

HEW Hopes To Halt Pension 'Double-Dipping'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration wants to close the loophole that allows so-called "double-dippers" to draw windfall benefits from the Social Security system.

The minimum benefit is now fixed at $114 a month, but if Congress approves the Carter proposal, that figure could plummet to as little as $7 or $8 a month in the case of someone who barely qualified for Social Security — such as some double-dippers, who draw a civil service pension, then work in private business long enough to qualify for Social Security.

That's not the only change proposed by the Health, Education and Welfare Department as outlined by HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. In addition to ending the minimum benefit, HEW proposed other changes to save a total of $644 million next year.

One change would deprive new retirees of a month's benefits. Retirees currently become eligible in the month in which their birthday falls. HEW wants to save $138 million by making the first payment in the month after a birthday.

Also, HEW hopes to save $121 million by limiting retroactive payments to three months instead of 12. Currently, new retirees who file late receive an average of five months back benefits.

And, HEW wants to save $117 million by limiting benefits to dependent college students to $1,600 next year, and to save $14 million by charging for some pension data.

It is not certain that Congress will follow the administration's wishes in this election year. An aide to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has said his panel will have little time this year for work on Social Security. Any changes would have to be minor, he added.

The elimination of the minimum benefit is seen as necessary partly because of the low amount that has been required to qualify for a pension. In the past, a person could qualify by earning as little as $50 a quarter for 24 quarters, or six years.

A person who did just that would have paid less than $70 in Social Security taxes on earnings of $1,200 and qualified for a pension of $114 a month for life.

The new law passed last year already has raised the minimum amount a person must earn to $250 a quarter or $1,000 a year. By 1991, new retirees will have had to work 10 years to qualify for any benefits.

By eliminating the minimum benefit and increasing the amount that must be earned to qualify, HEW hopes to cut down on the number of persons who draw both a full civil service pension and, while paying minimal taxes, a full Social Security pension.

But the proposal is criticized because it also might hurt some poor workers who have no other pension. The minimum benefit now is weighted to provide extra aid for retirees who are assumed to be poor.

Califano said, however, that the needy have recourse to the Supplemental Security Income program, which can provide up to $177 a month to the poor. About one-third of the five million SSI recipients are elderly.

Debt Rise Predicted By Mahon

A-J News Services

U.S. Rep. George H. Mahon, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, says he is "shocked at the magnitude of the budget" proposed by President Carter.

"If the President's projections are correct," Mahon said, "the national debt will increase not by $60 billion plus next year, but by $89 billion plus. So it's a pretty sobering document."

In his reaction to Carter's proposed $500.2 billion spending budget, Mahon said, "I deplore the fact that the President's budget moves us farther away from a balanced budget, rather than nearer a balanced budget."

The president's budget proposal carries a prospective $60.6 billion deficit, only a little under this year's, and Mahon said "the greatest risk is inflation."

Mahon applauded Carter's announced intention of working with the private sector to reduce unemployment and promote growth, but said there is too little restraint on government spending.

Mahon also said the proposed $25 billion tax reduction may be too large, and that some tax law revisions that would pick up revenues may be ill-advised.

"I am personally opposed to those so-called reforms which would hit most heavily on middle-class America, such as the elimination of deductions for state and local sales, gasoline and personal property taxes," Mahon said. He also criticized some proposals for increasing business taxes.

Mahon said he approves Carter's recommendation for a $10.3 billion increase in budget authority for the Defense Department over this year's level, to a total of $125.6 billion.

"There's been entirely too much uncertainty in the country as to what direction this government is to take. I think it's helpful to have the president tell the nation just as his program is. We need to generate as much stability as possible. This would tend to renew business confidence and promote planning and expansion that would provide additional jobs and additional federal revenue."

On a budget-related subject, Mahon said he appeared this morning before the House Committee on Intelligence for a hearing determining whether detailed figures on the Central Intelligence Agency's budget should be made public.

"I took the position that there was no great hue and cry that we release secret information. I pointed out that other major countries of the world do not release secret information as to their intelligence operations and I expressed strong opposition to making heretofore secret documents public."

Soviet Union Spacecraft Hits Canada

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet military satellite powered by a nuclear reactor fell from orbit this morning and plummeted toward a sparsely populated area of Canada, President Carter's national security adviser said.

A Canadian government spokesman in Ottawa said there was no reason for concern about any danger from radioactivity. He said it was unclear whether all of the satellite had disintegrated and burned when it re-entered the atmosphere about 850 miles north of the U.S. border in Montana.

However, Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security aide, said the vehicle broke apart and burned when it hit the atmosphere. Asked why he thought the satellite had disintegrated before hitting the earth, he said that based on scientific experience, "it was very highly probably it would burn up."

Brzezinski said this was the first time a satellite powered by a nuclear reactor has crashed into the earth's atmosphere.

Brzezinski, who made the initial announcement about the satellite at a special news briefing, said, "The chances are very little that any contamination resulted."

He said the Soviet Cosmos satellite containing highly radioactive enriched uranium-235 entered the atmosphere at 5:53 a.m. CST "and it proceeded to disintegrate and burn up" over Queen Charlotte Island on Canada's west coast.

He said he presumed the satellite was a Soviet military satellite, but he would not comment on the satellite's purpose. He said the satellite's nuclear reactor was used to generate electricity and was not a weapon.

If any radioactivity reached the earth's surface, it would be similar in amount to that caused by a nuclear explosion in the high atmosphere, which could then drift around the globe for several years, Brzezinski said.

Government sources said the vehicle was a navigation satellite launched last September under the designation Cosmos 954.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the Russians had been unable to get the satellite to work successfully despite repeated radio commands. The Soviets also had tried to get the satellite back into orbit, the sources said.

The United States in 1965 launched a satellite powered by a nuclear reactor. The vehicle, known as "Snapshot" and powered by uranium 235, operated for 43 days but then failed. It is still in orbit and is expected to stay there at least 4,000 years.

Other U.S. satellites have carried radioactive isotopes to power electrical generators. These isotopes are usually a form

New Storm Threatens Southwest

A-J News Services

Travelers advisories were posted for the South Plains today as a new winter storm swept eastward out of the Rockies, bringing a threat of 1 to 3 inches of snow for the area.

Freezing drizzle and snow were due to set in this afternoon, and the National Weather Service warned that driving conditions would remain hazardous through early Wednesday.

As fog and drizzle covered the city this morning, forecasters said the probability of precipitation would drop to 50 percent tonight and further decline to 30 percent Wednesday.

Temperatures are not expected to be bitterly cold, however. This afternoon's high in the mid-30s should be followed by readings in the lower 20s tonight and a high near 40 on Wednesday.

The rugged Rocky Mountain storm tumbled from its Colorado birthplace and spread glistering danger through Utah, New Mexico and parts of Nebraska and Texas.

Near noon today, snow was falling over much of northeastern New Mexico and the Texas Panhandle.

Some departing flights were delayed at Lubbock International Airport this morning because of fog, but service was reported back to normal at noon.

Wire service reports this morning urged travelers "and other listeners" to monitor broadcast media for statements and warnings "concerning this potentially dangerous winter storm."

Predictions for moisture and 20-degree weather in the Lubbock area tonight increased the odds that some South Plains

Solon Asks Billions In Aid To Farmers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Herman Talmadge of the Senate Agriculture Committee today strongly urged Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland to adopt a five-point plan to pump more than $7.5 billion into the faltering farm economy.

At a hearing called the week after demonstrations by a farm-strike protest movement in the capital, Talmadge told Bergland that quick action is needed to keep thousands of farmers from bankruptcy.

"The plight of the American farmer should by now be obvious to everyone. We have heard it in the voices of protest, frustration, desperation and even anger from the thousands of farmers who have converged on the capital during the past several days," the Georgian said.

Talmadge said his proposals could be put into effect by the administration under terms of a farm law passed last year. Talmadge told a news conference Monday that if Bergland fails to act, he will try to force action by legislation — but he conceded the outcome of a farm bill would be "unpredictable."

Talmadge said the first item in his proposed package would call for federal spending of up to $395 billion to pay wheat, feed-grain and cotton farmers to voluntarily idle up to 50 million acres of land to reduce surpluses and thus improve farm prices. This would be in addition to acreage the administration already plans to idle.

Other proposed steps include raising the 1978 wheat-support loan rate by 50 cents a bushel to $2.75; raising the corn-support loan 50 cents to $2.50 a bushel; boosting soybean supports $1.50 over 1977 levels to $5 a bushel; and giving peanut farmers a $420-a-ton support on about 15 percent of their crop which, under the 1977 law, was scheduled to get a much lower price.

Status Of Many Voters In County Under Cloud

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Unless their status is cleared up soon, 22,000 names may be dropped from Lubbock County's voter registration rolls.

And if yours is among them, you'll have problems getting to vote in upcoming elections.

Last month Russell Hardin, Lubbock County tax assessor-collector, mailed new, yellow voter registration cards — in contrast to the old, blue certificates — to the 79,110 persons listed on the county's voting rolls.

Some 22,000 of those cards have since been returned to the county tax office by the U.S. Postal Service for incorrect addresses, a figure Hardin said reflects the mobility of the Lubbock population.

The figure also may spell trouble at the polls in 1978 for persons who believe they are registered, but have not received a yellow certificate.

Hardin's office is compiling two voter lists for upcoming elections — an "active" roll for the approximately 57,000 persons who have received new registration cards, and an "inactive" roll for the 22,000 who haven't.

Copies of the two sets of rolls will be distributed to all polling precincts for April 1 school board and city council elections, May 6 political party primaries and related runoffs. Persons listed on the inactive roll will be allowed to vote in those spring elections, but with certain qualifications.

"Technically they are not registered voters. But the state is providing them an opportunity to vote," said a spokesman in the elections division of Secretary of State Steven Oaks' office.

He said persons on the county's inactive roll must:

—Vote in the precinct in which they are listed (in most cases, according to the address on their obsolete blue registration cards).

"Even though they probably have moved, we want them to vote in the precinct in which they were last registered, as listed on the inactive roll," the spokesman said.

—Sign an affidavit at the voting box that they still reside in the county and file a request on the spot for a new voter reg-

Networks Quarrel Over Reasoner

NEW YORK (AP) — Is Harry Reasoner trying to divorce himself from Barbara Walters and ABC News? Reasoner reportedly has a job waiting at CBS, his old network, if he can just get out of his contract with ABC. But that may not be so easy. ABC news chief Rooney Arledge says Reasoner's contract with ABC runs until 1980 and a deal is a deal. "The contract does not give him a unilateral right to terminate his employment here," said Arledge. "I'd like to see him happy, but I'm not ready to jump at a decision about letting him go. We'd agree to his resignation only if it were in our interest to do so." Meanwhile, ABC had told CBS to lay off talking to Reasoner about a job. Although he is keeping quiet on the advice of his lawyer, Reasoner says he has an "oral agreement" that he can leave ABC this June. Reasoner has made it clear he's not too happy over sharing the "ABC Evening News" with Miss Walters.

Carter's Mother Now Centerfold

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter graces the centerfold of Larry Flynt's latest publication. But it's nothing like Hustler or Chic, two of Flynt's better known magazines. It's the Plains Georgia Monitor, until Flynt bought it a modest country weekly. The first press run Monday under Flynt's ownership was 100,000 copies, said editor Sam Simpson. Pages 16 and 17 contain a charcoal drawing which Simpson describes as "Mahatma Gandhi looking out from the heavens, a dark-skinned Jesus Christ and, underneath, 'Miss Lillian' dressed in a white flowing robe holding a dark-skinned Indian baby." "It's really a kind of a tribute to Miss Lillian and her concern for people all over the world," said Simpson, adding that the centerfold was "100 percent Mr. Flynt's idea." Simpson said 95,000 copies of the current issue will be distributed in selected test markets by Flynt's organization.

Rock Guitarist Found Innocent

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Possess marijuana? Rock guitarist Billy Peek insists he's never touched the stuff. Peek, a member of Rod Stewart's band, was found innocent of a possession of marijuana charge Monday in Glasgow Sheriff's Court. "I have never taken dope in my life," testified Peek of St. Louis, Mo. "I don't even smoke." "I believe you," said Sheriff Brian Kearney. "Not guilty." Peek, 37, was charged in a complaint stemming from a police raid on Glasgow's Albany Hotel on Jan. 4, 1977, when the Stewart band was here during a British tour. "I could have pleaded guilty a year ago and saved myself all the trouble and expense," Peek told reporters. "But even when the trial was postponed last September after I'd flown over from the States, I was still determined to come back to prove my innocence." Police had claimed there were traces of marijuana on Peek's fingers and in his room. Peek said these could have been left by other people.

Papers Show Judy Garland Broke

NEW YORK (AP) — Although Judy Garland made millions, she was practically broke when she died. That's the picture revealed in court documents filed Monday by her three children — Liza-Minelli, Lorna Luft and Joseph Luft. When their mother died in 1969 from what was ruled an accidental overdose of barbiturates the three estimated her estate was valued at between $15,000 and $40,000. They said it may have earned an additional $40,000 in royalties from records, films and television reruns after her death. However, the petition filed Monday says various debts, including federal and state taxes, "may exceed the gross value of the estate." The three children asked the court to appoint them administrators of their mother's estate, accept a will made by Miss Garland in 1961 and determine what, if any, assets are involved. The will leaves the three equal shares of the estate when they reach age 35. The long delay in filing an application for probate of Miss Garland's will was explained by the fact that Joseph, 22, could not serve as an administrator until he reached the age of majority. Miss Minelli is 31, Miss Luft 24. Miss Garland earned a fortune after her debut as a child actress and her later performances in "The Wizard of Oz" and other memorable motion pictures. In addition, she made enormously profitable stage appearances during her career. However, she was known to have spent freely of her earnings.

A Bird On The Wheel

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Scott Bunnell's bird would have been better off in a bush or a cage; anywhere but the steering wheel of his car. State troopers said they stopped Bunnell's car after noting it traveling erratically down Interstate 5 Sunday. They said Bunnell apparently was letting the parrot strut across the top of the steering wheel and was turning it from side to side to get the parrot to change direction. Bunnell, 26, of Corvallis, Ore., faces a maximum fine of $100 for driving while encumbered, a citation usually issued to someone who drives with their arm around another person or who holds an animal, package or child in their lap. Because the parrot didn't fit any of the examples cited in the law, state police marked the bird as "other."

Stassen Eyeing Senate

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — One-time "boy governor" and perennial presidential hopeful Harold Stassen returned to Minnesota Monday to announce he would run for the U.S. Senate. But Stassen, 70, said he will run on the Independent-Republican ticket for the seat now held by Sen. Wendell Anderson — not for the vacancy created by the Jan. 13 death of Sen. Hubert Humphrey. Stassen has lived in Pennsylvania for several years, but holds property in Minnesota. He said that qualifies him under residency requirements to run for office in Minnesota. While he is not seeking Humphrey's seat, Stassen said he would run "to carry on Hubert Humphrey's devotion to the well-being of all humanity on this Earth." Stassen assumed office as Minnesota governor on Jan. 2, 1939, at the age of 31 and promptly was dubbed the "boy governor." At the time, he was the youngest governor the state's history. Since then, Stassen has made repeated unsuccessful runs for the presidency and various other elective offices. Rudy Boschwitz, a Republican national committeeman, announced for the An-

Judge Permits Child Witness

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state judge has ruled that a 4-year-old girl is competent to testify against the man charged with raping her, but has disqualified her 3-year-old brother as a witness. Criminal District Judge Alvin Oser ruled Monday after a two-hour hearing in which the two children answered hesitantly, sometimes not at all, to questions by prosecution and defense attorneys.

"What happens if you don't tell the truth?" the prosecutor asked the little girl, who wore a red-and-white dress and played nervously with a tissue while on the witness stand. "You'll get punished," she replied after the question was repeated several times.

Because of the child's answers at the hearing and before a grand jury earlier, Oser ruled she was competent to testify at the Thursday trial of Louis W. Ellis, charged with aggravated rape while babysitting with the girl at her home last year.

"The criteria for qualification (of a witness) is on understanding, not on age," said Oser.

The girl's brother was reluctant to answer many questions, and did not respond when asked, "Do you know what a lie is?"

"In all good conscience," Oser told the attorneys, the boy "does not meet the qualifications ... established by Louisiana. He is not qualified because of his tender age."

