

Refugees Flee Town During Day, Return At Night

(Editors Note: UPI Nairobi bureau chief Raymond Wilkinson has just returned from a three-week, 1,500 mile tour of Ethiopia's war-torn northern province of Eritrea. Here is his report.)

By RAYMOND WILKINSON
ARDI UGRI, Eritrea (UPI) — Ethiopia's new air war against Eritrean secessionists has turned the once-bustling farm center of Ardi Ugri into a ghost town by day as thousands of residents flee to the hills in search of safety.

At sunset, the city comes to life again when the "temporary refugees" return to their homes and the usual haggling over grain and potatoes in the market begins.

Adi Ugri, 31 miles south of the provincial capital of Asmara, is typical of what has happened to Eritrea's towns under the onslaught of the latest bombing. Once home to some 30,000 people, it was captured by the Eritrean Liberation Front last fall after heavy fighting.

Its population shrank to some 15,000, but in the last months of 1977 the guerrillas enjoyed considerable success in opening schools, medical centers, shops, a bustling marketplace and encouraging farming in the outlying areas.

But the new bombing attacks, though limited and sporadic, played havoc with the guerrillas' programs and terrorized the civilian population.

Several hundred persons, mainly civilians, were killed and wounded since the raids started at the beginning of the year.

Thousands of civilians fled their towns and villages permanently, trekking to neighboring Sudan to join an estimated 400,000 Eritreans already in refugee camps there.

For those remaining in Adi Ugri, a bizarre ritual is played out each day.

Each morning before sunrise, thousands of the town's inhabitants trudge up to 20 miles into the surrounding countryside to seek refuge from the bombers.

Hundreds of women and children take shelter in a huge, cream-colored, Italian-built Roman Catholic church atop a hill that dominates the town.

When this journalist visited the church, hundreds of women cowered in stairwells and corridors, drowsing on the hard stone floors and brewing cups of sweet tea over open fires.

Their children shaped rifles from wood, played ping-pong, knitted and sang revolutionary songs in the shade of nearby trees.

"The people are simply terrified of the planes," said Asghedet Mehretab, a member of the Eritrean Women's General Union, formed to "motivate" women in liberated areas and wipe out hundreds of years of what the rebels denounce as the "massive exploitation" of Eritrean women.

"There is nothing we can do to stop their fear," she said.

The Ethiopians have terrorized the civilian population with a remarkably limited offensive.

In a three-week journey across Eritrea, this reporter witnessed four bombing attacks against Ethiopian towns.

Usually two, and not more than four, warplanes painted in desert camouflage took part — Ethiopia's older American-built F-5s and the newly acquired Soviet MIG-21s.

The aircraft, flying high, stayed over their targets only a few minutes each time, strafing the town centers and dropping a handful of bombs — American cluster bombs and napalm — before skimming back to base at Asmara.

Unarmed and ancient DC-3 transports daily droned above Adi Ugri en route to Asmara. Bored militia guarding the town took pot shots with their aging rifling and machine guns, startling the few dogs which appeared to be the town's only inhabitants during the day.

At sunset, the city's residents began their diurnal trek back to their homes, mingling with farmers from surrounding towns carrying fresh vegetables to market.

Electricity was switched on at 8:30 p.m. until 10:30 p.m. and for a few hours Adi Ugri again became alive.

Cholesterol Not Altered

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR LAMB — When cholesterol is ingested (as in the case of eggs) I understand that it undergoes changes in the metabolic process. Therefore, what enters the blood stream is no longer cholesterol; but various other organic compounds.

How can it be said, then, that the ingestion of cholesterol increases the level of cholesterol in the blood?

I have also read that there is a substance in the albumin of eggs that counteracts the adverse effect of cholesterol in the yolks. Is there any truth in this?

DEAR READER — It is absolutely untrue that the cholesterol you ingest in any food is altered by the metabolic process so it is not cholesterol when it is absorbed. The source of that kind of information is totally unreliable and you should not trust any information regarding nutrition or health you get from wherever that source is.

The cholesterol produced by your body, chiefly in the liver, is passed into the small intestine with the bile. Here it is mixed with the cholesterol in your food. Cholesterol is absorbed directly into the blood stream from this combined pool of cholesterol and it doesn't make any difference whether the cholesterol is from the bile or from your food. Your intestinal wall doesn't know the difference.

The amount produced by the liver varies in response to your blood level, but that is an entirely different matter.

Cholesterol is relatively inert and is recycled again and again through the formation of bile, which drains into the intestine and its reabsorption. That is why one method of treating high cholesterol levels is to ingest substances that will combine with the cholesterol in the intestine and prevent its absorption. You don't metabolize any significant amount of cholesterol.

No. There nothing in egg white that will counteract cholesterol from any source. Some people have suggested that the lecithin in eggs will help but it is the lecithin that is broken down by digestive action before it is absorbed. The only lecithin that counts is in your blood stream and that is manufactured by your liver. The lecithin in your blood stream does not come from what you eat or any pill you swallow.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet: Preventing Atherosclerosis, as I presume you are interested in preventing those fatty cholesterol deposits that cause heart attacks and strokes and premature senility. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

This issue discusses the basic general principles of what you should eat to prevent vascular disease. You may be interested to know that the world's scientists generally agree about this.

The scientists agreed that the diet should be low enough in calories to prevent obesity, low in fat and low in cholesterol. Such world opinion gets away from narrow commercial interests that might occur within a single nation.

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
 Today is Wednesday, Feb. 1, the 32nd day of 1978 with 333 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase.

The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

American composer Victor Herbert was born Feb. 1, 1859.

On this day in history:

In 1790, the U.S. Supreme Court convened in New York City for its first session.

In 1899, the first insurance policy covering an automobile driver was issued to Dr. Truman Martin of Buffalo, N.Y.

In 1970, two trains collided near Buenos Aires, killing 141 persons.

In 1974, fire in a high-rise building in Sao Paulo, Brazil, killed 179 persons, two of them American bankers.

A thought for the day: French man of letters Victor Hugo said, "Greater than the trend of mighty armies is an idea whose time has come."

Georgians Fight To Keep City

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Ga. (AP) — There's no town of this name here any more, the Georgia Legislature has decided. But officials of what used to be the city government have gone to court in an effort to keep that decision from reaching the law books.

After years of controversy over the suburban Atlanta community, including one incident in which the town's police powers were suspended by then Gov. Jimmy Carter, area legislators passed a bill earlier this month to abolish the Clayton County city.

Gov. George Busbee promptly signed the measure, but city officials also acted quickly to prevent the law from taking effect. They secured a restraining order against enforcement of the law from a Clayton County judge, and a hearing is set for March 3.

The town was first created in 1956, as one legislator recently put it to "keep Atlanta from expanding out."

The community of 2,200 lies in the shadow of Atlanta's Hartsfield International Airport.

The town made headlines just before Christmas when City Manager Ray King, in an unsuccessful effort to protest the planned abolition, shut off city services for a week.

King, who has since been indicted along with Mountain View Police Chief Bill Smith and Police Sgt. Donald Wetlaufer in connection with an alleged police brutality incident, claims it is unconstitutional to repeal the city's charter without a vote of the residents.

"Mountain View has been notorious for not obeying the law," said one legislator, who asked not to be identified. "Their charter says the mayor and council can't draw a salary. But they had a meeting and decided to start paying the mayor $1,000 a month."

The legislature 20 years ago left the town for dead, voting in 1958 to disband the city if local voters agreed to do so in a referendum.

The vote was 169-163 to abolish the city, but local officials claimed the election was not a secret ballot because there were no curtains in the voting booths. The state Supreme Court voided the election nearly three years later.

Drug Tested On Epileptics

MAYWOOD, Ill. (UPI) — Young people who suffer from epileptic seizures that have been resistant to normal medication are receiving a new test drug at Loyola University Medical Center.

The drug recipients, who range in age from 3 to 19, suffer from myoclonic epilepsy, which is found most often in young children. It causes a delay of psychomotor development, resulting in learning disabilities, poor motor skills and other possible neurological difficulties.

