SOUTH PLAINS residents plagfed by wet, freezing weather for the past three days have only more of the same to expect through Thursday, forecasters predict.

Light rain and freezing drizzle mixed with snow flurries should continue to leave area roadways treacherously slick, and afternoon highs in the 30s are expected to only compound the problem for the next two days.

Salt Trucks Fight Slick Streets

Late Tuesday salt trucks again lumbered out onto city streets in a struggling attempt to keep roadways from icing over under a three-inch blanket of frozen snow and subfreezing temperatures for the third consecutive day.

While area school officials were trying to decide whether to call school children

Avalanche-Journal Staff PETITIONS to keep liquor off the Texas Tech campus are being circulated today by students opposed to a proposed pub in the University Center.

The last-minute petition drive comes two days before the Tech Board of Regents is to meet to decide on a Student Association proposal to allow the sale of beer and wine in the UC.

The petitions, with spaces for more than 3,000 names, are being sponsored by the campus chapter of the Baptist Student Union.

Won't See Regents
Student organizers of the drive also had planned to appear before the regents Friday to present the signed petitions and voice their opposition to a campus pub.

However, late Tuesday board chairman Judson Williams reportedly told the students that because their presentation was not on the board's agenda, they would not be able to appear at Friday's meet-

Susan Dunn, one of the organizers of the petition drive, said the group would circulate the petitions anyway, and two representatives would show up Friday in case the board changed its mind.

USIA Worker, Viet Accused Of Spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department employee and a Vietnamese who has applied for permanent U.S. residence maintained their innocence Tuesday against federal charges of spying for nunist Vietnam.

as he arrived at the federal courthouse in nearby Alexandria, Va., "I am not a spy, and I did not know he was a spy."

In a seven-count indictment returned by a federal grand jury in Alexandria, Humphrey and Truong Dinh Hung were accused of stealing and transmitting doc-uments and information "relating to the national defense of the United States."

Neither man spoke at the start of a brief arraignment before U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant in Alexandria a few hours after their arrest. Formal pleas were delayed until this morning, in part because neither had hired an attorney more than a short while before their court appearance.

Marvin Miller, representing Hung, said that he knows little about the case but "we intend to plead not guilty."

Frank Dunham Jr., told Judge Bryant that Humphrey has confessed to the crime, and was admonished by Bryant for saying so in open court. Dunham also said that the government has a confidential informant who will supply details of the espionage arrangement charged in the indictment.

Both defendants were held in lieu of payment of a $250,000 bond, pending con-tinuation of the arraignment hearing to-

Dunham said the government is prepared to prove Hung's direct involve-ment through a contact in Paris. "We can produce documents in his own handwrit-ing acknowledging he did know these were sensitive documents," the prosecu-

Miller appealed to the judge to set a low bond, saying that Hung has lived in this country for 14 years, has had no criminal record and there is no reason to believe that he will flee. The judge, however, said that in view of the seriousness of the charges he would require security. Court papers provided no information as to the motive on the part of either man. Dunham declined to comment when a reporter asked him if money had been paid; Miller said he had only just entered the case. But asked the same question, he replied, "I don't think so."

Humphrey did not have an attorney to represent him at the brief proceeding. Judge Bryant spotted an Alexandria at torney, Andrew Giangreco, sitting in the audience and asked him if he would be willing to be a court-appointed attorney for the American. Giangreco replied that he would be happy to consult with Humphrey and decide whether he should take the case, but first he asked, "May I have See SPY CHARGES Page 14

Desegregation Grant Sought For Schools

The Lubbock Independent School District will apply for continued federal funding under the Emergency School Assistance Act to aid desegregation at Dunbar and Lubbock high schools and Struggs and O.L. Slaton junior highs.

Those are the four schools affected by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward's 1970 desegregation order.

The school system will apply for a grant of about $130,000 for the 1978-79 year, Warner Sims, the district's director of special projects, said Monday night at a public hearing on the application.

The money, if approved, will provide extra reading and math teachers and additional music and drama activities at the four secondary schools, Sims said.

This year's ESAA grant is in the amount of $113,000, he said.

Odessa Attorney Warns Of 'Whitewash' By FBI

By MARK VOGLER
A-J Correspondent

ODESSA - A former attorney for the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights claimed that the Federal Bureau of Investigation is incapable of conducting an impartial investigation into the death of Larry Ortega Lozano, an inmate who died in the Ector County jail on Jan. 22.

Gerry Lopez, who now practices law in Odessa, said he believes the FBI probe will be a "whitewash" because of the bureau's close ties to local law enforcement

Lopez said the state attorney general's office would be the most responsible agency to conduct the probe. That office nced Tuesday that it will conduct its own investigation of the matter. While working for the Civil Rights Commission in Washington in 1971, Lopez said he personally witnessed "a lack of interest" on the part of the bureau in investigating civil rights cases.

St. Mary of the Plains Hospital, where almost 12,000 babies have been born in the past seven years, is closing its obstetrics wing as of 7 a.m. today. The closing date coincides with the opening of the obstetrics wing at the new county Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The closing of St. Mary's obstetrics wing ends an era for the facility and the South Plains, but the hospital is looking forward, not back.

According to Sister Maureen, administrator, the hospital already has plans for the wing to be remodeled by Feb. 20.

Plans call for the wing to be renovated as a cardio-vascular ward with private rooms. Following the renovation, the entire second floor of St. Mary's will be devoted to cardiac patients. One wing on the second floor will be for cardiac care patients and the other wing will be for cardiac surgery patients.

The present nursery will be remodeled as a waiting room for relatives of cardiac surgery patients. The delivery rooms will be renovated for ear, eye, nose and throat surgeries. Labor rooms will be remodeled for recovery rooms for outpatient surgery patients.

The former obstetrics wing is being renovated to take care of patients being temporarily housed on the hospital's third floor. On Feb. 22, the facility will open a new rehabilation center to be located on the present third floor. More than 11,940 babies have been born at St. Mary's since it moved into facilities at 4000 24th St. in December 1970. The obstetrics wing pioneered such fe tures as fathers in the delivery rooms, childbirth classes and candlelight dinner

A majority of the registered nurses on duty at the obstetrics wing had been to a nationally-recognized children's hospital in Denver, Colo., to train a week in the facility's neonatal nursery. A neonatal nursery is desi-for critically ill newborn babies.

The local facility has cared for critically ill newborns for a number of years. Sister Maureen said the hospital will probably sell some of the cribs and equipment, although some of the cribs will be retained by the facility. She said the facility has been performing pediatric cardiac surgery more than two years now and the cribs can be used for the babies undergoing cardiac surgery or car-

St. Mary's also has been performing pediatric cardiac catheterization for three years. The local facility has been approved for pediatric cardiac surgery for more than two years by the Crippled Children's Society of Texas.

According to Alice Bukis, a registered nurse on the obstetrics wing, the smallest haby born at St. Mary's to survive weighed two pounds, 11 ounces. The largest baby weighed more than 12 pounds.

The wing has had as many as three sets of twins at one time in the nursery and some identical twins looked so much alike, it was impossible to tell the difference without the identification tags on the babies. St. Mary's also has had one set of triplets, two girls and a boy, born in the spring of 1973.

Mrs. Bukis said some mothers have had a close race with the stork getting to the hospital. Several have delivered their babies at home and others have delivered their babies on the hospital's parking lot.

stands," the U.S. Chamber of Commerce reports. "It does not answer its critics" objections and concerns. It is not a compromise; yet a few legislators may be misled into thinking it is a compromise.

Nader and his ilk have learned by experience that if they won't accept defeat, that if they'll just keep coming back with thinly disguised versions of the same old thing, they can eventually win passage.

They rely on the fact that opposition eventually tires, newspapers weary of editorializing on the same subject year after year, voters tire of reading about it and politicians tire of holding hearings and voting for or against the same subject matter.

FLOOR DEBATE ON the proposed Office of Consumer Representation is scheduled tentatively in the House of Representatives for Feb. 7

Arguments for and against it won't have changed. Such an agency was approved by the House in 1971 by a vote of 344 to 44, in 1973 by a count of 293 to 94 and in 1975 by a bare nine-vote margin, 208 to 199.

That last time, the Senate also approved it but then-President Ford vetoed it. Yet, despite its declining popularity, Nader believes the bill eventually will become law if he pushes it persistently.

So far, the opposition has been just as persistent. We can only hope it will be again.

Jesse And The GOP

'That's Strange—According To Our Map

We Should Be At Mount Confidence

WASHINGTON-While most of their colleagues basked in self-satisfaction over having asked the Rev. Jesse Jackson to lunch, a few members of the Republican National Committee viewed the political party. It is not merely that the flamboyant Rev. Mr. Jackson can play no meaningful role in meeting the Republican drive for black support, or even that the drive itself may be unrealistic.

Jan. 21-22 weekend activities as an exercise in frivolous irrelevancy by their nearly comatose

Rather, the quixotic quest of Republican national chairman William Brock for black votes is

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Fight For Tobacco

Tobacco is grown from Florida clear up to New Hampshire and westward through Ohio into Missouri and Wisconsin. We have about 750,000 tobacco-farming families in the United States. They receive more than a billion dollars annually for their output. But federal and state governments collect more than three times as much as these farmers. In addition, the federal excise tax alone exceeds the money received by all tobacco manufacturers for their products.

It takes more care and patience to grow tobacco than to grow orchids.

NATURE KNOWS NO eight-hour day but this crop requires more work than any other.

In fact, you hear it said in tobaccoland that there is a 13th month called "Tobaccouary". This is made up of all the extra hours of work before dawn and after dark needed to cultivate a good crop. Our Department of Agriculture tells me that to raise and harvest just one acre requires 495 manhours. There are generally about 7,800 individual tobacco plants per acre. Bright tobacco is picked by hand—leaf by leaf.

Then it is "primed". Each plant required six or seven "primings" to protect it. Even then, a fine crop can be lost in the curing

THE GROWER MUST circulate heated air around the bundles. To have the leaves breatheand cure properly, it is vital to alternately raise and lower the temperatures. This demands great skill and constant care. American Indians believed the plants possessed medicinal properties. When Christopher Columbus reached San Salvador, he found the natives using tobacco much as it is used today and brought tobacco plants back to Spain. Tobacco soon became the chief commodity that America's colonials exchanged for Europe's manufactured articles. In 1616, our London receipts were for only 2,-300 pounds as compared with 50,000 pounds from-

EVERYONE KNOWS THE importance of cotton in American history but tobacco preceeded cotton by a full century

Today, America's battle for our fair share of the world market for tobacco is growing more and more ferocious.

Even our best friends abroad hit us with prohibitive tariffs, quotas, and numerous foreign shut-out monopolies, etc. One result is that our tobacco exports account for an increasingly small percentage of U.S. tobacco output.

Yet our tobacco exports are vital to our balance-of-international payments problem and the future of the U.S. dollar. Foreign trade should not be a one-way street.

undermining a more realistic search for lowermiddle income white votes on the issue of reverse discrimination "I think Bill has got the tail wagging the dog," one prominent Republican told us.

EN CRITICS do not deny that Brock, becoming chairman following his 1976 reelection defeat as a senator from Tennessee, has generated more purposeful activity at national headquarters than anybody can remember Local Republican candidates can now look to Washington for more practical help than they ever got in Nixon-Ford days. But this nuts-and-bolts activity is not matched by a national Republican voice relentlessly hectoring President Carter. What little news Brock makes concerns not Carter's performance but Republican courting of the black vote. Thus, the only publicity spawned by the Jan.

21-22 weekend national committee meeting was the luncheon speech by Jesse Jackson-whose last political adventure (attracting national attention) was as a McGovernite at the 1972 Democratic convention when he helped unseat Richard J. Daley's Illinois delegation.

EVEN THOSE right-wing Republicans at first unpleasantly surprised by the announcement of Jackson's appearance ended up happy. Besides their pleasure over the unaccustomed publicity, Jackson's emphasis on moral self-help by young blacks delighted their Republicanism. But Jackson's basic program of massive federal aid to the cities is alien to Republicanism. More to the point, what does Jesse Jackson have to do with black votes? While he probably has more prestigé in Los Angeles than in his home base of Chicago, there is nowhere he controls even a precinct. "I told Bill when he started on this that it was okay so long as it didn't detract from our main chance at getting more blue-collar voters," one Republican insider told us. "He told me it wouldn't, but he was wrong."

BROCK'S ASSOCIATES freely admit the quest for the black vote helps explain the chairman's reticence in talking about job and school quotas favoring blacks—reverse discrimination.

That reticence has been an unexpected windfall for Democratic politicians, who expected the worst last fall when Carter overruled his Justice Department to endorse racial counter-discrimination in the Bakke case.

When asked about the Bakke case, Brock bails out by claiming he cannot comment on a case before the Supreme Court. Forget Bakke, then; what about reverse discrimination in general? Brock replies with the ambiguous Carter formula: supporting affirmative action, opposing quotas.

Clearly, the Republican national chairman wants neither to hurt his own campaign for black in the GOP votes nor to suggest "raci-

A PROMINENT Republican named Gerald R. Ford disagrees. Breakfasting with newsmen in Washington recently, the former President said he is "almost inevitably" asked about the Bakke

"I take a thoroughly blunt position," he related, explaining he is against quotas. "I think it's unconstitutional, and I think those who advocate it today will regret it in the next decade.' Ford added he always gets a "good response," even at Dillard, a black college in New Orleans.

Has Ford recommended to Brock that he take a similar line on Bakke? No, he answered, but 'that might be a good suggestion."

Such a Ford-to-Brock talk might go into other issues stressed by the former President but largely ignored by the national chairman, such as national defense and the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT).

But for now, Brock's Republican critics would be happy if he were warned about heading their bedraggled party down a blind alley while sacrif-icing the possibility of substantial gams.

JAY HARRIS:

FOR THOSE of us who feel we have just about seen it all when it comes to technological progress, now hear this ..

While the years ahead may not match the past four decades for sheer leaps into tomorrow, utilization of what we have learned will take on some pretty far-out steps.

Recently, Isaac Asimov, the author of almost 200 science fiction books and hundreds of articles, took a look into the next 10 years for a group of top-level newsmen in New York.

'By the 1980s," he said, "most American homes will have their own computer systems.

'Education will change vastly, with older people taking part as well as the young. Once the home computers are hooked up via satellites using laser beams (two predictions in one sentence), anyone who wishes can tune in his favorite teaching machine."

THE EMPHASIS on robots in recent space spectaculars on the nation's movie screens does not surprise Asimov.

Not only do robots fascinate him, he claims he invented the word "robotics" way back there in one of his futuristic novels. He says he thinks of robots as "good" creatures, not monsters bent on destroying the world.

Then Asimov makes an interesting point, that being that people are not comfortable with robots unless they resemble human beings. Eventually, he says, highly computerized brains will be implanted in lifelike robots.

Could computers replace the human brain? 'Why not?'' Asimov asks, noting that man must and will keep control of his creation. What he foresees is two species of intelligence-man and the computer. "Man and the computer can accomplish far more than either can separately," Asimov claims, including exploration of the galaxies. "As sure as shooting, it will happen, if civilization survives.

WHAT ASIMOV is saying sounds like some of his own science fiction of only a few short years

In today's world of instant news and instant replay, there are few who will raise so much as an

But, if Asimov is a prophet in his own time, there are others who foresaw the future in an even more uncanny light. Jules Verne comes to mind as perhaps the most clairvoyant, and at the same time one of the most entertaining.

Verne is among that rarity of writers, an author whose works appeal equally to children and

He also is acknowledged as the father of science fiction, with two of his best-known, Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea and Around the World in Eighty Days still in print a century after publication.

JULES VERNE was born 150 years ago as of Feb. 8.

Since his death in 1905, he has emerged as more than a prophet in many ways. Among scientific advances anticipated in his books were the submarine, the airplane, television and space

It was only 20 years ago Tuesday that America sent aloft its first feeble space probe, Explorer 1. But, in the 20 intervening years, Man has walked on the Moon and made come true many of Verne's once far-out happenings. And in a way that is almost eerie.

After completing the Apollo 8 Moon mission in 1968, Frank Borman, the U.S. astronaut, wrote Jean Jules-Verne, the author's grandson:

'It cannot be a mere matter of coincidence Our space vehicle was launched from Florida, like the spaceship in Verne's From The Earth to The Moon; it had the same weight and the same height, and it splashed down in the Pacific a mere two and a half miles from the point mentioned in the novel."