Testimony To Begin In Investigation Of Lance

ATLANTA (UPI) — Witnesses are expected to begin testifying today before an Atlanta federal grand jury investigating former Budget Director Bert Lance's banking affairs. Walter Barnes, one of the two Justice Department attorneys from Washington in Atlanta Monday, refused to comment on the case, but published reports said the inquiry would begin today. "I really can't comment on anything," said Barnes, a deputy chief of the Justice Department's fraud section. Lance, a former Georgia banker, is one of President Carter's best friends and unofficial advisers. He was forced to resign his federal post last September over controversy surrounding his personal financial dealings. An Atlanta newspaper reported last weekend that officers from Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in New York will be among the first witnesses to appear before the grand jury. They will reportedly be questioned about a $2.6-million loan made to Lance on June 30, 1975. That loan allowed Lance, then president of the National Bank of Georgia, to buy 148,000 shares of stock in NBG. The U.S. Comptroller of the Currency has reported that the NBG sent Manufactures Hanover $250,000 to be deposited in a non-interest bearing "correspondent" account five days after the loan to Lance was approved. Lance settled more than $3.8 million in loans after a Saudi Arabian, Ghaith Pharaon, purchased 60 percent of his stock in the National Bank of Georgia for $2.4 million.

Race Riots In Bermuda Hurting Tourist Trade

By GEORGE ESPER
HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — The $200 million-a-year tourist industry that supports this Atlantic island resort has been hit hard by the riots last month by blacks demanding a bigger share of the income.

The Department of Tourism launched a special $275,000 advertising campaign in the United States this week to lure back thousands of American tourists and conventioners scared off by the three days of rioting and firebombing during the first week of December.

Lyndon Clay, executive vice president of the Bermuda Hotel Association, says the tourist trade was off by 43 percent in December compared to a year ago. He said the 56 hotels and guest houses lost nearly $2.5 million.

December, January and February are traditionally the slow months of the local tourist season because the weather, although pleasant, is still not warm enough for the beaches. Had the riots come after the season begins to pick up in March, losses would have been much worse.

Clay says current projections show a 30 percent drop for the first quarter of this year with a potential loss in hotel revenue of $5.7 million, unless the advertising campaign can win back visitors.

"The troops are on the road," says Clay, referring to Department of Tourism and hotel association officials who are trying to drum up new business. "New reservations are coming in and we hope to improve."

The government of Bermuda normally spends about $3 million a year for advertising.

The island is calm now, but the blacks still simmer with dissatisfaction over their economic and political situation.

Some black leaders say they are waiting for the recommendations of a Royal Commission being set up by the British governor, Sir Peter Ramsbotham.

"I think things are back to normal," says Frederick Ingham of the minority Progressive Labor Party. "I think the people are waiting for the results of this commission to get some kind of social gains here. It is economics. The expatriate, he has economic power in Bermuda."

The blacks, who make up two-thirds of the island's 55,000 residents, say there is a side of the place that tourists rarely see, the "Back of the Town," in the north of Hamilton.

This is where the blue-collar black workers are clustered, around the Pembroke Dump where the spontaneous combustion from raw garbage gives off odorous, white smoke; in the tiny $75-a-month Devon Apartments once called the Incubator.

"The women, they had quite a few babies," black cab driver Daniel Trott explains. "When you came up here this was all that you saw, kids. Then they changed it to the Devon Apartments and they get very embarrassed if you call it the incubator."

"If you see anybody walking around here and they are not working or they say they can't find a job, it's either because they are handicapped or plain lazy and don't want to work. There is plenty of work around here. I feel myself, that some of the jobs that the foreigners are holding down, the Bermudians can do. But it's just that the Bermudians don't have a chance at working on some of the jobs like that. They want better jobs."

Black businessmen say they are clustered in blighted store fronts on Court Street, the focal point of the rioting, while the lucrative white businesses are on Front Street overlooking the harbor that draws all of the tourists. They also complain they can't get credit in the form of overdrafts from white banking interests to keep their businesses going.

Premier David Gibbons acknowledges that Bermuda's wealth is controlled by a small number of whites.

"The statement that the great majority of capital is in the hands of a comparatively limited group of white people is quite correct," said Gibbons.

"Because of the difficulty of competing with large operations, their small business efforts have not been successful as they would have liked. Government would wish they were, and indeed government must find ways to insure they are much more successful.

"To say they were not granted overdraft facilities would not be true. By the same token, they might not have received as sympathetic a reception from the banks as I think government would like, and this is one of the things that we will be addressing ourselves to immediately in the next month or two.

"As far as job opportunities are concerned, there are no lack of job opportunities as such. The amount of unemployment here is between two and three percent. It is minimal, but where they do have a very justifiable complaint is in the area of top management, in banking, in the hotels, in business particularly."

Gibbons said within three years, the government will build a $4-million hotel college to train Bermudians for top management posts in the hotel industry.

He said the government will embark immediately on a two-year program to deal with the island's internal problems. The government, he says, will try to persuade the financial community to put qualified black people on boards of directors and in top management posts.

BERMUDA TOURISM HURT BY RIOTS — The Atlantic island resort of Bermuda that depends on its $200 million-a-year tourist industry for its livelihood has been hit economically by riots last December by blacks demanding a bigger share of the lucrative income. The blacks, who make up two-thirds of the island's 55,000 residents, say there is a side of the resort tourists rarely see ... such as children of black workers at play outside their blighted Devon apartments located near the Pembroke Dump. (AP Laserphoto)

DR. LAMB

Smoking May Harm Fetus

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a dear friend who smokes at least a pack of cigarettes a day. She is four months pregnant. I am concerned because I've been told that cigarette smoking could cause harm to the baby. She also takes nerve pills. I would like your advice on this.

DEAR READER — Many women who smoke have normal babies, but there is certainly an increased risk to the pregnancy. Women who smoke are more prone to miscarriage. One way this may happen is that the nicotine in the tobacco smoke constricts the arteries in the placenta and may cause local areas of damage to the placenta. The damaged placenta is unable to sustain the baby and an abortion follows.

The second problem is that babies born to smoking mothers weigh less and as a group are more prone to convulsions.

Medications of all types are apt to concentrate in the developing baby's body at higher levels than in the mother's body. A good example is alcohol. As adults we have enzymes that help us metabolize alcohol. The developing baby does not have these enzymes yet and may be unable to metabolize alcohol rapidly. The result is the baby's alcohol level will be many times greater than drinking mama-to-be.

All things considered — if a pregnant woman wants to be good to her baby — she should live an optimally healthy life, eat a well-balanced, nutritious diet with the supplements her doctor may advise, particularly for iron and calcium, and avoid medications, smoking and alcohol.

To give you more information on the harmful effects of tobacco I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-6, Tobacco: Cigarettes, Cigars, Pipes. Others who are interested in this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me at P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My question is on nutrition. My husband and I both work. I leave around 10 a.m. and return home at 6 p.m. We have two children age 7 and 10. When I get home, of course, everyone wants to eat at once.

Is it essential to good health to have a hot meal every evening? Could the evening meal be a cold, attractive buffet, prepared ahead of time, consisting of chicken or ham salad or boiled, cold chicken served with fresh raw vegetables, such as a tossed salad and fresh fruits? Milk would be included, of course, and a dessert for the children if they desired. The children's lunches are the usual school lunch fare of sandwiches, hamburgers or hot dogs.

DEAR READER — There is no reason nutritionally why a meal has to be hot. Nutritionally, cold roast beef is as good as hot roast beef. In fact, hot food is irritating to some people's stomachs. It is simply a matter of taste and the influence it has in getting people to eat.

My only objection to cold meals is that lots of the food people served for such meals is high in fat and cholesterol. That includes most of the cold cuts and cheese. But you can certainly depend upon vegetables and fresh fruit plus using a cold roast turkey or chicken or even cold lean roast beef without that being a problem. Tuna salad or chicken salad can be fixed as a low calorie food.

You need to avoid being too heavy on coldcuts, boiled eggs and the high fat foods, otherwise there is no reason why your plan won't work.

Author Of Best Seller Files Lawsuit

FORT WORTH (AP) — Thomas Thompson, author of the best selling book, "Blood and Money," filed a $5.25 million lawsuit in federal court here Monday against Ann Kurth, one of the main characters in the story of two murders in Houston several years ago.

Thompson says in the suit that Mrs. Kurth damaged his reputation by telling a Dallas Times Herald reporter that Thomas lied in his book.

Mrs. Kurth is the sole defendant in the suit; the Dallas newspaper is not named as a defendant.

Thompson is facing more than $25 million in libel suits over the book about the slaying of Houston plastic surgeon Dr.

John Hill and the alleged killing by neglect of Hill's first wife, Joan Robinson Hill.

Mrs. Kurth, Hill's second wife, has sued Thompson for $3.75 million in connection with statements he made about her in the sensational novel which has ridden the crest of the best seller charts since it was published.

Thompson's suit says Mrs. Kurth told the Times Herald reporter that "Thompson 'Clifford Irvingized the whole thing'" and "there were 115 mistakes pertaining" to Mrs. Kurth in the book.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

'Aid' Spells D-e-f-i-c-i-t

THE NATION'S mayors apparently aren't the only ones who have complained that President Carter tried to accomplish too much in his first year.

Nation's Cities, the magazine of the National League of Cities, seems to have summed up the situation best in its current issue in these words:

"When the President talks about cities, he tends to wind up talking instead about something much narrower: neighborhoods and families; about the people who live in cities, but not about the institutions...themselves."

CARTER'S VIEWS on city problems are expected to be set forth in detail within the next several weeks. His State of the Union message last week briefly touched on it.

His budget message should enable mayors and other city officials to make their own dollars-and-cents comparisons of current and projected federal spending on programs of particular concern to them.

By mid-March, Carter is supposed to forward to Congress the report of the President's Urban and Regional Policy Group.

DRAFT VERSIONS of the group's policy effort appear to focus on the problems of poor and unemployed inner-city residents and to view economic development and the creation of jobs as the key to solving their problems, according to news reports.

Other provisions would aim at narrowing the economic gap between central cities and their suburbs. Some later drafts also suggested that cities might buy and operate factories threatened with closing.

Federal urban policy is commonly assumed to deal almost exclusively with the problems of the nation's largest cities. As a result, lesser communities often are neglected by Washington.

SMALLER CITIES have problems and concerns similar to those of large ones.
There's outward migration in some. And many lack adequate planning.

Regardless of their size, too many American cities unfortunately are growing increasingly dependent on Washington. Federal grants to localities totaled about $64 billion last year, as against $40 billion just four years earlier.

And the cities are clamoring for still more money, having yielded to the temptation to pay recurring operating expenses with "free" money from the government. And, chances are the cities will get additional aid, especially if Carter renounces his goal of a balanced federal budget by 1981.

We'll all pay a dear price if he recants on that one.

John D. Lofton:

Making 'Em Quit Is 'Dumb'

BALTIMORE—Mandatory retirement. Even before I delved into the issue, I admit I was repelled by the mere sound of the words. I don't like much of anything that's mandatory.

The idea of giving somebody the bum's rush simply because he's reached a certain arbitrary age has struck me as being dumb.

I am in this city to appear on a TV show where I will debate mandatory retirement, or, as I call it, compulsory unemployment for the elderly. I'm against it.

My opponent is Chuck Stone, a black, who writes a column for The Philadelphia News. He's for it.

Stone's arguments, divested of their verbiage, tall down to essentially two rationales:

RATIONALE ONE—The unemployment rate, particularly among young people, will soar if people are allowed to stay in their jobs beyond the age they ought to retire (70 or 75, in Stone's opinion).

"This argument is hardly compelling. In fact, there is much to be said that blows it out of the water.

An article in the current issue of the "World of Work Report," published by the New York-based World in America Institute, Inc., notes:

"Economists project that longer working lives would have a favorable effect on the nation's manpower balance during the next 10 years.

The number of people between 50 and 65 will also decline slightly. Thus, older workers could pick up the slack."

THIS ARTICLE POINTS out that ending forced retirement would also ease some of the intense pressure on the Social Security system, both by deferring the age at which many workers start receiving benefits and by lengthening the years in which those workers pay into the system.

An increase the retirement age of just three years, from 65 to 68, would mean that over the next 75 years the average payroll tax to finance Social Security would rise only half as much as it otherwise might.

More older workers would lighten the tax burden on productive people and businesses.

A Time magazine cover story on the revolt of the old quotes James Schulz of Brandeis University's School for Advanced Studies in Social Welfare, who says of proposed laws to end forced retirement:

"The legislation just won't have a major impact on this country. After all, the main questions involved are those of equity and rights, not economics."

SCHULZ GUESSES that less than 10 percent of Americans approaching 65 are affected by mandatory retirement, observing:

"When you get down to hard numbers we're talking about thousands of people, not millions."

The Senate Human Resources Committee estimates that 200,000 people, or two-tenths of 1 percent of the labor force, would choose to work beyond age 65.

When Stone is asked by an elderly member of our studio audience if the unemployment rate wouldn't stay the same if forcibly retired old per-

A Stock Answer

BEFORE HIS State of the Union message, President Carter had said "we'll know how good a speech it was by what the stock market does Friday."
The stock market didn't open Friday morning.

A blizzard was blamed for keeping the stock market closed until noon Friday. Analysts were uncertain whether the big snow job was from heaven or Washington, though.

THE PRESIDENT said "government cannot solve all our problems, set all our goals, or define our vision."

Then he re-endorsed the Humphrey-Hawkins planned economy act, a consumer protection agency, additional funds for make-work jobs, federal financing of congressional campaigns, "strengthening of the enforcement powers of the National Labor Relations Board" and ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

About the only problem he left to the discretion of the private sector was what time to have breakfast—provided, of course, you obey the government mandate with regard to Standard or Daylight Savings Time.

My Superfluous Understatement of the Month Award goes to Mildred Jeffries of the National Women's Political Caucus, who said: "We'll be pushy."

athletics at Texas Tech."—January issue of Lubbock Now Times, newsletter of the National Organization for Women.

Declaring its "new towns" program a disaster, the Gov'tment says it will divert funds into older inner cities instead. Since those are already disaster areas, the Gov'tment figures it can't do any harm there.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says he'll vote for an amended Panama Canal treaty even though he knows most Texans are against it. With four more years before he has to face re-election, Bentsen figures he has plenty of time to rebuild his bridges over troubled waters.

Andy Saw It And 'Loved It'

FOR THOSE THAT lived through the massive demonstrations and riots of the 1960s, next month's six hour television series covering the controversial life and death of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. is bound to open up old wounds and create some new ones.

The film's "powder keg" content and orcha-stration with public hearings of the Special House Subcommittee, re-investigating the assassination of the civil rights leader, are timed to put the racial controversy back into the mainstream of American political life at the start of a crucial congressional election year.

Whether the film "King" will have the impact on the nation as did "Roots", as NBC and its producer Abby Mann believe, is debatable and still to be determined.

Previewers say the film is full of elements that will either move, shock, or outrage most of its viewers.

MANN, WHO WORKED on the King project for more than 12 years, based his portrayal on information he gathered from a number of sources.

These sources included the King family, other black leaders, some recently opened FBI files, and conversations with William Sullivan, a former head of domestic intelligence for the FBI and an arch-enemy of the late FBI Director Herbert Hoover.

Sullivan, who was killed in a hunting accident late in 1977, was scheduled to testify on the agency's surveillance of King when House probes hold their new hearings in February.

UNAVAILABLE TO MANN for his film, however, were the top secret FBI files and recordings and other documents about King's contacts and private life.

These files were ordered sealed by a Federal Court Judge last February on the request of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

FBI agents, who spent years probing King and the movement he was building, say privately that publication of these files are necessary for the full story behind the FBI's surveillance and before a judgment can be made on its justification.

Briefed on the content of the entire file shortly before King's assassination, lawmakers like former Speaker John McCormack, D-Mass., and the late Rep. John Rooney, D-N.Y., then chairman of the House Appropriation Subcommittee which supervised the FBI, told this writer that the FBI had sufficient grounds for the surveillance and they supported it.

So alarmed at the content, these lawmakers at the time sent word to King that if he went through with plans to disrupt the nation's capital during the so-called "Poor Man's" march on Washington that the information would be made public.

As history recorded, King never made it to Washington. He was shot in Memphis, Tenn., following an appearance at a demonstration there.

Several black leaders say the film distorts the civil rights leader's image by making it appear that he was a weak man influenced and directed by "a white lawyer from the North". Producer Mann denies this saying his film is historically accurate.