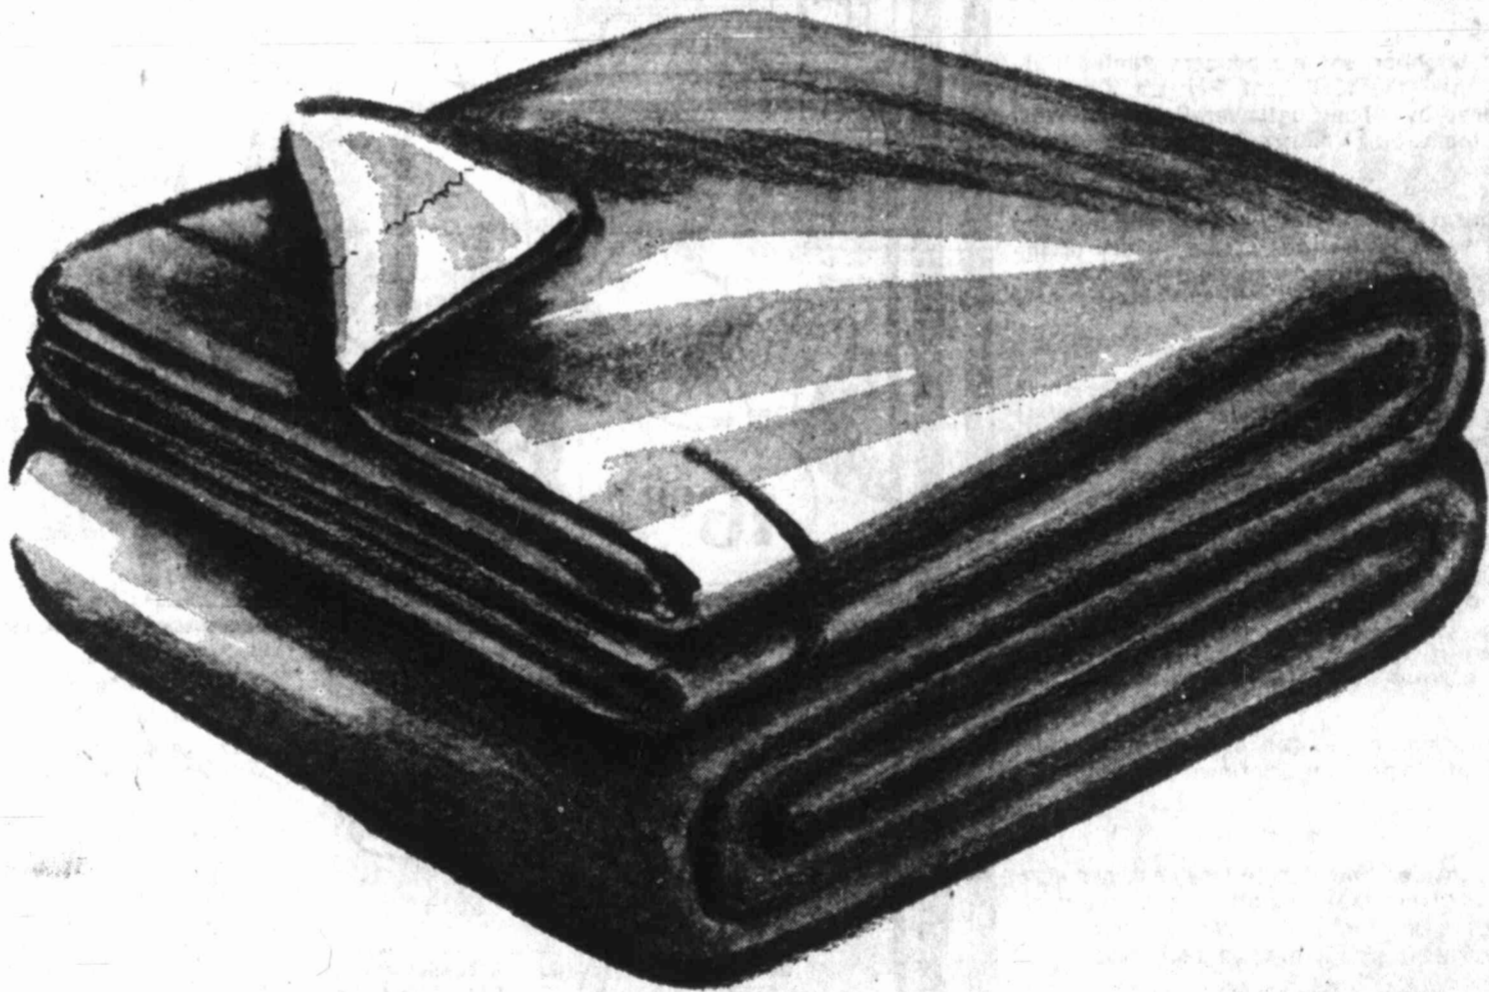

The drug they are receiving is sodium valproate, also known as dipropyl acetate and depavene, said Dr. Dragomir Vuckovich, clinical professor of neurology and pediatrics and head of child neurology at the medical center.

"We hope that sodium valproate will control different types of seizures which, in the past, other forms of medication have not been effective in controlling," Vuckovich said. "We will also be evaluating its usefulness in treating mixed-type of seizures."

Vuckovich said the drug, manufactured by Abbott Laboratories, has controlled seizures in some children who have not responded to other drugs.

Thanks to BLANCHE BELL, TONAWANDA, N.Y. - BELL'S LAW: WHICH COMES FIRST?

'Dial-A-Santa' Upsets Parents

CHICAGO (UPI) — For Illinois Bell Telephone Co., the "Dial-A-Santa" program was a huge success, drawing more than 250,000 calls daily for its 31-day run. For some parents, like Florence Krotky of suburban Wheeling, it was an unexpected January Christmas bill. "They told me I should have more control over my kids' use of the phone," said Mrs. Krotky, who complained she was billed $15 for calls her two youngsters made to Santa. She said her husband is unemployed and they can't afford the calls. "It's a ripoff," she said. "The phone company wanted to make a profit and they did. I bet they had a nice Christmas."

The charge for a call to Santa Claus was the same as for any one-minute call to downtown Chicago — the same rate applicable to Bell's time, weather and sports information lines, said Bell spokesman James McClure. He said charges for calls to the Santa line will not be dropped, but individual Bell offices have been authorized to set up installment payments for the calls in hardship cases. McClure said all advertisements promoting the Santa line noted tolls were applicable and the ads were carefully aimed at parents — not children. The line opened the day after Thanksgiving and tracked Santa around the world for 31 days. The 250,000 calls daily were five times the number expected. McClure said the Santa line, like the sports line, time and weather information, provides revenue to help Bell avoid rate increases. "We certainly did not set out to exploit children with this," he said. The Commerce Commission also doubted Bell intended to exploit anyone. "I think we're dealing with something serious here, though I certainly don't think it's anything insidious," said Thomas O'Brien, who heads the consumer protection office. "But it's an unusual situation and we expect them (Illinois Bell) to deal with it."

Soviet Doctor Says U.S. Ignoring New Methods

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — The Soviet Union's top neurosurgeon says the United States has turned a deaf ear to Soviet medical advances in using surgery to help people paralyzed by spinal cord injuries. "We try to borrow all good developments in the West," said Prof. Benjamin Ugrumov, director of the Polenov Neurological Institute. "In this case, I believe it is worthwhile for them to borrow our development." "I have a deep respect for our U.S. colleagues ... I have no doubt that they can and should employ surgery. They should do it as soon as possible and they can probably do it better than us," Ugrumov said. An American diplomat with knowledge of Ugrumov's work agreed with this assessment. "American medicine tends to look down upon things labeled as discovered in the U.S.S.R.," the diplomat said, "but it appears that Ugrumov has enjoyed a lot of success in the rehabilitation of certain paralysis victims through surgery." Ugrumov said he did not want to criticize his U.S. colleagues but insisted their practice of using therapy alone to rehabilitate people with spinal cord injuries does not always work. "Don't sensitize it, please," he said during a recent interview about Soviet uses of surgery in such cases. "But we are surely on the right track. It works and at worst, it does no harm."

Ore, man who was "flat on his back" as a result of a spinal cord injury he suffered while diving into a swimming pool in 1974. He said American doctors had given up on Frank and argued that no surgery was needed, but he was admitted to the Polenov Institute Feb. 14, 1975 and surgery got him back on his feet. "During surgery we found a five-centimeter-long cyst," Ugrumov said. "We ... took it away and also removed some bone fragments. A while after the surgery, young Roger started to move his fingers and wrote a letter to his girlfriend back home." "Later he could stand and move a little. He was also able to move his hands. Now he is able to walk with the aid of braces and we also hear that he drives a car," Ugrumov said. The neurosurgeon said his institute has received thousands of letters from foreigners asking about the surgery treatment for spinal cord injuries — 460 alone in 1977.

Carter's Budget Plans Run On Collision Course

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter made some hard choices among conflicting national goals in the budget he sent Congress.

One can imagine the president at his desk, budget tables spread before him, jotting down the long-range goals he already had stated to the American people.

- Balancing the budget by 1981.
- Cutting unemployment to the Humphrey-Hawkins target of 4 percent in 1983.
- Reducing inflation.
- Preparing new programs in fields such as welfare, health and aid to cities.
- Reducing federal government as a percentage of the total economy.

The trouble was, those goals collided with each other.

Carter's economists, and those advising

Congress, say that unless there is a real business boom, the unemployment target

Kennedy Expects Deduction Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says chances are good that Congress will abolish the tax deduction for business lunches and first class airplane tickets for executives.

The same executives would be laughed out of town if they came to Congress and asked for a billion dollars in appropriations, the Massachusetts Democrat said Sunday in a television interview show.

Kennedy added the American people would be outraged if a member of Congress believed these were justified expenses.

can be met only by stimulating the economy with further tax cuts or spending increases over the next five years, beyond those already planned by Carter — making it that much harder to balance the budget.

Analysis

Proposed new programs collide with reducing the federal portion of the economy. Welfare reform could cost $18 billion-a-year by 1983; national health insurance, $150 billion over five years.

So Carter had to choose.

The budget makes clear that he chose jobs as a more important goal than balancing the budget.

He proposed a $25-billion tax cut — designed to keep the economy growing fast enough to reduce the jobless rate — even though it gives him a $61 billion deficit in 1979. Without this tax cut he could have announced a decline in the deficit at least $15 billion.

On paper, his budget projects a surplus in 1981. But Carter said if further tax cuts are needed for the economy, he will propose them and budget balancing will be "deferred."

His budget adopts the goal of 4 percent unemployment in 1983. It calls for reducing inflation to 4 percent in 1983 instead of 1979, as Carter had proposed in April.

Carter opted for reducing the federal share of the Gross National Product from nearly 23 percent to less than 21 percent by 1981. He proposed little right away in the form of new programs.

The president's choices already are under attack. Big city mayors want more money for urban programs. Others want faster progress in welfare and health; others, a lower deficit; and still others, a stronger anti-inflation program.

It now is up to Congress to put the budget into its final form.

Interest Renewed In Floating Rate Note

NEW YORK (AP)—The recent rise of interest rates has sparked some renewed interest in an investment vehicle that made its first appearance in the tight-money days of the last recession — the floating rate note.

In the latest issue of its semi-monthly market letter, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith singles out these notes as a means of keeping up with a general up-trend in interest rates.

Floating-rate notes, as the name applies, differ from most other forms of interest-bearing securities in that the interest rate they pay on their face value is subject to periodic change.

Typically, the bank or company which issued the note revises the interest rate every six months, computing it by adding one percentage point to the recent rates available on three-month Treasury bills.

"In addition," Merrill Lynch pointed out, "most of these notes are redeemable at par (face value) every six months; at the holder's option, providing a way out for the investor when rates are declining and limiting price declines when rates are rising."

Because of their special characteristics, the firm says, these notes provide some of the flexibility that short term instruments like Treasury bills offer, but with higher yields.

"Floating-rate notes were children of adversity," the firm noted. "Most were issued by banks during the credit crunch of 1974, when interest rates were at their highest levels since the Civil War, and proved to be immensely popular."

The firm recalled that Citicorp, the first offerer of a floating-rate note, had planned to sell $250 million worth, but encountered such strong demand that the issue eventually totaled $650 million.

"The attraction of floating-rate notes faded when interest rates eased from their stratospheric levels," Merrill Lynch observed. "As a result many investors exercised their option to redeem notes when that privilege became effective in 1976."

"With short term interest rates up almost two full percentage points since last spring, that situation now has been reversed."

The firm noted that yields on three-month Treasury bills recently reached an effective level of 6 3/4 percent.

Barring any sudden turnaround in the uptrend in rates that began last spring, a substantial rise in prospect on returns on floating-rate notes from their current levels of just over 6 to about 7 1/2 percent.

Of course, in buying a floating-rate note an investor forgoes the hope of the kind of capital gain he or she could expect from a traditional bond should interest rates decline — and well as the chance to "lock in" today's relatively high yields for a long period of time.

Merrill Lynch notes another point of which would-be buyers of floating-rate notes should be aware:

"Investors are required to give advance notice to issuers — up to 45 days depending on the issue — of their intent to turn in their notes. Issuers do not announce the interest rate for the next period until this deadline is past."