BUT VERNE, like Asimov, is not just a lucky

His tales were constructed on a solid basis of scientific data, which he gained by talking to experts in the fields which interested him. "Yet getting the facts would have been point-less," Jean Jules-Verne noted, "had it not been for Verne's genius for translating facts into elements of fiction, not so much by a process of pure imagination a la Poe, as by a process of hypothesis, the power of which was such that Verne's inductions frequently surpassed the facts upon which they were based. As Richard L. Worsnop recently noted, Verne's fascination with technology was matched by his infatuation with the natural world. Capt. Nemo, the hero of Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea, undoubtedly was speaking for the author when he said: "The sea is all. Its breath is pure and healthy... The sea is beyond the pale of despots. On its surface, they can yet exercise their iniquitous rights, fight there, destroy there, import there all the horrors of life on land. But thirty feet down, they have no sway. Beneath the sea, that's the only place for independence! There I acknowledge no master! There I am free!'

THANKS TO Jules Verne, and those who followed him, science-fiction today is firmly established as a literary genre. It is thus recognized after generations of comic page and pulp magazine status, plus much of it turning into reality before our eyes. We would be remiss in taking note of science-fiction giants without saluting Arthur C. Clarke, who collaborated with Stanley Kubrick on the the screenplay for the film, "2001: A Space Odes-He, like Verne, is a stickler-for accuracy, and one of his pieces was required reading for industrial system design students at MIT at one Where to next? Who can say? After a century of seeing the future as Verne and others envisione it, we have spent only a brief two decades seeing much of it come to pass. UFO's? Someone from Outer Space? Why not?

Lubbock Police Investigate Several Burglaries, Thefts

Lubbock police Tuesday were investi-gating several burglaries and thefts, though cold weather apparently was keeping criminal reports to a minimum.

Johnny Louis Seid of 2417 30th St. told police someone stole an estimated $1,200 worth of photographic film, slides, slide carousels and reports from his business Saturday or Sunday.

Burglars decided on a "take-out" order Monday or Tuesday, according to the manager of a South Lubbock restaurant.

The intruders entered Long John Silver's Restaurant, 3415 Loop 289, through an eastside drive-in window, Bob Guess said. Once inside, the burglars broke into a rear office and stole about $200 cash, Tools were high on another burglar's priority list Monday or Tuesday, as someone stole $158 worth of tools from a motel at 5845 S. Ave. Q. Maintenance foreman James Graham of 4402 29th St. reported the theft to police.

After breaking through a rear screen, burglars entered Guadalupe Urive's 3408 E. 14th St. residence Tuesday, then ransacked four bedrooms before escaping with about $350 worth of assorted, per-sonal jewelry.

Gene Seward of 22P Ivory Ave. said someone broke into three unoccupied apartments at that address in the past week and made off with about $550 wo of furniture. Seward said whoever sto the tables, chairs, refrigerators and bedroom suites apparently used a pickup to haul the goods away.

A Lubbock hairdresser got "clipped" Jan. 21, according to police reports. Verniel Koetting of 1213 University Ave. said a woman received a haircut, a conditioner and a permanent wave then told the management she didn't have enough cash to pay the $53 bill. The wom-an reportedly then went to her car to re-trieve her checkbook. But when employees looked again, the customer was gone.

June Koch of 2222 5th St. said someone broke into a soft drink machine at the apartment complex where she lives and stole $10 in change in addition to causing $27 worth of damage.

Elmer Hildreth of 6118 Ave. Q told police someone stole a large, single flag and a set of 50 state flags from him sometime

A 16-year-old Lubbock girl told police she was awakened late Saturday by a youth who subsequently tried to rape

The victim said she felt someone lying on top of her and holding his hand over her mouth. She also stated that as she be-gan to struggle, the intruder tried to re-move her pajamas.

According to reports, the girl managed to break free, but the attacker caught her and pulled her into another bedroom, where he began to beat her. During the struggle, the victim said, she called the suspect by name, but he threatened to kill her if she said anything else.

The girl said that as she continued to fight and scream, other persons came in to the room and fought with the attacker.

The Rape Crisis Center was called, and the 14-year-old suspect was taken into custody by juvenile authorities.

In recently reported thefts and burgiaries, a money bag containing several hundred dollars reportedly was stolen from the Town and Country Food Store at 1524 50th St. Monday afternoon.

Reports indicated the clerk went into a back room for a short time, and when he returned to the counter, the bag was gone. The employee told police a man was inside the store during the time, but he was unable to provide a description.

As usual, televisions and stereos provided tempting targets for break-in artists

Reporting such losses were: Marshall Johns of 2623 E. Colgate St., Gloria Torres of 2812 Ave. D, No. 6, Ricky Lynn Cook of 914 44th St. and Joe Lewis Vergare of 1102 42nd St.

MESSAGE — I am writing about a problem many Central Texas farmersd are facing, with the hoped that you can help. A lot of the peanuts we harvested this season have been classified "segregation 3" because of A. flavus mold. To show you what this means, I sold one load that had been classified "segregation I" cold for $1.482 "Segregation 2" sold for $1,488. "Segregation 3" peanuts can only be crushed and sold for their

We are forced to sell "segregation 3" peanuts at a very low price — we can't even take them home for feed or seed — yet no support price is received for them. I can't continue farming peanut without some assistance, and a lot of other farmers are in the same boat. Any assistance or advice you can provide will be greatly appreciated. - D.M., Gorman SENATOR BENTSEN RESPOND - I am working with officials of the Agriculture Department to try to find a solution to this problem. Because of the severe drought this past year the number of peanuts with A. flavus mold has been extraordinarily high. On November 22, the Department amended its peanut program to make loans available, at 17 cents at pound, for "segregation 3" peanuts not yet marked. I am urging Agriculture Secretary Bob Berland to make this ruling retroactive since 95 percent of the Texas crop had been sold before it

Jolly Money MESSAGE - Several days ago a friend showed me a one dollar bill that had a picture of Santa Claus replacing the picture of George Washington. My friend told me that the bills were being issued by the government on order and at a premium price. I went to a bank asking to purchase several of these bills to use as Christmas presents. The bank employee said he knew nothing about the Santa Claus currency. I told others about the bills and they laughed me up the Is it true such a bill has been issued, or was it some kind of trick? I'd like to get some for next Christmas. With every good wish. — G.D., Dallas SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The U.S. Treasury advised me that the overnment does not endorse or sell such bills. However, they say some banks have sold genuine U.S. currency with special pictures pasted over the original portraits. They usually cost $3.95 for a note with a $1 value. This is not illegal so long as the paste holding the picture in place can be removed without damaging the currency. Treasury officials did not know which banks might sell "Santa Clause" currency, but you might consult advertisements published by various coin and currency collecting periodicals.

U.S., Reds Combat Satellites

BY JOHN MARKOFF Pacific News Service

When Energy Secretary James Schlesinger told a congressional committee recently that there was little the U.S. could do about nuclear-powered Soviet spy satellites like Cosmos 954, he contended, "We have no way, I think, of effectively monitoring what may be aboard these ve-

But the U. S. has for some time been desperately trying to learn how — as part of an arcane intelligence war behing fought in space by Soviet and American spy agencies,

Secret-sentry" satellites like Cosmos 954 — which supply military intelligence gleaned from high-powered cameras, radar, infrared sensors and radio "ferrett" - have become potential targets of antisatellite development projects carried out by both American and Soviet scien-

Spending To Mount

Both the U.S. and the USSR are spending millions of dollars each year to develop the capability to monitor, capture and even destroy enemy satellites such as the ill-fated Cosmos 954 which tumbled out of orbit and spread nuclear debris over Canada's Northwest Territories on Janu-

Space defense spending, according to the U. S. Defense Department, will jump to $265 million in fiscal 1979.

Last March President Carter became the first American leader to publicly discuss the possibility of a space war. Carter told a White House press conference he had suggested to the Soviet Union that "we forego the opportunity to arm satellite bodies and also forego the opportunity to destroy observation satellites.'

Russian Program Advanced

Carter's concern is based on the fact that both America and the Soviet Union have advanced anti-satellite warfare programs in the works. The Soviet program is so far advanced that two years ago they were able to blind an American spy satellite - at least temporarily - by 'illuminating" it five times with a powerful laser beam.

American leaders are worried about the new Russian anti-satellite because the U. S. has come to rely heavily on sat-ellite-supplied information to "verify" Soviet compliance with the Strategic Arms Limitation Agreements. Hundreds of American and Soviet secret sentries send back a continuous stream of intelligence information about the military activities of the other side.

Now, however, this intelligence, which provides instant confirmation of troop movements as well as the deployment and firing of ICBMs, is threatened by developments taking place in space-based laser guns and particle beams - high-energy beams of sub-atomic particles.

Emphasis Shifted

A classified Pentagon report made public last March revealed that the Pentagon had advised Congress it is working on a secret anti-satellite program to develop an interceptor within the next five years. Dr. Richard Garwin, a former Defense Department scientist, recently disclosed that U.S. military thinking - which had not concentrated on anti-satellite research in recent years - had now shifted. and that America is considering developing particle-beam weapons mounted in satellites. These beams would be used to knock out opposing satellites. They also could be used as space-mounted anti-ballistic missile systems to jam the electronic guidance equipment in ICBMs or even to melt the plutonium in a nuclear war-

The Defense Department also is developing the capability to capture satellites in space. The space shuttle, scheduled to become operational in 1980, will have 'retrieval" capability. The space shuttle is designed to ferry astronauts and space experiments back and forth between space and earth.

A spokesman for the Air Force Space and Missile System Organization in El Segundo, Calif., said in an interview that the shuttle would experiment with the retrieval of an orbiting American satellite during its first six flights. "It would be nice if you had the capability to run around and pluck up all these dead things that might be a safety hazard or radiation hazard," he stated. American and Russian spy satellites now gather photo intelligence with extremely powerful cameras capable of resolving from outer space features as small as the headlines of newspapers. American Big Bird photo reconniassance satellites now process photographs on board and then transmit data to earth for reconstitution by computer.

Other American satellites now provide early warning of Soviet missile launches, police the U. S.-Soviet nuclear test-ban treaty by monitoring for ultra-violet and x-ray radiation and conduct electronic intelligence-gathering by pinpointing the location of Soviet air and missile defense radar systems.

Accomplishments Many

The latter type of satellite, known as a 'ferrett," also locates military radio communications, taps Soviet microwave telephone communications and is even able to turn on a ground-based transmitter to discover its electronic characteris-

The U.S. conducted successful anti-satellite tests - using weapons known as "satellite killers" — beginning in 1963 and 1964. The American test projects originally were code-named "Early originally were code-named Spring" and "SAINT."

U. S. interest in anti-satellite warfare dropped during the mid-'60s, but picked up again when the Russians began conducting their own satellite killer tests. U. S. intelligence sources report that the Soviets began conducting anti-satel-lite tests in 1968. Most of the Soviet tests have been accomplished by launching a target satellite and then attempting to destroy it with a satellite killer.

Other Experiments

Since late 1975, however, intelligence sources have been reporting that the Soviets are experimenting with laser-and particle-beam satellite killers.

Cosmos 954 was one of a pair of satellites used by the Soviets to track the movements of American naval vessels with spaceborne radar.

The so-called composite index of leading indicators, the final important economic statistic left over from 1977, had advanced 0.1 percent in November. And December's rise supports the Carter administration's predictions that the economy will continue to expand at least through mid-1978

The index attempts to assess the outlook for the economy on the basis of the performance of various economic trends in the previous months.

"This month's index happens to be quite consistent with our view of the economy, which is for continued pretty healthy growth," said Courtenay M. Slater, chief economist for the Commerce Department, which released the index re-

But Ms. Slater said the index by itself should not be taken too seriously because "it is not a precise measure of anything," even though she said it can be useful as a forecasting tool.

Charles Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, also said Tuesday that officials must guard against undue optimism where the economy is concerned. Schultze told Congress that without new steps to maintain eco-nomic growth beyond mid-1978, "expansion will slow to an unacceptable pace and our efforts to reduce unemployment will be frustrated.

Schultze defended the administration's economic policies before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, saying steps taken last year to stimulate the economy will carry the nation's recovery through the first half of this year. Without Carter's proposed tax cuts, growth for 1979 would be between 3.25 percent and 3.75 percent, he said.

"The rate of unemployment would therefore stop declining, and it might be-

Appeals Court To Hear Four Cases At Tech

Area law students will have an unusual opportunity to see the appellate system in action when the Court of Civil Appeals for the 7th Supreme Judicial District convenes on Feb. 7 at the Texas Tech University School of Law.

Beginning at 10 a.m. and continuing until 2:30 p.m., four cases will be heard by the court. Persons interested in the legal appeals system can come and go at any time during the court sessions.

Donald M. Hunt, adjunct professor in the Tech law school, said that students will be able to observe an appeals court and lawyers in action.

"It's good for students to appreciate what actually goes on in an appellate court and at the same time have a chance to hear a lot of law discussed. They can see some of the practical applications of some of the theoretical things that have been explained to them by their professors," Hunt said.

The cases on appeal before the court involve workmen's compensation and jury misconduct and the propriety of granting an injunction in connection with an oil and gas lease. Also heard will be a case concerning an accidental death policy and in another a request for a change of venue.

According to Hunt, the Appeals Court has been using the law school facilities once or twice a year since 1970.

He said that the court will only travel to Lubbock when it has three or four cases from this area.

Hearing the cases will be Chief Justice Mary Lou Robinson and Associate Justices Charles L. Reynolds and Carlton B. Judge Robinson is from Amarillo. She became Chief Justice in September and has been with the Appeals Court five vears. Prior to that she served on the 108th District Court in Potter County. Reynolds has been on the Amarillo court for almost eight years. He is from Childress, where he served as District Dodson is from Lubbock. He was appointed to the Appeals Court in September after serving as Resident Counsel at Texas Tech for seven years.

nationalist leader Bishop Abel Muzorewa Tuesday agreed to rejoin "internal settlement" talks with the white regime, ending a walkout he staged five days ago because he was insulted.

The "internal" talks aim to create a black majority rule government in the war-torn former British colony.

A spokesman for Muzorewa said the rift was healed at a meeting Tuesday between Rhodesian Deputy Prime Minister David Smith and the first vice president of Muzorew's United African National Council, James Chikerema.

"The differences over the offensive lan-

In Valletta, Malta, talks between U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Seccretary David Owen with mil-itant black Rhodesian leaders remained deadlocked and officials said no progress had been made toward agreement on a black rule plan.

"Despite all the talking I think it would be wrong to suppose the gaps are being narrowed," a British spokesman said after a meeting between Young and Owen on one side and black guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe on the other. "There are still some very con-

"There are no new differences between us," the British spokesman said. "But those that exist are now perhaps more precise than before." Nkomo, who with Mugabe form the Patriotic Front and have rejected Smith's "internal agree-ment," said after the meeting, "No blows were struck as you can see.'

In Salisbury, sources close to the talks predicted a broad agreement on a settlement will be signed — despite differences with Muzorewa — possibly by the end of the week.

However, Muzorewa denied reports that an agreement was near and said the main problem remained the composition of Rhodesian defense forces after a chanegover to black rule.

"How could we sign an agreement before resolving one of the most crucial issues - the future composition of the defense forces?" Muzorewa said.

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) - Gregory Herbert, a saxophone player and recent member of the rock group Blood Sweat and Tears, was found dead Tuesday in an Amsterdam hotel room where a search uncovered some drugs, police reported.

The search of the 30-year-old jazz musi-

Herbert's body was found by other band members who were returning from dinner at a downtown restaurant. The rock group immediately cancelled an evening concert in The Hague and flew to

Board Okays County Jail

The Lubbock County Jail is in full compliance with U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward's order on improving inmates' housing conditions, the Texas Commission on Jail Standards

In a report to Woodward, the commission said the county jail has beefed up security with around-the-clock staffing on each floor, instituted new provisions for inmate discipline and classification and met the court's instructions on such oners, commission executive director Guy Van Cleave said.

Van Cleave's comments were based on a Jan. 10-12 inspection of the county jail by the state agency. Under an order issued by Woodward last year - in response to a jail abuse and maladministration suit filed by inmates - the commission is required to inspect the jail periodically.

Lubbock County is planning to build a new jail by 1980.

herald an early spring?

Only if he's hungry, says Dr. Leland Hepworth, an ecologist at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

"The groundhog is smart enough not to go out when it's cold," Hepworth says. "When he is in hibernation he is living on stored fat. By leaving his hole, he uses fat he needs.