Sylvia Porter:

Would You Know It
If You Saw A 'Con'?

ON A SCALE beyond anything ever known in the U.S., the "con man" will be spreading out across the nation in 1978—snaring countless numbers of you as victims in the marketplace.

The combination of '78 is made to order for these shrewd, slippery swindlers:

Peak employment with tens of millions itching to use their nesteggs to get-rich-quicker side by side with steep unemployment and other millions desperately seeking ways to earn a living wage.

If you are caught in a con man's web, the odds are he'll escape unpunished and free to go on to other schemes. The odds also are you'll rarely, if ever, recover a single penny.

Your only real protection is being sufficiently informed to be on guard.

Below, therefore, is a profile of a real-life con man, L.D., who has been operating throughout the 1970s, without ever being put away by law enforcement agencies.

(1) IN 1972, working out of New Jersey, L.D. touted a nationwide consumer discount buying service to alert members to ecological hazards, unsafe products, misleading ads, and even frauds.

In reality, L.D.'s scheme was a straight distribu-torship and he, with his accomplices, conned more than $500,000 from hundreds of victims.

In '74, a New Jersey court ordered L.D. to pay restitution of $503,000 plus fines and costs of $10,- 000.

For itself, the state collected less than $1,000.
Not one of the 312 victims got a cent.

(2) IN 1975, L.D. crossed the Hudson to a swan-ky Central Park South cooperative apartment/office in New York City. His business-opportunity ads claimed:

"Tired of working for someone else? Tired of giving all of yourself and not receiving? Call us...We Can Help!...A product every motorist needs...No competition. Guaranteed location and buy back."

The product was a tire sealant to be vended from 10 gas stations. But there was no merchandise. There were no locations.

In November 1976, a New York state court ordered the return of $38,000 to victims of the scheme plus payment of $4,000 in state courts.
L.D. has paid zero.

(3) The U.S. government was next in the web, through the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC), a federal agency which is now fighting the nation's biggest investment swindle
—the fraudulent sale of London commodity options.

L.D. REGISTERED with the CFTC as a salesman (omitting mention of his phony schemes in his application). The CFTC has now revoked his license and fined him $10,000.

At this writing, the CFTC is waiting for its $10,- 000.

(4) In late '77, L.D. advertised for an "associate or partner, $40,000 1st year guaranteed with better potential the second year."

"My marketing firm is growing...I am seeking a working partner with $10,000 to invest. Serious inquiries only."

Among his victims was a Long Island business products salesman who grabbed a distributorship selling artificial flowers made of silk to be sold from display racks. The victim's loss: $4,500.

The law affords little protection and less recourse. So:

* AVOID ANY PROMISE of quick money which involves your putting up cash first. That combination is almost always lethal.

* Don't be fooled by plush offices, handsome clothes, an expensive car. Victims' money bank-rolls the con man, and his bank accounts are usually newly opened.

* Never take references, even the most impressive, at face value. Ask the promoter what they mean, then check the references. You may get two entirely different stories.

* Be skeptical about any claims of affiliates, subsidiaries, suppliers, customer relationships.
They may not exist. Get letters, names, addresses, question every claim.

* Insist on any promise in writing. Even then, be wary. Once a con man parts you from your money, you're out.

But L.D.? He's still around, with several schemes going at once.

Gemologists To Present Precious Stone Seminar

Diamonds and other precious gems will be the topic for a one-day seminar to be held from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday in the Lubbock room of the Texas Tech University Center.

Participants will be taught how to grade and evaluate diamonds and colored gems and to know the characteristics of imitations in contrast to real stones. They also will be taught how to invest in gems to make money, including how to buy stones in foreign countries and to spot bargains.

The course instruction and information will be presented by Hugh R. Pitcock, Graduate Gemologist of Gemology Institute of America, and Alice J. Haslam, both nationally known gemologists.

This seminar will be of particular interest to investors and collectors of precious gems, insurance appraisers, bank trust officers, investment bankers, real estate

Former Mayor Visits Slaton

SLATON — Louie Welch, former Houston mayor for 10 years, returned to Slaton Monday night to be the keynote speaker at the 52nd annual Chamber of Commerce banquet.

Welch, who attended high school here and once was named mayor for a day, addressed the banquet and visited with friends, some of whom were honored during the two hour event.

Named "Man of the Year" was Bill Ball, manager of a local men's clothing store. Vera Drewry, longtime Slaton resident, was named "Woman of the Year."

Dr. Glen Payne, Slaton physician, was recognized as "Boss of the Year."

The Slaton Lions Club was honored as the "Outstanding Club" cited for its outstanding contributions to the community.

The evening was spiced with quips by emcee Bill Ball, who claimed to be "at a complete loss for words" at receiving the Man of the Year award.

In his brief address to the Slatonites, Welch, current president of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, cited "bureaucracy" as today's threat to American society.

Housing In Washington Stuns President's Son

By ANN BLACKMAN
WASHINGTON (AP) — After a week of house-hunting, President Carter's son Chip and his wife are finding that it's cheaper to live with mom and dad — particularly in Washington.

Young Carter and his wife, Caron, sold their Plains, Ga., trailer and moved into the White House earlier this month. Now, they're joining scores of Carter staffers who have learned one of the cruel financial facts about this city: there's little available for under $70,000 to $80,000, and even that won't buy much.

"They're shocked," said a friend of the young couple who is concerned that publicity about their house-hunting will drive up prices. "The money situation is tight, and they're not getting gifts from anyone. They're using strictly their own money."

The couple have been paying almost all of their own way in the White House, according to a family spokeswoman. Mary Finch Hoyt says they pay for their own food and personal expenses. As members of the first family, they are not required to pay for White House accommodations, she said.

But outside the mansion's iron gates, housing comes dear. Real estate agents say property appreciates as much as $1,000 a month in the fashionable, middle-to-upper-middle-class sections of Georgetown, Cleveland Park and some areas of Capitol Hill, where a narrow, two-bedroom townhouse with no parking or yard is considered a steal at $125,000.

"Washington, Houston and Southern California are the hottest real estate markets in the country," one real estate agent said. "You can't find anything livable in Washington for under $70,000. The shells (gutted houses waiting for renovation) are going for $50,000 to $100,000."

Sources close to the Carter family say the young couple can't afford to spend more than $70,000 — "if that" — and that they want to live in the city. For that reason, the sources say, they are looking in some of the lower-priced sections of the city which are undergoing redevelopment.

"They don't want to live in Georgetown because they know they can't afford it," one source said. "They've looked all over. They don't really care what area they live in because they've got the Secret Service to protect them. And they're willing to do a lot of renovation themselves."

"They've seen everything in the city, and what it costs, but they haven't decided what they'll do, if anything."

The family spokeswoman declined to comment on the report because, she said,

"Chip and Caron want to keep their life as private as possible."

Chip, 27, and his wife moved into the White House last January after President Carter's inauguration. Then they moved out last August amid rumors of marital trouble. At the time, friends said they had decided to leave the Washington spotlight to return to Carter's hometown of Plains.

There Chip worked in the family's peanut warehouse during the busy harvest season. They moved back to the White House earlier this month.

Jack Oakie Banker Testifies Dies In Hollywood In Thomas Trial

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Comedian Jack Oakie, who in one whirlwind year made a dozen movies and was rumored to be among Hollywood's wealthiest actors, has died at the age of 74.

The one-time vaudevillian died Monday only 5½ hours after his wife of 30 years, actress Victoria Horne, rushed him to Northridge Hospital when he complained of stomach pains.

Hospital spokeswoman Kay Murphy said Oakie had an aneurysm, or swelling of a major artery in the abdomen, which may have burst. An autopsy was to be performed today.

Oakie's last film, "Love Come Back" with Doris Day and Rock Hudson, was made 15 years ago. He last appeared on television three years ago on the Johnny Carson special "Sun City Follies."

But he refused to appear on TV talk shows because they paid only minimum union scale, and he had once earned 10 times that amount — $7,500 a week. "If you do a job, you oughta get paid," he said.

He never disputed his reputation as one of Hollywood's wealthiest actors. "One of my pals said I bought General Electric when it was General Candle," Oakie once said. "He could be right."

Oakie's name sprang from his boyhood in Muskogee, Okla., where he was christened Louis Offield. When his family moved to New York he was groomed for a career on Wall Street.

But his irrepressible humor steered him toward show business. His first job was as a chorus boy in George M. Cohan's "Little Nelly Kelly." That was when he adopted his breezier stage name.

From the chorus, Oakie advanced to comic and dancer on the vaudeville stage before getting his first movie role with Paramount. He stayed with the studio for nine years, making his favorite film, "Elmer the Great." He may have been best known for his portrayal of Mussolini in Charlie Chaplin's "The Great Dictator."

Among Oakie's other memorable films were "Million Dollar Legs," "If I Had a Million," "Call of the Wild," "The Texas Rangers," "Thieves Highway" and "Around the World in 80 Days."

Oakie married actress Venita Vardon in 1936, but she divorced him nine years later after accusing him of being quarrelsome, jealous and hot-tempered. He had no children from either of his marriages.

A funeral service is planned for noon Wednesday at Forest Lawn cemetery in Glendale.

Rites Scheduled For Victim Of Reese Crash

Memorial services for 2nd Lt. Glenn A. Mathis, 23, who was killed Monday morning in a plane crash near Reese Air Force Base, are tentatively set for Thursday at the base chapel.

Funeral services also are tentatively set for Friday in Mathis' home town, Sykesville, Md., at the Haight Funeral Home.

The Reese flight student, who lived at 502 Slide Rd., was killed shortly before 9 a.m. Monday when his T-38 Talon training jet crashed in a plowed field two miles north of the base's west runway.

The plane crashed on its final landing approach. The mishap is being investigated by the Air Force.

Public information officer Bill Tynan said Mathis' body had been sent to Sheppard AFB in Wichita Falls where a routine autopsy will be conducted. From Sheppard, the body will be sent to Sykesville.

The eight-member board investigating the mishap is headed by Col. Herman K. McDonald of Sheppard AFB.

Mathis is survived by his wife, Jeanne; a one-month-old daughter, Krista; and his parents, Lon and Ruby Mathis, who both live in Maryland.

A former president of the Seminole State Bank today testified he had queried the executive director of the Gaines County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in 1973 and was told two joint farm ventures leasing land from businessman John Thomas were in compliance with federal regulations.

Sam Spikes, now head of Brownfield State Bank, confirmed he had talked with James Hodge.

Spikes indicated to Thomas defense lawyer Michael E. Tigar that he had been told that, in so far as Hodge knew, the ventures were in compliance.

Spikes also, at Tigar's question, said it was not unusual for banks to loan money to individuals who planned to invest capital in farm land without actually working the land themselves.

The testimony came in the Thomas cotton price support trial, now in its third week in U.S. District Court here.

Thomas, 44, a former Brownfield resident who recently moved his business enterprises to Houston, is charged with converting Commodity Credit Corporation funds to his own use and with supplying false information to the government agency.

The government charges Thomas converted property to his own use in 1972 and 1973 by causing cotton price support payments of around $2.5 million to be allotted to individuals who allegedly had no substantive interest in Gaines County farmland they leased from Jon-T Farms, Inc., a Thomas company.

Spikes Monday had testified that the Seminole bank made no loans to members of two joint ventures in 1973 on the basis of government subsidy assignments.

Testimony has indicated members of the two ventures — who leased land from Jon-T Farms that year — did assign subsidy checks Seminole State Bank.

With Spikes on the witness stand, Asst. U.S. Atty. Bob Slough Monday introduced forms showing that about 23 members of lease ventures had assigned government checks to the bank.

Spikes indicated the assignments were dated July 3 or July 5, 1973. He said he had talked to A. Earl Jones, a representative of the joint ventures, about their borrowing money, but said no loans were made on the basis of the assignments.

Evidence indicates subsidy checks of joint ventures were received about July 5.

An attorney who occasionally represented the bank during the time in question had earlier testified that, as he understood it, there had been no need of loans to the joint ventures because the government checks had arrived while loan negotiations were in progress.

Spikes did indicate the bank had given Thomas blank notes and had made loans to some individuals prior to the assignments.

Under terms of the Upland Cotton Program, in effect during the time in question, there was a $55,000 ceiling on government price supports to individual farmers.

Testimony has indicated that in 1972 members of joint ventures borrowed sums of about $50,000 to lease land from Jon-T Farms and to supply capital to grow a cotton crop.

The testimony has indicated members assigned their expected subsidy checks — also in the $50,000 range — as collateral for the loans.

The 1972 transactions were conducted at another area bank, according to testimony.

The question of Thomas company ownership of stock in Seminole State had surfaced earlier during the trial. Spikes said Monday that Jon-T Chemicals, Inc., a Thomas company, had opened an account at the bank in December 1973.

He said the company did not acquire bank stock until 1974.

Wilmington 10 Backers Vow Fight

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Stunned and disappointed, supporters of the Wilmington 10 have vowed to keep fighting for the group's freedom after Gov. James Hunt chose to reduce sentences rather than pardon the nine men still imprisoned.

Hunt told a statewide television audience Monday night he believed the white woman and nine black men dubbed the Wilmington 10 received a fair trial in 1972. The men were convicted of firebombing Mike's Grocery, a white-owned store in a black neighborhood of Wilmington, N.C., during racial violence in that city in 1971. The woman was convicted on a lesser charge of being an accessory.

But Hunt added that minimum sentences of 20 to 25 years given the men "are too long." The woman was paroled earlier.

Hunt had billed the announcement as his final action in the case, which brought international criticism from civil liberties organizations. The Soviet government called the case an example of human rights violations in the United States.

"I'm really shocked that he would make all the to-do about it and then do nothing," said defense attorney James Ferguson II.

Ferguson said Monday night that earlier in the day, he had filed a writ of habeas corpus in federal court here, seeking a new trial.

"We did that out of an abundance of precaution, thinking that we'd have to withdraw it tomorrow," said Ferguson. "All this anticipation was for nothing."

Hunt's commutation means eight of the nine men will be eligible for parole this year, instead of in 1980. The ninth, the Rev. Ben Chavis, will be eligible Jan. 1, 1980, two years early.

The men were convicted of malicious burning with an incendiary device and of conspiring to shoot at police officers and firefighters who answered the alarm. They received sentences ranging from 20 to 29 years for the burning and concurrent sentences of three to five years for the conspiracy.

The 10th defendant, Anne Sheppard Turner, was convicted of being an accessory and sentenced to seven to 10 years. She is free on parole, and Hunt said he would not alter her sentence.

Hunt said he considered the conspiracy charges more serious.

"I will not reduce their sentences for conspiring to shoot at policemen and firemen," Hunt said. "I believe, however, that a reduction in the sentences imposed for firebombing an unoccupied building is in order."

Hunt reduced the firebombing sentence given Chavis — 25 to 29 years — to a minimum of 17 years in prison. The sentence for defendant Joe Wright was reduced from 20 years to 13. Wright thus may be paroled June 1.

Hunt reduced from 20 to 14 years the sentences of Jerry Jacobs, James McKay, Reginald Epps, Willie Earl Vereen and Wayne Moore. Jacobs, McKay and Vereen will become eligible for parole in July, Epps and Moore in September.

For Marvin Patrick and Connie Tindall, sentences were cut from 22 years to 15. They may be paroled in October.

Society Plans Mideast Panel

"Sadat's Visit to Israel: Issues, Viewpoints and Directions" will be the topic of an international panel discussion tonight sponsored by Delta Phi Epsilon, the International Society of Business and Foreign Affairs.

The panel discussion will be from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in the Senate Chambers of the Texas Tech University Center.

The students will discuss a solution to the Palestinian people's search for a homeland and Israel's requirement for security.

The panel will include Mohammed Omer, a Palestinian who is president of the Arab Students Association and several members of Delta Phi Epsilon: John Hollenkamp, Maryland Dowell, John Paul Jones, Mike Bantz, David Plummer and Denise Polson.

The discussion is open to the public and is free of charge.

Afraid You're Going Deaf?

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

True, all hearing problems are not alike . . . and some cannot be helped, but many can. So, send for this free model now, and wear it in the privacy of your home. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 5769, Beltone Electronics Corp., Victoria, Chicago, 60646.

Grimes Stars In 'Molly'

By MARY CAMPBELL
NEW YORK (AP) — Tammy Grimes is starring in "Molly" by Simon Gray, and it isn't a high point in the career of either one of them.