Governor Moonlights As Tutor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once a week, every Monday, North Carolina's governor leaves work and heads for a nearby elementary school where he tutors six children in a microscopic effort to help defeat an economic monster called "structural unemployment."

Structural unemployment occurs when the jobless don't have skills to fill the available jobs, for example when a student graduates with poor math skills at the same time the banks are looking for tellers.

The hard-to-employ are a key subject of discussion at the White House Conference on Balanced Growth and Economic Development, where Gov. Jim Hunt told delegates that a survey of voters in his state found jobs to be the No. 1 concern.

On Mondays, for an hour, Hunt is a volunteer tutor in a Raleigh school where he works "with six of the poorest readers in the place." The governor says the jobs problem in North Carolina is often structural "underemployment," with people who have low skills and poor education settling into jobs that fail to pay a livable wage.

Some 500 persons from every state are participating in the four-day White House conference designed to help the government chart a course for the nation's economic future. Speakers who discussed the jobs crisis on Monday said structural unemployment must be attacked by government and private action simultaneously.

Vernon Jordan, director of the National Urban League, said a national policy must push for full employment by "concentrating job-creation efforts where the people are, targeted to the groups most vulnerable to joblessness (such as minority youth), and revitalizing the cities."

He also struck a theme that has become a cornerstone during the four-day conference that continued today, telling the delegates: "Government cannot do it alone. The private sector cannot do it alone."

There has to be a creative partnership," Reginald H. Jones, chairman of the General Electric Co., said unemployment must be regarded not only as an economic problem, but as a social concern "that affects us all, whether we are employed or not."

He said the most important weapon for reducing structural unemployment is a growth economy that will eliminate "cyclical" joblessness before it too becomes structural. But he added, "more is needed," and urged training and employment programs designed to find training and jobs in the private sector for youth and the long-term disadvantaged who do not have the skills to qualify for existing job openings.

High Health Risk Found In Doctors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Missouri doctor says the practice of medicine can be hazardous to the physician's health.

Dr. Larry Halverson said the risks doctors face include the threat of disease from infectious agents, disorders caused by chemicals and radiation used in medical practice, and problems caused by emotional stress.

Halverson, chief resident at the University of Missouri-Columbia Medical Center, said stress has the greatest impact on physicians' health. Its effects range from cardiovascular problems to suicide.

"Suicide annually claims enough American physicians to equal an average medical school graduating class," Halverson wrote in the medical magazine "The New Physician," published by the American Medical Student Association.

And he said a review of research in the field shows that doctors tend to commit suicide at an early age. One study found that 28 percent of all physician deaths in the under-40 age group are by suicide while only 9 percent of the non-doctors in the same age group take their own lives.

Halverson said studies show that psychiatrists, eye doctors, anesthesiologists, female doctors and those physicians who are dependent on drugs or alcohol are most likely to kill themselves.

"The situation with drug and alcohol abuse is similarly grim," Halverson wrote.

He said studies of the number of hospitalized physician addicts indicate that the frequency of drug dependence among doctors is 12 to 20 times more common than in the general population.

"However, drug abuse not treated by hospitalization may be up to 100 times more frequent among physicians than in the general population," Halverson said. "The way to prevent these problems is unknown."

One study, however, at the Johns Hopkins University Medical School discovered that medical students who later killed themselves had complained significantly more than their peers about nervous tension.

The infectious diseases hazardous to doctors include hepatitis, tuberculosis and a number of virus-caused diseases. Halverson said, however, that hepatitis dangers are being reduced by the use of new disposable blood work appliances and tuberculosis has been controlled by drugs.

Some of the most common chemicals with which many physicians have heavy contact are anesthetic gases, Halverson said. One recent study revealed that operating room personnel often exposed to the gases have an abnormally high cancer rate but Halverson said there is no proof that anesthetic gases are to blame.

Radiation exposure also affects the health of some doctors. A 1971 study showed there was an increased incidence of leukemia and other cancers among radiologists. But Halverson said better shielding in recent years has reduced radiation exposure to medical workers.

"Despite the magnitude of illnesses in these groups, their impact is minimal compared to the impact of disorders related to emotional stress," Halverson said.

No Complaints Aired About Carter Rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House Social Secretary Gretchen Poston says she has heard no complaints about the absence of hard liquor at the Carter social affairs.

In a UPI interview, Mrs. Poston said she has no problem with the president's rule against drinking.

Domestic wines are served at the Carter parties and besides, Mrs. Poston said, "No one is drinking liquor in Washington anymore."

President and Mrs. Carter keep a close eye on their entertainment budget but love to give parties and will be doing more of it this year, said Mrs. Poston, 45, a native of Kansas City, Mo., who ran a party business in Washington for 10 years.

"I anticipate we are going to be doing a lot of things," she said. "The first lady is going to be very busy."

She said the president "knows everything that goes into" giving a White House party, and the Carters try to do things differently. "Some really exciting and fun events" are in the works, she said.

"They really love to entertain," Mrs. Poston said, "and I think people come away with a marvelous feeling after they have been with the Carters. Everything is done with a purpose. We work at it."

As far as the budget is concerned, Mrs. Poston said, "We're not eating any differently. We try to buy the foods that are in season."

Although the State Department picks up the tab when foreign visitors are entertained, the Carters "do care what is spent, and yes, we're careful."

Despite some criticism from the public, Mrs. Poston said Army will continue to be invited to state dinners and "can come if she wants to."

There is no lack of ideas for entertainment or requests from artists to perform at the White House. She tracks them down, and sometimes travel expenses are paid, although many performers pay their own way. No other expenses are picked up by the White House.

Married to Raymond Lee Poston, a Washington lawyer, and the mother of four children, Mrs. Poston, long active in Democratic politics, said her lifestyle has not changed much since she ran "Wonderful Weddings" and "Washington Whirlwind," two party-planning firms.

Mexico Seeking Military Help

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico is seeking U.S. cooperation in a proposed modernization of its air force, including purchase of 26 fighters, and American officials say there appears to be strong support in the State Department.

The Mexican government denies that it wants the fighters, but a Mexican official says his nation has asked aircraft manufacturers for prices on transport planes for military and civilian use.

Mexico traditionally has been content not to try to compete militarily with its big neighbor to the north. There are few countries worldwide that spend a smaller share of national income on military outlays than Mexico.

About a month ago, however, Mexico informed the Carter administration that it is interested in the purchase of 26 F-5E jet fighters.

Some of President Carter's arms control advisers believe Mexico should try to get by on its admittedly obsolete fleet of military aircraft. These advisers also say that rejection of the request would be a clear signal to the rest of the world that the administration is serious about cutting the worldwide traffic in conventional weapons.

During the 1976 presidential campaign, candidate Carter said, "we cannot be both the world's leading champion of peace and the world's leading supplier of weapons of war."

Since Mexico faces no external threat, critics of the sale wonder against whom the F-5Es would be used.

But majority sentiment within the State Department appears to favor the sale. Many officials are worried that rejection of the request could alienate Mexico and jeopardize U.S. efforts to enlist Mexican cooperation in several highly sensitive areas.

These include U.S. attempts to stem the flow of illegal aliens and drugs across the border and American hopes for an expansion of Mexican energy exports to the United States.

Officials also note that the Mexicans could go elsewhere for sophisticated aircraft if they are turned down by the United States.

According to the informants, who asked not to be identified, Mexico's southern neighbor, Guatemala, has had a long-standing request for six F-5E's, but a final decision is not likely until Guatemala's territorial dispute with neighboring Belize, a self-governing British colony, is resolved.

Even if that dispute is settled, however, officials say Guatemala's "shaky" performance in the human rights field could prompt the administration to reject the request.

Other sources said the administration is considering a request from Morocco for helicopters and other conventional arms to help combat guerrilla movements.

Photos Ousted By Ukrainians

MOSCOW (UPI) — Ukrainian officials removed five photographs from a U.S. government-sponsored exhibition in Kiev of scenes from President Carter's hometown of Plains, Ga., Western diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

The photographs were among about three dozen taken by amateur photographer Susan Irvin in Plains during the 1976 presidential campaign.

Ralph C. Porter 3rd of Summit, N.J., chief of the advance party setting up a U.S. consulate in Kiev, opened the exhibition Monday in the Kiev House of Friendship.

The sources said officials objected to several photographs of sloppily dressed young people, which they said were "uncultured" and "not appropriate."

They also rejected a photograph showing a 6-year-old child sitting on a farmhouse kitchen table next to a large ham. "They said it was considered unseemly here for small children to be that close to food," one source said.

The exhibition focused on the everyday life of Plains, rather than on the Carter family and such familiar scenes as their homes, their church and Billy Carter's gasoline station.

Reporting on the show, the official Tass news agency said it gave "a sufficiently full panorama of the town, of the life and everyday activity of its citizens."

"The exhibition has aroused the interest of Kiev residents," Tass said.

Drought Ravages Africa's Sahel Region

By EDWARD CODY
DIEGUSSE, Senegal (AP) — The rains failed again last year and the fields around this West African village are so dry that children playing kick up little puffs of sand.

"I planted my seeds, but I got nothing," said Youga Alioune Deh. "The whole village, the same thing. I'm going to the city to look for work."

His complaint is heard in thousands of villages across the eight nations of the Sahel region, sandwiched between the Sahara Desert to the north and the jungles of central Africa, where for the second time in less than five years farmlands are parched and barren.

Estimates range from 500,000 to 700,000 tons of foreign food needed to head off widespread hunger among the 27 million people who live in the 3,000-mile strip of subsistence farms stretching from the Cape Verde Islands off the Atlantic coast through Senegal and Gambia, southern Mauritania, Mali, Upper Volta, Niger and Chad.

Western governments, remembering the tens of thousands who starved in the 1972-74 droughts, have pledged 243,000 tons of food so far, including 65,000 tons from the United States. Thanks to early warnings of summer rain failures, almost 150,000 tons of grain is stockpiled in African ports for shipment to the interior.

The Senegalese government has handed out free millet twice to Diegusse's 300 villagers, and cousins in Dakar, the capital, have sent clothes for Deh's four children.

District Administrator Mohammed Boye says the area, typical of the Senegalese River region, lost about 95 per cent of its normal fall crops of millet and maize.

Normally 240,000 arable acres are under cultivation in the Senegal River region. Only 74,000 were planted last year because there was no summer rain to moisten the sandy earth and fasten it long enough to produce a crop. Now hot winds from the desert to the north are piling up sand against the rows of sticks that mark off the fields.