"If drought occurred just before the hibernation, the groundhog may be forced out of his den in search of food. The animal's fat supplies will be low because of the food shortage during the drought."

According to tradition, if the groundhog comes out of his hole and sees his shadow, he'll return to the ground, a signal understood to mean six more weeks of winter remain.

If the animal doesn't see his shadow, he will stay outside and mild weather will prevail, according to the legend.

Probably brought to America by the Pilgrims, the tradition of Groundhog Day may be based on a similar English custom involving the hedgehog, Hepworth says. He explains that a clear night usually is colder than an overcast

New Federal Nutrition Panel Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal for a new federal nutrition education council to direct programs aimed at changing Americans' eating habits received lukewarm support Tuesday from food-industry leaders.

Rep. Frederick W. Richmond, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Agriculture Com-mittee's domestic marketing, consumer relations and nutrition subcommittee, said such an agency is needed because "the average American doesn't know what to eat."

Richmond is a wealthy former businessman who has his own chef at his home here and is a persistent advocate for so-called health foods. He proposed

Administration, two members of the subcommittee, two senators, Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, four "nationally known consumers" and four food-chain representatives.

The chairman of Giant Foods, the president of Jewel Food Stores and the chief executive of Stop & Shop Inc., who were testifying at the time, countered by saying that such a council would have to include the large food-manufacturing concerns.

William O. Beers, chairman of the board of Kraft Inc., echoed that reaction later, as did the presidents of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, the National Dairy Council and the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.

But Richmond said he would want to limit the council to 15 persons, excluding food processors, doctors and educators. He accepted a suggestion that farmers should be included.

The initial proposal for the council was contained in a 14-page statement by General Foods Corp. in response to a subcommittee staff questionnaire Dec. 7 on food-industry advertising and nutrition-education spending.

The firm's response noted a Congressional Research Service finding that Congress alone had 19 nutrition-related panels and 11 federal agencies had more than

Farmers Victimized By Phone Solicitors

Texas Attorney General AUSTIN - Besides trying to make nds meet, some Texas farmers also have to contend with unscrupulous businesses that prey on the farming community.

Our Consumer Protection Division atorneys say one of the consumer rip-off schemes plaguing Texas farmers is the use of high pressure telephone solicita-tion in the sale of herbicides, pesticides or other chemicals such as "soil conditioners." The Texas Department of Agri-culture, which our office represents in legal matters, reports that many inquiries are received from farmer-consumers who have been contacted by telephone sales people trying to sell "miracle" products. Reports received by our office indicate that some of these firms attempt to sell their products by making false, decep-tive, or misleading claims in their tele-phone sales pitches. Our attorneys point out that this could be a violation of the Control Act. For example, it is a Class "C" misde-meanor punishable by a $200 fine for any person to sell or offer for sale any pestiide that has not been registered with the Agriculure Department. It is also a viola-tion of the Deceptive Trade Practice-Consumer Protective Act for a person to SPACE CENTER; Houston (AP) -Despite being reminded constantly that he could be the first black in space, Maj. Frederick D. Gregory said Tuesday he looked at his position only as a qualified person ready to do a job for the United States.

Torrijos Security Guarantee Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) - A former top Pentagon official claimed Tuesday that Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos once agreed to a much tougher guarantee of U.S. defense and access rights than is contained in the Panama Canal treaty now before the Senate.

The provision was accepted by Torrijos in 1975 and appeared in a draft of the pact, but was removed by the Carter administration, former Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clements told a Testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, he said the defense guarantee provided by the present treaty is weak and ambiguous, and "does not protect the security interests of the Unit-

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee cleared the pact for Senate action on Monday with a recomendation that it be amended to clarify terms under which the United States would have priority access and a right to use military force to defend the canal after it was turned over to Panama in the year 2000.

Senate leaders and other lawmakers say that change is vital for the treaty to win ratification, which requires the support of two-thirds of the senators present and voting.

- Clements said the tougher security provision was drafted in 1975 after he and other U.S. officials went to Parlama for treaty talks with Torrijos, and told him that "the single most important thing was the security of the canal."

He said Torrijos agreed with this, and consented to having the treaty provide that after consulting jointly on diplomatic, conciliation or "other peaceful means" to deal with a threat to the canal, the United States-or Panama could act on

On the basis of that understanding, he said, the White House, State Department and Pentagon developed a "proper security clause that entirely protected the in-terests of the U.S. and was accepted by Panama.

Church leaders complained mothers would sometimes roll over and deliberately suffocate children in bed. Contreni suggested those deaths might be due to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, or "crib death," an unexpla fatality of seemingly healthy fants that still occurs today.

Contrary to popular belief, the average medieval family had only two to three children, he said.

Warfare Took Toll "They had no romantic view of children, such as we have today, and any more were an econ burden in an age when agricultur al methods made it difficult to feed them."

Among young men, the years 18 to 30 were deadly. Warfare was a major reason. For women, many deaths from age 13 on were due to "repeated childbirth."

"People who did survive and were tremendoush strong," Contreni said. "Most of the work was manual labor, and tools were not efficient." Life Hard On Bones

The diet for both peasants and aristocracy consisted mainly of bread with some meat and fish. Class differences were reflected in quantity. Beer, wine and milk were the main beverages. Water wasn't drunk because it was usually contaminated.

Most medicines were herbs. Little surgery was performed. "If you had an attack of appen

Ability To Cope Amazing
Skulls were sometimes drilled or bored with an augur or file to re-lease "demons" inside a person's head, a technique that actually released pressure and had some medical merit, Contreni said.

"The amazing thing to me is that they were able to cope, and I believe they did it through belief, hope in miracles and the fact that some of them had access to medical knowledge."

Contreni is studying old medical manuscripts, contemporary stories about miracle healings and records of archaeological digs under a $10,000 grant from the American Council of Learned Societies. He plans to piece together a history of how people coped with disease in the fifth through 11th centuries. He is sure of one thing pictures.

Economic Proposals Lashed By Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's economic proposals were criticized in Congress Tuesday as a fiscal time bomb for inflation and as a program that will "clobber the middle class."

Meanwhile, making pitches on Capitol Hill for the president's recommendations were Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, Budget Director James McIntyre Jr., and Charles Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

A staff report for the Joint Economic Committee said the president's proposed $25 billion tax cut in 1979 won't do enough to sustain an economic recovery. Top House Republicans accused the administration of writing a budget that is a "fiscal time bomb" that will greatly increase inflation in the future.

Recovery Seen Administration officials say the economy is basically in good shape and will continue its recovery through mid-1978 although the tax cuts are needed to sustain healthy growth beyond then.

But the Economic Committee report, released as Schultze was testifying before the panel, said: "If the economy weakens in late 1978, President Carter's proposals will prove inadequate unless they are accompanied by a sharply more expansionist monetary policy.

The report called for these steps under an "optimal policy:"

Convicted Robber Shot In Holdup Sues Dallas Store

Sadat Says Talks Hinge On Palestine

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - President Anwar Sadat warned Tuesday that despite the resumption of Egyptian-Israeli military talks, "everything will collapse" unless the two nations agree on self-determination for the Palestinians living in the occupied lands.

Sadat made his remarks to reporters a few hours before the resumption of joint military talks focusing on an Israeli pull-back from the Sinai Peninsula. They are the first direct negotiations between Egypt and Israel since Sadat broke off political talks in Jerusalem Jan. 18.

"Without solving the Palestinian prob-lem we can't establish permanent peace in the area," Sadat said after meeting with a "Friendship Delegation" of American Jews and Christians led by Rabbi Joseph H. Ehrenkranz of Stamford, Conn.

Earlier in the day, hopes for another Mideast breakthrough grew dim when Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel refused to accept an Israeli-American draft declaration of princples on the Mideast.

Meanwhile, the ministers of four hardline Arab states and the Palestine Liberation Organization met behind closed doors in Algiers for talks aimed at thwarting Sadat's peace initiative with Israel. The ministers were preparing for a summit Thursday and Friday for the leaders of Algeria, Libya, Syria, South Yemen and the PLO.

The Egyptian-Israeli military talks convened Jan. 11-12 focusing on Israel's insistence on maintaining 20 Jewish settlements in the Sinai even after the occupied land is returned to Egypt. The talks were halted when Israel refused to send Defense Minister Ezer Weizman to meet again with Egyptian War Minister Mo-

Attorney Says Lackey Trial To Speed Up

A-J Correspondent
SAN ANGELO — A defense attorney for the man accused of slaying a 23-yearold Texas Tech University secretary said here Tuesday the case could be resolved "within two to four weeks," following selection of the first juror to hear evidence in the Clarence Allen Lackey capital murder trial.

Court-appointed defense attorney Tom Richards of Lubbock said the case would "speed up now," after attorneys for the defense and the state agreed on a 51-year-old insurance company secretary as the first juror to be seated. Jean Brown Landess, a 21-year resident of Tom Green Cou sequestered until the case concludes.

Lackey is being tried here on a change of venue from Lubbock for the July 31 slaying of Toni Dianne Kumpf, a Tech Medical School secretary.

In the same way, to dilute the minority enrollments of the six other elementaries to the 70 percent level, only 44 whites would have to be added to Sanders, 59 to Mahon, 77 to Iles, 102 to Martin, 146 to Wheatley and 154 to Posey. Those computations are based on figures used in oodward's order.

At the secondary level, Struggs Junior High's minority enrollment could be reduced from its present 95 percent to 70 percent by the addition of about 120 white students. And Dunbar High would need about 135 more whites to lower its minority percentage to the same level. In ali, a ceiling of 70 percent on the mi-nority enrollments of the nine schools in question could be accomplished by the

Scotland's Worst Snowstorm In 30 Years Isolates Many Communities

INVERNESS, Scotland (UPI) - The second blizzard in three days dumped more snow on Scotland Tuesday, creating a "pure white hell" for rescuers digging to find stranded victims of the worst snowstorm in three decades.

Rescue teams equipped with long poles to probe the snow tramped along roads buried in 20-foot drifts in a search for stranded vehicles. Four people have died trapped in their cars and at least one driver is still missing.

In one rescue, a punk rock group found an English couple who had given up hope of getting out alive and had written their wills and faewell letters to their children hile buried in their car.

Helicopters airlifted fuel to the remote towns of Wick and Fort William to keep tracked rescue vehicles on the move. But a fresh snowbelt moving south to the Scottish Lowlands grounded several helicopters who were ferrying food and animal fodder to isolated homes and

"Conditions are pure white hell out there," one rescue spokesman said. Many communities were completely isolated with telephone and electric lines collapsed under the weight of the snow. Police broadcast radio instructions for victims who needed help to mark out black crosses on the ground.

All police leave and rest days were cancelled in northern Scotland and the local police chief appealed to tavellers not to journey into affected areas

Bernard and Marian Foulstone, who were returning from Ullapool on the Scottish west coast to Yorkshire, England, were rescued by a Glasgow punk rock group called The Subs. The rock trio - Billy Thompson, Ali MacKenzie and Jim Gilbert, all 20, found the couple near Loch Droma.

The Foulstones said they had given up hope and had made out their will and written farewell letters to their children because "we realized that if we didn't write, we would not be capable of it lat-

"The silence of the snow was the most soul-destroying aspect of it all," Foulstone recalled of the ordeal, "There were massive drifts - and no noise. The silence was eerie and terrifying."

Helicopters evacuated nearly 60 people, including a chartered bus party, sheltering in a remote hillside cottage between Carrbridge and Inverness. They were led to safety by road worker John Sinclair, 50, who trudged waist-deep along a stretch of highway equipped with a shovel and a bottle of whisky.

The electricity board said an estimated 15,000 people were still without power. Generators were being airlifted to remote areas where it could take weeks to restore supplies, a power spokesman

Magnetohydrodynamics May Ease Energy Crisis

Pacific News Service

When British scientist Michael Faraday dipped a pair of electrodes into the Thames River in 1825, he inadvertently generated a tiny amount of electricity — just enough to illuminate a small light bulb. But the basic principles Faraday discovered — called magnetohydrodynamics (MHD) — are now regarded by scientists as a promising way to help ease the energy crisis.

While Faraday's electrodes ere simple pieces of wire, today's experiments with MHD involve electromagnets weighing thousands of pounds. Instead of immersing these magnets in water, electricity is generated by passing gas — heated to 5,-000 degrees — through the magnetic field

Recent developments have encouraged scientists to believe that in years to come, MHD generators may one day be able to supply clean and economical electrical power to hundreds of thousands of homes and businesses

Soviet Research Ahead In the Soviet Union, which is far ahead of the U.S. in MHD research, experimental generators are run on natural gas. American research efforts, on the contrary, have centered on firing MHD generators with coal, which is in much greater supply in the U.S. than natural gas. The coal is burned in a combustion chamber, producing a gas. Preliminary studies indicate that MHD generators may be able to burn high-sulphur coal and still meet federal clean air standards, usually without requiring installation of costly anti-pollution devices. The sulphur, which is a major pollutant, can be recaptured inside the MHD generators, possibly for later sale for other industrial purpo

Large-scale MHD generators would also require just half as much water for cooling as comparable conventional plants, according to current projections. Extremely Efficient

Another positive aspect of the MHD system, scientists say, is that it is extremely efficient.

After electricity is produced in an MHD generator, there is still enough heat remaining in it to produce steam in a steam generator. This would enable a utility to produce more power with less coal.

When combined with a steam generator. MHD power units are expected to generate electricity at 50 percent efficiency - compared to 38 percent efficiency for oil and coal power plants, and 36 percent efficiency for nuclear plants.

Still, experts say there is a long way to go before MHD power is commercially feasible. "It takes time, testing and mon-ey to develop the kinds of units that will be reliable and durable enough for utili-ties to buy," says Dr. William Jackson, director of the MHD division of the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE).

Ope industry spokesman contends MHD plants would not be considered commercially feasible before they had operated reliably for at least 10,000 hours.

And even if MHD plants are someday commercialized, scientists say it's hard to predict how much electricity they will supply. One study by Westinghouse Electric Corp. showed that if MHD is commercially available by the year 1996, then certain regions of the country could have up to 25 1,000-megawatt plants by the year 2005. This would be enough power to supply 500 000 homes.

to supply 500,000 homes.

Money Major Obstacle
The major obstacle to MHD-generated.

electricity is the money.

Utility specialists estimate that MHD plants would be about 25 percent more expensive per kilowatt to build than conventional power plants. Thus, even though they would be more efficient and use less coal in the long run than conventional plants, the initial capital expenditure could stall their construction.

Although MHD attracted some interest as early as the 1940s, it wasn't until the late '50s that scientists were able to extract a significant amount of electricity from an MHD generator. There were further experiments during the '60s, and by 1965 a group of utilities had built a series of test devices and drawn up plans for an experimental plant.

Their efforts came to a half, however,

But the energy crisis of the '70s, the formation of the Energy Research and Development Administration and the persistent lobbying of former Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) helped renew interest, and money started flowing into MHD.

Since 1974, government research money has steadily increased, with a planned expenditure of $70 million in 1978 alone. Private groups like the utility-sponsored Electric Power Research Institute (E-PRI) are also sponsoring MHD research. PRI) are also sponsoring MHD research, although most of it tends to be in support of the government program.

According to Dr. Jackson of the DOE,

According to Dr. Jackson of the DOE, the government will have to invest over $2 billion by 1990 to make MHD commercially feasible for the utilities.

Most of that money will probably be spent in former Sen. Mansfield's home state of Montana, where two experimental facilities will be constructed, one of which will be a 50-100 megawatt pilot plant. This facility will be the core of the entire MHD effort in the U.S.

Invariently, the Soviet MHD program is

Highest Paid 'Double Dipper' Works For HEW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joseph Califano's sometime bodyguard is probably the second highest-paid employee of the federal government.

Thomas Lemuel Johns earns $47,025 as administrative officer and security coordinator for Califano, the secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Johns also gets monthly pension checks that total $31,200 a year for his 21 years with the Secret Service, including a stint as President Lyndon B. Johnson's chief bodyguard, according to officials of the District of Columbia pension system.

Johns' $78,225 annual income from the government is completely legal.

His combined checks are less than President Carter's $200,000 salary. But they total more than the $66,000 that Calitano - and other Cabinet members - earn yearly and more even than Vice President Walter Mondale's $75,000.

Johns is unusual in that he has slipped through the barriers in the civil service system designed to prevent a retired civil servant from taking another federal job and drawing a full federal paycheck and a full pension check.

