILY — Morton farmer Dan Barker took care of the necessity of feeding his 8-month-old daughter Natalie Tuesday while standing in line for food stamp applications to ensure the rest of his family would be fed in 1978, he said. About 60 Morton-area farmers, including Randy Wood, Michael Abbe, D. Merritt and Allan Davis, came to that city's Department of Human Resources Tuesday to apply for food stamps in protest of low farm prices. (Staff Photos by Holly Kuper)

Power Cutbacks Hit Some Areas

By The Associated Press
THE WINTER'S worst cold spell forced widespread cutbacks in electric power from Michigan to the Carolinas on Tuesday, with temperatures below zero in many areas and plunging to the teens as far south as Alabama. The cold was blamed for at least 20 deaths.
The Northeast cold spell drained so much power that Commonwealth Edison engineers in Chicago reported that the nation's electric clocks ran an average of 27.7 seconds slow during the night and Tuesday morning.

Demands Cause Nationwide Problem
"It was a nationwide problem because of heavy demands," said Bill Harrah, a spokesman for Commonwealth Edison.

It was so cold in western Pennsylvania that residents venturing out of doors were warned that exposed flesh could freeze in less than a minute.

"The problem (of electric power) is pretty common throughout the middle section of the country," said William Webb, a spokesman for the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. "There is not enough capacity to go around right now and this appears to be fairly general in a broad area from Michigan to the Carolinas."

Supplies Cut Back
Power systems in Pennsylvania called for rationing and cut back electricity supplies because of exceptionally heavy demands.

In Ohio, where 10 deaths were blamed on the cold, temperatures near or below zero also prompted utility companies to cut back electrical output and call for power rationing. Toledo Edison Co. and Dayton Power Light Co. both ordered 5 percent cutbacks in electricity.

In Columbus, where the midmorning reading was 4 above, the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. called the situation critical and asked customers to reduce consumption by 50 percent.

East Ohio Gas Co. in Cleveland measured consumption of gas at 48 percent above normal for the 24 hours ended at 8 a.m., but said there were no emergencies for its service area in northeast Ohio.

Cleveland Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich, saying the problem was beyond the city's capacity to deal with, requested emergency assistance Monday night. Gov. James A. Rhodes declared a snow emergency and ordered out National Guard units in the Cleveland area to assist authorities.

The National Weather Service said 8.6 inches of snow fell in Cleveland since Sunday, and heavy winds created drifts and reduced visibility.

Schools Closed
Cleveland's 113,000-student public school system was closed for the second straight day.

In the seven-state Tennessee Valley Authority area, TVA spokesman Lee Sheppard said the agency shaved its power to industrial users.

"It's tight not just on our system but for the whole eastern grid generally," Sheppard said. "We got just a dab from the outside. There aren't any blocks of power around that we can purchase."

TVA serves portions of Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi, Georgia, North Carolina and Virginia.

In Michigan, Consumers Power Co., the state's second-largest utility, reduced voltage by 5 percent Tuesday for the second time since the storm hit. It serves

Snow Threat Lingers In Area Today

BLEAK, GRAY clouds that promised snow but delivered none, enveloped the South Plains Tuesday, but weathermen held to their forecast that snow might still be seen before the frosty air mass moves on later tonight.

Bitterly cold temperatures plummeted to the lowest reading for the date since 1930 as the arctic air mass continued its trek across the region, forcing residents to pull on mittens and mufflers, wary of traffic mishaps on icy streets, to scowl.
By early today, though, weathermen said there was still a 40 per cent chance that South Plains residents might wake up to a one-inch blanket of fluffy snowflakes covering area lawns.

Cold To Stay
Warm, winter coats hauled from closets for warmth against Tuesday's 9-degree low temperature will have to be brought back out today, since mercury readings shouldn't top out at much more than the middle 30s. Low temperatures tonight should be in the middle 20s, rising a little higher on Thursday into the lower 40s.

Forecasters predicted a 40 per cent chance of snow for Tuesday night, 40 per cent for today and 30 per cent for tonight.

With the onslaught of the frigid blast, Lubbock Power and Light assistant director Walter Armstrong said the companies peak hourly load was up a little over usual consumption but that the snowy conditions shouldn't have much effect on LP&L customers unless the weather turns icy.

A spokesman for Pioneer Natural Gas indicated usage had been extremely heavy during Monday night and Tuesday, but that few problems had occurred because of the unusual surge. The firm did curtail natural gas to power plants in

Council Seat Sought By Bob Schmidt

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff
THE RACE for a city council position other than the mayorship gained its first official candidate late Tuesday afternoon when Bob Schmidt of 5405 16th Place filed.