"For two years there hasn't been enough water in the river and now last year no rain either," said Deh. "So the farming is just going downhill."

"The dunes are gaining on us — look at the sand," said Mustafa Toure, a marketing official helping the peasants of Daqarr bag their peanut crop under a twisted baobab tree. "It won't be long before this land is no longer any good at all if something isn't done."

Toure estimated Daqarr, 80 miles north of Dakar, harvested 500 tons of peanuts compared to 800 in a normal year, and the surrounding Kebemere region got about half its normal crop.

"We are already tightening our belts," he said. "In some places, they didn't get anything at all. They planted and nothing came up, so they just took off for Dakar."

Villagers at Ronkh, an hour's drive up the road, harvested only 40 percent of their normal 60 tons of peanuts. At nearby Touba Toul, one farmer reported he got two gunnysacks of withered little peanuts instead of the 20 sacks he got when the rainfall was normal.

Rhodesia Parley Ending At Malta

By United Press International
British and American diplomats met black Rhodesian guerilla leaders today for a third day of talks that have been upstaged by the white minority regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith in Salisbury.

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Secretary David Owen were holding the discussions on the Mediterranean island of Malta, but Owen said Tuesday no agreement would be reached there.

British delegates had already made preparations to return to London later today.

"The Patriotic Front (the guerrillas) may want to go away and think over the discussions of the past two days," Owen said.

In addition, travelers aboard the Royal Air Force VC-10 jet that brought Owen and Young to Malta Sunday night were told to leave their luggage outside their hotel rooms for departure sometime today.

It was not clear if any future date or place for further talks would be set before the conference broke up.

In Salisbury, Prime Minister Ian Smith is trying to reach a settlement of his own with moderate black leaders to undercut the Malta talks. One of those leaders, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Tuesday agreed to rejoin the talks today, ending a five-day walkout over an insult from white negotiators.

Young and Owen have been meeting Patriotic Front coteaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe to seek agreement on how to end Smith's white minority rule.

"We have had very detailed discussions and have a much greater understanding of their fears and objections," Owen said. "These concern a range of subjects such as balance of power during the transition period (from white to black rule) and how a fair election can be held."

The Anglo-American proposals call for a cease-fire, elections on a one-man, one-vote basis supervised by commissioner-designate Field Marshal Lord Carver and a U.N. peacekeeping force commanded by Indian Gen. Prem Chand. Power would be handed to the black majority that emerges from the balloting.

Nkomo and Mugabe have rejected most of the Anglo-American plan and also have denounced any agreement Smith might reach.

They are demanding power before any elections and are worried about losing what they have gained so far by agreeing to a cease-fire.

In Malta, the conference participants Tuesday read a document submitted by Nkomo and Mugabe detailing their views on how the Rhodesian regime should change.

At a three-hour meeting of Owen, Young, Nkomo, Mugabe, Carver, Chand and a handful of advisers, negotiators sought to reconcile the opposing views.

Writer Cites Carter's Message As Rerun

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater wins the John Peter Zinger award this year for the most telling comment on President Carter's State of the Union address: "I made that speech in 1964 and I was defeated." But the Grand Old Man of the Right wasn't joking. Carter's first report on the condition of the country was a statement that almost any moderate conservative in either major political party could have delivered without discomfort.

Four times during the speech Carter made the point that private business must provide the impetus for national prosperity. Four more times he stressed that government cannot solve all the problems of the nation.

To be sure, the body of the Carter speech also contained some specifics that would have warmed the cockles of Hubert Humphrey's heart, but the generalities — particularly in the economic area — were vintage Gerald Ford. All of which demonstrates several things. First, as noted here before, Carter is not an economic liberal and never claimed to be. Those Democrats who now may claim they were led down the path by candidate Carter should recall that it took the most strenuous political pressure to get him to say something nice about the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill in 1976 and that he insisted on substantial changes in 1977 before he would embrace it as president.

Second, the economic and governmental theories in the Carter speech were well within the mainstream of American politics, which means that they are acceptable to large numbers of Democrats as well as Republicans.

His repeated warnings against pervasive government might have sounded like heresy (or Republican doctrine from Ronald Reagan) a few years back, but the new crop of Democrats in both Washington and the state capitols no longer push the theory that government action can solve all social and economic problems.

Finally, Carter obviously was trying to solve an image problem with the speech. As a Democratic president coming to the White House after eight years of Republican occupancy, he knows many business people assume he is no friend of theirs. With Bert Lance and Arthur Burns out of government, Carter may have felt he needed to reassure business. The speech sounded as if it was supposed to perform that function.

Man Helps Rid Buildings Of Feathered Visitors

DENVER (UPI) — Douglas R. Stewart is his name and birds are his game. Stewart, 31, operates the Bird Control Laboratories. He is summoned to city businesses and residences to rid the structures of feathered visitors who leave unwelcome gifts in the form of droppings.

According to Stewart, no one has much against pigeons, starlings and sparrows. It's the tons of dung they leave behind. He said several homes razed by urban renewal had a foot or more of droppings in the attic.

The days of poisoning feathered foes have past, due to the combined warbling of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Audubon Society and the Colorado

Division of Wildlife, he said.

Instead Stewart arms himself with tubes of Roost No More, a gummy yellow substance made from petroleum. Applied liberally to roosting places such as window sills, roofs and chimneys, he said the weapon earns its name.

Birds have impeccable standards for plumage order, although lacking in hygiene in other ways, Stewart said. The thought of returning to a roost where a sticky, difficult to remove substance was picked up sends them flying.

"You'll see them come in on a landing pattern. They'll see that yellow material and they'll veer off," said Stewart, noting Roost No More is non-toxic and acceptable to bird protectionists.

Symptoms Of Flu Abundant Throughout City

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

You've got the flu. Your body feels like Muhammad Ali used it as his own personal punching bag. Your forehead's hot enough to fry an egg. If that isn't enough, you can't quit shivering even though you're buried under seven blankets. Moreover, your head and nose feel as though they've been treated to a mud implant.

Nobody could possibly know how you feel, right?

Wrong.

In fact, if you've got the flu or a flu-like illness, you've got lots of company.

It's difficult to determine just how many flu sufferers there are in Lubbock, but at Texas Tech University between 175 and 200 students a day have sought relief from flu-like symptoms at the Student Health Center.

St. Mary's hospital administrator Sister Maureen said "at least 50 percent (of St. Mary's employees) have had the flu in the last couple of weeks" and between 15 and 20 percent of Methodist Hospital's workers have been out of work because of the virus.

But as serious as all this sounds, health experts say they're not too concerned because the outbreak is "normal" for this time of year.

Dr. John Board, Lubbock director of the State Department of Health, said there has been "an increase in terms of flu-like illness."

The health department is monitoring the ailment through the Tech Student Health Center which is the "sentinel for this area," he said.

Doctors at the clinic are sending both blood samples and throat cultures to the health department lab in Austin to ascertain if the illness is in fact flu, and if so, what kind of flu it is.

Although Board said no results are available on Lubbock samples, Dr. Fratis Duff, health department director in Austin, said some samples had been processed.

"We've isolated three or four specimens of influenza virus," Duff said, "and absentee reports indicate an awful lot of respiratory disease" throughout the state.

Duff said the strains isolated are mainly A-Victoria and A-Texas, which have been present the last two or three years in Texas.

"To the best of my knowledge, not any of the Russian flu" has been isolated, Duff said.

"There's no epidemic at present, but you never know," he said. "I expect it to increase before it gets better."

Board said the local upswing in flu cases began the first week in January. But he said the number of cases is "no higher than it ever is January when you compare it to the other epidemics in winter — we have one every winter."

It's the standard thing — no worse than any winter we've had," he said.

The outbreak has had less effect on school attendance than the recent winter weather, Lubbock school officials said.

"Absenteeism is higher than normal due to the weather, rather than illness, Bill Parker, director of pupil personnel services, said.

However, "one day last week a Monterey High School nurse had 23 students" complaining of flu symptoms, he said.

Jim Wolfe, program manager for immunization at the health department, said local hospitals had been reporting between 25 and 50 cases of flu-like illnesses each week for the last several weeks.

In addition, pneumonia cases have been reported to the health department.

But if you're one of the lucky ones who've escaped the flu, Wolfe has some advice: stay away from other people and take care of yourself.

It's too late to take a flu shot, Wolfe said, but you can "be cautious about being in large groups or numbers."

And if you do have the disease, Wolfe has this comforting information. "It's a virus so no medicine cures it."

All you can do is employ what Wolfe called "the old remedy" of isolation, drinking water, taking aspirin and getting lots of rest.

"Keep yourself strong," Wolfe recommends, adding that the "complications of the flu make it bad."

Complications like pneumonia, emphysema and bronchitis can be especially serious.

But it's "best to try to prevent" the flu, Wolfe said. And apparently the U.S. Air Force has heard the message.

Only about 30 cases of the flu or flu-like symptoms have been reported at the Reese AFB Hospital in January.

Students Seek Ban On Liquor

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Petitions to keep liquor off the Texas Tech campus are being circulated today by students opposed to a proposed pub in the University Center.

The last-minute petition drive comes two days before the Tech Board of Regents is to meet to decide on a Student Association proposal to allow the sale of beer and wine in the UC.

The petitions, with spaces for more than 3,000 names, are being sponsored by the campus chapter of the Baptist Student Union.

Student organizers of the drive also had planned to appear before the regents Friday to present the signed petitions and voice their opposition to a campus pub.

However, late Tuesday board chairman Judson Williams reportedly told the students that because their presentation was not on the board's agenda, they would not be able to appear at Friday's meeting.

Susan Dunn, one of the organizers of the petition drive, said the group would circulate the petitions anyway, and two representatives would show up Friday in case the board changed its mind.

Miss Dunn, a freshman from Dallas, said the petitions are to give those students opposed to the sale of liquor on campus a chance to voice their opposi-

"We think the majority of students are not in favor of alcohol on campus and we want to make that opposition known," she said.

Both Miss Dunn and another petition organizer, Mark Caudle, disagree with a poll conducted by the Tech Student Association showing 86 percent of those students polled as being in favor of a pub in the UC.

They also feel that allowing a pub on campus would undermine Tech's conservative image. "I came to Tech because it is conservative and doesn't have things like liquor on campus. I think Tech's image would be at stake if we allowed alcohol to be sold," Miss Dunn said.

"Putting a pub on campus just makes liquor more available to both students

Rule Interpretation Risky For Schools

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In drafting desegregation proposals, Lubbock Independent School District attorneys and administrators must risk an interpretation of what, in the mind of a federal judge, constitutes an "acceptable" racial mix.