By contrast, getting a military pension and a federal paycheck is not so difficult. A U.S. Civil Service Commission study in 1975 found 141,000 miliary retirees drawing pensions while working in civilian federal jobs. Among those 141,000 military "double-dippers" would be a retired high-ranking officer in a top civilian job with a total income greater than Johns. But he would have to be a retired reserve general who now holds at least a GS-14 - which pays between $30,000 and $40,000 a year - job

Johns' job is part administrative, part bodyguard, according to sources at HEW. HEW officials have been attempting to get the Civil Service Commission to accept a new job description for Johns' post, since the one currently in force has little relationship to what he does. Eileen Shanahan, assistant secretary for public affairs, said Tuesday that Johns rarely serves, as a bodyguard, working mostly on administrative matters. However, Johns does occasionally carry a gun when he's on the job. She added Califano is quite concerned about the "inequities and irrationalities" of pension systems. "The answer is that the system is wrong and bad," she said. "Califano is the one who proposed to President Carter that a presidential commission be cre-

She said Califano was aware Johns was drawing a pension, adding, "As long as its legal, it's legal."

The law seems clear on retired civil servants returning to the federal payroll - the pensioner can have either the pay or the pension, but not both. The retiree continues to draw the full retirement check, but the federal pay check is reduced by the amount of the pension thus effectively limiting total compensation equal to the salary for the position.

If Johns had retired under the Civil Service pension system, his total income would be $47,025 - equal to the salary for his job - instead of $77,225.

But Johns escapes the clout of this law because, despite his years with the Secret Service, he is not technically a civil service retiree.

A quirk in the law gives federal law enforcement officers stationed in Washington for at least 10 years a choice: they can retire under the civil service pension system or under the District of Columbia's somewhat more generous fire fighter and police pension plan. This is a legacy of the days when the District government was an extension of the federal bureaucracy essentially run by Congress. At that time, the differences between the pension systems were small.

But now - after some tinkering with the D.C. system by Congress and the granting of home rule to the District the D.C. system is more generous than the civil service plan.

And Johns took advantage of that difference, retiring on disability in May 1976 with his initial persion set at two-thirds is adjusted to keep pace with inflation. Sources familiar with his situation said he retired after a heart attack.

More importantly, Johns' $2,600 a month pension is not considered to be a civil service pension. Thus, he - and anyone else drawing a District pension can take a job with the federal government with no reduction in either the pension or the pay.

"Permitting such employes to receive dual payments is inequitable and costly for federal taxpayers," said a recent General Accounting Office report on the link between federal and District pension sys-

But Supt. Ed Irons said he hopes the community will "pull together to make the best" of whatever develops.

The board met privately with its attorneys this morning to discuss Woodward's order last week that the Lubbock Independent School District submit a plan by April 1 to increase the racial balance and enrollment of nine predominantly minor. enrollment of nine predominantly minor-ity campuses on the city's north and east

"We haven't decided anything definitively yet," Waters said. He added the board will reconvene Feb. 13 for another executive meeting to discuss desegregation proposals to be prepared by Irons and his staff.

Though Woodward's order addresses the "nine schools only," Waters said: "You've got to get children from somewhere else (to meet the judge's prescription for a racial mix). We haven't decided where they'll come from. In my opinion, it ought to involve perhaps the whole school district."/
Waters said new desegregation proposals are in their "elementary stages," but must be put into specifics before consideration by the board Feb. 13. He said school officials here will explore desegregation efforts of other districts in drafting a plan for Lubbock.

However, the board does not intend to call in an outside consultant — or a citizens' advisory committee — to help formulate a plan, Waters said.

"We (school trustees) are the most concerned citizens in the school district," he said

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I never miss your daily column, and some of your comments have helped not only me but friends and relatives. Will you please explain exactly what is meant by the phrase 'manic-depressive." What is involved? I know there is no cure for it. - E.M.S.

You are wrong about this being incura-

One term for it is "bipolar depressive psychosis." Another is the "cyclothymic personality." Theories abound as to the whys and wherefores of such personality disorders. Labels should be used cau-

In the manic-deperssive state, the person shifts from moods of elation and great energy to ones of melancholia or depression with loss of energy and interest in his surroundings, in family, school, hobbies, sex. Usually there is no single cause for the emergence of either mood a great disappointment, for example. The mood shifts seems to be dictated from within, regardless of circumstances. Often moods are extended, lasting months.

These are less common personality disorders. The more common type is the socalled "unipolar" psychosis with depression the most common of that type. It's estimated that 1 in 20 have this at some time in their lives to a major degree, many more to a lesser one.

In modern medicine's emphasis on treating the "whole" person, more doctors are becoming aware of these personality disturbances as part of everyday practice. As I said, you are wrong to call these conditions incurable. Modern pharmacology now has medicine for such disorders. Lithium, for example, is used in treating the manic state. Other mood adjusters are available for others. Group therapy organizations are being formed to help persons who have lost touch with themselves. Psychiatry is helping others.

Physical disorders can be involved, requiring physical cures. One thinks of advances in treating low blood sugar hypothyroidism and other ailments which can create personality changes resembling the so-called "mental" illnesses. I find much to be encouraged about in this

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What's the difference betweeen tendinitis and bursitis? -

Tendinitis is inflammation of the tendon sheaths (coverings). Bursitis is inflammation of a bursal sac (a kind of "cushion") found over various bony prominences.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 74-year-old woman who has been having a time with catarrh. When I metioned this to my young doctor, he said it was "post-nasal 'Whatever they call it now, I have it, but the doctor didn't give me any medicine for it. Can you do any better ? -

It does mean exactly the same as postnasal drip. The drip is caused by irritation that produces the mucus, which seeks the easiest path - via the nose or throat. Mucus production is a protection for the irritated membrane. You don't say whether or not you smoke. That can aggravate "catarrh," especially at your age, when membranes tend to be a bit thinner. Dust, low humidity, animal dander are other possible causes. If you use nose drops, do so sparingly, because certain "rebound" effects can result, making the drip problem eventually worse.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: If you print my letter I'll send $10 to any charity you name.

I'm sick of letters complaining about fat daughters, fat wives, fat neighbors, and fat everyone else. I weigh $17 pounds and I like myself the way I am. If one more person tells me I have such a beautiful face and if I lost some weight I'd be gorgeous, I'll belt 'em.

I have a good job, dress well and am engaged to be married. My fiance weighs 150 pounds and he loves me. I know I'll never be thin -so what? I enjoy food and eat what I want. I'm - Fat And Happy

Dear Ann Landers: I work with a large company that stretches across several states. We operate over telephone lines leased from the telephone company.

Quite often our lines become "crossed" with the long distance lines. The conversations that are heard would curl your hair. It is a one-way setup. We can hear them but they can't hear us. Ninety per cent of the callers are women, talking to other women. They name names, towns and sometimes even give addresses. They can be heard by anyone who happens to pick up the phone. The women I heard today are certainly not ladies - especially the one who said her husband will "beat the $%'&!" out of her if she doesn't quit hanging around a certain well-known cocktail bar. She asked the party she was talking to, "Can I stay with you in Waco if I get kicked out for a while? This letter to Ann Landers is a warn-

Dear Bridge: "They" didn't write, You did. So I'm telling you. I don't feel it is appropriate to nurse a child in the dimestore, a train station or a public library. These places have restrooms and that is where you should have gone.

Dear Ann: Here's a suggestion for that woman who was so resentful because her husband always forgets her birthday. BY ERMA BOMBECK Every household is visted at one time or another by an Eddie Haskell type. You remember him. The kid on the old "Leave It to Beaver" show who charmed

He stood up when I walked into the room. Fought me to carry out my garbage. Wiped the corners of the mouth with his napkin and said, "Excuse me, please, thank you" and all those other expressions mothers print on cute cards and carry in their purses.

Whenever there was a conflict of interest between the kids and myself, I could always count on Tony to say, "Your mother is only thinking of you and knows what is good for you." It made you want to throw up.

One day the kids could stand it no longer. They confronted me as a group and said, "Tony isn't what you think he ers, who think their form of bridge (duplicate) is the ultimate; and rubber bridge players, who swear by their type of play.

Certainly there are differences. There are even different ways to play a hand, depending on whether the game is rubber bridge or duplicate. The diagrammed hand illustrates the point.

Four hearts is a fine contract. At rubber bridge, it is a laydown. At duplicate, an experienced player will probably go down, yet both declarers will have played the hand properly.

The first goal in rubber bridge is to make the contract. Such is not necessarily the case in duplicate, where the objective is to get the highest score on each hand even if it risks losing the contract.

West won the opening king of clubs lead and played the 10 of clubs at trick two to partner's ace. East returned a

The duplicate player will win with the ace of spades, draw trump and hope to run the diamond suit, thus scoring an overtrick. This line of play fails on the diagrammed hand because East has four diamonds to the jack, only a 14 per cent probability. South has played properly (he has an 86 per cent chance of success) yet has gone down. At trick three the rubber bridge player takes few chances. He wins with the ace of spades and plays another spade, conceding a trick to the defense. However, now his contract is assured since he will win whatever is returned and ruff his last spade with dummy's king of trumps. To the rubber bridge player, it was not worthwhile to jeopardize the contract for an overtrick; for the duplicate player, taking the risk was justified.

BRING OUT THE NUT'S

If you received nuts for the holidays, here's a good way to bring out their fullest flavor. Spread about four cups of nuts on a shallow baking pan, dot with onehalf cup of butter and sprinkle with salt. Place in a moderate (350 degree) oven for about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. This may be used for almonds, walnuts and pecans.

Revenue Sharing Helping Stabilize Property Tax

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) - Attention, homeowners! Revenue-sharing, a concept to which you probably don't give a second thought, is responsible for some good news: the trend of property taxes, which increased 140 percent from 1965 to 1975, has been stabilized in recent months.

As a consequence, the federal and state governments have been giving additional sums to local governments, meaning they no longer have to rely as heavily on property taxes as they once did.

To help things along for the harrassed homeowner, the courts have been ordering reform of public school financing. In California, using property taxes to support schools has been declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court.

Similarly, New Jersey adopted a controversial income tax, and property taxes there too have been statilized as a result. Meanwhile there are steps you can take to try to reduce the tax assessments on your own home. Here are some of them:

1. Check if there has been a recent change in your assessment. If so, ask for a copy of the assessor's worksheets, checking for mathematical and factual accuracy

2. Find out whether homes are required to be assessed at full fair market value, or whether the assessment is at some fraction of fair market value. In a few states, assessments are supposed to be at 100 percent of market value, but in many others the assessment standard is some fraction - even to 25 percent. Homeowners often feel things are all right where an assessment is below market value, and that they are getting a bargain. They are not. You must learn the standard of your state to check if you are being shortchanged.

3. Compare the assessments of several similar homes in your neighborhood or in a comparable neighborhood. The real estate tax rolls are available to the public. Such a comparison will give you a further idea if you are being treated fairly. You should know that unfairness in the way in which assessments are given out is by no means uncommon.

4. If you have a recent mortgage, you should be able to get a free appraisal of the current value of your property. Otherwise you might have a professional appraiser estimate its worth. This will permit you to compare your property's esti-mated value with its assessment.

5. If you conclude that your assessment is too high, or that you are being assessed at a greater percentage of value than oth-ers in your community, or that the assessor has made errors in his computations and you have evidence to support your

Hints from Heloise

Hair!! Have a hard and difficult time combing out your, or your daughter's long hair? I can still remember the "almost-battles" when I was very young and had almost waist-length hair.

Mother would pull and I would scream.

She would comb and I would pull away. Looking back on it now, I know she must have dreaded those days as much as I

With that experience in mind, I have a hint for mothers who are going through the same thing.

After washing my long hair, I squeeze out the excess water with a towel, shake my head a little and let the hair fall where it may. The next step is to take a large-tooth comb and, using the big end, comb from my hairline back with four quick strokes around my face, starting by one ear and then going around the other. Just comb about to the middle of your head, not all the way to the end. Part the hair down the middle of the head and then start to comb out the tangles. My trick is to start at the bottom of the hair and comb my way up. When you start at the scalp and pull down, you are just pushing all those tangles together and making it more of a mess than it was. So I start about an inch from the bottom of my hair and comb down, then move up a few more inches and comb the tangles out, etc., etc. I can comb out my hair in a matter of a minute and I don't use a lot of cream rinse either. In fact, I just put some on the bottom few inches only.

Try my method and you will see that the tangles will be hair today and gone to-

Tobacco Industry Regulation -That the present tobacco price sup-port system be phased out over a 10-year NEW YORK (AP) - A national commission on smoking on Tuesday called for government regulation of the tobacco industry, which quickly said that it feels too heavily regulated already.

The American Cancer Society, which set up the commission, and spokesmen for the Tobacco Institute, the industry group, held back-to-back news conferences to make their arguments.

The industry has seldom been as aggressive regarding anti-smoking efforts.

The National Commission on Smoking and Public Policy told the cancer society board of directors that the tobacco industry was "virtually unregulated" and "unaccountable to any department or agricy of government for the content of its products or the health consequences of their

Recommendations for a broad new program to reduce cigarette smoking were based in part, the society said, on testimony received from more than 300 citizens from all 50 states during forums in eight cities last March through June." Commenting on this, William Kloepfer

Jr., senior vice president of the Tobacco Institute, said the institute taped and filmed the forums in Los Angeles, Denver, Seattle, St. Louis, Chicago, Boston, Atlanta and Philadelphia. "We're at the end of a road show today and it almost made it to Broadway a couple of blocks away," he said. Then the tobacco representatives showed brief shots of the forums showing many vacant seats at each stop, intended to suggest to reporters that there was no large public attendance at them.

As part of the counterattack, Horace R. Kornegay, president of the Tobacco Institute, said, "It seems clear by now that these we-know-best compulsions of the American Cancer Society and people like the Secretary of HEW have driven them somewhere over the edge of reality." The statement echoed one issued two weeks ago when Joseph A. Califano, secretary of health, education and welfare, announced his own antismoking campaign.

The commission's report, titled "A National Dilemma: Cigarette Smoking or the Health of Americans," was summarized by Dr. Charles A. LeMaistre, chancellor of the University of Texas System, Austin, who said: "We are well aware that history is littered with the corpses of well-intentioned crusades against smoking. But he added that the new effort is justified because cigarette smoking continues to be the most unnecessary cause of death and disability in this country. The commission recommended that the Food and Drug Administration and the Consumer Product Commission should "hold the industry accountable for the safety of its product." It also rec-

The industry group said cigarettes are already "the most heavily regulated product on the market."

"No other product is forbidden to advertise on television and forced to carry a health warning on every pack and in every advertisement," he said.

The sand-bars, once the site of high schol drinking parties, are gone now. The river is navigable from its mouth on the Mississippi to Muskogee, Okla. A system of 17 locks and dams has turned the Ar-kansas and its sister stream, the Verdigris River, into the Mcclellan-Kerr Arkansas River Navigation System.

Tows and barges move up and down stream through 12 locks and dams in Arkansas and through five locks and dams in Oklahoma

More barges travel each year on the nation's newest inland water transportation system. Barge tonnage reports issued monthly by the Army Engineers usually show increases. Record months are not

Harley Ladd, director of the Tulsa Port of Catoosa, located at the head of the navigation system, looked out the window of his third-story office at the port facilities below. He was proud. Just a few days before, the millionth ton of cargo an outbound shipment of wheat destined for Louisiana - had moved through the facility.

"Grain was the big mover for '77," Ladd said. "I think it confirms what those people since statehood have pointed out - that a waterway is essential if we're going to keep boosting our agricultural economy.

The port allows farmers and grain dealers from Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska to move their products in bulk down the Arkansas to the Mississippi. From there they can go up or down stream, bound for domestic or foreign markets.

Grain and other products to be shipped on the river arrive by rail or truck at any of the 23 industries located on port property. They are stored in tanks and bins until loaded on barges for the trip down river.

Some firms also moved to the port industrial area so they could receive materials by river. For example, GiffordHill, receives pipe by barge, makes portable farm irrigation systems with it and ships them out by truck. Railroad representatives acknowledge the navigation system, completed in 1970, has provided them with both competition and customers. W.E. "Bill" Gentry, district sales manager for the Santa Fe railroad, said it was no secret the railroads "vigorously opposed the waterway from its very incep-

Until recently considered a nuisance in the United States, algae is being harvested from Upper Klamath Lake now with an eye to its sale commercially Upper Klamath Lake is unique in the United States because of its large quantities of algae. Only two other known lakes, one in Chad and the other in Mexico, contain large enough quantities of algae to provide useful commercial supplies, according to Victor Kollman, a New Mexico biochemist who is chief technical adviser to the firm involved in the Klamath Lake project, Algae Production Group.