The 48-year-old horticulturist, who is co-owner and president of Caprock Growers, Inc., will try to replace Alan Henry, whose term expires this spring.

Henry is expected to announce today whether he will make a bid for the mayorship, try for a second council term or drop out of local politics.

Schmidt, who has not yet designated a campaign treasurer, said he plans a low-keyed campaign. He did not single out any specific issues he will address as a candidate, saying instead he is "vitaly interested in the future of Lubbock, encompassing economic growth and orderly development of all segments of Lubbock."

Stresses Legislative Fairness
And, Schmidt said, he is "interested in the fairness of legislation to all races and all neighborhoods."

He has no "axes to grind" or particular "bailiwicks" to further, he added, but he may direct himself to particular issues as the campaign develops.

A desire to serve the community was the key factor in his decision to run, Schmidt said.

"I feel you can't really be concerned about a government unless you are willing to give some time to it and make some sacrifices," he explained. "Unless responsible people take an interest in things, they can't gripe about what takes place."

And, he said, he believes different people serving on the council offer "more exposure in appointments and getting more people involved in government."

Schmidt explained that he moves in different social and business circles from other council members, and that he can "make some contributions there."

He describes himself as "just an old,"

Farmers Plan Talk Sessions

By IRA PERRY
Avalanche-Journal Staff
STRIKING South Plains farmers added new dimensions to their month-old protest against low farm prices Tuesday, but at the same time, revived older tactics that have characterized their movement since its beginning.

American Agriculture Movement leaders in Plainview Tuesday announced they would take a more peaceful approach to getting the area businessmen's support than the blockades and business shutdowns staged in many area towns — an approach they said would begin in Lubbock Thursday.

Strike leader Marvin Meek said area farmers today will begin inviting one businessman or one political leader each to a special "One-Plus-One" session at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Lubbock's Fair Park Coliseum.

Farmers from the South Plains, the Panhandle, West Texas and parts of New Mexico are expected to attend, Meek said, and coliseum officials have been told to prepare for about 2,000 people.

Motorcades Still Rolling
Across the region, though, many of the same tactics that started the American Agriculture Movement were still going on.

Cochran County farmers stormed into Morton in an early morning tractorcade. Before they left, they had complained about high agricultural taxes by suggesting they would not pay full taxes this year, applied for food stamps and applied for free lunches for their school age children.

Lamesa Police Chief Lee Bartlett said about 300 tractors converged on that city about 8:15 a.m. Tuesday for a park rally and parade through town. The entire episode was peaceful, and no businesses were involuntarily closed, he said.

More Agriculture Days
Strike offices in Floydada, Olton, O'Donnell, Muleshoe, Lamesa and Lorenzo were reportedly considering plans to call special American Agriculture days in those towns similar to the one Monday in Littlefield that virtually shut down all business in that South Plains community. Lubbock's "One-Plus-One" session will be an attempt to educate area businessmen about the 100 per cent parity concept and American Agriculture goals, Meek said, without the pressure of blockades and other potentially-violent situations.

AIR FORCE ONE COST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of flying Air Force One is $2,337 per hour, a military aide said Tuesday, which means the total air fare for President Carter and his party during his seven-nation trip was nearly $183,000.

Scheduled to address the crowd are Amarillo agribusinessman Don Kimball and Lubbock National Bank Vice President Johnny Lutrick, Meek said.

In a similar move, Floydada farmers will treat that city's businessmen to a chili dinner Monday as part of a day-long rally before about 40 Floydada farmers leave the area for Washington, D.C., in the "National Paritycade."

State strike leaders in Hereford said they expect at least 1,000 South Plains farmers to travel to the nation's capital

FBI Employee Gifts To Hoover Alleged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department Tuesday accused the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover of accepting special favors and services from FBI employees.

It also said in a 40-page report that the longtime director took part with other former FBI officials in a pattern of long-standing and widespread abuses of FBI services.

Hoover, who died in 1972 at the age of 77, was said to have accepted favors that ranged from additions to his home to servicing of his lawnmower and snow blower.

"Clocks were reset, metal polished, wallpaper retouched, firewood provided and furniture rearranged," the report said. "Employees were on call night and day for his work."

Hoover also got free tax advice from a bureau accountant and members of the FBI's Exhibits Section were called upon to build gifts each year for Hoover on Christmas, his service anniversary with the agency and other special occasions, the report alleged.