Such an interpretation in large part will determine how many students would be required to change schools under the desegregation plan the school system ultimately submits to U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

And if school officials lose the gamble, Woodward may reject their proposal altogether and draw up a plan of his own.

Woodward's order last week was imprecise on the racial percentage that must be achieved to desegregate the nine schools he cited as remnants of unlawful segregation.

In his memorandum opinion, the judge terms "racially identifiable" any school whose enrollment is 70 percent or more minority. But in addressing the nine specific schools, Woodward says:

"The starting point, which is an impossible ideal to accomplish, in determining if a school is fully integrated, would be an enrollment that would reflect the racial make-up of the entire school population of the district. But this is a starting point only."

"The court will not necessarily approve a plan where the affected schools will have no more than 70 percent, or near thereto, of minority enrollment; and this figure of 70 percent will not necessarily be the exact dividing line to determine if a school has or has not been integrated under the proposed plan.

"Care should be taken that any plan will have some reasonable assurance of continued as well as initial success, and a school having just under 70 percent minority enrollment might not comply with this admonition."

That passage — reportedly the subject of school board discussion Tuesday — is crucial.

If the minority ratio of the nine schools at issue need only be dropped to, say, 65 or 70 percent, the number of children required to change schools may be relatively small.

Take, for example, Guadalupe Elementary School. It now has an enrollment of 138 Mexican-Americans and blacks (88 percent) and 19 whites. If just 41 more anglos were added to Guadalupe's student body, white pupils would number 60, and the new total enrollment would be 198.

And the new racial mix at Guadalupe would be 70 percent minority, 30 percent white.

In the same way, to dilute the minority enrollments of the six other elementaries to the 70 percent level, only 44 whites would have to be added to Sanders, 59 to Mahon, 77 to Iles, 102 to Martin, 146 to Wheatley and 154 to Posey. Those computations are based on figures used in Woodward's order.

At the secondary level, Struggs Junior High's minority enrollment could be reduced from its present 95 percent to 70 percent by the addition of about 130 white students. And Dunbar High would need about 135 more whites to lower its minority percentage to the same level.

In all, a ceiling of 70 percent on the minority enrollments of the nine schools in question could be accomplished by the transfer of about 860 white students.

Such a solution may not be adequate even assuming a 70 percent threshold on minorities would satisfy Woodward's order.

It ignores the judge's instructions that the new desegregation plan "not be a disproportionate burden on any (one) race."

Indian Tribe Planning To Purchase Corporation

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

On the Fort Totten Indian Reservation in North Dakota earlier this week, the Sioux tribal council notified the Brunswick Corp. that it intended to exercise its option to purchase majority control of the Devils Lake Sioux Manufacturing Corp., and thereby hangs a remarkable tale of successful cooperation between a major corporation, a disadvantaged minority group and government agencies.

The saga began five years ago, when Brunswick, a Skokie, Ill.-based company that makes recreational, medical and technical products, joined with the Devils Lake Sioux Tribe to establish a plant to assemble camouflage netting on the reservation, where unemployment was rampant.

The idea was to create a company that would provide badly needed jobs, make a profit, and eventually be owned and managed by the tribe. Brunswick put up $70,000, absorbed the start-up costs and provided working capital and management in exchange for 70 percent of the stock. The tribe contributed $30,000 and received the remaining 30 percent of the shares as well as the opportunity to buy additional percentages of the company over a period of years.

accustomed to spending a full day on the job," Richmond said. "That wasn't easy, since the culture of the reservation has been one of inactivity. We also had to soften the shock of a factory atmosphere, which was strange to them."

At the start, absenteeism and turnover were high, problems that haven't yet totally been licked. But training was extensive and continuing, community encouragement helped, and the employees themselves became involved in the training process by means of the buddy system and other methods of participation.

Now, Richmond says, productivity at the plant is better than at a similar facility in Florida. "That means our people work harder after they've been trained," he added. "They've become a stable work force."

As far as the development of Indian managers and executives is concerned, the progress is "better-than-average, but not overwhelming," Richmond says. We do have some young American Indian people who are in the first line of supervisors and a few older ones in the second line. But it took me 25 years to get the responsibility to manage a plant, and you can't pass that on in a couple of years. But we're trying to develop them as fast as we can."

The company's overall emphasis is on further growth. To expand on the base of its camouflage business, Devils Lake has just installed the machinery to produce electrical wiring harnesses for boat motors. It also is getting ready to go after contracts to produce a new Army helmet that are expected to become available next year. And it's always looking for new products that require a labor-intensive operation. Meantime, this unusual project spanning two cultures is demonstrating how business, government and the profit motive can inter-relate successfully.

A 72,000-square-foot plant was built with the help of $750,000 in loans arranged through the U.S. Dept. of Commerce under the Economic Development Act. A long-term Army contract for a minority enterprise was negotiated with the help of the Small Business Administration, and some federal funds were obtained to help train Indian employees from the reservation. Brunswick provided the working capital in the form of a $3 million line of credit.

The new company began production four years ago next month, assembling the intricate patterns of camouflage nets made of synthetic cloth impregnated with metallic fibers, which Brunswick had developed for the Army and manufactures at its plant in Deland, Fla.

Within four months, the Devils Lake company — headed by a management team provided by Brunswick and staffed primarily by newly trained Indian employees — was operating in the black. Last year, it had sales of $16.7 million and a pre-tax profit of $3.2 million, on an unaudited basis.

As the opportunity came due each year, the tribe bought additional stock, until it owned 49 percent at the end of January, 1977. The next step under the original plan gave the tribe the option of buying 2 percent more, giving it majority control. It chose to do so this past week.

The final stage calls for the tribe to buy all the remaining stock. But when it chooses to do this, it must also take over complete management of the company. This is not contemplated for the immediate future.

To get a line on how the young company has made such so fast progress and how the training of Indian workers and management was progressing, we talked by phone with B.J. Richmond, who has been general manager of the operation since its inception and who lives near the Fort Totten reservation with his wife and daughters.

Richmond, 46, is a straight-talking Texan who had 20 years of experience with aerospace and defense-related activities before Brunswick assigned him to get the new company started. He talks proudly of its accomplishment without sugar-coating its problems.

Devils Lake is now totally debt-free, having paid off its loans a year early, he told us, and it declared its first dividend (totaling $200,000) last June. "Our goal," he said, "is to make a profit and to build a good company for the people here." It also served to make a considerable dent in the chronic unemployment on the reservation and take many families off the welfare rolls.

But it hasn't been simple, he asserted, since 70 percent of the company's 250 employees are Indians who had no experience in factory work and who had never held full-time permanent jobs before. "Our biggest problem was to get them

Mardi Gras Tips Given By Woman

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Liz Scott, a veteran of 33 Carnival seasons and the mother of five children aged 2 to 10, offers sage advice for parents who want to enjoy Mardi Gras with their children:

"Find a potty, catch a lot of trinkets, and don't lose them."

Mrs. Scott, a freelance writer, has set out to define and explain Mardi Gras for newcomers, offering tips on how best to enjoy the mad frenzy of Carnival which culminates in "Fat Tuesday" Feb. 7.

She's written a pamphlet, "How to Survive Mardi Gras (Even With Kids)."

It's tricky, she says, and requires a good deal of planning. But Mrs. Scott has waged the battles herself and inquired of others to learn their secrets and mistakes.

"You'll hear about Mardi Gras, read about it, see it on TV — but you won't understand until you've been in the thick of it," she writes. "Once you've stood in a parade crowd and found yourself ... in the scramble over a pair of plastic beads, then you'll know."

To insure the collection of a lot of trinkets, Mrs. Scott suggests either an extremely cute costume for the child, or cheating by buying some in advance and then pretending to catch them.

Mrs. Scott, 35, has celebrated Mardi Gras every year of her life except the two she spent in Alaska. She said the idea for the book came to her one day while she was in the kitchen.

"I was planning my own Mardi Gras and I decided to extend the plans to everyone in the city," she said.

Pizza Parlor Set For Egypt

By SUSANNE SCHAFER DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Horns honk and sirens wail. The fare is banana splits and sauerkraut pizza. On the banks of the Nile?

Happy Joe's Pizza and Ice Cream Parlor is setting up shop in Egypt. "We serve pizza, ice cream and fun," said Joe Whitty, owner of the Happy Joe's chain, now in 17 states. Decked out in straw boaters and bow ties, waiters serve beer with the pizza and ice cream. Waitresses in pinafores honk horns and yell who's celebrating what, be it a birthday or a long-awaited pregnancy.

"Joe doesn't just serve up fast food,"

HOMER LETTERS

NEW YORK (AP) — A collection of 18 letters written by Winslow Homer, which have never been accessible to anyone but eminent Homer authorities, has been given to the Archives of American Art.

said Whitty's vice president Jim Orr. "He wants to import the best of America."

That means a soda fountain that resembles one from Whitty's childhood in Minot, N.D., and noisy birthday parties that Whitty missed when he was a child.

An Egyptian trade delegation discovered one of Happy Joe's parlors last October in Bismark, N.D., when Gov. Arthur Link took them out for lunch. That same day the delegation flew to Whitty's home office in Bettendorf, Iowa, to find out more about the franchise.

A few months later Whitty found himself riding camels and touring Cairo, the guest of Mohammed El Batran, a member of the Egyptian parliament who will sponsor the firm in Egypt.

"The Egyptians love the family atmosphere. They want to keep it as American as possible," said Orr. "Right down to 'Happy Birthday.' Even if no one knows the words, they want to learn it." The Cairo Happy Joe's should open by the end of 1978. More are planned for Saudia Arabia, Lebanon, Sudan, Libya, Morocco, Iraq and Jordan.

"We really didn't want to go international," said Orr in an interview from a new Happy Joe's in Pocatello, Idaho. "We're really a pretty small-potatoes Iowa firm."

PIZZA, ICE CREAM AND FUN — Sirens wailed, lights flashed, and waitress Tammy Renda honked a horn while singing "happy birthday" to Jenny Sheaker, 8, (center) at a Happy Joe's Pizza and Ice Cream Parlor. An Egyptian trade delegation discovered one of Happy Joe's parlors in Bismark, N.D., and now the parlors are planned for Egypt, Saudia Arabia, Lebanon and surrounding countries. (AP Laserphoto)

Business Seminars Termed Profitable

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — There are more than 800 seminars held each month; a lot of them are pure waste, says a consultant whose firm stages 75 to 100 seminars a year. John Palmer of Palmer Paulson West, San Rafael, Calif., says conducting seminars is a profitable business for about ten national companies and hundreds of little firms. It's also profitable for hotels and for a few specialized resort inns that can host as many as eight seminars simultaneously.