The firm spent the summer harvesting a small amount of algae and zoo plankton from the lake for samples to negotiate sales, and to test equipment. This winter is being spent designing a larger, advanced machine with hopes of full production within two years.

Algae floats to the top foot to foot and a half of the 43,000-acre lake during the heat of summer. It has a high protein value, about 60 percent, and has potential uses as a protein supplement in fish and fowl foods.

J. Anthony Giacomini, a local attorney and a principal in the business, said, the group got into the business by accident.

"I have a home on Crystal Springs Ranch," he said. "A natural spring that fills a two-acre pond is afflicted by algae in the summer months.

Giacomini said the spring is a natural hot water spring and the pond maintains a temperature of 70 to 75 degrees all year. He uses the water for irrigation.

However, moss impedes the flow of water through the irrigation equipment so he wrote Kollman to ask how he could either getrid of the moss or use it. Hollman came to Klamath Falls and on the visit Miller took him to Upper Klamath Lake. "Then he came back and asked why no one utilized the lake," Giacomini said.

The state land board approved an initial plant operation and al-gae harvest last May. The summer was spent designing equipment and on test runs with plans to expand the operation this year. Kollman said elgae renews itself in approximately 72 hours. The more that is taken out of the lake, the more light penetrates the surface and "the algae simply reproduces at a greater rate," he said.

"We do an effective job in competing with them (the barge lines using the port) on certain traffic. On time-sensitive traffic the railroads still compete with them. Their portion of the total traffic that moves is probably very small."

Ladd agreed. "Generally, what we've been seeking is the heavy hard goods and the bulks. Fuels and energy products you can move cheaper by water. If you're going to

We move coal from here to St. Louis Grain moves to domestic and foreign markets. Fuel products move to domes tic markets."

Ladd said he often tells shippers to use the rails or truck lines to ship their products because they are not shipping nomical or because of the time factor. "I generally characterize them as soft enough to make barge shipments eco-goods," he said. "Speed is important to soft goods. Barges are slow compared to trains and trucks."

The railroads have one major com-plaint about the waterway — the absence of any waterway user tax.

"Our quarrel in the beginning was with the waterwuy itself," said Gentry. "It really is what we consider to be an unfair competition:

SURGUT, U.S.S.R. (AP) - The west Siberian oil boom Rogachev, a deputy governor of the Tyumen oil region has been good to Alexander Kiselev, a squat, burly foreman on a drilling rig outside the fast-growing oil town of Surgut. At age 35, Kiselev is making the equivalent of $770 a month, a staggering sum for a Soviet worker. He also boasts a $21,000 bank account - eight times what the average Soviet makes in a vear. Kiselev is the Soviet equivalent of a high-paid Western worker on the Alaska pipeline and other top priority projects that need large labor forces in severe climatic conditions. Working his rig in a heavy padded jacket, fur cap and helmet, he can-look forward to 42 days of vacation a year and access to vacation villages reserved for Siberian workers in the warm Soviet south.

At Kiselev's rig in the Fedorovskoye oil field, winter temperatures go down to 61 degrees below zero. In summer, the Siberian land turns into a mosquito-infested swamp.

Despite official efforts to make western Siberia as liveable as possible, many oil workers still bunk four to a room in dormitories or trailers, face occasional fresh3meat shortages and have their work days dragged out to 11 hours by problems with transportation.

But in talks with a number of young oil workers, foreign correspondents on a recent tour of Siberia found many of them genuinely enthusiastic despite hardships. Some even asserted that the adventure of "conquering the North" meant as much to them as the high pay.

'The main reason you come is to test yourself against the North and to see if you can make it here," said Sergei Solviev, a 25-year-old oil well driller from Moscow spending an g at the North Cafe, a local hangout for young peo

His friend, 25-year-old Alexei Martinov, added: "The main thing for me is the romance of it. And as the years go by, the romance only increases.

Several workers also cited patriotic reasons.

Many workers, particularly in construction, come to western Siberia for only three of four years, according to Yuri, M. which includes Surgut. But perhaps as many others stay on for much longer periods, bringing their wives and children with them to avoid loneliness.

There were 10,000 people in Surgut in 1965, when its oil boom began. The population is now 81,000 and increasing by 5,000 to 6,000 a year. Surgut is a flat city of broad, straight streets lined by prefabricated housing projects and hastily built service buildings. In wintern wind whips down the wide streets, pitching snow against buildings decorated in various colors to detract from the surrounding bleakness.

The high wages and easy availability of cars lead to regular traffic jams on the few main highways.

According to a local newspaper editor, petty "hooliganism" and fighting are more common here than in southern cities and largely attributable to heavy drinking. He said cultural and entertainment establishments are not yet sufficient to keep everyone fully occupied.

Although the editor said drinking has not yet grown into a major social problem, local authorities have banned stores from selling liquor on weekends or after 7 p.m., apparently as a preventive measure.

To save on housing costs that run to $35,000 per worker, local officials are beginning to bring many workers into Surgut on work tours of about two weeks. They do a month's work in that time, then return to their home cities as far as 1,000 miles away for two weeks of rest.

Local authorities have installed a color television station and invite entertainment troupes from elsewhere in the Soviet Union to perform in Surgut once or twice every mo

The pressures of life in Surgut may well be strongest on the wives, most of whom have jobs in Surgut stores or offices but who miss the attractions of larger cities.

"At first my wife didn't like it here because of the climate, and it took her longer to get used to the place than it took me," said Nikolai Sokolov, 44, who was working with bare hands in 14-degree weather. Another worker on the site said wives "either get used to the place, or we get used to their complaining.

Lawsuit Stymies Oil Exploration Rights Sale

NEW YORK (AP) - The 500 chairs were empty, the tables abandoned and the water pitchers unfilled. The hotel's grand ballroom was supposed to be crowded Tuesday with anxious oil-industry officials attending a controversial lease sale, but they were gathering instead in small groups outside. And they were angry

"These damn frivolous lawsuits come down to the wire every time," said Ernie Weaver, a New Orleans-based executive of Western Oceanic Inc., an oil-drilling firm. "People are here from all over the country, and now all that time and money is going down the drain.

"And do you know who's going to pay for it in the end? John Q. Public, that's

Representatives of dozens of oil and gas companies were expecting to bid for exploration rights in 128 Atlantic sites off New England. But a frenzied legal battle temporarily ended late Monday when an appeals court refused to allow the lease sale to proceed.

The court ruled in a lawsuit brought by environmentalists and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who charge that not enough has been done to protect the rich fishing grounds of the Georges Bank east of Nantucket Island.

The U.S. Department of Interior, which is conducting the sale, said it would not take its appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, but would seek to have a temporary injuction lifted in Massachusetts. The sale is not expected to be rescheduled for at least 30 days.

Similar environmental litigation delayed for several hours the opening of bids at the only previous sale of Atlantic oil leases, an auction of sites in the Baltimore Canyon off New Jersey and Delaware in 1976. Exploration there still is delayed, pending Supreme Court approval.

"It's disappointing that people in this part of the country apparently are less concerned about the long range energy needs of the country than people in the Southern states," said Max Pitcher, a Houston-based exploration expert for Continental Oil Co. There is heavy offshore exploration and production in the Gulf of Mexico.

"The impression of people down South is that Northerners are too willing to let all the oil and gas come from the South and none from this part of the country which has such large requirements.

'Somewhere along the line we have to pull together as a country and solve this energy problem," Pitcher said.

Monday's lease-sale postponement came just hours after the Commerce Department reported that the United States in 1977 had a record trade deficit of $26.7 billion, most of it due to purchases of for-

The United States is getting more and more backward in development of its offshore reserves," said Charles Simmons, an oil company official from Fort Worth, Texas. "Meanwhile, we're importing eight million barrels of oil a day and it's costing us $42 billion a year."

Several executives felt the court action was designed to delay the sale until comprehensive offshore protection legislation, supported by environmentalists but opposed by the industry, is passed by

"This is some ploy to put pressure on Congress," said Weaver. "It's the first time I ever heard of a judicial ruling based on laws not even passed yet and on the assumption they will be passed.

Firm's 'Best Effort' Meets Gas Demands

HOUSTON (AP) - LoVaca Gathering Co. credited a new major supply contract Tuesday with enabling LoVaca to meet peak natural gas demand during January's cold weather.

The maximum Houston Pipe Line is obligated to deliver to the troubled Coastal States Gas Corp. subsidiary is 300 million cubic feet a day with deliveries above that amount to be on a "best efforts" basis.

"Their best effort has been great," said W. L. Scull, LoVaca vice president of gas operations.

"In the first three weeks of 1978, they have delivered up to 713 million cubic feet a day. That's more than 400 million above the maximum contract obliga-

After Bammel gas reserves declined in 1952, Houston Pipe Line contracted to convert the depleted field into the first natural gas storage reservoir on the Texas gulf coast.

Natural gas, up to 115 million cubic feet a day, can be injected into Bammel dur ing low demand period and be withdrawn when needed in high demand months.

Optimum pressure is maintained in the reservoir with 50 billion cubic feet of natural gas and an additional 55 billion can be stored for withdrawal during such peak periods as experienced by LoVaca in January.

Houston Pipe Line last winter withdrew 25 billion cubic feet of gas from the storage facility in meeting its own commitments while making emergency deliveries to both intrastate and interstate pipeline systems pressed for additional supplies during peak demand months.

LoVaca is planning two of its own gas storage systems near Houston and in its San Antonio-Austin-Corpus Christi area. Acqusitions for both the storage fields is almost complete but LoVaca said Tuesday an inadequate rate and uncertainty about the future have stalled developredibly seedy wrestling hall in Hell's Kitchen, New York City, in 1946. A wounded war veteran asks for help in his other's wrestling career from a hard-bitten promoter.

"He means nothing to you," says the director of the mov-ie, Sylvester Stallone, to actor Joe Spinnell, who plays the romoter. "Treat him like dirt. Don't spare any feelings."

Voices and hammering broke the silence in Universal Studio's Stage 12, and the director bawled for silence. "Please, let's have a little intimacy here," he commanded.

The scene between Spinnell and Armand Assante, as the veteran, seemed to play powerfully, but Stallone wasn't satisfied. He ordered another take, and he encouraged the actors to take liberties with the dialogue. Which was unusual, since it was written by Sylvester Stallone.

Two years ago he couldn't have gotten in the front gate, except on a casting call. Today; Stallone is finishing a $6 million film, "Paradise Alley." He is a kind of muscular Orson Welles, writing, directing and starring in the movie, which concerns three brothers trying to hustle their way out of

Why the compulsion to direct? "It's a matter of trust," he explained between takes. "You can hire an artist to paint a picture for you and give him careful instructions, but it won't turn out to be the picture

Didn't "Rocky" fulfill his concept as script writer?

'Considering the conditions under which it was made and the limitations of time, it turned out very well. John Avildsen did a terrific job of direction. The essence of what I had written was in the film, but visually I would have done it dif-

Stallone, who is 31, added: "Youth is on my side. I can take a shot at directing now, and if I fail, it can be attributed to my youth. If I waited until I was 62 years old, I wouldn't have any excuses. This way, I'll have time to recover and see if that's the direction I want to go."

There can be no doubt that Stallone commands respect on "Paradise Alley." And not merely because he is in Rocky trim, his powerful frame outlined in the tight jeans and form-fitting nubby red sweater. His fellow workers seem to respect both his authority and his competence.

By your students you will be taught," observed the fledgling director. "I'm learning as much from the people I work with as anything they get from me"

The project started as a movie script, "Hell's Kitchen," which Stallone tried to peddle before "Rocky.

"At that time I had just about given up on being an actor and was willing to sell the script to anybody who would buy. No takers. I sent it to Al Pacino, to Robert DeNiro, to Steve McQueen, even to John Saxon. Nothing.

He finally unloaded the script to a pair of producers for a

Black Art Featured In Gallery

WASHINGTON (UPI) - "Don't let the

But the Miya Gallery kitten, liberated by a visiting reporter, had already scampered down the steep stairs, past the second floor exhibition space and the first floor gift shop. The Miya Gallery, a nonprofit project of Cafam-III, (Collective Action for Affective Media in the Third World), is one of only two black art galleries in Washington. But the scope of its involvements remove it from the traditional image that "gallery" usually implies.

The beige brick building in downtown Washington has become more than a platform for local black artists to display their work. It is a focal point for information, news, art and film of Asian, African, Latin and Afro-American communities collectively known as the "third world."

Miya's services include 12 gallery shows a year; the Talent Line Message Service, a non-profit answering service for artists seeking exhibition opportunities and employment; Miya's Illusions, a variety shop of handcrafted gifts; a weekly writers workshop led by A.B. Spellman, a noted author in the black music field; space rented toba hairstylist specializing in traditional African coiffures. and a joint sponsorship with "Compared to What", another community organization, of a film festival and lecture series.

Miya is financed by the United Black Fund, the National Endowment for the Arts and the D.C. Commission of Arts and Humanities. But it is run by a staff of six, four of them volunteers and "pure energy," the gallery's director, Vernard Gray, says.

Gray, 36, founded Miya in July, 1967, naming it after his three-month-old daughter. A native of Washington, he has been a post office worker, VISTA volunteer, and photographer. In the early 70s, Gray worked at the now defunct New Thing Art and Architecture Center, once a hub for many cultural activities in Washington's black community.

The Art and Architecture Center was a valuable reference point in his experience. "It got me out there," he says.

Gray also learned the various facets of filming and editing video tape, which combined with his photographic skills to enable him to travel extensively in this country and abroad, particularly Africa, "at other people's expense."

He says traveling gave him unexpected insights into American culture and now he is trying to structure those insights into functional programs.

"I'm an idea person learning how to administrate," he says. "One of our main goals is to coordinate exhibition space for third world artists who have few outlets for their work. We pave the road but they drive the car.

Grav also worked on the Shaw Com-munity documentation Project, another enterprise of CAFAM-III. It combines historical research, architectural surveys, photographs and audio-visual recollections of residents of the Shaw neighborhood in the inner city to preserve the history of the community.

He envisions self-sufficient, permanent community institutions like the Miya maintaining an audio-visual archive of Washington's black history and culture. Gray is quick to point out that an audiovisual center can assume other community functions and that permanence should not suggest inflexibilty.

"I see technology as a means of recording information and the gallery as a distribution point," he says. "We can include health-related issues, for example, in addition to our focus on developments in third world communities." Miya is now awaiting the delivery of a computer to facilitate information storage, but Gray says "there still will be room for the kitten to grow.

${f Seattle Man Tends Outdoor Plants}$ As Chief Gardener For Company

SEATTLE (AP) - Tom Shimizu is one of the most scrupulous savers at Seattle First National Bank's main branch. But the green he saves is the thousands of plants and flowers entrusted to his care at the bank, in Seattle's tallest building.

Shimizu is the official bank gardener and he tends his charges as carefully as bankers watch their vaults. He cringes when people deposit hot coffee in plant pots and sighs when they withdraw blooms for boutonnieres.

Shimizu, 48, a vegetable-farmer-turnedlandscape-gardener who once ran his own business, had misgivings about becoming an employee of a big corporation like the bank. But he adjusted to corporate life as easily as his plants have to the climate-controlled environment.

Shimizu says some employees adopted a protective attitude toward plants in their offices and insisted on watering them until he issued a memo: Only Shimizu or his assistant were to water plants. The plants' health improved.

He said his biggest problems are people who think plants are merely waste containers with something growing in them.

Terrorist Acts Boost Armored Car Sales

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (UPI) - The former woolen mill in this Berkshire Hills city seems an unlikely setting for the work that goes on there - armoring vehicles against gun-wielding robbers and terrorists.

The customers of Armored Vehicle Builders aren't part of the local scene either. Though many of the commercial customers are American, most of the private clients are from West Germany, Italy and Central and South America.

For an average $20,000 to $60,000, Armored Vehicle provides, in increasing numbers each year, mobile fortresses equipped to try and keep thieves, kidnappers and murderers at bay. The commercial customers, except for some government orders such as police departments, are protecting money or goods. The private citizens are protecting themselves. Company president Michael Dan, a native Midwesterner, said the terror some of the families live in is unlike anything he's ever seen in his 27 years. "One man had a guarded house, two bodyguards, an armored car with lead and follow cars, checkpoints," Dan said. "When you get to that point, you wonder, Armored Vehicle Builders was formed three years ago by Gerard Reder of Pittsfield. Reder owned a security firm and was looking for a lightweight armored van to use when he expanded his operations to the Caribbean Armored vans at the time were lined with heavy steel, which was expensive and cumbersome. Reder, 51, built a van using fiberglass reinforced plastic for most of the vehicle, and lexgard, a bulletresistant glass, in the window area. The first year, Reder made only 10 vehicles. Dan took over operations 15 vans and trucks and 100 cars for what they call, the "executive protection" market.