Shapp Eyes Career As Playwright

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Milton J. Shapp — electrical engineer, cable television millionaire, candidate for president and now governor of Pennsylvania — is ready for a new career as a Broadway playwright.

For years, Shapp has risen before dawn and sat down to his typewriter to create the world of the Cotter-Webster Co., its president Fred Jordan and his wife Helen, daughter of the company's founder.

night at the off-off-Broadway Hudson Guild Theater. It was inspired by a real story, which ended in a murder trial. A play about the trial is now running in London.

Molly, age about 40, and her husband, age about 70, have just moved to an English village from Canada and have hired a housekeeper. Having nothing to do, she hires a local lad, age about 20, to do odd jobs and seduces him. He later stabs her husband with gardening shears.

The first act, in which the situation is set up for the second act's murder, is extremely tedious. The boy's recital of his banal life's story is just one boring part of it.

Miss Grimes seems to want to pep things up so she speaks in the first two scenes in stylized, brittle sophistication appropriate for a Noel Coward play. Everybody else is aiming for realism, as the stilted lines seem to want.

Miss Grimes does some parts of the character well and on some she misses. She has a kind of mad scene which she does extremely well. In shock after the murder, having been given a sedative and drinking on top of it, she spouts a combination of nonsense and impolite truth.

afraid people will think she's an aging vamp — but the actress doesn't play in that direction at all. Probably her biggest lack is not making Molly cheap enough in character.

The boy acts both mentally defective and unbalanced. Others remark that he's sly and sullen and has adenoids. But Miss Grimes plays a Molly too elegant in dress and manner and too refined in personality to seduce such a lout.

The other actors do better. Margaret Hilton is possibly best as the prim housekeeper who strongly disapproves of Molly but likes her, is kind to and likes the husband, more than half fears the boy.

Michael Higgins is fine as the husband, miserable in his deafness, lonely being old and away from friends.

And Josh Clark was uncomfortably convincing as the unappealing young man "wanting" in the head. Stephen Hollis directed. He also directed "Molly" in Watford, England, and at its American premiere at the Spoleto Festival U.S.A. in Charleston, S.C., last summer.

Scottish Researchers Exploring Monetary Value Placed On Life

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — Society may not like to think about it in those terms but there are times when it places a monetary value on human life.

Two Scottish researchers, Dr. W.I. Card and Dr. G.H. Mooney, arrived at this conclusion after studying the workings of the National Health Service which has limited resources and thus must make decisions on how much it can afford to spend in specific cases.

This, said the authors, "implicitly places a monetary value on human life." The examples they cite show a wide variation in what life is worth in money terms — as little as 50 pounds ($95) in a screening of pregnant women to prevent stillbirth in 1968 to $47 million in a test for cancer of the large bowel endorsed by the American Cancer Society.

In the 1968 example it was estimated that if maternal hormone concentrations were screened, the cost per stillbirth averted would be a maximum of 50 pounds.

In 1971, the British government decided not to proceed with the child-proofing of drug containers. The article says that when all the factors are considered this particular decision valued a child's life at under 1,000 pounds ($1900).

In 1969, the fitting of covered cabs to farm tractors to reduce the mortality risk for drivers was made compulsory. The national cost was estimated at 4 million pounds ($7.6 million) for a saving of about 40 lives or 100,000 pounds ($190,000) per life.

The authors say that there should be yardsticks for the value of diagnostic tests in dollar terms but it is difficult to quantify pain and suffering. In this connection they mentioned a report on a sequence of six tests approved by the American Cancer Society to exclude cancer of the large bowel.

This report, they said, calculated that the cost per case detected by the sixth test was $47 million.

"The suggestion of putting a monetary value on human life may at first sight seem repulsive," the article said. "Life, it is often said, is priceless but this belief springs from a misunderstanding and depends on who is making the judgment. If someone we loved was kidnapped and if we had won 100,000 pounds ($190,000) on the (football) pools we should be prepared to hand over all this money to save a life.

"But the health service with its limited resources of some 5.4 billion pounds ($9,990 billion) and its responsibility for the health care of 55 million people cannot value a life at this figure."

Fossil Remains Found In River

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — More than three tons of fossil remains have been removed from the bed of the Cooper River by paleontologists working the area ahead of a projected channel dredging.

The University of South Carolina Institute of Archeology and Anthropology put its divers to work after a chemical company agreed to sponsor the work. The company's workers discovered fossil deposits in the river earlier this year and notified the university of the find.

The river is to be dredged to a depth of 35 feet to permit ocean-going tankers to discharge at a pier that is already under construction.

Mastodon bones and those of prehistoric elephants, elk, tapir, horses and sharks have been found.

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
Today is Tuesday, Jan. 24, the 24th day of 1978 with 341 to follow.
The moon is full.
The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn.
The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.
Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.
American sculptor Paul Quayland Bartlett was born Jan. 24, 1865. This is actor Ernest Borgnine's 60th birthday.
On this day in history:
In 1908, the first Boy Scout troop was organized in England by Sir Robert Baden-Powell, a general in the British Army.
In 1922, Christian Nelson of Onawa, Iowa, received a patent for his "Eskimo Pie," a brick of ice cream encased in a coating of chocolate.

In 1965, the world mourned the death of famous English statesman Sir Winston Churchill, known as the "first citizen of the Free World" and leader of Britain during the darkest days of World War II.

In 1975, a bomb believed to have been set by Puerto Rican nationalists ripped through a 19th-century annex to New York City's historic Fraunces Tavern. Four persons were killed and 44 injured.

A thought for the day:
Sir Winston Churchill said, "Nothing in life is so exhilarating as to be shot at without result."

Moore Eyes New Series

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When last seen, Mary Richards, news producer at WJM-TV in Minneapolis, had just been fired after seven seasons. She turned out the lights in the newsroom and...

"I cried," laughed Mary Tyler Moore, who won four Emmys as Miss Richards in the CBS comedy bearing MTM's name. "I think I cried for a good part of the next two weeks."

Now chipper, tanned and refreshed after a season off from the woes of weekly work, Miss M. is about to go at it again. But not in a sitcom. A weekly CBS comedy-variety series is afoot now for next season.

Why that instead of picking up where the old show left off?

"For the same reason we decided to end the show," she said, sipping a soft drink in the study of the Spanish-style Bel Air villa she shares with Grant Tinker, her partner in TV and marriage.

"Playing Mary Richards was getting too easy. It wasn't creatively stimulating. It was comfortable and I could have very easily gone on the rest of my life playing that character."

"But that's not what an actress is about. You need challenges, fears, uncertainty, a certain amount of crying at night and wondering whether it's going to make it."

As a kind of warm-up, Miss Moore last November taped a music-comedy special that CBS will air Feb. 22. It bears the imposing title of "How to Survive the '70s and Maybe Even Bump Into Happiness."

In February, she starts work on a CBS movie, "First You Cry," based on NBC reporter Betty Rollin's book on how her life changed after a mastectomy. And in June, work on the new variety series starts.

The format of that effort, she said with a mock wince, "has, ah, yet to be conceived... the hard part is finding the creative people to come up with a concept."

"We don't want to do just another variety series. We'd like it to have some kind of twist that would make it a little more interesting than just comedy sketch, song, dance, comedy sketch."

The star alumna of a series acclaimed for its high level of sophisticated humor was asked, what with shows like "Happy Days" at large, if she feels if the level of sitcoms is falling nowadays.

"Yes, I do indeed," she said without hesitation. "And that's another very good reason for not doing a situation comedy. Because I can't do what they seem to be buying today."

Why the shift from sophisticated to broad tomfooleries?

"Grant has an interesting theory about the kind of comedy people are watching — and the apparent drop-off in ratings on the whole," she said. "And that is that this generation is coming to think of TV the way our generation thought of radio."

"At first, everyone listened, really pulled up the chairs and sat there and listened. And that was true of television. But now, they're off doing other things."

"And if they've got the set on, they're not really paying attention. And they don't want to pay attention. So the comedy level" — to attract attention — "has to be quite superficial."

"It has to be 'straight line, punch line,' with not a great deal of time digging into the characters as we did on the old show."

No way, she said firmly, will you ever find her capering in the new, broad style of situation comedy.

Popcorn Crop Cut Due To Drop In Price

WASHINGTON (AP) — Popcorn growers cut back on production sharply last year, partly because of a substantial decline in prices, according to the Agriculture Department.

The 1977 popcorn harvest was 409 million pounds, down 33 percent from the 1976 record of 608 million pounds, the department's Crop Reporting Board said this week in an annual report.

Producers harvested 152,300 acres against 207,800 in 1976, officials said. The average yield was 2,686 pounds an acre, compared with 2,925 pounds the year before.

The report said that the average price farmers received for popcorn last year was $8.67 per 100 pounds, down from $8.84 in 1976 and $9.25 in 1975. Total value of last year's crop was placed at about $35.5 million, compared with nearly $53.8 million in 1976 and $50.2 million in 1975.

Last year's production of popcorn and its estimated value to farmers included: Illinois 23.57 million pounds and $2.03 million; Indiana 108.36 million pounds and $11.05 million; Iowa 29.25 million pounds and $2.43 million; Kansas 25.76 million pounds and $2.06 million; Kentucky 28.54 million pounds and $2.28 million; Michigan 7.03 million pounds and $598,000; Missouri 7.99 million pounds and $687,000; Nebraska 129.15 million pounds and $10.33 million; and Ohio 42.55 million pounds and $3.45 million.

Average prices paid popcorn farmers varied substantially by state. Indiana growers, for example, averaged $10.20 per 100 pounds for their popcorn, compared with $8.67 for the national average.

Agency Advises Skid Prevention

WASHINGTON (AP) — To prevent skidding on icy or snow-covered roads, the Tire Retread Information Bureau (TRIB) advises motorists to avoid sudden stops and sharp turns.

Should a skid occur, pump brakes rapidly but lightly until the vehicle slows down, TRIB says.

If control is not regained, steer in the direction of the skid without using the brake.

TRIB also cautions motorists that extra driving care is needed when the temperature rises because ice gets more slippery.

U.S. Urges Mideast Foes To End Clash

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance are urging Israel and Egypt to end their sharp exchanges and resume the search for peace through "quiet diplomacy."

A White House statement issued Monday night said Carter and Vance "expressed hope that the public exchanges of recent days are now behind us and that every effort will be made to recapture the spirit" which prevailed a month ago. Vance reported to Carter at the White House on his trip last week to the Middle East and on his efforts to get Egypt and Israel to agree on a declaration of principles that would govern the negotiation of a comprehensive peace settlement.

The effort was set back when Egyptian President Anwar Sadat broke off the negotiations last Wednesday and called the Egyptian delegation home from Jerusalem.

The White House statement said Vance and Carter are hopeful Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin now will "turn full attention through quiet diplomacy to the substance of the negotiations."

The statement reflected the administration belief that the Middle East peace process is prone to extreme swings and that public opinion should not be "excessively influenced by them."

Earlier Monday, Vance told reporters on Capitol Hill that Israel and Egypt are "in one of those down periods one finds in any negotiation."

"I believe the parties will pass through this period," he said.

According to the statement, Vance told Carter he believes that, while the work of the Israeli-Egyptian political committee is suspended, the negotiating process can continue, presumably in the military committee.

In that committee, meeting in Cairo, the two sides have been discussing an Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai. But the Israeli cabinet decided Sunday to postpone sending its delegation back to the military committee talks in Cairo.

Begin told the Israeli parliament Monday the delegation would return to the Cairo talks if the Egyptian press stops what he called its antisemitic campaign in "the next few days."

Carter, who returned to Washington Monday night from a weekend vacation in Georgia, stressed that the United States is prepared to continue the exchanges with Begin and Sadat that Vance began last week. Assistant Secretary of State Alfred Atherton has remained in the Middle East for this purpose.

Administration officials confirmed that they are considering the sale of F-5E fighter planes to Egypt as a means of demonstrating U.S. support for Sadat's peace initiative.

Sadat has made repeated appeals for western military supplies to compensate for the loss of Soviet military support. He asked Vance last week for U.S. approval of his requests for American arms to match U.S. weapons sales to Israel.

The White House statement contained no reference to Sadat's request.

The F-5E has been sold to many friendly Third World countries by the United States in recent years, but is much less sophisticated than fighter planes in Israel's inventory.

There were reports that Carter's advisers will recommend the sale of between 50 and 60 F-5Es to Egypt, but this could not be confirmed. Until now, Egypt has been authorized to purchase only non-lethal weapons, such as the C-130 cargo plane.

But at least six members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will ask the Carter administration this week to postpone, for a second time, the sale of 60 modern fighter planes to Saudi Arabia.

An aide to Sen. Frank Church, D-Ida., said Monday night that the request is based on the fear that the Saudis could use the planes to attack Israel, and that a sale at this time could aggravate further the now-suspended Middle East peace talks between Egypt and Israel.

Cleve Corlett, Church's press secretary, said a draft of a letter that Church is preparing already has the backing of five other members of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Under a new law that gives Congress the right to veto a proposed arms sale, the administration must formally notify Congress of the intended sale.

Corlett said the Saudis want 60 F-15s, one of the most modern aircraft in the world. The United States has agreed to sell a number of F-15s to Israel.

Storm To Dump Snow On Plains

(From Page One) travelers would die in weather-related accidents such as those that claimed the lives of two Hub City residents last weekend.

Only a week ago, ice shut down schools as far south as Houston, cost at least seven persons their lives — in the Dallas area alone, broke power lines and set up mass traffic pile-ups.

Before noon today in Lubbock, the temperature had climbed to slightly above freezing, but fog continued to close in, and the National Weather Service reported that fog in the Panhandle and North Central Texas had cut visibility to about 1/4 of a mile.

The Department of Public Safety said sleet fell late Monday and early today in Borger, and forecasts indicated that rain should turn to sleet and later to snow as the winter front moves across the state today.

Northeasterly afternoon winds are expected to continue at 10-15 miles per hour tonight.

Temperatures in the northern and western mountains of New Mexico may drop to 5 degrees below zero in some places, while lower elevations will claim 20-degree readings.

Lubbock recorded a Monday low temperature of 28 degrees, one-half the maximum reading for the day. This morning's low was 31 degrees.

But despite repeated threats of snowfall and possible rain in the area in recent days, the year's precipitation total for the city remains at only .14 of an inch. And even if the area nets the possible one inch of snow tonight, forecasters say that amount would only add .1 of an inch of moisture to the totals.

Oil Industry Says Assurance Needed

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The domestic oil industry is "reluctant to expand without some signal from government leaders that they are serious about reducing imports and increasing domestic production," an industry official says.

Jack Allen, of Perryton, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, said that there's been no indication from the Carter administration so far that it is determined to cut imports and increase U.S. production.

Allen spoke Monday at the Oklahoma Independent Petroleum Association's annual meeting here.

Allen said deregulation and decontrol of petroleum prices is needed.

New Mexico state police reported hazardous, snow-packed roads in the Cloudcroft and Ruidoso areas, where heavy snow continued to fall this morning. Cloudcroft recorded 4 inches of snow overnight.

Fog and light snow cut visibility to zero on trans-mountain roads in El Paso this morning.

Travelers advisories were posted this morning for parts of Texas, including the mountains of El Paso and Otero County in New Mexico. Travelers advisories were prepared for issuance on the South Plains today.

Many South Plains low temperatures — recorded during the 24-hour period ending at 8:45 a.m. today — hit area towns Monday morning. Temperatures listed for selected South Plains cities ranged from 17 degrees at Muleshoe Refuge and Spur to 29 at Tahoka.

of plutonium 238, a far less dangerous form of radioactive material.

In Ottawa, Ivan Head, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's special adviser on foreign affairs, said he had known for some time that the satellite was losing its orbit, but that it had been unclear until today precisely where or when it would land.

Brzezinski's announcement climaxed about two weeks of intensive consultations between U.S. and Soviet officials as it became apparent that the Russian satellite was going to drop out of orbit. Government officials said experts as recently as Monday thought it would come down near Brazil.

Brzezinski said the disintegration of the Soviet satellite was completed over Great Slave Lake in Canada's Northwest Territories, a sparsely populated area 500 miles north of Edmonton, Alberta.

Brzezinski said U.S. planes were dispatched to the area to sample the atmosphere and look for any possible contamination.

He said that based on scientific experience, it was "very highly probable it would burn up."

However, the national security aide said several hours would be required before the atmosphere there could be sampled.