Mail Order Rug Firm Successful

CHICAGO (UPI) — When Philip Liss took over the family's 35-year-old floor covering business five years ago he felt the time had come for him to establish his mark in the business world.

Liss' mental inventory turned up five moderate-sized warehouses in the same general area as the retail store; a wider variety of merchandise, his customers often told him, than that of the big downtown stores; and the good reputation of the Peerless Rug and Linoleum Co. had built under his father's supervision.

Liss decided his primary objective was to tap the tremendous sales potential he thought his merchandise could generate. He needed a means of communicating with potential customers.

He decided on a mail-order operation — complete with an expensive catalog — and the Peerless Imported Rug Co. was born.

Liss knew he was taking a long shot. Friends and associates warned that mail-order operations had a high mortality rate.

"I didn't know how high until I saw the figure later in a trade magazine — 90 percent," Liss said. But he was not going in cold.

"I went to night school, studied art, photography, advertising, copy writing and production," Liss said. "I took every mail-order business class offered in night schools around Chicago."

His own analysis of marketing conditions also helped Liss cement his decision.

"We had come into an era when more women than ever before in the history of our country were working fulltime. Their time became more and more important, because there was less and less of it."

Liss learned early the importance of an effective mailing list — he has 50,000 names — but also credits his success to word-of-mouth advertising from satisfied customers, especially in the early days.

Liss said, "The key to success in this business is the catalog. It's the direct line to customers."

"We spend a large amount of money on the catalog — more than the $1 we charge for it — and I'm very sensitive about it. I am extremely critical and insist the colors be perfectly true, the photography precise, so people can see pile texture and length in the reproductions."

"I attend production printing and compare the colors as they come off the press with color transparency slides I take with me."

Liss said the service aspect is as important as the quality of the catalog.

"In this business you've got to have both. People expect good service and we think we provide it. We ship promptly, include an unconditional guarantee on everything we mail, and pay freight charges on any item returned, but our return rate is very low in the industry — about 3 percent."

All of Liss' rugs are imported orientals, ranging in size from 2-by-4 feet to 12-by-20, and in price from a little over $100 to more than $1,500.

Liss expanded his operations recently to include wall tapestries. "I was thinking of something that would appeal to the type of person who buys oriental rugs — and the tapestries looked like a natural.

Most of the seminars are business oriented, devoted to sales and management problems. Many are scientific or technological and most of these are conducted by universities and scientific societies.

Business seminars made the headlines in a big way a few years back when closed circuit television and computerized communications first began to be used in them.

"This esoteric hardware still is used, but it can defeat the goal of the seminar by distracting attention from the real purpose — human interaction," Palmer said.

Most business seminars fail because they are too big, he said. "My firm long ago decided that 25 is about the largest number of persons that can work together effectively in a seminar."

He said the conductor of a seminar should remember one of Benjamin Franklin's maxims: if you try to impart one idea you may succeed; if you try to give three at once you will not succeed with any.

"But those who conduct seminars go right on hurling up to 30 ideas in a single day's meeting; it's ludicrous," Palmer said.

He said he insists "the big bosses of the company stay away when I conduct a sales or management seminar for a corporation. People just are afraid to communicate freely in the presence of the big bosses; that's fundamental human nature."

Palmer said half the seminars his firm conducts deal with sales, the rest with management and training problems for the most part. He gave some other rules for achieving success with a seminar, rules he said are widely ignored:

—There must be some preliminary basis for agreement on a goal for the meeting on the part of those who are to attend.

—The person who is to conduct the seminar must be quite articulate and somewhat entertaining in his manner.

—Remember that those attending the seminar must react to each other as well as to the leader if anything is to be accomplished.

—While the presence of top management is not desirable, the company must send good people to the seminar, not just second or third raters who are sent because they can best be spared from regular work.

—The professional conductor must realize he will have to overcome an initial hostility and skepticism on the part of many of those attending. He must do a lot of research on the people who are attending. He should arrive a day early and spend as much time as he can socializing with people to melt the ice of hostility and suspicion.

Finally and most important, whatever is accomplished during the seminar must be sustained by a continuing effort afterward.

"The seminar must produce something articulate and worthwhile in print that can be used in the months and years ahead to teach people how to put into action the ideas that were present and accepted at the seminar," he said. "Otherwise the whole thing is just a waste."

A cheetah can go from zero to 45 miles an hour in two seconds, and they have been clocked at 70 mph when running flat out. Since they are sprinters and not long distance runners, they cannot maintain this pace for much more than 300 yards.

statement (CIS) in United States v. Lubbock County Bever-Association, Cecil's, Inc., and Kay's Package Store, Inc., and The All Star
Company, was filed on January 9, 1978. The complaint alleged that defendants and co-conspirators engaged in a combination and conspiracy to raise, fix, stabilize and maintain the price of alcoholic beverages in Lubbock County. The complaint prohibits each defendant from entering into or maintaining any agreement or understanding to raise, fix, stabilize, and maintain prices for the sale of alcoholic beverages. Each defend-retailer is also prohibited from communicating or exchanging with other retailer of alcoholic beverages the actual or proposed prices for the sale of alcoholic beverages prior to communication to public generally. The CIS provides details concerning the scope of proposed judgment and the effect of the proposed judgment on competition. The judgment

Panthers Topple Matadors 73-72

CONCENTRATION — Arnold Palmer concentrates on the roll of a practice putt as he warms up for Hawaiian Open that gets underway Thursday. See Story, Page 5, Sec. D. (AP Laserphoto)

Dunbar coach Joe McWilliams was the first to admit that the Panther's 73-72 win over Estacado Tuesday night in the EHS gym "was a sweet one, all right."

Pardon the grammar, coach, but shouldn't that be sweat one?

In a building that seemed at times more like a steam sauna at the Y, the state-ranked Panthers managed to avenge an early season 81-79 overtime loss to the Matadors and grab what McWilliams termed a "comfortable spot" in the District 3-AAA saddle.

"I wouldn't say we were in the driver's seat or anything like that," the DHS coach, who had been riddled with the flu bug prior to Tuesday night's game, said. "but I like where we are. We are still alive."

Where the Panthers are in fist place in the loop's second half race, a half game in front Lamesa and Snyder.

Dunbar stands 3-0 in the loop, Lamesa and Snyder both sport 2-0 marks. Meanwhile, Estacado's district records even up to 1-1.

For the year, Estacado is 21-3, Dunbar 23-4.

Should Dunbar win the second-half crown, a playoff game scheduled for Feb. 16 or 17 would be held in the Lubbock Coliseum. Estacado, which must get by San Angelo Lake View next week in a game that was postponed because of inclement weather, actually hasn't won the first-half outright. First, the Matadors must get by the Chiefs to claim that honor.

Before a tightly jammed crowd estimated at more than 2,000, the Panthers, facing elimination from any playoff berth, used the 26-point performance of 6-6 senior Billy Don Hardway to score the win over their crosstown rivals.

Hardway, who was held in check during the first quarter, exploded during the final three quarters to score 26 of Dunbar's final 56 points. He also accounted for 18 of the Panthers' rebounds.

"They were really leaning on him hard in the early going," McWilliams said. "But he started shaking loose toward the end, hit a few buckets from the outside and that helped us win this one."

Along with Hardway, McWilliams lauded forward Darrell Green, who came off the bench to score eight clutch points.

Although not his usual overpowering self, Hardway helped put together a final Dunbar scoring surge that saw the defending district champions overcome a two-point margin held by Estacado after three quarters.

Early in the fourth period, Hardway hit two quick buckets, sandwiched around a layup by Greg Whitfield, give the Panthers a 59-55 advantage with 5:57 left in the game. The lead was Dunbar's first since the 5:41 mark in the first quarter.

However, Estacado fireplug Mike Chatham, playing one of his better games of the year as he hit 14 points, led a late rally which saw the Mats hold a one-point lead (68-67) with 1:24 left. The Mats ran off nine unanswered points during a two minute span.

But Estacado had trouble controlling the tempo of the game and Dunbar capitalized on some faulty Matador shooting, scoring six uncontested points of its own. Hardway started the spurt with a jumper, followed by a dunk by Whitfield and a clutch pair of free throws by Hardway, last year's city player of the year.

Estacado cut the gap to 71-70 when

Freddie Ivory hit a long jumper, but by that time the Mats were coming in on a wing and a prayer.

Whitfield, Dunbar's second leading scorer with 14 points, canned an easy layup about 13 seconds after the ivory bucket, assuring the Panthers the victory. As time was running out, Estacado's Dewey Turner tossed in a jump shot to end the game at 73-72.

Estacado coach J.J. Wood said he would have liked to slow the game down late in the fourth period when the Matadors held their narrow lead but "things just got a little out of hand."

In the game's early going, Estacado managed to mount leads of nine points on five different occasions, but following each surge Dunbar managed to come back. The game's lead changed hands 29 times.

Estacado's long range shooter, Alvin Harris, the man instrumental in the first Matador win, hit only 10 points. Willie Powell, also a long distance hummer, and Turner shared top honors for Estacado with 16 points each.

Raiders Entertain Owls

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Gerald Myers spent the afternoon in the office of one of his assistants, watching video replays of his earlier game with Rice.

"Reckon we ought to show this to the team?" he asked the aide, George Davidson.

"Sure do," came the reply.

Thus, what went before the Raider team Tuesday afternoon prior to workout was a look at the earlier game with Rice, a 75-63 verdict achieved in Houston Jan. 14.

It was all in preparation for tonight's battle in Lubbock Coliseum. Throw-in will be at 7:30 p.m.

"I really think," said Myers, after-viewing the film and checking the scores of the Owls, "that Rice is the most improved team in the conference."

"They play with a lot of intensity, they run good patterns, and they make you work for everything you get. I think that (coach) Mike Schuler has really made an improvement in them."

The Owls have won but two of nine conference games, but the way they've played some of the league's better teams stands as part of Myers' argument.

Rice played the nation's No. 2 team, Arkansas, to a 9-point loss, tripped TCU and upset Baylor early in the race. They led A&M by a point at intermission before falling 75-70 in College Station last Saturday.

And Monday night, at the same time that Tech was holding off the SWC's cellar team, TCU, by 58-55, Rice was bowing to SMU 76-73.

"They execute well," said Myers, "and Schuler is getting about as much out of them as is possible."

The Raiders' victory Monday left them with a 6-3 SWC record (14-6 for the season) and snapped a two-game losing streak, only the second time this season it sustained losses back to back.

"We didn't play particularly well," said Myers, "because of the travel (problems) and sickness. I don't know how we'll be physically for Rice. Mike (Russell, the Raiders' leading scorer) has been sick for a couple of days. He played against TCU but was kinda weak, and he's not going to practice (Tuesday)."