"And at no time in the history of the company have we been able to meet the demand," Dan said.

Customers pay for the amount of protection they want. The $20,000 to $60,000 price includes the cost of the vehicle plus whatever level of ballistics protection the client needs and desires.

Dan boasts the company can "armor anything." To prove the point, an armored tractor trailer truck sat in the

But he freely ticked off attachments familiar to anyone who watches police or spy shows on television. There are gunports in the doors, automatic built-in weapons, smoke-release and tear gas levers, remote starting systems to foil bombers, bullet-resistant tires and "all the James Bond stuff you can think of," he said.

Discovery May Affect Life Search On Mars

of life has been discovered inside rocks trates several millimeters deep. from a barren region of Antarctica - a surprising finding that could change the way scientists search for life on Mars.

Discovery of microbes, algae and fungi underneath the surface of certain rocks in Antarctica, one of earth's harshest environments, significantly extends the known limits of life on this planet and offers new hope that some form of life may exist on desolate neighboring worlds, sci-

The National Science Foundation and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, co-sponsors of the Antarctic research, announced the findings Tues-

Drs. E. Imre Friedmann and Roseli Ocampo-Friedmann, a husband-wife team of biologists from Florida State University at Tallahassee, found life in light-colored rocks from Antarctica's Dry Valleys region, a frigid, arid area mostly devoid of ice and snow.

Similar, but more extreme, conditions were found on Mars by two American Viking spacecraft, which in 1976 searched unsuccessfully for conclusive signs of microbial life. But the unmanned craft were not designed to crack open rocks and peek inside.

Dr. Richard S. Young, NASA's chief of planetary biology, said that if Martian life exists only in the interior of rocks "the design of the spacecraft would be influenced accordingly.'

"For example, we would search out specific rock types and design a sampler which can open such rocks and provide subsurface samples which can be examined for life forms and organic molecules," Young said.

The Friedmanns have looked for life inside rocks for more than 15 years and earlier succeeded in finding living cells inside rocks from hot desert areas of America, Asia and Africa.

Friedmann said in an interview that in 1975, he found a layer of blue-green algae inside a Dry Valleys rock sent him by a

"But we didn't know if this was widespread and common, or if it was a freak case," Friedmann said.

In two subsequent expeditions to Antarctica, the Friedmanns brought back 600 pounds of rocks and found that a dark, greenish layer of life existed inside semi-

Ice-Bound River Duo Faring Well

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) Louisville's winter version of the 'Odd Couple" settled down to a lunch of hamburgers and beans Tuesday, its fourth day stranded on an ice-bound river patrol station in the Ohio River.

"We get along just fine." Jefferson County Patrolman Tom Byrne said by telephone from his a 92foot flatboat locked in river ice.

The ice began developing last week as Louisville closed out its snowiest January on record and one of its coldest ever.

"We have all the facilities and we brought on enough groceries to last us a while," Byrne said, as his partner, Allen Farmer, prepared a lunch of hamburgers, beans and fried potatoes.

All the facilities include a shower with hot water, a television that's rarely turned off and a telephone that keeps ringing.

"The telephone keeps us busy out here," Byrne said. "You can't get lonely with the phone ringing and everyone and his brother wanting to know how we're doing.

Although the 60-foot gangplank is submerged in ice that is too soft to let them walk to shore the two officers haven't lost all touch with the world.

The station is moored close enough to shore that a fuel tank was able to park on a riverfront expressway ramp Tuesday morning to lower a hose and fill up the near-empty fuel tank of the patrol

Byrne and Farmer, who have been stranded at the station since Saturday afternoon, normally work eight-hour shifts but have been working alternate 12-hour shifts since they became iced in by the frozen river.

Duty right now for Byrne and Farmer mainly means taking calls from boat owners interested in the level of the frozen Ohio. All emergency calls are referred to the Coast Guard.

For anyone seeking to move his boat in the river Byrne has the same warning: "We just tell 'em to forget it," Byrne said. "Just about every boat on the river is

The 47-year-old Byrne, who has been assigned to the river station for two years, said "all in all it's not a bad experience."

Would he recommend it? "Maybe once a year," he said with a laugh.

GAMBLERS WELCOMED BASSETERRE, St. KITTS (UPI) -Facing stiff competition from other Caribbean islands for the tourism business, St. Kitts opened a casino for the 1977-78 winter season at the government-owned Royal St. Kitts Hotel and Golf Club. It is a 100-room luxury resort complex at Frigate Bay managed by an Italian firm with gambling interests in nearby St. Maartan and Italy.

The thin, surface layer of rock not only traps heat and minute amounts of moisture but it also protects the organisms from the harsh outside environment and filters out excessive solar radiation. Friedmann said he examined one lifebearing rock when the air temperature was about 14 degrees Fahrenheit and the rock surface about 28 degrees. At the layer of life a quarter inch below the surface, it was 50 degrees, cozy for these types of organisms.

drop to 60 below zero "and the wind-chill factor is incredible," he said, the life forms become dormant and wait for warmer periods to begin functioning

Friedmann said there is evidence the Dry Valleys area once was more hospitable to life forms and probably supported surface life. But as conditions worsened. organisms began to withdraw and seek places where they could live.

"The only possibility of getting into the rocks was through accidental cracks," Friedmann said. "Once they got in, they could spread horizontally.

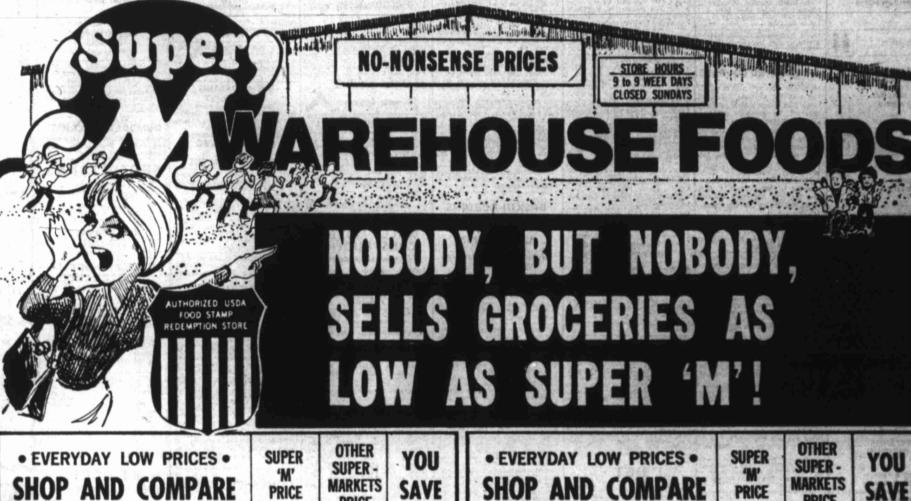

"If Mars once had more water than now, and there is evidence it did, life could have formed. Mars is now a cold desert, but life could have withdrawn inside rocks," Friedmann said.

"Maybe we should be looking for rocks rather than forests."

ANNOUNCES SUIT - Texas Attorney General John Hill tells an Austin news conference he is suing the federal government to stop enforcement of strip-mining regulations he claims will ruin the state's lignite industry. (AP Laserphoto)

Hill Wants Lignite Mining Rules Relaxed

AUSTIN (AP) - Attorney General John Hill said Tuesday he was suing the federal government to stop it from putting Texas lignite mines out of business through "bureaucratic overkill."

Lignite, Hill indicated at a news conference, is the hope of the future for cutting

Texans' utility costs. Yet the federal government, Hill said, has adopted strip mining regulations that would put off-limits eight billion of Texas' 11 billion tons of near-surface lignite. Hill's suit seeks to stop enforcement of the regulations. The controversy focuses on the federal government's definition of "prime farmand" in ther 1977 surface mining act and how such land must be mined. Hill said the Texas Railroad Commission had informed him that the mining regulations would make it too expensive for utility companies to use lignite.

"It's bureaucratic overkill," said Hill, "a good example of government by guidelines. The bureaucrats in Washington don't understand what is and what isn't prime farmland in this state."

More than 800,000 acres that is designated as "prime farmland" under the regulations actually is "grazing land," Hill said

The regulations, Hill said, are "unnecessarily broad, unrealistically broad." Hill said Texas had planned to rely on lignite for generating 30 percent of its electricity by 1985. "The more (lignite) that is available," he said, "the better opportunity to reduce utility bills. The best way to cut utility costs is to convert users

Without the lignite, he said, Texas would be forced to "import more and more coal from Wyoming.

Asked about possible environmental consequences of blocking the federal regulations, Hill said that his assistant handling the suit, P.M. Schenkkan, had assured him there would be no "adverse environmental impact. Hill said he hoped that because of his suit the federal government would voluntarily reconsider its position.

The defendants are Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, who defined 'prime farmland," and Secretary of Interior Cecil Andrus, who is charged with enforcing the federal surface mining act.

France Unlikely NATO Partner

PACIFIC NEWS SERVICE

PARIS - The gloom and doom mental ity that pervades the current discussions over the future of the North Atlanic Treaty Organization is nowhere more pronounced than here.

Although president DeGaulle withdrew France from the alliance's military apparatus 12 years ago, the country's military and political leadership remains keenly sensitive to every NATO move. And, in recent years, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing very cautiously, amost surreptitiously, has begun to edge France's armed forces and military planning back into the NATO context.

But full re-integration may never be possible, say political observers, so long as the Gaullist philosophy of strict national independence and sovereignty-continues to dominate both French left and

A sterling proponent of this philosohy is retired Air Force Gen. Pierre Gallois, now an excutive of the Marcel Dassault arms and aircaft firm amd a lecturer on international relations at the Sorbonne. Through a series of articles and public lectures, Gen. Gallois has emerged as one of the Gaullists' principal spokesmen for defense.

Interviewed at his office here, Gen. Gallois pulled no punches in condemning virtually every initiative undertaken by the Atlantic Alliance in recent years. No future, he declared, the policies of the past imposed by America have completely ruled out any possibility of an effective conventional defense against a Warsaw pact attack.

"Today the amount of military power which the Soviets have has increased tremendously, and there is no European defense which is feasible without American atomic weapons," says Gallois.

"It is nonsense for Americans to say that Europeans should provide their own defense because America decided long ago to rely on the atomic defense, which she provided. And she did it in such a way that European nations were more or less obliged to sign the treaty of nuclear nonproliferation. Thus, Japan, the Benelux countries, Italy are all deprived of nuclear weapons and completely dependent on the United States."

American troops, says Gallois, remain necessary to Western Europe "as hostages, not as combatants. Because to spill American blood is an enormous risk, one which invites an atomic retaliation.

"The American government," he declares, "has managed for 25 years to make Europe completely dependent on U.S. protection, forever. When in France we try to find another solution, we are bitterly attacked in America. Now we can't provide for our own defense, it's too late. So, America has to be responsi-

Yet, says Gallois, to even contemplate a conventional NATO defense in Europe is "complete nonsense."

medically subject to

"We are 14 nations, with different interests. The Warsaw Pact is a case of one policy, one doctrine, one strategy, opposed to 10 or more doctrines, 10 strategies. If the West accepted a conventional war we would lose within a few hours."

Gallois also argues that the Soviets would not abandon the status quo to go to war unless they were certain, beyond all odds, that they could win. And, he says, "if by some extraordinary miracle we were able to resist, they would simply take up whatever weapons they needed to win.

"To me," he adds, "the greatest fallacy of the whole NATO concept is based on the fact that the Russians might start a war and because of our marvelous resistance they would go home and excuse themselves. I can't swallow that. It's not Present NATO programs aimed at bolstering the conventional forces in Europe to meet a Warsaw Pact threat make no sense to Gallois. "Modernization, standardization, weapons of precision, neutron bomb - all that is just stupid gadgetry which has no real meaning to the situation in Europe.

"Our troops," he laments, "are like sitting ducks, like we were in 1945 when no nuclear weapons existed, no missiles. We are in exactly the same posture, the same deployments, the same training, the

In Gallois's Gaullist perspective, the only really meaningful force improvements could be made in the area of nuclear arms, specifically by greater mobilization (the constant movement 7,000 nuclear warheads in Europe today are clustred in a few relatively vulnerable formations - partly because wide dispersal would create huge problems of internal security against sabotage and theft.

"If we can't take the initiative in battle, which as democracies we can't," says Gallois, "then the only way is to adopt a system of complete mobility, concealment and movement to deny the enemy a target. And we are doing the contrary. You can go out and see 70 aircraft on one strip. Hitler attacked us and destroyed two-thirds of the French air force. Since that period we have adopted the same deployments. Nothing has changed."

Gallois believes that DeGaulle's policy of independence from NATO and reliance on France's own limited nuclear arsenal are still the only viable alternatives for France.

"I hope this position will not be sabotaged," he says. "But today, we are doing what DeGaulle wanted to do 10 years ago, and the facts are not the same today. If he were alive he would want something else, I'm sure of it."

Project To Aid Drought-Stricken Area

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) - Africa's drought-stricken sub-Sahara region has begun a 22-year agricultural project with American help to overcome cycles of devastating famines that afflict its 27 million people.

Eight nations making up the region known as the Sahel, sandwiched between the Sahara Desert to the north and the jungles of central Africa, plan to harness their rivers and move water into sandwhipped and parched millet and maize fields to end the region's reliance on rainfall and its treacherous fluctuations.

The project will cost an estimated $10 billion by the year 2000 and is being financed and advised by the United States and Western Europe. If carried out as planned, it could change decades-old farming habits.

Childress Council Member Mapping Mayoral Campaign

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS - City Councilman and Mayor pro tem Walter Lockhoof has announced his resignation from the Place 1 council seat in order run for mayor, Lockhoof said the resignation is effective April 12. He has been serving at the city's helm since October 1977, when Glenn Buckley resigned as mayor. The city council decided to wait until the regular election, set for April 1, rather than call special balloting to name a new

Lockhoof explained that he is resigning the council post because a special elthat office if he is elected mayor and has not vacated the council seat

"If I am elected mayor, this action will save the taxpayers of Childress the expense of the special election," Lockhoof said. "And if I'm not elected. I' shouldn't be on the city council any-

Lockhoof's vacated council seat will be filled for the remaining year of a twoyear term. Also included in the April 1 election will be voting for council seats now held by J.B. Holland and Bill Brown. Both men have announced they are candidates for re-election.

To date no one has announced for Lockhoof's council post. At this time he is unopposed for the office of mayor.

Speeders Can 'Charge It'

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) — Fines for speeding on Interstate 80 — Nebraska's main drag - would be payable by credit card under a proposal by a Lincoln County Court judge.

I-80 makes east-west travel easy for state residents and is heavily traveled by drivers from the East headed for the Colorado mountains or California. Judge Earl E. Morgan, citing the number of traffic tickets ignored by motorists and eventually dismissed, said Tuesday that drivers should be able to use general purpose credit cards to pay traffic fines right where they're ticket-

State Patrol troopers would save time, especially when they stop out-of-state motorists, Morgan said. "Our argument is that to do nothing is even more costly," declared Roy Stacy, an American economist with the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development's "Sahel Club.

This year's drought - the second in less than five years caused by a dramatic drop in rainfall - has left farmlands parched and barren. Gambian officials reported last fall that rainfall was only one-fifth of the 1976 total and 60 percent of the early crops had been lost.

Current estimates are that at least 500,-000 tons of emergency grain, at a cost of about $200 a ton, from abroad are needed for the 3,000-mile-long Sahel strip to head off widespread hunger.

"It'll probably end up costing several hundred million dollars by the time we're finished," Stacy said. "And it would have to go on every few years through the end of the century if nothing were done.

With a permanent solution as their goal, envoys from the eight Sahel countries - Senegal, Cape Verde Islands, Chad, Gambia, Mali, Mauritania, Niger and Upper Volta - gathered in this capital in March 1976 with donor countries and U.N. agencies to form the Sahel

The Paris-based club is coordinating foreign aid shipments for the current drought. Western governments so far have pledged 243,000 tons of food, including 65,000 tons from the United States. Because of early warnings of summer rain failures, almost 150,000 tons of grain is stockpiled at African ports for shipment to the interor.