He said that had the satellite reached a densely populated area there would have been "some concerns over hazards to health."

The satellite, which had been in orbit since Sept. 18, 1977, contained about 100 pounds of the enriched uranium, Brzezinski said.

He said that in late December, the United States, which routinely tracks Soviet satellites, found some indications that the Cosmos was encountering difficulties and that it "would re-enter the atmosphere with some difficulty."

On Jan. 12 Brzezinski conveyed a message to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin expressing Carter's concern that "if the debris fell near a populated area there could be a serious hazard to the public."

A series of communications between Brzezinski and Dobrynin ensued.

On Jan. 14 the Soviets sent Brzezinski an answer that was "somewhat reassuring but not fully satisfactory," which prompted another Brzezinski message on Jan. 17.

Two days later, the Soviet ambassador, according to Brzezinski, "conveyed to me more complete answers which provided

City To Consider Shift Of Water, Sewer Fees

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

City Mgr. Larry Cunningham probably will recommend to the city council Thursday that water and sewer service revenues be used to finance bond project engineering plans, The Avalanche-Journal has learned.

Cunningham confirmed he probably will suggest the action to "preclude further excessive delays" in bond projects, $26.4 million of which has been impeded by litigation.

The city manager also acknowledged that issuing certificates of obligation (COs) for the preliminary project work would be recommended only as a last resort.

Council members two weeks ago asked the city staff to investigate the feasibility of using COs for water, sanitary sewer and fire service improvements. The order came after Cunningham outlined current and potential problems caused by court delay of a capital improvements bond sale.

Lubbockite James Marshall's lawsuit, pending before the 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo, means that $26.4 million in bonds approved by voters last May cannot be sold. Marshall contends the ordinance authorizing the vote was too vague and therefore the bonds and election should be declared null.

The result of the lawsuit, Cunningham said, is that already serious problems of inadequate water supplies, water pressure in Southwest Lubbock and fire service will be aggravated.

And water restrictions during peak consumer use next year may become a reality, he predicted.

If the council accepts his recommendation Thursday, Cunningham said, some preparative engineering plans can be designed for water and sanitary sewer projects, so that construction can begin immediately after the bonds are free from court action.

He indicated he is presupposing that Marshall will carry his claims to the state Supreme Court and that such litigation could take another year to resolve.

As he probably will suggest it, Cunningham's proposal is to use accumulated revenues produced by recent water rate and sewer service charge hikes to pay engineering contracts monthly.

The city council authorized the rate increases last October, planning to use the extra money left from operating expenses to redeem general obligation bonds that were to finance water and sewer projects.

Instead of using the money to pay the bonds, Cunningham said, he likely will advise it be spent immediately on engineering schemes and minor but necessary construction such as the addition of sewer effluent pumps.

The proposition is legally sound, he added.

By September, additional revenues from the rate hikes will total close to $1 million, Cunningham said, explaining that much money probably would be spent.

The sewer service charge was increased from $1.50 monthly to $1.75. Council members also plan to up it an additional 25 cents per month this year.

Water rates were increased on a graduated scale, the first of a four-step boost that will have consumers in 1980 paying about 50 percent more for the same amount of water they use this year.

Cunningham said he does not anticipate sewer service charge or water rate hikes in advance of their scheduled dates.

If the council goes along with his recommendation, Cunningham said, only sewer and water project plans would be drawn.

He is not unaware of street and fire protection needs, he said. But "we're trying to look at things keeping us from excessive delays," he said.

Without sanitary sewer plant improvements, he explained, the city system will not meet state health standards. "There's no problem yet, but sewer problems with the system need to be taken care of," he said.

Water pressure problems also must be addressed, he said. Without adequate water pressure, he added, firefighting service is hampered.

None of the revenue money would be used in anticipation of increasing Lubbock's water supply, Cunningham said. Bond money is to be used for drilling 17 additional wells in the Bailey County sandhills, he said, and those need little advance planning.

When the bond restrictions are eased, he added, immediate sandhill development will be a "very high priority."

His proposal for using water and sewer revenues is not a "cure-all," Cunningham warned. "We've still got lots of problems after this," he added.

But "hopefully most of the engineering will be done so we can go in" and begin project construction after the bonds are legally salable, he said.

COs probably will be listed as a last resort for bond projects because they are not easily marketable, they carry a high interest rate, and preliminary plans would have to be completed before the certificates could be issued.

County May Cut List Of Voters

istration certificate listing their current address.

The Secretary of State's spokesman said that procedure will "take some time" at the polls, possibly holding up voting lines.

"But at least it will enable them to vote in spring elections. And by filing for a new voter registration card, these people can be transferred from the inactive roll to the active roll and assigned an appropriate precinct based on their current address."

After June, he said, the inactive roll will be discarded and the active roll will be considered the only official voter registration list for the county.

The spokesman said state officials hope local spring elections will be "the bait to get people on the inactive roll out to vote so they can be put on the active roll. Otherwise, they will not be registered to vote after June."

After June, persons who do not hold a yellow voter card must apply for one with the county tax office to be eligible to vote in November general elections, he said.

Hardin said previously registered voters who have not received a yellow certificate in the past month can get on the active roll immediately and avoid any hassles at the polls this spring "by coming down to the county tax office as soon as possible."

"If the yellow card we sent you has been returned, we can pull it out of our files, put your correct address on it and issue it to you," Hardin said.

"And of course people who aren't registered, but want to be, need to just come in and fill out an application for a voter registration card," he said.

The new cards are dated effective March 1 and scheduled to expire Feb. 29, 1980.

Hardin said persons must be registered to vote at least 30 days prior to an election to be eligible to cast a ballot.

How that state-imposed rule jibes with recent federal standards, however, is unclear. State officials admit they legally may not be able to deny ballots to unregistered voters, and Hardin said there are some people who "can go to the polls without a voter registration card and hornsaw the election judge into letting them vote."

Even so, Hardin said, without proper registration such persons will be holding up voting lines "and wasting their own time as well as the election judge's."

Navy Chief Backs Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's top naval officer said today that while he supports the proposed Panama Canal treaty, he personally would prefer one that allowed U.S. military forces to be based in Panama after the year 2000.

Adm. James Holloway III, chief of naval operations, said he felt such an arrangement "desirable." But recognizing that Panama would never agree to it, he concluded "there was a greater net gain to be achieved by having the treaties as they are today than no treaties at all."

Holloway's view was expressed in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee, opening two days of hearings on the pact with the focus on defense issues.

Committee sources said the admiral's statement reportedly was delayed in preparation while Pentagon officials argued over the inclusion of his views on military bases in Panama.

Holloway, under questioning by Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., confirmed there had been an "administrative delay."

Armed Man Hits Laundry In City

A lone bandit held up Mackenzie Village Cleaners at 1730 Parkway Drive about 12:30 p.m. today and escaped with about $50, according to an employee.

Police were looking for a tall, slender black male wearing blue jeans and a blue and white striped shirt.

He reportedly ran inside a nearby apartment complex after the robbery.

Employee Ruby Cabaniss said the man walked in and asked for some clothes. "Then he pulled this gun and called for the girls to come up front. One of the girls called Mr. (Millard) Williams, our boss. He came up and the man told him to get the money."

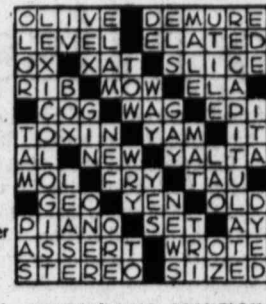

She said she got a good look at the man's face before he pulled a stocking over it after he came in the building.

Welfare Given New Name, Standards

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock County Welfare Department has a new name — and new, more lenient standards for eligibility and assistance.

County commissioners Monday changed the name of the department to the Lubbock County General Assistance Agency.

The new title eliminates the bad connotations of "welfare" and better reflects the department's role in providing clients with only temporary help and referrals to other social service agencies, welfare advisory board chairman Dale Jones said.

Commissioners also approved a package of policy changes recommended by Jones' board and department director Willie Washington.

Until now, applicants had to be residents of the state for one year and of Lubbock County for at least six months to qualify for assistance. Also, the department could help only those who have temporarily lost their income — through illness or a job layoff, for example — and have depleted their savings.

On Monday, commissioners changed the residency requirement to just six months in the state and 30 days in the county.

Jones called the new standard "more realistic. A lot of times the people most in need of short-term assistance are people who come here looking for work" but have yet to receive their first paycheck.

The new requirement will allow the agency to help such applicants get by until their paycheck arrives, he said. At the same time, however, "people who are just passing through town" still will be denied assistance under the provision, Jones said.

The previous residency requirement may have been too stringent to meet recent standards set by the U.S. Supreme Court, he added.

Commissioners also changed the department's "unwritten policy" that assistance be available only to those families who have suffered a loss of income. Instead, Mrs. Washington and her staff will be permitted to make "judgment decisions" in cases of "unusual circumstances that may have occurred in a household."

Mrs. Washington said the change will allow her agency to assist families who face "extraordinary one-time expenses during a particular month" — such as medical bills or funerals — but otherwise would not qualify for help.

Families deemed eligible for temporary assistance from the department do not receive cash. Instead, the agency makes arrangements with grocers and individual landlords to pay certain bills based on family size.

Until Monday, the schedule of general assistance allowances for shelter has been "very rigid," Mrs. Washington said. For those who qualify, a family of one or two members was eligible for just $50 a month; three or four members, $60; and five or more members, $65.

Under that schedule, some landlords refused to accept the county's offered payment, forcing the family to find supplemental assistance from another agency or another apartment or home whose landlord will accept such a small amount, Mrs. Washington said.

Jones called the schedule "unrealistic because people just can't find a place to live on that amount of money."

County commissioners Monday increased the housing allowances substantially. Now the county will be able to offer $100 for eligible families of one or two members; $115 for families of three or four; and $125 for families of five or more.

"Those are figures landlords can live with," Mrs. Washington said. "And we won't have to go begging to other agencies to help provide for poor families who qualify for general assistance."

Commissioners also approved raising the amount the county can pay toward utilities for eligible families from $50 to $75 for summer months, and $65 to $90 for winter months.

Mrs. Washington said she is certain that the policy changes approved Monday will allow more persons to qualify for more assistance. That may necessitate increasing the department's general assistance budget, which now stands at $30,000 for 1978, she said.

Legislation Aimed At Bureaucrats

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bureaucrats are "wringing their hands and shedding crocodile tears," claims a Texas congressman who has introduced legislation aimed at curbing bureaucratic "bungling" of federal programs.

Rep. Jim Mattox' "Legislative Oversight Act of 1978" would place a five-year limit on all new spending programs and tax expenditures.

"This would make an agency prove that it's done what it said it would do," said Mattox, a House Budget Committee member, during a Monday interview.

"This would make agencies come in and say we need so much money to, say, create 450,000 jobs. Good. That's fine."

"But next year, Congress would sit 'em down and ask 'em how many jobs they created. Only 200,000? Well, what happened?"

If passed, the bill would require the president to relate in his annual budget submissions, the specific statements of purpose for each program.

"The trouble with most federal programs is that once the bureaucracy gets a hold of them, the original intent of Congress is simply dismissed as meaningless," continued Mattox.

"Congress needs some sort of mechanism for checking up on agencies. If they have field evaluations, we sure don't see 'em up here."

After reading President Carter's 1979 budget proposal, Mattox said,

"It's obvious that in the past year neither the administration nor Congress has made much progress in understanding just what is going on with federal expenditures through the bureaucracy."

Mattox said he has personally undertaken a study of 110 social service programs accounting for $22 billion in federal expenditures.

"My study of programs such as new job training and community services will provide the kind of analysis the Office of Management and Budget was unable to provide us," he said.

"My own study has been underway for six months and will be finished by March and ready for congressional review in time for consideration of the first budget resolution."

The first-year representative from Dallas said he feels Congress' newer and "more progressive" members are interested in such legislation.

"Older members don't want to get involved," said Mattox. "This is a dirty business. It's not very popular. It's one thing to have the abortion people knocking on your door and another to have HEW down your throat."

"I know a lot of high-paid bureaucrats are wringing their hands and shedding crocodile tears over this bill," he said. "And the reason they are is because they know just how far they've gone in disregarding congressional intent. They also realize that this bill has some real teeth and goes far beyond Sunset legislation introduced in the past."

Evidence Due Jury In Yarbrough Trial

By ROBERT HEARD

AUSTIN (AP) — A six-man, six-woman jury begins hearing evidence today in the perjury trial of former Texas Supreme

Yarbrough's lawyer, Waggoner Carr, told the jury Monday that Yarbrough lied to a grand jury investigating a forgery charge.

But the lie did not influence the grand jury's action, said Carr, and Yarbrough therefore is not guilty of the aggravated perjury charge.

The prosecution already knew Yarbrough had met last May 16 with a former business associate before calling Yarbrough before the Travis County Grand Jury, Carr said.

The alleged forgery involved an Alabama car registration certificate. Yarbrough supposedly instructed the former associate, Bill Rothkopf, on how to forge the certificate.

Harris County law enforcement officers had equipped Rothkopf with a hidden tape recorder for the May 16 meeting.

"We admit that Judge Yarbrough made the statement that he did not have that meeting with Rothkopf when in actual fact such a meeting was held on that date," Carr said.

"We take the position it was an illegal entrapment and a sandbag job by the government," Carr said. The grand jury was going to indict Yarbrough for forgery whether Yarbrough admitted meeting with Rothkopf or not, he said.

Since that was a foregone conclusion, the state cannot prove aggravated perjury, a felony, Carr said. The most the state can do is convict him of the lesser included offense of misdemeanor perjury, he said.

The felony is punishable by a term of 2-

Jury Selection Under Way In Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The selection of 12 jurors and two alternates from a 200-person panel was expected to take at least one week before testimony could be heard in the federal trial of four former Houston policemen accused in the death of a young Mexican-American laborer.

U.S. District Court Judge Ross Sterling dismissed 33 of the possible jurors Monday for family, health, or job reasons, and talked to five others, who probably will be disqualified because they have close relations with law enforcement agencies.

While the jury selection was under way, about a dozen protesters marched

Terry W. Denson, 27, Stephen Orlando, 21, Joseph Janish, 22, and Louis Kinney, 27, were indicted by a federal grand jury of violating the civil rights of Joe Campos Torres, a 23-year-old Mexican-American laborer, karate expert and former serviceman.

The body of Torres was found floating in Buffalo Bayou, a stream that twists and turns through a downtown section of Houston, last May 8, three days after he had been arrested during a disturbance at a tavern.

Denson and Orlando were charged with murder in the case, but a state district court jury in Huntsville, about 70 miles north of Houston, convicted the two of negligent homicide, a misdemeanor. The jury, in the punishment phase of the trial, ordered the two placed on probation for one year.

The federal charges, as did the state indictment, accuses the officers of beating Torres and then pushing him into the bayou off a 16-foot high embankment.

Judge Sterling is asking all of the questions of the prospective jurors, using lists he prepared, those supplied by defense attorneys, and those from the U.S. Justice Department prosecutors.

Once the jury list is narrowed to 34, the defense can strike 10 names from the list and the prosecution can erase 10 names.

Sterling asked such questions as those who had military service time, and those who knew anything about karate, and those who were experts in swimming and scuba-diving.

Tight security was ordered for the trial with at least 12 U.S. marshals on duty. The news media was limited to 12 seats. Once a newspaper left the seat, there was no return unless an empty chair was available.

Judge Sterling said the testimony could last at least three weeks and the jury would be sequestered.

Convention Trade To Increase

Lubbock City Council members learned Thursday that the city's expected convention trade for 1978 will almost double that of last year.

That status report was delivered by representatives of the Convention and Tourism Bureau at an informal work session with several city council members.

Bureau executive director Lew Mullins, who will resign next month, told the council that 107 conventions are booked into the city this year, with 102,505 delegates expected.

The bureau estimates that $11,918,768 will be brought into the city by the delegates, making an economic impact of $82,239,505, Miss Mullins said.

She dampened the optimistic report, however, by warning that the city will lose conventions if additional hotel or motel facilities are not built.

"If we want to keep growing as a convention city, we need to build another hotel," she said.

Ideally the facility should be built close to the downtown Memorial Civic Center, she said, explaining that competitors such as Dallas and Houston have an edge on Lubbock by providing such convenient lodging.

Bureau board chairman Jim Granberry told the council member that better communication between the bureau and civic center staff must be promoted.