The Owls remember Russell; he scored 30 points in the game at Houston, popping in 21 points in the second half after Tech was able to build only a 2-point lead at the half.

By hitting 19 points in the TCU contest, Russell matched his season average. Kent Williams, the 6-5 sophomore from Hobbs, is hitting 13 points a game, guard Geoff Huston 11, 6-3 Mike Edwards 9.0 and center Joe Baxter 7.0. Huston hit 11 against TCU, Baxter 10.

Huston's total included three of four free shots in the game's final 70 seconds when Tech was trying to hold off TCU.

"If we can play well this week, it will be good," said Myers. "We played well in that loss (54-49) to Arkansas last Saturday but were sluggish Monday. It wasn't un-

Carter Cromwell Recruiting: Big Rat Race

A WEARY LOOKING Taylor McNeel cradled the telephone, yawned, and remarked to no one in particular, "You know, this recruiting is the same year after year. It's the same problems. Only the names change."

Assistant athletic director John Conley, a former Raider coaching aide, said, "Yeah. I've been through enough of those recruiting battles. It's got to be the biggest rat race in the world." With that, Conley grinned, said "See you," and zipped from the room, leaving McNeel alone.

McNeel is in his first year as a recruiting coordinator after 16 seasons as an on-the-field coach. However, the adjustment hasn't been especially tough. He's always recruited, and, as he noted, the problems don't vary much.

With just a week remaining before the Feb. 8 Southwest Conference signing date, rumors are flying about prospects committing to various universities. However, McNeel has been around long enough to realize that what counts is not the commitments, but the signatures gathered first on Feb. 8 and then a week later on the national signing date.

NO ONE KNOWS exactly what will transpire until the signings are completed and the lists compared. Prospects are often confused as to what to do. It's not unusual for ones to make "firm" commitments to several schools or to change their minds daily. With many, the school they visit last or the one that sees them last is the one they sign with.

Some merely string coaches along. Knowing all the while that they won't attend a certain college, they sound interested and take a paid visit anyway, just for the weekend of fun and entertainment.

But much remains to be seen, even after the signings have been made and the lists compared. A recruiting crop rarely turns out as it looks on paper. The axiom is: "Check back in three years to see how good a batch of recruits really is." No one really knows until then.

THE GENERAL FEELING now, though, is that Tech could sign a group of players that has good credentials. One source believes that Tech has a chance to come close to equaling the talent haul it made a year ago. Last year's group was considered to be pretty good, although not great.

If this year's group is similar in ability to the 1977 one, it will be a good achievement. As one knowledgeable person said, "If they can have as good a year as they did last year, it would be great, considering that they were only 7-5

Baseball Practices Begin

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Snowstorms don't exactly fall for the benefit of high school baseball coaches.

The Hub City's three high school baseball teams will have to work out indoors if they work out at all today as official supervised practices begin.

Lubbock High, Coronado and Monterey will open their diamond schedules on the first three days of March in that respective order.

LHS entertains 1977 class AAAA quarter-finalist Amarillo High in its March 1 opener in Mackenzie Park at 4 p.m. CHS plays Abilene High in the first high school game at Chaparral Field on the Lubbock Christian College campus on Mar. 2 at 4 p.m. On the following date, Monterey goes to Midland High for a single game at 4 p.m.

The Plainsmen host Odessa Permian in a March 4 doubleheader for its first home appearance in Lowrey Field.

On paper, the Plainsmen of coach Bobby Moegle rate as an outstanding contender for playoff bids. Monterey returns all but two regulars from a 30-5 team which went 12-0 in District 4-AAAA play.

The LHS Westerners of coach Vince Buffamonte returns five seasoned varsity players from a team which finished 17-13 and 7-9 in the league.

Coronado, 15-14 and 7-9 last year, welcomes back three starters but coach John Dudley likes the potential of some of his younger prospects. Six of Coronado's nine home playing dates are set for the LCC field while the other three games will be played at Coronado's old home park, Connie Mack Field in Mackenzie Park.

Janet Guthrie Seeking Ride In Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Janet Guthrie, America's first lady of auto racing, does not have a ride for this year's Indianapolis 500 nor even a likely prospect.

"It's got me waking up at 4 in the morning. I'm chewing my fingernails," said the 39-year-old Miss Guthrie, who last year became the first woman to drive in the famed Indy race.

"I wish I knew," she said of her plans for this year. "I have nothing lined up at the moment. There are places where I could go if I brought sponsors. I'm working on it."

Although the tall brunette qualified a Rolla Vollstedt Lightning at 188.403 miles per hour for a ninth-row start in last year's Indy 500, the big monied sponsors did not jump on her bandwagon.

That, she told the Indianapolis News in a telephone interview from her New York City apartment, is one of her major disappointments.

"I hope Rolla Vollstedt is not the only man in the country who will let me drive his race car. I can't do it without money. I don't have anything you could describe as a hot sponsorship."

Miss Guthrie, a former physicist who has been going at the U.S. Auto Club and NASCAR circuits for two years after a 13-year career as an sports car racer, tries to downplay the fact she is a woman.

"I try not to be paranoid," she said. "But I must admit in my bleaker moments that a woman always will have problems with men who have money and power."

"Dammit, I did some good things last year. I was the fastest qualifier on the second weekend and the 17th fastest qualifier in the race. I just don't think they (money men) think of you. They think of a man first."

Vollstedt, the veteran car builder from Portland, Ore., offered Guthrie a ride at Indianapolis in 1976 and signed her to a two-year contract. She failed to make the race that first year, but showed her ability by topping 180 m.p.h. in a practice run in A.J. Foyt's backup car.

Last May, she qualified easily, but engine problems developed during the race and she completed only 27 laps, good for 29th position and $16,556 in prize money.

Guthrie competed in several USAC races, including the Pocono and Ontario 500s, later in the season. But an apparent break in the Vollstedt team developed last September when teammate Dick Simon said he was tired of helping her and wanted to concentrate on his own career.

"I told Rolla last September that I wanted to talk to other teams," said Guthrie. "Certainly, the doors are not shut with Rolla. If I am not committed by March he told me to call him. I'm going to call him."

Dunbar Girls Finally Win

Dunbar girls won their first game of the year Tuesday, defeating Estacado 53-44 in a District 3-AAA contest.

Stella Zaragosa paced the winners with 16 points, and Wanda Young followed with 14. Sharon Thompson added 10 for Dunbar. Joy Guyton and Monique Hicks scored 17 each for Estacado.

It's Ali Over Superman-In New Comic Book

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK — Pow! Wham! Bam! Krak!
"Ohhh, you heard that moan from the audience, folks," says the announcer. "Superman walked right into Ali's dynamite right! It looked like Superman's head would snap off!"
Lois Lane, sitting at ringside, is hysterical.
"Oh, my God," she screams. "Superman's going to be killed. The man I love is being slaughtered before my very eyes."
Suddenly Ali unleashes a powerful blow and Superman hurtles headlong to the canvas.
"Ali has been declared winner!" yells a distraught Jimmy Olsen, Superman's sidekick, and, according to the script, "the announcement filters through the mists of Superman's clouded mind — and brings with it welcome oblivion."
Superman, bruised and battered, is carried on a stretcher to the dressing room as pandemonium breaks loose among the screaming crowd.
So Muhammad Ali, heavyweight champion of the world, wins another one — this one a victory over his boyhood idol which left him more saddened than elated.
This was the "Fight of Eternity" — Ali "The Greatest" against the fabled "Man of Steel" — which didn't take place in a physical ring but came out of a cartoonist's head and now is being preserved for posterity in a comic book which went on the stands today.

Tarzan. The book shows that a black man can be the best."
Asked how much he got paid for doing the book, the champion, who has earned more than $40 million in purses, said he left that to his money managers.
"We got top dollar," he said. "I don't come cheap."
With his newly adopted cloak of seriousness, he declined to gloat over his victory over Superman. "He's fictional," Ali said. "I'm real."
In case tykes wonder why these two paragons of virtue and strength should have to fight each other, they can relax. It was necessary to save the universe.
When a green monster appears from outer space in a burst of brilliance, Ali and Superman get into an argument over which one should put the invader in his proper space.
Finally the monster orders that they must meet in combat or all the earth's inhabitants will be reduced to smoldering and radioactive dust.
A ring is set up in outer space and the world watches by satellite as the electrifying slugfest takes place. Ali wins, saves Superman from the monster and then destroys the green ogre.
"Superman," says Ali, shaking hands with the man in the crimson cloak, "we are the greatest."

Judge's Decree To Be Appealed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A federal judge's decision that decrees girls may not be banned from playing on boys' contact sports teams will be appealed by the Ohio High School Athletic Association.
Carlisle Dollings, the OHSAA's counsel since the mid-1930s, said Tuesday the appeal will be filed within the next week.
Judge Carl Rubin of Dayton, Ohio, ruled on Jan. 9 that girls may participate with boys in the contact sports of football, wrestling, ice hockey and basketball.
His ruling came in a case filed by the Yellow Springs, Ohio, Board of Education after Amy Underwood and Leah Wing were barred from playing on the seventh grade team three years ago.
Dollings said he will file briefs with the clerk in the Dayton court for an appeal to the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.
The girls, now sophomores in high school, say they have other interests and are not going to try out for any boys' teams.

Hawaiian Open Family Affair

HONOLULU (AP) — The Hawaiian Open is the pro golf tour's fun time, a family affair, a romp in the sun while much of the Mainland is buried in ice, snow and cold.
While a whopping $250,000 total prize is up for grabs, a casual, easy-going, not-to-worry atmosphere prevails.
Parties, both formal and impromptu, abound. Chi Chi Rodriguez and wife Iwalani, a Hawaiian native, annually host a luau at her parents' home. The Banyan Tree is the gathering place. Players hurry through their practice rounds to join their wives — the wives come to this one, all of them — on the beach. Many stay over an extra week for vacation.
A charter flight over, packed with younger players and wives, displayed all the sobriety and decorum of a high-school outing. Soft-spoken veteran Don January, eye-glasses in place and weighty book in hand, could have been the faculty sponsor.
Tour officials who work the other events in blazers and ties adopt uniform gaily-patterned sports shirts. Fresh pineapples serve as tee-markers. The Polynesian caddies wear cutoff jeans and tramp the Waialeale Country Club in bare-foot splendor.
The sponsoring airline makes the most of it and delights in the national television coverage that shows to the shivering, blizzard-swept Midwest and East pictures of the pros cavorting on Waikiki.
"You'd be surprised," an airline spokesman said, "how many people in the East, up to here in snow, see the tournament on television and make an immediate decision to come here — just pack up and grab a plane."
The atmosphere, weather and the richest prize offered so far this season, have helped lure an extremely strong field that starts play Thursday over Waialeale's beautifully conditioned, 7,234-yard ocean-side layout near Diamondhead.
Topping the list is Tom Watson, the 1977 Player of the Year and a two-time winner this season. It was in this tournament, five years ago, that he made his first big run for a victory when he led through three rounds.
"I haven't really played as well as I'd like this year," Watson said, "but I have a feeling I've got it now — that I'm going to play well this week."
Other top candidates for the $50,000 first prize are U.S. Open champ Hubert Green, PGA and World Series title-holder Lanny Wadkins, Lee Trevino, Ben Crenshaw, Hale Irwin, defending champion Bruce Lietzke, Arnold Palmer, 1978

winners Miller Barber and Jay Haas and a total of 20 men who won four titles last year.
Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by ABC-TV.