To end its dependence on foreign aid during drought periods, the club's plan to make the Sahel region self-sufficient in food focuses on exploiting water resources to increase irrigation to parched

"Our plan is the first attempt to take development aid and reclaim the environment of a whole area," Stacy ex-

Only about 195,000 acres, or one percent of the crops, are fully irrigated in the Sahel strip and the rest of the region's food comes from costly imports or dry farming. The club's plan calls for multiplying the number of irrigated acres by six and diverting water from rivers in Senegal, Niger, Gambia and other coun-

Reforestation of depleted woodlands also is planned. Villagers have stripped trees and bushes for firewood and speeded the spread of desert terrain which scientists say can affect rainfall levels over

Officials are hoping to prevent a recurrence of the six-year drought that parched the Sahel through 1974. It took tens of thousands of lives, shrank harvests and wiped out an estimated 25 per cent of the cattle in the hardest-hit countries.

Hundreds of thousands of nomads and farmers fled to regugee camps, where they subsisted on relief food flown in from abroad. Donations by the United States, Europe and Canada to ease the famine of 1970-1974 totalled about $900 million but provided no permanent im-

Red Raiders Host Rice

Gerald Myers spent the afternoon inthe office of one of his assistants, watching video replays of his earlier game with

"Reckon we ought to show this to the team?" he asked the aide, George David-

"Sure do," came the reply. Thus, what went before the Raider team Tuesday afternoon prior to workout was a look at the earlier game with Rice, a 75-63 verdict achieved in Houston Jan.

It was all in preparation for tonight's battle in Lubbock Coliseum. Throw-in will be at 7:30 p.m.

"I really think," said Myers, after reviewing the film and checking the scores of the Owls, "that Rice is the most improved team in the conference.

'They play with a lot of intensity, they run good patterns, and they make you work for everything you get. I think that (coach) Mike Schuler has really made an improvement in them."

The Owls have won but two of nine conference games, but the way they've played some of the league's better teams stands as part of Myers' argument.

Rice played the nation's No. 2 team, Arkansas, to a 9-point loss, tripped TCU and upset Baylor early in the race. They led A&M by a point at intermission before falling 75-70 in College Station last Saturday. And Monday night, at the same time that Tech was holding off the SWC's cellar team, TCU, by 58-55, Rice was bowing to SMU 76-73.

'They execute well," said Myers, "and Schuler is getting about as much out of them as is possible."

The Raiders' victory Monday left them with a 6-3 SWC record (14-6 for the season) and snapped a two-game losing streak, only the second time this season it sustained losses back to back.

"We didn't play particularly well," said Myers, "because of the travel (problems) physically for Rice. Mike (Russell, the Raiders' leading scorer) has been sick for a couple of days. He played against TCU but was kinda weak, and he's not going to practice (Tuesday)."

The Owls remember Russell; he scored 30 points in the game at Houston, popping in 21 points in the second half after Tech was able to build only a 2-point lead

By hitting 19 points in the TCU contest, Russell matched his season average. Kent Williams, the 6-5 sophomore from Hobbs, is hitting 13 points a game, guard Geoff Huston 11, 6-3 Mike Edwards 9.0 and center Joe Baxter 7-0. Huston hit 11 gainst TCU. Baxter 10.

Huston's total included three of four free shots in the game's final 70 seconds when Tech was trying to hold off TCU. "If we can play well this week, it will be good," said Myers. "We played well in that loss (54-49) to Arkansas last Saturday but were sluggish Monday. It wasn't un-expected, though, after the troubles get-ting to Fort Worth and all.

"But, I'd like to get back to playing well against Rice and Baylor (here Satur-

"We want to get as high in the stand-ings as we can, because of the (post-season) tournament. As even as all the teams are this year, it improves your chances, the higher you are."

Rice will follow the guidance of 6-6

Frank Jackson and 6-3 Elbert Darden. The two are hitting 12 points apiece, 6-0 Alan Reynolds about 11 points a game. Tonight the fans will have a chance to see in action the "Schuler Shuffle," a at almost every whistle.

"For them, it's a good system," commented Myers recently. "Mike has some players who are better defensively than offensively, and vice versa. When he can get them in on out-of-bounds plays or after throws, it's not a bad system.

"And he is able to keep his guys rested and let everyone play a lot where all are about equal in talent." Also tonight, in the Southwest Confer-ence, Arkansas (7-1) hosts league-leading Texas (9-0), SMU (4-5) will entertain Tex-as A&M (3-6), and Houston (5-4) takes on TCU (1-8) at home,

Jabbar Paces Lakers' Win

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) - Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 31 points and Adri-an Dantley added 25 to lead the Los Angeles Lakers to a 116-107 National Basketball Association victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers Tuesday night.

The Lakers built a 21-point lead, 100-79, early in the fourth quarter and coasted the rest of the way to hand Cleveland its third straight loss.

The Lakers quickly moved to a 27-12 dge midway through the first period but saw the Cavaliers chip away steadily and close to within one point several times in the second quarter, the last at 42-41.

Led by Jabbar's 15 points and Dantley's 14 in the first half, Los Angeles rebuilt the margin to 60-51 at the intermission.

Six straight Laker points late in the third quarter broke the game wide open as Los Angeles moved ahead 83-68. The Lakers outscored Cleveland 15-6 over the last 31/2 minutes of the third stanza to grab a 92-76 edge. The Cavaliers did cut the margin to

The Cavaliers won the rebound battle 43-42, with Elmore Smith matching Jabber with a game-high 10 rebounds. However, the usually sure-handed Cavaliers were charged with 18 turnovers to only 11 errors for the fast-breaking Lakers.

"Everybody on the team played well tonight," said Laker coach Jerry West. "They gave us a little scare there at the end, but Adrian's three-point play (which made the score 103-87 after Cleveland ran off eight straight points) made me feel a

"The thing they had going tonight that hurt us the most was the break," explained Cleveland coach Bill Fitch. "If we could have stopped the break, we'd have been okay."

After the Lakers built their 21-point margin, Cleveland charged back into the game to cut the margin to 105-96. But then the Cavaliers came downcourt three straight times with opportunities to get closer and failed. Los Angeles guard Charlie Scott and Jabbar then hit quick baskets to put it out of reach again.

By TOM HALLIBURTON Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff Snowstorms don't exactly fall for the benefit of high school baseball

The Hub City's three high school baseball teams will have to work out indoors if they work out at all today as official supervised practices begin.

Lubbock High, Coronado and Monterey will open their diamond schedules on the first three days of March in that respective order.

LHS entertains 1977 class AAAA quarter-finalist Amarillo High in its March 1 opener in Mackenzie Park at 4 p.m. CHS plays Abilene High in the first high school game at Chaparral Field on the Lubbock Christian College campus on Mar. 2 at 4 p.m. On the following date, Monterey goes to Midland High for a single game at 4 p.m. The Plainsmen host Odessa Permian in a March 4 doubleheader for its first home appearance in Lowrey Field.

On paper, the Plainsmen of coach Bobby Moegle rate as an outstanding contender for playoff bids. Monterey returns all but two regulars from a 30-5 team which went 12-0 in District 4-AAAA play.

The LHS Westerners of coach Vince Buffamonte returns five seasoned varsity players from a team which finished 17-13 and 7-9 in the league

Coronado, 15-14 and 7-9 last year, welcomes back three starters but coach John Dudley likes the potential of some of his younger prospects. Six of Coronado's nine home playing dates are set for the LCC field while the other three games will be played at Coronado's old home park, Connie Mack Field in Mackenzie Park.

Allen Reported Rams' Coach

As the search came down to a final decision. Allen had been fired by Washington, where he was both coach and general manager. The other top prospect was Dan Reeves, an assistant at Dallas.

The Rams had reserved a large hotel room for a possible announcement Wednesday, but a spokesman said reservations had also been made at other hotels for subsequent days.

Allen had a 116-47-5 record for his 12 years as a NFL head coach and was 9-5 with Washington this past season.

It was only the sscond time the Redskins had not made the playoffs during

Allen's tenure. the Rams, Allen was 49-17-4 and led them to the playoffs in both 1967 and The first playoff appearance was the Harns first title in a dozen years.

Allen drew criticism in Los Angeles with various trades and even in Washing-ton he used a philosphy of building a club with proven players obtained by trading high draft choices.

When he was fired by the Redskins Jan. 19, owner Edward Bennett Williams said, "I was convinced he was negotiating with Los Angeles and I was determined not to sit and react to what Los Angeles did about it and I so advised

Allen had agreed to, but not signed, a four-year extension of his contract in Washington calling for a reported $250,-

There was no indication of terms for a Los Angeles Rams pact, but Knox reportedly had received $150,000 a year to coach the club. Rosenbloom had previously said that Allen would not be the principal figure in trades and contract negotiations should he be given the job. Allen owns a home in Southern California and also has business interests in the area. He was coach when the late Dan Reeves, no relation to the assistant coach at Dallas, owned the club. Allen, reportedly, had agreed to serve only as the Rams coach.

The veteran mentor denied, when fired at Washington, that he had applied or been formally approached for any other coaching position.

There were reports in Los Angeles that some of the current Rams players had objected to having Allen return.

Injury Stops A&M's Godine

For Season

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Texas A M basketball player Karl Godine under-went surgery Tuesday in Houston to repair a ruptured kneecap tendon sustained during the first half of Monday night's 58-56 victory over Baylor.

Godine, a junior who was averaging 10 points per game, will be out for the season, but should be able to play next year, said Texas A&M trainer Billy Pickard.

Godine was a starter on the Aggies' Conference Southwest championship team, but was suspended along with high school teammate Jarvis Williams for the 1977 season by the SWC because of illegal inducements during Godine had missed three games earlier in the season with an ankle injury.

Dobler Swapped To Saints

nals needed a fierce pass rusher. The New Orleans Saints were looking for a speedy wide receiver. In a four-player deal Tuesday, both got what they want-

The Cardinals traded guard Conrad Dobler and wide receiver Ike Harris to the Saints for guard Terry Stieve and defensive end Bob Pollard.

Terms of the trade were not announced. But three of the players sounded off loudly in favor of it.

Dobler, known as one of the meanest men in the National Football League, was louder than most. "The Saints have made me very, very happy," he said. "I'm probaby worth more, but I'll tell you I'm delighted."

The trade came just nine days after Dobler leveled a blast at the Cardinal manaagement, asking that they extend his contract. When they didn't, he bluntly asked to be traded.

The 6-3, 255-pound offensive guard from Wyoming is a six-year Cardinal veteran. The three-time Pro Bowl standout was unprepared to say what the Saints were paying him. He did say, however, that it was "a lot, lot, lot more" than the

"The key to making the trade now, without a head coach, was the fact that Ike Harris, whom we need to help our passing game, would have become a free agent after Wednesday," said Harry Hulmes, Saints vice president. Coach Hank Stram was recently fired.

Harris, 25, joined the Cardinals in 1975, a refugee from the defunct World Football League. He said the terms of his contract with the Saints were better than what he thought he could have gotten on the free agent market.

In three seasons he caught 107 passes. The 6-foot-3, 205-pound player from Iowa State said he was "overjoyed" by the trade. "I'm glad to see that somebody recognizes that I could help them."

Pollard, a 6-3, 242-pounder from Weber State, was known as "Captain Crunch" in New Orleans for his fierce pass-rushing talents. "We now have the pass rusher we didn't think we'd get in the draft," said Joe Sullivan, director of operations for the Cardinals. "He gives us what everyone knows was our prime need, a pass their shots.

But, listen to Sutton

"I think Texas is the best shooting basketball team that's been in the Southwest Conference during my four years in the league. I'm talking about perimeter shooters who can knock it in from out on the floor. They have four guys who can really fill it full.

The second-ranked Razorbacks play the 12th-ranked Longhorns tonight in Fayetteville in a critical SWC game.

Texas is 9-0 in league play. Arkansas the defending conference champion, is 7-

"The Texas game is the biggest game in the league season," Sutton said. "When we played earlier, no one had played enough games to realize how meaningful that game would be. Now, unless Houston or Texas Tech wins out, it looks like it's a two-team race between Arkansas and Texas.'

The Razorbacks' only blemish was a 75-69 loss to Texas in Austin. That ended a string of 22 straight league victories by Arkansas.

In that loss, Arkansas put Jim Counce on Ron Baxter and Sidney Moncrief on Jim Krivacs, Baxter managed 10 points and Krivacs, who is averaging more than 20 points a game, hit only two of eight shots and wound up with six points.

However, John Moore, made 10 of 14 shots from the field for 20 points and Tyrone Branvan converted seven of nine shots for 18 points.

We'll have the very same game plan. the same defensive assignments," Sutton said. "We just hope to execute it better." The 6-foot-1 Moore also had eight assists and seven steals the first time

"Moore is the most underrated player in the conference," Sutton said. "I don't think he's given as much credit in their success as Krivacs and Baxter. He does a lot of things. A lot of the points they get are a result of him dishing the ball off. Against Texas, the Razorbacks hit 59 percent from the field but suffered 19

'We were fatigued," Sutton said. "We were very careless with the ball."

The Texas game in Austin was the Razorbacks' fourth game in seven days. The game in Fayetteville will be the Longhorns' fourth game in eight days.

Arkansas has won 24 straight games at home. In fact, the Razorbacks haven't lost in Fayetteville since dropping an 82-81 decision to Southern Methodist University two years ago. That's the only SWC game Arkansas has lost at home during Sutton's four years.

'Vast Wasteland?'

NEW YORK (AP) - The Oakland baseball franchise has become a "vast wasteland" with no attempt to maintain a competitive team, the New York Yankees' new general manager said Tuesday in defending commissioner Bowie Kuhn's action in the Vida Blue case.

"The commissioner has the inherent right to make such decisions in such circumstances," Cedric Tallis, vice president and general manager of the Yankees, told a sports panel.

"In recent years Oakland has seemed least interested in holding on to the talent at its disposal. The commissioner has an obligation to try to protect competitive balance for the best interests of the

On Monday Kuhn voided the deal that would have sent Blue, the A's all-star pitcher, to the Cincinnati Reds for $1.75 million in cash and a minor league first baseman named Dave Revering.

Charles O. Finley, the Oakland owner, has seen the backbone of his three-time World Series champions dissipate with the departure of such stars as Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi, Don Baylor, Gene Tenace, Bert Campaneris and Sal Bando.

The commissioner previously had voided an attempt by Finley to sell Blue to the Yankees for $1.5 million, Rudi and

"The commissioner had to disallow this latest deal since he had acted as he did in the Yankees' case," Tallis said. "He had established a precedent. Revering is not an all-around, every-day ball-

Tallis, who succeeded Gabe Paul in the Yankee front office, was member of a panel set up by Cue Magazine to discuss the question: "Will the salary war for athletes wreck big time sports in New

Other members of the panel were Rusty Staub, Detroit Tigers outfielder; Bill Melchionni, general manager of the New Jersey Nets basketball team; Mike Mar-

cer team, and Marty Blackman, a players' agent. Staub, a former Met, said court decisions giving players more freedom had produced new guidelines. 'Some enterprising owners, such as the Yankees, have made adjustments, spending money to make money," he said.

Unfortunately, there are some, such as the New York Mets- and I still love 'em who chose to resist the change. They have suffered."

Reds' GM Blasts Kuhn

CINCINNATI (AP) - The Cin Reds were victimized by a "kangaroo court" in which baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn was "judge, jury and his own prosecutor," according to the team's vice president and general manager Dick Wagner. Club president Bob Howsam was equally strong in describing the hearing which led Kuhn to disallow a trade which would send pitcher Vida Blue from Oakland to Cincinnati for a minor league player and $1.75 million.

"I was amazed by the atmosphere in which the hearing was conducted," Howsam said. "It was more like an inquisition than the fact-finding procedure which the commissioner had indi would be.'

Howsam added that "court action is being considered, but no decision has been reached."

Charlie Finley, owner of the Oakland club, has already said he plans to take the haseball commissioner to court.

"I am going to ask the baseball owners and general managers to review the transcript in this case and see if they are not as shocked as I am by the decision and by the control of baseball's operation which the commissioner says he has," Howsam

"When the public realizes that the commissioner, if he can do what he proposes to do in this case, in effect he would have the ability to dictate where a team can end up in the standings, I predict that public confidence in the integrity of the game will be destroyed.

The story was front page news in this city, which has been preoccupied with a recent blizzard.

The Reds revealed that they presented to National League president Chub Feeney a proposal which would involve more than just a trade for money and minor leaguer Dave Revering.