Booking conflicts have arisen because of poor communication, he said.

Mayor Roy Bass asked City Mgr. Larry Cunningham to look into the problems.

Judge Questions Texas Publisher

By KEN HERMAN

EDINBURG (AP) — Angered by a Sunday editorial, a state judge was to ask a South Texas newspaper publisher today if he has information pertinent to a court of inquiry probing alleged misuse of federal funds here.

Edinburg Daily Review publisher Jim Mathis was subpoenaed Monday but refused to answer the judge's questions without an attorney.

Mathis' editorial told readers the effectiveness of Judge Joe Cisneros' court of inquiry will be determined when certain local officials are questioned. Mathis also indicated some of the witnesses had told "half truths" on the witness stand.

In calling the newspaperman to testify, Cisneros said, "I don't like rumors. I don't like hearsay."

The judge told Mathis he was under no suspicion of committing a crime but was being asked to supply information.

As Mathis left the stand after being granted time to hire an attorney, Cisneros reeled off a list of 13 items mentioned in the editorial that Mathis would be asked about.

"I want you to tell me under oath what half-truths and evasions you were referring to and what information you have," an angered judge told Mathis.

Last week, Cisneros claimed the Daily Review was "wasting my time" when it filed suit seeking access to records of a local agency.

At the time he asked whether the newsman felt they are in a better position to investigate the alleged misuse than the court.

The judge Monday promised the publisher any claims of constitutional rights would not be construed as an inference of guilt. Cisneros has told all witnesses that Fifth Amendment pleas would not be so construed.

The statements sparked an out of court response from Mathis.

"He obviously believes in the Fifth Amendment but not the First Amendment," the publisher said.

The director of an Edinburg anti-poverty program, who had answered some questions last week, Monday told the judge he would answer no more questions. Eliseo Sandoval, executive director of the Associated City-County Economic Development Corporation, had previously ly refused to answer questions about a private enterprise.

That business, co-owned with the director of the Hidalgo County Manpower program, has led to nine theft indictments against the pair in neighboring Cameron County.

Sandoval and Nick Ramirez had invoked their constitutional right not to testify at a Cameron County court of inquiry. Last week, a Brownsville prosecutor said he might seek recall of the two witnesses if they testified here.

Cisneros met in chambers Monday with prosecutor Randy Friebele who had been subpoenaed. Both men refused to talk about the meeting and Friebele did not take the stand.

The judge subpoenaed Friebele after Ramirez pleaded the Fifth Amendment here. Ramirez had previously indicated he would testify.

In other money testimony, Robert Adame, acting Manpower director said he had been aware that Ramirez, his predecessor, had used trainees to repair an apartment building owned by Ramirez.

Adame also confirmed the agency received a Department of Labor letter recommending an end to payments to Brig Marmalejo, James Wilson and Herb Pike.

Marmalejo is now Hidalgo County sheriff, Wilson is a justice of the peace and Pike is a county department director.

If you want to find out why bridge is such a fascinating game, you can do no better than get a copy of No Passing Fancy, by Sue Emery (ACBL, 2200 Democrat Rd., Memphis, Tenn. 38116, 128 pages, paperback, $2.50). It traces the 50-year history of contract bridge and includes sketches of the people who made the game famous—Vanderbilt, Culbertson, Sims and a host of others—noted hands by Culbertson, Sims, Schenken and other great stars of yesterday, and, to top it off, an interesting portrait gallery. We were enraptured.

This hand from the book is taken from the finals of the 1941 Team-of-Four championship and features Howard Schenken. Sitting South, Schenken decided that his hand might not produce a single trick for his partner at no trump, so he converted to four hearts.

"Hymes opened the ten of diamonds. There would have been no problem if South could have afforded to duck this trick, but of course that was out of the question since East might well have a seven-card suit and give West an immediate ruff. After the play of the ace of diamonds, however, a yawning abyss was lying in wait for Schenken. The normal and perhaps 'natural' play is to lead a trump from dummy in order to get out trumps as quickly as possible. Offhand, this appears safe, since only a 3-0 concentration of trumps in the West hand can defeat the contract. Mr. Schenken, however, is not one to fall into abysses if there is the slightest possibility of jumping over them. After a one minute study of the situation, he deliberately cashed the ace-king of spades and ruffed a spade in order to lead a low heart toward the dummy. As may be seen, this magnificent maneuver fixed the opponents' wagon. West went up with the king of hearts and returned a diamond. East won and led a third round, but Schenken... ruffed with the queen of hearts. West could overruff or not—his ten of hearts was no longer a menace.

"It is easy to see what would have happened... on a low heart lead from dummy at the second trick. (West would win the queen with the king) and return his remaining diamond. East would overtake and lead a third round. West's heart ten would inevitably become the setting trick.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" SOFT NOT STRAIGHT Are you wearing your hair short and straight? Wrong! Tresses should be soft, rippled and romantic these days.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I was shocked by your answer to "36 and still a virgin." How dare you say it's all right for a woman to "live a little" if she's an adult, "feels like it," and hurts no one!

I know you haven't the courage to print this, but sex without marriage is a sin before God, and there are no exceptions to this rule. Please read Exodus 20:14, Matthew 5:27, and Ephesians 5:5.

I would have congratulated "36 and still a virgin" and encouraged her to maintain her pure and virtuous record. I would also have told her to drink sage tea when she gets the urge. And also to pray.

When she asked you for permission to "live a little" before she died, you should have told her to check with her YWCA, her church, and her city recreation department for wholesome outdoor activities.

She is a virtuous queen, and there are thousands like her, including this writer. Sign me...

Sixty And Still A Virgin, Silver Spring, Md.

Dear Sixty: if one equates virginity with virtue, according to my mail you win by a landslide.

DEAR ABBY: My brother (age 66) and I (63) have been trying to get our father to update his will. He hasn't looked at it for 25 years, and there is much more involved now.

Dad is 88 and in fairly good health, so we figure he should attend to his will now, rather than put it off until his health starts to fail.

He has a considerable amount of money and property because Mother died last year and left everything she had to Dad. When we tell "Dad," "You can't take it with you," he says, "I'm not going anywhere."

Can you suggest a way to get him to update his will without giving him the impression that we would like to see him drop dead soon? I assure you that this is not the case.

His Loving Children

Dear Children: You would be doing your father a favor by urging his lawyer, banker or a close friend to get him to update his will. And if they strike out, urge him yourselves.

DEAR ABBY: When I married, I decided to quit my job and be the perfect wife.

I took cooking lessons and became an accomplished cook in order to entertain my husband's business associates properly. I looked after his clothes to make sure he was always the best dressed man in his company. I kept a spotless house in case he brought someone over for a drink. I never made any dates without checking with him first, so I'd be available whenever he wanted me. I even washed his car every day.

I gave him massages to relax him, and even gave him manicures and pedicures. I actually made a career out of being the perfect wife and helpmate.

The harder I tried to make my husband's life easier, the less affectionate he became. Finally he became impotent. His doctor recommended that he see a psychiatrist, who asked to see me.

I was told that because of the incest taboo, no man feels right sleeping with his mother, and I had become a "mother" to him. After a year of therapy for him and four months for me, the situation is improving. I'm letting him "be a man" so he can perform like one. Thanks for listening.

Bus Tour Best Way To Discover Tokyo

By SHIRO YONEYAMA

TOKYO (UPI) — Perhaps the best bargain in Tokyo, where a cup of coffee costs $1.25, is a $12 bus tour which provides a four-hour glimpse of the world's most populous city and its exotic blend of East and West.

I joined one of the tours the other day with about two dozen foreign sightseers and came away convinced it's the only way to really see this vast metropolis of 11 million people.

My foreign friends agreed with me. Our wide-windowed bus stopped first at the 1,091-foot Tokyo Tower, where the tourists got a panoramic view of the city's skyscrapers. Then on to a traditional Japanese tea garden, where they took part in a solemn tea ceremony. "I liked the ceremony," observed Italian political science student Paola Torelli, "even though I don't like tea so much."

Back on the bus, the visitors were amazed at the ease with which the driver picked his way through the narrow, congested streets on the way to the Imperial Palace, home of Emperor Hirohito, in the heart of the city.

Tour guide Nobuo Okazaki explained that visitors are often disappointed to learn that the tour of the moat-surrounded Edo Castle does not include a glimpse of the private living quarters of the emperor and Empress Nagako.

But on a (rare) smogless winter day a visit to the sprawling palace grounds can be as pleasant as a morning stroll or drive through New York's Central Park.

Fat Is Normal For Average Americans

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Uncle Sam's statisticians figure the average male is from 20 to 30 pounds overweight; the average American female, from 15 to 30 pounds.

These average American adults are a far sight from approaching the profiles of such sexy idols as Burt Reynolds or Farrah Fawcett-Majors.

The plump condition is bad. But even more depressing news is in the recent report from the National Center for Health Statistics — dispenser of the figures on weight.

The most recent weigh-in, according to the statisticians, show that the fat American adults grew more rotund in the 10 years separating the official measurement of weight.

Why are average Americans losing the battle of the bulge and what can be done to put the overweight on the winning road?

The questions were put to Dr. Ernst L. Wynder and other authorities at the American Health Foundation. That is a voluntary health association aiming to help prevent diseases through such things as the promotion of healthy lifestyles. Elimination of excess poundage is part of the recommended success formula.

Wynder, president, is the epidemiologist — health detective — who more than 20 years ago linked heavy cigarette smoking with lung cancer.

He and other epidemiologists, in reports to the United States Congress and the World Health Organization, in recent years have called for more productive attacks on obesity.

"We are losing the battle of the bulge," Wynder said in an interview, "because we are living in a society where two things have happened simultaneously."

"One, there's too much of a good life around us. In part that means the best food at affordable prices, even if that food is high in fat and calories."

"Two, we've become sedentary, decreasing our expenditure of calories." From childhood Americans are conditioned to eat for enjoyment. Celebrations revolve around food and drink. Social and business functions feature food and drink.

It's hard under such circumstances to give up the enjoyment, according to Wynder.

"We also take escalators or elevators instead of walking one or two flights of stairs," he said.

"We take the car to travel three blocks to a hamburger place."

"We've also become a nation of spectators rather than participants in sports."

"Then add this complication: change requires individual discipline — which we don't seem to have."

"Or it requires a modification of the high fat, high calorie diet — which our food industry would find difficult."

What needs to be done, according to Wynder, is to change the nutritional habits and physical fitness programs of the young.

The American Health Foundation is trying to do that through pilot programs funded by the National Cancer Institute.

Under that Know Your Body program school children are given an exercise test for physical fitness and a blood test for cholesterol, blood sugar and anemia. They are told about disease risk factors and given tips on healthy lifestyles.

In a related program for adults, the Foundation's Division of Health Behavior is providing brief physical examinations for men and women at their place of employment.

The aim is somewhat the same, to detect risk factors for preventable diseases.

Of 1,200 workers recently tested, 25 percent have at least two risk factors, indicating an increased probability on disease development.

Adults found a risk are given plans for preventive action. Obesity is a common risk factor. Nutrition education and diet programs worked out under the direction of the Foundation's Angelica T. Cantlon are part of the disease prevention prescription passed out. She is Coordinator of Nutrition Education for the Foundation.

"Motivation isn't all but it is extremely important," the nutritionist said.

Motivation builders include an ambition to improve your love life or the goal of a better job or perhaps, simply, you want to do something good for yourself.

Once you're motivated, according to Mrs. Cantlon, look at your fat lifestyle and change it to a thin one.

In extreme cases, Mrs. Cantlon recommends overeaters keep nothing but frozen food in the house.

"It slows you down when you must wait for something to defrost or for water to boil before you can eat," she said.

"But there have been cases where a compulsive eater is desperate enough to try to eat a frozen cake!"

Snacking while watching television is a common trap for those overweight. Mrs. Cantlon suggests that you try to substitute exercise breaks for the food breaks.

"It takes discipline but why not do a few situps or even some housework instead of running to the refrigerator. You can modify your behavior to that extent if you're really motivated."

At social or business events planned around food, Mrs. Cantlon recommended you eat a little bit of everything. "If you over do it, starve the next day," she said.

Diet booklets prepared by Mrs. Cantlon and published by the Foundation in New York include:

— A pocketsize "Nutrition Expert Chart." "Become a nutrition expert with the help of this chart. It can tell you calorie and cholesterol content of food and whether you should avoid or limit specific foods from your diet." The booklet is available for 20 cents from the American Health Foundation, 1370 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10019.

— "The Diet for Life 2" booklet, available from the foundation for 70 cents, gives basic information about food and tells what are the best things to eat. It also teaches about nutrition and tells how proper food is related to how you feel. It informs you about prevention of disease through nutrition. And, it gives guidelines for choosing substitutes for foods which you should avoid. "This booklet," Mrs. Cantlon said, "shows that we care about you today and that we care about you in the future. It's not just another diet book. The most valuable thing about it is that it is honest. It doesn't give a magic way to lose weight because there isn't any. If you learn the rules in this booklet and live by the guidelines both your health and your family's health can improve."

CASUAL MINK — The fashionable bubble blouson jacket is meant to be worn bloused high or low with knitted hood and cuffs. The coat is worn here with jeans. It also looks great with skirts, pants and evening dresses.

'Sticky Buns' Recipe Repeated

The Avalanche-Journal has been informed by its services that the recipe for "Pennsylvania Sticky Buns," which was printed on page 10 E of the Sunday, Jan. 22, edition, was sent with a typographical error which omitted one of the ingredients. The correct information was received after the recipe had been printed, and in order to avoid any possible inconvenience to our readers, we are reprinting the recipe with the corrected table of ingredients.

STICKY BUNS
(Makes about 5 dozen sticky buns)
Dough:
2 pkgs. active dry yeast
1/4 cup warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup liquid brown sugar
1/4 cup butter or margarine
4 cups all purpose flour
1 1/2 tsps. salt
2 eggs
4 tbsps. melted butter or margarine Filling:
1/4 cup sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
Topping:
1 1/4 cups liquid brown sugar
3/4 cup butter or margarine
1 1/4 cups pecan halves

To prepare dough, dissolve yeast in warm water. Heat milk until scalded; stir in liquid brown sugar and butter. In a large bowl, combine 2 cups flour and salt. Add liquid brown sugar mixture and yeast. Beat with electric mixer 2 minutes longer. With wooden spoon stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough. Turn onto floured board and knead 7 to 10 minutes, adding as much of remaining flour as necessary to make smooth dough. Place dough in greased bowl, brush top with melted butter. Cover with plastic wrap and let dough rise until doubled in bulk.

While dough is rising, Filling and Topping can be prepared. To make filling mix sugar and cinnamon thoroughly, set aside. For Topping, combine liquid brown sugar and butter in medium saucepan. Bring to a boil and boil rapidly 5 minutes. Grease two 9-inch round or square pans. Divide topping and pour into pans.

COOKING TIPS
Serve cooked foods hot — 140 degrees F. — to prevent food poisoning by Clostridium perfringens, warns Frances Reasonover, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Punch dough down, turn onto floured board. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Divide dough into halves; roll each half into 18 x 9-inch rectangle. Brush each half with 1 tsp. melted butter and sprinkle with half of Filling. Roll each rectangle in jelly roll fashion to form 18-inch long log. Seal seams by pinching with fingers. Cut into round slices 1/2 to 3/4-inch thick.

Place slices, cut side down; into syrup in prepared pans. Brush tops with melted butter. Cover and let rise again until doubled in bulk. Bake 25 minutes. Immediately turn hot rolls onto serving platter.

QUICKY STICKY BUNS
(Makes 16-18 Sticky Buns)
Topping:
1 cup liquid brown sugar
1/3 cup butter
1 cup pecan halves
2 pkg. (8 oz. each) refrigerator biscuits
Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Grease two 8-inch round cake pans. Combine liquid brown sugar and butter in medium saucepan. Bring to boil; boil rapidly for 10 minutes. Pour equal amounts of syrup into prepared cake pans. Sprinkle 1/2 cup pecan halves into each pan. Arrange one package of refrigerator biscuits in each pan. Bake 8-10 minutes until biscuits are browned. Turn out immediately onto serving dish.

Pre-Travel Precautions Outlined By Experts

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

Taking a few common-sense precautions before leaving for a long vacation could spell the difference between a delightful or disastrous holiday.

In the excitement of planning itineraries, packing and making reservations, vacationists often overlook important safeguards for home and property while they are away.