Ole Miss AD Retires

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — John H. Vaught said Tuesday he leaves the University of Mississippi with a lot of good memories as he goes into retirement after three decades as coach and later athletic director.
"I've got to consider myself a very lucky man because I've had one of the most enjoyable tenures of duty that anyone could ask for," Vaught said. "I've had nothing but fun and I've never been under any pressure."
"I have wound up all my business," Vaught said from his office in the Ole Miss athletic building. "I've been here 32 years and I'm leaving with a lot of good memories."
Vaught, who joined the Rebels in 1946 as a line coach and moved up to head coach the next year, said he would maintain an office at the university but "I now have no responsibility at all and I don't want any."
Actually, Tuesday was the second time Vaught had packed away his things at Ole Miss. He retired in 1970 after suffering a heart ailment but rejoined the Rebels in the middle of the 1973 football season as both coach and athletic director after a shakeup of the Rebel staff. He later retired as coach but continued as athletic director.
Vaught said that for the most part, his storehouse of coaching memories contained successes, with the only major disappointment being "that one year when I was in a losing capacity — the year we went 4-6."
"But there are so many bright highlights that it would be impossible to relate them all," he said. "I guess I will always remember the first game I had as a head coach. It was 1947 and I had Charlie Coherly as my tailback."
"We played the University of Kentucky and Coach Bear Bryant was their coach," he said. "We won it 14-7 on campus and it meant an awful lot in selling myself to the alumni."
Vaught's Ole Miss teams compiled a 190-61-12 record, including six Southeastern Conference titles. In his 25th season, he established a record for tenure at an SEC school.

Muldowney, Ruth Head Drag Field

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — Shirley Muldowney and Jerry Ruth head a field of 628 entries who begin time qualification runs Thursday in the 18th annual National Hot Rod Association's Winter Nationals drag races.
Muldowney and Ruth are the leading Top Fuel participants in the Winter Nationals, which are being held at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds.
Miss Muldowney, from Mt. Clemens, Mich., is the reigning Winston World Cup champion. Ruth, from Seattle, Wash., is the defending Winter Nationals titlist. Both are expected to qualify near the top of the 16-car Top Fuel field.
Last year, Miss Muldowney qualified first at the Winter Nationals with an elapsed time of 5.85 seconds and a track speed record of 248.61 miles per hour. But she was eliminated in the first round of competition.
A few months later, Ruth qualified for the NHRA Summer Nationals in New Jersey with the fastest quarter-mile speed in history, 255.68 mph, but lost in the first round. Miss Muldowney wound up winning the event.
Miss Muldowney and Ruth are two of only four drivers to have exceeded 250 mph in a quarter-mile course. The other two — 1976 world champion Richard Tharp and four-time Winter Nationals winner Don Garlits — are also entered in this year's Winter Nationals.
A record purse of more than $326,000 is at stake along with championships in eight categories — Top Fuel, Funny Car, Pro Stock, Pro Comp, Competition, Modified, Super Stock and Stock Eliminator.
Thursday's qualifying session is one of three that will reduce the original entry field by more than 400 and set the stage for Sunday's eliminator finals, scheduled to begin at noon CST.

EXHIBITIONS SET

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Browns will play two Monday night home exhibition games next August in the cut-down National Football League preseason schedule. Cleveland will play the New York Giants on Aug. 7 and the Detroit Lions on Aug. 21, both games starting at 8 p.m., CST.

'Flash Gordon' To Fly Again In Movie Remake Of Series

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
SEATTLE (AP) — He outwitted Ming the Merciless, filled theaters with screaming youngsters at Saturday matinees, and then captured a new crop of young fans on television in the 1950s and 1960s. Now, Flash Gordon is getting ready for a comeback.

But Clarence "Buster" Crabbe, who played Flash in 40 episodes of the science fiction serial during the 1930s and 1940s, says that when production starts next fall for a movie remake of the series he will be playing the role of Flash's father.

"Kids will like it because kids don't change," said Crabbe, who was in Seattle recently as a special guest at the X-PO Science Fiction exposition. "If you have a good fight, some wild animals, a little fright, a little excitement, they'll go and see it just like the old days."

At the exposition, Crabbe — who will be 70 on Feb. 7 — autographed copies of his book on physical fitness for senior citizens called, "Energetics," a system of diet, vitamins and exercise.

He wore pink-tinted aviator glasses. A blue silk shirt unbuttoned at the top revealed his barrel chest. His weight — 180 pounds — is unchanged from when he was 30 years old. Age emerges only in his creased cheeks and the crow feet running from his eyelids.

Crabbe lives in Scottsdale, Ariz. He is executive director of a New Jersey swimming pool company, for which he has worked 22 years, with occasional breaks for some cowboy movies.

"I didn't think it had a chance at the box office, believe it or not," Crabbe says of the stories that also featured his costars, Dale and Dr. Zarkov, battling with hawkmen, claymen and outer space creatures of all lethal descriptions living on and around the planet "Mongoo."

"I thought it was too far out. Three crazy people flying a spaceship to another planet in 1936? No way."

Pictures of Crabbe brandishing a space gun that looks like part of a stove are collector's items now. And some consider him a father figure in the current popularity of such hits as "Star Wars" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

"The special effects in 'Star Wars' were fabulous. When I fought hawkmen it was different," Crabbe said of the movie enemies who flitted around with big wings. "You hit him with one hand then spun him around and held his wings on with the other."

Crabbe, who was nicknamed "Buster" by his father, made about 80 westerns before, during and after Flash Gordon.

"I'd fire once and 20 Indians would fall down," he said.

He was the seventh movie Tarzan, in 1933.

"The worst Tarzan was me. We had two animals, an elephant that was retired from the circus and a lion with no teeth. But there were a lot of good fights so the kids liked it."

DOGFIIGHT IN SPACE — Buster Crabbe, who played the serialized space hero Flash Gordon in the 1930s, gestured to show how his space ship used to dodge the enemy crafts of Ming the Merciless. Crabbe, whose real name is Clarence, not Buster, thought the special effects in "Star Wars" were "fabulous." He will be 70 years old Feb. 7. (AP Laserphoto)

Critic Praises Actor's Portrayal Of 'Othello'

By WILLIAM GLOVER
NEW YORK (AP) — Familiarity breeds grandeur for Earle Hyman in "Othello."

The veteran actor has brought the results of his quarter-century involvement with Shakespeare's epic of jealousy to off-Broadway's Roundabout Theater.

The presentation has been newly put together by the organization's artistic director, Gene Feist. There are some eccentric aspects to the staging which the star and a mostly high caliber cast succeeded in minimizing if not entirely suppressing.

Quite definitely, Hyman is in masterful control of a portrayal that from a quiet start builds until, with juggernaut force, it explodes into an emotional immolation.

He first played the mighty Moor of old Venice at another off-Broadway theater when he was 26 and — with extended interruptions for many other types of stage roles — recurrently has returned to "Othello" in this country and in Norway, learning Norwegian for the purpose.

Nicholas Kepros engages ably as Iago in the dramatic duel and Mary Carney, a winsome petite recruit from cross-country resident theaters, proves a luminous, fragile Desdemona.

The fourth top-grade participant is Carmen de Lavallade, whose maid Emilia at moments was a mite too elegant. The rest of the casting ranges from the adequate Cassio of Edmund Davys to a petulant Duke by John Straub that provoked some unlikely laughter.

The setting, devised by Jeff Fiala, and the costumes by Christina Giannini are basic Renaissance. The stage has been covered by a figured surface that abruptly rakes sharply up about halfway back and then becomes the vertical backdrop. The effect is a carpet warehouse rollout, against which a few flats austere appear.

Actress Runs Away With Show

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Only a marvelously persuasive actress could make her audience believe in a 40-year-old divorced teacher, mother of two daughters, who starts out jogging and becomes obsessed with running in the 26-mile Boston Marathon.

Joanne Woodward performs just such an acting feat in an amusingly touching tale titled "See How She Runs," to be broadcast tonight on CBS at 8 p.m. CDT.

Not only that, she can move the audience to tears with her plight.

She is cast as Betty Quinn, a cheerfully matter-of-fact woman who has a very bad day, topped off when she gets on the scale and sees she is gaining weight. She decides to take up jogging — and in the process not only runs away from the inextinguishable depressing sameness of her life but also toward a new self-image, new self-confidence and the belief that she can do anything.

Her father, Barnard Hughes, is a grouchy artist confined to a wheelchair who paints scenes from his television screen — the "Hollywood Squares" one day, the "Dinah Shore Show" the next.

When she isn't lugging painting supplies and groceries to him, she is caring for her two daughters (one of whom, Janey, is played by Lissy Newman, real life daughter of Miss Woodward and Paul Newman), or teaching in a Boston school where she has been toiling for 17 years.

Her ex-husband, who takes the girls out for dinner on Tuesdays, is chronically behind in his child support payments, in part because he is paying orthodontist bills for his young mistress. No, she isn't that young.

Miss Woodward's jogging becomes increasingly important to her — she even risks the dark streets of Boston to run at night. At first it is to lose weight, but slowly the idea forms to run in the Marathon, a grueling experience that she is determined to try because in the Marathon "nobody can stop me, nobody can do it for me."

Her daughters become increasingly restive and complain that she isn't there when they return from school. Janey whines that her mother never asks any more what kind of day she had.

And her mother realizes that neither child has ever expressed concern about the kind of day their mother had.

The supporting cast all perform well, including Lissy as the sulky older daughter, Mary Beth Manning as the more delicate younger child and John Considine as their father, who eventually hopes for, but doubts the possibility of, a reconciliation. (His mistress moved out after her teeth were straightened.)