Similar and related charges also were alleged against a number of other former top FBI officials.

But the department said no civil court action was contemplated against any of these persons since the statute of limitations may have run out and since "the actual amounts involved are small compared to the expense of litigation."

Most of the allegations in the report had been previously reported by the news media. However, this was the first time that the Justice Department has published its version of the events. The department spent more than 2 years looking into the allegations.

The report said that the gifts for Hoover included tables, display cases, cabinets, a bar and valets. It said assistant directors chipped in to buy for materials but the workers who built the presents were never compensated.

"FBI employees called upon to perform

British Firemen Fight Comrades

LONDON (AP) — Picketing firemen, furious as many of their comrades voted to end a nine-week-old nationwide strike, went on a rampage in three towns north of London Tuesday night, police said.

They reported about 70 pickets drove to areas where firemen had voted to return to work and forced their way into local fire stations.

Fire hydrants and hoses were turned on, flooding the stations, and firetruck tires were deflated, police said.

"They acted like hooligans, screaming abuse at working firemen," said a police spokesman in Stevenage, 30 miles north of London. Police reported Welwyn Garden City and Potters Bar also were targets of the "flying pickets."

Girls Ruled Eligible In All Sports

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — In a sweeping decision he says affects the entire country, a federal judge has ruled that high school girls must be allowed to compete alongside boys in all sports, including contact sports like football and wrestling.

U.S. District Court Judge Carl Rubin, who issued his ruling late Monday, said that with such an opportunity a woman might even become the greatest quarterback in pro football history.

"It has always been traditional that 'boys play football and girls are cheerleaders' — why so?" Asked the judge. "Where is it written that girls may not, if suitably qualified, play football?"

"It may well be that there is a student today in an Ohio high school who lacks only the proper coaching and training to become the greatest quarterback in professional football history. Of course the odds are astronomical against her, but isn't she entitled to a fair chance to try?"

In his decision, Rubin flatly declared that both Ohio and federal regulations which ban coeducational sports teams are unconstitutional.

Girls "must be given the opportunity to compete with boys in interscholastic contact sports if they are physically qualified," Rubin said, adding that separate teams "cannot serve as an excuse to deprive qualified girls positions on formerly all-boy teams, regardless of the sport."

Rubin ruled in a case brought by two Ohio high school girls against the Ohio High School Athletic Association, but he said his decision has national implications.

"The consequences of this determination carry beyond the state level ... for the federal regulations also are unconstitutional insofar as they suggest that mixed gender competition, creation of separate teams for girls and boys ... or creation of an all-male team in contact sports are independent and wholly satisfactory methods of compliance."

The suit had been filed in 1974 on behalf of Leah Wing and Amy Underwood, who at the time were seventh graders at Morgan Middle School in nearby Yellow Springs and were barred from joining the all-boys basketball team. They are now sophomores at Yellow Springs High School.

Miss Wing's mother, Shelley, applauded the decision as "incredibly wonderful."

"If a girl has the qualifications," she said, "I don't think there are any reasons why she should be limited."

Rubin said the question of whether a high school girl competes alongside boys is a matter of "personal choice," not "sex."

"There may be a multitude of reasons why a girl might elect not to do so, reasons of stature or weight or reasons of temperament, motivation or interests. This is a matter of personal choice. But a prohibition without exception based on sex is not."

"It is this that is both unfair and contrary to personal rights contemplated in the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution," added Rubin. "Accordingly, school girls who so desire, must be given the opportunity to demonstrate the presumption created by the (OHSA) rule is invalid."

Rubin also attacked the "conclusive presumption that girls are physically weaker than boys."

"Although some women are physically unfit to participate with boys in contact sports, it does not necessarily and universally follow that all women suffer similar disabilities."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. Frequently, in the last few months, I've read: "Get out of bonds and into Treasury bills." Are Treasury bills safer than A.T.&T. or IBM stock? Can one invest in a Treasury bill fund?

A. Let's start right out by saying that no investment is safer than a Treasury bill. The U.S. government promises to pay $1,000 on a $1,000 face amount bill within the year. And you can't beat that promise.

When someone says "get out of (long-term) bonds into T bills" what is implied is that money rates are going up so don't lock yourself into a long-term bond, but, instead, shift your money to a one-year or less Treasury loan. Then, if rates do climb, you can get in on the higher interest rates. In other words, keep your commitments short and liquid.

If the guess is correct, the advice is good.