There was no response from the commissioner, according to the Reds.

The Terps, who ranked as high as No. 14 in the nation while winning nine of their first 10 games, have dropped six of the last eight and are last in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Even when they were winning, the Terps showed a distinct lack of teamwork, and the problem has been accentuated by the recent setbacks.

Sophomore guard Jo Jo Hunter was suspended for one game in mid-January, after missing curfew and practice, and senior center Mike Davis was dropped from the squad Monday.

"He hasn't done anything unlawful or anything like that," Driesell said of Dav-"It just has to do with basketball. That's all I'm going to say."

Davis, a junior college transfer who was in the starting line-up early in the season before being benched in favor of junior Larry Gibson, said Driesell's move made me feel like a scapegoat."

"I've had some problems," said Davis, who averaged six points and six rebounds a game. "I haven't been happy about my playing time but I haven't been griping. I'm sad and I'm mad. I don't think the problem lies with me."

When Maryland was beaten by North Carolina State last Wednesday, Davis played only four minutes and then he refused to enter the game as directed with 24 seconds left.

Driesell asked Davis to turn in his uniform then, but later changed his mind. Then, in Sunday's nationally televised loss to Notre Dame, the 6-foot-8 Davis failed to score and did not get a rebound in eight minutes of action.

Following that defeat, a local sportscaster said that "insiders" at Maryland reported Driesell's job was in jeopardy because of discontent among heavy contributors to the athletic program.

Robey scored 11 points and hauled down 14 rebounds Monday night as the top-ranked Wildcats regained their con-fidence at Georgia's expense in a 90-73 Southeastern Conference victory.

It was Kentucky's first outing since a 78-62 defeat at Alabama one week before and Robey said the time between games had not been pleasant.

"All he (Hall) has to do is remind us of the last six days we went through," said the 6-foot-10 New Orleans native. "It's been an uncomfortable feeling being on the losing side. We shouldn't have been

Kentucky did little standing around Monday, but Georgia got its shooting act together in the second half and drove the Wildcats out of their fabled 1-3-1 zone defense with the marksmanship of Walter Daniels and reserve Ron Webb, who scored 20 points apiece.

It wasn't enough, however, as Jack Givens, Kyle Macy and reserve James Lee combined for 55 points and powered the Wildcats down the stretch to their 15th

"I thought we played hard tonight, but I thought we prayed hard tongin, but I didn't think we executed," he said: "We fumbled a lot of balls. I think Georgia got 16 offensive rebounds the first half. That's just unbelievable. And that was a tremencous weakness we had in the first

"We gave up I don't know how many (rebounds) off the free throw line," Hall said. "They missed free throws and got the offensive rebound and that just doesn't happen. We're still not responding to some situations the way a veteran ballclub should, and that alarms me.

"Teams haven't done it the first 5½ years I've been here and, all of a sudden, we break down on the boards," he said. "It's hard to understand.

"We do not block off," he said. "We knew this was a good offensive rebounding team. That was one of the areas we stressed and we didn't get it. We're just breaking down one place after another and we shouldn't be doing it."

Walters' Inspiration

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)-Dennis Walters, winner of the Ben Hogan award for courage in overcoming serious illness or injury, says inspiration "is just playing golf every day and teaching others."

Walters, 28, plays his golf from a swivel chair on a golf cart chasis made by two friends. He's paralyzed from the waist down as the result of a freak acci-

Strapped in the chair, Walters can hit the ball 200 yards and more. When he reaches the green, he walks on with the support of leg braces and crutches, put-

With all the problems, he still scores in the 70s. He once shot a par 72 at Crystal Lago Country Club, a 6,500-yard course at Pompano Beach.

The Golf Writers Association of America voted him the Hogan award last week. It will be presented in New York City Aug. 16.

Walters played golf every day as a youth in Englishtown, N.J. He won the New Jersey state junior and public links junior titles.

"My dad and I set up a heated tent, which allowed me to hit thousands of practice shots even in the coldest weather," he recalled.

Walters enrolled at North Texas State University, choosing it or the moderate winter climate and competitive atmosphere. In 1967-69, when he played there, North Texas won the Missouri Valley Conference golf title three times. He turned pro after graduation, played on the South African tour a while and planned to try the PGA tour. But in July 1974, that dream ended. A golf cart overturned and landed on him at Mendham, N.J.

"I knew I'd play golf again because playing is what's most important to me," he aid. "I'd like to see golf promoted as a wheel-chair sport. There's wheelchair basketball, track and even bowling. Why not wheel chair golf?"

Walters is promoting the idea in clinics he conducts at rehabilitation centers. He also conducts clinics and gives exhibitions at golf clubs as "golf's most unique swing."

Wheel-Chair Golf Smith Called Wounded

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - Bubba Smith's attorney, winding up his arguments Tuesday in Smith's $2.5-million damage suit against the National Football League, depicted the 6-foot-8 former all-pro as a 'wounded bear" forced out of football because no team wanted him.

Smith's six-day federal suit claims negligence led to a 1972 knee injury which crippled his promising career as a defensive end for the Baltimore Colts. He claims he was injured when he hit a sidelines down marker during an exhibition game in Tampa Stadium between Baltimore and Pittsburgh on Aug. 26, 1972.

Also named defendants are Ed Marion, head linesman, and Bob Lastra, who was hired for that game to hold the downs

Smith's attorney, Tony Cunningham, insisted to the jury of four men and two women that the injury was caused by the metal pole and said game officials should have moved it.

"He was at his absolute prime, his zenith. He was the best," Cunningham said of Smith before the injury. He referred to testimony from football analysists Howard Cosell and Don Meredith.

"Afterwards there were changes in Bubba Smith that were obvious to everyone," Cunningham quoted Cosell as saying. "I though he was a shell of what he

Knox Says Simpson Wants To Continue

BUFFALO (AP) - Coach Chuck Knox of the Buffalo Bills says running back O.J. Simpson wants to play longer than the one season left in his contract with "He told me he wants to play for me more than one year in Buffalo," Knox Simpson, who missed the last half of the 1977 season because of knee surgery, has one year remaining in a three-year contract with the Bills. Simpson has said he plans on retiring after the 1978 National Football League undergoing knee surgery. He was traded to Oakland in 1973, and to Houston in 1975. He quit football at the end of the 1976 season as a substitute player.

"Players are like horses, to be sold, traded when they're no good," Cunningham said in summation. "And you don't necessarily let anybody know that they're no good. The defense insisted that Smith did play afterward, with more pay. 'He played 1973 for Oakland, and in 1974 after seeing him play, they signed him for $100,000 — the shell of a man," said NFL attorney Daniel Burton. "And signed for $75,000 - the shell of a man," Burton said.

"Sure he played," Cunningham countered. "This man is like a wounded bear. He tried. He'd still try. His whole life is this sport. But nobody wants him. In order to play, somebody has got to ask him. And nobody asked him.

The defense challenged the plaintiff's two key points: that the marker was responsible for the injury and the injury wrecked Smith's career.

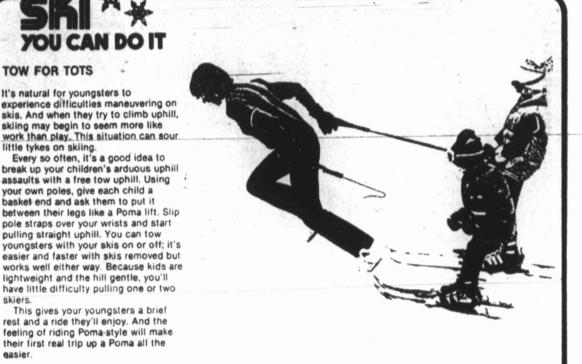

In one argument Burton suggested that Smith made contact with Steeler runningback Franco Harris and fell over him and into the pole.

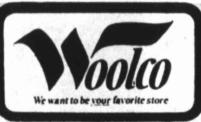

"That logically accounts for the injury and for why the pole didn't fall over when Smith collided with it," Burton said after showing the jurors game films.

If that's the case, the injury happened within bounds on the field and would be considered one of the risk of the game. "But." Cunningham warned the jury, the defense has not presented one witness or one piece of evidence to help you decide that. Each side presented medical experts.

The plaintiff's witness said the injury could have been caused by the pole; the witness for the defense said it could not have been because of the position of the

AGRICULTURAL MARKETS Farm Product Prices Improve

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Prices for raw farm products rose 2 percent in January, improving farmer returns for cattle, hogs, broiler chickens, lettuce and tomatoes, the Agriculture Department anounced Tuesday.

The increase based on preliminary estimates was the fourth consecutive month-ly gain in farm prices, leaving them up 1 percent from a year earlier and 6 percent above last September when prices hit bottom under the impact of a record 1977 harvest.

Officials said the increases for cattle and other products were partly offset by lower prices for soybeans, eggs, milk and grapefruit. Despite the overall price improvement, returns still are far below the level that members of a farm strike protest movement are demanding.

The agriculture department said its index of farm costs rose 2 percent in January, and a comparison of farm costs with the prices of agricultural commodities showed prices down to 65 percent of the federal farm parity standard. This was one point below a month earlier and 3 points below a year earlier.

The parity figures are among the lowest since the early 1930s. Leaders of the farm strike movement are urging farmers to cut 1978 production 50 percent - a move they say will drive farm and food prices up and create some food shortages — unless Congress votes a 100 percent of parity floor for their prod-prices getting too high for the good of the industry.

The full parity level would give each bushel or pound of farm commodities the same purchasing power it had in the years from 1910 to 1914. Critics of the parity standard contend it has been outmoded by modern technology and admin-istration officials have rejected the full-parity demand. But the Senate Agriculture Committee was reported planning to vote today on an advisory "sense of the Senate" resolution urging the administration to use existing legal powers to pump more than $7.5 billion into the farm economy.

Changes in raw farm product prices like those reported for January are not immediate indicators of retail food price changes because more than 60 cents out of each food dollar goes for processing and marketing.

Agriculture Department economists. however, have predicted that retail food prices will edge up 1 to 2 percent in each of the first two quarters of 1978 and then will level off to produce an overall 4 to 6 percent gain for the year, compared with last year's 6.5 percent increase.

The monthly report showed preliminary January prices for wheat, corn, cotton, soybeans, cattle, hogs and several other leading commodities based on Jan. 15 markets. For some other products including milk and chickens, the January figures were full-month estimates.

Beef cattle prices averaged $37.20 per hundredweight on Jan. 15, compared with $35.70 a month earlier and $32.30 a year earlier. Hogs reached $43,90 Jan. 15,

"we could once again find consumers clamoring for price controls, the lifting of import restraints and even looking to alternative protein sources." Small Acreage Mesquite Removal Method Studied

Shredding and spraying mesquite in one operation may be the most efficient and economic means of removing mes quite in acreage too small or too close to susceptible crops to be aerially sprayed.

The key, however, is an effective herbicide. Dr. Ronald E. Sosebee of Texas Tech

University's range and wildlife management department has been studying not only the one-piece shredder-sprayer method, but also which herbicides work best in connection with it. Sosebee, W.E. (Bill) Boyd of Pasadena.

and research associate E.B. (Bev) Herndon of Quanah have been working with a shredder-sprayer modified by Tech researchers to be used on a normal farmtype tractor. The shredder-sprayer cuts a swath more than nine feet across and can handle trees up to 10 inches in diameter. It is used in Tech research on a 130 horsepower (hp) tractor, although a 60 or 80 hp tractor can be used.

The shredder cuts and shreds the trees into small chips. Immediately afterward, the stumps are sprayed with a herbicide. Sosebee said the Tech prototype is most efficient because it only sprays the tree stump and not a wide area around it, preventing waste.

After testing several combinations of herbicides, Sosebee said Tordon proved to be the most effective and most consistent throughout the year in killing the

No differences were found in the amount of Tordon required to kill the stumps. The amounts ranged from 50 to 600 milliliters. Sosebee said probably the best time for ranchers to shred and spray would be in the dormant season when equipment is available and there are no susceptible May was found to be the best month overall, because the tree is more susceptible and there is generally more soil moisture. With sufficient moisture, however, Sosebee said Tordon was 75 percent effective in applications in February, March and November. Sosebee estimated costs at approximately $6 to 10 per acre for the herbicide. He said the shredder-sprayer could be homemade, saving the rancher the expense of buying or renting a more expensive manufactured model

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. My mutual fund has been telling me about their income funds and urging me to switch. Do they expect a rise in my present shares? I'm suspicious. Retired

A. They are urging you to switch because I told 'em to. (Nah, I'm kidding. I stay out of individual investor-fund relationships. However, I have, in talking to mutual fund management groups, urged them to update their services to fund Investors who needs may have changed. What are all those data-processing machines doing?)

In replying to readers who find themselves in your position, I have suggested that a switch of funds now in a growth fund to an income fund - if that is possible for only a $5 transfer fee-often makes

Of course, you should first make sure that your mutual group's income fund has the ability to deliver somewhere around 7 to 8 percent.

If your mutual group doesn't have a solid income fund - or if management insists on another full 9 percent commission for making the switch - redeem your shares and reinvest in corporate bonds or insured savings certificates. As to your suspicion that your present shares are going up in price - poor mutuals, even when they try to do good they're mistrusted.

Q. I've just turned 72. Must I pay taxes on bank interests?

A. Bank interest is always taxable Whether you, personally, are subject to any tax depends upon your total taxable income and your exemptions.

Q. Most of my funds are in bonds. I'm considerably upset by an article which says a bond market crash could have a devastating effect on our economy.

A. It sure could. So would a stock market collapse...a further collapse in the

You could decide to play it cosy by shifting funds to short-term debt: Treasury bills, commercial paper, bank accounts, money management mutuals, etc. etc. with a view to keeping your

Tech Law School To Host Contest Among Students

The Texas Tech University School of Law has been named the host school for one of 12 regional competitions in the 1978 American Bar Association National Client Counseling Competition. The event will take place March 4.

Throughout the nation 121 law schools have entered the competition and, in addition to Texas Tech's entry, nine other schools will participate in the regional contest in Lubbock.

Winning teams advance to the national finals at New York University School of Law April 1.

Meeting at Texas Tech will be teams representing law schools from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, University of Arkansas at Little Rock, Loyola University in New Orleans, Tulane and Baylor universities, St. Mary's University in San Antonio, South Texas College of Law and The University of Texas.

Dean Frank W. Elliott of the Texas Tech School of Law said that the general subject of this year's competition is Family Law: Unmarrieds Living Togeth-

Client couseling competition tests students' skills in counseling by simulating a law firm consultation. Approximately 10 days before the competition, teams receive a short brief of the client's problem. The brief contains information similar to what a secretary might be told when a client calls for an appointment.

In the competition each team has 30 minutes to interview a person acting the role of the client and 15 minutes to propose a plan of action or solution and explain it to competition judges.

Of course you would then find bears who preached that 10 or 11 percent money was fast approaching. So you'd hold off again. I think it all boils down to that familiar warning: "There ain't no safe hiding place down here..." unless and until you insist that our legislature turn to fighting inflation by fighting bigger and bigger Federal deficite.

HEARTLINE: I recently went to a meeting where they were trying to get people to invest $1000 for a distributorship for this company. It seemed very good because I would make money off everyone I brought in and in turn I would make money on the people that they brought in. Do you know anything about this type of investment? K.C.

A. This sounds very similar to what is known as a "pyramid scheme." The "pyramid" scheme is essentially a business variation of the familiar "chain letter." It worked this way:

Promotor ("P") offers A and B the chance to "invest" by purchasing "distributorships" at $1000 each. The "distributorships" give A and B the "exclusive" right to sell distributorships to others for $1000 each and to sell certain products to the public. However, each $1000 that A and B receive from their sales of distributorships must be divided with P, say 50-50. Thus, theoretically, A and B can realize $500 on each distributorship they sell and can com-pletely recover their initial $1000 investment by selling only two distributorships. P, however, has received not only A's and B's $1000 each, but also $500 for each distributorship that A and B sell. Initially, it appears that this can go on forever, with on one being hurt and everyone making money. But, figures show that the number of investors need to keep the pyramid scheme working quickly exceeds lation of the United States.

the population of the United States.

Investors generally set two objectives in evaluating an investment: (1) As high a return as possible ("Yield" in the form of interest, dividends, and/or long terms idation), and (2) Safety. Pyramids nes normally attract unsuspecting restors by the promise of an unusua gh rate of return.

rience has de er, that as a general rule, the higher the return on an investment, the riskier it is to be.