For instance, did you remember to inform the milkman, letter carrier and newsboy to stop deliveries? Bottles, mail and newspapers piling up on the porch or doorstep could tip off burglars that no one is home.

You might also arrange to have the lawn mowed — or the snow cleared — during your absence. It will help make the house look lived in — and, besides, you could face a damage suit if someone falls on an icy walk.

Don't advertise your vacation plans in shopping centers, service stations, beauty shops or other public places where strangers might overhear. One might decide to call before you get back home and you could find the place stripped. Here are some other tips:

— If you live in a small town, ask the police to check the house occasionally. Ask the superintendent or doorman if you live in an apartment in the city.

— Lock all doors and windows, including those in the garage, cellar and attic. Leave shades only partly drawn and hook up an automatic timer that will turn lights — and perhaps a radio — on and off at pre-set times.

— Check the dealer or serviceman on whether to turn down — or off — thermostats on heaters and refrigerators. Disconnect all other electrical appliances, including air-conditioners and tv sets.

— Leave a key with a relative or neighbor in case of emergency. When possible, provide a copy of your itinerary, including dates, places and telephone numbers if disaster strikes.

— Check your homeowner and other insurance policies and have them renewed if expiration dates should fall within your vacation period. You might want to check your driver's license, owner's registration card and credit cards at the same time.

If you are heading overseas, you may need certain documents — such as passports, visas or travel cards, certificates of vaccination, etc. — in addition to confirmed bookings by airlines and other carriers and hotels. Ask your travel agent, airlines or steamship company when making arrangements for your trip. Obtaining the documents could take time.

It's a good idea to have a medical and dental check — an ounce of prevention could be worth more than a pound of cure. Take along a supply of prescribed medicines — you may not be able to get them overseas — and have your doctor suggest a first-aid kit. And take along an extra pair, or the prescription, if you wear glasses.

If you should need inoculations, don't wait until the last minute. Some are not effective until a certain number of days have elapsed and others require a series of shots spaced over several weeks. And there could be unpleasant reactions, too.

Passports should be carried on the person — never left in a suitcase or hotel room. Keep a record of the number, date and place of issue in a safe place. You will need the information if the passport is lost, stolen or destroyed. In such an event, immediately inform the local police and the nearest U.S. diplomatic mission.

Don't carry large sums of money when traveling. The numbers of all travelers checks and credit cards should be listed as a precaution against theft or other loss. If they do disappear, notify police and the issuing companies as soon as possible.

Knowing what you can bring into or take out of the countries on the itinerary — and the United States — can be helpful in avoiding possible hassles with customs. Some have restrictions on the amount of film, perfume, liquor, cigarettes and their currencies. Some products are banned and subject to confiscation. Violations of customs regulations could also mean fines and imprisonment.

Carter Plan Called 'Fragile'

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — A tenuous structure that must carry an enormous weight underlines the fragility of the administration's voluntary anti-inflation program.

Two brief sentences, both from the economic message of the president, demonstrate the point.

The first states the problem: "Unless we gain better control over the inflation rate, the prospects for regaining a fully employed economy will be seriously reduced."

The second is the approach to solving it: "I am therefore asking the business community and American workers to participate in a voluntary program to decelerate the rate of price and wage increase."

The deep tangled roots of inflation are to be ripped up by a civilian army of volunteers, using blunted instruments and taking instructions from a general with no authority to compel compliance.

The general's staff will have to spread itself thin. The roots are "all over the place," said Charles Schultz. And if the growth cannot be stopped then the entire Carter economic program is undermined.

A premium is put on restraint, but restraint is the quality lacking in an economic society where you sell your skills, your goods, your services for the highest price obtainable.

The Carter administration, and Schultz, its chief economic strategist, must now sell the idea to labor and business, both of which seem to have a congenial dislike for taking advice from Washington.

Early indications are that the selling job, on which nothing less than the successful operation of the Carter administration depends, will require the skills of the salesman who sold iceboxes to Eskimos.

"This program," said Carter, "is based on the initial presumption that prices and wages in each industry should rise significantly less in 1978 than they did on average during the past two years."

If that were the uniform goal, then compliance might be measured. But there are exceptions, many of them, and that means they warrant special handling.

As the president said, "Industries and workers with far different histories and current situations will not be asked to fit within the constraints of single numerical guideline."

For example, where profit margins have been seriously squeezed, or where wages are lagging seriously, deceleration in 1978 would be less than for other firms or groups of workers, the president said.

"In exceptional cases," he continued, "deceleration may not be possible at all. Conversely, firms or groups that have done exceptionally well in the recent past may be expected to do more."

Those determinations, which cannot be made without special studies of the specific situations, will be made without any increase in overall government employment, Schultz declared.

There arises, therefore, a matter of credibility. How can this be done? And if it can be done, can it be done in the spirit of volunteerism that is the keystone of the anti-inflation structure?

The benefits of slower growth of prices and wages would be broadly shared, the president said in his message. "What is needed is a joint effort," he explained, to make everyone better off.

That requires volunteers who are not certain that in denying themselves they will, simultaneously, serve themselves.

Crimes Committed During Bail To Warrant Longer Sentences

WASHINGTON (AP) — Persons committing crimes of violence while awaiting trial for another crime would get longer prison sentences under a measure adopted by the Senate.

"Persons who are victimized by criminals out on bail rightly feel that the criminal justice system has failed to protect them," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who offered the amendment to the proposed federal criminal code.

Under the amendment, adopted by voice vote Monday, a person convicted of a crime would get the maximum penalty, or close to it, if during his release pending trial, sentencing or appeal he committed a crime of violence.

"Up to 28 percent of all murders and 19 percent of all rapes are committed by persons on conditional release," Dole told the Senate.

"The answer is not to eliminate pretrial release or institute preventive detention, which would be inconsistent with the American sense of justice," Dole said. "Nevertheless, the American public deserves some deterrent to protect it from those identified as potential criminals but not yet formally convicted."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., floor manager of the bill and one of its chief sponsors, agreed with Dole's amendment, saying it was aimed at "hardened criminals" who are repeat offenders.

The bill, consolidating and overhauling federal criminal law, was in its fourth day of Senate debate today. Many amendments remained to be acted on, but leaders hope that action on the measure can be completed by the end of the week.

Dole's amendment was to a part of the bill creating a seven-member commission to establish guidelines for sentencing persons convicted of federal crimes. Kennedy said a major aim of the legislation is to reduce the wide disparities in sentences imposed by federal judges.

The bill would permit judges to impose sentences outside the guidelines, but appeals could be taken if they do so. Present federal law does not permit sentences to be appealed.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., won adoption of an amendment requiring judges to impose sentences within the guidelines unless there were aggravating or mitigating circumstances of an extraordinary nature. A judge would have to make a written report of his reasons for deviating from the guidelines.

Hart also won approval of an amendment that he said would prevent sentences provided for in the guidelines from being more severe than the average under present law, except in exceptional cases.

The Senate rejected by a 70-13 vote another Hart amendment that would have prohibited a judge from sentencing a person to prison solely for the purpose of rehabilitation. Kennedy opposed this, saying this option should be available in the case of drug addicts and possibly other rare instances.

Space Budget Termed Fair

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A top administrator at the Kennedy Space Center says President Carter's 1979 appropriation for the space facility is fair even though it cuts its budget by $7 million.

"We got our fair share in relation to the rest of the agency," said Lee R. Scherer, director of the center. "We're looking forward to a very busy year putting together the thousand of pieces needed to make the shuttle program work."

Under Carter's plan, the KSC budget would drop 5 percent next year to $336.5 million while the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would jump 8 percent to $4.37 billion.

"The end result is that we've been given the continued funding support needed for the space shuttle program," said Scherer. "I don't anticipate any major impact on our ability to receive the shuttle as planned."

The overall NASA budget contains $1.4 billion for the space shuttle program, which will send the first reusable manned spacecraft into orbit by next year. The Kennedy Space Center and Vandenberg Air Force Base in California will be the launch sites for the program.

CIA Boss To Have New Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is signing an executive order reorganizing the U.S. intelligence community and giving an "enhanced role" to CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner.

A White House official, who asked not to be named, referred to an enlarged role for Turner, but said the CIA chief is not getting all the additional authority he sought.

Carter scheduled a formal ceremony today to sign the executive order with Turner and other intelligence chiefs present.

This followed by less than 24 hours an emphatic White House denial of a report in Monday's editions of the Detroit News that Carter's staff was trying to ease Turner out of his CIA post.

"There's no truth in that," said press secretary Jody Powell.

Turner is known to have aroused widespread dissatisfaction in CIA ranks, particularly for his abrupt dismissal of many veteran agents on the grounds they were no longer needed.

The News, quoting unidentified sources, said Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, was leading a move to remove Turner and that Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was tacitly supporting the effort.

A spokesman for Brzezinski said the report could be "completely discounted."

The Carter executive order grew out of a top-level review of the intelligence bureaucracy that began nearly a year ago. Vice President Walter F. Mondale played a major role in the study.

The new order replaces one signed in 1976 by former President Gerald Ford and goes well beyond the Ford order in scope.

Carter, a classmate of Turner's at the Naval Academy, decided to give the CIA director added authority over the preparation of intelligence budgets, such as those of the National Security Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency.

However, Turner wanted broader powers over the Pentagon's intelligence activities, administration sources said, and bureaucratic infighting over the order delayed its adoption.

The president also decided to place new and strict limits on covert intelligence activities, intending to erect safeguards against abuses uncovered by congressional investigators.

The executive order also strengthens the coordinating role of the National Security Council. Brzezinski heads the council staff.

RADIATION CHECK — A member of the Colorado Health Department used a geiger counter to measure the level of radiation on the clothes of assistant radiochemist Rowena Argall after more than 250 workers at the Fort St. Vrain Nuclear Generating Station were evacuated following a radiation leak in the plant. Fifteen were found to have received what a state health department radiological technician described as "light contamination" but were not hospitalized. (AP Laserphoto)

Radiation Gas Leak Cited As Harmless

PLATTEVILLE, Colo. (UPI) — A faulty coolant system allowed a small quantity of radioactive gas to escape from a nuclear power plant Monday, but health officials said the incident posed no threat to the life of plant workers or nearby residents.

Colorado Health Department officials also said there was no increase in radioactive levels outside the Fort St. Vrain Nuclear Generating Station.

Al Hazle, head of the Health Department's Radiation Division, said the small quantity of radioactive iodine gas was quickly dispersed by a light breeze and snow. None of the farmhouses surrounding the plant was evacuated.

Reports of a "cloud" of radioactivity spreading from the plant, 40 miles northwest of Denver, were determined by health officials to be false.

"There was no danger to anyone outside the plant limits," said State Health Director Dr. Anthony Robbins. "I spent all afternoon trying to tell everyone there was no cloud."

An estimated 275 employees were evacuated from the plant after the leak was discovered, while about 15 remained behind, said officials of the Public Service Co. of Colorado, which owns the plant.

Fifteen plant employees, including some who had stayed behind, were contaminated by small amounts of radioactive substance. All were decontaminated by washing, and none required medical care.

"At maximum, they received 1-5 roentgens, which is more than the average population got when we had worldwide fallout, but is not considered a serious dose," Hazle said of the contaminated workers. "They will not need to be quarantined."

Woody Hillyard, technical supervisor at the nuclear plant, said the leak was caused by a faulty valve that allowed water into the coolant system.

The extra pressure in the system then caused helium gas coolant, containing radioactive Iodine-131, to seep past a seal into the reactor building and into the atmosphere through the building's ventilation system.

The leak occurred at 10:30 a.m. Monday, but was not reported to the Health Department until 11:30 a.m., said Robbins, who was critical of the delay.

Fred Swart, manager of nuclear production at the plant, said officials had been busy the first hour determining the location and seriousness of the leak, and attempting to stop excessive water from entering the coolant system.

Investigators of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission were expected at the plant today to begin investigating the accident. Walker said there would be no further production at the plant for at least three weeks, but workers returned to nonproduction jobs at the plant Monday night.

Robbins said the Health Department would monitor radioactivity levels in milk for several weeks to see if there is any increase because of the leak. He said Iodine-131, which has a half-life of 8.3 days, could enter the human food chain through dairy milk. A half-life is the time it takes for a radioactive substance to lose half its radioactivity.

Robbins said there would be no restrictions placed on the sale of dairy products in the state.

State Leaders Upset By Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's budget will not ease financial pressure on state governments — although it won't add to their burden either, the National Governors Association says.

Federal aid to state and local governments "will just keep pace with inflation," an association report said Monday.

The U.S. share of state and local spending is expected to decline from an estimated 27.5 percent in the current financial year to 26.2 percent in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, the governor's group says.

The association complained that the president's $500.2 billion budget "does not assist states with large unemployment compensation fund deficits, which may require increases in state payroll taxes that would partly undercut the administration's economic plan."

"On the whole, the budget does not cut growth in programs where state and local governments would be forced to make up the differences out of their own funds," said Michigan Gov. William Milliken and Gov. Milton J. Shapp of Pennsylvania.

Shapp is chairman of the association's Committee on Executive Management and Fiscal Affairs, while Milliken is chairman of the association.

The squid has ten arms, a horny pen, the remnant of a shell, and a cornea which closes the eye. Its long body has two triangular posterior fins. Ordinary squids are from one to two feet long.

Birch Bayh Claims Plan By Carter Falls Short

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Birch Bayh said today that President Carter's executive order placing new restrictions on intelligence agencies corrects some shortcomings but does not go far enough.

The Indiana Democrat, soon to become chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said Carter's order needs to be supplemented by restraints and protections spelled out in new laws.

"As long as intelligence operations are limited only by presidential orders and attorney general's guidelines, the restrictive policies of one administration can easily be set aside by another," Bayh said in a statement.

While calling Carter's actions clear improvements, Bayh said they "are not a complete model for legislation to protect the rights of Americans."

For example, he said, the order allows the president to authorize a warrantless search or electronic surveillance against an American if there is probable cause to believe the person is an agent of a foreign power.

Bayh said such presidential authorization should be replaced by detailed court order procedures that will be included in new legislation.

Demonstrators Seek Outlaw Of Abortions

By MARTHA COLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion opponents say they will renew their efforts to get a constitutional amendment outlawing the procedure — and they have no plans to compromise.

Thousands gathered here Monday to march against abortions — police estimates ranged from 26,000 to 70,000 demonstrators — with marchers chanting "no compromise" as they walked from the White House to the Capitol.

It marked the fifth year that anti-abortion forces demonstrated on the anniversary of the 1973 Supreme Court decision restricting the power of states to prohibit or regulate abortions.

Congress has since restricted the use of federal funds for abortions. But Nellie J. Gray, president of the March for Life, said taxpayers' money is still being spent for the procedure because the final legislation was a compromise.

Miss Gray told the Capitol rally that she had said "we cannot compromise" in talking earlier that day with White House aides.

"The life issue is not one for compromise and negotiation," Miss Gray said she told White House aides. "Either you're for killing babies or you're against killing babies."

President Carter was in Georgia at the time of the demonstration.

The demonstrators visited congressmen during the day to push for the anti-abortion amendment. They distributed some 5,000 red roses, their symbol of life, to congressional offices, and Miss Gray said they would keep the roses coming throughout the year.

In addition, he complained the order does not adequately spell out when the FBI can conduct counterintelligence investigations of Americans.

In another area, he said the order is too broad in dealing with the question of gathering information about Americans during foreign intelligence investigations.

"Charter legislation must specifically address the question of when, if at all, a law-abiding American citizen or business firm can ever be the target of covert foreign intelligence-gathering, either at home or abroad," Bayh said.

Noting previous abuses by the FBI, CIA and others, Bayh said intelligence agencies, by their nature, "always will be a potential threat to the rights of Americans because they operate in secret and they have massive information-gathering capabilities."

He said there is a need to establish, in law, that no intelligence agency may conduct covert intelligence operations at home or abroad "solely to gather information about lawful political activities, beliefs and associations of Americans protected by the First Amendment."

"There should be a flat prohibition against disseminating any such information about Americans for political or other improper purposes, including the discrediting of any person because he or she has criticized the president, an intelligence agency or the policies of the government."

AFC Cry: 'We Wuz Robbed'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The National Football League season ended not with a bang but with a whimper.

"We wuz robbed!" the American Conference cried after losing the Pro Bowl to Walter Payton and the National Conference.