You may buy T bills directly or invest in them indirectly via money market mutual funds which place heavy emphasis on Treasury bills.

Q. I bought some telephone bonds due in 2011. I won't be around that long (although I have children who will). Wouldn't a higher interest, shorter term bond serve me better? A. It would, but there "ain't no such animal." If you stick to the same quality level, long-term bonds, by definition, yield more than short-term bonds.

Q. I've just read a book by a man who said one could treble his money by "in and out" play in the market.

A. To each his own fantasy. I've always wanted to be the pitcher who hurls a no-hitter to win the "crucial" game of the World Series and then gets signed to a $2 million contract for the next season. (Unfortunately, in real life, I was always the last one picked when teams were gotten up for the afternoon ball game.

Q. We are retired, living on company pension and Social Security. Since my wife is much younger than I, we allow our bank interest to accumulate as protection for her. We have $28,000 in bank accounts, $10,000 is certificates and E and F bonds.

A. I am not clear on the "bank accounts." If you mean you have $28,000 in checking and day-to-day 5 1/4 percent savings accounts you are passing up a lot of income, and that certainly should be rectified at once.

E bonds grow at the rate of 6 percent a year, tax deferrable. I don't know what that tax deferral is worth to you. You'd have to figure for yourself whether it benefits you more than say 8 1/4 percent (taxable) from corporate bonds or 6 to 7 percent (taxable) from a good utility stock which could also offer some help of growth and inflation offset.

Finally, better do something about those "F" bonds. They aren't working for you any longer. Write to the Savings Bond division, Treasury Department, Washington, D.C. 20226.

Q. I need monthly income, so I'm withdrawing $250 a month from a $50,000 deposit earning 5 percent. Am I using up my capital?

A. Yes-but only at a low rate. It would take 36 years to exhaust it.

What puzzles me is: why don't you put the $50,000 into 7 3/4 percent time deposits, draw about $1,000 straight, interest every three months and keep all your capital intact?

Q. My husband is retiring on disability. Can you suggest any no-risk investment to supplement our monthly income?

A. Taking your "no-risk" requirement at face value, your best bets would be Treasury bonds, insured savings accounts or an annuity (providing you are both old enough) purchased from an insurance company licensed to do business in your state. By "no-risk" I mean no danger to the invested principal in terms of dollars put in and fixed dollar income.

SHULSKY welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Lubbockites To Get Improved Access To London By Air

Air fare between Lubbock and London will be reduced and travelers from this area will have less expensive, more direct access to Europe when Braniff International begins its non-stop service between Dallas/Fort Worth and the British capital, the airline announced Monday.

Braniff District Sales Director Randall Jones said the airline is seeking government approval of a variety of innovative fares which will offer reductions in the current normal first class and economy class fares as well as lower excursion, youth, group and Apex fares.

These are in addition to the already announced $399 round trip standby fare between Lubbock and London. Standby passengers will receive confirmed reservations between Lubbock and Dallas/Fort Worth, and if not accommodated on two consecutive London flights from Dallas/Fort Worth will be automatically confirmed on the next available flight.

Braniff's other fare proposals for the Lubbock to London round trip, all of which offer confirmed reservations:

—Group fare of $449 for 100 or more travelers.

—Apex fare of $489. This applies to individual travel on trips of 10 to 45 days duration with reservations made and tickets purchased 21 days in advance.

—Excursion fare of $747 for 14 to 21 day trips, and $664 for 22 to 45 day trips. No advance purchase required on either side.

—Youth fare of $698 for ages 12 through 21. No advance purchase required.

—Normal economy fare will be lowered from the current $892 for connecting flights to $830 for Braniff's non-stop flights.

—Normal first class fare will be lowered from the current $1,672 to $1,552.

Braniff said it planned a prompt inauguration of daily non-stop flights with widebody jets between Dallas/Fort Worth and London. Exact schedules and starting dates will be announced soon.

Lubbock travelers will have direct connection to and from these London flights within Braniff's terminal at Dallas/Fort Worth. Connections will also be available at London to and from other cities in Europe and the Middle East.

Tickets to his speech are on sale at the University Center Ticket booth for $2 for Texas Tech students and $6 for the general public. Tickets also will be available at the door the night of the speech.

Weinglass currently is a lecturer at the University of Southern California Law Center. He recently was awarded the first annual Clarence Darrow Foundation award for his work exemplifying the ideals of fair trial for which Darrow fought so hard.

In addition to his lecture, Weinglass will meet with Tech students Jan. 18-20 before leaving Lubbock.