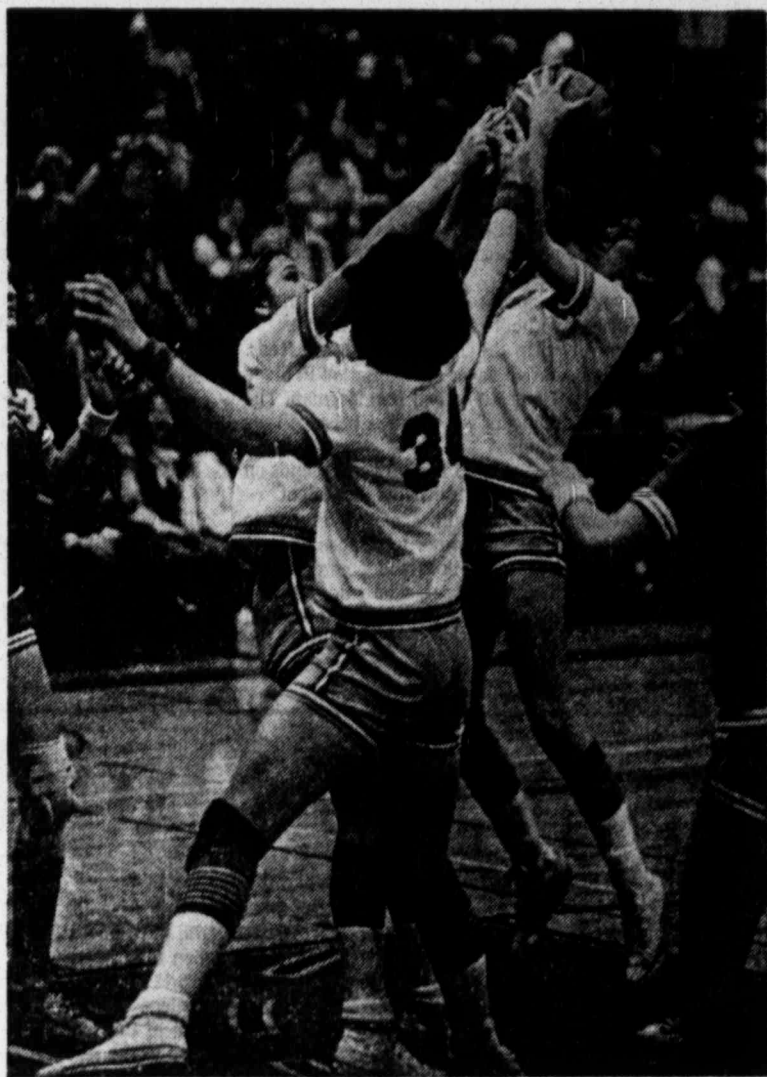

Payton, who got a standing ovation at halftime Monday night after being introduced to 50,716 fans in Tampa Stadium as the NFL's Most Valuable Player, got two more later on.

One came when he crashed through the left side of the line to score the fourth-quarter touchdown which wiped out the last vestiges of the AFC's 13-0 halftime lead and carried the NFC to a 14-13 triumph.

The other came after his 77-yard rushing performance, when he was named the game's outstanding player.

The big play of the game came about 3 1/2 minutes after Payton's decisive touchdown, with barely three minutes to go. Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler, who had ripped up the NFC secondary with passes in the second period, one of them good for 10 yards and a touchdown to Raiders teammate Cliff Branch, had the AFC moving again.

But on a second-and-9 situation at the NFC 26-yard line, San Francisco defensive tackle Cleveland Elam led a swarm of defenders for a 9-yard sack of Stabler. It took the AFC out of field goal range — Toni Linhart's 52-yard attempt was short. See AFC CRIES Page 2

Kentucky Gets No Respect From Tide

By The Associated Press

The brawny Kentucky Wildcats have been tearing apart the country this season, but Monday night they finally got caught with their pants down.

"It was evident," said Coach Joe Hall, "that after the tempo of the first five minutes, we weren't in it."

The nation's top-ranked college basketball team stood around like "watching the festivities at a fair," according to Hall, and as a result lost a 78-62 decision to sky-high Alabama.

"It was a bitter defeat, no question about that," said Hall after losing his first game of the year in the unfriendly atmosphere of Alabama's electrified arena in Tuscaloosa. "They were psyched up and the crowd was going wild."

"I could have played the managers and it wouldn't have mattered. It was like a bantamweight jumping on a heavyweight and hitting him about 15 times before he could get his hands up. When a team is as sharp as they were, and then hit seven of their first eight shots, they were off and running. Psychology has a lot to do with it."

Actually, it was a little more than psychology that led to Kentucky's first loss after 14 victories. It was C.M. Newton's game plan.

"We knew we couldn't match Kentucky in size and knew we'd have some mismatches," said the Alabama coach of his decision to go with a three-guard starting lineup. "But it created mismatches for Kentucky, too — their size and strength couldn't match our quickness."

The Alabama defense was an obvious factor, too, as was Reggie King's 26 points.

"They played great defense and took us out of our offense," said Hall. "We just couldn't get it in gear. We were beaten on screens and on the boards. We started out in a zone, but were forced out by their shooting. Alabama did all we knew they would, but they did it better."

Elsewhere, No. 5 Notre Dame turned back Dartmouth 78-64 and No. 19 DePaul walloped St. Louis 100-81.

Dave Batton and Duck Williams each scored 18 points to lead Notre Dame's victory. DePaul whipped St. Louis with the help of Curtis Watkins' 20 points.

Hogs Move Up Two Notches On Polls

Avalanche-Journal News Service
The Kentucky Wildcats have retained their familiar No. 1 ranking in college basketball, but no sooner did they get a sweeping vote of confidence from the nation's pollsters than they got no respect from Alabama.

The Wildcats were given a perfect score of 56 first-place votes and 1,120 points in today's edition of the weekly Associated Press poll and 41 firsts and 410 points from United Press International, but the voting was based on last week's results and naturally came before Monday night's shocking 78-62 upset by the Crimson Tide.

Alabama, an early-season team in the Top Twenty, was not among the blue ribbon group but made some points toward re-entry in next week's poll.

Before Monday night's upset by Alabama handed the Wildcats their first loss of the season, Kentucky had won its 13th and 14th games last week with easy con- See WILDCATS Page 3

Broncos Due Big Fine?

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ And STEVE PERKINS

Q. I agree with Coach Red Miller that too much hullabaloo was raised over the secret that Craig Morton spent some time in the hospital. Why should Miller care about gamblers, or even the press? His mind was on getting to the Super Bowl.

— J.J. Jennings, Casper, Wyo.

A. As perhaps is true in your case, Red Miller probably never made a bet in his life, so a few nuances of the incident escaped him. For instance, a betting quarterback could set up a bonanza for himself in such a situation. If Morton's hospitalization had become public knowledge, Oakland would have jumped from a three-point favorite to at least a six, or higher. If the quarterback alone, and one of his confidants, knew that he would indeed play, that would make

BUFFALO (AP) — There are so many complaints about the National Hockey League's All-Star game: The players don't take it seriously, the teams are picked unjustly, the fans can't identify with either side in a conference-against-conference format. That's just a sample.

Nonetheless, the 31st annual contest will be played tonight and the complaints will be dealt with another time. The Clarence Campbell Conference team, dominated by six members of the Philadelphia Flyers and New York Islanders.

HIGHLIGHTS

TAMPA, Fla. — Webb Ewbank, the only man ever to coach champions in both the National Football League and the old American Football League, was among five men named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Joining Ewbank in the induction ceremonies July 29 at Canton, Ohio, will be modern-day performers Lance Alworth, Ray Nitschke and Larry Wilson, and oldtimer Alvin "Duffy" Leemans. Alworth, Nitschke and Wilson were elected in their first year of eligibility after the mandatory five-year waiting period following retirement.
Ewbank, 70, guided the Baltimore Colts to NFL titles in 1958 and 1959. But his greatest hour may have come when his New York Jets won the AFL crown and then upset the Colts 16-7 in Super Bowl III. Alworth, a wide receiver with the San Diego Chargers and later the Dallas Cowboys, is the first "pure" AFL player to be voted into the game's shrine. Nitschke, a punting linebacker, becomes the fifth standout from the Green Bay Packers' dynasty of the 1960s to join the Hall. Previously enshrined were the late Vince Lombardi, Jim Taylor, Bart Starr and Forrest Gregg.
Wilson, the first player elected from the St. Louis Cardinals, was regarded as one of the NFL's premier free safeties for 14 seasons. Leemans was a versatile player for the Giants from 1936 to 1943. He rushed for 3,142 yards, passed for 2,324 yards, caught passes, returned punts and played defense.

BASEBALL

DENVER — Denver Otisman Marvin Davis said he and Charles O. Finley have ended their negotiations for the sale of the Oakland A's. Davis offered to buy the American League team for a reported $12 million on Dec. 14. Officials of the Oakland Coliseum immediately filed suit to stop the sale because of the 10 years left on the lease Finley signed with the coliseum when he brought the A's there from Kansas City before the 1968 season.

GOLF

HOUSTON — Twelve former U.S. Open and PGA champions filed a class action suit against the Professional Golfers Association, attacking a new PGA rule which would eliminate their lifetime exemptions from qualifying for PGA tournaments. The suit was filed in state district court of Judge Peter Solito by Houston attorney Jack McConn in behalf of pro golfers Jackie Burke, Julius Boros, Doug Ford, Jay and Lionel Hebert, Don January, Dave Marr, Bobby Nichols, Bob Rosburg, Gene Sarazen, Sam Snead and Ken Venturi. Under the old rule, any PGA or U.S. Open winner prior to 1970 received a lifetime exemption from qualifying for four events.

TENNIS
PHILADELPHIA — Tim Gullikson defeated defending champion Dick Stockton 3-6, 4-6, 4-1 in the opening round of the $225,000 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championship. In other action Mark Cox of Britain overcame Tom Leonard 7-6, 7-6, Peter Fleming upset 11th-seeded Corrado Barazzutti of Italy 6-3, 6-7, 6-1 and John McEnroe beat Butch Walts 4-3, 6-2.

LOS ANGELES — Tracy Austin, down 1-5 in the second set, rallied off a six-game win streak to defeat JoAnne Russell 6-2, 7-5 in first-round play of the $100,000 Los Angeles women's tennis tournament. In other matches, fourth-seeded Sue Barker posted a 6-1, 7-5 victory over Trish Bosstrom, Margen Louie defeated Kristien Shaw 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, Rula Garulitza beat Florentina Mihail of Romania 6-0, 6-4 and Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia downed Pam Teeguarden 6-3, 7-5.

HORSE RACING

NEW YORK — Jockey Walter Beez, who rode the two Uruguayan race horses involved in the Belmont Park switching scandal, was reported in New York and prepared to identify Cincinzo, the alleged "ringer" horse. But a spokesman for the New York Racing Association said he knew of no plans to have Beez examine Cincinzo, the champion horse who paid off at 57-1 odds last Sept. 23 when he won a race while running under the name Lebona, a less capable horse with similar markings. Veterinarian Mark Gerard, owner of both horses, is under nine-count indictment for his involvement in the switch. Dr. Gerard reportedly won $72,000 on the race in question.

NEW YORK — Bemis Heights, $12.80, outgamed Caesar's Wish in a neck-and-neck duel throughout the stretch and won the fifth running of the $41,430 Bingham Stakes at Aqueduct.

BOWIE, Md.

Jerry's Mona, $9, edged Honest Pride by a neck in the feature at Bowie Race Course.

NEW ORLEANS

Cabrini Green, $3.40, posted a half-length victory over Day Time Turf in the feature at the Fair Grounds.

MHS, Dunbar Face Key Loop Outings

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

And as Hoot Gibson used to sing, "I'm headin' for my last roundup." Joining Hoot on the trail drive will be the Dunbar Panthers. Like it or not, the Panthers, who finished the District 3-AAA race last week in second place behind crosstown rival Estacado with a 5-1 mark, are drifting into the loop's sunset tonight when they meet San Angelo Lake View in the LVHS gym.

The game will be the first clash of the second round and the last chance for the defending loop champions to catch front-running Estacado, who by the way is idle tonight.

On the back 40, Hereford (1-1, 14-10) visits Monterey (2-0, 13-11), Coronado (1-1, 7-15) journeys to Plainview (1-2, 4-19), the Estacado girls (7-13) entertain Canyon (24-0), and the Lubbock Christian High boys and girls host Tulia.

The Plainview-Coronado, Hereford-Monterey games are both District 4-AAAA affairs and start at 8 p.m., while the other games are non-loop encounters. Estacado and Canyon meet at 7:30 p.m., LCHS feds begin at 6:30 p.m. and the boys will follow at 8 p.m.

In their first meeting, Dunbar won a game of keep away played by Lake View to the tune of 55-22. During the initial contest, the Chiefs failed to collect their 20th point until late in the final period. Observers expect more of the same kind of tactics to be used by the Chiefs this time around, too.

Lake View, which still must makeup a game with Estacado which was postponed because of inclement weather, posted a 0-5 first-half record. Overall, the Chiefs stand 1-14, the worst record among the loop's seven teams.

Dunbar, led by the scoring of 6-6 postman Billy Don Hardaway and the rebounding of 6-4 forward Greg Whitfield, holds a respectable 20-4 and ranks number eight among the state's Class AAA teams.

In District 4-AAAA warfares, Monterey, the only unbeaten team remaining in loop play, must get by Hereford tonight and Coronado Friday night if it hopes win the first half outright. However, a win in either game would assure the Plainsmen of at least a tie for the crown.

Coupled with a Plainsmen loss and a Coronado win, the loop race would be thrown into a big turmoil with three teams sharing the district lead. If that should happen Hereford, Monterey and Coronado would all have one loss apiece.

Monterey coach Joe Michalka makes no bones about it. He feels the loop race is "still up for grabs, all right."

"Anything can happen in this crazy district," Michalka said, adding "but I hope it doesn't, not to us anyways."

Michalka said the Plainsmen will have to stop Hereford's Kelly Kitchens if they hope to stop the Herd in their tracks. Monterey defeated Hereford 56-49 in a tournament earlier in the season.

If a team ever had its work cut out for it, chances are it's the Estacado girls. The Lubbock teams must face the current number one high school fem team on the South Plains, Canyon. The Eagles are also the defending state champions in Class AAA.

If nothing else, Southwest Conference basketball was entertaining Monday night. And close.

It was almost too close, in fact, for the league's two nationally ranked clubs — the Texas Longhorns and Arkansas Razorbacks.

In one of the most stirring nights of activity around the league in quite some time:

- The 17th-rated Longhorns won their sixth conference game without a loss, coming from behind in regulation time on John Moore's three-point play and then outlasting Texas A&M in overtime in College Station 79-77.

- Arkansas, ranked sixth in the nation but running a game behind Texas in the SWC, had to rely on an 18-foot jumper by Ron Brewer at the buzzer of the overtime period to down Baylor in Waco 56-55.

- SMU rallied in the final minutes and Reggie Franklin hit a short shot in the game's final second to give the Mustangs an upset 76-75 win over Houston in Dallas.

- And in the only "one sided" game of the night, the Rice Owls fought off a second-half TCU comeback try to hand the Horned Frogs their 22nd consecutive SWC loss, 66-58.

"It was one heck of a game," said Texas Coach Abe Lemons, who could have been talking about all four of the league's contests Monday night. "We didn't shoot well (the Longhorns hit only 29 per cent in the first half while the Aggies piled up an eight-point lead), but who cares when you win."

Ron Baxter scored 22 points for Texas and six of them came in overtime. Texas opened a six-point lead late in the overtime period, but A&M scored four points in five seconds to make it close at the end.

John Moore's three-point play with 1:46 to play tied the game at 65-65 and after working the clock down for the final shot, the Aggies missed it.

"This was one fine basketball game," said A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf, whose Aggies are merely 1-5 in conference play. After a setback against Texas Tech (which was idle Monday night) last Saturday, Metcalf said he had some players who were not trying their best.

"I'm as proud as I've ever been of a team that lost a game," he said. "Texas is a fine basketball team, but we competed."

In Waco the Razorbacks had to overcome the loss of 6-11 center Steve Schall, who strained a knee early in the contest. And Sidney Moncrief had to hit one of two foul shots with two seconds left in regulation to force the overtime.

"The shot Ron hit was as big as they come," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "He's just a great money player. We're not playing good basketball right now, but that doesn't take anything away from Baylor."
